

Mayors Are Told War's Outbreak May See A-Bomb Over 100 Cities

'Hundred Pinpointed Minutes Of Atomic Hell' Posed As Frightening Possibility

By D. HAROLD OLIVER
WASHINGTON (AP)—The nation's mayors were told by the Continental Air Defense commander today that the outbreak of a global war could mean "100 pinpointed minutes of atomic hell on earth" for a hundred big American cities.

Gen. Benjamin W. Chidlaw posed this frightening possibility, saying it is the United States which stands "the most likely chance of a global war" before Russia strikes anywhere else in starting a full scale war.

Chidlaw's remarks were prepared for the more than 200 mayors and city managers from the 48 states and territories gathered for briefings on the nation's foreign and defense policies.

President Eisenhower, who issued the invitations for the two-day series of meetings, arranged to greet the group with an informal speech.

His talk was scheduled for 9:50 a.m. EST.

Aside from the President's talk, the sessions were scheduled to take place behind closed doors, although some speeches such as Chidlaw's are being made public. After each speech the meeting was to switch to questions and discussion.

The Mayors' Conference is the second of its kind.

Last year's conference developed a sharp dispute among the mayors and government leaders over the role the federal government should play in civil defense in an atomic emergency. Eisenhower told that meeting that the cities should shoulder the main burden.

Meanwhile, the National Security Council, which last year's conference asked to review the civil defense subject, and the Federal Civil Defense Administration have made what FCDA officials describe as "much progress" in working out plans. The FCDA is now stressing evacuation measures.

Chidlaw appealed for civic understanding of the problems of air defense, including the noise nuisance of jet fighter planes and the admitted danger of their operations and high explosive loads.

Thumbed Ride In The Wrong Car

LOS ANGELES (AP)—A motorist driving near the sheriff's honor farm picked up a ride-thumber yesterday.

The passenger told the driver: "You're taking a chance picking me up. I'm running away from this place."

The driver, Deputy Sheriff Walter Doughty, said nothing but drove right to the honor farm office and turned in his passenger. He was identified as Frank Joseph Nemcek, 23, who since last March 8 had been serving one year as part of five years' probation on a robbery charge.

Nemcek, who said his home was in Portland, Ore., was booked anew on an escape charge.

Global Narcotics Ring Is Smashed

By STAN SWINTON

ROME (AP)—U.S. narcotics agents, working with police of four nations, have smashed an international ring which planned to pour narcotics into the United States through Italy and France.

Coordinated raids in Turkey, Syria and Lebanon swept up 27 narcotics traffickers and led to confiscation of 888 pounds of crude opium, 44 pounds of morphine base, 9 pounds of hashish.

Simultaneously, Lebanese customs officers led by Capt. Edmond Azzizeh swooped down on a clandestine laboratory in Beirut.

Charles Siragusa, U.S. Narcotics Bureau district supervisor for Europe and the Middle East with headquarters here, directed four months of patient undercover work leading up to the weeklong series of raids just ended. Impersonating a U.S. Air Force pilot willing to smuggle dope in his plane, Siragusa personally made the biggest haul—350 pounds of opium.

U.S. narcotics agents traveled to the Middle East because it is from there that dope begins its secret voyage to America. Turkey is the main production point. From there opium is smuggled to intermediate transshipment points—usually Beirut, Lebanon or Aleppo, Syria. The next stop is Marseille, France, or Naples, Genoa or Palermo, Italy.

A dramatic seizure took place Nov. 20 on a lonely road six miles outside Adana, Turkey's fourth largest city. With the aid of Turkish police, Siragusa had been put in contact with Ahmet Ozzayar, king of Turkish dope smugglers. Siragusa played the part of a corrupt American pilot. Gerasimos Liarmommatas, director of Greek security police in Athens, pretended he was the buyer to whom the pilot would smuggle the dope. Ozzayar and his assistant were arrested. Later, three more arrests were made, including the farmer who grew the opium.

The Lebanese police struck on Nov. 17. The long-wanted Abou Sayia Basatni his two sons and four other men were arrested. Thirty pounds of opium, nine pounds of hashish and 20 grams of morphine base were seized.

