First Study Class Is Taught By Mrs. E. Hirschberg

The women of Jarvis Memorial Methodist Church, St. James, and Wesleyan Service Guild held its first study Monday afternoon and evening.

The subject "The City," Text, "Man and God in the City" by Kenneth D. Miller. The sessions were well attended.

The afternoon class was taught by Mrs. Edgar W. Hirschberg. She took the group on an imaginary tour to New York, Chicago and many other cities pointing out many problems, why they go to the city and what happens to them. Many people there feel a sense of insecurity and are lonely and anxious. Many have lost the sense of value.

"The church and all Christian people though," Mrs. Hirschberg said, "can do much to help them to feel secure, and to let them know someone cares." She said the most neglected people in the city are the Negroes and foreigners.

The class will continue the study Monday afternoon, September 27, in the Fellowship Hall. Luncheon will be at 1:00, class 1:30-3:00 p.m. Leader, Mrs. Edgar W. Hirschberg, Evening leader, Miss Anne Mae Murray, Supper, 6:00, class 6:30-8:00 p.m.

An invitation is extended to all the women of other churches to join in the study. Call 3734 or 2082 for reservations.

Books and Stuff

News for tobacco lovers: The heady smell of the wonderful weed hereabouts these days, hasn't affected us so much that we haven't noticed a few of the more serious events in the publishing world. . . . Among them, most interesting to Southerners is "The South in American Literature," by Professor Emeritus Jay B. Hubbell of Duke University. The book has just been issued by the Duke University Press, and, according to our brochure, "treats Southern literature as an important and integral part of the intellectual life of the whole country," revising the estimates of certain Northern historians "who have pictured the slaveholding South as a semibarbarous region that could not possibly have any cultural importance." Our congratulations to Professor Hubbell, for putting those nasty Northerners where they belong. . . .

We got a dispatch this week about the Teen Age Book Club, consisting of junior and senior high school students from all over the country, who during the past academic year bought no less than 2,400,000 paperback books priced at 25 cents and 35 cents. . . . "Scholastic Magazine" does the organizing, and we were pleased to note that the teen-agers purchased their books voluntarily on a strictly individual basis—doing it, our informer tells us, "simply because they had discovered that reading is fun." We would like to assure local teen-agers—even in college—that reading certainly is fun, despite TV and not including the comics. . . .

Favorite titles among the teen-agers were divided among fiction and non-fiction, with animal stories, humor, mysteries, westerns and sports the most popular. Some of the titles on the teen-age best seller list: "Kon-Tiki," "The Great Houdini," "A Girl Can Dream," "Dennis the Menace," "The Sea Around Us"—that last one was a grown-up Book-of-the-Month Club selection, incidentally. . . . We think these titles indicate that the teen-agers have exceptionally good taste in their reading—better than they are given credit for. . . . And if anyone wants more information about the Teen Age Book Clubs, we'd be happy to supply it. . . .

This week's reviewer is Mrs. John Hassell, Jr., accessions librarian at the East Carolina College Library. The book she reviews, "Mary Anne," is a recent Book-of-the-Month Club choice and currently is on the very top of the N.Y. Times best-seller list. . . .

MARY ANNE, by Daphne DeMaurier. New York: Doubleday and Co., 1954.

"Mary Anne" has been termed a "semi-fictionalized biography" because its main outlines are authentic history. The pretty, pert, and ruthless heroine did live and was the famous amoureuse of the day who precipitated the scandal that shook the House of Commons and forced the second son of George II, the Duke of York, to resign as Commander-in-Chief of the British forces. . . .

A childhood spent in the slums of London with a spiritless mother who had known "better days," and an affable but gross and irresponsible step-father early taught Mary Anne those things which she did not want out of life. Convinced from observation that it was a "man's world," and that a woman could only realize her ambitions through cajolery, she decided with fierce determination that security should be hers regardless of how attained. . . .

A realist, Mary Anne decided that her husband's worthlessness would never change, and with this decision came another to take the easiest way open in that era to a woman of wit and charm and the necessary temperament. She took a house with a white front door. . . . the knocker a woman's head with one eye closed, and the seal upon the envelope of her note paper was the "clear imprint of Cupid riding an ass."

Mary Anne's house was centrally located in London, and soon through her wide circle of "friends" she captured the interest of the Duke of York who became her "protector" and gave her an elaborate establishment and income of her own. This income was not sufficient to maintain the two in the extravagant manner they enjoyed, and before long, Mary Anne was reminded of the lines from Wolsey's speech: "Put not your trust in Princes," when the Duke suddenly discarded her. . . .

Now that her claim to luxury, power, and a high place in society had abruptly ended, Mary Anne, spurred by revenge and greed, entered into a political coalition against the Duke, and Parliament investigated him. As a chief witness against him the fabulous Mary Anne drew "obscure" and whistles "he had felt no remorse in shaking off his mistress, and exposing her to poverty and infamy." Not once did the charming witness allow herself to be trapped or bring discredit to herself. . . .

This story of a clever and ambitious woman does not end with an account of the trial which, in spite of Miss du Maurier's excellent gift of narrative, grows tedious at times. Mary Anne continues to live by her own indomitable determination and more intrigue and litigation follow. . . .

Although "Mary Anne"—in the main—is exciting reading, one wonders if it will take a place along side "Rebecca," "Jamaica Inn," and "My Cousin Rachel." . . .

Choir Of Sixty Voices Is Formed

With a membership of sixty students, the East Carolina Choir has begun rehearsals for a series of programs to be given during the school year under the direction of Dr. Elwood Keister of the department of music. . . .

Approximately 150 singers recently auditioned for membership in the choir. Careful selection on the bases of musicianship and vocal talent resulted in the choice of sixty men and women students. . . .

Dr. Keister has announced that activities of the choir this school year will include the annual presentation during the Christmas season of Handel's "The Messiah"; a tour of twenty concerts to be given in towns and cities of the central section of North Carolina; radio and television programs; concerts in the Greenville area; and a final home concert at the college. . . .

In 1953-1954 the choir sang more than twenty concerts throughout the state before audiences estimated at ten thousand people. . . .

Among selections which the choir is now rehearsing is "Requiem" by the French composer Faure, which will be performed during the Lenten season. Other works include a group of carols from around the world, some well known spirituals, and a group of popular selections. . . .

"Great Discovery" a movie starring Colleen Townsend Evans will be shown tomorrow at 8 p.m. at Jarvis Memorial Methodist Church. . . .

She has appeared to give her Christian testimony in London and several other cities with Evangelist Billy Graham. She now spends a great deal of her time in Christian work. . . .

If you liked that one, here's some more consolation from the same source, called "Medical Properties and Uses" of Tobacco. . . . don't forget all these discoveries were made before 1840: "Dr. Fowler, in a distinct treatise, has adduced many cases in which an infusion of Tobacco was advantageously administered in dropsy. . . . Too Many Laws For Sec. Eure
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP)—Secretary of State Thad Eure received a letter asking for "two copies of every law that North Carolinians are supposed to abide by."
Eure, thinking of the room where the laws are stored tier upon tier to the ceiling, thought of a solution. "I'll invite him to come here and browse around our store room. Let him see the situation himself."

