Few Bodies Ask Increased Budget

RALEIGH (AP)—Heads of several state departments and agencies, including the Conservation and Development department, appeared before the Advisory Budget Commission today as hearings continued on the state budget for the 1955-57 biennium.

Following the hearings, which will continue until Sept. 15, Gov. Umstead and the commission will recommend a budget to the 1955 General Assembly.

If yesterday's hearings are any indication, there will be few requests for increased appropriations for the next biennium. The state is faced with a leveling off in general fund revenues.

Department heads who appeared before the commission yesterday asked little or no increase in their present budgets. One of the requests for increased spending came from the State Library Commission, which asked that state aid to county libraries be boosted from the present $390,000 to $703,000 a year.

Nathan Yelton head of the Teachers and State Employees Retirement System outlined a plan to reduce appropriations to his agency by $1,622,000 during the 1955-57 biennium.

This could be done, he explained, by extending from six years to 10 the period over which the state will liquidate an "accrued liability" for the service of teachers and employees in the years prior to establishment of the retirement fund in 1941.

Yelton said this would enable the state to reduce its contribution to teachers from 8.8 to 7.33 per cent of the payroll and for other employees from 6.67 to 6.14 per cent.

An appropriation of $20,182,584 was asked by Yelton for the next biennium. This compares with an appropriation of $21,804,584 for the 1953-55 biennium.

W. E. Easterling, director of the Local Government Commission, asked the Advisory Budget Commission to approve funds to create an accounting division for his department. The division, he said, would cost about $30,000 a year and would help establish uniform accounting systems among local governmental units.

Easterling told the commission that the bonded debt of cities, towns and other local governmental units in the state has reached a record peak of 374 million dollars. The previous high was 372 million in 1932.

The local debt climbed from 240 million dollars in 1945 to $374,180,641 last June 30.

"Taxable and other revenue resources for debt retirement are vastly greater than they were in 1932," Easterling said. "Besides, the Local Government Commission has provided a sounder debt structure and more orderly amortization schedule by which more than 130 million dollars has been paid off in these past eight years."

State Revenue Commissioner Eugene Shaw requested funds to hire 15 new deputy collectors, five new tax auditors, a new inheritance tax auditor and a new revenue administrator to head a tax unit in the Sales Tax Division.

The Historic Sites Commission, created by the last Legislature, asked for $65,000 each year of the biennium to purchase and restore historic sites and buildings in the state.

The Department of Archives and History asked for a $1,363,466 building in which to place its historical exhibits and to store state archives. The last Legislature rejected a similar request.

Director James W. Powell of the State Bureau of Investigation told the commission he needs funds to hire five new agents and a full-time chemist for FBI laboratory work.

Restricted Cotton Crop Estimate Is Sharply Reduced

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Agriculture Department today estimated this year's government-restricted cotton crop at 11,832,000 bales of 500 pounds gross weight.

This estimate is 848,000 bales less than last month's forecast of 12,680,000 bales. It compares also with last year's crop of 16,465,000 bales and with the 10-year (1943-52) average of 12,448,000 bales.

Under a control program embracing planting allotments and marketing quotas, the department had sought to limit production to about 12 million bales.

Supplementing this year's production is a carryover stock of about 9,600,000 bales from previous crops. It was this large reserve supply that invoked the production controls—measures which will be continued next year if approved by growers voting in a referendum later in the fall.

Officials have forecast market demands for cotton from this year's supply at about 13,700,000 bales, or about 1,900,000 bales more than from last year's supply.

The department said the yield of cotton was expected to average 295 pounds per harvested acre compared with 324.2 last year and 321.1 for the 10-year average.

The condition of the crop as of Sept. 1 was reported at 69 per cent average compared with 78 per cent a year ago and 72 per cent for the 10-year average.

The department estimated that 3.4 per cent of the acreage in cultivation on July 1 will be abandoned for harvest. This would leave 19,288,000 acres for harvest.

In an accompanying report, the Census Bureau said 1,695,749 running bales from the 1954 crop had been ginned prior to Sept. 1, compared with 1,165,618 to the same date last year and 1,458,384 two years ago.

The percentage of plantings to be abandoned, the acreage for harvest, the condition of the crop, the acre yield and production, respectively, by states included:

North Carolina 3.3 per cent abandonment; 871,000 acres for harvest; 77 per cent of normal; 336 pounds per acre and production 400,000 bales.

South Carolina 1.4; 858,000; 59; 269; and 480,000.

Georgia 1.8; 1,108,000; 62; 322; and 510,000.

Tennessee 1.8; 658,000; 64; 347; and 475,000.

Formosa Not Included In Area Marked 'No Trespassing' Eight Nations Sign SEATO Treaty

By ROBERT EUNSON

MANILA (AP)—Eight nations of the East and the West signed a collective security pact today which in effect bars the Communists against any further aggression in Southeast Asia.

It took just three days for the United States, France, Great Britain, Australia, New Zealand, Thailand, Pakistan and the Philippines to reach complete accord.

The treaty hangs a big "no trespassing" sign on small nations in the area. It binds the eight nations militarily and economically, and declares each party will meet the "common danger" of armed attack in the treaty area or against any member "in accordance with constitutional processes."

Australia's Richard G. Casey was first to sign the historic document. He began fixing his signature to the various copies at 5:02 p.m. (4:02 a.m., EST).

The documents, about 12x18 inches, were bound in dark blue leather. The ministers signed with individual gold pens.

Casey was followed by France's Guy La Chambre, New Zealand's T. Clifton Webb and Pakistan's Sir Mohammed Zafarullah Khan.

The entire Philippine delegation then signed, led by Vice President Carlos P. Garcia, chairman of the conference.

The Philippine delegation, dressed in native tagalog shirts, was followed by Thailand's Prince Wan Wathayakon and Great Britain's Lord Reading.

John Foster Dulles, U.S. secretary of state, who sponsored the meeting, signed at 5:18 p.m.

Garcia banged his gavel and declared the conference closed at 5:22 p.m.

The "hands off" warning to the Communists defined the treaty area as "the general area of Southeast Asia including also the entire territories of the Asian Pacific and the general area of the South-west Pacific, not including the Pacific area north of 21 degrees 30 minutes north latitude."

The last definition would extend the treaty just north of the northern tip of the Philippines, but short of Chinese Nationalist Formosa.

The treaty stipulated that other countries could join.

The treaty consists of a preamble and 11 articles:

1. Approves a military agreement, patterned after the Australia-New Zealand-United States mutual defense pact (ANZUS), "to meet the common danger" of armed attack in the treaty area or against any member according to the constitutional provisions of the respective countries.

2. Calls for consultation and cooperation among members to develop economic measures "designed to promote economic stability and social well-being" in Southeast Asia.

3. Establishes a council which "shall be so organized as to be able to meet at any time" to carry out the treaty terms.

4. Defines the treaty area to include all of Southeast Asia and the western Pacific sector but not Nationalist China's stronghold on Formosa.

5. Supports "continuous and effective self-help and mutual aid" among member nations to resist armed attack and prevent subversive activity directed from outside the country.

6. Upholds the charter of the United Nations.

The economic framework of the treaty may prove the most effective step in gaining stronger support for democracy in Asia. Red-throated Laos, Cambodia and free Viet Nam will benefit from both the economic and military aspects of the pact.

The eight countries also approved a "Pacific Charter" for this region. Proposed by the Philippines, the document upholds the principle of equal rights and self-determination of peoples in the area. It says signers will work for peaceful means "to promote self-government and secure independence of all countries whose people desire it and are able to undertake its responsibilities."

Even as the Nationalist sea and air attacks continued, top government officials conferred on plans for a five-hour visit to Formosa tomorrow by U. S. Secretary of State John Foster Dulles.

Some Nationalist sources cautiously predicted that the threat of a Communist invasion of Quemoy, if one actually did exist, has diminished since Nationalist attacks began this week.

"It is too early to say," Chang told newsmen, "whether our joint operations against the Communists have been effective."

He reported, however, that the Communists fired no shots at Quemoy Tuesday or Tuesday night. A few sporadic shots were reported Wednesday afternoon.

British shipping companies in Hong Kong warned their ship captains to stay clear of Amoy after a freighter was attacked by planes in Amoy Harbor yesterday.

Gen. Cheng Yung-tung, army spokesman, said he had no information on reports that two former U. S. destroyers took part in the bombardment of Amoy and other Communist bases within gun range of Quemoy.

The destroyers turned over to the Nationalists last month are the former USS Hilary P. Jones and the former USS Benson.

No Warships In Hong Kong Port

HONG KONG (AP)—U.S. fighting ships have all but disappeared from Hong Kong Harbor since the Quemoy fighting broke out.

There usually are from four to eight U. S. Navy ships here on rest and recreational leave, but this week most of those in port quietly put to sea and no more have come in.

Today the destroyer Rowen departed and the auxiliary submarine rescue ship Grapple leaves tomorrow. That will leave only the frigate Walton, a communication ship which keeps in port all the time. Last observers believe the Walton is kept here only as an emergency evacuation ship for Americans in the case of a Communist attack on Hong Kong.

The aircraft carrier Hornet's scheduled leave here this week has been canceled. Two destroyer class ships are expected, however.

