Jarvis Memorial Church Scene Of Postas-Manning Wedding

Jarvis Memorial Methodist Church was the scene Sunday afternoon at 3:00 o'clock of the wedding of Miss Shirley Brown Manning, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Burt C. Manning of Greenville, and John Roberts Postas, son of Mr. and Mrs. John J. Postas of Franklin, New Jersey.

The Rev. W. M. Howard officiated at the double ring rites. Prior to the ceremony, Miss Janet Watson of Greenville, organist, and Miss Denyse McLawhorn of Winterville, soloist, presented a program of wedding music. Among the selections played by Miss Watson were "Meditation" by Massenet, "Clair de Lune" by Debussy, "Reverie" by McDowell, "To a Wild Rose" by McDowell, Miss McLawhorn sang "I Love Thee" by Grieg, "Beloved, It Is Morn" by Aylward and "A Wedding Benediction" by Lovelace. The traditional processional and recessional by Wagner and Mendelssohn were used.

For the wedding the church was decorated with seven-branched wrought iron candelabra holding lighted cathedral candles, wrought iron baskets of white gladioli and pom pom chrysanthemums and sprays of conie and plumosus fern. Plumosus fern decorated the altar. The pews were marked with ties of white satin ribbon, the family pews being distinguished by garlands of white flowers and fern.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a dress of Chantilly type lace and tulle over satin fashioned with a portrait neckline outlined in iridescent sequins, and a fitted bodice with long sleeves ending in wedding points over the hands. The bouffant skirt of tulle swept into a full train. Her fingertip veil of silk illusion was arranged in two tiers from a tiara of lace and seed pearls. She carried a white satin-covered prayer book topped with a white purple-throated orchid tied with white satin streamers entwined with tuberoses. Her only ornament was a string of pearls worn by her mother on her wedding day.

Maid of honor was Miss JoAnn Manning of Greenville, sister of the bride. She wore a waltz-length gown of raspberry Crystalette featuring a shirred bodice and a full sweeping skirt. She wore a matching hat of raspberry velvet leaves with a circular veil and carried a cascade bouquet of orange azo carnations, bronze pom pom chrysanthemums and yellow tuberoses tied with streamers of coral satin and yellow tulle.

Bridesmaids were Miss Jennie Brown Worthington of Winterville, Miss Norma Williamson of Bethel, Miss Carol Lynn Johnson of Ayden, cousins of the bride; Miss Betty Lois McGowan and Miss Nancy Proctor, both of Greenville. Their dresses of coral Crystalette were fashioned similar to that of the honor attendant. They wore matching velvet bandeaux with veils and carried cascade bouquets of orange azo carnations, bronze pom pom chrysanthemums and white tuberoses tied with streams of coral satin and yellow tulle.

Flower girl was little Miss Linda Rouse of Greenville. She wore an off-shoulder gown of aqua net with a full ruffled skirt over a hoop. She carried an aqua satin and tulle covered basket of rose petals.

Best man for the bridegroom was Tom Swain of Greenville. Ushers were James Claude Williamson of Raleigh, cousin of the bride, Donald McGlohon of Winterville, Charles Klutz of Henderson, Charles Huffman of Thomasville and John Farley of Greenville.

For her daughter's wedding Mrs. Manning chose an afternoon dress of slate blue taffeta with matching accessories. Her corsage was of pink cymbidium orchids.

The mother of the groom chose a dress of blue lace over mauve taffeta and navy accessories. Her corsage was of pink cymbidium orchids.

Mrs. John Yanvary, aunt of the groom, wore an aqua dress with matching accessories and a corsage of red roses.

Mrs. T. H. Boykin directed the wedding.

Immediately following the ceremony the bridal couple received guests in the vestibule of the church.

For a wedding trip to unannounced points, the bride wore a navy costume suit of imported silk shantung with navy accessories. At her shoulder the pinned orchid lifted from her prayer book.

After their wedding trip the couple will be at home in Selfridge, Michigan, where the groom is presently stationed with the United States Air Force.

Mrs. Postas is a graduate of Greenville High School and attended East Carolina College where she completed her junior year.

Mr. Postas graduated from Franklin High School in New Jersey and attended East Carolina College where he received a B. S. degree in physical education. Upon graduation from East Carolina in November of last year he was commissioned a second lieutenant in the Air Force. He was employed by the Oak City schools as an instructor and coach in basketball and baseball until June of this year when he received his orders from the Air Force.

Rehearsal Dinner
Prior to the rehearsal Saturday evening Mr. and Mrs. E. F. Johnson, Miss Carol Lynn Johnson of Ayden, and Mr. and Mrs. Jimmie Rouse of Greenville entertained the Postas-Manning wedding party and out-of-town guests at dinner at Respos-James Barbecue House.

Guests were greeted by the hosts and the bridal couple-elect and invited into the dining room where a dinner in two courses was served.

The bride's table was centered with an arrangement of pink roses and lavender asters while the two side tables were centered with epernettes of pink begonia with pink tapers. Ivy tracers completed the decorations.

The bride-elect was presented a corsage of pink roses by the hosts.

Cake Cutting
Immediately following the Postas-Manning wedding rehearsal, Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Williamson, Miss Norma Williamson of Bethel, and Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Williamson, Jr. of Raleigh entertained the wedding party and out-of-town guests at a cake cutting at the home of the former.

Guests were greeted by Mrs. J. C. Williamson, Jr. and Mrs. Clara Roberson and invited into the dining room where the table was laid with a linen embroidered cutwork cloth and centered with the three-tiered wedding cake. At each end of the table were placed silver candelabra with white tapers.

After the bridal couple had cut the first slice, the cake was served by Mrs. Lucy J. Beasley, grandmother of the bride.

From one end of the table Mrs. Burt C. Manning, the bride's mother, served white block ice cream decorated with green wedding bells, and from an auxiliary table covered with a linen cutwork cloth Mr. and Mrs. E. F. Johnson served punch. Guests served themselves to a variety of bridal mints and nuts.

Wedding Breakfast
On Sunday at 12 o'clock noon Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Worthington and Miss Jennie Brown Worthington of Winterville honored the Postas-Manning wedding party and out-of-town guests at a wedding breakfast at the Woman's Club.

Guests were greeted by the hosts and the bridal couple-elect and invited into the parlor where Miss Jennie Brown Worthington served punch, cheese straws and potato chips from a table covered with a linen cutwork cloth and centered with an arrangement of white gladioli and asters.

For the remaining two courses of the breakfast the guests were seated in the banquet room where the table was laid with a centerpiece of white gladioli and asters flanked by white tapers in crystal holders. Ivy tracers completed the decorations.

The bride-elect was presented a corsage of white carnations by the hosts.

Approximately 40 guests attended each of the pre-nuptial events.