Actor Is Sued Over Drowning
SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP)—Actor Mel Ferrer and his wife have been sued for $60,000 damages because of the drowning of a child in their swimming pool.
John Lake Jr., 2, drowned in the pool at the Ferrers' home last Nov. 9. The boy's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Lake, allege that the Ferrers were negligent in not having the pool fenced.
The Lakes said in their suit, filed in Superior Court yesterday, that they had only recently moved into the neighborhood and did not know there was a swimming pool on the Ferrer property.

Teen-age Turnout

By Frances Adams and Mary Will Long

Conscientiously working and studying are only a part of the average Greenville high school student's life. After catching up on their studies, many students indulge in pleasant social activities. . . .

Gayle Clapp, junior, was hostess at a birthday dance at the Woman's Club Saturday, September 17. Many high school students helped Gayle celebrate her sixteenth birthday. In the course of the evening dancing and refreshments were enjoyed by the guests. Gayle received many lovely gifts including the latest fad, Bermuda shorts and knee socks. . . .

Speaking of Bermuda shorts—they have become quite the "craze" among the fairer sex of GHS. Before the opening of school by-passers of Fifth Street viewed the slightly GHS cheerleaders practicing in their unusual outfits. Margaret Russin, Stuart Bost, Ginger Lang, Ruth Young, Carol Ann Tadlock, Marietta Northrop, junior high cheerleaders, sported all colors in Bermudas with matching knee socks. While practicing cheers for approaching games, "Peaches" Larkins, Mary Will Long, Sara Adams, Jeri Lassiter, Lou Cheatham, Ann Hamric, Kathryn Johnson, Norma Basnight, Grayson Waldrop, kept in style by wearing their Bermudas. . . .

Since seniors have so much (spare) time while studying Shakespeare, they have undertaken the job of selling stationery to finance the school annual. The senior home room selling the most stationery will be rewarded in some way. . . .

Students aren't always the only people in the spotlight. All eyes popped out as a big, black Cadillac rolled up to the school Thursday. Looking closely, on-lookers discovered the plate didn't bear the familiar No. 1. No, it wasn't the governor. It was Mrs. Pick, a science teacher. As Mr. Ward James, senior English teacher, asked,

More Sportsmen Are Looking To N.C.

Each year North Carolina is growing in popularity among sportsmen across the nation who seek good hunting and good fishing.

The state's abundance and variety of fish and game is a major factor in the popularity of North Carolina among sportsmen. The good word is spread from one elated sportsman to another. The state's advertising program is doing its part to bring tourist sportsmen into the state.

Another factor, is the vast amount of "free" publicity given North Carolina's hunting and fishing through various magazine and newspaper writers. Many of these writers who have taken channel bass along the outer banks, shot ducks and geese along the sounds, hunted deer and bear from the coastal swamps to the mountains, taken largemouth bass from Tar Heel streams, feel compelled to pass on the thrill to readers across the nation.

Robert Ruark, native Tar Heel, writes a monthly column for one of the leading sports magazines, reminiscing about his younger days in Brunswick County and the hunting and fishing along the desolate stretches of sand along the southern North Carolina coast.

The names of Currituck, Pamlico, Matamuskeet are familiar to most duck and goose hunters in the Eastern United States as among the finest regions to hunt in quest of waterfowl. The name of Hatteras, which sends a chill of fear down the spine of many a seafaring man, sends a chill of excitement through many a fisherman far from North Carolina.

The fact that North Carolina's reputation as a hunting and fishing paradise is steadily mounting is looked upon with misgivings by many a native who fear out-of-state sportsmen may further deplete the supply of fish and game which has dwindled appreciably in the last quarter century.

Other native sportsmen, however, see the vast revenue which the state receives from visiting sportsmen as a vital factor in restocking streams and fields, creating more favorable habitats for migratory

Strength for the Day

By EARL L. DOUGLASS
FEW AND PRECIOUS

Three stone cutters were at work one day when a stranger approached. "What are you doing, my friend?" he asked the first stone cutter. "Cutting stone, can't you see?" replied the man sharply. The second man when queried as to his employment replied, "I am making a living." But the third stone cutter looked up and with beaming countenance declared, "I am building a cathedral."

They were all doing the same thing, but what a difference regarding the spirit in which they worked. To one man, work was a necessary evil. He was irritable, as his reply indicated. The second man was that of vast company which goes along doing what has to be done without asking any questions. He had to eat, and this was his best way of getting food.

But the third man was an artist. This third man had an object in view. He was capable of visualizing the completion of his work. He was an eager cooperative in a great project. In his imagination he saw the spires and the pointed windows, the aisles, and the massive entrance to the cathedral.

There are ways and ways of looking at life. No man failing in answering the question, "What are you doing?" but the way they answered revealed the kind of men they were. Cathedral builders are few and precious.

Will Currie Drop Citizenship?

By RAY TUCKER

WASHINGTON—The Senate Security Committee, headed by Senator William E. Jenner of Indiana, has made quiet inquiries into fairly authentic reports that Laughlin Currie, former White House Assistant, plans to renounce his United States citizenship and seek permanent residence in South America.

Currie is now the most important witness in the Congressional investigation of the means by which so many Communists and fellow-travelers infiltrated into high government posts during the Roosevelt-Truman regime. He was Harry Dexter White's closest crony when the former dominated key appointments at Treasury, and filled them with Russian dupes or agents.

FORMER SPY'S CHARGES—Elizabeth Bentley has testified that Currie, as a Presidential aide, ranked with White in using his influence to appoint and shift her contacts into the most sensitive agencies at Washington during and after the war.

Currie was responsible for promoting Owen Lattimore as principal adviser on Chinese affairs, over the protests of Stanley K. Hornbeck, then head of the State Department's Far Eastern Bureau.

LINKED WITH ALGER HISS—The Jenner Committee, in a previous report, linked Currie with Alger Hiss, Lattimore, Frederick Vanderbilt Field, John Carter Vincent, Edward C. Carter and others as responsible for the policy that helped to turn China over to the Reds. It said:

"Through their influence in the White House, by reports from U.S. Foreign Service Officers, and through the mission of Vice-President Wallace to China, they sought to bring pressure to bear on the Chinese Government (Chiang Kai-shek's), and to exalt the status of the Chinese Communist Party—first, to that of a recognized force, and then to that of a Coalition Government."

It was this group which prepared the program under which General George C. Marshall demanded that the Reds be given 50-50 participation in the Chinese Government, thus paving the way for Chiang's downfall.

birds, replenishing the state's supply of fish and game. They also see the growing number of out-of-state sportsmen each year as an important economic factor in boosting the family income in regions where agriculture is limited to marginal lands and industry has not located.

Hunting and fishing have become big business in North Carolina, and the business destined to become larger. At the same time, the state's supply of fish and game need not be depleted further if the program of wildlife conservation continues under careful management.

A Traffic Problem Which Needs Attention

Greenville's traffic problem is not confined to week-days when business houses are open and many shoppers are in the business district.

Greenville, like many other towns of comparable size, has a relatively large number of churches located adjacent to the business district on heavily traveled streets. We wouldn't boast that Greenville has an unusually large number of people attending these churches; but when Sunday morning worship services are over, quite a traffic problem arises as hundreds of families begin moving their automobiles out of the relatively small area.

In close proximity are the Eighth Street Christian Church, Immanuel Baptist Church, Jarvis Memorial Methodist Church, First Presbyterian Church and Memorial Baptist Church.