Navy personnel refused to comment whether the withdrawal was related to the Quemoy fighting. Similar Navy departures have been reported from Manila this week however.

Following the deaths of two U. S. observers on Quemoy last week-end, a U. S. spokesman in Washington told reporters "we are alert to our responsibilities in the area" of Quemoy. He added, however, he knew of no "specific orders" to the 7th Fleet to protect any Chinese Nationalist territory other than Formosa.

The Navy, openly committed to defend Formosa, is now deciding whether that means Chiang's lesser islands too. One such lesser island is Quemoy, or Kinmen, which means "Gate to the Heavenly Empire."

Woman Is Convicted Of Overdrawing On Unemployment Fund

In Magistrate Frank E. Brooks' court Tuesday, he found Lizzie T. Golett, Negro, 309 East Second street, guilty of failure to report her earnings while drawing unemployment money from the Unemployment Security Commission in Greenville.

Goldsboro Firm Makes Low Bid

RALEIGH (AP)—T. A. Loving Co. of Goldsboro submitted a low bid yesterday for $2,503,064.90 for construction of a 2.7-mile bridge across Croatan Sound between Mann's Harbor and Manteo.

The project was one of 30 on which highway engineers received bids. The projects cover 250 miles of road improvements in 29 counties. Low bids totaled $6,839,037.50. The Highway Commission will review the bids Thursday.

Bloodmobile To Be In Pitt Two Days

The Tidewater Regional Blood Center bloodmobile will visit Pitt County on September 30 and October 1, it was announced this morning.

The traveling blood bank will be in Greenville at the National Guard Armory from 10 to 4 o'clock on September 30, and at the Presbyterian Church in Farmville from 10 to 4 o'clock on October 1. The quota for each day will be 140 pints.

Pitt County blood quotas have been reduced from 170 to 140 this year.

Must Maintain Good Standing

Dr. Walter C. Humbert of the local Health Department, and chairman for the blood program in Pitt County, said today Pitt County must strive to meet its quota.

"The executive committee of the Tidewater Regional Blood Center Coordinating Committee made a policy this summer that County Red Cross chapters must not fall in the program or they will be dropped," he said. He pointed out the Coordinating Committee is made up of representatives of the various counties under the Tidewater Regional Blood Center area.

Dr. Humbert added, "We have never consistently failed, but only occasionally has Pitt County met a quota." Last fiscal year the quota was 2380 and only 1468 pints were donated. The quota for the fiscal year beginning July 1, 1954 is 1,900.

Beaufort County Withdrew

On July 1 of this year the Beaufort County Chapter withdrew from the Red Cross blood program due to a lack of support - both financially and blood donors.

Dr. Humbert and members of the Red Cross Chapter here urged Pitt citizens to be a donor so Pitt County may continue the worthwhile program.

Rescue Vessels Find No Trace

VIGO, Spain (AP)—Rescue vessels rushed to a spot northwest of Spain where a large unidentified freighter was reported burning in the Atlantic last night but found no trace of the ship.

The British fishing vessel Suzy radioed she sighted an explosion followed by fire aboard the freighter but was unable to reach it because of heavy seas. The position was given as 15 miles north of Cape Villano.

Search vessels could locate neither the blazing ship nor the fishing vessel.

More Witnesses Called Today At Inquest On Prisoner's Death

RALEIGH (AP)—Solicitor William Y. Bickett called more witnesses to the stand today as coroner's hearing continued in the death of Fearing Rush at Woman's Prison the night of Aug. 20.

The 18-year-old Negro girl, described by prison officials as an incorrigible, was found dead of a broken neck in an isolation cell. The death set off a riot among the 350 inmates the next morning.

Bickett said the hearing was called to determine whether the broken neck resulted from culpable negligence on the part of prison employees.

Ivan D. Hinton, superintendent of Woman's Prison, told the 6-member jury yesterday that he and four guards put the girl's wrists in a restraining belt and used a towel to gag her. This was done, he said, because she was hollering and creating a disturbance.

Her loud screams, the jury was told, had gone on for several nights. Hinton said the girl turned the restraining belt inside out and loosed the gag within a matter of minutes. A tighter gag was placed on the girl.

Witnesses testified that Miss Rush disobeyed orders, used abusive language, hollered a lot and threatened supervisors.

Hinton told the jury he had never used a gag before during his 39 years of prison work. Those connected with the case said no undue force was used on the girl.

Hinton testified he had been instructed by Prisons Department physicians not to use sedatives in an effort to quieten the girl.

Miss Helen Reinhardt, assistant superintendent of the prison, said she suggested use of the gag on the girl to halt her screams. She added that a gag had never been used except in extreme cases and no harmful results had ever been noted.

Other prison inmates, Miss Reinhardt said, had complained of the Rush girl's behavior, such as keeping most of the compound awake and dousing fellow inmates with water, and had told her: "If you don't do something to make Eleanor leave us alone we're just going to have to get her."

Dr. R. Hardre, pathologist who performed the autopsy, told the jury it was "quite safe to say she died of a dislocated neck followed by compression of the cervical cord."

The dislocation alone would not have caused death, he added, but severance of the cervical cord would bring death within minutes. He said there were two theories on the girl's death. The dislocation and severance could have occurred at the same time, possibly when the gag was applied and she was struggling.

The second theory was that the injury occurred in two steps. The dislocation took place and no one was aware of it. Then the injury to the cord could have occurred a little later causing death.

He testified this could have happened if she were attempting to free the gag while her neck was dislocated.

Hurricane Edna Swings To North Relieving Threat

MIAMI, Fla. (AP)—The hurricane alert for South Florida was lifted today as Edna, an erratic giant packing 115 miles per hour winds, swung to the northward in the Atlantic.

At 11 a.m. EST advisory reported: "The more northward turn relieves the threat to Florida but the northeastern Bahamas will continue to have high seas and strong winds today."

The advisory placed the season's fifth hurricane about 300 miles east of Miami near latitude 26.0 north, longitude 75.7 west.

It was moving northwestward about 10 miles per hour. Estimated winds were estimated at 100 to 115 miles per hour near the center with hurricane force winds (75 miles per hour or more) extending 60 to 75 miles to the north and east and about 30 miles to the south.

The hurricane was expected to continue moving in a northerly direction.

Grady Norton, chief storm forecaster at the Miami Weather Bureau, said that if the trend continues the hurricane "may be over blue water for some time."

He said that if the hurricane continued on the northward course there was a possibility that "nobody will get hit by it."

Edna was reported 270 miles east of Miami at 8 a.m. and had moved some 30 miles further away by 11 a.m.

Nationalist Warships, Planes Hit Coast Red China Bases Pounded

TAIPEH, Formosa (AP)—Chinese Nationalist warships and planes including U. S.-supplied F6F Thunderbolts—leaped up again today to pound possible Communist invasion bases on the mainland, the Defense Ministry announced.

It was the first time Nationalist jets have been in action against the Reds.

The ministry said bombs and shells rained for the third day on Communist batteries which have shells. Quemoy, Nationalist island just off the coast opposite Formosa, and on bases where the Reds may have been massing tanks for an invasion.

A special communique described today's attacks as the heaviest so far. Targets included concentrations of tanks, artillery positions, barracks and other military installations.

Air Force pilots made dive bombing and low level strafing attacks on Red targets from which enemy reaction was much weaker, the minister said.

British shipping companies in Hong Kong warned their ship captains to stay clear of Amoy after a freighter was attacked by planes in Amoy Harbor yesterday.

Gen. Cheng Yung-tung, army spokesman, said he had no information on reports that two former U. S. destroyers took part in the bombardment of Amoy and other Communist bases within gun range of Quemoy.

Many Fish Dead Of Suffocation

BALTIMORE (AP)—Suffocation apparently caused the death of thousands of fish found floating on the surface of the Chesapeake Bay over the Labor Day weekend, marine experts say.

Paul McKee, director of the Maryland Water Pollution Control Commission, said engineers reported that an upwelling of lower water containing very little oxygen had caused the fish to suffocate. The recent hurricane winds were blamed for the upwelling.

He noted that (1) taught them to pay attention to details (2) taught them loyalty (3) and taught them self-sacrifice.

"Football today is a game of speed," he said. "It is no longer all brawn and no brain." The coach made blackboard sketches illustrating the single wing, the split "T" and the tight "T".

McFarland Wins Lopsided Vote

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP)—Ernest W. McFarland, staging a spectacular political comeback, today holds the Democratic nomination for governor of Arizona.

Surprising even his most optimistic supporters, the former majority leader of the U. S. Senate overwhelmed State Sen. William Kimball in a lopsided race that was decided within four hours after the polls closed yesterday.

He led from the start in all 14 of the state's counties and even carried Kimball's own district. "The Democratic voters of Arizona have not only spoken, they have shouted," Kimball wired the victor.

McFarland led 42,060 to 16,104 in incomplete returns from 344 of the state's 349 precincts. He will oppose Gov. Howard Pyle, the Republican incumbent, who had no opposition for renomination.

In Arizona's two congressional districts, L. S. Adams of Phoenix, minority leader in the State House of Representatives in the past four years, won the Democratic nod in the 1st District. Stewart Udall, member of a pioneer Arizona family, won in the 2nd.

