Victory In Long House Session; Senate Talkathon Still Going On

Atomic Energy Bill Gains Support

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Eisenhower administration's atomic energy bill raced toward victory in the House early today. But it remained stalled in a still-talking Senate session with no end yet in sight.

Of speakingmaking to criticize what he says would be the bill's "give-away" of a basic national resource to "the private power monopoly."

In the House, where strict debate-limiting rules are the normal course, administration forces held solid sway yesterday and into the wee hours of the morning as they went through the complicated bill.

The measure in general would revise the original 1946 atomic energy law to allow a limited sharing of atomic information with U.S. Allies and to let private industry enter the field of peacetime atomic power development.

W. German Security System Facing Revision

Fear Defection By Official

BERLIN (AP)—A West Berlin custom guard said today West Germany's missing security chief Dr. Otto John, told him Tuesday night at the East zone border he was going behind the Iron Curtain voluntarily.

The guard told police he had stopped a car with John and a West Berlin friend, Dr. Wolfgang Wohlgemuth, for a routine check at the British sector border and had given them the customary warning: "You are now crossing into the Soviet sector."

Both men laughed at his warning and replied: "That's where we are heading. We are going to the Charlie Hospital," the guard said.

Nell Blount Edwards Weds Harold Edwards

Ceremony On Friday Takes Place In Black Jack Church

Miss Nell Blount Edwards, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Blount Jarvis Edwards, and Mr. Harold Jay Edwards, son of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Edwards, were united in marriage on Friday, July 16, at 8 o'clock in the evening in the Black Jack Free Will Baptist Church. The Rev. Fred B. Cherry performed the double ring ceremony.

The church was beautifully decorated with emerald greens, huckleberry, conie and plumoseo bridal greenery. Large standards of white gladioli were used in between seven branched candelabra with myriads of cathedral candles. At the altar was a Prie Dieu with silk cushions decorated with huckleberry and taffeta ribbon. On either side was single candelabra decorated with white gladioli and huckleberry holding tall cathedral candles. Pews were marked with white taffeta bows and conie greens.

Mrs. Fred Soles rendered the wedding music. Mr. H. R. Goodall, brother-in-law of the bride, sang "Through The Years," "I Come To Thee" and "The Wedding Prayer." The bride entered the church with her father who gave her in marriage. She wore a gown of Chantilly lace over satin. The fitted bodice was covered with seed pearls and the full apron effect skirt ended in a flowing train. Her shoulder length veil of illusion fell from a Juliet cap of seed pearls. She carried a cascade bouquet of tube roses and carnations centered with a white orchid and tied with bridal satin.

Miss Edna Frances Edwards, sister of the bride, was maid of honor. She wore a waltz length dusty rose lace and net gown with a stole. She carried a colonial bouquet of shaded pink carnations and cream pompon mums tied with peacock blue satin and nylon net. She wore a bandeau of rose nylon tulle and flowers in her hair.

Misses Polly Faye Buck of Greenville and JoAnn Lee of Four Oaks were bridesmaids. They wore identical waltz length dresses of peacock blue lace and net. They carried colonial bouquets of better times carnations and light yellow pompon mums tied with better times satin. They wore bandeaus similar to the maid of honor in their hair.

Little Miss Sylvia Renee Elks of Washington and Cheryl Ann Edwards of Greenville, nieces of the bride, were flower girls. They wore yellow nylon organdy dresses and carried baskets decorated with yellow pompon mums and heavenly blue nylon ribbon bows on the sides of them. The baskets were filled with pink sweetheart rose petals. They wore bandeaus of yellow nylon tulle and yellow pompon mums in their hair.

Proceeding the bride to the altar was a miniature bride and groom. Little Miss Linda Christian Goodall of Rocky Mount was dressed similar to the bride in a white satin gown and train and a bridal veil of white tube roses and white pompon mums tied with narrow satin. Master Michael Clark of Greenville was the miniature groom. He was dressed in long navy blue pants and a white collared jacket like the groom's. Misses Pat Stanley and Janie Cayton of Greenville, Carolyn Bullard of Fayetteville and Sarah Bowland of Mebane were the honorary attendants. They wore evening dresses of pastel shades and corsages of pink asters.

Mr. Roy A. Edwards, the groom's father, served as best man. The ushers were Jack Edwards of Stokes, Billy Tucker of Chocod, Ed Evans of Winterville and Billy Laughinghouse of Greenville.

The bride's sister, Mrs. Chester Elks of Washington, acting as mother, wore a lavender lace dinner gown with a matching headdress. The groom's mother was dressed in a dinner gown of pink nylon lace with matching headdress. Both wore hybrid orchids.

Mrs. Edwards is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. B. J. Edwards, Route 3, Greenville. She was educated at Chocod High School and at present is attending East Carolina College.

Mr. Edwards received his education at Greenville High School. At present he is continuing his education at East Carolina College.

After a short wedding trip Mr. and Mrs. Edwards will be at home with the bride's parents.

Immediately following the wedding Mr. Edwards and Miss Frances Edwards entertained at a reception honoring the bride and groom at the home of the bride.

Mr. and Mrs. Melvin Buck of Greenville received at the front door. Mr. and Mrs. Bill Nelson of Stokes introduced the guests to the receiving line composed of Mrs. Chester Elks, Mr. and Mrs. Roy Edwards, Mr. Blount Edwards, the bride and groom, maid of honor, and bridesmaids.

Miss Lizzie Edwards of Chocod presided at the register. Miss JoAnn Lee directed to the dining room for refreshments. Mrs. Bertha Buck of Chocod served lime ice from a beautifully appointed table. An arrangement of white gladioli and carnations were in the center of the table.

The honorary bridesmaids assisted in serving assorted meats, nuts, and decorated bridal cakes.

Goodbyes were said to Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Edwards of Greenville.

Following the rehearsal the Edwards-Edwards wedding party was entertained at a cake cutting by Mrs. Chester Elks of Washington, Mrs. Bruce Edwards and Mrs. Dave Perkins of Greenville at the home of Mrs. Perkins.

The house was decorated with traditional bridal flowers. The table was decorated with arrangements of white gladioli and candelabra containing white candles. On opposite ends of the table the wedding cake and the punch bowl were placed. After the bride and groom had cut the first piece of cake, Mrs. Dave Perkins and Mrs. James H. Edwards served punch and cake to the 40 guests.

Mr. Bill Nelson of Stokes entertained Miss Nell Blount Edwards at a Coca-Cola party on July 14 from 4 to 8 o'clock.

The refreshments of bridal cakes, mints, party sandwiches and nuts were served to the 30 guests who called.

Social Security Benefits Are Discussed By Representative

The Greenville Credit Women's Breakfast Club met Thursday morning at the Woman's Club with the president, Mrs. Frances Cassick, presiding. Two prospective members, Mrs. Rubelle Byrum of Honeycutt's Market and Miss Connie Baker of Belk-Tyler's, were guests.

After roll call and a few items of business, the meeting was turned over to the program chairman, Mrs. Henrietta Johnson, who introduced Mr. M. H. Barney, manager of the Social Security Administration of Eastern North Carolina. Mr. Barney gave a very clear, informative talk on what Social Security means to the working woman. He took for an example a young single girl, who begins work at age 21 and gave illustrations of the benefits she would receive under Social Security if she were to remain single and retire, were to marry and have a dependent husband, or have dependent children. He also explained the benefits a dependent mother would receive in the event the working single woman were to die. All of these points were explained fully, and the advantages and disadvantages of Social Security were brought out, indicating that the law was more in favor of the working man than the working woman. After Mr. Barney's talk there was a round table discussion and he answered many questions relative to Social Security benefits. He also mentioned the fact that he is in Greenville each Thursday morning at the Unemployment Office to answer any questions regarding Federal Old-Age and Survivors Insurance. He also distributed booklets to the members regarding Social Security. These are available at the Social Security office.

The program chairman presented Mr. Barney a gift on behalf of the club and announced that at the next meeting a lesson on Business Etiquette will be taught by Mrs. Margaret Boykin. Also, at a meeting in the near future, the club will have a lesson on Wills, Securities and Investments to be taught by Mr. Howard Moyer, Trust Officer of the Guaranty Bank & Trust Co.

The president presented Mrs. Fred Hall, who is leaving the city, a gift on behalf of the club.

Local delegates elected to attend this District Meeting are Mesdames Ralph Bailey, Kenneth Brown, Frank Christopher, Beverly Joyner, J. A. Joyner Jr., Amos Harrell, M. C. Bailey and Alice Ayers.

A request from National Headquarters was discussed urging sponsorship of the annual Essay Contest in this community. The essay theme concerns Civil Defense. Mrs. Elvy Forrest and Mrs. C. B. West Jr. volunteered to contact school authorities about possibilities of sponsoring the contest. A note of thanks was read from the N. C. Cottage Fund Chairman for the donation from the Greenville unit. The North Carolina Cottage is currently under construction at the V.F.W. National Home at Eaton Rapids, Mich. and is expected to be completed soon.

The rehabilitation committee reported food given to the family of a veteran who is a patient at the VA Hospital in Fayetteville. A request from Caswell Training School for baseball caps and bathing suits was approved.

The attendance prize will be doubled at the next meeting as the name of the member drawn at Thursday's meeting was not present.

Following completion of the business session and the closing prayer, the hostesses of the evening served refreshments.

New York—Casey Stengel, veteran outfielder of the Boston Braves, has come to the conclusion that it does not pay to attempt to mix comedy with baseball. Because he has done that very thing in the major leagues for many years the fans now refuse to take him seriously, no matter how hard he tries or how sensationally he performs, and he is one of the most conscientious and reliable players in the game.

ABC Enforcement Cut Deeply Into Pitt Bootlegging

The above photo of a large still found in Pitt County shows the duffers at extreme right which take the water and other impurities out of the distilled liquor. The box above the duffer is the pre-heating unit where the mash to be fed into the still is kept warm. On the left is the cooling unit which contains the condenser for cooling the liquor.

This still was found near the Tar River in Pactolus Township in 1952. Some 90 gallons of booze were found at the scene. It employs an upright boiler. Officers found 3400 gallons of mash at the scene. Seven persons were cited into court in connection with the big still.

Individuals who sell non-tax-paid liquor usually only keep a small amount on hand for their customers so that they can dispose of the evidence quickly in case of a raid. However, ABC officers found 115 gallons of liquor in 230 jars stored in a smoke house in Bethel Township sometime ago. The above photo shows the take from the raid neatly packed in cardboard cartons.

Reflector Staff Writer

Making whiskey has become a mighty dangerous business in Pitt County since the first ABC officers were sworn in 1937.

Not only does a bootlegger run the risk of going to jail for brewing the liquor and having his still destroyed by the officers but under the law he can also lose his automobile for transporting the illicit booze.

J.M. Ward, chief ABC enforcement officer for Pitt County, says there are very few stills in the county now. He notes that it was not that way back in 1937 when the State legislature first passed a bill allowing counties to swear in ABC officers to enforce the liquor laws.

Ward and J.L. Taylor, who continued with the ABC board until his death last August, were the first two officers to serve.

"When we first went to work we got as many as two or three stills a day when only two of us were working," Ward says. "There's been a big drop in the number of stills in the county. We don't get a third as many now as we did a few years back."

Still to be Found
However, stills are still to be found in the county on occasion and the only way they can be ferreted out is for the three ABC officers to search through the county's forests in search of the liquor-making devices.

Sometimes the officers receive tips on the location of the stills but usually they are found only by constant searching.

Retailers who handle sugar could spot still operators by the amount of essential sugar which they purchase.

"Sugar is the one absolute essential upon which illicit distillers are dependent for their existence," Ward emphasizes. "Sugar is used by the moonshiners in the preparation of mash in the general proportion of 100-pound bag to each 100 gallons of mash, with the addition in most instances of yeast, malt, rye or corn meal. On distillation such mash may be expected to produce about ten gallons of moonshine."

"Federal tax on a gallon of whiskey is $10.50," Ward continued.

Each bag of sugar so used represents loss to the Federal Government of $105. Any state taxes evaded represents so much additional public loss.

The non-taxpaid liquor is brought into the county from other areas and sold by countless small-time bootleggers who keep only a gallon or two on hand at a time.

"When they see us coming they pour it down the drain or put it in Lysol water or Clorox to destroy the odor," the ABC officer notes.

"But as long as we can see the whiskey, or smell it, that is sufficient evidence to go into court."

Ward notes that bootleggers sometimes pour the brew on the floor in hopes of destroying the evidence.

"We have to use rags to mop it up for evidence," Ward says.

Have Rights
The individuals who sell the liquor still have their rights, however. ABC officers have to obtain search warrants before they can legally enter the house of those suspected of selling the non-tax-paid whiskey.

In some cases where local ABC officers cannot get evidence on persons they know are selling the booze, State undercover agents are called in.

Such was the case early this year when two Negro undercover agents from the State ABC Board worked for several months gathering information on suspected bootleggers. When the work was completed over 60 defendants were hauled into court on the evidence supplied by the two agents.

About 70 warrants were issued, since a number of the defendants were arrested on two different charges.

Testimony in the cases was offered by the agents who told in detail of purchasing liquor from each of the houses of the defendants.

Such round-ups are rare, however, and persons who sell liquor are usually caught only by day-by-day searching and investigating by the ABC officers.

That the continual battle is being waged against the law-breakers is shown by the fact that the ABC enforcement officers arrested 114 persons during the year 1953. Those convicted by the courts paid $7,385.07 in fines last year.