About noon each Sunday what appears to us as major traffic problems arise at the intersections of Eighth and Evans Streets, Eighth and Dickinson Avenue, Dickinson and Greene, Dickinson and Washington, Fourth and Greene, Fifth and Pitt, and a lesser degree at other nearby intersections.

Probably the worst of the afore mentioned are at the intersections with Dickinson Avenue where no traffic lights control the flow of traffic.

In the interest of public safety, The Reflector feels it would be wise for the Greenville Police Department to observe the noon-hour traffic movement in this particular area on Sundays, and if necessary have patrolmen stationed at the most congested intersections to help regulate the flow of traffic. Traffic officers could do a great deal of good at several of the intersections during the 15 or 20 minutes immediately following the morning worship hour.

COATESVILLE, PA., RECORD: "The Pennsylvania Newspaper Publishers Association has announced the appointment of five men to serve with five members of the Pennsylvania Bar Association to make a study of the whole concept of Freedom of the Press and Fair Trial. There is no doubt that there will be some findings which will be critical of some newspapers. But out of it may come a decision that office holders are not always the best judges of what . . . shall be kept from the public."

Guessing Game (Anyone Can Play)

Somebody Told Me

The Travel Bug Will Get You

My contention is that it's normal to get bored with a place now and then. No doubt New Yorkers get very much fed up with New York, so it's not so bad to say that I never get fed up with Greenville, but occasionally get the hankerin' to leave it for a while.

It's Steve Canyon and travelogues at the movie that make my feet itch. Of course right now Steve's behind bars, but most of the time his adventures are appealing, even including the tight squeezes (I'm not referring to those by the women) he gets in.

Did you see that travelogue recently at the Pitt describing the Caribbean cruise? Your comment might be why dream, Jackson, you can't afford any such luxury. But I might be able to make the grade as a waiter on such a boat. To take a cruise, I think, should be the privilege of everyone at least once in a lifetime.

New York, with all of its disadvantages, is my town one week out of the year. The eighth day would be too much, but seven days out of a year in New York is sufficient to make anybody be content in Greenville.

That's all the time it takes to get a fill of the hustle, but while getting that fill you can have the time of your life. Broadway productions are the highlight in my opinion, while there's something there to appeal to you no matter how your taste runs.

With careful planning every evening can be a triple-header. You can see a radio or TV show early, a Broadway production, and catch the late performance at one of the theaters featuring a good movie along with a big-name floor show.

If you can afford it, eating can be added to the attractions. Last trip Wife Rachel and I did take in Toots Shor's for a meal, but generally speaking we kept expensive eating out of the schedule.

With a jaunt to the big city about once a year (every other year is almost enough), almost anybody is ready to come back home. With all of its greatness, the big city is the best medicine in the world to make Greenville look better. And I certainly am ready for a dose of the medicine.

And I thank you.

What Other Editors Are Thinking

DISTRICT RALLIES (Washington Daily News)

During the month of October there will be Democratic rallies in each of the twelve congressional districts of North Carolina. At these rallies there will be real "hoop-teeing" for the Democratic party. And that is as it should be. Outstanding political leaders will be present, and the rallies are set for a purpose. That purpose is to awaken the voters and impart enthusiasm for the party to them.

Some people look upon these rallies as a waste of time, money, and effort. Others contend that through the spirit created in these rallies, the very lifeline of the party is strengthened.

The Daily News is of the opinion that the rallies could be a great thing for the party if conducted on the right basis. But if only the politicians and lawyers are to participate, then the very spirit for which the rally is held is stifled.

What the party needs is more participation in party functions by the rank and file voters. If somehow a system could be worked out along these lines, it would have a tremendous effect upon the party as an organ of democracy.

We need to get the farmers, the merchants, the businessmen, and the man on the street interested in working for the party more. The day is gone when a political boss in North Carolina can deliver the vote of any ward or precinct. There was a time when the "boss" could vote the people as he wished. Those who have not found out that fact yet are living in the past ages.

As Democrats, the members need to be active. As a party of the people, a label the Democrats cherish, the individuals making up that party need to be recognized more.

When the First District rally takes place in Elizabeth City in October, there will be many lawyers and politicians on hand. Too many times they have been the whole show. If somehow we can arrange for the "little fellows" to participate in the program and in the rally, we will accomplish far more for the party than most people realize.

Some say it will be difficult to get the "little men" to participate. It will be pointed out that the "little men" have no influence. But we feel that such an appraisal is wrong and not founded on fact. The "little men" today have far more influence than some of the politicians have given them credit for having.

We are very much interested in these rallies. We can make them better and more useful than they have been in the past. There is a challenge there, and we should not fail in our efforts to make the word "Democrat" signify not only a party of the people but a party in which the people participate actively.

State Supreme Court Is Trying To Keep Up On Cases

By LYNN NISBET

COURT — The State Supreme Court is starting the term with apparent determination to "keep current" with respect to decisions in cases which have been argued. There is also indication that opinions may be more concise than usual. The first opinion day for the fall term produced decisions in 25 cases, ten of which were Per Curiam—by the whole court—containing an average of less than one hundred words each.

These brief Per Curiam pronouncements contained veiled rebuke for the lawyers responsible for the appeals. Typical of them is the opening sentence in one: "Respondent's exeptive assignments of error fail to raise any question of law of sufficient moment to require discussion."

The Superior Court judges fared pretty well at the hands of the justices. Of the twenty-five cases decided, sixteen were affirmed or listed as no error, nine were reversed, remanded or a new trial granted.

OPINIONS — Interested attorneys and reporters reading the opinions give special attention to those signed by Associate Justice Carlisle Higgins, newest member of the court, in order to get some idea of his approach to issues and his style of writing. They found his approach to be direct and his style very precise and yet concise. One illustration was the sentence in the opinion affirming a lower court decision based on failure of the defendant to alleged all the facts in the complaint. "Proof without allegation is as unavailing as allegation without proof," he said. In another similarly concise summary he suggests that the mere possession by a man of contraceptives does not constitute evidence that he is guilty of incest and rape.

DOG TRACKS — The "dog track cases" apparently were finally disposed of in the opinion written for the court by Associate Justice W.H. Bobbitt in the matter of J.A. Summerville vs. Carolina-Virginia Racing Association, Inc., and Currituck Racing Commission. This was one of several actions which went through Currituck County Superior Court, the State Supreme Court once before and the Federal district and circuit courts.

Defendants had alleged violation of their constitutional rights in seizure of property and voiding of contracts under lower court decisions. Justice Bobbitt quotes the U.S. Circuit Court, to the effect that a "contract has no binding obligations if its validity is dependent upon an unconstitutional statute."

Answering complaints the question of constitutionality had been decided out of order in the first place, and decision delayed on the issue in other instances, Justice Bobbitt suggests that the defendant "was neither alert nor cooperative in any effort to obtain an early decision on the constitutionality of the 1949 Currituck act."

In view of the whole series of court decisions, it is apparent that part mutual betting on dog races is a thing of the past in North Carolina unless the General Assembly at some future time enacts enabling legislation that will comply with constitutional limitations.

There have been intimations that legislation might be offered at the next session providing for elections in any county or community under a general statewide law, comparable to the ABC act. A few weeks ago chances for passage of such a bill were regarded as practically nil. The necessity for raising additional revenue in terms of many millions of dollars may have some influence on legislative sentiment.

RALLIES — The time and place of all the twelve congressional district Democratic rallies has been fixed, except for the fourth district. That meeting will be held on October 19, and whether at Pitsboro or Raleigh and at what hour had not been determined by Congressman Cooley at time this item is written.