Rocket Warfare Began Ten Years Ago Today

By ROGER D. GREENE WASHINGTON (AP)—You could learn to live with the V1 buzzbombs. Like rattlesnakes, they at least gave warning before they struck.

But when the German V2 rockets began to rain death on London—silent and invisible until the explosion—even stothearted Britons who had weathered five years of terror from the skies felt the raw lash of fear.

There was no defense against the V2. No sirens wailed a warning to take cover.

It was 10 years ago today in the gathering dusk on the outskirts of The Hague, Holland, that German troops unleashed Hitler's "Vergeltungswaffe Zwei," or "Vengeance Weapon No. 2," and sent it streaking toward England. The rocket's white vapor trail, reaching to a height of 60 miles, marked the beginning of modern rocket warfare.

Less than six minutes later, at 6:43 p.m., Sept. 8, 1944, a shark-nosed 46-foot rocket carrying a ton of high explosives dropped without warning in the village of Chiswick-on-Thames. It exploded with a roar heard across London.

Others began dropping in London itself—26 in the next 10 days.

Dr. Joseph Paul Goebbels, the sadistic little, Nazi propaganda minister, exultantly predicted that London would quickly become "a raging inferno," and the German radio blared that V2 rockets had already left "most of London in ruins."

This began a 201-day ordeal that killed 2,754 civilians, injured 6,523 and turned tens of thousands of homes into rubble. The Germans launched about 1,500 rockets, 1,115 reaching England.

Shocking as it seemed then, we know today it was only a crude and small-scale preview of what could happen in the heralded push-button rocket warfare of World War III.

For Hitler's V2s, with their erratic performance and limited range of 200 miles, were little more than popguns—however lethal—compared with the modern U.S. arsenal of ar-ranging guided missiles that seek out their targets by radar, some of them equipped with atomic warheads.

Only a few months ago the Air Force gave the tipoff that plans for transoceanic or intercontinental rockets may soon become a reality. It asked Congress for funds to extend by 3,000 miles the present 1,000-mile-long range for guided missiles in the Atlantic.

After World War II, most of the important German V2 scientists eluded the Soviets and were rounded up in the American and British zones. U.S. troops also captured the big V2 factory at Nieder-

Farmville Pupils Hold Fire Drill

FARMVILLE — Farmville School held its first fire drill of the school year yesterday.

On hand for the practice were Police Chief L. T. Lucas, Town Clerk C. M. Paylor, Fire Chief Haywood Smith, and Curtis Flanagan, past president of the North Carolina Firemen's Association.

At the first drill at the high school the building was emptied in one minute and 56 seconds, it was reported. On the second trial the building was emptied in one minute, 35 seconds.

At the primary building, the children vacated the building on the first trial in 45 seconds, and on the second trial in 35 seconds.

The officials present made some suggestions for future drills and complimented the children on their orderliness during the drill yesterday.

Principal Sam D. Bundy stated similar drills will be held monthly, and perhaps more often, during the school year.

Same Problem For Her, Too

ENID, Okla. (AP)—Mrs. Irene Ehrlich enjoyed a laugh at the expense of a fellow teacher with four Larrys in a class at El Reno, Okla.

That was before she sat down to call the roll in her own classroom at North Enid Elementary School yesterday.

Mrs. Ehrlich found that she not only has five Larrys but three Stephens as well.

sachswerfer and sent home 300 boxcar loads of V2 parts—enough to build 100 rockets. American technicians quickly assembled the rockets, and within a few months the sagebrush and chaparral around White Sands, N.M., reverberated to the rolling thunder of captured V2s and American-made missiles.

Lynchburg, Va. (AP)—Lynchburg's 100-degree heat felled one citizen yesterday — an employee of a local air-conditioning firm. Connecticut claims it produces more aircraft engines, aircraft propellers and helicopters than any other U.S. state.

By Feb. 24, 1949, an All-American Wac Corporal, slowed in the head of a V2, cut loose and soared on its own to a record altitude of more than 250 miles at a speed of more than 5,000 miles per hour after the V2 had run out of fuel and dropped away.

Today the nation's formidable arsenal of guided missiles is too long to enumerate in detail.

TOKYO GROWS TOKYO (AP)—The population of Tokyo, the world's third largest city, rose to 7,736,113 as of Aug. 1, the metropolitan government announced today. This was an increase of 331,867 in a year.

Are State Taxes Serving Their Purpose?

The basic purpose of taxation is to improve the economic lot of the taxed; though it doesn't always work out that way.

State expenditures (of tax money) should not be counted as money going down a "rathole." Rather, such sums are "invested" and by any form of logic are expected to reflect greater economic dividends for the people.

As a natural follow-up to this greater dividend, there should be larger tax receipts without levying higher rates.

A man may say to himself, "I think this school tax is o.k. It means increased know-how and earning power for my children. The whole area (municipal, county, state and nation) will benefit by the greater productivity my children will be able to accomplish through better education made possible by the school tax."

Or, another man may say, "This liquor tax is alright as a revenue-raising project to protect my community, make it a more desirable place to live and help it enjoy a healthy growth. Property should subsequently rise in value, and not only will the taxes help safeguard the moral standard, but other uses to which the money is put will show a real dividend."

And the man considering the gasoline tax: "This money is going for roads. Roads means increased property values, better means of transportation with subsequent lower costs. I can see where we will show a profit on this."

As we have mentioned, taxes are supposed to show a positive return in an economic sense; enabling a still greater government "take" while keeping the same tax rate, because the taxes are supposed to increase values and improve the general economic situation.

We are being told that North Carolina is running into financial difficulties. New money-raising schemes will be necessary to keep state services at the present level.

Strength for the Day

By EARL L. DOUGLASS
ONLY IN PART

One of the most appalling circumstances of modern life is the complacency with which we assume that we know most of the right answers. One would think to read many books and magazines today that we are in a position to discover ultimate truth. All we need to do is just to apply the formulas of science and "presto" the right answer comes up.

But this, of course, is folly. The absolutely correct answer never comes up. St. Paul reminded us centuries ago that we know in part. This was true not only in the first Christian century but eminently true today. There will never be a time when we will grasp truth in its entirety. But we need always to be grasping at truth, for without even this little part of truth we should indeed perish.

Thomas Edison once said that we do not know seven-one billionths of one per cent of the truth. Why do we choose seven-one billionths instead of some other amount we, of course, do not know. But we get the point. This greatest of all scientific discoverers believed that what he and others had found out was nothing compared with truth in all its fullness.

Let us be humble and remain humble. Let us try to discover all the truth we can, but let us always remember that we know in part—only in part.

By LAWRENCE J. KEEFE

While Ray Tucker is on vacation there will be guest columns by several prominent newspaper editors. Today's column is by Lawrence J. Keefe, Political Analyst of THE ELIZABETH (N. J.) DAILY JOURNAL.

Few observers of the New Jersey political scene will venture a definite prediction on the likely outcome of the campaign between Congressman Charles R. Howell, Democratic nominee for United States Senator, and his Republican opponent, former Congressman Clifford P. Case.

However, everyone is agreed that this is one of the country's real nip-and-tuck political encounters and that it may have a determining effect on control of the United States Senate.

Normally, New Jersey is a Republican state when national issues are involved and rarely sends a Democrat to the Senate. Yet normal conditions don't prevail in New Jersey today. Case in point is the unusual internal Republican troubles traceable to his record as a liberal Congressman in his decade at Washington and to his early advocacy of General Eisenhower as a Presidential candidate in the pre-convention days of 1952. Senator Taft's admirers made a strong albeit futile effort to capture the New Jersey delegation to Chicago Resolutions arising from their failure since have been directed squarely at Case.

REPUBLICANS ON DEFENSIVE—Furthermore, New Jersey has a new and vigorous Democratic State administration, which has the Republican State organization clearly on the defensive and has uncovered scandals in the Division of Employment Security. These scandals occurred when the Division was under the directorship of a popular former Republican Harold G. Hoffman. The present young Democratic Governor Robert B. Meyner, suspended Hoffman last spring.

Hoffman's sudden death in June was followed by publication of an open-after-death letter in which he admitted the juggling of monies that led to a $300,000 shortage in the accounts of a bank of which Hoffman had been president.

The Republican Legislative majority has tried to hamstring Governor Meyner's investigation of the officials say. That means something went wrong with the theory expounded above.

What was it? Too much time-lag between taxes and dividends?

Short-sighted governmental policies in the past?

Or are we re-investing too fast and too eager for the immediate effects of tax-spending?

Is there too much overhead? Is there too much money going into unproductive channels?

Are we paying too much for the anticipated dividend from taxes?

Shouldn't the 1955 General Assembly get to the root of the financial problem rather than just seeking out new revenue sources which, at best would be only a stop-gap measure toward footing an ever expanding state financed program?

Is Youngsters Reading Going To Pot?

It wasn't many years ago when the youngsters used to find their adventures in reading in books like "Adventures of Huckleberry Finn", "Adventures of Tom Sawyer", "Treasure Island" and the like. Today it seems the reading of youngsters - other than what is required under the close scrutiny of the teacher - is confined to comic books.