In making the arrests the officers seized more than 894 gallons of liquor and three vehicles for transporting the whiskey. In addition, 28,225 gallons of mash were found by the officers at stills in the county and the officers traveled a total of 45,731 miles in enforcing the law.

Largest Still
Ward remembers the largest still

Late last year a still was found operating in a four-room farm house near Greenville. It had 180 gallons capacity and 1350 gallons of mash were found, and 15 gallons of liquor.

The various ABC officers of Pitt and adjoining counties cooperate in the effort to hold down the illicit liquor with local officers joining other counties on raids when necessary.

When a still is broken up in an adjoining county its product cannot be brought into Pitt County.

In addition, other law enforcement agencies within the county cooperate with the ABC officers, Ward says. The Alcohol Tax Unit occasionally assists the local officers.

Ward has been with the board since 1937 except for a period from April 30, 1943 to October 1945. The other two officers are H.B. Lilly, who became an ABC officer in December, 1952 after serving with the Greenville Police Department and Glenn Perkins who was sworn in during March of this year.

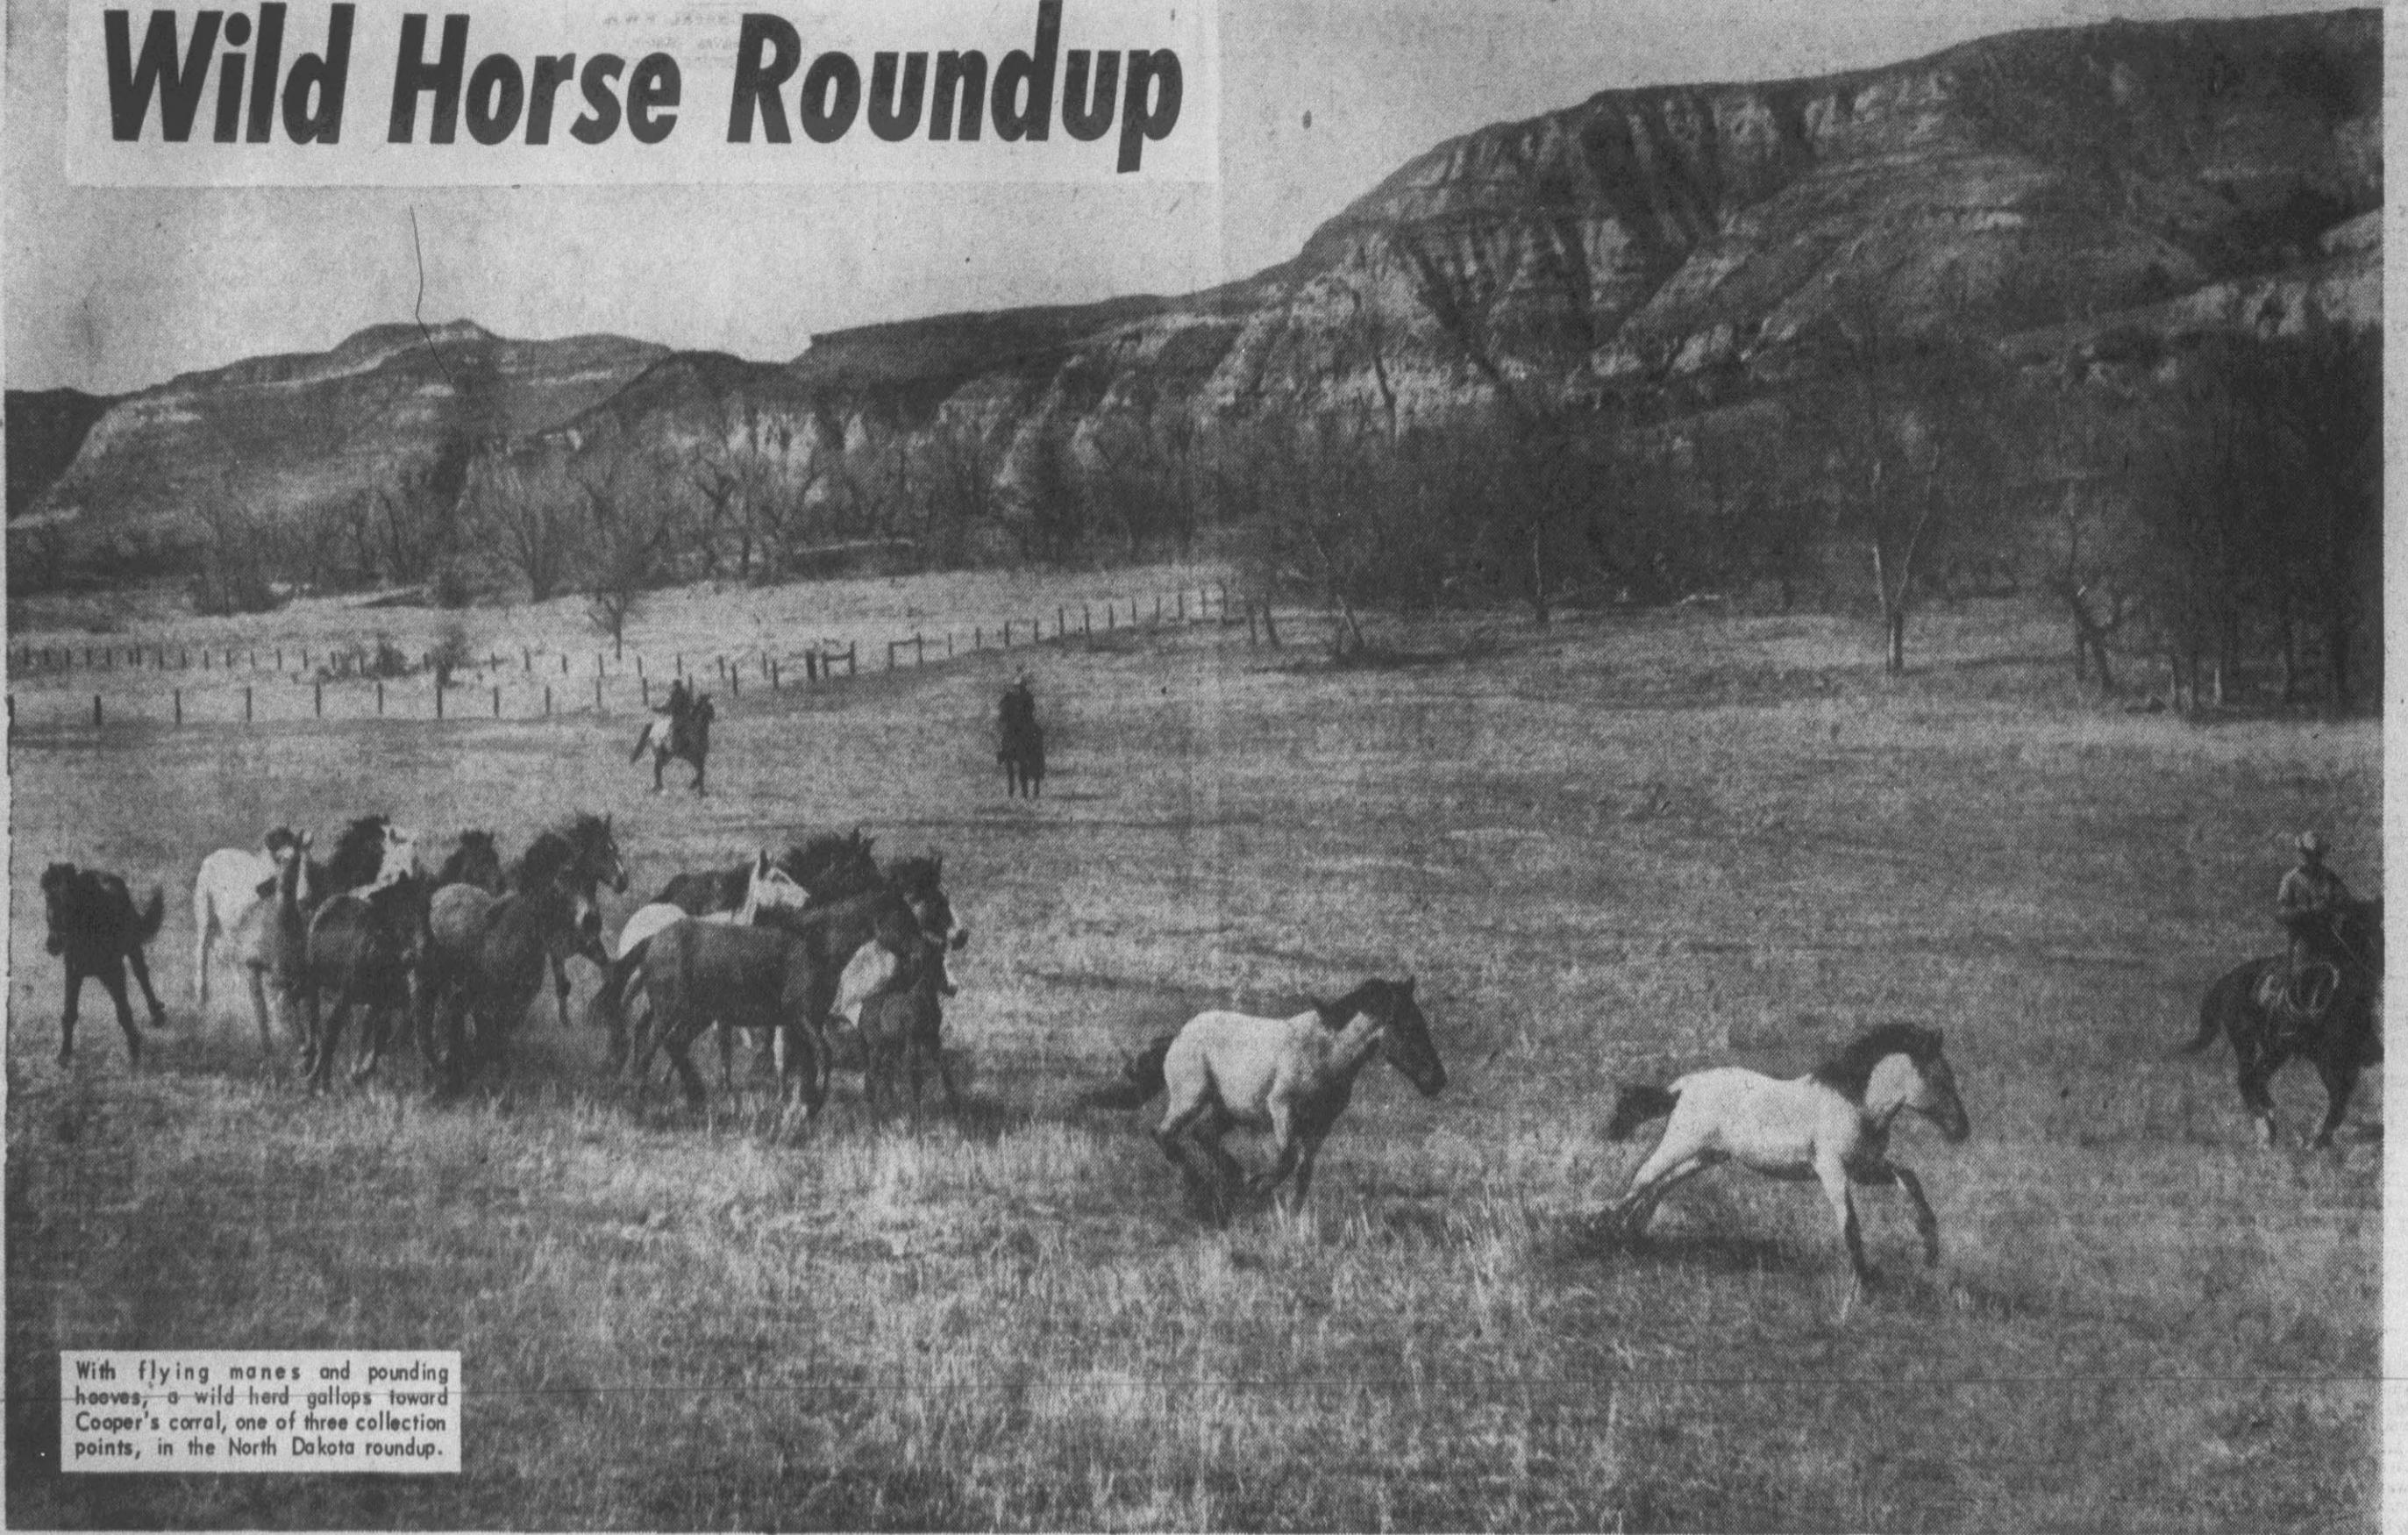

Above is all that was left of a large number of mash barrels which were found at a still in the Pactolus Township by ABC officers in 1952. Officers used dynamite to destroy the large still. ABC officer J. M. Ward said that only about a third as many stills are found in the county now as were in operation a number of years ago. (Reflector Staff Photos)

The above still was found on the Sticks road near Pactolus. It is known as a submarine type still. It is cheaper to build than an all-copper still and is constructed of wood except for the bottom which is usually copper.

Shown above are a portion of the mash barrels which were found at a still by ABC officers. The barrels, along with the still, were broken up. Local ABC officers made 114 arrests in their search for bootleggers during 1953.

Wild Horse Roundup

With flying manes and pounding hooves, a wild herd gallops toward Cooper's corral, one of three collection points, in the North Dakota roundup.

One of the last of America's wild horse roundups was held recently in the rugged badlands of the Theodore Roosevelt National Memorial park in western North Dakota. For three days about 40 volunteer riders — mostly veteran cowboys from nearby ranches — scoured some 60,000 acres north of Medora where wild herds have roamed free for many years.