Women In The Church

Two women educators, one American and one Chinese, have been acclaimed on the island of Formosa for an educational project they have been working upon quietly for several years and which has made an important contribution to the work of the National University and the National Teachers College, both in Taipei. Miss Anne Cochran, American missionary serving under the United Board for Christian Colleges in China, and Miss Lin Yu-keng, formerly on the faculty of Yenching University, Peiping, China, have produced a series of textbooks used in the Formosa schools, for the teaching of the English language. The books use the most modern knowledge in the teaching of languages. The authors have also taught hundreds of teachers-to-be who are now using their methods all over the islands of southeast Asia.

Dr. Marjorie Reeves, vice-principal of St. Anne's College, Oxford University, England, speaking at the National Christian Council's convocation on Christian higher education recently challenged colleges and universities to retain the balance between two primary purposes which she defined as "the almost timeless activity of the mind, withdrawn as far as possible from contemporary pressures and concerned as little as possible with anything 'useful,' and the vital social training of a generation of citizens." "These two great aspects of university education," she said, "are no longer held together in the context of Christianity. They have been falling apart during the past fifty years into irresponsible learning and irresponsible competence. When academic purposes no longer strike their roots deep into eternal things, they begin to grow poisoned fruits, and we shall never know real academic freedom until we bring both the individual and the community of learning under obedience to God." She urged educators to combat the growing belief that the sole purpose of knowledge is to give power over nature and man, since "such power, once acquired, can be used irresponsibly for any ends. Knowledge does give powerful power to serve the community—but to make it an instrument of an inordinate lust for power is to tread the gift of God in the mire."

Scientists estimate that from 10 to 15 per cent of all deaths throughout the world result from cancer.

Utilities Rates Still Need Study

The Reflector repeats an editorial statement it made not long ago:

It is time for the Greenville Utilities Commission to again give careful consideration to the possibilities of lowering the electric rates for its more than 12,000 customers in its service area.

After studying the financial statement of the Utilities for the fiscal year which ended June 30, The Reflector suggested editorially the Utilities Commission should give consideration to lowering of rates.

The subsequent monthly financial statements for the Utilities Commission for the months of July and August, in our opinion, indicate the Utilities Commission is in a position which will enable it to give its customers the benefit of lower power rates.

For the month of August, the Greenville utilities showed an operating profit of $49,274 of which $42,100 was represented in net profit from sales of power on the city and rural electric systems of the utilities. Even after deducting from its net revenue of $49,274 for the month, fixed obligations of $11,875 which goes into the city's general fund and $8,333.33 for bond retirement, the utilities operations still showed a net profit of $29,066.24 for the month of August.

With its operations steadily growing, and its net profit steadily rising, The Reflector thinks the Utilities Commission should consider again a reduction of its electric rates. A big reduction in electric rates may not be possible, but even a small reduction in rates would mean a great deal to the thousands of customers which purchase power from Greenville Utilities.

In our opinion, the Utilities Commission is now in a position to reduce its power rates, and still maintain sufficient reserves to take care of maintenance of its lines, and expansions which will be needed in the future. The Utilities Commission should give the matter serious study.

A Tough Job For Parents And Drivers

Adults have the important responsibility of teaching young children the importance of obeying the rules of traffic safety. This burden, in the final analysis, falls to the parents.

In Greenville Saturday, one child was killed - the city's first traffic fatality of 1954 - and another was injured in separate accidents which occurred about half an hour apart.

In local police records, these were added to the list of several other traffic accidents this year in which small children have been injured while playing in the streets or crossing the street in the path of traffic.

Most parents, in these days of heavy automobile traffic, live in constant fear that their children will be run over by a car. Drivers likewise are possessed with the fear of striking a child who darts into the street in front of their cars.

As long as we have streets, children are going to play in them, despite lectures and paddlings from parents. Children are going to cross streets without looking, and at times with utter disregard for cars or other vehicles. This task of instilling in young children the importance of not playing in the streets, and taking painstaking precautions before crossing streets is indeed a difficult one. Yet it is a task which must be performed if we are to reduce the number of children injured or killed in such accidents.

At the same time, drivers must keep a sharper lookout for young children in an effort to avoid such accidents.

It's a tough problem to keep children out of the streets. It's a tough job to keep children from being hit by automobiles. It is a job which is going to take more emphasis on safety on the part of parents and drivers alike.

Ideas Boosting Sales

By ELMER ROESSNER
The big stores don't have all the answers. That was evident when executives of a number of small department stores gathered for a session of the National Retail Dry Goods Association and told what they do to promote more sales.

Ted Jacobs, of a store by that name in Lorain, Ohio, told how he puts on a fashion show every year. Admission fees go to charity and the benefiting organization whoops it up—but sales volume always rises after the show.

One year, Mr. Jacobs invited wives of four Cleveland Indian players. Fifteen showed up, several volunteered to model fashions and the stunt kicked up so much excitement that a big Cleveland store was quick to copy it.

Fashion shows also keeps Wrubel's, of Middletown, Conn., in the public eye, Arthur Wrubel said. His fashion shows hit the road; they will play wherever there is a worth-while cause and a good audience. Experience and collapsible equipment enables his team to put on a show with un-rehearsed volunteer models one evening and have all gowns back in stock by 10 a.m. the next morning.

Harold Freedlander, of H. Freedlander Co., Wooster, Ohio, has a show, too, but it is a private one for employees. Each salesperson is invited to put on a five-minute show of fashions in her department. It gets everyone thinking about the selling points of their goods.

A "country fair day" is an annual promotion of Metzler's, Unlontown, Pa., William J. Metzler said. On the day, every employee shows up in jeans, plaid shirts, red bandanas and wide straw hats; a rube band parades around town, every so often marching in the front door of the store and out the back. Bargains and contests are featured. The top prize one year was a pig named Lulu Belle. The costs, outside newspaper advertising run around $100.

An annual blanket sale is the backbone of promotion for the W. J. Ruggles Co., of Towanda, Pa., Brewster A. Ruggles related. From Easter to June it promotes a single brand of blankets on a "blanket club" plan; prices are cut and payments are made on installments. The blankets, fully paid for, are delivered in October. The promotion has been repeated for 20 years; it not only sells a lot of blankets but it adds new customers.

Naturally, many of the ideas concerned Christmas. William F. Schaefer, of F. H. Schaefer & Co., Westfield, N. J., said his store had kept careful records of evening sales over the years and now can tell exactly what evenings it pays to stay open. Jack Luchsinger, of Sweeney & Newins, Pat-chogue, N. Y., said many small merchants make the mistake of curtailing advertising when Christmas crowds start pouring in. He said his store has swelled profits by stepping up advertising at the time people are willing to spend money, and by featuring sales in the midst of the holiday hurry-burly.

PREPAYMENT PLAN ALTERNATE FOR GUARANTEED ANNUAL WAGE
Several corporations are considering a "prepayment plan" to meet employees' demands for a guaranteed annual wage, Prentice-Hall reports.

Demands for C.A.W. rise from irregular employment, as a rule. Under this plan, when an employee works less than 40 hours in a week he would be paid for 40, the excess being considered an advance, or a loan, against payment for overtime in rush periods. It would work, of course, only when the average work-week over a year was close to 40 hours.