In the realm of comic books, today's youngsters are riding the ranges with fourth-rate rustlers and gun-slingers rather than the pony express boys and railroad builders of Zane Grey or Samuel Clemens; traveling the frozen north with renegades rather than the real pioneers of Jack London. They soar through the universe in constant interplanetary warfare; get a jaundiced view of police work from colorful comic books which feature sexy dames and run-of-the-mill private eyes.

Many of the youngsters probably never heard of Sherlock Holmes.

Someone had a good idea at the Stank County Fair in Ohio which may go a long way toward rerouting the youngsters of that community from the illiteracy of comic books to a more wholesome atmosphere of literature. For every 10 comic books turned in, each youngster had the opportunity to choose a hard-bound volume from among 1,010 picked pieces of literature.

Perhaps it is too much to hope the youngsters of today will give up comic books entirely; but with a little persuasion, they might be enticed to taste a much finer brand of writing than most of them find in the predominant part of their present reading.

It's an uphill battle to get a youngster to give up his comic book for a pictureless volume - but it's well worth a try.

Hoffman case. These happenings have combined to weaken Republican prestige. U. S. SENATE CONTEST—Howell, the Democratic candidate, has won re-elections as Representative in 1950 and 1952 so easily that he became a state figure.

Although not well known personally in the populous area north of the Raritan River, despite something of an ad interim tenure as Democratic State chairman, Howell has overcome this difficulty sufficiently, even as Case has beaten down the criticism that his acquaintanceships were confined largely to Union County, where he presides.

Howell's election is eagerly desired by Governor Meyner, who, despite the usual denials may be New Jersey's "favorite son" Presidential entry in the 1956 Democratic National Convention with the object mainly of winning the Vice-Presidential nomination if the Presidential candidate should be Adlai E. Stevenson or someone similarly placed geographically.

Case's foes within the Republican Party are protesting with much bitterness that there is no difference in the political philosophy held by Case and Howell, that both are "New Dealers" at heart.

Illustrative of Case's troubles in gaining full Republican support is the warning of George E. Stringfellow, West Orange industrialist, that he and his friends will "go fishing" on election day rather than vote for Case. Stringfellow is a former chairman of the Republican State finance committee and probably was on the closest terms of friendship of any Jerseyman with the late Senator Taft.

An agitation to have Case replaced on the Republican ticket has been more of an annoyance than a happening of importance, due to the lack of names of political significance among the agitators.

REPUBLICAN'S LIBERAL VIEWPOINT—Just as Case's liberal viewpoint has Republican ultraconservatives terrified, so, much of the Democratic Old Guard looks on Howell disdainfully.

Howell and Case alike have carried endorsements in their several campaigns from the Americans for Democratic Action. In this campaign, those endorsements are liabilities as New Jersey traditionally is a conservative state. From a New Jersey standpoint at least, the A.D.A. could have served its Garden State friends by going out of business.

Somebody Told Me

Story Belongs To Ed Carter

Dr. Ed Carter of East Carolina College told me that he claims all rights to this story; in fact, I'm not sure that he approves of my stealing it from him. Ed is head of the field extension department at the college so I'll hope he's on a trip and never knows I stole it.

It concerns four gentlemen who went into business together, starting from scratch at about the turn of the century. It was phenomenal how the four always got along. One was a Jew, one an Englishman, one a Frenchman and one a Scotchman.

They built their business without a hitch. Any differences they had were always minor and settled with a minimum of guff.

Finally the Frenchman realized that his life was about lived; that his days were numbered. So he called his associates together and very seriously told them of his conclusion. "I know that I won't be here much longer," he said.

"And I want all of you gentlemen to know how much I have enjoyed our relationship. The success we have attained has made my life full, and I owe most of it to you."

After the speech the Frenchman made a request of his partners: "I have always found that money opens doors, so I have this one request to make of you: When I pass on, I want each one of you to put $10 in my casket." Without hesitation, the three agreed.

Surely enough, the Frenchman died a short time later. At the funeral the three partners passed the casket separately. First, the Jew. He was very outward with his feeling of grief. As he stood in front of the casket he wept openly, without shame. But he couldn't help but feel that it was foolish to bury money. However, the Jew didn't hesitate a minute and very seriously told them of his conclusion. "I know that I won't be here much longer," he said.

The Englishman passed the casket and suffered his grief in silence, in a manner that the typical Englishman would. He, too, considered it very foolish to bury money, but was also willing to comply with the last wish of his friend. So without hesitation he shelved out the $10.

Then came the Scotchman. His grief was expressed in silence, but there was a loud debate going on in his mind about the $10. "It's just against my nature," he said to himself, "to bury money. I simply can't do it."

As the Scotchman walked away from the casket he couldn't bear the breach of promise he was about to commit. "I promised! I promised!" his conscience kept saying.

So he turned around, whipped out his checkbook, wrote a check for $30 and took the $20 change out of the casket.

And I think Ed.

other state). We spend 43 cents of every expenditure dollar for education compared with a national outgo of 30 cents. N.C. highway expenditures are more in line but still higher with 29 cents compared with 24 cents. We spend about the national average for health and hospitals: eight cents compared with nine cents. Since we have large cities our expenditure for public welfare is much less than the national average: eight cents compared with 17

At a time when more teachers, more doctors, more SBI agents, more patrolmen, more services all around are needed; when more educational buildings must be built; when dangerous highways must be modernized. . . obviously the answer cannot be found in cutting corners.

Unless essential services are to be reduced or unless business conditions improve, the lawmakers in Raleigh must find new sources of revenue. The answer to this and the segregation problem is sure to make this legislative session one of the toughest in years.

What Other Editors Are Thinking

HOW CAN WE GET OUT OF THE RED? (Rocky Mount Telegram)

Some students of North Carolina financial affairs warn that this state now faces the greatest financial crisis since the depression ridden 1930's.

During the war years when state construction and expenditures were limited, North Carolina piled up large surplus funds. The excess of state income over expenditure continued during the postwar boom. But this trend toward increasing surpluses reversed itself in 1952-53. That year, for the first time, current revenue of some $181 million was insufficient to meet current operating expenses of some $191 million. The deficit came from the surplus which had been built up in the treasury.

The fact that the surplus was thus reduced from $33.7 million to $27.7 million would not be alarming were it not for the fact that this year's anticipated expenditure is so far out of line with anticipated revenue that most of the surplus is to be wiped out.

According to North Carolina FACTS it now seems like that North Carolina this year will operate some $26 million in the red.

A comparison of North Carolina's financial situation with the average of all other states by FACTS does not indicate how we might change our getting and spending methods to avoid laying waste our powers in red ink. The answer must be found in either reducing needed services or increasing revenues.

For example, out of every tax dollar taken in we receive 27 cents from income taxes compared with 17 cents from the same source in all other states; 56 cents from N.C. sales and gross receipts compared with 59 cents, 14 cents for N.C. licenses compared with 15 cents.

Compared with other states, North Carolina spends much more for education (in fact we spend more proportionately than any

Many Offices At Stake In Coming North Carolina Votes

ELECTIONS — North Carolina will elect a Governor, a Lieutenant Governor, a United States Senator, full membership on the Council of State, twelve members of the National House of Representatives, several Supreme Court Justices, about a dozen Superior Court Judges and a full complement of State Legislators and county officials in November of 1956. At the same time Tarheel voters will join with those in 47 other States to elect a President and Vice President of the United States. That is the next upcoming "big election."

A couple of U.S. Senators, several Justices and Judges, at least three members of the Council of State, a whole coterie of Solicitors, Representatives in the Congress and a flock of Legislators and county local officers must be elected in November this year. For most part that is formality, the real election having been determined by the nominating primaries and conventions earlier in the year. Two congressional seats, one or two solicitors, eight or ten sheriffs and perhaps a dozen seats in the General Assembly are in doubt.

So it is that while the Democratic and Republican party leaders are tearing their hair and in various manners disturbing the peace of the citizenship about the 1954 general election, great majority of the rank and file of citizenship is looking ahead to prospective candidates in 1956.

It is generally conceded that Senator Sam Ervin will seek reelection then without Democratic opposition and doubtful executive and judicial officers are expected to run again for their same jobs, with possible exception of the two or three who might have their eyes on the big chair in the southwest corner of the capitol where the Governor customarily sits.

FOREHANDS — In face of the historic record that leading candidates for Governor often bob up during the last few months before the primary, Tarheel Democrats like to be forewarned in their speculation and pick potentials well in advance. In that respect North Carolina is somewhat like South Carolina and Virginia; but there are significant differences in results among the three States.

In Virginia the so-called "Byrd machine" picks candidates well in advance, grooms them for the job, runs them and elects them the first time. In South Carolina, where there is no comparable "machine" for the selection of candidates, but perhaps an even more effective control over the administration of State government, the practice is for candidates to make two or three statewide "get acquainted" races before having reasonable hope of election as Governor or U.S. Senator.