The schedule of the other district meetings, beginning in the far west and working eastward, is as follows: Twelfth district, Tuesday, October 5, at 3:30 p.m. at Hendersonville. Eleventh district, Wednesday, Oct. 6, 3:00 p.m. at Gastonia. Tenth district, Thursday, October 7, 1:00 p.m. at Newton. Ninth district, Friday, October 8, 2:00 p.m. at Statesville. Eighth district, Tuesday, October 12, 2:00 p.m. at Sanford. Seventh district, Wednesday, October 13, 3:00 p.m. at Fayette-

Bit More Inflation

By ELMER ROESSNER

It looks as if we are having a bit more inflation. The government is spending $4.7 billion more than it is taking in this fiscal year.

It will not, as other governments have done in the past, simply print paper money to make up the difference. Instead, it will take the money out of the banking system and put bonds in its place.

This being an election year, the Congress, with the acquiescence of the Administration, wanted to spend money but also wanted to hold tax rates down.

The government is spending $64 billion. It is taking in $59.3 billion in open taxes. And the rest comes from borrowing, which is inflationary, and which is a hidden tax on savings, insurance, pensions, annuities and on the dollar itself.

This observation is not political. This department called attention to the very same sort of hidden tax on the thrifty, the aged and the consumers when that other party was in power.

Here in the United States we have jockeyed ourselves into a position where it will take a lot of courage to ask the people to pay for what they are getting. It will take courage because any party in power that insists on that—on a balanced budget—will probably be voted out at the following election. In other words, the trouble is not the fault of the Democrats, the Republicans or the Socialists—but of the large number of people with votes who like to go on imagining they are getting something for nothing by name paying their full bill for government and defense.

Inflation is bad because it is a hidden tax and because it is levied on people least able to pay it. It is bad for the country in other ways, too.

After each dash of inflation, workers and their wives notice that the old pay check buys a little less. So there are demands for higher wages, strikes and consequent loss of production.

Both inflation and higher wages tend to increase costs and, even though their income is rising, consumers tend to review their purchases as prices rise. People still evaluate goods in terms of dollars rather than in hours of labor. Even though their incomes may be doubled, they hesitate to buy articles that have doubled in price and this tends to disrupt markets.

FURNITURE INDUSTRY SCENTS AN UPTURN

The furniture industry is a bit more optimistic. Orders in July, while still below the level of a year ago, were 12 per cent above those for June. The continuance of the high level of housing construction is also encouraging, in that 500,000 rooms needing furniture are being completed every month.

Robert Houlihan, vice-president of the National Retail Furniture Association, said that while he was pessimistic at the furniture shows in January, he is now "very optimistic" over prospects for fall.

FIRMS TIE WAGES TO PLYWOOD PRICES

Wages in some companies, notably in auto manufacture, have been tied to cost of living index. Now two lumber mills have tied wages to the price of the product.

The companies, one a subsidiary of the other, have agreed with the Lumber & Sawmill Workers Union, AFL, wages will rise with the prices at which they sell plywood panels. However, the union has shown a reluctance to make similar agreement with other companies, holding that prices are not always a good measure of a company's ability to pay.

WITH A SHARP TWIST OF THE ARM, NO DOUBT

Writing on "If I were a Salesman," in a purchasing magazine, M.B. Heines, purchasing agent for a large oil company, said:

"If I were a salesman, and an opportunity presented itself after work, I would be willing to buy a customer a drink or two at my country club or cocktail lounge. However, I would never give a customer a bottle or more of alcoholic beverage. You never know what he will do with the contents, whereas by buying a drink or two you have the opportunity of terminating such frivolity at any period."

Top Showmen In Drugstore Field

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK (AP)—When Ike and Mike Katz opened a new super drugstore in Memphis recently, they sold $6,000 worth of parakeets in three days.

They also sold a pet skunk, a monkey for $39.95, any number of goldfish, $4.10 number of nylon stockings, and 40 alligators.

These may seem odd items for a drugstore to stock, but they aren't at all unusual for the two Katz brothers. Ike, now 75, and Mike, 67, long have been known as two of the greatest showmen in the field.

They pioneered in discovering the importance of "impulse business."

"This means that when a customer comes in a store to buy one thing," Ike explained, "he sees another thing—and buys that, too. We'll stock anything that catches the eye."

The brothers started with a fruit and candy store in Kansas City 40 years ago and took in about $18 a day. Even then Ike was selling oranges three for a dime when his competitors were charging a nickel each.

Operating on a mass-sale, cut-rate principle, the brothers built up a chain of 32 super drugstores in five states—Missouri, Kansas, Iowa, Oklahoma and Tennessee—that will gross some 40 million dollars this year. Their stores stock 31,000 items, ranging from a package of gum to room air-conditioners.

"I got into the drugstore business by accident," recalled Ike. "During the first world war the government put out an edict that only drugstores could stay open after 6 in the evening."

"At that time we were handling mostly candy, ice cream and tobacco. But the day the edict came out I bought some drug supplies and hired a pharmacist. I didn't know for sure then whether aspirin was a headache cure or a hair tonic."

Ike, crippled since boyhood by a baseball injury, walks with a cane. He enjoys being called "the Iron Duke," also enjoys big gestures. Once, a year he buys out the Kansas City ball park so his customers can see a game for nothing. He usually also endows two free symphony concerts each year. The firm, operating on the principle that good philanthropy is good business, also contributes heavily to hospitals, religious organizations, and charities.

"If you operate in a big way," said Ike, "you can't live small."

Here are the keys, he feels, to his own business success: "You have to be bold. You have to advertise. You have to show ingenuity. You have to have faith in the country and a belief in the future. And you have to use your head for other things besides sleeping and eating."

Ike started his original fruit stand in Kansas City with a $198 grubstake he had saved as a young news butcher on trains carrying prospectors toward the Klondike.

"On the side I was renting the prospectors straw mattresses at fifty cents a night," he said. "When the company found it out, they fired me."

Of all the thousands of customers he waited on in his drugstores, Ike's favorite is a lady who returned a watch and wanted her money back.

"What's wrong with the watch?" he asked.

"Nothing," she said. "When I bought it, my husband was sick and I needed a watch so I could give him his medicine at the right time. But he's well now, and I don't need it anymore."

Divided Germany To Be Problem For Long Time

By JAMES MARLOW
 WASHINGTON (AP) — Divided Germany will be a problem for the West and Russia for years. No wonder both sides are pulling so hard in opposite directions, with no solution in sight.

The United States and Britain have obvious reasons for wanting the West German rearmament in a hurry and made part of the Western defense against Russia.

The crucial time element makes them look not only to the immediate military benefit but to the uncertain future.

The difference between West Germany rearmament and unarmament, facing the Russians, is the difference between a door, locked, and a swinging door.

The Allies would have to defend West Germany against Russian attack anyway, even though the Germans were unarmed. But if they remained unarmed the task might be impossible.

Once the Germans were armed, as the French have made abundantly clear through their expressed worries, the Allies would have the problem of seeing that rearmament didn't get out of bounds to become a new terror.

The Allies will meet in London next Tuesday and again in Paris in mid-October to seek the double answer of rearming Germany and keeping her within bounds afterwards.

But time is working and it may not be working on the side of the Allies. At this moment, the pro-Ally and anti-Communist leadership of Chancellor Adenauer, the West Germans want to get into the Western defense alliance.