Prentice-Hall warns that the reverse procedure—that is, holding short overtime payments until short weeks—isn't allowed under the law.

One Way To Clear The Court's Backlog Of Cases

Judge Joseph W. Parker, consciously or unconsciously, pointed one way last week to at least a partial solution to North Carolina's problem of too many court cases and too few Superior Court terms in which to try them.

Judge Parker began hearing a long case on Thursday in spite of the fact it was quite apparent the case could not be completed by Friday and the court would have to hold a Saturday session. In far too many instances which we have observed, judges and other court officials have shown a strong preference for adjourning a court term one or two days early rather than risking the possibility of having to hold Friday night or Saturday sessions.

More of the spirit of devotion to duty, and willingness to attend to the court's business of trying cases - as evidenced by Judge Parker here - could go a long way toward alleviating the pressure on the Superior Courts of the various counties of the state.

We are not advocating that Saturday sessions of Superior Court become a regular practice. We are advocating, however, that judges show more inclination to clear up the business at hand - as Judge Parker did - rather than postpone cases in order to adjourn court early.

The court dockets of North Carolina's Superior Courts are crowded with both civil and criminal cases. The backlog of cases has caused no little concern to the people of the state in the past few years.

The diligence with which Judge Parker has set about clearing up the cases on the calendars of civil terms of Pitt Superior Court over which he has presided may well be taken as an example for other Superior Court judges of the state.

Big Soviet Fleet Goes To Sea

By RAY TUCKER
NAPLES—Russia's powerful, postwar naval fleet has recently taken to sea for the first serious test of warships specially designed to challenge historic Anglo-American control of supply lines vital to the Western nations in event of war.

The Kremlin's military strategists know from bitter experience that Russia was spared final defeat at Stalingrad in 1944 only by the weapons, transport and supplies which the United States shipped through the Mediterranean, Indian Ocean and Suez Canal. They realize, too, that the NATO nations would be helpless against a Red invasion of Western Europe without a similar stream of material from Detroit, Pittsburgh and California's aircraft plants.

As a result of that experience, the Soviet now has more and far better naval weapons than Hitler did when he boasted that "American aid and American troops will never reach Europe."

REDS' MODERN NAVY—Thus, contrary to Moscow's retort, the British Admiralty and the Navy spokesmen at Washington were not simply setting the stage for larger appropriations in their recent analyses of the Red's strength on the water. But unless Parliament and Congress do provide more funds within the next few years, Russia's armada, which has been built since the end of World War II, will exceed and excel the combined naval forces of NATO members.

The Anglo-American fleet, with the exception of a few aircraft carriers and modernized cruisers, will then be growing old. Moreover, Russia's naval aircraft, shore-based because she has no carriers, is larger than the combined British and American total.

It has been charged that Roosevelt and Truman turned over control of Central Europe and China to the Reds at Yalta and Potsdam. Unless President Eisenhower and Prime Minister Churchill reverse the current economy trends, naval wise, they will be accused of surrendering domination of the seven seas to the Soviet.

TRYING OUT SEA-FIGHTERS—There are many signs that the Russians are trying out their water wings in the very year when they have won so many diplomatic triumphs on land—in Indo-China, Geneva, Brussels and the French Parliament. Their submarines, destroyers and cruisers have been sighted in numerous strategic spots, apparently to accustom officers and crews to various weather and navigational conditions.

Another purpose is to make new and modern maps of areas where Russian vessels have not been since the 1917 Revolution.

Within the last year, for instance, Red warships have shown up in the North Sea, north of Scotland, above Murmansk, in the Bering Straits off Alaska, in the Indian Ocean, and along the coast of China and Asia from Korea to Ceylon. Their entry into the important Mediterranean waters is anticipated any day now by the Allied Naval Command's Headquarters at Naples.

It is believed that only Moscow's desire to improve relations with Turkey and Middle East nations has kept the Red fleet from moving through the Dardanelles into more open and bluer water than the Black Sea.

ALLIES MUST CONTROL CHANNELS—It is considered significant that all these narrow channels must be controlled by the Allies, and closed to the Russians, in order to pool democratic strength in a possible conflict with the Russian Communists and their associates.

There have been many unreported "incidents"—firing on neutral freighters, on planes and on shore establishments—and Allied experts look for more embarrassing occurrences from the Red's new activity on the waters of the world.

"Russia has the fastest cruisers in the world," says an Allied naval commander here. "They are outbuilding the U.S. in every category except aircraft carriers. Their submarines—about 400—outnumber the NATO nations' total. They have more high-speed cruisers—fast, heavily designed and big gunned—than any other nation.

"Most important of all, the warships are ready for fighting—none is in mothballs!"

Insurance, For Any Expediency, Seen A Big 'Bargain'

By ROBERT W. BABSON
NEW BOSTON, N.H. — I believe in insurance—fire, life, and casualty—yes, and I include hurricane, accident, and sickness insurance. I especially like the Blue Cross and Blue Shield. Everyone should subscribe to these.

BUY ENOUGH DIFFERENT KINDS OF INSURANCE
A week or two ago, Greater Boston and Eastern New England were swept by a hurricane. Within about one hour, $100,000,000 of property values was wiped out. A portion of this—such as beautiful trees—can be insured only at very high premium rates, but damage to buildings, life, etc., can be protected at reasonable insurance costs. (Incidentally, uninsured loss of trees can be deducted from your income tax.)

Since this hurricane I learn that very few people carry hurricane insurance. In fact, most people do not know what their insurance covers. For instance, YBEHA LBOYL insurance covers. For instance, manufacturers insure their F.O.B. goods until delivered to the merchant's nearest railroad station. The merchant insures these goods after they arrive at his store; but very few carry policies which protect the goods while being trucked between station and store. Be sure you have the right insurance, and enough of it.

READ YOUR POLICIES
Whether you are a manufacturer or a storekeeper, or a humble citizen, you should read your policies. Get them all out tonight and read them. Anything not plainly covered will not be covered. Especially read what is in fine print. This advice strongly applies to accident and health insurance sold at low rates. An executor may try to collect on a $10,000 accident policy and find that the accident must be in a train wreck—in order to collect. In fact, one company which sells accident insurance at very low rates insists you must be seated in a train when killed in order for your executors to collect.

Sickness insurance should be checked. A long list of diseases of which you have never heard are mentioned; but you may find no mention of heart disease, cancer, or some very common causes of death. I forecast that the time is coming when these accident and sickness policies will be compelled by law to state in large type what they DO NOT cover. In the meantime I beg that all my friends read their policies. If these policies do not cover every reasonable hazard you can think of, get covered. For instance, if your wife should put a person's eye out with an open umbrella, are you insured against its costing you $20,000?