In North Carolina the grooming is not so thorough as in Virginia and the "get acquainted" campaigns resulting in defeat do not pay off to the degree they do in South Carolina. Since the st. st. st. primary was inaugurated in 1913 only one man has been elected U.S. Senator after being defeated for that office—Bob Reynolds in 1932 after failing in 1928; and only one man has been elected Governor after a failure—Max Gardner in 1928 after losing in 1920. A. J. Maxwell tried twice and failed for the governorship, and R. I. Dick Fountain tried twice and failed for the Senate after failing also for the governorship. It is not necessary to clutter the record with inconsequential names like Arthur Simmons and Olla Ray Boyd, who in several races for Governor and Senate polled less than 5,000 votes.

Main point is that in North Carolina, unlike South Carolina and Virginia, no lieutenant governor has succeeded to the governorship and few times has a defeated candidate been able to stage a successful comeback.

Suggestion Programs

By ELMER ROESSNER
A great deal has been said here and other places on what companies can do, should do and how they should do it in operating employee suggestion programs. Now, a survey by "Mill & Factory," sheds some interesting light on what they actually are doing.

Of the 364 companies in the survey, 46 per cent reported they have employee suggestion programs while 54 per cent do not. Of those with programs, 62 per cent pay for acceptable suggestions and 38 per cent do not.

Payments are in fixed amounts in 21 per cent of the programs and based on a percentage of savings effected in 90 per cent—the extra percentage due to some companies using both methods—with the largest award reported $9,000.

Overlapping also produced large percentages in answer to the question, "What are some of the areas in which suggestions are made?" Health and safety is tops with 97 per cent mentioning this field. After that comes work simplification and process improvement, both 94 per cent; materials handling, 93 per cent; packaging and shipping, 72 per cent, and product design, 57 per cent.

The programs are administered by the personnel department in 82 per cent of the cases; the production department in 21 per cent; a special committee in 7 per cent; the industrial engineering department in 6 per cent, and the methods department in 2 per cent. The excess percentage due to more than one department handling the program in some instances.

Both rank-and-file workers and supervisors are included in 61 per cent of the programs, rank-and-file alone in 35 per cent and supervisors alone in 4 per cent.

Most interesting aspect of the survey is the relatively low number which actually have an organized program. Numerically, 167 concerns have a suggestion setup but 196 do not. The non-payment for suggestions indicates that in these instances the "beef box" method is used—in other words, a suggestion box in which workers can put notes blowing off steam about their pet peeves. This brings the number of constructive suggestion programs down to 104, or about 30 per cent of the firms reporting.

Add to this the unknown number of companies who didn't bother to reply because they don't have a suggestion program and the percentage drops even further.

'Sabra' Envoys To United States

By HAL BOYLE
NEW YORK (AP)—Ziva Shapir is a Sabra—and a very pretty Sabra, too.

"A Sabra is a native-born Israeli," explained Miss Shapir, who is Israel's 1954 wine festival queen. "It is the Hebrew word for cactus, which, like our people, must be tough on the outside to endure—but remains sweet inside."

But Ziva, a 21-year-old tall shapely brunette with amber wine-colored eyes, doesn't look at all like a cactus outside. Doesn't look much like a wine salesman, either, but the purpose of her month-long tour of America is to stir up interest in Israeli wines. After industrial diamonds, wines are now Israel's most important export to the United States.

"Israel has three wonderful crops—children, oranges and wine," she said. "We have 22 kinds of wine, including champagne."

"Using American equipment we are now able to turn out 50,000 bottles a day, although as yet we don't. This year we hope to export 400,000 bottles to this country."

The United States is Ziva's second homeland. She came here at the age of 14 and spent three years in St. Louis studying ballet dancing. After returning to her own country, she spent a year with the Israel defense army. Since then she has become an actress, and has appeared in several movies.

"How does she compare life in America and Israel?" "The average Israeli lives a much simpler life," she said. "Women keep themselves busier. They do more community work. I miss some things there very much—such as department stores. You don't have such a wide range of choice in most things."

"But on the other hand, here your cigarettes are all the same color. Why is that? In the Middle East it is possible for a woman to buy cigarettes to match the color of her dress."

What did she miss most about America? Ziva, whose father is an accountant, thought for a long time.

"In St. Louis I had my own room," she said. "When I returned to Israel our family had a small apartment, and it was impossible for each of us to have his own room. That is what I really missed most—the feeling of owning a room to myself."

Ziva feels that the relationship between boys and girls is much more natural and honest in Israel. "Here if a boy phones on Thursday to ask a girl for a date on Saturday, she tells him no—whether she really already has another date or not. She wants to impress him how popular she is. So she would rather stay home than let him know she isn't dated up two weeks in advance."

"In Israel we don't have so many telephones. Dating is much more casual. Girls don't bother to pretend they are popular. They are more realistic. . . ."

"Boys are more realistic, too. They don't run around a car to open the door for a girl, when she is strong enough to push it open herself. They are very straightforward. They don't beat around the bush."

Miss Shapir—her full name is translated as "Sunshine Sapphire"—is sure that Dior's new flat silhouette will flop in Israel. "The bustline there is very important," she said. "The false business is very bad. There is hardly any such thing as a flat-chested girl."

As to the romantic difference between American and Israeli men, she remarked archly: "Well, I have heard there are frustrated women in this country. I don't know of any frustrated women in Israel."

"But, please, don't misunderstand me. I like American men. Very, very much."

CANDIDATES — Indications now are that two men are seriously thinking about bucking the jinx. Lt. Gov. Luther Hodges is rated as presently the "leading" candidate for Governor in 1956. (Continued on page six)

Social Security Change Eases Old Restrictions

By JAMES MARLOW
WASHINGTON (AP)—If you're 65 and entitled to social security benefits, can you get them if you keep on working and earning money instead of retiring?

Yes, within limits under the present law. And the new law recently passed by Congress, to go into effect Jan. 1, softens the limits on how much you can earn and still collect social security benefits.

For example: Under present law there are limits on how much you can earn and still collect benefits until you're 75. After that you get your social security benefits no matter how much you earn. That age, starting Jan. 1 will be lowered to 72.

Under the new rule, starting Jan. 1, if you're between 65 and 72, whether you can continue to earn money and draw benefits depends on (A) the amount of your earnings and (B) the number of months you work.

This is what that means: You can earn up to $1,200 a year and still collect full social security benefit for every month of that year.

Example: John Jones, earning $100 a month, gets a total salary of $1,200 in 1955. He receives his full social security benefit every month of 1955 because he did not earn more than $1,200 that year.

But—if you work every month of the year, earning more than $80 each month and winding up with more than $1,200 at the year's end, you lose a month's social security benefit for each additional $80, or any part of it, that you earn in 1955.

Example: Tom Smith working every month, earns $1,205 in 1955. For 11 months he earns $105 a month. One month he earns $105. He loses his social security benefit for that one month in which he earned $105.

Another example: Bill Kelly, working every month and earning more than $80 each month, winds up at the end of 1955 with $1,440. That $1,440 is $24 more than the $1,200 exemption. That $24 represents three times $80. Kelly loses his social security benefit for 3 of the 12 months.

But for any month in which you earn less than $80—no matter how much you earn for the year—you get a social security benefit for that month.

Example: Mortimer Snyder earns $2,500 in the first three months of 1955, but only $75 a month for the next nine months. He loses his social security benefit for those first three months but gets his benefit for each of those nine months when he earned less than $80.

The rule is slightly different for the self-employed person who reaches 65, is entitled to social security benefits, but wants to keep on in business.

He too can earn up to $1,200 a year and still get his social security benefit every month. He does not lose his benefit, if he makes more than $1,200 for any month in which he did not render "substantial service" to his trade or business.

Example: Sidney Hemingway is a retired consulting engineer. In 1955 he is asked to help out on a new bridge. He works just one month, January, and the fee he collects is $125,000. He does not work for the other 11 months.

Although his earned income for 1955 thus turns out to be $15,000, he loses his social security benefit only in the month he earned it. He collects the benefit for each of the other 11 months he did not work.

If you're 65 and are thinking of continuing to work, count earned income only. Do not include in your year's income such things as pensions, insurance payments or interest or dividends.

Longshoremen Rescue Minnie

NEW YORK (AP)—Minnie the Mocher, the best rat-catching cat on Pier 33, has at least a hundred longshoremen for friends. Other wise, she wouldn't be alive to meow about it.

Minnie, a white cat with dark spots, was born on the Brooklyn pier six years ago. Her favorite hunting ground was an air space beneath and between the wooden planks of the pier. But some workmen who didn't know about this came to repair the pier last Thursday and reinforced it with a 15-inch coat of concrete.

Several days passed and no one knew what had happened to the waterfront pet. Then someone heard faint meows from a three-inch standpipe set in the sturdy concrete.

After that, the longshoremen took matters into their own hands. They borrowed a huge electric drill from a construction gang and bored a 10-inch hole right through the concrete yesterday.

After being starved for eight days, now she had been half frightened to death. She was so upset from the noise of the drill that she wouldn't come near the door to freedom.

Finally, everybody went away, leaving some tuna fish and evaporated milk near the hole. Minnie finally crawled out and started gobbling.

And the longshoremen cheered and went back to their jobs.