Simultaneously Capt. Azzizeh's customs men worked in cooperation with Syrian authorities who nabbed Abdullah Attie el Shaka at Latakia, Syria, with 190 pounds of opium and 20 pounds of morphine. The drugs were about to be smuggled to France.

Another U.S. narcotics agent had made contact in Aleppo with Hadji Abdullah Tifanki, a prosperous sausage casing manufacturer with three wives, 15 children and a sideline—dope smuggling. Tifanki agreed to deliver 115 pounds of opium. The rendezvous: The home of one wife, in the back alleys of Aleppo, barred with an iron gate.

Policemen dressed in Arab costume loitered in the dark alleys while the American agent entered the building alone. Once inside, he slipped back and unlocked the gate. Police burst in and arrested Tifanki and two accomplices while they were handing over the dope.

U.S. narcotics men had high praise for the Middle Eastern police who worked with them.

Other business to come before the council includes a report on estimated cost of improving Reade Street between Second and Third Streets, a report on the estimated cost of improving the entrance to Cherry Hill Cemetery, and a consideration of a request for a loading zone by the Woman's Club.

New business to be brought up by the city manager includes: consideration of allowing parking on only one side of Evans Street from Eleventh Street to Fourteenth Street and consideration of an amendment to the method of collecting dog license fees.

The city's governing body will meet in the council room on the second floor of city hall at 8 o'clock.

Find Wreckage

MILAN, N. H. (AP)—The wreckage of a Northeast Airlines plane missing for two days was found atop Mt. Success today. Two of its seven occupants were dead and the others injured or suffering from intense cold.

Officials identified the dead as: copilot George D. McCormick, 37, of Kingston, N. Y., and John McNulty, 39, of Boston, flight superintendent.

A helicopter flew to the wreckage in the wilderness atop the 3780-foot mountain about eight miles south of here, and began removing the injured.

The tragedy ended Northeast's record of having no passenger fatality in its 21 years in business.

Red China Warned Attempt To Conquer Formosa Could Result In U. S. Retaliation

WASHINGTON (AP)—Red China had bluntly warned today that the United States would probably attack the Chinese mainland if the Reds attempted to conquer Formosa.

Secretary of State Dulles made this statement yesterday in announcing that a mutual security pact will be signed with the Chinese Nationalists on Formosa in the next few days.

He said the treaty means U.S. retaliation against any Red invasion of Formosa. Although saying a counterattack on the mainland was probable in such an event he declined to discuss in detail the scope of any retaliation.

In another statement at his press conference yesterday, adding up to a "tough" policy on Communist China, Dulles said that the United States may yet consider a naval blockade for the China coast if American rights are not respected—that is, if the 13 Americans recently sentenced as spies are not released.

The new pact, if ratified by the Senate as expected, will assure American protection for many years to Formosa and the Pescadore Islands, thus forging the last link in a chain of military alliances designed to block Red Chinese expansion in the Pacific.

The islands have been shielded by the U.S. 7th Fleet since the beginning of the Korean War in June 1950. Under the treaty the shielding may go on for years more.

The treaty is expected to go to the Senate early next year for ratification. Several members of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee indicated today a favorable reaction to the pact.

South Korea, Japan, the Philippines, Australia, New Zealand and parts of Southeast Asia already are covered by similar treaties.

The Eisenhower administration, while taking a strong policy line in the Far East, is reported hopeful that gradually a modus vivendi—a way of getting along—will be found without warlike actions. The treaty with Chiang Kai-shek, Dulles said, is supposed to contribute to that purpose.

As for Chiang's freedom to attack the mainland Dulles said he expects an arrangement to be worked out under which Chiang would consult with this country on such action. This could be considered a sort of Washington-held rein on Chiang.

In London, the British Foreign Office said the Churchill government had not been consulted on the new pact but had been assured it "is purely defensive."

The guarantee of American protection does not cover the numerous Nationalist-held islands close to the Chinese Communist coast which range from 90 to 200 miles distant from Formosa.

The Reds have been attacking those islands in recent months. Chiang has wanted the United States to join in their defense at least with air power. The United States has refused to do so.

There has been some speculation among diplomats that an arrangement might eventually be worked out in which the Chinese Reds would gradually take over the offshore islands and accept, without agreeing to it, Chiang's permanent control of Formosa. The United States and British governments have been discussing the problem of "pacifying" the area for months.