GET LETTER FROM YOUR AGENT
Your insurance agent wants to be one of your best friends. He is truly interested in your welfare. Tell him you want everything covered and get a letter from him stating that everything, unless he mentions it in this letter to you, is covered. One other thought. In most states only perfectly sound insurance companies are allowed by law to operate; but this is not true in all states. Furthermore, some unscrupulous companies get around the law by operating by mail from a careless state.

You cannot be expected to study the financial strength of each company; but you can insist upon selecting only well-known companies which have been in business a long time. Any company which has advertised consistently in your local paper should be safe. This is a good test, especially if the advertisement reads that the company has been approved by the Insurance Commissions of all the leading states.

Around Capitol Square

By LYNN NISBIT
LOCAL — Big time newspaper and radio commentators seek to read national, sometimes international, significance into almost every business development or political election. When Kerr Scott won the nomination for the United States Senate in North Carolina and Estes Kefauver won in Tennessee, the big-timers said it meant a definite trend in the South toward liberalism. When Allan Shivers won re-nomination for Governor in Texas and Herman Talmadge's protege won in Georgia, the big-timers were confused in trying to explain the reversal of their widely proclaimed "trend."

Results of the election in Maine and primaries in a number of States this week are used as pieces to fit into the jib-saw puzzle of national trends. The fact is that while all of these election results will influence national and international policy, the motivating causes in every instance were local—and in too many instances largely personal.

Scott won in North Carolina, Kefauver in Tennessee, Shivers in Texas and all the other candidates in all the States because of issues directly related to the personal lives of the voters in the precincts. A few years ago a lot of people wondered why a New York congressional district would keep Ham Fish in Congress, and why Louisiana would send Huey Long to the Senate. North Carolinians would not let Joe McCarter go to the Senate, but Wisconsin voters did—and attempts to recall him failed—solely because of local conditions.

Whatever the outcome of the election may be in the 9th and 10th congressional districts in the State, the results will be attributable to local and personal conditions rather than to national affairs. The same rule applies to the unusual conditions prevailing in South Carolina with respect to election of a Senator to succeed the late Senator Burnett Maybank.

COMPLICATED — The South Carolina situation is about as messed up as it is possible to get in politics. Senator Maybank had been nominated without primary opposition to succeed himself, but his nomination had been certified according to State law. He died three days before the statutory expiration of time for certification of a candidate. His death occasioned an immediate vacancy in the Senate and a vacancy on the general election ballot.

Governor Byrnes announced he would not appoint to fill the vacancy until after the Maybank funeral, and if a primary were called he would appoint the primary nominee. The State Democratic committee the day of the Maybank funeral, discovered that under the law of South Carolina a nominee had to be certified before midnight that date. Majority of the committee decided that the primary course was impossible under the statutes. The committee nominated Edgar Brown, veteran political leader and as nearly a "political boss" as South Carolina had had in 30 years. But Brown had twice sought the senatorial nomination in primaries and failed. However, he had stayed with the republic Democratic party in 1948 when then Governor Strom Thurmond was the States Rights candidate for President carried South Carolina's electoral vote and again in 1952 when Governor Byrnes joined in efforts to take the State into the Eisenhower Republican column—and came close to succeeding.

Governor Byrnes declined to be the committee nomination and appointed for the interim until next January another man to the Senate, and ex-Governor Thur-

There Was Gina & Norma Jean

(By SAUL PETT)
(For Hal Boyle)

NEW YORK (AP)—All in all, it was a pretty rough week. First, I interviewed Gina Lollobrigida, who is getting weary of being known as the Marilyn Monroe of Italy. Then I saw Norma Jean Baker, who will never grow weary of being known as THE Marilyn Monroe of the United States and all its possessions beyond the seas.

Gina wore a low-cut black dress. Marilyn wore a low-cut white dress. It was a sexy symphony in burlesque. Gina has big brown eyes. Marilyn has big blue eyes. Mine are a tantalizing tangerine.

Which is the more attractive? There is little room to choose between them. Gina has the prettier face—it has a fragile, doll-like quality. Marilyn has the more impressive figure. But it's close. Gina's structure is still not the kind you'd kick out of your tennis court.

She was surrounded by press agents, interpreters and her husband, Dr. Mirko Skofic, a poker-faced man with a wry sense of humor. He is also her manager. He finds less and less time for medicine.

"When Gina was a smaller actress," Dr. Skofic said, "I was a bigger doctor. Now she's a bigger actress, I'm a smaller doctor."

A press agent was beating my ears. "She's really a very talented woman," he said. "She sings, you know. And she sketches her own dresses."

"Yes, she sketches them after they're finished," said her husband.

In halting but charming English, Gina explained that she is weary of being compared with Marilyn Monroe she is weary of having American reporter never ask for measurements. They ask about her art.

College Band Will Be Largest Yet Formed

East Carolina College will have during 1954-1955 the largest band in the history of the college. An 80-member group has already been organized this fall and begun rehearsals under the direction of Herbert L. Carter, faculty member of the department of music.

Gene Ward of Edenton will serve as president of the band this school year. Other officers include Maurice Hilburn of Whiteville, vice president; and Jean Mobley at Williamston, secretary-treasurer.

William Speight, a freshman music major from Roanoke Rapids, has been announced as new drum major with the band. Majorettes are Carolyn Johnson of Elizabeth City, Rhoda Faye Peel of Williamston, Peggy Vause of Tarboro, Betty Jean Daveport of Tarboro, and Patricia Taylor of Williamston.

During the fall quarter the East Carolina Band will make a number of public appearances at football games by the college Pirates. In addition to playing at home games, the group will go to Burlington for the East Carolina-Elon game.

Among attractions planned for these athletic events will be a show featuring tunes by Glenn Miller and one based on various popular TV programs.

On Homecoming Day for Alumni, October 16, the East Carolina Band will be host to several high school bands from towns in Eastern North Carolina and these groups will participate in the gala parade to be staged in honor of guests on the campus.

Last year, with Mr. Carter as director, the East Carolina Band made thirty-three public appearances and a two-day tour of towns in this section of the state.

Three Tornadoes In Pennsylvania

DUSHORE, Pa. (AP) — Three hit-run tornadoes struck near three communities in North Central Pennsylvania last night, knocking down power lines, damaging roofs and causing extensive damage to at least two farms. No casualties were reported.

State police at the Dushore Barracks said the storms "seemed to set down on two farms and then take off again."

They left behind a splintered woodshed and silo, levelled pig pens and fallen trees. One cow was killed.

The weather bureau at Harrisburg said state police reported the three tornadoes through its station at Williamsport. A spokesman said the bureau had no information of its own about the storms.

An American Airlines DC6, carrying 74 passengers on a flight from Chicago to New York, reported running into turbulent weather over western Pennsylvania. The plane turned back and landed at Cleveland after baggage was spilled from racks onto seats and two women suffered minor injuries.

Another plane, a Trans Canada Airlines flight from New York to Toronto, returned to Idlewild Airport after its pilot said he was unable to get around thunderstorm in Pennsylvania and New Jersey.