The mustangs sometimes charged up precipitous slopes to avoid capture, but about 124 were finally corraled. The riders worked from north to south, moving the animals into collection points along the Little Missouri river. After spending as much as eight hours a day in the saddle, they "relaxed" on the last day with bare-back and saddle bronc riding in a rodeo at Medora.

These unusual pictures were taken by Russ Bull, staff photographer for the Minneapolis Tribune, who traveled 1,100 miles, round trip, to get them.

Cowhands ford the Little Missouri river in pursuit of a band of horses spotted on a distant mesa.

Checking for brands was a dangerous job for cowboys who wanted to claim horses that had been running wild. Unbranded ones went to riders who caught them.

ROPING A WILD MARE

The Taming of Carney Wilde by BART SPICER

When Charles Alexander Stewart absconded with funds from a bank in Philadelphia, he placed Carney Wilde's sleuthing career in jeopardy. Wilde was responsible for the security of the bank. It was up to him now, to find the thief who had disappeared after killing a policeman in the course of his flight. Wilde's troubles mount, when his girl, Jane Grodnik, elopes with his friend, Penn Maxwell. Jane's father, is as displeased with the match as Carney, but they good-humoredly bow to the girl's choice. A slim clue, a mere scrap of paper, sends Wilde on his way to New Orleans aboard a river boat making a luxury cruise to the Mardi Gras. Aboard the vessel, Wilde's interest centers on Cabin 5, as the guest for the homicidal robber begins.

CHAPTER SIX THE YOUNG assistant purser came in and the purser said, "Tell those gentlemen about the woman who had the reservation for bedroom five." "A doll," the kid said promptly. "Little on the tall side, but not too high for me. And what a build! Ladylike even cool, maybe, but she just needs a good man's..." "That will do, Russell," the purser broke in. "Did she have the original reservation?" "No sir. She bought the space at the office on Front St. Ticket stamped 2:26. Original reservation cancelled."

The purser said: "Unpaid reservations are cancelled at midnight the day before sailing. We, of course, made an exception in Mr. Wilde's case. Obviously Holloway, or Stewart rather, did not..." "I thought he paid for it," I said. "Not in full," the purser insisted. "Otherwise it would have been held."

Kebble said sourly: "Where is this woman? I want to see her. You stay here, Wilde." "Show the sergeant to bedroom five, Mr. Russell. Or, on second thought, you stay with Mr. Wilde and get him a drink. I'll go with the sergeant."

Kebble stomped out and down the corridor, making the short-legged purser scamper to catch up. When Grenier came back, he said: "I must say that Sgt. Kebble—who I gather is no friend of yours—is a most disagreeable and difficult..."

"Amen," I agreed. "What happened?" "Why he actually forced his way into Miss Pomeroy's room and demanded to see proof of her identity. He was so high-handed that Miss Pomeroy refused to show him anything but the door."

Russell grinned. "A doll." "A charming lady," Grenier amended. He walked to his chair. "I escorted Serg. Kebble to the gangplank. Before he left he told me something disturbing, Mr. Wilde. About you." "All right. Let's have it." "He told me you are carrying a pistol. And that your permit, if any, would be invalid outside the county of Philadelphia. I really cannot permit..."

"Just a minute," I broke in. "Here's my permit." I opened my wallet and passed it to him. "I can carry this gun any place in the country. And maybe you'd better see this, too." I got out the letter Grodnik had persuaded his superintendent to write for me. Then I sat back and waited for Grenier to read it. Russell stepped warily around the desk, and his curiosity was too great to keep him from reading the letter over Grenier's shoulder.

When they both finished, Grenier shoved back my wallet and said the letter into its envelope. "What do you think, Russell?" he asked. "There's another point," I went on quickly. "Maybe you two have been too busy to notice, but I'm slightly crippled. I can use my right arm, but it will be several months before the left is any good. Stewart did that. He shot me in the shoulder."

Grenier smiled. He held out my letter with a graceful flourish. "Of course I couldn't possibly countenance the carrying of firearms on this vessel," he said. "But we don't search passengers. Everyone here is on holiday. I shudder to think what we'd find if we went looking."

We all chuckled at that and Grenier said: "You will, of course, be as circumspect as possible, Mr. Wilde. And I shall expect you to notify me or Russell before you take any drastic action."

I agreed to that with no argument. "Now about this Miss Pomeroy," I said. "I've been wondering whether she could have known ahead of time that the reservation was going to be cancelled and waiting for her. Just maybe it could have been framed that way by Stewart."

Grenier said "Russell, see if the telephone is still connected." Russell snatched the phone and just at that moment the big river boat shuddered and started backing into the current.

"That's it," Grenier said with resignation. "No contact with the shore until we reach Louisville tomorrow morning. If you think it's urgent, Mr. Wilde, I could order out the power yawl and send you back to..."

I shook my head. "Tomorrow will do." Then I asked Russell: "Did she have much luggage? Did she have a trunk—a good-sized trunk?"

Russell nodded. "A wardrobe trunk, not so very big." I pivoted to Grenier. "Do you have maid service on this boat. To help unpack?" "Only by special request."

"Can you send a maid to Miss Pomeroy?" "I could, but..." "Get her down there fast. Tell her to get a look inside that trunk and call you back as soon as she can."

Russell snapped his fingers. "Sure," he said excitedly. His eyes were lively as he gave instructions to one of the maids. He put the phone back and said, "You really think Stewart is hiding on Miss Pomeroy's trunk?" "I said, 'It's been done.'"

When the telephone rang he caught it on the first ripple. "Purser's office. Yes. Yes. All right. No, that's all. Thanks, Edna." He put the receiver down and said, "Edna says the trunk is empty now." I said: "We'll have to talk with Miss Pomeroy. But first I want to get into that room." I tapped Russell's arm. "Can you get her up here for a while and keep her while I go through her room?" "Could I guess," Russell called out. He eyed Grenier, waiting for the purser's reaction. Grenier hesitated. "We make a policy of not snooping. And how could you get into her room?"

I said: "This man Stewart is a murderer. You know that. I can get into Miss Pomeroy's room by using the key you're going to give me." Russell broke in: "I'll tell her you want to check on her reservation. I can say we didn't get word from the office before we left."

"You could have her fill out a form, maybe," I added. "Or just ask her for a lot of personal information. Tell her you need it for your insurance coverage. That sounds plausible. But be sure you keep her here."

Slowly Grenier picked up a dull brass key. "I've never done anything like this before, Mr. Wilde," he said. "I'm trusting you with a great deal."

"Don't worry," I said quickly. "I'll be careful. Maybe if Russell can hustle her out fast, she'll forget to lock the door and I won't need the key."

When we approached the room, Russell drew a deep breath. "Better get back with the crowd till she see us come out," he said softly. He stepped forward and rapped on the louvered door. "Purser's assistant, ma'am," he called out.

I drifted back along the hall. When the door finally opened Russell saluted informally. I was almost halfway back to the staircase when Russell and Miss Pomeroy passed me.

"...formality, nothing more," Russell was saying. "A nuisance, I know." I couldn't see Miss Pomeroy at all except for her smooth light-brown hair that was shaped closely to her head. She was very tall, as Russell had said; her shoulders were almost on a level with his. I pivoted quickly and walked back down the corridor toward bedroom five.

Somebody Told Me

Parenthood Develops Talents

Expecting to be a parent some day? Here's a list of new talents you will develop with parenthood: Think you know how to kiss? Until you have children, you haven't learned the real technique. Kissing is the best possible substitute for medicine, and it's so inexpensive. Whether it's a mashed finger, a bumped head (you have to learn how to kiss effectively through a head of hair) or a mosquito bite, you can train children to look upon a kiss as a relief. "Kiss it and make it well" is a terrific method. Parenthood develops one's reflexes. You'll find that you become so alert that you can catch one on his way to the floor from a high chair. Since the distance is shorter, it's not as easy to catch one falling off a bed or the sofa. When you miss, the kissing technique again enters the picture. Like an athlete, you develop particular muscles, the parent will find he has muscles he wasn't even aware of. Ever tried riding a heavy child horse-style on your foot with your knees crossed? Takes muscles to do that, but the parent starts the child when he weighs only a few pounds and develops the muscles as the child grows. Back muscles are given a trial, too. Reaching down over a crib changing diapers will supply a new strain; bending down so frequently to pick up after them will supply another. You'll develop a new mouseyness that you didn't think possible. Now you might say, "We're going to make all the noise we please around our baby; train him to sleep in noise." True, but it's that getting them to sleep period that requires the silence. You'll learn to move around without making a sound; possibly how to follow a TV story with the sound off during that critical few minutes that they're going to sleep. You'll lose all regard for order. If the house isn't in a turmoil, you'll wonder where the children are. Maybe you'll even forget the old days when the house could be kept. But one thing is certain: You will have no desire to recall the old days when everything was so orderly, calm, and you had all the freedom you pleased. Those days were great, but these with children are far greater. With all of these other talents, you develop at the same time a love that is impossible to describe. There's only one way to know what that love is like and that's have children of your own. And I thank you. JACK EDWARDS

What Other Editors Are Thinking

AIRPORT HEARING WAS WORTHWHILE (Rocky Mount Telegram) The public hearing called in Nashville Monday evening by the County Commissioners on the Eastern Carolina airport question did not settle anything. It was not meant to settle anything. The purpose was to give the Commissioners benefit of both sides of the question and to give the public a chance to be heard. To this extent, the meeting was successful and useful. The Commissioners conducted the meeting in a commendable manner. Both sides received fair treatment and every opportunity was afforded for full expression of opinion. Those participating in the meeting, for the most part, were restrained and good natured. There was a notable spirit of fair play and speakers for and against the airport were applauded by all. However, everything naturally was not entirely sweetness and light. There were some tense moments and there were those inevitable individuals who cannot resist stooping to unkindness. The differences were fundamental and there was little or no disposition on the part of those present to be persuaded by arguments from the other side. Since the Commissioners had voted to withhold Nash's support of the airport, they were presumably more familiar with the arguments against the project than those in favor of it. The hearing served a useful purpose therefore, in enlightening them on the pro side of the question. The hearing should also serve to inform them that opinion is not so overwhelmingly opposed to the project as they at first believed or stated. While those who spoke in opposition spoke in every case only for themselves, those speaking in favor of the airport, for the most part, represented such large groups in Rocky Mount as the Chamber of Commerce, the Merchants Association and the Junior Chamber of Commerce—groups with a combined membership well in excess of one thousand. While the group of some 150 citizens, who turned out was, as Senator Settle Bunn said, one of the most representative groups gathered together in a long time, there was no mass outpouring of people either for or against. This leads us to believe that had the Commissioners gone ahead and voted the airport fund, as was done in other counties, there would have been, as in other participating counties, little or no protest. In other words, their action in turning down the airport has brought far more protest than if they had supported the project in line with last year's planning. By the same token, we believe the Commissioners will find less opposition and protest and more people willing to go along—even with some reservations—if they go ahead now and vote the $5,000 than if they do not.

Around Capitol Square

By LYNN NISBET DIX HILL — The State hospital for mental patients at Raleigh, commonly known as Dix Hill, is the oldest and largest of the five institutions administered by the State Hospital Board of Control. Other units are at Morganton, Goldsboro, Kinston and Butler. The activities of these several units are so closely co-ordinated it is difficult to intelligently discuss one without consideration of all the others. The advisory budget commission was told at Dix Hill that many of the problems were closely interrelated. On occasion of the budgeters' visit, however, primary attention was given to the recent development and current and future needs of the Dix Hill unit. This institution is located near the southern limits of the City of Raleigh on a tract of land containing 1248 acres with a budget book value of $959,800. Buildings are carried on the budget inventory at $3,865,887. This total book valuation of $4,815,687 represents only a fraction of the investment and a small part of the market value. Legislative appropriations and bond money allocations since 1947 for permanent improvements amounts to $10,263,259. The pride of the institution is the recently finished admissions hospital and administration building. There are half a dozen other new buildings and nearly all of the old structures have been reconstructed to fit modern mental hospital practices. The reconditioning is in progress.