Dulles said he hoped that the treaty would help to stabilize the area. It should do this, he said, by removing any thought that the United States might make a deal to let Formosa or the Pescadores go to the Chinese Reds.

The secretary of state was not so precise in discussing whether the United States would forbid a deal on the offshore islands. He said those were Chinese islands and the United States could not make a deal on them because it had no special legal interest in them.

The United States does have a special legal interest in Formosa and the Pescadores. They were renounced by Japan in the Japanese Peace Treaty, which the United States signed.

Dulles said there is a clause in the new treaty which provides for extending protection to other areas by agreement.

Robeson County, North Carolina, for the whipping. Harrington said he held Rogers' hands when the sheeted night-riders pulled him over the trunk of a car and administered the flogging.

Then he told of how the floggings were planned. It was first decided that the trio should be kidnapped a month before the beatings. Klansmen met at a filling station on the Carolina border, he said, and later met at Klaverns at Mullins and Dillon, S.C. to plan the raid.

The direction of the plot was left to the Dillon Klavern he said, but other members were present at the flogging.

Yesterly Ellis Paul Harrington, 45-year-old traveling salesman for a Fairmont drug firm, who is pleading guilty in the case, testified that there were about 40 Klansmen at the flogging of a brother and sister near the Carolina border in November, 1951.

Harrington, fined $1,500 in a state court at Whiteville, earlier for a Klan flogging case in Columbus County, testified the hooded terrorists took Ernest Barfield Rogers and his sister, Mrs. Christine Rogers, both of Lake View, S.C., from their respective homes, drove to a secluded spot, sang and prayed for the souls of the victims, then beat them.

Wearing a rumpled brown suit, the stocky gray-haired Harrington, calmly answered the shouted questions of defense attorneys for the accused. With the witness chair tipped on its back legs he told the court he was the former assistant exhausted cypole of the Mullins Klavern.

Defense attorneys kept him on the stand from 4 p.m. until court adjourned at 5:30 p.m. in an effort to shake his story.

Harrington said the Klan decided to punish Rogers, Mrs. Rogers, the sister, and a sister-in-law of Rogers because of "the lives they had been living." Specifically, he said, Rogers had been courting his (Rogers) sister-in-law.

But when the Klansmen went for the trio on the night of Nov. 16, 1951, Harrington related, they were unable to find the sister-in-law, so took only Rogers and the sister. He drove one of the cars that brought the brother and sister to WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP)—William A. Murphy, special agent in charge of the FBI at Dallas, Tex., who directed the roundup of 14 alleged Ku Klux Klansmen as special agent at Charlotte in November, 1953, took the stand today in the Federal Court trial of 12 of those arrested.

Since the mass arrests, Marden Haywood Garfield, 51-year-old Mullins, S.C., farmer has died, and 19-year-old Milton Harrington, son of the admitted assistant Klan head who has turned state's witness, was set free by a Wilmington grand jury.

GREENSBORO (AP)—Judge Johnson J. Hayes handed out stiff sentences here yesterday in U.S. Middle District Court for three men who pleaded guilty to income tax evasion charges.

Lester W. Stevens, a High Point businessman, charged with evading more than $124,000 during 1946-1950, was sentenced to two years, suspended, and placed on five years probation, providing Stevens pays a $10,000 fine within 10 days and pays his entire tax debt of more than $100,000 in monthly installments of $2,500.

Louis Silverstein, textile salesman of Greensboro, was fined $10,000 on a charge of evading more than $15,000 during 1947-48. He was sentenced to 18 months, suspended for two years probation.

Burke Smith of Danbury, former Stokes County deputy sheriff, now a road building contractor, was fined $5,000 and placed on 60 days probation. A condition of the probation is that he pay $34,834.62 he owes as taxes for the years 1945 through 1950 within the 60-day period.

Red China's observer, Chang Wen-tien, said his country threw its full support behind the eight-nation declaration.

"If the Paris agreements are ratified the peace loving countries will be obliged to undertake the new measures envisaged in the declaration," Chang said.

"The Chinese People's Republic warmly welcomes the acceptance by the Moscow conference of the declaration and the Chinese People's Republic resolutely approves and warmly supports it."