Work Begins On ECC Publication

East Carolina College students received this past weekend the first issue for the 1954-1955 term of their weekly newspaper the "East Carolinian." Mrs. Faye B. O'Neal of Selma, senior, is editor; and Emil Massad of Benson, also a senior, is business manager.

Organizational meetings of the staffs of the newspaper and the "Buccaneer," college yearbook, were held last week; and plans for the 1954-1955 term were begun. A large group of new students at the college volunteered for work on each of the two publications. Appointments to unfilled positions on the editorial and business staffs will be announced at an early date.

Jane Kanoy of Thomasville and Mildred Reynolds of Columbia as editor and business manager, respectively, hold top positions on the "Buccaneer." Miss Reynolds served with Thomas Lupton of Greenville as editor of the yearbook during 1953-1954. For the first time in several years the editors of both publications are women.

West Chester filled the air with leather - one carrying the touch-down stamp - for three quarters Saturday night and held on to edge East Carolina's footballers 6-4.

Neither antagonist could muster enough offensive steam to match the humid, 80-degree plus temperature, and for the most part it was all defense.

Some 7,000 partisan fans sat in shirt sleeves and watched two Pirates fumbles in the third period converted into a touchdown by West Chester's Rams.

3rd Quarter Action

Toppay Hayes, Buc halfback, returned the second half kickoff 40 yards to the 47-yard line. Here, the Pirates' offensive sputtered and once again bogged down. Attempting to punt on fourth down, Fullback Bobby Gay was thrown for a 15-yard loss to the Pirates own 44.

West Chester Quarterback John McAneny was thrown for a six-yard loss on the first play by Guard Paul Popov. A 15-yard penalty for clipping set the Rams farther back and Joe Chibbert, guard, punted beautifully 50 yards to the 20. On the first play from scrimmage, Gary Mattocks, reserve quarterback, fumbled attempting a handoff and West Chester Co-Captain Bob Janick fell on the pickoff at the 23. The Rams pushed down to the 13-yard line, but Halfback Walt Buechele lost the ball going through the line and Buc Co-Captain Willie Holland recovered.

Hayes picked up two yards over tackle and disaster struck again. Mattocks was collared taking the snap from the center and fumbled. West Chester Guard Jim Mears came up from the bottom of the pile with the ball on the 15-yard line.

Rams Score

Lee Royer, Ram fullback, lost one yard through the middle. McAneny faded back coolly and bulleysted Dick Paciaroni all alone in the end zone. Center Eli McLaughlin's conversion attempt was partially blocked and wide to the right. East Carolina 0, West Chester 6.

Bucs' Safety

Tom Allsbrook, Pirate halfback, booted the Rams in a hole after the ensuing kickoff. His 57-yard punt carried down to West Chester's five-yard line. A 15-yard clipping penalty moved the leather back to the 2. Chibbert's kick from five yards in the end zone was blocked by Tackle Charles Smith. The fleeting pigskin squirted out of the end zone before Smith and Center Gaitner Clime could fall on it and the Pirates were credited a safety. East Carolina 2, West Chester 6.

With five minutes remaining in the fourth quarter, Coach Jack Boone's charges ignited a drive from their own 20 that paraded with authority to the goal line, only to have an offside penalty invalidate the score.

Chibbert punted to the Pirates 20. Hayes gathered the ball in and fought his way to the 48-yard line. Boyd Webb, quarterback, sent an aerial to Emo Boado for 34 yards to the Rams' 14-yard line. Webb hit Hayes with a toss for 10 yards to the 4 and a first down.

Boado crashed 3 yards to the one. Webb sneaked several inches. On the next play, Boado rammed through right tackle for the score, but ECC was offside.

Webb attempting to pass from the five was thrown back to the 16-yard line. A desperation toss intended for Hayes fell incomplete and West Chester took possession.

Bucs' Second Safety

With several minutes remaining, West Chester pulled a sandlot trick but it worked beautifully. The ball was lying on their own 6-yard line when McAneny on directions from Coach W. Glenn Killinger permitted himself to be tackled behind the goal line, making East Carolina a present of a safety. East Carolina 4, West Chester 6.

The Rams retained possession after the Pirates were forced to punt and ran out the clock with the ball resting on their five-yard line.

Next Saturday Will Unveil Clearer Football Outlook

By ED CORRIGAN

NEW YORK—It won't take Terry Brennan, the rookie Notre Dame football coach, long to find the potential of his first Irish machine—just one game, in fact.

The 26-year-old Brennan, who looks like Joe College himself, sends his squad against the University of Texas Saturday. The Longhorns are rated one of the top teams in the Southwest Conference and they looked very good, indeed Saturday in winning their opener from Louisiana State, 26-0.

Brennan has a rather thin squad and has commented that his main problem will be to develop a power back and to get some reserve strength in the line. He isn't a prophet of gloom as was his predecessor, Frank Leahy, so until he shows that he is joshing, he must be taken seriously.

Notre Dame was rated the top team in the country in the Associated Press' pre-season poll of sports writers and sportscasters. After last week's preliminary skirmishes, all of which followed form, this Saturday presents the first big afternoon of action in the new season.

Michigan State, co-favorite with Illinois for the Big Ten championship, plays Iowa in the NCAA's national television game of the day. While this one should go to the Spartans, off the advance dope, Iowa appears capable of making it close.

May carded an 80 Saturday and literally set the course ablaze with a 2-under-par 70 yesterday. His total was 150.

Other winners included Howard Waldrop, first flight; Percy Asby, second flight; and Tom Webb, third flight.

Dr. M. B. Massey was qualifying medalist. Scorers for the tournament were Charles Flye, Terrell Nichols, and C. W. Murray.

Marciano Rests On West Coast

LOS ANGELES—Heavyweight champion Rocky Marciano is taking it easy here until he undergoes minor surgery the latter part of the week for his ailing back.

His nose suffered a bit of a split during his title bout with Ezzard Charles last Friday night in New York. Charles was knocked out in the eighth.

The Rock plans to go to Arrowhead Springs Hotel at nearby San Bernardino today or tomorrow to await his date with the doctors.

As for his next opponent, Marciano said it is up to his manager, Al Weill, who is accompanying him on his current trip. Weill indicated it will be six months, maybe more, before the champion defends his title again.

Eppes Bulldogs Take 7-0 Win Over Beaufort Team

BEAUFORT—Greenville's Eppes High School Bulldogs defeated Beaufort High here Saturday night, 7 to 0, in the season's opening football game.

Punting featured the first quarter and the Bulldogs had trouble moving back Beaufort's husky forward line. In the third quarter, Fred Atterbridge, for Eppes High, took a fake kick for a 30-yard series of plays with Moore, Jernigan and Tyson alternately carrying the ball to Beaufort's 10-yard line, where Eppes fumbled.