These modern practices and the facilities making them possible have had the effect of changing the institution from its former status of an "asylum" where mentally ill folks were buried alive to that of a real hospital, with emphasis upon curative therapy and restoration of patients to normal social life. The distinction is emphasized by the designation of those taking treatment as "patients" rather than as "inmates." HOSPITAL — The characteristic of a hospital as distinguished from an asylum is illustrated by the fact that last year there were 233 patients absolutely discharged and 989 released on probation. The report shows that 316 patients were returned from probation in the immediate past and prior years. The point is that hospitalization treatment as contrasted with merely custodial care made it possible for several hundred patients to be released, thus making space for the increasing number of patients seeking admission. The Raleigh unit takes care of all white epileptics and most of the alcoholic and drug addicts. It also handles all white criminally insane patients. The Goldsboro unit cares for Negro epileptics and criminally insane, and there is at Butler a volunteer alcoholic treatment section. POLICY — Since the Raleigh unit was the first visited by the budgeters the occasion afforded opportunity for discussion of general policy. That discussion quickly developed into consideration of alleged delays by building contractors in completing jobs for which they had contracts, with involvement of whether State building contracts should include penalty clauses for failure to complete jobs on time. It was brought out that penalty provisions are included in all Federal government contracts and in most private enterprise construction, but are not included in State contracts. Consensus of the budget group seemed to be that this was an item of administrative detail which was not material to the purposes of the inspection tour. The budget commission wants buildings completed as quickly as possible at lowest possible cost to obtain good workmanship and with result of obtaining the best facilities at least expense to the taxpayers. SCHOOLS — The State School for the Blind and Deaf at Raleigh, like the School for the Deaf at Morganton, follows closely the course of instruction in the public school system. Naturally there must be different methods of instruction, because of the peculiar handicaps of the pupils. The School for the Blind and Deaf at Raleigh takes care of all the white blind children and both the deaf and blind Negroes. The Morganton school has only white deaf. The Raleigh school is in two sections: white blind in the city, sandwiched between State College, Pullen Park, State Prison and Dix Hill hospital, with an enrollment of 175; the Negro school is located southeast of the city in relatively new quarters, with an

Mergers Flourishing

By SAM DAWSON NEW YORK (AP)—Mergers are flourishing these days as business firms realign themselves in the big competitive battle for their spending money. Auto companies have been joining forces—and there's talk of still more mergers in this field. Banks in many parts of the nation have been merging, or readying plans to merge. Textile company realignments have spiced the business news for weeks, as this harassed industry seeks ways to cut costs and lure enough consumer dollars to go around among its many small companies. Other industries—paper machinery, gas, to name a few—also report merger moves under way. Since mergers make big ones out of little ones, the whole question of "big business" is likely to be kicked around this year. Federal agencies are reported looking some of the mergers over, to see if the anti-trust laws are involved. Competitors of the newly formed or enlarged concerns may feel increased pressure on sales, or more difficulty in getting raw materials, if the bigger firm takes a dominant position. If the competition hurts, they can be depended upon to squawk about the mergers. The New York Stock Exchange is reported looking into some of the stock trading that has accompanied or brought about some of the mergers. When the mergers might mean the closing of some plants and the concentration of the newly enlarged company's activities in other plants, communities affected may raise a protest. But mergers offer many advantages to certain industries. Take banks. More than 700 commercial banks have been absorbed into other banks in the last eight years. But the banking facilities for the nation bankers say, haven't been cut, because during the same years almost as many new ones started up, and the opening of new branches has added about 2,000 banking offices to the nation's total. In the textile mergers, one advantage usually stressed is diversification—with many types of products a firm is hurt less from shifting style trends. Another is that in developing a broad range of products a firm can build up the appeal of a brand or company name. Costs are cut by having one sales force do the merchandising for two or more. Another advantage is financial. The industry's earning record isn't too hot just now. But the assets value of many companies are much better than present earnings indicate. And the costs of replacing plants at present inflated prices make an old company's facilities look like a bargain to any concern wanting to expand. DEMAND FOR HI-FI... TO PERK MUSIC SALES... HI-fi is the major hope of prosperity of music and electronics dealers this year, according to members of the National Association of Music Merchants. High-fidelity equipment sales have been rising and, although a summer lull has settled over much of the industry, dealers expect that new sales marks will be made in the fall and pre-Christmas seasons. More persons are becoming aware of the greater attraction of high-fidelity reproduction, and hi-fi equipment is getting better for the money, the merchants say. In addition, there are some tone-deaf people with money who insist on buying hi-fi equipment because it is the thing to do. STRIKE BRINGS CEMENT... FROM 3,000 MILES... For the first time in 30 years, cement has been shipped from Belgium to Boston. A shipment of 470,000 pounds is to be unloaded this week. The reason for the shipment is a strike of cement mill workers in Maine, Pennsylvania and New York. The strike has cut supplies so sharply that a market has been created for the imported stuff. The money paid for foreign cement will be lost forever to the American cement industry—and that includes labor and management.

Training Grounds For Wifehood

By HAL BOYLE NEW YORK (AP) — If I were a bachelor yearning for the matrimonial yoke, I do believe I'd head for Manhattan this weekend. Some 2,000 business secretaries are here for their annual convention, and I don't know where else in America at the moment a man could go if he is searching for the right girl to love, honor and disobey the rest of his life. For the business office today is the best of all training grounds for wifehood. Any girl who can run an office efficiently can operate a home at half-throttle. As I see it, a good secretary has about all the advantages even the most cautious bachelor looks for in a wife, to wit: 1. She can sew on a button. 2. She has learned to keep her trap closed about confidential matters. 3. She knows when to get a man a cup of coffee, and when he prefers aspirin. 4. If she isn't a beauty, she at least knows how to put her best foot forward. She is neat, orderly and well-dressed. 5. She knows how to arrange flowers. 6. She has learned to take dictation from a boss, and therefore a husband can at least hope she will pay some attention to what he says—if only through force of habit. 7. She has the ability to budget money and get the most out of a small income. 8. She can fill out your income tax, and write diplomatic letters of refusal to all the relatives who try to borrow money from you. 9. Any girl who can change a typewriter ribbon successfully probably can learn in a few months to fix your television set, too. The repair bills she saves will in time pay for the cost of the wedding and her subsequent upkeep. Every year the American girl secretary is getting brainier, better looking and more of a matrimonial bargain. Jerry Wald, space consultant for the Art Metal Construction Co., office equipment manufacturer, is in my authority here. His job is to measure offices for secretaries (and secretaries for offices), and after a national survey of the field he came up with this observation: "The average secretary today can accomplish more work in two hours than one in the Gibson girl generation could in an entire day. Physically, she is smaller in size, and in the office occupies one third the amount of space given her sister of 20 years ago." A thrifty bachelor can see the obvious advantages here: He marries one of the new pony-model secretaries who will eat less food and fit in a smaller apartment than say a buxom lady weightlifter or the center on an all-girl basketball team. And, of course, if he wants to keep his bride on the job while he himself stays home and pursues his hobbies, he won't overlook the fact that secretaries have pretty good take-home pay, although of course they don't get what they deserve. "Executive secretaries have an average salary ranging from $50 a week in Alabama," says Wald, "to $82 in Tulsa. They average $75 in Los Angeles and $72 in New York." All of which boils down to the following sensible tip to any sensible bachelor: "Don't let your boss marry his secretary. She's too good for him. Beat him to the punch. Marry her yourself." As a matter of fact, if the boss has a particularly efficient girl Friday and hates the thought of losing her, you can even use a little polite blackmail on him by saying: "Look, boss, either you give me a raise in pay—or I'll marry your secretary." Either way you win.

More Will Be Killed While They Argue

The row in the making down in Craven County over the location of the proposed new highway from New Bern to Cherry Point is threatening to delay the much needed facility. Citizens of New Bern and the area between New Bern and Cherry Point already have registered protests with highway officials at the proposed location of the highway. If the row goes on for months, (as it easily could) it can cause a serious delay to the construction of the new segment of road. What the state proposes to do is to make the highway from New Bern to Cherry Point a four-lane highway. Governor Umstead has termed the project "the most sorely needed highway in the state." Those who have traveled the highway from New Bern to Havelock will be inclined to agree with the Governor. The accident statistics for the 18 mile stretch of highway attest to the accuracy of its nick-name "Bloody Boulevard." But there apparently are groups along the present highway and the proposed route of the new addition which are offering serious opposition to the proposed route. Such protests as these were voiced at a meeting between citizens and highway officials in New Bern Thursday: 1. The proposed location would cost the state a great deal more money than a different route would. 2. Business on the present highway location would be hurt. 3. The existing highway could be widened to four lanes without changing the location. Certainly the people who will be affected by the proposed location of the additional highway facility are entitled to be heard on the matter. But isn't it safe to assume that highway engineers who have made the proposals for the new highway have considered it from all standpoints? Can it not be safely assumed their proposal is the one which they feel is best in the long run with all things considered? It is our opinion the engineers are able to take a more objective view of the proposed new highway than either those people along the present location or the proposed new location. It would be indeed a shame if the row over the location delays unduly the much needed highway project while more people are killed and maimed on the 18 miles of existing highway which is heavily overloaded with traffic.

Slogan Trading Is Old Political Game

It wasn't many months ago that Democratic political leaders were telling the American people emphatically they never had it so good. Those were the same days that GOP leaders were screaming at the top of their voices "it's time for a change." Well, the people went to the polls, cast their ballots and a new set-up resulted. Now on the American scene, the same slogans are being used. Only this time the Democrats and the GOP have traded banners. The Republicans are seeking to convince the American people they're better off than ever. The Democrats, on the other hand, are crying its time for a change. The "ins" and the "outs" on the national political scene just trade battered old signs each time they trade positions on the team. Most of the time neither group bothers to freshen up the old sign with new paint. Both have proved effective in the past. They probably will in the future.

The Red Figures Are Smaller, Anyway

For whatever it is worth as consolation to money-conscious American taxpayers, the federal government went ONLY three billion 29 million dollars in the red for the fiscal year which ended last June 30. It means that for the past fiscal year, the deficit of the federal government amounted to only about $20 per person for 150 million Americans. While the deficit of over three billion dollars is bad enough, it is not nearly so bad as the nine and one-half billion deficit the federal government experienced the year before. Slowly, perhaps, we are making our way toward a balanced budget in the federal government. For the past fiscal year—according to the administration announcement—the deficit was a quarter billion dollars less than was expected. The government's revenue was about three billion lower than anticipated, but spending was cut three and one-quarter billion. Maybe one of these years we'll get back to the long lost days of a balanced budget in the federal government. The goal is not yet in sight, but we are making progress in that direction it seems.

Strength for the Day

By EARL L. DOUGLASS LOVE GOD AND THY NEIGHBOR. It is a well-known fact that a majority of ministers are sons of ministers. It is significant that after experiencing the hard circumstances which sometimes characterize a minister's household, so many young men decide that nevertheless they want to go on with this type of work. There appeared recently in a church publication the statement of a minister as to why he had followed in his minister-father's footsteps. The father's life had been dogged by misfortune. There had never been enough money to keep them in the comfort to which most modern families aspire. To make matters worse, congregations had not been too kind in the treatment of this minister's father. Yet the son testifies that he never heard his father complain or grumble at the treatment he had received and that he met each experience without the least show of bitterness. "Why didn't I turn against the church, as many other ministers' children have done? Now I am in my early 50's and know that from here on out, I cannot expect too much. But if henceforth each new place is a smaller field of service, carrying less salary, I do not worry. "Christianity doesn't mean something we get for ourselves. It means, rather, that we give ourselves in outgoing service in the Kingdom of our Saviour and of our God."

National Whirligig

Every Saturday, Mr. Tucker answers readers' questions of general interest on national and international politics and personalities. Questions may be sent to him at 7008 Hillcrest Place, Chevy Chase, Md. WASHINGTON—"Will you please explain," asks Mrs. F. L. of Yorkers, N. Y., "just what kind of shenanigans was played in the housing scandals now under investigation by the Senate? How did the builders operate the game?" Answer: Mrs. F. L.'s bewilderment is understandable, for it was a complicated technique. And all of the mysteries have not yet been unraveled, according to Chairman Homer E. Capehart of the Investigating Committee. But here is, perhaps, an excellent example of the operation: Builder X, let us say, obtained a 30-year, Federal Housing Authority guarantee for a mortgage on a project estimated to cost $8,875,000. With that guarantee as security, he obtained $8,875,000 from two reputable banks. SOME PHONY TRANSACTIONS—In this instance, X complied with FHA requirements that he invest a certain percentage of the total cost with his own funds. He says that he spent $650,000 in buying the land, clearing it of rocks and trees, in legal and architects' fees. But there have been cases when the builders' personal investment was a phony transaction. They overvalued the price of the land, and inflated all other original costs to make the required showing before FHA. They began with a ragged shoestring. SMART TO BE TRICKY—Builder X completed the apartment project at a cost of only $6,600,000, or $2,275,000 less than the amount he received from the banks. With half of that saving, he bought out his partner. With the other half, he built a shopping center. He defends the saving on the ground that he was an unusually smart operator. BUT—and here is the evil in most of these cases—he based apartment rentals, not on actual cost of construction, but on the full $8,875,000 mortgage total. Add many lawyers say the transaction was "legal"

How Some Builders Operated

By RAY TUCKER In every respect! "Do you think," asks M. R. of Grand Rapids, Mich., "that Adlai Stevenson is a real, serious candidate for another Presidential nomination?" Answer: What I think doesn't matter much. But I may say that every veteran and worthwhile politician I know, including Democrats and Republicans, believes that he is panning for another try at the big prize. He is certainly going through all the motions—making countless speeches, consulting with regional leaders, setting himself up as chief critic and censor of the Eisenhower Administration. He most assuredly is not exerting himself simply for headlines. Moreover, he is financing these ventures with his own money. That looks serious. FRIENDS BELIEVE STEVENSON MIGHT WIN IN 1956—He really seems to believe that the Democrats can regain the White House in 1956. In his opinion, Ike has disappointed many of his 1952 admirers with his domestic and foreign policies. Despite his disastrous defeat two years ago, Stevenson's friends believe he might make the grade under more propitious circumstances than prevailed when Eisenhower was a recently returned war hero. Finally, Stevenson is veering toward the left more than he did as the nominee. He apparently feels that there will be a popular reaction against Republican conservatism. IKE'S HEALTH INSURANCE PROGRAM—"How could the House of Representatives," explodes R. G. of Dallas, Tex., "turn down President Eisenhower's health insurance program by such a big vote?" Answer: Ironically, both Ike's major legislative defeats have resulted from the fact that they were only halfway and compromising measures. Taft-Hartley revision was shelved because it satisfied neither the anti- nor pro-labor groups. So it was with the health insurance proposal. Conservatives feared it was a step toward what they call "socialized medicine." Liberals thought it only a feeble attempt to reduce the cost of illness for people in the lower and needy brackets.