Twining Believes U.S. Is Ahead

NEW YORK (AP)—Gen. Nathan F. Twining, Air Force chief of staff says the United States is ahead of Russia in the armament race and its best chance for peace is "to stay there."

He told an American Ordnance Assn. dinner last night: "Only if we give them (the Soviets) reason to believe that the freedom which was fought for at Valley Forge, at Verdun, at Tarsu and at Taegu is no longer worth the cost of battle—only then will they feel free to attack."

SEOUL (AP)—South Korean intelligence has discovered a Soviet spy agency operating in Pyongyang, North Korean capital, the semi-official government newspaper Seoul Shinmun reported today. The Republic of Korea counterintelligence agency had no comment.

Two film strips, "Building Your Campaign" and a Helen Hayes film, "They Shall Not Want," were shown by state Infantile Paralysis Foundation representative Jack McGee.

Campaign Framework
In showing the former film, McGee outlined what he called "the framework of a good campaign" in which he emphasized adequate and complete planning, obtaining as many persons as possible with ability, interest and enthusiasm to work as volunteers in the campaign, carrying out rewarding activities, and emphasizing publicity and promotion of the campaign.

McGee said there are two elements of the campaign this year, "Help for the stricken, and protection for the healthy." To successfully carry on the Foundation's work, McGee pointed out at least $8 million more is needed this year than was collected last year. "This means," he said, "the national goal this year is $64 million, and each chapter must work harder to top last year's collections."

Senate Debates Further Charges

By JACK BELL

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Senate, having voted 77-30 to condemn Sen. McCarthy for "abusing" his colleagues, came to grips today with the issue of whether to censure him for his treatment of Brig. Gen. Ralph W. Zwicker.

Sen. Jenner (R-Ind.), a supporter of McCarthy, launched an attack on the Zwicker count of the general censure resolution by offering an amendment to strike out part of the language.

An hour's debate was allotted on Jenner's move.

The second count specifically charges that McCarthy "intemperately abused" Zwicker when the Army officer was a witness before McCarthy last February.

Among other things, McCarthy told Zwicker, a much-decorated war hero, that he wasn't fit to wear the uniform of a general.

Jenner proposed to eliminate language in the censure resolution saying that McCarthy's actions toward Zwicker tended "to destroy the good faith which must be maintained between the executive and legislative branches in our system of government."

But, after making a speech, Jenner withdrew his amendment. Offering an amendment and then withdrawing it is a common maneuver when the Senate has limited debate. It permits the senator to obtain time for a speech.

Jenner devoted much of his speech to talk about the dangers of the Communist conspiracy, commenting "just look how the Communists have disrupted the work" of the Senate.

The result of this disruption, he said, had been to tie up completely the work of the Investigations subcommittee headed by McCarthy and to let many "Fifth Amendment Communists" continue in jobs they hold.

Jenner said that "for at least seven years someone or somebody" has been able to hamper "the official work (of Congress) to help the Communists."

This started in 1947 with former President Truman's loyalty order which hamstringing the Republican-controlled 80th Congress to some extent, Jenner said.

He said the Communists thought

Pope Pius Takes 'Turn For Worse'

VATICAN CITY (AP)—Pope Pius XII took a turn for the worse today and was reported in a state of "acute depression."

Vatican sources said his condition is serious.

The Pope's private physician, Dr. Riccardo Galeazzi-Lisi, who looked worn and tired this morning after a night-long vigil in the papal apartment, returned to the bedside.

The 78-year-old head of the Roman Catholic Church has been confined to his bed here since his return from Castel Gandolfo Saturday.

The news of his sudden turn for the worse came from the Vatican.

The pontiff has been suffering from a stomach ailment and hiccups that have made it difficult for him to sleep.

He has not been able to take they had won a big victory in the election triumph of the Democrats in 1948.

But in 1950, he said, McCarthy "ripped the curtain" of Communist infiltration of the State Department with his Wheeling, W. Va. speech which launched the Wisconsin senator's career as a Communist fighter.

Ever since then, Jenner said, the Communists have been trying vigorously to discredit McCarthy.

McCarthy was not in the Senate chamber as Jenner spoke. He spent little time on the floor yesterday and was not there when the Senate voted 77-30 last night to approve the first count of the censure resolution—that McCarthy had been contemptuous of a 1951-52 Elections subcommittee and abusive to its members.