Asks Parents In Juvenile Court

OCEAN CITY, Md. (AP)—Parents from Baltimore should be asked to attend Worcester County Juvenile Court hearings for the 75 teenagers rounded up in raids on beach party parties, according to State's Atty. Jack Sanford.

"Actually, the parents are worse than the kids," said Sanford, "allowing them to come here without proper chaperones."

He said the raids were ordered after residents complained about teenagers carousing on the beach north of Ocean City.

with Hubert Olive, who lost the race to William Umstead in 1952, prominently mentioned as a formidable contender. Both men are personally popular and have proved ability in government, but both have the handicap of being to near the middle as between the recognized conservative and liberal groups to inspire a great deal of enthusiasm in either faction. Other probable candidates mentioned, as they have been for ten years, are L.Y. (Stag) Ballentine, incumbent commissioner of agriculture, and Thad Eure, secretary of state.

Not so much in the talk, but known to be holding their hats ready to toss them into the ring if and when conditions appear favorable, are Monroe Redden, Capus Wayne, Alton Lennon and Terry Sanford.

Redden lives at Hendersonville, indistinctly in the west. He is a former chairman of the State Democratic committee and retired congressman from the 12th district. Wayne lives at High Point, near the center of the State geographically and in population count; is a former highway chairman, State Democratic chairman, co-manager of Kerr Scott's successful campaign for Governor in 1948, and subsequently ambassador to Nicaragua and Colombia. Lennon lives at Wilmington, is retiring as U.S. Senator by executive appointment, having lost the nomination to Scott by a narrow margin after a hard fought campaign last spring. Sanford lives at Fayetteville, is youngest of the whole lot (he celebrated his 37th birthday about two weeks ago), has an outstanding record as State YDC president and as manager of Kerr Scott's campaign for the Senate this year, is generally regarded as politically ambitious with enough on the ball to make good on his ambitions.

In considering these and other mentioned candidates, it should be remembered that history supports the idea that the real candidates for Governor in 1956 might not show up on the scene until a year from now—and might be somebody never thought of until they crash the party and take over.

This Is Year Esther Meets Public Dry

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—This year Esther Williams goes out to meet the public "dry." Next year, she'll be "wet."

The celebrated swimming star is leaving on her first big theater and night club tour. No, she won't be swimming this time. She'll appear in a musical act that will kid her amphibious movie epics.

I caught the act at The Trails, where she debuted over the weekend. It is a westside Los Angeles night spot which, oddly enough, is owned by Esther and her husband Ben Gage. The latter costars with Esther, and a feature of the act is a glamorous water curtain that surrounds the swimming star. It was built at a machine shop owned by the Gages.

The act looked good in preview form. There was much dancing about by Esther and a chorus of five singers and dancers. There was much jesting about Esther and her liquefied existence.

After doing a strenuous mambo number, Esther came pattingly over to explain how she got involved in the whole deal.

"My agents have been after me for some time to go out on tour," she said. "At first, there was the idea of putting a tank on the stage of the Winter Garden in New York, the way they did for 'Wish You Were Here.' They proposed putting a mirror above the pool, so the audience could see me.

"That didn't sound right to me. When I go out on a swimming tour I want it to be done big. "Then they got the idea of going out with a 'dry' tour. I said no at first. I didn't know what I could do. I would feel literally like a fish out of water.

"But they told me, 'You don't realize how much entertaining you

Labor Secretary Expects Upturn

PITTSBURGH (AP)—Secretary of Labor James P. Mitchell foresees a "levelling off" of the economy, "then an upturn" and says "economists have told me that unemployment should decrease this fall."

In an interview yesterday, Mitchell said the United States has "gone through the mildest contraction of the economy that we ever had in a post war period."

"There are 62 million employed," Mitchell said, with 3,900,000 unemployed.

Of the Pittsburgh district, Mitchell said "you have special problems here because of the concentration in coal and steel. But I do not look for the situation to get worse in this area."

The number of one-room schools in the United States has shrunk from 196,000 in 1917-18 to 45,000 today.

have learned in the pictures you have done. You have sung and danced all kinds of musical numbers. My agents sold the act to Bill Miller of the Las Vegas Sahara before I even consented to it. They knew I would agree when that happened. The Las Vegas salaries are simply unbelievable. The show has been whipped up with Esther, and the chorus a baby elephant, an acrobatic act and a comedian.

The tour will take over two months and may be extended. Esther has to report back to her chores at MGM. But next year she has "bigger plans."

"That's when I want to do our watershow and world tour," she said. "We will put on a big show with 200 swimmers in arenas like Madison Square Garden."

The plans include a huge pool made of plastic for portability and circular for stress resistance.

Cherry Sidelined By Foot Injury

ECC Starters For Norfolk Disclosed

The Pirates of East Carolina College had their first workout under lights Tuesday night as they began polishing their offense and defense tactics for opening of the 1954 football season here Saturday night.

The all-conference quarterback Dick Cherry was sidelined with a foot injury and it was announced by Coach Jack Boone that Cherry would not play in the season's opener against Norfolk Naval Air Station.

Injury, resulting from an accident in early morning practice, was described as a bone fracture.

Passing, downfield blocking, and light scrimmage were the major phases of the workouts Tuesday night. Coaches Boone, Jim Mallory and Earl Smith were pleased with the performance of the squad.

Members of the starting unit for Saturday night's game here were named by Coach Boone Wednesday. They will be:

Louis Hollow, center; Don Burton and David Lee, guards; George Tucker and Willie Holland, tackles; Larry Rhodes and J. D. Bradford, ends; Eno Bodo and John Hayes, halfbacks; Boyd Webb, quarterback; and Claude King, fullback.

The Naval Air Station Wednesday announced its starting team will include:

Doug MacLachlan and Neil Whitaker, ends; Stew Pell and Jack Effinger, tackles; Paul Pierson and Stan Bordin, guards; Tom Mixon, center; Jim Herd, quarterback; Bob Shuptrud, fullback; Rex Yerby and Leroy LeBat, halfbacks.

Orders for season tickets for the East Carolina College 1954 football games may be sent to the Athletic Office or the Alumni Office.

for many choice seats which are now available.

Not Enough Time Moans Tatum; Hard, Hot Work

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
High temperatures kept some practice drills light yesterday, but more than the weather seemed to be bothering coaches in the Atlantic Coast Conference.

Maryland Coach Jim Tatum lamented, "We've got so much to do and such little time to do it, it's pitiful."

In spite of plus 90-degree heat Tatum put his squad through what he termed "two hours of hard work." Maryland opens a week from Saturday at Kentucky.

A mild virus infection Monday put 15 members of the University of South Carolina squad in the infirmary but all of them were released yesterday. Half of them still were not able to work out.

Coach Rex Enright said he hoped contact work later in the week would put the team in shape.

He has until Sept. 25, when South Carolina meets Army.

Clemson's squad looked snappy yesterday even though the same hot weather which slowed it down Monday, prevailed.

All-around play by the No. 1 squad was impressive.

Don Ross at quarter, Doug Thompson and Ken Moore at halfback and Red Whitten at fullback made strong showings.

Drills were limited by heat as North Carolina dressed lightly for routine drills.

Coach George Barclay commented his squad's timing and conditioning were "coming along nicely."

At North Carolina State, timing, offensive blocking and pass defense highlighted two workouts.

Full equipment, used in the morning round, was left behind for the afternoon practice because of the severe heat.

Wake Forest's squad gave attention to blocking, tackling and pass defense as the first week of pre-season drills ended.

The squad wore heavy equipment for both workouts, despite the weather.

Coaches Ned McDonald and Bill Dudley spent most of their time introducing the running plays aimed at giving the Virginia offense more deception.

Duke went through a short scrimmage because of the heat.

Quarterback Jerry Barger's driving and passing looked sharp.

Nick McKeithan, Buddy Bass, Billy Conner and Bob Pascal made impressive runs.

Horses Luckier Than Ball Team

OCEANPORT, N.J. (AP) — The racing season which ended the other day at the Monmouth Park Jockey Club after a 50-day meeting showed that the Darby Dan Farm was leading stable with $65,800 in purse winnings for ten victories. Eight other stables won $30,000 or more in purses.

The Darby Dan stable is owned by John W. Galbreath, who also is a baseball magnate. In baseball he is less lucky than in horses. His baseball financial interest is in the Pittsburgh Pirates, well down in the National League race.

Avila Says Milk Helps Batting

CLEVELAND (AP) — Bob Avila, the Cleveland Indian second baseman, says milk is the reason for a recent 600R in his batting average.

"I do nothing different now when I bat," Avila said. "Must be I am stronger. Maybe because I drink so much milk. I drink milk all the time."

Avila explained that he started drinking two quarts of milk a day last winter. That was when doctors told him he had an ulcer.

Walter Carroll, a thoroughbred trainer, was a veterinarian with the U.S. Army mule force in World War II.

The scribes who remained in the old airplane hanger after Rocky Marciano had completed his training chores in preparation for his return meeting with Ezzard Charles wondered how the current heavyweight champion compared with some of the titholders of the past. The suggestion that Rocky was another Jim Jeffries was promptly vetoed because Jeff was so much bigger than Marciano. At his peak, Jim stood 6, 1-1-2 and weighed 220 pounds. John L. Sullivan was a shade over 5-10 and weighed about 185.