Drought Stunted Tobacco, Corn And Cotton

Lonnie Staton of Greenville shows in this photo how badly the crops in the Ahoskie area suffered from the lack of rain. The corn, which already has small ears on it, is only about three to four feet tall while tobacco is budding out although it is only about 12 inches high. The cotton, in his other hand, has bolls and blossoms though it is only about six inches tall. Staton said he stopped beside the road to get these various hills of the crop in that area while returning from Norfolk, Va. earlier this week. He said rain fell in that area this week, but it was too late to save the crop. (Reflector Staff Photo by Bob Boyette)

'Modern South' Disturbs Them

By F.H. Jeter
The ability of the modern South to handle its affairs and to look after its own business interests seems to disturb our northern neighbors on occasion. In Michigan last week, I attended a meeting of the American Association of Agricultural College Editors. More than 300 members of the profession gathered in Kellogg Center, a useful and convenient structure on the campus of the Michigan State College. As its name implies, it was given to the College by the Kellogg Foundation and it is the place where various educational gatherings are held.

California, of course, made a few "cracks"; our neighbors from Georgia and South Carolina also had something to say; as did our visitors from the Ozarks of Arkansas and Missouri. But those Sandhill peaches vanished as if by magic. We told the people at the conference about our peach industry and invited them to pay us a visit whenever they could make the trip.

Imagine our surprise to read in an East Lansing paper the next afternoon a warning or an appeal from the Michigan State Commissioner of Agriculture to the effect that Michigan housewives must not be misled. He said "Peach Week" was a propaganda stunt by Southern Peach Growers and that the Michigan crop would be ripe shortly. He exhorted them to stand firm and await the local crop before beginning their freezing, canning and other forms of consumption. You can imagine how that press release and our peaches stirred up the East Lansing conference. It was an amusing incident and seemed to indicate the concern of that section over the progress of that section.

Nearly everyone up there also is greatly concerned about what we will do when everyone quits smoking. I noticed, however, that practically all those attending the conference, and they were from Maine to California and from Florida to Washington, were smoking cigarettes made from our flue-cured tobacco. I asked if they intended to quit smoking. "Oh, no," they would reply, "I don't think smoking will hurt me, but there are those who will be frightened enough to quit." I tried to reassure my well-meaning friends that North Carolina is not yet ready to give up the production of tobacco nor were our factories curtailing cigarette production. It was suggested to them that perhaps they might prefer to clean up the smoke and grime of their own dirty cities and towns before abandoning a source of pleasure and relaxation known to have existed in this country since the first white settlers arrived.

Those Other Crops Need Attention, Too

By James M. Goode
Negro County Agent
At this season of the year farm families all over Pitt County are busy—up to their neck in the harvesting of tobacco. Usually at this time farmers forget everything on the farm except tobacco.

In Raleigh, N.C., research workers and Extension Specialist advised Farm Agents—state-wide, that in most counties, certain farms could grow Alfalfa successfully and said, "they do hope those certain farmers in the various counties will find out by September 1954, through soil testing and practices that they can grow Alfalfa successfully." The researcher informed the group that Alfalfa is a deep rooted growing legume and will stand up under dry conditions. They also advised that the crop is very tasty to livestock and will grow seven or more years and that it can be used for grazing or hay crops.

Then there was that question of hot weather! "How do you stand it?" they asked. On that day the weather reports showed an average of a bit over 85 degrees in North Carolina and anywhere from 90 to 112 degrees through the immediate mid-western states. The many lakes of inland Michigan and the cooling breezes which sweep over that state from Lake Michigan, Lake Huron, Lake St. Clair and even Lake Erie, however, gives that particular state a delightful summer climate; but when the thermometer hits around 95 as it did several times while we were up there, the folks really suffer. For 44 years, they say, the average July temperature in East Lansing has been 71 degrees. This means and seemed to indicate the concern of that section over the progress of that section.

ALL WOOL AND YARD WIDE—This ball of wool on the hoof won for owner, Clifford Necholson, of Lincolnshire, prize as best shearing ram in Windsor, England, show.

County agents realize how important this crop is because it is the best on most farms in Pitt County but at the same time, if farmers do have some spare hours during the week from tobacco, he should give serious consideration to future hay and pasture crops.

Much emphasis for establishing Alfalfa was placed on the following: (1) Select a well drained soil of good fertility. (2) Make a soil test for lime and fertilizer requirements. (3) Apply lime and fertilizer on basis of soil test. (4) Prepare a firm seed bed. Inoculate seeds—fifty-cent ($50)—investment on inoculate is worth $50.00 an acre to Alfalfa planted. (5) Plant seed 1/4 inch deep. (6) If used as a pasture—use strip grazing. (7) If used as a hay crop—cut in early bloom. (8) Manage properly by top-dressing annually.

Records Needed On Small Farms

RALEIGH — Are records necessary on the small poultry farm? Sure! R.S. Dearstyne, head of the department of poultry science, N.C. State College, says records are necessary no matter how large or small the poultry operation. He adds that it is sometimes a difficult task to get poultrymen to understand the necessity of keeping accurate records.

Records not only keep the poultryman informed as to the receipts and expenditures of his business, they also furnish other valuable information, says Dearstyne. For example, every poultryman knows that a fairly consistent curve of egg production occurs. Flocks coming into production in the early autumn should show a regular increase in number of eggs laid until the peak of production arrives four or five months later. This peak should hold firm several weeks until a gradual decline in productivity occurs. If daily egg collections do not follow this trend, something's wrong.

During the past two years, it has been exceptionally dry and has caused most of the pastures in the county to be ruined. This means that on most farms in the county old and new pastures must be established. At this season of the year it would pay each farmer to use just a little of that spare time and take soil samples of those fields to be planted in pastures and hay crop. July and August would be a good time to get that soil test back, because in September it will be time to plant your pasture and hay crops.

The Specialist from State College advised all farmers not to become alarmed over the initial investment—that is high fertilization requirements when Alfalfa fields are first planted because in the seven or more years following the crop will ever pay its investment many times. Keep in mind the time for planting Alfalfa in the Coastal Plain area— from September 15-30. So while planting those Ladino Clover pastures, it is the hope a few farmers will set an example by starting a small Alfalfa demonstration. Those farmers interested in giving alfalfa a trial this year—see your County Agent for further details.

Of course, says Dearstyne, the poultryman who hasn't kept records doesn't know anything is wrong. He just knows he is getting less and less money. But why? He just doesn't know. Parasite infestations may have occurred; or some factor of good management has been violated. The sooner these errors are located and corrected the better the chances of ending the year in the black instead of the red.

Tobacco Growers Urged To Use Extra Caution In Grading Leaf; Foreign Buyers Are Protesting

RALEIGH — J.B. Hutson, President of Tobacco Associates, Inc., has issued a statement urging farmers "to be more cautious in grading their current crop of tobacco to help overcome increasing complaints by foreign manufacturers who object strenuously to the 'mixed' condition in which our tobacco is brought to market."

In order to correct this unfavorable position regarding mixed grades, Hutson urged growers to (1) market separately lugs, cutters, leaf and tips; (2) pick out carefully all green, red, dead and burned leaves and sell separately; (3) carefully pick out all string and other foreign matter; and (4) tie in uniformly sized bundles with butts about the size of a half-dollar.

When bundles are too large, Hutson explained, "they do not dry properly when the tobacco is being processed through the re-drying plants and quite often cause the tobacco to mold later while in storage. This, of course, causes substantial losses to the owners as well as being the basis for complaints made about our tobacco."

Communists Took Gamble In Accepting Peace Treaty

By JAMES MARLOW
WASHINGTON (AP)—Now that the Geneva conference has given the Communists half of Viet Nam, the puzzling question remains: Why were the Communists willing to make the agreement and end the war?

They had the French on the run in Indochina when the Geneva conference began last April and were continuing to push them up to the time the armistice was signed.

They may feel confident they can win control of all Viet Nam in elections to be held in 1956. That would be the first time the Communists had won new territory through free elections.

This armistice would seem to signal a shift in Communist tactics, at least temporarily. Their twin goals will remain the same: To subvert where they can and to weaken Western resistance by splitting the Allies.

Instead of trying to subvert and at the same time split the Allies by shooting, as in Korea and Indochina, they may feel they can accomplish both ends better in a period of peace or at least give it a try.

So long as shooting continued they were in danger. If, instead of settling for half of Viet Nam, they had tried to take it all from the French by force, the United States and Britain eventually might have intervened. The result might have been world war.

Just forcing the French to give them half of Viet Nam was a Communist victory over the West, which had been too divided to agree on a plan for stopping them militarily.

This was twice within a year that communism had pushed the West into a position where it was glad to settle for an armistice instead of fighting on to a victory, in Korea in 1953 and now in Indochina.

It was a lesson which could hardly be lost on the millions of Asians, who for centuries had been forced to regard the West as invincible when dealing with Asia.

This realization and the memory of what happened in Korea and Indochina may have a weakening effect on Southeast Asians if they have to make a decision on allying themselves with the West against communism.

Since French Premier Mendès-France had promised to resign this week unless he obtained an Indochina armistice, it might seem that Russian Foreign Minister Molotov would have wanted to prevent an armistice.

For resignation by Mendès-France would have forced the French to choose a new government, perhaps weaker than the present one and more of a push-over for Communist pressure.

On the surface that might appear logical. But Molotov had to take something else into consideration: That Mendès-France's failure and resultant French exasperation and frustration, might have produced a strong military leader and a bitterness against the Russians.

It was a gamble and Molotov apparently chose to take it easy. What Russia wants is to prevent creation of the European Defense Community—the single European Army—urged by the United States.

The French have stalled on this plan which would put them in single army with the West Germans. Russia has been anxious to prevent both EDC and German rearmament. Now, faced with the prospect of peace everywhere in the world for an indefinite period, the French may be more reluctant than ever to join EDC.

If the United States and Britain go ahead with reported plans to let the Germans rearm independently if the French won't join them in EDC, there will be a wedge between the three Allies.

The Russians can be depended on to do all they can to drive wedges in here and elsewhere. For example the United States is opposed to the Geneva conference for a collective security agreement for Southeast Asia.

U.S. military chiefs for several years, have favored a mutual defense system in that part of the world. But that was while the French and Associated Indochinese States seemed set only to be holding their own against the rebels but also to be moving toward the time when they could achieve a military victory.

Pentagon informants said the newer view was touched on by Secretary of Defense Wilson this week when he said that military power alone "doesn't quite handle" situations in which nationalistic feelings are mixed up with subversion and propaganda and the technique of boring from within. This was a description of how the Reds advanced in Indochina.

Some weeks ago the nation's top military advisers—the Joint Chiefs of Staff—were arguing among themselves about the advisability of calling for direct American action to save the fall of Dien Bien Phu to the Communists and the subsequent rapid crumbling of the French will to keep on fighting.

The Army's chief of staff, Gen. Matthew Ridgway, was the strongest military voice against American intervention then.

Ridgway's voice is not alone today, however. One Pentagon official summed up the growing military opposition to a NATO-style alliance in Southeast Asia this way: "It would be another Korea—with a 90 per cent American contribution in manpower and effort."

The same official said that action in Southeast Asia would be even more difficult than it was in Korea, because the newly nationalistic people to the south have fresh in mind their colonial status under the French that is only now being lifted.

The Navy and the Air Force, both capable of operating from greater distances, would not be under such pressure as the Army in contributing forces to any new military alliance. But these services also know the formation of an effective containing front around the southern tip of the Asian mainland might require forces better used elsewhere in a defense front that, in effect, now stretches from Japan to Europe.

ing to face the problem of trying to keep the Red Chinese out of the United Nations.

Then there is the problem of trading with the Red Chinese. The United States is against it. The British, for instance, consider this unrealistic.

Meanwhile, without starting wars the Communists can work from within any country they pick as their next target. They can afford a period of quiet for a change, if only to see how they can make it work for them.

And since the United States is probably ahead of them in armaments, they can use a few years of peace to build up their arsenal against the moment they think ripe for a showdown.

Military Chiefs Shy Away From 'Trigger' Alliance

By C. YATES MCDANIEL
WASHINGTON (AP)—Military policymakers, especially those in the Army, are viewing with concern any plan for a Southeast Asia alliance that would automatically commit American forces as does the North Atlantic Treaty Organization in Europe.

This feeling has been strengthened all the more by the outcome of the Geneva conference at which, in the opinion of qualified U.S. officers interviewed today, the Communists emerged with the upper hand in the struggle to end the fighting in Indochina.

The military authorities, who asked not to be quoted by name, spoke out after State Department officials revealed yesterday that the United States, Britain and other nations have agreed to call a conference by September to write a collective security agreement for Southeast Asia.

U.S. military chiefs for several years, have favored a mutual defense system in that part of the world. But that was while the French and Associated Indochinese States seemed set only to be holding their own against the rebels but also to be moving toward the time when they could achieve a military victory.

Prof Claims Good Art Student Ignores Time

By W.G. ROGERS
Associated Press Arts Editor
NEW YORK, (AP)—Good art students forget that time exists, says Prof. Henry Rox of Mount Holyoke College.

"I like the enthusiasm of young people in my classes, but they watch the clock. They don't want to give art anymore time than the curriculum provides for."

His complaint applies to Mount Holyoke girls and to students in the Worcester (Mass.) Art Museum school where he also has taught.

He was comparing them to those of prewar Germany where he studied sculpture.

In New York on a quick visit, he told me other differences he found in today's students. Students used to go to museums, he says.

"Now they're too apt to regard the museum as a morgue. The trouble is, they have been brought up to think that nothing counts except originality. The differences between one painter and another, or one sculptor and another, have been exaggerated."