It was the first official rebuke of its kind handed out by the Senate in 26 years, but McCarthy was outwardly unsurprised and undismayed.

Calling the Senate proceedings "a foul job," he said that as soon as the smoke clears he will "continue to expose Communists roughly in the same way."

It was for his allegedly rough tactics that 43 Democrats, 23 Republicans and 1 Independent voted last night to condemn him on the charge that he had refused to cooperate with a Senate elections subcommittee which investigated his finances in 1951-52 and that he had "abused" its members.

Arrayed on McCarthy's side were 20 Republicans including Sen. Knowland of California, the GOP leader, and Sen. Bridges of New Hampshire the Senate's acting president.

McCarthy said of the vote, "I don't think the American people are being fooled."

"They know I am being censured because I dared to do the 'dishonorable' thing of exposing Communists in government," he declared.

McCarthy is the first member officially reprimanded by the Senate since Republican Sen. Hiram Bingham of Connecticut was censured in 1929 for admitting a lobbyist to closed tariff hearings. At that time the Senate had censured only three members to this time.

Another Band, 2 More Floats In Santa Parade

Another band has indicated it will march in the Santa Claus and Children's Parade Friday, and two more floats have been added to the present aggregation of 20.

Parade chairman J.L. Harris, Jr. reports the H.B. Sugg school band of Farmville will participate in the procession, with the local Fleming Street School sponsoring two floats, Singing Christmas Tree and Santa and the Decorated Tree.

This brings the total of marching bands participating in the parade to eight, with 22 non-commercial floats now being sponsored by local organizations.

In addition to the bands, floats and Santa Claus, the parade will feature children in costume, decorated bicycles, ponies, dogs and other pets at the county courthouse immediately following the parade. The awards will be made by Harris and Christmas committee chairman Charles A. White.

Deadline for registering and obtaining an entry number for the parade was this afternoon at 4 o'clock.

Eight-County March Of Dimes Meet Held

Approximately 30 representatives from eight counties attended one of five district pre-campaign meetings for the 1955 March of Dimes here last night.

Featured on the agenda were a statement of the needs for the 1955 March of Dimes by county chapter chairman J. H. Rose, and a general discussion of campaign activities and complete community organization, with fund raising methods that work presented by volunteers who have had actual experience with these activities.

Two film strips, "Building Your Campaign" and a Helen Hayes film, "They Shall Not Want," were shown by state Infantile Paralysis Foundation representative Jack McGee.

Campaign Framework
In showing the former film, McGee outlined what he called "the framework of a good campaign" in

"This means," he said, "the national goal this year is $64 million, and each chapter must work harder to top last year's collections."

Rose pointed out the local chapter is presently spending $1,350 a month on three polio patients in the Central Carolina Convalescent Hospital in Greensboro, and it cannot be determined how long these patients must remain in the hospital.

Funds Gone By March
"If they are going to be there several months, we will have exhausted all our funds by the first of March or sooner," the chairman declared. "This shows how much we need to do all we can this year to help with the March of Dimes program."

Also present at the meeting was Mrs. Phillips Russell of Chapel Hill, state director of public information for the National Infantile Paralysis Foundation.

She discussed with the group campaign publicity, emphasizing that "an informed public is a giving public."

Counties represented at the meeting included Pitt, Beaufort, Greene, Craven, Pamlico, Tyrrell, Washington and Lenoir.

Local Representatives
Representing the local Business and Professional Women's Club, which is directing Pitt's campaign for the third year, were Miss Beasley, general chairman; Miss Jones, co-chairman; E. S. Gary, city chairman; Mrs. Ruel W. Tyson, rural chairman; Mrs. W. E. Peterson, Mothers March chairman; Mrs. Louise Carrigan, chairman of merchants' solicitation; Miss Josephine Saad, chairman of Dickinson Avenue merchants' solicitation; Miss Nancy Wilmore, mail solicitation chairman; and committee members Mrs. Clem Garner, Miss Ruth White, Mrs. Bert Sutton and Miss Mattie Hobbs.

Representing the county chapter in addition to Rose were D. H. Conley, K. T. Futrell and Dr. Connel Gurrington of Bethel.