But Adenauer will not always be there, and whether he is or not, the mood of the West Germans may change if the Allies, through their indecision, keep them dangling indefinitely between heaven and earth.

They are dangling now and have been since the war. The Allies have not given them the right to rearm nor permitted them independence. American, British, and French troops occupy the country. The three powers keep a veto over Adenauer's government.

But the Germans have made an astonishing recovery from the war and are growing in strength. They can't be expected to remain in a second-rate position forever.

It was thought that under the European Defense Community, calling for a single army, the Germans couldn't menace their neighbors again since they would be serving with troops of other nations under a unified command.

For various reasons the French killed EDC. There was a wide gap in the hope that EDC could positively prevent revival of a German national army.

Adenauer's West German government could agree to submerging its armed force, in a single European Army. But the time might come when Russia would release its hold on East Germany and let it be united with the Western half.

If then a new, all German government was created, would it abide, or feel obliged to abide, by the agreement made by the old West German government? Or would it withdraw and set up its own, new national army?

The Allies face that problem in any plan they work out for rearming West Germany now. But bringing it into the Western Alliance now would give them some hope for believing a new German government would stay in.

The Russians have been doing their best to persuade the West Germans they would lose all hope for a reunified Germany if they join up with the West. The Germans are in the middle of this power-pull. If the West Germans turn neutralist in the hope of getting Russia to yield up East Germany, and if Russia ever does, then:

The united Germany could dictate the future of Europe and perhaps the world, by making an alliance with the West or Russia.

Claim Plan Will Aid Labor Peace

LOS ANGELES (AP) — AFL officials said today a new plan for settling job rivalries between AFL unions will go a long way toward aiding labor peace.

The plan, calling for arbitration of such disputes that cannot be settled through negotiation, was unanimously approved yesterday by AFL convention delegates.

Jurisdictional fights between unions over which one's members should work certain types of jobs have plagued the AFL for years. The convention's approving resolution said such strife has spurred much of the legislation restricting union practices.

Squabbles over work assignment have in the past often resulted in strikes and other labor troubles which employers have been powerless to settle.

The new plan leaves it entirely up to each AFL union on whether it will go along with most of the AFL's 110 groups have indicated they will subscribe. Once they do they stand committed to follow the plan's procedures all unresolved disputes would be put up to an arbitrator, or neutral, for a binding decision.

A number of major unions, also, have negotiated bilateral agreements clarifying conflicting jurisdictional lines between unions and pledging that any disputes will be peacefully negotiated.

Only a few months ago the AFL and CIO put a "no-raiding" pact into effect. This similarity puts into revealing figures on sales volume since the strike started. Most estimates put the over-all drop in business at between 25 and 40 percent.

With regular truck deliveries shut off, the stores turned to parcel post and also are having goods shipped directly from manufacturers to customers.

Violence Marks Long Strike Of 12 AFL Unions

PITTSBURGH (AP) — A 10-month strike of 12 AFL unions against Pittsburgh's five largest department stores stands as one of the most violent in this steel city's history.

Vandalism and picket line disturbances have marked the strike since it began last Nov. 27. Violence has increased in recent months and police fear new outbreaks may come anytime.

Officers patrol sidewalks in front of the stores on a 24-hour basis, seven days a week. Squad cars crawl the streets at night. There is an air of tension at the stores.

On at least three occasions quick police intervention prevented picket line scuffles from developing into full-scale riots.

Damage includes 29 display windows shattered and many damaged by glass cutters with the loss estimated at about $40,000. Three truckloads of furniture have been set afire. There have been numerous paint bombings of buildings and private homes.

Police have arrested 106 strikers and persons described as "sympathizers" on charges ranging from disorderly conduct and assault with intent to kill to felonious burning and inciting to riot.

Sixty-one of the 106 were fined; 31 were discharged; 1 was turned over to juvenile court and 13 were held for grand jury action. Eleven of the 13 have been indicted and await trial.

According to police, most of those arrested are members of striking AFL General Teamsters Local 349 and AFL General Warehousemen Local 636. The unions have supplied a majority of the pickets.

Five employes working as messengers also have been indicted on charges of riot and inciting to riot as the result of a fracas with pickets.

Stores struck are Gimbel's, Kaufmann's, Horne's, Rosenbaum's and Frank & Seder.

The teamsters local, which had about 800 members employed at the stores, touched off the strike after negotiations deadlocked on two contract issues. They are:

- Whether the union or the stores should have the right to designate when parcel post is to be used for making deliveries in certain areas.
- Whether the union or the stores should have the right to determine when helpers are needed on package trucks.

Shortly after the drivers walked out, members of 11 other smaller AFL unions struck in contract disputes on an array of issues including wages and working conditions. Neither specific demands or pay scales have been disclosed.

Altogether, nearly 5,000 store employes left their jobs. About half, the stores report, subsequently returned to work even though their unions still were striking. Some 7,000 employes, many of them members of four CIO clerical unions, never left their jobs.

Store officials have declined to reveal figures on sales volume since the strike started. Most estimates put the over-all drop in business at between 25 and 40 percent.

With regular truck deliveries shut off, the stores turned to parcel post and also are having goods shipped directly from manufacturers to customers.

Maggie Is A Rarity: Shy Movie Actress

By BOB THOMAS
 HOLLYWOOD (AP) — The public thinks of most actresses as rather brassy extroverts. Here's one who is shy — Maggie McNamara.

Actually, she's a paradox. Although she is admittedly shy, she has stood up to her studio in a manner that has amazed Hollywood.

There can be no doubt about her shyness. She shuns any ostentation. She seems uneasy in an interview. I asked her how she happened to get into the showy life of being an actress if she is so shy.

"I started as a model," she explained. "When you're a model, you don't have to talk. It was ideal for me."

Her photo appeared on a Life Magazine cover and movie offers came her way. She declined them, having never acted in her life — "not even in the high school plays." So she took private dramatic lessons for three years. Then followed an impressive job in a Broadway flop and 13 months in the Chicago company of "The Moon is Blue." Twentieth Century-Fox signed her to a contract.

Her first movie was rather sensational. It was a loanout to her old stage employers for the film version of "The Moon is Blue." The part won her an Academy nomination, and no one was more surprised than Maggie.

"I didn't think I did a bad job in the picture," she said. "But when you consider that actresses like Shirley Booth and Julie Harris had been up for an Oscar the previous year, my nomination was ridiculous."

After her first film, her studio assigned Maggie to "King of the Khyber Rifles." She astounded them by refusing the role. Maggie's judgment was exonerated. The picture and the role were duds.

Maggie languished happily on suspension for a few weeks, then was put back in the studio's good graces with an assignment in "Three Coins in the Fountain." She scored another hit and is now playing Edwin Booth's wife in "Prince of Players." "It's a good change of pace," she remarked. "I have a more somber role to play and even do some scenes from 'Romeo and Juliet.' The first two pictures I did were the same character — I didn't realize how similar they were until I saw the pictures."

As soon as she finishes the picture, she's heing back to the New York apartment she shares with her husband, David Swift. He's the TV man who created "Mister Peepers" and is now working up a series for David Wayne.

"My husband is a Californian; he grew up in Laguna," she said. "But I've converted him to the New York life instead of his changing me I was born and grew up in New York."