"In my classes I stress derivation, Michelangelo and Donatello, for instance, and Rembrandt and Caravaggio. The point is not that one man is like another, but better. Nowadays critics mistakenly praise a work of art because it is unlike something else."

On modernism he said: "We have the two party system in art, modernist and conservative. The neglected people are those in the middle, those who are neither avant-garde nor conservative."

"They have one advantage: They win the prizes, because selections by juries are compromises, and the middle-of-the-roader benefits. They have a great disadvantage, however; they do not get the commissions."

How's the sculptor doing? Rox thinks he comes second in art: "Sculpture is not considered of equal importance with painting. In art shows whenever the grand prize is open to all mediums, sculpture rarely wins. In many shows there are more paintings than sculpture prizes. I have, for instance, served on the Pennsylvania Academy sculpture jury. We had three prizes to award while our painter colleagues gave out eight."

Rox happily is not in any position to complain about prizes, for he must have a tack-room full of ribbons and medals—from Syracuse Ceramics shows, from Silvermine, Audubon Artists, Boston Art Festival, Architectural League, National Academy of Design. He's had one-man shows from here to San Francisco, and his work has been exhibited in New York, Berlin, London and Glasgow.

Next fall he goes to Europe on one of the coveted Guggenheim fellowships.

He can't complain about critics, either, for they have likened his robust, romantic and moving forms to the work of the very best of his fellow countrymen.

AT WHAT AGE SHOULD SAVING START?

If it's true that children learn best by doing, then why not illustrate the value of money early in life? A popular way to teach thrift is to open a savings account here for your child and encourage him to make regular additions. We welcome all savers, young and old. A convenient amount will open an account.

How much horsepower in your ad program?

If you want your products to move faster, take a cue from the automobile people. They stepped up their newspaper advertising by 47.1% last year.

BIG NATIONAL ADVERTISERS of all types of products increased their newspaper advertising heavily in 1953. But in the giant automotive field—where manufacturers had to sell as never before—they turned to newspapers with even more dramatic force.

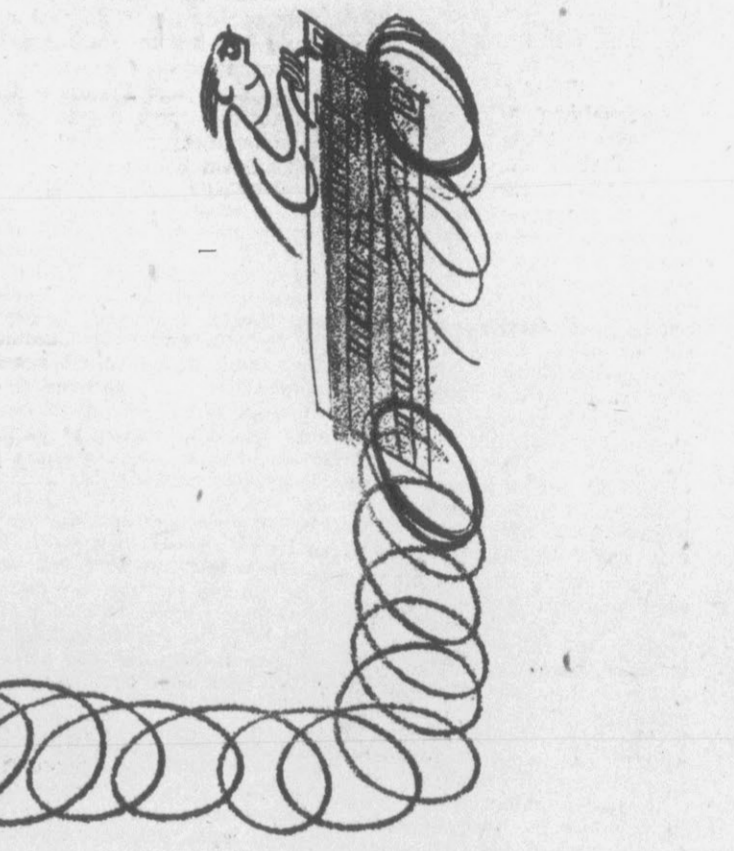

These big advertisers rely on newspapers as their basic medium.

They know that almost all the people in every town read a newspaper just about every day. It's one thing people won't do without.

They know that people read the newspaper for the ads as well as for the news—and that sales action follows newspaper reading.

IF YOU SELL PRODUCTS IN THIS AREA—don't settle for advertising that covers part of your market part of the time. For fast turnover, you need a steady, high-power ad program that hits on all cylinders!

If you're not getting newspaper advertising on your products, tell your manufacturers' men you want full support in your local newspaper.

THE WORLD THIS WEEK

Western Alliance Strengthened by Geneva Pressures

Little Chance for Early Adjournment

By ROGER D. GREENE
Associated Press Newsfeatures Writer

BARRING an 11th-hour burst of speed, Congress appears stymied by at least two major obstacles in its drive to adjourn by the end of this month.

That means the nation's lawmakers, already chafing at the torrid heat of Washington, would have to delay departure for their home ballistics, where many of them face bitter fights for political survival in the all-important congressional elections in November.

As usual, the roadblocks developed in the Senate, where debate is virtually unlimited and often rolls on like Tennyson's brook.

And, as usual, there are grumbles on the House side that senators should curb their oratory. The House has until the Senate is ready to quit before signing off for the summer, even when its own work slate is clean.

But the Senate, traditionally deaf to these plaints from the other side of Capitol Hill, was taking its time—despite a grueling schedule of 12-hour daily sessions set by Majority Leader Knowland (R-Calif.).

Knowland ordered the overtime pace with the comment that President Eisenhower's entire legislative program was threatened by an "obvious filibuster" in the battle over atomic power.

Major Roadblocks
This was one of the two major roadblocks confronting the Senate. The other was the fight over a move by 73-year-old Sen. Flanders (R-Vt) to have the Senate crack down with a formal resolution of censure against his arch foe, Sen. McCarthy (R-Wis.).

In addition, several of the biggest items on the Eisenhower legislative docket still had to be solved before Congress gets away. These included:

1. The politically red-hot farm bill, with its battle over flexible vs. rigid price supports.
2. The big tax overhaul bill, involving a controversy over what has been called "double taxation" on corporation profits through taxes on dividends. A compromise between separate Senate and House versions on this appeared likely.
3. Foreign aid and defense.

Fast Finish Sometimes
Action on these measures conceivably could be finished in a hurry, or drag on indefinitely.

In the Flanders-McCarthy fracas, Flanders originally planned to push for a showdown on his motion last Tuesday but said he changed his mind after behind-the-scenes talks convinced him he could pick up Democratic support by waiting.

The Vermonters has now set the showdown for July 30, the eve of the target date for adjournment. That could mean days or even weeks of delay if the Senate gets into a knock-down, drag-out fight over the McCarthy issue.

The Senate hassle over the administration's 104-page atomic energy bill played largely to an empty chamber, with long-winded flights of oratory carrying off the sparsely attended spectators' galleries.

But the delaying impact was nonetheless real and may already have upset the adjournment time table. After one ses-

Asia Defense Plan Prospects Are Good

By TOM WHITNEY
Associated Press Foreign Staff Writer

DURING the last days of the Geneva conference the United States, Britain and France managed to get closer together than they had been for months past.

This was an encouraging development. In the long run it may well be more important than other results of the meeting.

There appeared to be agreement among the three big powers that now that a truce has been obtained, the future safety of Southeast Asia will have to be ensured with a multi-power agreement in which all three would participate along with other interested and willing countries.

The truce plan for Indochina splits Viet Nam into two parts.

There were plenty of good reasons why the French were willing to entertain such a plan, and why the United States and Britain at the same time took no steps to block such a settlement.

The French saw continuation of the war in Indochina to be totally hopeless. They considered that there was very little chance of any victory or for that matter even such a draw as that provided in the truce plan. Even if they won a victory they foresaw they would have little stake left in Indochina anyway.

U.S. Helpless
The United States was more or less helpless in this situation. Furthermore the U.S. government was by no means sure that it could afford to take such a domestically unpopular step as involving American troops in Indochina.

In other words, the partition of Viet Nam looked to the West to be not too exorbitant a price for peace in Indochina.

The only thing not completely clear was just why the Communists appeared to be willing to settle on such terms. They seemed to have a great deal to win from letting the war go on. Perhaps, however, they feared a real danger of United States intervention in Indochina should the Geneva talks fail.

Second Thoughts Probable
Most of the world was joyful about the end to the Indochina fighting.

Some skepticism was heard however. Charles Wilson, U.S. secretary of defense, said for instance that a truce line across Indochina may be the best "answer at the moment, but it's nothing I'm enthused about."

Later on, in fact, it seems quite probable that some people enthusiastic now may have some second thoughts.

Important as it is for the world to have an armistice in Indochina, at the same time it should not be forgotten that "settlement" of the Indochina problem may well turn out in the long run to be a cure as bad as the illness.

Cutting countries in two is a poor way to resolve international questions. The United States, Britain and France, who have had some experience in this field, ought to know by now.

History Holds Warning
There are two thoroughly partitioned nations in the world today and it is no coincidence that they are the hottest problems in international affairs.

The two divided countries are, of course, Germany and Korea. In each of these lands there are two governments and an iron curtain down the middle of the nation.

It's by no means easy to defend a border line between Communism and the free world which runs along national frontiers. It's doubly difficult to preserve one which cuts through a nation.

The great religion of the 20th century inside and outside the Iron Curtain is, after all, nationalism.

In divided countries like Korea and Germany the tremendous drive towards reestablishment of national unity complicates the already complex issues of the cold war between Communism and freedom.

Reunite at Any Price
On each side of artificial frontiers dividing Germany and Korea there are plenty of persons who care much less whether their country is free or Communist than that it be reunited under either system. There are notheds ready for anything who do not mind at all if they involve the rest of the world in a new and horrible world war just so that they achieve their own aims of unification under one flag or another.

It's a very serious question indeed whether any divided nation the bigger and more responsible powers can count on their local allies or minions among the divided nationality to maintain the peace by themselves. The situation is a very tempting one for local and outside gamblers. The only experiment made so far in the big powers' withdrawing their own armed forces from a divided country—in Korea—ended in Communist aggression, civil war and outside intervention. Scores of thousands of lives were lost before peace was restored. And more than once in the course of that melee, the world tottered on the brink of the ultimate catastrophe.

New Powder Barrels
In the early years of this century the Balkans were called the "powder barrel of Europe." It would be just as correct right now to call the divided nations in Europe and Asia the "powder barrels of the world."

Indochina is now and has been for a long while past a very sore point in international affairs.

And therefore it would be unfair to picture an Indochina settlement as adding to the world's trouble centers. It already is one in a big way.

But it would be silly at the same time to think that the great powers by formal partition of Viet Nam will end the Indochina problem.

On the contrary any such settlement will in effect make Indochina a permanent danger spot — one more partitioned country.

Cable
A New Link

The American Telephone & Telegraph Co. has announced plans for a new underwater telephone cable between Alaska and the United States.

In announcing its application to the Federal Communications Commission for permission to lay the cable, AT&T put heavy emphasis on the defense aspects of the new communications route to Alaska, separated only by the Bering Strait from Soviet Siberia. The company said "the new cable will be less subject to interruptions than existing facilities."

Present service is over 13 vulnerable radio and land line circuits.

The new cable would cost 14 million dollars and provide 36 additional circuits. It would be laid 800 nautical miles from Port Angeles, Wash., to Ketchikan, Alaska. AT&T estimates it could be in operation by late 1956.

Quotes

Sen. Knowland (R-Calif.) regarding the reluctance of the French government to take a definite stand on arming Germany as a partner in the European Defense Community: "It is not in our national interest nor the interest of the free world to continually put off a decision by France."

Secretary of Defense Wilson in reporting on revitalization of the Defense Department's loyalty program: "This (the tightened security) does not mean cutting corners or infringing upon the rights of individuals. Next to the security of the nation itself, indeed an essential factor in its preservation, is the importance of fundamental rights guaranteed every person under our Constitution."

Business

Mergers Blossom

If you can't lick 'em, join 'em. That seems to be the reasoning behind many of the business mergers now blossoming out like hollyhocks in the summer sunshine.

Biggest merger news right now is in automobiles and textiles. But business analysts say the trend is growing and will spread to other industries soon.

More often than not, companies start talking merger when the going gets rough. The spur is competition.

Economy the Reason

Mergers can save money, increase sales punch. Two companies can buy more cheaply than one; they can effect further economies by dove-tailing their production. Pooling of sales forces can provide broader coverage of markets.

Sometimes a big, powerful corporation will merge with a smaller and financially weaker outfit. Usually the prime objective is to make the big corporation bigger still by acquiring new working capital, new manufacturing facilities, a ready-made list of customers and a new line of products—often at a bargain price.

Tax Saving Possible

If the weaker company has been operating in the red, there can be a secondary aim: to deduct the company's losses from the earnings of the parent firm, and thus realize substantial tax savings.

Mergers put new life in the stock market. Stocks of the companies concerned shoot up or down with on-again-off-again merger rumors.

Big Firms Involved

Recent and pending merger talks in the textile industry involve some of the biggest fabric makers in the world: Burlington Mills, J. P. Stevens & Co., Texton Inc., American Woolen Co. By contrast, the latest automobile mergers concern the little fellows or "independents" whose share of the auto market—now dominated by the Big Three of General Motors, Ford and Chrysler—has dwindled to less than 5 per cent. Observers say these corporate unions—Studebaker-Packard, Hudson-Nash, Kaiser-Willys—may lead to eventual amalgamation of all the independents into a fourth big automobile combine.