Attend District March Of Dimes Meet In Greenville

Representatives from eight counties, in addition to two state representatives, attended a district pre-campaign March of Dimes meeting here last night. Among those present for the meeting were: left to right: Mrs. Phillips Russell of Chapel Hill, state director of public information for the National Infantile Paralysis Foundation; Miss Evelyn Beasley, local Marine Air Base; B. L. Davis, Greene County chairman; Jack McGee, state representative for the National Foundation; Amil Myers, Pamlico County campaign director; Clarence Rawls, Beaufort campaign director; Mrs. Amil Myers; and Miss Effie Brickhouse, Tyrrell campaign director (Reflector Photo by Edwina Haymes).

College Will Offer New Courses In Humanities

East Carolina College will include in its 1955-1956 catalog a series of new courses in the humanities which are planned for juniors and seniors and which in methods of instruction and presentation will cut across departmental boundaries and offer a new approach to subject matter.

Courses were organized and syllabi prepared by the Humanities Committee of the college, headed by Dr. James Poindexter of the department of English.

The general title of the three new courses is Currents and Conflicts of Thought in the Twentieth Century. They will deal, respectively, with the periods from 1900 to 1918, from the First to the Second World War, and since the Second World War. Each will be required of candidates for the liberal arts degree and will be open as an elective course to all upperclassmen.

The series of courses was planned in response to current educational thinking, which offers such criticisms of modern education as its narrowness and specialization, its neglect in providing a "broad and well integrated interpretation of our culture," and its failure to lead students into a "consideration of present problems of living" on either the practical or the aesthetic level.

Hard At Work To Finish Parade Floats

Working furiously to finish all floats in time for the annual Santa Claus and Children's Parade tomorrow afternoon at 4 o'clock are the local artists who have donated their time to the painting of the Christmas scenes. There will be 22 non-commercial floats in the parade, with the scenes constructed so they may later be removed from the truck or trailer and placed at Elm Street Park where they will form a lighted Christmas Lane until after the Yuletide season. This is a new project undertaken this year by the Merchants Association, which annually sponsors the parade. It is hoped by the Association that the Christmas Lane plan will become a permanent one for the city. (Reflector Photo by Alvin Taylor).

The courses will be listed separately in the college catalog and will not form a part of the offering of any one department. They will be administered by a specially constituted committee and taught in rotation by members of various departments.

In each course a historical background of the designated period will be followed by study and discussion of such areas as art, music, science, and literature in relation to Twentieth Century life and thought.

WHITE HOUSE DINNER
WASHINGTON (AP) — President and Mrs. Eisenhower entertained Cabinet members and their wives at a White House dinner last night. About 50 other guests attended.

Art Notes

An exhibition of a new collection of 27 original covers and illustrations from the Ladies' Home Journal, showing some of that magazine's most famous illustrations by contemporary American artists, will open Friday, Dec. 2 at the Greenville Art Gallery. The exhibit will close January 2.

The collection of paintings will be on view to the public from two till five thirty every day. It is the third such collection placed on tour by the magazine in recent years.

Like the others, the current collection has been placed on a tour of the United States and Canada by the Curtis Publishing Company in response to many requests from universities, art schools, art groups and art institutes. The other collections were exhibited at the Ringling School of Art, Sarasota, Florida; the University of Florida, Gainesville, Florida; the Maryland Institute, Baltimore, Maryland; the School of Design, Cambridge, Massachusetts; the Cartoonists and Illustrators School, New York, New York; Woodbury College, Los Angeles, California; and public art galleries in the leading cities of eight provinces in Canada.

William Fink, Art Editor of the Ladies' Home Journal selected the paintings in each collection as representative of good examples of the art of illustration. The works of ten well-known illustrators are in the current exhibition. They are Harry Anderson, Walter Biggs,

Ladies Of The Round Table Continue Study Of Georgia

On Tuesday, Nov. 29, Mrs. Howard McGinnis graciously entertained the Ladies of the Round Table. Her home was beautifully decorated with arrangements of white and yellow chrysanthemums. There were eighteen members present and two special guests, Mrs. James Evans and Mrs. Walter Taylor.