Had Difficulty In Impounding Horse, Wagon

BALTIMORE (AP) — Patrolman John J. Bianca found an abandoned horse and wagon last night.

Sometimes walking and sometimes riding, he took them to the police department's stables. Officers there said they'd take the horse but there was no room for the wagon.

Bianca decided to take the wagon to the police impounding lot. To make the job easier, he took the horse along to pull the wagon. But the impounding lot also refused the wagon.

Stymied momentarily, the resourceful patrolman then headed for the Northeastern Police Station. He parked the wagon across the street from the station. Then he walked back alone—to the station house.

"My feet hurt," Bianca said after his four-hour sojourn. "Everything hurts."

Royal Romance Followed Tour

ROME (AP) — The recent royal tour of the Greek Isles had an engagement to its credit today — Princess Maria Pia, 20-year-old daughter of Italy's ex-King Umberto, and Prince Alexander of the exiled Yugoslav royal family.

Announcing their betrothal last night, the administrator of affairs of the deposed Italian royal family said the young couple would be married in Portugal, probably in January.

Maria Pia and Alexander were among the 100 or so royal guests who cruised through the Greek Islands recently with Greece's King Paul and Queen Frederika.

Nixon Pins GOP Election Hopes On Eisenhower

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Vice President Eisenhower's popularity among Democrats and independents.

In the final speech of a campaign swing through the crucial Midwest, Nixon called upon Democrats and independents who helped elect Eisenhower in 1952 to vote for Republican congressional candidates.

"It's just as simple as that," he said. "If you're for President Eisenhower and his program, you vote Republican; if you're against him you vote Democratic."

Asked at a news conference on his arrival here about GOP chances for keeping control, Nixon replied in effect that the needed support from outside the party would be forthcoming and would keep Congress in Republican hands.

The vice president made no specific reference to the farm price and unemployment problems, on which Democrats count heavily in their campaign to take over control of the House and possibly the Senate as well.

He said the main issues in the Nov. election could be summarized in four words — Korea, controls, communism and corruption.

Nixon credited the administration with ending the Korean fighting and declared that "the Truman-Acheson policy got us into a war — the Eisenhower policy got us out of war."

He charged the Truman administration with creating a "runaway inflation" despite controls on the nation's economy. He said the administration has cut government spending 1 billion dollars in two years, given the people a tax cut of 7 1/2 billions, and restored the dollar to full value.

The vice president said the "Reds are on the run" in America because the administration has strengthened laws against subversion and driven Communists from government jobs.

Nixon called the Truman administration "scandal-ridden with its mink coats and deep freezers" but declared that Sen. Capehart (R-Ind.) now is uncovering "the real scandals" in his probe of the Federal Housing Administration.

"We clean up, we don't cover up," he said.

Retirement Lasts Only Three Weeks

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. (AP) — Fred West, 75, has given up retirement. He's decided to go back to his job of weed cutting and drain cleaning with the Kent County Road Commission.

West, who was on the job for 40 years, said his retirement lasted only three weeks. "When I found all I was supposed to do was lie around," he said, "I couldn't take it. It finally bored me to such an extent that I had to go back to work."

Traffic Signals For Mexico City
 MEXICO CITY (AP) — The city fathers are adding more stop-and-go lights at street intersections throughout the Mexican capital because visiting motorists find the old system of swinging red lanterns at night too confusing.

Between 750 and 1,000 traffic lights will go up at busy intersections.

At present, such lights are used only on major streets, and on comparatively few corners on those.

At other intersections in the downtown area, the traffic is guided by policemen who swing red lanterns at night. Most local drivers understand the signals but tourists often are baffled.

ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By Alfred J. Buescher

Scripture—Matthew 5:13-16; John 1:40-42a; Acts 4:13-20; 8:4-8, 28-40; II Corinthians 5:11-20; I Peter 3:13-16.

"Ye are the salt of the earth; ye are the light of the world. Let your light so shine before men that they may see your good works and glorify your Father which art in heaven," Jesus told His disciples.

John the Baptist preached that Jesus was indeed the Son of God. One who heard him was Andrew, and he sought his brother, Simon Peter, saying to him that, "We have found the Messiah," and he took him to Jesus.

Peter and John were brought before the high priests who asked them in whose name they healed the man lame since birth. "Jesus of Nazareth," they said. Commanded to preach no more, they said they must obey God rather than men.

Because the Christians were persecuted, they were scattered. Philip went to Samaria and preached there. The people heard him gladly, and he performed many miracles of healing. MEMORY VERSE—Matthew 5:16.

CHRISTIANS ARE AMBASSADORS OF CHRIST

Scripture—Matthew 5:13-16; John 1:40-42a; Acts 4:13-20; 8:4-8, 28-40; II Corinthians 5:11-20; I Peter 3:13-16.

By NEWMAN CAMPBELL

SO MUCH material is assigned to this lesson, the last of this series, that we must condense it a good deal.

The first verses of the lesson, taken from Matthew, tell us of Jesus after He had delivered the Beatitudes in the Sermon on the Mount, probably in Galilee. Here He is talking to His own followers and disciples. He tells them that they are the salt of the earth, but, He says, "if the salt have lost its savor, wherewith shall it be salted? it is thenceforth good for nothing but to be cast out."

By its distinctive chemical nature salt not only seasons our food so that it is more palatable, but it often retards corruption in foods. He might have meant that the world is corrupt and corrupting. The work of the Christians is to exert their influence in society because their moral life is under the control of the Holy Spirit. It might also have been a reminder that if they became half-hearted in their work of redemption, it would be worthless.

Then Christ told these men, "Ye are the light of the world. A city set upon a hill cannot be hid. Neither do men light a candle and put it under a bushel, but on a candlestick; and it giveth light unto all that are in the house."

"Let your light so shine before

What should the high priests do then? They counseled together, finally coming to the conclusion that as there was no gainsaying the fact that the miracle was performed and known to many, they should command these poor, ignorant men that they must stop preaching. To this Peter and John answered, "Whether it be right in the sight of God to hearken unto you more than God, judge ye. For we cannot but speak the things which we have seen and heard."

Because of persecution of the Christians, they were forced to scatter widely. Philip, one of them, was a business man who was one of a number appointed to take care of the business matters of the early church, the distribution of funds to the poor, etc. He was not one of the apostles, but with the others so selected, was filled with the Holy Ghost and was of fine character. He, with others, preached the gospel. He went to the city of Samaria to teach there, "And the people with one accord gave heed unto those things which Philip spake, hearing and seeing the miracles he did."

"For unclean spirits, crying with loud voice, came out of many that were possessed with them; and many taken with palsies, and that were lame, were healed. And there was great joy in that city."

It seems a little strange that men, that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father which is in heaven."

This does not mean that we should always be talking about the good we have done or are about to do, but that we should always be ready to do good and help others wherever there is need, and by our words and works show all those we meet that the life of a real Christian can be, so that they may glorify God.

Very briefly we might mention John the Baptist's teaching of the baptism of Jesus and what happened. One who heard John speak was Andrew. He went to find his brother, Simon Peter, and brought him to Jesus—Peter, who afterwards became the head of the church in Jerusalem!

You will remember the story of Peter and John, that after they had received the Holy Ghost, they healed a man who had been lame since birth. After that they were thrown into prison for a night, but released because the fact of the miracle was a fact, and the temple authorities could not deny it. Next morning the two apostles were brought before the high priest and others, and asked by what power or in whose name they healed the man. Peter told them at once that it was Jesus of Nazareth, whom they had crucified.

CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP)—Irish-descended William F. Condon president of a prosperous Charleston department store, reported visiting a West Cork, Ireland, bar room looking for relatives.

Bar keep Willie Condon first gave him the cold shoulder because he thought this was another poor relation looking for a hand-out, Condon said.

"Another Condon!" he quoted Willie as exclaiming. "They're coming from England, Scotland and even France because they've heard I've inherited a lot of money." When Willie found he had adequate means of his own, Condon said, refreshments were on the house.

CHAPTER TWENTY-NINE

Kelly came up presently, brought Rutherford some hot coffee, came tapping at Penn's door.

"Why are you hiding up here?" Kelly asked, when Penn had invited her in. "Maude's downstairs, pumping Gil about that submarine, and Gil's having a tough time trying not to tell her anything. I got a feeling, listening to him, that all was not quite rosy on board—and why did you come rushing back, Penn, yelling that Gil had come home alive? Did you know something none of the rest of us knew?"

Penn told her then of those weeks of dragging anxiety, of Larry Kissel and the navy leak that had to be protected, of the signals that had failed and her own contact that had been removed when Larry Kissel got called back to service.

"No wonder," Kelly remarked, "that you're looked worried—and jumped every time the telephone rang?"

"Did I, Kelly? I tried not to let anyone see, I hoped nobody would notice. It was bad enough to be worried myself without harrowing other people needlessly perhaps."

Kelly said: "And all this time I was believing that it was that Nicholas chap on your mind! I wasn't standing around blind, there in the hospital, you know, I thought he was a nice chap."

"He was here for a minute this afternoon. He gave me this," Penn touched the little medal that she had hung around her neck.

"Saint Christopher. Too bad you didn't have that a month ago. Saint Christopher protects travellers."

"I was so excited when Gil came in I forgot to thank Marsh for this. And I've done something else dreadful, Kelly. I promised Gil to see that Winifred had flowers for Christmas and I forgot."

"They'd freeze tonight anyway. It's turning colder. We could have some green or a wreath sent out—I'll see about it when I get back to town. Gil won't go out there today, anyway."

"But that would be cheating, when I forgot."

"You've remembered now, and Christmas isn't over yet. I'll attend to it—you can pay me back later, or Gil can. I'm moving Rufe out Monday. You can help me keep Maude from getting too badly upset."

"Maybe she'll be calm about it now, Kelly, now that Gil is here."

"But he only has three days. He has to report back Sunday. And the week after next is Quincy's wedding."

"Three days! Could she search her heart in three days, decide whether any part of it belonged to Gil? But what if Gil wanted no piece in it—what if all her uneasy dreams, the dread that had colored every moment of every day, the uneasiness that had come between her and Marsh and was still between them like a drifting mist, had no reality at all?"

She had been so sure that she would know when she saw Gil again, but now that idea seemed strained and unreal too. Gil had kissed her, it was true, but there had been none of the thrill of that kiss she had kept like a sweet and secret token in her lonely imaginings, hoarding the memory with half-guilty eagerness.

Kelly was still talking. "Quincy wishes me to be matron of honor. I wish I could get out of that. I'll have to buy a dress I don't need and can't afford, and Rufe won't be able to be there. Somebody is going to have to talk Maude into showing up at all. Maybe you can coach Gil—get him to change her mind. Can't she see that old Myron Yates would be full of malicious glee if she refused to set foot in his house? It would make things tough for Quincy—and Yates is not going to be any help to Quincy in this ticklish family situation. His loyalties are pretty solidly fixed."

"I wish Quincy were happier about this marriage," Penn pulled herself back to the present, to awareness, with difficulty. "You've helped her more than anyone Kelly."

"I'm a poor stick to help anybody," Kelly sighed, and Penn saw what she had been ignoring too long, absorbed in her own problems, Kelly was thinner and the buoyancy had gone out of her. Her eyes were shadowed and her voice had lately developed a tendency to tremble a little. Kelly was beginning to falter under her burden and no one was helping her, Penn went to her quickly and put an arm around her shoulders.

"You're a pillar and a rock," she declared. "We've all leaned too much on you, Kelly. I wish I knew some way to help you."

"There's no way. All I can do is pray," Kelly said. "Penn take my advice—marry the man who loves you, not the man you think you're madly in love with. Rufe never did love me—not unselfishly or deeply. He needed somebody, and I was a kind of tonic for what ailed him when he was so dislocated after the war. I liked being a strong character, I wanted success on my own. Now I'm tired of being the strong one, and all the success I've fought for hasn't brought me a thing—not a thing but trouble. You're young, you can wait—wait for love, Penn, for the man who wants to do things for you."

"I'll remember," Penn said soberly. Then, touched by Kelly's tired voice, she said, "I'm going to drive you into town. You're tired. You're not going to ride that bus and walk blocks. I'll borrow Aunt Maude's car."

But when she had explained to her aunt sitting with Gil by the library fire, Gil insisted on going along too.

"I need some cigarets anyway. Is Kelly ready to go?"

"She has to help Rufe to bed," Penn said. "If you're going, you won't need me along."

"Sure, come along," Gil insisted. Penn felt oddly timorous about riding home with Gil, when they had left Kelly at the lonely looking little house she had taken in Alexandria.

"Did something go wrong, Gil—on the submarine, I mean?"

"What gave you that idea?" he asked, a trifle sharply.

"Larry Kissel heard it from somebody in the Navy department. He came out home and told me."

"You know I can't talk about it, don't you?" he said sternly. Kissel had no business talking about it. Sorry you had a bad time, Penn. You shouldn't have worried about it. We got out all right."

So she shouldn't have worried, and all that wretchedness had been for nothing! So she shouldn't have cared at all—was that what Gil was trying to get over to her?

She said stiffly, "At least I can be glad you got out all right, can't I?"

"We proved we could take it. That was the important thing. Now I'll have to appear at the inquiry; that's why I have to go back Sunday but that will be secret, too, and you never even heard of it, understand? Did anyone besides you know about Kissel's indiscreet hints, Penn?"

She remembered then, aghast. "I told Kelly. I told her just tonight."

"Very unwise." He was reproachful. "I'll see Kelly. She has sense."

And I have none, Penn thought bitterly. All that taut terror that had been hers alone, the desperate attempts to contact Kissel, the misery, watching Uncle Ellihu break under his own trouble, fearing the moment when fresh agonies might be visited upon him, and here was Gil concerned only about a leak in security measures, casually sorry she had had a bad time!

"If Kissel could get that stuff, somebody else might get it," he worried audibly. His mood changed, he looked at her sideways with a grin.

"By the way," he said, "young Nichols seems to be the fair-haired lad with you at present. Anything serious in that quarter?"

Penn quivered uncertain, somehow bereft. "I don't know. Marsh was awfully good when I was in the hospital. He's—always on hand when I'm in trouble. He works at the hospital at night—while he finishes up his medical. He brought me a Christmas present today—this medal."

Gil looked at it. "Picked it up in Korea, probably," he said. "A lot of the kids over there wear them."

A wild crackle of anger seethed through Penn's veins.

"March Nichols was a medical corpsman in Korea. He carried wounded men down those mountains and tried to save them, not to rob them. This medal came in a jeweler's box—it was a brand new."