The resignation of Roy Cohn must bring great satisfaction to the Communists and fellow travelers," McCarthy said. "The sneers and pressures to which he has been subjected make it clear that an effective anti-Communist cannot long survive on the Washington scene."

The Truce-Makers

COLD WAR: New Scheme?

Velvet Glove Discarded

An unexpected shift in quarterbacks has been made by the Russians in East Germany. Experienced and highly successful trouble-shooter George Pushkin is now the Soviet high commissioner in Germany, replacing Vladimir S. Semyenov.

The diplomatic reshuffle aroused speculation in West Germany whether the Soviet Union has devised some new scheme for selling the West on its East German "republic."

The Russians have been boasting for several months that their captive zone is now a republic and entitled to consideration in the West as a sovereign state. The free world has snubbed the idea.

The recalled Semyenov has been regarded as somewhat friendly to the Germans. He followed the theory that they could be won over to Soviet ways by use of the velvet glove rather than the iron fist.

Pushkin, on the other hand, has been regarded in Western circles as a man who would not hesitate to resort to force if the need arose.

One American official commented: "The Russians feel they have the French on the run . . . If they put a man like Pushkin into Germany now, it may show the French they have no intention of allowing the Germans ever to reach any real stature."

In view of the historical French fear of a strong Germany, this could lead to increased friendliness towards Moscow in Paris.

Pushkin is returning to the East German state he set in motion in 1949 when he served as Moscow's first ambassador to the satellite. Earlier he had served the same function in creating the Red government in postwar Hungary.

Announcement of Semyenov's replacement came on the heels of rumors that he was ill in Moscow. There also were reports that he has been in hot water as a result of the famous June 1953 uprising in East Germany. And observers long have predicted he was headed for oblivion because of his past association with Lavrenty P. Beria, Soviet secret police boss who was executed on charges of being a traitor.

New York got the nod this week as the likely host city for the permanent chief center of American Protestantism.

After two years of investigation, a special committee recommended the big Eastern city as the best location for headquarters of the National Council of Churches, the nation's largest religious body.

The decision, announced at a meeting in Cleveland, came after a long tug-of-war between the East and Midwest.

The re-commendation still is to be acted on Sept. 14 by the

Cohn Out

The Army-McCarthy hearings claimed their first official casualty this week. Roy M. Cohn resigned as chief counsel of the McCarthy investigations subcommittee.

Cohn had been a principal target during 36 days of hearings in which the Army attempted to show he—along with McCarthy and Francis P. Carr—exerted improper pressures for preferential treatment for Pvt. G. David Schine.

McCarthy and his aides denied this claim and counter-charged that Secretary of the Army Robert T. Stevens and Army Counselor John G. Adams tried to use Schine as a "hostage" to "blackmail" the subcommittee into stopping its hearings on alleged subversives in the Army.

At the conclusion of the hearings, Sen. Potter (R-Mich) said he felt both sides had proved their basic charges. With the three Democrats on the seven-man subcommittee critical of Cohn, Potter's stand was decisive.

"The resignation of Roy Cohn must bring great satisfaction to the Communists and fellow travelers," McCarthy said. "The sneers and pressures to which he has been subjected make it clear that an effective anti-Communist cannot long survive on the Washington scene."

Arctic

Frigid Front

Russia has made another move in the contest between the Soviet Union and the United States for supremacy in the Arctic. The icy battleground is crucial because it lies beneath the shortest air route between Russia and North America.

The Russian disclosure that it has teams of scientists located on two floating ice islands in the polar region north and northwest of Alaska came just two months after the U.S. Air Force announced it had withdrawn its weather observers from a floating ice sheet designated as T3. The Air Force said at the time the island, which had served as a base for two years, had lost its usefulness because it drifted to a point only 60 miles from a permanent weather station.

Shortly before T3 was abandoned, a Soviet transport plane swooped low over the installation taking pictures. No shots were fired, however, and no protest was made.

Indians Come From Behind To Crush Yankees; 'Dead Serious' Over Flag

By BEN PHLEGAR
AP Sports Writer

New York Yankee fans who have been waiting patiently, but confidently for Cleveland to fold look as if they are in for a long wait.

The Indians have two games left today and tomorrow in their current invasion of Yankee Stadium but they could lose both of them by 20 runs and still leave town Sunday night with first place in their possession.

They beat the New Yorkers 8-2 last night and they did it the hard way, coming from two runs behind while allowing the Yankees 14 hits. But it was a victory that left no doubt the Indians are dead serious about this pennant business.

The idea that all they have to do is wait and the Indian menace eventually will disappear has become firmly implanted in the minds of the Yankee followers although the records don't lend much support to the theory.

It's true the Indians have settled for second best the past three seasons and during that spell they found no sure way to halt the Yankees.

But only in 1951 were the Indians in first place this late in the race. That season Cleveland climaxed a drive from sixth by leading for three weeks late in August. But the climb wore out the Indians and they faded five games off the pace in September.

This time it's the Yankees who are trying to reach the top and last night's game was a sample of the troubles they've been having. They left 12 men stranded and Eddie Lopat failed to last for the eighth straight game.

Al Smith was the hitting star for the Indians, breaking up a tie game with a three-run homer in the seventh and then driving in two more with a bases-loaded single in the ninth.

In other action in the American League the Chicago White Sox defeated Boston 7-1; Baltimore pushed Philadelphia into last place with a 7-5 victory and Washington beat Detroit 8-3, leaving the Senators only two percentage points out of first division.

The New York Giants lost their second straight game — the first since May 29-30 they've been beaten twice running — and second place Brooklyn also lost.

Milwaukee edged the Giants 3-2. St. Louis defeated Brooklyn 6-4. Pittsburgh beat Cincinnati 7-4 and Chicago and Philadelphia split a doubleheader. Chicago won the first game 5-2. The Phils took the second, 5-3 in 13 innings.

Two crowd records were set. The season's largest gathering, 61,446, watched the Indians win. The 45,056 who sat in on Milwaukee's victory, established an all-time County Stadium record.

The Braves fans saw their favorites win on a pinch single with two out in the ninth by Bobby Thomson, who was making his first appearance against his former New York teammates. Thomson's hit was his third in four official times at bat since he broke his ankle in spring training. Bob Buhl flashed his form of last season in going the distance for his second success.

Rookie Joe Cunningham helped Vic Raschi win his first game since June 15 as he drove in three runs with a homer and a double. Gil Hodges and Sandy Amoros, homered for Brooklyn.

Danny Schell of the Phils hit a home run in the first game and broke up the second in Chicago with a bases-loaded single in the 13th inning. Howie Pollet, making his first appearance since July 11, hit the first game winner. Robin Roberts picked up the second game decision in relief.

The Pirates' victory was their first this season in Cincinnati. Sid Gordon broke up a 4-4 tie with a pinch homer in the seventh inning.

Chico Carrasquez collected three hits as the White Sox began picking up the pieces after losing three of four to the Yankees. Harry Dorish picked up the decision with flawless relief support from Virgil Trucks after seven innings.

The Senators climbed on Al Aber of the Tigers for five runs in the first inning and Chuck Stobbs never gave Detroit a chance to catch up. Roy Sievers hit a two-run homer, his 16th, for Washington.

The Orioles, losers in 15 of their last 17 games, found some one they could beat when they tangled with the Athletics. Chuck Dietrich's two-run single to the sixth provided the winning margin.

Washington-Lee Cancels Football

LEXINGTON, Va. (AP)—Washington and Lee University, a charter member of the Southern Conference and football king of the circuit in 1934 and 1950, has abandoned intercollegiate football until such a time as it can be re-established on an amateur basis with schools of a like mind.

Cancellation of the Generals' 1954 football schedule and an end to athletic subsidization were announced late yesterday by W&L President Francis P. Gaines after a meeting of the school's Board of Trustees in Washington.

Although a straw in the wind had been tossed out July 7 by the Board of Trustees' Athletic Committee, which voted to continue football but said a de-emphasis program would begin as soon as possible, yesterday's action caught this college town by surprise.

Head Football Coach Carl Wise, signed to a three-year contract in February 1953, was visiting friends in Washington, unaware of the situation.

"This is rather sudden," Wise said, then deferred any further statement now.

Wiped out by yesterday's action was a nine-game schedule opening Sept. 25 against West Virginia and including William and Mary, Virginia Tech, Pennsylvania, Richmond, Davidson, Virginia, George Washington and Vanderbilt.

Cancellation of this year's schedule had been hinted several times because only 17 football veterans were available for 1954 because of academic failures and a recent cribbing scandal that sharply reduced the squad.

But Washington and Lee had led a successful battle in the spring meeting of the Southern Conference to have freshmen made eligible for varsity athletics, and Coach Wise was counting on freshmen to fill the gaps.

The Generals had fielded an intercollegiate football team since 1890 with the exception of the war years of 1943-44-5.

The final score of the borrowed team was 12-10 in favor of the Jolly Rogers. However, the Dairies team played around all during the game.

Eugene Ayers, the regular second baseman, played every infield position. Shortstop Bobby Perry became the catcher, and two outfielders came in to pitch with the ace pitcher, L. E. Johnson, sitting on the bench.

Brownie Tripp, who led the Carolina Comedians, walloped one home run as did manager Pete Carraway.

In the first game the Home Builders won their eighth game of the year to finish one game behind the Dairies. Gordon fired no-hit ball for five innings and with two out in the sixth Mitchell White pushed a fly ball in short centerfield. The centerfielder let the ball hit about a foot in front of him. A few minutes later Frank Maennle lined a ball in left field for the second hit. That was all the hitting for the G-W-M team all night.

All the runs off the G-W-M pitcher, Dan Umstead, were unearned. He pitched four hit ball but wildness and errors at the wrong time ruined him.

The games last night finished the regular season schedule for the Softball League. The tournament will start next week with a double elimination affair coming off.

Pony All-Stars Of Raleigh Defeat Rocky Mount For Divisional Title

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Raleigh beat Rocky Mount twice, 7-2 and 5-1, last night to win the Eastern Division Pony League championship and Greensboro's All-Stars downed Charlotte 5-4 to take the Western District 1 championship.

The other Western Division winner is Gastonia.

Raleigh took a two-run lead in the first inning of the opener on Linwood Rideout's home run and stayed ahead easily. In the second game both teams were scoreless through five innings and got one each in the sixth, but Raleigh cinched it with four runs in the seventh.

The Gate City team marched through the tourney without the loss of a single game and will play in Raleigh in the tournament opening Monday.

A two run rally in the sixth wrapped up the game for Greensboro.

College All-Stars Buckling Down

LAFAYETTE Ind. (AP)—The College All-Stars began serious work today for their Aug. 13 date in Soldier Field, Chicago, with the pro-champion Detroit Lions.

Head Coach Jim Tatum of Maryland scheduled a forenoon workout for the squad.

Activity yesterday, first day for the collegians on Purdue's campus, was confined to administrative details. The players checked out equipment and underwent physical exams.

Giants Acquire 'Man Mountains'

NEW YORK (AP)—The New York Giants are getting quite a collection of "man-mountains" players at their training camp in Salem, Ore. The newest one to report, coming from service in the army, is Pat Flanagan, former star Marquette tackle. He is 26, stands 6-foot-2 and weighs 250.

Other "man-mountain" players on the Giant squad include Earl Putnam, 300, of Arizona State; Joe Springer, 280, of Hanover College; Billy Shipp, 275, of Alabama; and Bob Hengartner, 265, of Miami, Ohio.

Play Tonight

Tonight at 7:30 the Greenville All-Stars play Rocky Mount in a doubleheader at Guy Smith Stadium. The Greenville team will be composed of the outstanding players in the Recreation Softball League.

Manager Dan Gordon announced that it was the first in a series of games here with out-of-town teams. Next Saturday another Rocky Mount team will come here and the following Saturday Greenville will visit the Mountain team.

Substitutes on hand will be Bobby Nunn, Bob Williams, Bobby Conway, John Moss, George Fuller, Ralph Heidenreich, Mac McDowell, and Gene Hudson.

Sixteen Survived PGA 'Sudden Death' Rounds

By HUGH FULLERTON JR.

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP)—There's more to match play golf than mere mathematics, but the figures might give you the winner of the 36th PGA Championship.

With only 16 players left after the two 18-hole "sudden death" rounds were passed with a minimum of unforeseen casualties, there was time today to check up on the "hot" players.

Three who have played the bare 6,652-yard Keller Public course the best for three days include two of the best-natured guys in the pro golf business — Ed "Porky" Oliver of Lemont, Ill., and Argentina's Roberto de Vicenzo — and the usually-serious Shelley Mayfield, from Texas by way of Chicopee, Mass.

Here's how they stand against Keller's vulnerable par of 36-35-71 for two days of qualifying and two rounds of 18-hole match play.

Mayfield has shot 65 competitive holes here 15 strokes under par.

Oliver is 11 under par for 69 holes.

De Vicenzo is nine under par for 65 holes.

To these might be added Dutch Harrison of St. Louis, who didn't sparkle in the qualifying round but beat two tough opponents, Jackie Burke and Johnny Palmer yesterday.

Almost among the survivors of those first two rounds are three-time champion Sam Snead, defending champion Wally Burkemo; Johnny Revolta, the PGA champion back in 1935; and former open champion Cary Middlecott.

Among the missing are open champion Ed Furgol, victim of the only real upset of the first day; ex-champion Jimmy Turnesa and three players who have been runners-up in this tournament, Palmer, Mike Turnesa and Henry Williams.

Furgol was the second round victim of Jim Browning from Weston, Mass.

Mayfield beat Wally Ulrich of Maplewood, N.J.