In the fourth quarter, the Bulldogs started a 30-yard drive that ended in a fumble. With only four minutes left in the game, Ernest Cherry took an end-around for 32 yards. Then Atterbridge passed to Streeter for a touchdown. Tyson kicked the extra point. With two minutes to play, Brewington blocked a punt on the 40-yard line. Moore, Nichols and Tyson alternated in a last-minute drive that ended on the two-yard line to end the game.

Eppes coaches are planning for the opening conference football game with Rocky Mount High in Rocky Mount September 24. The Bulldogs are facing the strongest schedule since football was started at the school.

Saved His Career In One Evening's Work

By BOB THOMAS
HOLLYWOOD (AP)—How to conquer adversity in one quick lesson. The conqueror is Harry Belafonte, the sensational young singer. He saved his career in one evening.

It happened a couple of years ago in Las Vegas. Harry had made a small hit in a couple of ethnic night spots in New York with his singing of folk songs. Very high brow stuff. So some smart character booked him into Vegas, not realizing the difference between the smug Manhattan audiences and the pleasure seekers of the Nevada spas.

"I played the first show of the evening, and it was horrible," recalled Harry. "I don't mean they just didn't like my act; they were abusive. The orchestra members started snickering among themselves. The 'dese and dem' guys started to get threatening. I'm sure that if stoning had not been punishable by law I would have gotten it from the audience."

"I got mad, I didn't mind if they didn't like my act. That was their privilege. But I thought it was wrong for them to be hurling such abuse at me.

"I decided to salvage what I could. I had opened the show with a couple of old English folk songs. Naturally they fell flat. So I told my accompanist, Millard Thomas, to bring out some of the arrangements we had been saving.

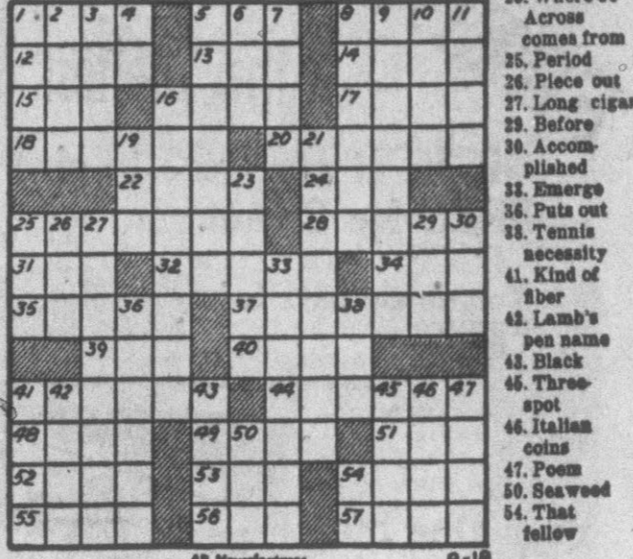

"We juggled the act completely. The reaction was entirely different, from the first song. The audience was enthusiastic, and we were the talk of the Las Vegas strip."

From then on, Harry was in. He played one of the leading roles in MGM's "Bright Road." He starred on Broadway in "John Murray Anderson's Almanac" and came back to Hollywood to play the lead in "Carmen Jones." He is embarking on a night club tour, having just closed at the Coconut Grove here.

A busy man, this Belafonte. But he was not always so. When he got out of the Navy after the war, he didn't know what to do. At first he helped his father as maintenance man for New York apartments. Harry enrolled at an actor's

He sought other jobs, like dyeing fabric for $37.50 a week. Then he had a chance to sing in a night club. It meant $75 a week for two hours' work a night, so he took it. He worked his way up to $250 a week at Martha Raye's club in Florida. Then he quit, and made folk songs his specialty.

Town Undertakes Big Inoculation

PITMAN, N.J. (AP)—Churches, police and civic organizations pitched in yesterday to help health authorities inoculate 1,682 children and expectant mothers in this southern New Jersey community with gamma globulin.

The mass inoculation was ordered Saturday night after four cases of polio were reported within a week. Seven doctors and five dentists, assisted by 25 registered nurses, completed the job in a little more than seven hours.

Piece Of Dead Muscle Brought Back To 'Life'

By ALTON L. BLAKESLEE
 Associated Press Science Reporter
 WOODS HOLE, Mass. (AP)—Here in the laboratory of a Nobel Prize winner you see a piece of dead rabbit muscle brought back to "life."

The strand of muscle tenses, contracts and performs work when it is bathed in a potent chemical. Then it relaxes when it is touched by a second chemical.

This means man has solved a few secrets of how our muscles manage to create motion.

But this seeming miracle in the laboratory is only a beginning to Dr. Albert G. Szent-Gyorgyi. He wants to know precisely how chemicals—from the food we eat and air we breathe—create motion, "the most fundamental sign of life."

Exactly what kind of engine is muscle tissue? What kind of fuel does it use, and how? How do different muscles—the muscles of the heart, the arms, or a woman's womb—differ in their mechanism of operation?

That knowledge could aid in combating heart disease, high blood pressure, muscular afflictions perhaps reduce the tragic loss of unborn babies through miscarriages.

This Hungarian-born scientist with blue eyes and touselled white hair, who won a Nobel Prize for his work on vitamin C, is on the trial of answers.

And Dr. Szent-Gyorgyi is impatient to get along with his studies—so much so he's just ordered a $40,000 scientific instrument spectrograph, without enough funds to pay for it.

"Maybe I will go to jail," he shrugs, "but I need it in my work. Somehow I hope we will find ways to pay for it."

In 15 years of research on the muscle engine, Dr. Szent-Gyorgyi found that muscles contract because they contain two special proteins, actin and myosin. When these two come together in the presence of the energy-supplying enzyme, ATP, the muscle contracts.

ATP means adenosine triphosphate. It is the "gasoline" which runs the muscle engine. Enzymes are accelerators of chemical reactions.

Dr. Szent-Gyorgyi and Dr. L. Lorand of Szent-Gyorgyi's group also have isolated another enzyme, ATP-CP, which makes a muscle relax.

From a refrigerator, Dr. Lorand took a thin transparent strand of muscle obtained from a long-dead rabbit and placed it in a beaker containing a salt solution. It lay long and straight. When a few drops of ATP were added, the string of muscle coiled and shortened to one-fifth its original size. He put another, thicker strand of muscle in a device so the muscle remained taut but could pull on one end of a delicately balanced lever. When the muscle was bathed in ATP, it tensed, pulling measurably on the lever. When ATP-CP was added, the muscle relaxed, the lever swung back to its original position.

"So now we know that actin and myosin come together and ATP makes the muscle contract," said Dr. Szent-Gyorgyi. "But still we are only describing the machine. We must learn how the engine is all put together, then we will know how it works."

"Only then can we really understand the muscle in health and in disease, and perhaps learn how to overcome disease."

"We must study smaller and smaller pieces of the engine. We have split one piece, myosin, into two pieces, and split one of those parts into still smaller pieces, hoping to learn how it all works."

The potent eye of the electron microscope is one aid showing tiny fibers of which muscles are made.