But Gil was neither ruffled nor amused. He laughed, but the laugh was indulgent, teasing. "You needn't take my ear off, he chuckled. "From the sound of you, Nichols is the fair-haired lad."

"And it doesn't matter to you,

Film Flam Artists Invade Eastern N. Carolina's Telephone Business

"Film flam" artists have invaded the telephone business in Eastern North Carolina, according to C. J. Logan, District Commercial Manager for Carolina Telephone and Telegraph Company.

Logan reported that recently in Rocky Mount a man identifying himself as a "representative" of the telephone company appeared at a residence in Rocky Mount and collected $15 as a "deposit" for a telephone to be installed. The resident, not having received telephone service several days later, notified the company. She was informed that there was no such "representative."

The district manager pointed out that his company collects all payments for telephone service at its business office and urged local citizens to ask for proper identification if they should be approached by anyone making "deposit" solicitations.

Similar cases of this racket have been reported in Raleigh and Charlotte.

'Moscow Molly' Beams Russian Propaganda To Troops At Thule

By ELTON C. FAY
WASHINGTON (AP) — The Army says Russia is aiming its propaganda radio at American servicemen stationed on the big and isolated air base of Thule, in northwestern Greenland.

It cites the Thule-beamed voice of Russia as part of the general Red propaganda effort directed at undermining the American soldiers' morale, especially in foreign lands where American troops are stationed.

Reference to Thule is contained in a new troop training pamphlet, "Defense Against Enemy Propaganda," now being circulated by the Army. It does not discuss what, if any, effect the propaganda has on U. S. troops.

The pamphlet outlines the objectives and types of Communist propaganda — "white" or open propaganda where the source identifies itself, "gray" which emanates from an unidentified source, and "black" which comes from a source pretending to be someone or something else.

In connection with the beaming of Soviet propaganda at Thule, the Army pamphlet says:

"Troops there hear a program conducted by an anonymous female disc jockey, dubbed Moscow Molly by the American soldiers. In addition to the recorded rumbas and fox trots the soft female voice quotes editorials from Pravda, the leading Soviet party newspaper in Russia. Although the men tune in only to hear dance music introduced by a feminine voice, which is automatically American in accent, they are, nonetheless, subjected to Communist propaganda." The pamphlet asserts the Soviet government attaches high importance to its propaganda program — including the operation of an estimated 6,000 special local schools, about 177 regional schools and approximately a dozen advanced schools for specialized training in propaganda dissemination.

In discussing the pamphlet, Army officers said today Communist radio stations are active in other areas of the world where American forces are stationed, including Japan and Europe.

Not all propaganda is built around music, or soft voice and entertainment.

In Europe, the American Armed Forces Network is finding its channel used in this propaganda manner by a Red station.

The Armed Forces Network operates at a frequency of 935 kilocycles. Its programs ending at midnight, its newscast is completed with the usual sign-off by the announcer, followed by a recording of the American national anthem. Then the Reds come in.

A reporter listened to one recent monitored recording. As the last bars of "The Star Spangled Banner" faded away a new voice, speaking flawless "American" — without exaggerated American accent — picked up on precisely 935 kilocycles.

News was read in the same style as the American broadcast. Part of the news seemed like legitimate, if dull, reports of production and agriculture and other economics of Communist countries.

But tucked away in the news, and pointed up in some obviously slanted reports under Washington and other Western datelines, were purely propaganda items.

At conclusion of its broadcast, the Communist station identifies itself as Radio Moscow and invites listeners to write program suggestions.

GUILTY—Thomas Wysokowski, 17, mops his face in New York after a jury convicted him of first degree manslaughter for the death of a man the prosecution charged was stomped to death. Kings County Judge Samuel S. Leibowitz told Wysokowski's lawyer: "He got away with murder" in the slaying of Thomas Condon, 40, war veteran and father of four. Wysokowski faces a possible 10-20 years in prison. (AP Wire-photo)

Romania Revamps 'Latin' Grammar

VIENNA (AP)—Romania has re-modeled its grammar after the "Soviet pattern" and broken away from the "out-dated Latin tradition," Bucharest newspapers revealed.

The idea, said the paper, is to rid the Romanian language of "cosmopolitanism and idealism and introduce the teaching of Marxism."

Earlier this year, Romanian spelling was revamped to make it simpler and eliminate more than 10,000 French and Latin-sounding words.

Former POWs Re-Investigated

NEW YORK (AP)—The Army is investigating a number of former Korean War prisoners to determine whether they should be charged with currying favor with the enemy while prisoners.

Some of those under investigation are stationed in the New York City area, at Ft. Devens, Mass., and Ft. Dix, N.J.

Names are being withheld to protect the men in case the suspicions prove unfounded, an Army spokesman said.

These three possibilities in each case were outlined: A man could be exonerated; he could be "boarded out" of the Army, which is equivalent to discharge; or he could be recommended for trial. The investigators, according to Army sources, have brought many former prisoners of war to nearby installations as witnesses, to tell about the conduct of the suspected men while prisoners.

Sanatorium Superintendent Is TB Association Speaker

Dr. M. D. Bonner, superintendent of the Guilford County Sanatorium, last night addressed the annual meeting of the Pitt County Tuberculosis Association.

Other highlights of the meeting included the election of officers for the coming year, and the presentations of special citations for outstanding service to the Pitt Tuberculosis Association.

Dr. Bonner told the directors of the local T. B. Association and guests present at the meeting the death rate from tuberculosis has dropped sharply in recent years, but the number of T. B. cases has not dropped half as much as the death rate in tubercular cases.

Modern treatment methods developed in recent years have made it possible to arrest many cases of tuberculosis which formerly could not be cured, the speaker said. Modern methods also have made for much more rapid progress in the cure of cases, he asserted.

Dr. Bonner said one of the major problems confronting tuberculosis associations everywhere is finding individuals who have the disease and educating the public to accept treatment for the disease. Mass X-ray surveys, he said, have turned up a number of cases, but that in itself is not sufficient to find all cases simply because all the people do not participate in the surveys. Most potential cases now, the speaker pointed out, are in the older age groups. A relatively small percentage of the young people in public schools today have been exposed to the disease, he said.

Dr. Bonner reviewed briefly new methods of treatment for the disease which have been developed in recent years, and showed X-rays of the progress of several cases in which modern treatment methods have been used.

Dr. W. E. Marshall, president of the Pitt Association presided at the meeting, and the speaker was introduced by John G. Clark.

Dr. Marshall was re-elected president of the association for the coming year, Larry Brown was re-elected treasurer, and the board of directors instructed the executive committee to re-elect Mrs. J. B. Spilman, Sr. executive secretary of the organization.

Several awards for outstanding contributions to the work of the Tuberculosis Association were presented at the meeting. J. Herbert Waldrop, honorary president of the association was presented a bronze medalion for his outstanding service to the organization over a period of years. Medalions were also presented to radio station WGTC, accepted by A. Hartwell Campbell; The Daily Reflector, accepted by Dave Whichard; and Blount-Harvey Company, accepted by Charles E. Blair.

Miss Tabitha M. DeVisconti of Farmville, was presented a certificate signifying her election to the board of directors of the North Carolina Tuberculosis Association. Miss DeVisconti has been active in the Pitt Tuberculosis Association for a number of years.

Participating in the presentations were Waldrop, Sam Bundy of Farmville, Walter Jones of Farmville, Mrs. James T. Little and Mrs. J. B. Kittrell, Jr.