Skin Diver Sets Record 24 Hours On Ocean Floor

MIAMI, Fla. (AP)—Skin diver Ed Fisher holds the world endurance record for camping on the ocean floor 24 hours 2 minutes.

He was still a bit tired today from the unusual underwater experience, but apparently suffered no lasting ill effects.

The lanky 26-year-old, a native of New York, said he did not intend to repeat the experiment in the near future. But he and his surface associates were jubilant over the outcome.

Fisher popped to the surface at 3:10 p.m. EST yesterday after spending a trifle more than 24 hours on the floor of a coral reef canyon 30 feet below the sea off Key Largo.

His skin was blue and wrinkled like a prune. His head and stomach ached and he drank lots of water. There was a time earlier in the day when he thought he wouldn't make it. During the night hours the water sapped his body warmth and he felt cold and sick.

"Don't think I can stay down more than another hour," he told companion, in boats above him in a message written with a grease pencil on slate. But the sun soon warmed him up and he stuck it out.

Fisher began his free dive at 3:08 p.m. Thursday and had no direct connection with the airy world above him. He hung his camping equipment on coral pinacles and pushed friendly fish aside.

Once a shark, described by Fisher's companions as "half as big as a submarine," swam slowly overhead, eyed the strange goings on in his domain curiously then went his way.

Fisher drank soup, ate candy, and for breakfast shot a fish with his water spear gun, sliced it and chewed it raw.

The endurance dive was to test a "Div-Air," a newly designed underwater breathing apparatus similar to the French aqualung. A face mask covered Fisher's eyes and nose but left his mouth free.

Fisher breathed air from a tank on his back through a tube in his mouth. He removed the mouthpiece long enough to swallow a morsel of food or sip water or soup from a bottle. The food and fresh tanks of air were brought down to him by associates.

Man Behind Those Record Miles Smokes, Drinks Ale

By MILTON MARMOR
AP Newfeatures

LONDON — Christopher John Chataway races opponents instead of a stop watch.

Yet, ironically, at 23, he holds a strange sort of athletics fame. Chataway ran second in both four-minute miles — and he's not a miller at all.

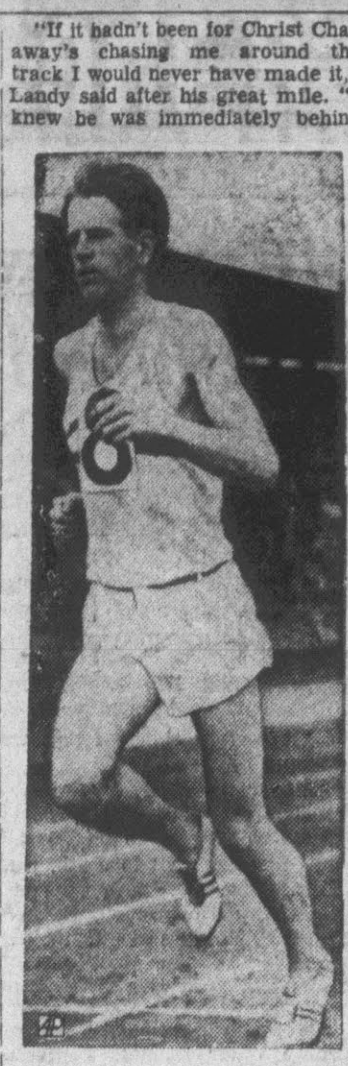

The red-haired former Oxford distance runner paced Roger Bannister to his epic 3:59.4 mile on May 6 in the blustery Oxford race that ended the myth of the four-minute mile barrier. Then, on June 21, Chataway went up to Turku in Finland and chased Australia's John Landy to his 3:58 mile.

Bannister and Landy went after that four-minute mile with dogged determination. Chataway is something else again. He's 5-foot-9, weighs 149, doesn't know the length of his stride and lacks interest in pulse rates. He never worries about oxygen intake. He trains when the weather is agreeable. Christ smokes half a pack of cigarettes a day, more in winter than not training. He takes a drink now and then, especially stout ale now that he works for a brewer.

He also can run like blazes and he runs to win. If a record falls, so much the better, but to Chataway the race is the thing.

He didn't expect to finish close to Roger at Oxford and he didn't. Yet his time was his then best ever, 4:07.2, not bad when you consider he is a three-miler.

Chris makes it clear he did not pace Landy. He raced him. He was with him until the last lap and finished the mile in 4:04.4, which puts him far up in the list of all-time mile clockings.

CHRIS CHATAWAY

"If it hadn't been for Christ Chataway's chasing me around the track I would never have made it," Landy said after his great mile. "I knew he was immediately behind me and that he would not hesitate to pass me if I slowed up the very least."

Chataway also helped Freddie Green, 26, set a new 3-mile record of 13:32.2. Chataway held a 15-yard lead near the end but Green came on in a neck-and-neck finish.

In Britain people speak of their favorite athletes as they do of members of the family. Bannister is an aloof sort but Britons are proud of him. They speak of such pleading distance as a marathoner Jim Peters and six-miler Gordon Fulle with just a bit of amazement and respect.

But for Chataway they have a deep affection. He epitomizes everything fine in British sports.

Those who saw Chataway at Helsinki in the 1952 Olympics 3,000-meter final will never forget him. To Britons he was something, even though the incredible Emil Zatopek of Czechoslovakia won and Chris came home fifth.

Chataway was only 21 then. He came pounding around the last turn with the world's best. He stumbled on the inside rail. There's a famous sports photograph of Zatopek storming into the lead and Chataway sprawling on the track.

Chris picked himself up and finished in 14:18, almost 10 seconds faster than anything he had done before. And he had no ailings; he just ran himself out.

Chataway has made only one calculated effort to break a world record. Bannister helped him go after the two-mile mark of 8:40.4 established by Belgian Gaston Reiff. It's one of the better ones on the books. Christ miscalculated his pace during the inside laps and missed out by a mere six-tenths of a second.

Defending Title 'Expense' Payoffs For In Tennis Finals

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—Louise Brough of Beverly Hills, Calif., defends her title in the Women's Pennsylvania and Eastern States Tennis championship today against third-seeded Mrs. Beverly Baker Fletz.

And sweeping into the finals of the 56th Men's Grass Court championship at the Merion Cricket Club was second-seeded Art Larsen of San Leandro, Calif., who defeated Hamilton Richardson of Baton Rouge, La., 7-5, 6-4.

Miss Brough reached the final round yesterday with an easy 6-1, 6-3 triumph over fourth-seeded Mrs. Betty Rosenquist Pratt, Jamaica, British West Indies.

In the other semifinal match, Mrs. Fletz upset Mrs. Margaret Osborne duPont of Wilmington, Del., 6-3, 6-2.

Larsen plays the winner of today's match between defending U.S.T.A. and guiding hand behind the nationals at Forest Hills, "then discipline is in order. It makes no difference whether the players involved are ranked No. 1, No. 10 or No. 20."

"We've got to clean up this situation. We are looking for the facts and when we find them we will act."

Sidney Wood and his Tennis Players League also is getting into the act. Wood has called a meeting next Friday during the Meadow Club Tournament presumably to find the culprit.

"There is indication that the cancellation of Baltimore and Spring Lake and the jeopardizing of other tournaments is attributable to unwarranted demands of a few name players," he said. "This condition is detrimental to the interests of all tournament players and to tennis itself."

Until the Meadow Club in Southampton, N.Y., decided to lengthen its entry list, the touring players had no place to go next week.

"Some of us would have had to rig up a couple of exhibitions on Long Island or starve," said former national champion Art Larsen.

Tony Trabert, the No. 1 player in the United States, was the first to deny he had done any wrong. He dropped out of the Baltimore tournament and is playing in the Colorado Open in Denver this week.

Risking Repute In Futurity Race

CHICAGO (AP)—Royal Note, The outstanding 2-year old of the season places his reputation and a five-race winning streak on the line today in the $149,785 Arlington Futurity at Arlington Park.

Riding him was Eddie Arcaro, who booted home last year's Futurity winner, Hasty Road, in 1:10 — a record for the six-furlong event.

A parade of 16 to the post meant a payoff of $93,345 to the winner — a sum almost double Royal Note's previous earnings of $32,892.

Royal Note was overnight 5-2 favorite, with Our Prince and Ocean Lane, coming in at about 3-1.

Jet's War Date also was a futurity starter. Delta, also filly entered, also was a likely contender. Georgian, Parador, Ambiguous, Dogoon and Impromptu also were conceded chances.

Rounding out the lineup were Mr. President, Speed Rouser, Prince Noor, Roman Senator, Texas Bulldog and Linal.

Without Stanky, Cardinals Take 5 Wins In Row

ST. LOUIS (AP)—The St. Louis Cardinals have won five straight games since Coach Johnny Riddle took over as acting manager for the suspended Eddie Stanky.

In the process the Birds have climbed from sixth place in the National League standings to a fourth place tie with Philadelphia, 15 games off the pace.

Riddle has one more game at the helm before Stanky's five-day suspension, over last Sunday's forfeited game to the Tribe, ends.

The Cards defeated the Phils twice, Pittsburgh twice and turned back the Brooklyn Dodgers last night, 6-4. They play Brooklyn again tonight.

Stanky returns to the field for Sunday's series-ending game with the Dodgers.

Boros Sidelined By Broken Leg

FAIRFIELD, Conn. (AP)—A broken leg suffered on a fishing expedition has put Julius Boros, golf's biggest money winner, out of competition.

Julius arrived at the home of his parents yesterday, his right leg in a cast as the result of a fall which fractured the bone above the ankle. His father, Lance Boros, said that Julius would remain here until the injury healed but did not anticipate resuming competition until the professionals start the winter tour.

Another Trophy Won By Tarboro

TARBORO, N.C. (AP)—They produce swimming champions here. The 31st trophy to be won by a Tarboro swimming team is now on display.

The boys team won it as the Kingston AAU met last week. It sits among other trophies dating back to 1938.

Damage Suits Result From Auto Accident

Two suits for a total sum of $49,500 have been filed with the Clerk of Superior Court office.

Barbara Jean Stox, 16, "by her next friend, W.A. Stox," her father, has brought suit for $45,000 against five defendants for "physical injuries and mental suffering" sustained as a result of an automobile accident Dec. 15, 1953.

In a separate suit, W.A. Stox is suing the same five defendants for $4500 to cover the aggregate costs of medical expenses for his daughter and to account for the loss of her services on the farm, where he resides and which he tends.

The plaintiff is asking $2000 for medical bills, and $2500 for the loss of his daughter's services.

Defendants in the action are J.P. Nichols, Guy Nichols, Sidney Baker, R.A. Crawford and Willis McDonald Crawford.

Guy Nichols, Baker, and Willis McDonald Crawford, being minors, will have guardians appointed by the court to represent them in the case.

Sidney Baker and Willis McDonald Crawford are being charged with, and Guy Nichols, J.B. Nichols and R.A. Crawford held liable for, careless and reckless driving, and negligence, resulting in "severe and permanent" injuries of Barbara Jean Stox.

Both complaints allege that on Dec. 15, 1953, Guy Nichols with the consent of his father, J.B. Nichols, was driving a 1953 Plymouth automobile belonging to his father.

Barbara Jean Stox and Sidney Baker were "invited guests and passengers" in the car.

The complaints continue, Baker was directed by young Nichols to drive and he did so. At approximately 9:30 p.m. Baker was driving west on an unnamed rural road in Winterville Township, and at the same time a 1953 Chevrolet driven by Willis McDonald Crawford, and owned by his father, R.A. Crawford, was traveling in the same direction on that road.

It is alleged both drivers approached "a very sharp and dangerous" curve at "a very high and unlawful" rate of speed, and just as the automobile driven by Baker entered the curve, Crawford attempted to pass it.

The plaintiffs assert the cars raced side by side in the curve for some distance, and just prior to reaching the extreme arc thereof, Crawford's automobile swerved across the center line of the highway for a distance of "two or three feet."

Then, the complaints say, Baker became "emotionally upset and excited," cutting the car he was driving to the right, and on account of the "excessive speed" lost control of it. As a result, the car turned over "several times," and the plaintiff, Barbara Jean Stox, was thrown from the vehicle.

Immediately after swerving to the right, the complaints assert, Crawford cut back to the left and lost complete control of his car, which also turned over several times.

As a result of the accident, the complaints declare Barbara Jean Stox received "severe and permanent" injuries, including a broken back and multiple contusions and abrasions.

The two defendants Sidney Baker and Willis McDonald Crawford, are being charged with careless and reckless driving, driving at a high and unlawful rate of speed, and not keeping a proper lookout, and Guy Nichols, J.B. Nichols and R.A. Crawford are being held liable for such action.

Plaintiff W.A. Stox claims to date he has had to pay $1800 in medical and hospital bills on account of the injuries sustained by his daughter in said accident.

He believes this sum will be greatly increased in the future, as his daughter is still being treated, and he is asking recovery of these expenses in the sum of $2000.

Further, he is suing the defendants for $2500 for the loss of his daughter's services on the farm, as "she will not be able to help again for a "considerable period of time."

Plaintiffs are also asking for the costs of this action and any other relief the case demands.

Turtle Flunked Swimming Test

ROME N. Y. (AP) — This turtle named Myrtle had a college education. But she flunked in swimming.

Myrtle was among the chosen few who helped great scientists in California study the habits of land turtles. Then last April she came to Rome and became the pet of 12-year-old Billy Messenger.

But Billy went to camp this summer. And some other children who didn't know Myrtle apparently thought she was thirsty and put her in water.

Myrtle drowned.