"Research is four things," Dr. Szent-Gyorgyi says. "Brain with which to think. Eyes with which to see. Machines with which to measure. And fourth, money. It is brains and eyes which are most important. You can have too many machines, so many you fail to use your brains and eyes. A few weeks ago I saw no need for a spectrophotometer. Now I know I cannot live and work without it." So he ordered it.

What great or useful things may come from solving the puzzles of the muscle engine?

"Benjamin Franklin flew a kite to learn some basic facts about electricity long before anyone dreamed of electric lights. When someone asked him what good the new knowledge was, Franklin replied: 'What good is a baby?'"

"Who can say what we will learn. It is not possible yet to make any promises. We can only agree with Franklin: 'What good is a baby?'"

Disappeared To Study Lessons

BOSTON (AP)—Miss Nancy Plummer, 23, a Radcliffe College student from Warren, Pa., has admitted that her story of being kidnapped, doped and robbed was a hoax.

The pretty graduate student was the object of a wide search from last Wednesday until late Saturday night. An alert patrolman spotted her in a garage.

Her first story was that she had been taken away against her will. Later, she said she had "blacked out" in a department store, but she also changed that story.

Under questioning by police, she said that actually she drew 16 books from the school library and took a train to Portland, Maine, for some quiet study in a hotel.

CHAPTER / FIFTY-FIVE

THE SENATOR was silent on the short drive to the airport, and fell asleep almost as soon as the plane took off. When they landed in St. Louis it was still dark. A bitter wind had risen, with a fine sleet rain, and the plane for Washington was delayed for more than an hour.

"Bad flying weather," commented the senator as they went aboard.

"Oh, we'll be out of it in 20 minutes," said the stewardess cheerfully. "It's a local condition—extends some distance west, but going east we'll escape from it."

"You let me sit by the window," the senator said, when they were directed to their seats. "Your coat's thin, and that glass can get cold."

"It was good we got this big plane," Penn said with relief. "That little one we just left would be rough riding in this weather."

"Baby—" he had not called her baby in years and Penn's throat cramped suddenly. "I wish I'd never met Josh Henning or got ambitious to be a big shot in Washington or make a lot of money, because none of it was any good. They've put their mark on me. Now I'll always be a man that nobody quite believes in—except you and Claudia."

"Uncle Ethel, you don't have to tell me any of this!" she replied.

"I've got to tell you, Penn. I've got to get it out in the open where I can look at it myself. On that Nichols business—Josh Henning had a piece of property up in Baltimore that he couldn't get rid of, and he sold Nichols on the idea of going into war production—and I got in on it, too. I even got a cut on the profit Josh made from the sale of that building. I used that money to buy up Nichols' mortgage on that house when things broke wrong for him. Not that we meant for them to break wrong—I did what I could, but I couldn't keep my promises. But there you have the picture—the kind of fellow I see myself to be, now—a hollow shell, protestations of honor and integrity outside corruption inside. And I don't know just where I got on the wrong track. Now I've got to figure some way to work it out—so I can live with myself again."

Penn felt sick and lost. Some of this she had half-way suspected, dreaded, fended off in her own mind with loyal desperation. Now she felt helpless to lift even a little of the weight of depression and self-reproach that bent his gray head, put desolation into his eyes. She was glad when the Washington monument loomed dimly in the east.

Then the stewardess was moving up the aisle.

"Fasten your seat belts immediately, please," she ordered at every seat. "We may have a rough landing."

Long afterward Penn learned that the landing wheels had refused to come down. The plane crashed down, bounding upward, lurching sideways—things shattering.

There was a tinkle of glass on the senator's side, and she glimpsed blood on his white hair briefly before a blow on her head stunned her so that she knew nothing more.

It was Kelly she saw first. Kelly was sitting by her bed, her strong white hands folded quietly in her lap, but she got up quickly when Penn opened her eyes and choked a little. Penn closed her eyes again swiftly, as a wince of pain from the light of day struck her eyeballs.

Kelly's hand was cool on her face. Her voice was calm and even. "Take it easy honey. You'll be all right."

"Hospital," murmured Penn through swollen lips, glimpsing a pale green wall through her lashes, a leather door that wavered. "You're all right," insisted Kelly. "Just lie still. Does your head hurt?"

Penn dragged a hand up with difficulty, touched the bandage on her forehead, closed her eyes again.

"It was just a bad bruise. It won't leave any scar," Kelly said. "But you did get a concussion and you've been slow coming out of it."

"What day is this?" Penn mumbled.

"Lie still, Penn. They don't want you to move. This is Sunday. Sunday! Penn opened her eyes wildly, flinched, covered her face with her hands. A bandage there, too, on her wrist. Sunday! Friday morning that plane had come down.

Then a nurse came and from out of the shadows an authoritative bass voice boomed. "The important thing now is absolute quiet."

She heard Kelly say, "We're trying, doctor."

The nurse came close to the bed, there was a dab of coolness on Penn's arm and a sting and presently the darkness closed in. When it lifted there were shadows where the green wall had been and only a little pool of light under a shaded lamp.

Penn moved her hands and gasped a little, and instantly a man's strong brown hand was at her wrist. Her eyeballs were hot and dry and she moved them slowly upward, past a row of buttons on a white coat, tried to focus her gaze on a face that blurred and wavered.

"Oh!" she whispered.

"It's me," said Marsh Nichols, "but don't move or they'll chase me out."

"Oh," she said again.

"I work here now, Nights." He straightened the sheet and gave her a sip of water. It was warm and tasted druggy but it was wet and her mouth was horribly dry.

"I rode the ambulance that brought you in. They let me come up here—special privilege—but don't move or try to talk."

"Hungry," she whispered.

He reached across her pillow and pressed the call button. Presently a starched, middle-aged nurse came in.

"Patient says she's hungry," Marsh told her.

"Well, well! After all that glucose?" The nurse fingered Penn's pulse. "Better—much better. But you've got to be still a while. You got a bad bang on the head. I'll see what I can do about nourishment. Some hot tea, maybe."

"How about hot milk?" Marsh asked.

"Might not be able to keep it down. You'd better get out of here, mister. Even if you are Dr. Kirkpatrick's fair-haired boy, you're supposed to be working. They'll be loaded up downstairs. Always haul them in on Sunday night."

Marsh gave Penn's shoulder a little pat. "See you tomorrow, Be good." He was gone.

"Nice chap," said the nurse. "Works here—night orderly on emergency—goes to school day times. I don't know when he sleeps. I'll see what the doctor says about a little hot tea. Any pain down here?" She gave Penn's stomach a poke.

Penn winced and whimpered. "Nasty bruise," said the nurse. "Those safety belts—far from being safe. Don't you move till I come back."

Penn did not sleep again. She lay staring at the green ceiling, trying to make her churning brain remember. Grandma—and the big blue dishpan, they came clear. But there was something else—something poignant, something she ought to remember, that would not emerge from the nightmare shadows.

After a long time somebody else in white, somebody silent and aloof came with a cup and feeding tube.