Phants Taper Off In Jacksonville Drills

By WAYNE BISHOP
Greenville's Phantoms eased off in their workouts some yesterday afternoon as they finished final preparations for their first conference football game of the year. That game will be played in Jacksonville Friday night.

The Cardinals and the Phantoms never played before until last year and the G-men held a decided edge with a 44-0 win. The Cardinals still remember that walloping and reports have it that they are out for the Phantoms' skin this time.

The G-men probably will go with just about the same starting line-up they used last game. All-Conference candidate Harold Edwards still will be on the sidelines for the game due to his shoulder injury. The big Phantom pass snatcher was the only coach Kitterell is having to use two boys at end who have never played football before. Ike Riddick and Bob Adams are both out for the sport for the first time and are doing good jobs under the conditions.

On defense Riddick moves back to safety and Pete West moves to the end slot. West drew praise from the Wilson coach on his play in the opening game.

Joe Taft, senior Phantom halfback, will probably be ready for the Jacksonville game. Taft had an infected blister and missed the opener. Sophomore guard Edwin Wilkerson also will be ready to go by Friday night. Wilkerson had a ruptured muscle in his side and was out until yesterday. Wilkerson participated in the scrimmage Monday and had no pain from his injury.

The Green Phants have a long wait before they can strut before the home folks. This Friday they go to Jacksonville, then they have an open date the following Friday with the Kingston game in Greenville the next week. That Kingston game will be on September 24.

Yankees Go West, Needing A Miracle To Survive Race

By BEN PHLEGAR
AP Sports Writer

The world champion New York Yankees go West today. Barring miracles, they will be ex-champs by the time they get home.

Not since the last century has a band of Yankees headed into Indian territory with such a faint chance of survival.

The Yankees play 11 of their remaining 17 games on this tour of Baltimore, Chicago, Cleveland, Detroit and Philadelphia. They now trail Cleveland by 4½ lengths.

While the Yankees covered wagon grinds around the circuit for the last time, the Indians will be happily scooped in their sky blue waters clipping off their foes one by one.

The big battle, which might go down in history as Casey's Last Stand, is set for Sunday when the Yankee caravan reaches Cleveland for a double-header.

The Yankees can't be eliminated positively until after that engagement.

Manager Stengel is rambling right at the start with Tommy Byrne tonight in Baltimore which according to American League geography is West.

A wild man in his previous stints in the majors, Byrne was bought from Seattle last week in a desperation move. Tonight is his first start.

While the Cleveland Tribe stays home, that other bunch of wild Indians, the Milwaukee Braves, heads East in a lightning foray after the National League title.

The best road club in either league, the Braves open their 12-game tour in Pittsburgh trailing the league leader, New York Giants by 4½ games with 19 to play.

The trip includes Friday and Saturday games against the Brooklyn Dodgers, who are in third place and still are trying to find out how it happened, and a three-game set next week in the Polo Grounds starting Tuesday night.

The Giants picked up an important half game last night in an 11-inning thriller at Philadelphia, where they shut out the Phillies 3-1.

Only one other game was played in the majors. Washington edged Philadelphia 5-4 before a gathering of 460,000, the smallest crowd ever to attend a game at Washington's Griffith Stadium.

Monte Irvin followed two walks with a double to the right field fence for two New York runs in the 11th. Davey Williams walked to start the inning and moved to second on a sacrifice. Curt Simmons struck out.

Red Williams May intentionally bring up Irvin.

The Giants had scrunched a run in the second and Grady Hamer tied it with his 13th homer in the eighth. Simmons gave up only six hits in losing. Ruben Gomez, with help from Hoyt Wilhelm when the Phillies loaded the bases in the 11th picked up his 14th victory.

The Giants are back home today for a two-game series with Chicago, followed by two each with Cincinnati and St. Louis before the Milwaukee invasion.

The Dodgers, at home for 15 of their remaining 17 games entertain St. Louis tonight in the first of two games.

Paul Andrews To Fight 'Unknown'

CHICAGO (AP) — Paul Andrews of Buffalo, N.Y., with an eye on light heavyweight champion Archie Moore's crown, meets unknown Bobby Hughes tonight in a nationally televised 10-round bout at Chicago Stadium.

Andrews, 24, sporting 28 victories in 31 fights — half by knockouts — disposed of Danny Nardico in four rounds in his last Chicago appearance June 23.

Hughes, a 26-year-old from Warren, Ohio, who has kayoed 14 of his last 17 opponents, will be making his first appearance before the TV cameras. He has had 35 fights, winning 22.

The fight will be telecast at 9 p.m., EST, by CBS.

Lombardi Works For A Sheepskin

NEW YORK (AP) — The New York Football Giants has Vince Lombardi for a backfield coach because he needed a few extra dollars to pay for his sheepskin.

"I was studying at Fordham Law School and I needed money to pay for that law degree," Lombardi said. "At the same time I was teaching physics and chemistry and coaching football at St. Cecilia High School in Englewood, N.J."

Lombardi was such a success as high school coach that he was called to West Point to coach the offensive platoon, and that decided his career. He put aside law to coach the professional Giants.

Maybe Stranahan Just Wants To Pay His Bills

By GAYLE TALBOT
NEW YORK (AP) — The decision of Frank Stranahan, golden boy of amateur golf, to turn professional and fight it out hand to hand with the grim money players over the tournament trail must have caused much conjecture and eyebrow raising throughout the golfing world.

Why would a young man with unlimited wealth behind him and apparently not a care in the world except where his next bid was coming from suddenly forsake the pleasant and enviable life of the amateur sportsman in favor of the professional's unending quest of eating money? Especially when the purses that he figures to win in the dog-eat-dog competition he now faces probably won't do much more than keep the spark plug heir in caddy fees.

In the statement he left behind as he winged off to Brazil, Frank said such things as that he long had wished to play the pros on their terms, and that he didn't consider it fair that he was in position to compete all year while his fellow amateurs were restricted in that respect. If the latter were the compelling force behind the young man's strange move, and we're not exactly saying it wasn't, then it took a long time to take hold.

A more logical explanation might be that the two-time British Amateur champion simply wearied of shelling out perhaps $20,000 per year for the privilege of indulging his hobby and decided to do something about it. As a professional he presumably will be entitled to put down the sum as legitimate operating expense the next time he reaches for a tax form. He's no longer an unemployed playboy.

Whatever the reasons for Stranahan's "wrong way" flight—most pros would love to be in position to play the game for fun—one can't help wondering how long it will take for the novelty to wear off. The likeable young man with the rippling muscles is about to discover that he has yanked open the door of a brand new golfing world.

Win And Lose, It's Same Name

FORT SCOTT, Kan. (AP) — Bill Weinberg was the winner and Bill Weinberg was the loser in a golf match in the city tournament here.

The two men with the same name wound up all even at the end of 18 holes. The winner of the playoff on the 19th was Capt. Bill Weinberg of the Kansas National Guard. The loser was jeweler Bill Weinberg.

Rooting for the winner and loser, respectively, were Mrs. Betty Weinberg and Mrs. Betty Weinberg. The wives also have the same name.

Paid Her Coin, Saw Cold Hand

ANNVILLE, Pa. (AP) — Miss Barbara M. Grosky of Annville, suffered a chilling experience while trying to get ice from a self-service dispensing machine.

Instead of ice coming down the chute when she deposited her quarter, a cold hand appeared and beckoned to her.

Miss Grosky, a bit unmoved, ran to a nearby service station where keys for the machine were kept and then watched a service attendant open the ice-dispenser.

Inside was Ralph W. Hopple of Annville, who was repairing the big machine when its door swung shut, trapping him.

Found Stolen Car On Route

LYNCHBURG, Va. (AP) — Bus Driver W.S. Adams Jr. reported to police that his car had been stolen.

Next day, while driving his usual bus route, he saw his car parked on a neighboring street and stopped and took possession. The thieves made off with his keys and front license plate.

CHAPTER FIFTEEN

AFTER Gil was gone Winifred dressed herself taking time and pains, in the little blue suit that had the cute ripple in the back and a tiny, provocative hat. Then she telephoned Rufus's room.

"Rufus?" Winifred let her own voice lit sweetly. "Is Kelly there?"

"Gone out," he was curt. "Went downtown. Somebody telephoned. She didn't say where she was going, nor why."

"Rufus darling, I'm all alone. Gil has gone to Maryland. How would you like to take me out to lunch?"

Rufus said: "So he's gone out home, las he?"

"And refused to let me go with him. Isn't he mean? Rufus, you have your car, haven't you?"

"Yes, I have the car." He sounded odd and detached as though he was not thinking of her at all. "Kelly took the bus or may be she walked. I don't know. How long has Gil been gone?"

"He just left. He was out all morning. Aren't you going to rescue me before I die of lonesomeness?"

He spoke roughly: "Look, Winnie, the last time you were out with me you were all in a panic to get home to Gil."

"But you were so mean to me. Oh, Rufus, do let's go somewhere. I know the nicest little place up near Bethesda. Hardly anybody goes there, anyone we know I mean. They have wonderful seafood—and I'll take you to lunch. In reward for saving my sanity."