"One sip, then we'll see," said a remote voice.

Tea with milk in it. Penn liked her tea hot and clear, but it felt comforting, going down.

New Cars Show Growing Amount Of Horsepower

By DAVID J. WILKIE
AP Automotive Editor

DETROIT (AP)—Short cut to an argument with auto engine designers is to say they are engaged in a horsepower race.

Power output of the auto engine has been going up steadily during recent years. It will be even higher in 1955. The higher priced cars will have engines with horsepower ratings up to 265.

Lower down in the price class distinction there will be power increases, too. Engineers, disclaiming efforts merely to top their competitors in power output, say the objective is chiefly to improve engine operation.

They agree the average motorist rarely calls upon the full power potential of his car engine. But they also insist a 100 horsepower engine cannot function as smoothly or as efficiently as the 200 horsepower unit.

Whether the steadily growing horsepower reserve is an invitation to speed on the highway also is disputed by the engine designers. Occasionally an industry expert will describe the higher horsepower engine as a factor for safety, including the power to pass another car in an emergency.

Not too well explained is whether such an emergency would be real or the result of one speed law violator trying to pass another. There will be three and possibly four new car engines next year rated at more than 260 horsepower. With varying modifications the power output of these engines can be stepped up to well above 300 horsepower engines for stock cars.

One obvious thing about the extremely high power engines is that they will be restricted for many years to the higher priced models. But one of the surest things about the engines in other models is that their power output never will be reduced.

The upsurge in power output has no actual connection with the effort of piston-type engine designers to keep ahead of the proponents of the automotive gas turbine engine. Models of the latter type engine have been demonstrated by a couple of car makers but they still are entire experimental. They do not threaten to replace the piston-type engine in the near future.

But all the engine research is not aimed at increasing horsepower. Just about as much effort currently is being devoted to advancing the compression ratios of engines in several of the horsepower ratings.

Compression ratios are factors in every effort to increase fuel economy. But as the compression ratios were increased they brought other problems, many of them related to ignition.

Combustion chamber deposits have given both the auto and petroleum industry engineers concern in recent years as compression ratios moved up. The automotive engineers still are widely apart on the question of whether fuel additives provide the complete answer to combustion problems.

WHEN COLDS MAKE HIM CRY —

Give Your Baby Relief that DOES MORE THAN WORK ON CHEST!

When a cold makes your child miserable, he needs a medication that does more than just work on his chest. He needs Vicks VapoRub — because it acts two ways at once:

1. VapoRub relieves muscular soreness and tightness, stimulates chest surfaces.
2. At the same time, VapoRub's special medicated vapors also bring relief with every breath. You can't see these vapors, but your child can feel them as they travel deep into the nose, throat and large bronchial tubes. Congestion starts breaking up. Coughing eases. Soon he enjoys warming relief that lasts for hours.

So when colds strike, use the best-known home remedy to relieve such suffering — Vicks VapoRub.

Rub on Relief . . . Breathes in Relief

This is important!

Your right to drink beer or not—as you choose—is a basic American Freedom—guaranteed by the constitution.

Any time that freedom-of-choice is taken away from you in the guise of local prohibition laws you lose something of your American heritage.

By self-regulation and "Legal Control" our industry is doing everything it can to maintain and improve the orderly sale of beer and ale to those who desire it without offending those who don't.

Make no mistake about it — when you submit to pressure groups who vote to prohibit the sale of beer and ale, you automatically vote to give up one of our basic freedoms—"Freedom-of-choice" in our personal affairs.

No Buggy Parts At Buggy Firm

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP)—If your buggy needs repairs, please do not write to The Columbus Buggy Parts Co. It won't be able to help you. Although the name was retained, the firm went out of the buggy parts business years ago. It now handles auto parts. But, says Fred A. Wirthman, operator of the business, he still receives dozens of orders every year for parts for the old-time horsedrawn conveyance.

Doubling Women Faculty Members

SAN LUIS OBISPO, Calif. (AP)—California State Polytechnic College, largest agricultural and third largest engineering school in the western states, is doubling its women faculty members. For several years, Miss Ena Marston, an English instructor, has been the only woman teacher on the 3,000-acre all-male campus. Miss Virginia Wilson, former private secretary to business executives in Los Angeles and Santa Barbara, has been added to the 11-member English Department staff.

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP)—The stock market moved higher today in a moderate manner. Small losses dotted the list in the early afternoon and retarded progress.

The higher side of the market extended to around two points while losses were fractional. Most major divisions were higher on balance, but there was scarcely a single section of the market without its share of losers. Trading was lively and hit a pace around two and a half million shares for the day. That compares with two and a quarter million shares traded in Friday's higher market.

Shortly after the opening the ticker tape was momentarily swamped by heavy trading. It caught up again in a matter of two minutes.

Awarded $4,152 Damages In Case

Oliver Murphrey of Farmville, trading as Oliver Murphrey Transfer, was awarded $4,152.38 damages in Pitt Superior Court Saturday afternoon.

The jury's decision to award Murphrey the sum came as the climax of the civil case which consumed three days in Pitt Superior Court. Murphrey brought action for recovery for damages against M. L. Byrd trading as Byrd Motor Line as a result of the collision of two large trucks near Siler City last January.

It took the jury approximately 30 minutes to make its decision Saturday afternoon.

Hearing of the case began Thursday, and presiding Judge Joseph W. Parker ordered a night session of court Friday night and a rare Saturday session of court in order to finish the case.

The civil term of court adjourned about 4 o'clock Saturday afternoon after the jury returned its decision and Judge Parker affixed his signature to the judgment.

Club Fair Marks Meet Of 4-H Club On Friday

Main feature for the afternoon when the Winterville-Greenville 4-H Club met Friday was a club fair.

Assistant Home Demonstration Agent Josephine Cusick said this was the only 4-H club in the county to have held an individual fair for its own members.

Three boys and four girls in the club had articles they had made, grown or canned on display at the fair, which was held on the porch of the Wiley Waters home on the Winterville highway.

Roselyn Waters, Lois Simmons and Clara Ambrose displayed 28 articles of clothing and crocheting, while Alice Waters had seven quarts of canned fruits and vegetables on display.

Jimmy Hendrix showed corn and two azaleas he had grown from cuttings. Moye Waters showed corn and a dozen eggs he had gotten from his poultry chain chickens, and Monroe Waters displayed ornamental gourds and an ornamental pepper plant he had grown.

Visitors purchased a few of the articles displayed. Following the fair Mrs. Wiley Waters, the club leader, served refreshments, after which the groups held a business meeting.

At this meeting new club officers were elected. They include Jimmy Hendrix, president; Alice Waters, vice president; Lois Simmons, secretary-treasurer; Tommy Braxton, reporter; and Roselyn Waters, song leader.

Five new members were welcomed at the meeting. Jane Willis, Kathryn Winchester, Linda Hunning, Ginny Mumford and Mary Virginia