"If I go to lunch with you I'll pick up the check, Winnie."

"You will go? That's wonderful. And you needn't drive out here. I'll catch the bus and meet you at your circle, where Massachusetts Ave. comes in. I'll be there in an hour."

She waited only a few minutes at the circle before she stopped the car beside her, and she got in. "I've got to go home," she said. "Out to the place I mean."

"Oh, for heaven's sake—why?"

"I've got to go," he insisted. "Something has happened—It's important, Winnie."

"Let me out then," she flared. "I'll take a bus home."

"No, I'm taking you with me." He drove away and turned off the highway into a side road.

"I won't go another inch," she screamed. "Let me out here."

"Do you want to walk back to Chevy Chase? It's six miles from here—maybe more."

She snatched at the door handle and Rutherford reached past her to keep her from jumping out of the car. He didn't see the laden produce truck that was lumbering toward them, passing a slow-moving tractor on the narrow road.

He had a flickering consciousness after the roaring, crashing impact.

He looked vaguely at Winifred and thought how pitiful it was to see her pretty yellow hair torn off her head like that. Then blackness closed in.

There was too much smoke in the room and Gil began to feel a little dizzy. His father's face was crumpled into more lines than Gil had ever seen there. He looked dazed and collapsed; still a bit like an old eagle, but a sick old eagle.

"After all," he said, and began pace again, "we don't actually know anything. This fellow—" he smote the newspaper with a scornful flick of his fingers, "has no standing in town. He risks a libel suit every day of his life. Washington laughs at him most of the time."

"But reads everything he prints in that string of innuendo put together with sm-r-t cracks," Gil persisted.

Elihu sat down. "I won't try to hide it from you, Gil, that things haven't been too rosy out home lately. Henning is becoming very critical. He's building up this man, Hilliard, but he wants him for governor, he says. I don't exactly understand why he's been offish with me, because he got a good piece of business from that plant out there. Contract for all the concrete work, and it ran into big figures."

"But no graft? No big slice of the taxpayers' money that he could credit to your account? Even that doesn't explain this guy Carrick. Why is he after you? Kissel said that Carrick got himself on a millitary expense committee so he could go after you."

"He's a publicity hound, one of those small-caliber guys that try to make themselves outstanding by stirring up stinks. Always on hand pulling wires, creating sensational stuff to get themselves looked at. There may be a tie-up—Josh Henning may be doing some underground dirt. You can't keep a line on the operation—of the party in your state when you have to spend all your time in Washington."

Gil's voice sharpened anxiously. "Can they dig up anything that would smear you personally?"

His father did not reply immediately and Gil's nerves tightened a little. Then Elihu drew a heavy, harsh breath.

"Not unless they try to prove something about that land deal out there. I stayed out of it—clear out of it. I made General Wadsworth handle the whole thing. Josh worked with the military committees, and I was careful not to sign anything—there isn't a line on paper anywhere. But the kids do come into it—Penn and Quincy."

"There was a stir at the door and Penn came into the room, her coat half off, her cheeks blazing. "I just came in. I couldn't help hearing. I don't want it. I don't want a cent of government money if it's going to make trouble for you Uncle Elihu."

Elihu reached out a hand and patted her arm. "It's all right, honey. They've loaded big guns for me before and I was always too much for them."

"But I won't have the money—I simply won't."

"What can you do with it? Throw it away? Have a little sense, Penn."

Quincy's appearance at the hall door was magically swift. She said: "If the money's legally ours I see no reason for us to refuse it. After all, the land had value, and goodness knows we inherited mighty little from our mother's side of the family."

"Okay," agreed Gil wearily. "Now disappear, will you? Both of you. We've got things to decide that are no affair of yours. Get out of here, Penn and stop being morbid about this business. It's all settled anyway."

Gil heard the stirring behind him again and turned impatiently. "What now, Penn?" he asked.

"It's a man. He's coming down the driveway—in a car. A man I know," she said.

"If he's a man you know, he's coming to see you."

"Gil," she said soberly. "I think he's coming here to make trouble. It's Marsh Nichols Junior."

Her uncle stumbled to his feet. "That boy! Go on out—get rid of him, Gil."

Penn went out quickly, and watching, a little back from the window, Gil saw her run across the lawn toward the approaching car; a shabby old car that did not stop even though Penn was trotting along beside it and he could hear her protesting vigorously. The car halted at the terrace steps and the young man who drove it was out and pounding across the bricks, paying no attention to Penn.

THERE OUGHTA BE A LAW By FAGALY and SHORTEN

Gil heard her cry: "You shall not go in there to make trouble!" and Marsh Nichols' sharp reply: "I didn't make this trouble. I've got to see the senator."

Gil met him in the hall. "What goes on?" he demanded angrily. "He has a grievance," Penn said half sobbing. "I tried to stop him."

Marsh Nichols said: "Where's the senator? I've got to see him." "I'm here," Elihu said at the library door. "What do you want?"

"It's your son. He's badly hurt. There's been a bad accident over by our place. They carried him in there." Young Nichols fairly panted out the words. He jerked at a pocket. "Here is his wallet. I brought it for identification."

Elihu's hands shook as he took the wallet. It had been opened, displaying an Army pass.

"Rufus!" he gasped. "Where did you say he was?"

"At our place over on the other side of the street. We carried him in there—we haven't a telephone. You'd better call a doctor and an ambulance—and the highway patrol."

"Call your mother, Gil," ordered Elihu. "I'll go with this man—you fetch your mother, Penn, you telephone—get Ki Kpatrick—or somebody else if you can't get him quick. Tell him to send the ambulance."

"Where's mother?"

"In the garden—" Penn flew to the telephone. But Marsh Nichols stood still.

"I'd better tell you sir," he said gravely. "There was a woman with him. She's dead."

"Kelly! Oh, God!"

"A red-haired woman?" Gil asked.

"No—she isn't red-haired. She's blonde. A blonde, young blonde." Gil's face was stony and set. "Call the doctor," he ordered. "Hurry—I'll get mother and the car."

Penn's hand shook so she could hardly turn the dial. Dr. Kipratic was out. She tried one doctor after another desperately, finally telephoned a hospital, summoned an ambulance.

She ran out to the car, forgetting her coat, till Quincy came carrying it. Gil whirled the car out of the drive flinging gravel behind it.

"Turn right at the store," Penn said, "then turn left down that little south road. It's about a mile then."

Farm Bureau Role Told By Pitt County Officer

By NOEL LEE, JR., Second Vice-President Pitt County Farm Bureau

Today there is a growing awareness that matters pertaining to agricultural legislation carried out by Congress are not something vague and remote but a vital factor in the daily living of each farm family. It is becoming more and more apparent that farmers must have a strong farm organization in order to be assured of a fair share of the national income. The largest and strongest farm organization is the Farm Bureau, and it is the responsibility of each individual farmer to become informed concerning his farm organization and how he can go about getting his own ideas for improvement put into action. Through the Farm Bureau organization a farmer can help form public opinion and see his ideas carried into legislation benefiting not only himself but all his neighbors. Let's picture the Farm Bureau organization as a building with three floors. On the top floor which we will call the national level, is our American Farm Bureau Federation. From here go Farm Bureau representatives to meet with every committee in Washington, D. C., that has anything to do with agricultural legislation. These representatives fight for the wishes of the majority of the farmers in the nation, who let their wishes be known at the annual national convention in the form of resolutions. On the next floor of our imaginary building is the state level, or our North Carolina Farm Bureau Federation. Through this level passes the thinking of the majority of the member farmers in the state. County associations form resolutions from the thinking of individual farmers in the communities, and pass these resolutions on to the state committee to be passed on at the annual state convention. And on the bottom floor would be our county and community level. Individual farm men and women talk with their neighbors and discuss their problems. If they think they know of some way improvements could be made, or if they have some idea which they think would be beneficial to themselves and their neighbors, they carry their ideas to the county meetings where ideas are formed into resolutions. This individual member participation is the foundation of this entire structure and without it this structure cannot stand. This is the reason each individual member is so important.

This then is the framework of your farm organization which belongs to you, to be used by you, and unless you use it fully you cannot possibly receive your full benefits and advantages.

Injuries Fatal To Young Schoolboy

A 10-year-old fifth grade student died yesterday afternoon of injuries received while playing on the school ground at the Vanceboro Elementary School.

The youth's name was listed as Guy Laverne Allgood who died at the General Hospital about 3:30 p.m. yesterday. He was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Holly Allgood of Vanceboro Route 1.

Vanceboro Elementary School Principal Seth Henderson said that as far as he could determine the boy was swinging on the school playground and slipped out of the swing, falling on his arm, breaking it. The principal said the youth was brought to his office.

"When I saw him I could see it was a pretty bad break and that was all it appeared to be," Henderson stated.

The elementary school principal indicated that he put the boy in his car and took him to the hospital in Washington. He noted that the youngster was conscious and he talked to him on the way to Washington.

Henderson stated that he stayed at the hospital until the injured boy's mother arrived and then left to return to school. The Allgood youth died about 15 minutes after his departure, Henderson said. Allgood was a transfer student and attending the Vanceboro school for the first time. He was reported to have died of internal injuries.