In the absence of the president, Mrs. J. E. Winslow, vice president, presided over a short business session. It was voted unanimously that the club buy a Christmas Seal T. B. bond.

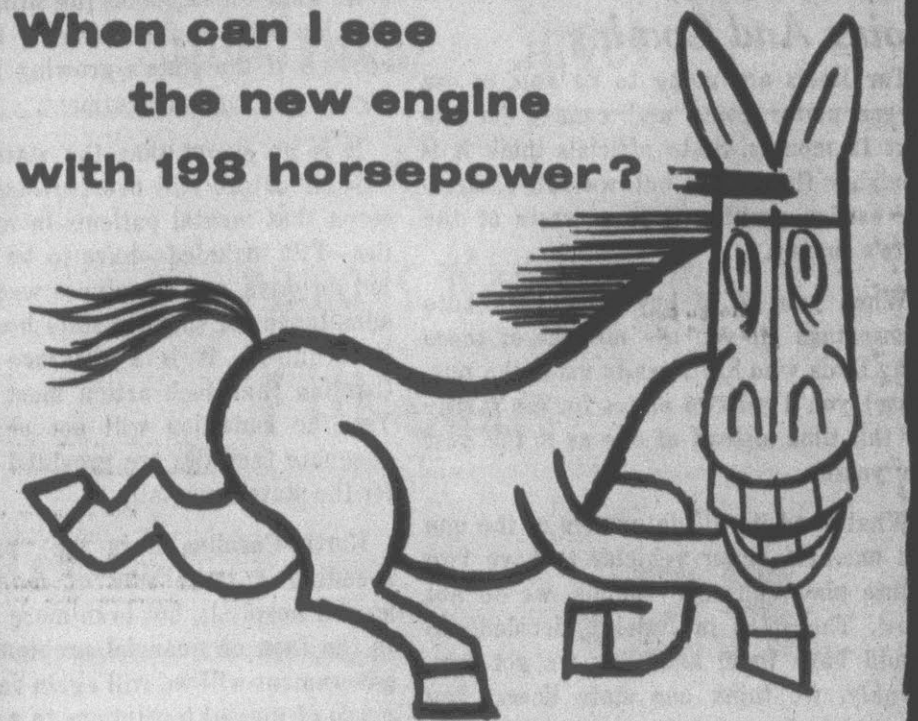

Mrs. Royce Hunsucker was program leader. She continued the study of Georgia, her native state, which was begun the previous meeting by Mrs. W. W. Howell also a native Georgian. Mrs. Hunsucker's subject was "Georgia's Superlatives". Her descriptions of Georgia's scenic resorts and historic landmarks were delightful. She also told of many of Georgia's leading industries such as Peach growing, Poultry raising, Cotton, gum and turpentine production and beef production. She also told of a number of well known historic personalities who in one way or another played an important role in the development of the culture of that great state. Bethesda was the first orphanage in America founded by George Whitfield and James Holusham. Juliette Gordon Lowe from Savannah was the founder of the Girl Scouts of America. The first woman United States Senator, Mrs. Rebecca Felton, was from Georgia. John Wesley organized in Savannah in 1736 the first Protestant Sunday School in the world. The first railroad in America was built in Georgia. The first steamship to cross the Atlantic was the "Savannah" and it sailed from the harbor of Savannah. Mrs. Hunsucker's entire paper was a superb revelation of facts that show how Georgians through the years have been getting places first in an amazingly varied number of ways.

The hobby for the afternoon was given by Mrs. Milton White. Mrs. White told how she enjoys remembering others with cards on birthdays and other special occasions and also in time of trouble. She tries never to let a day pass without doing a good deed for someone.

Mrs. McGinnis, assisted by Mrs. Browning, Mrs. Spain, Mrs. Winslow and Mrs. R. R. Taylor, served a delicious salad plate and sweet course with coffee.

Jails Or Hospitals For Mental Patients?

Long before North Carolina finishes spending the $22 million provided for mental institutions by the 1953 General Assembly, the people of the state and legislators are going to have to give serious consideration to more millions for mental institutions.

No item of state business is more urgent than the construction and expansion of facilities for taking care of North Carolina's mentally ill. The $22 million construction program now underway is going to provide many of the sorely needed facilities. It would be folly, however, to

License Plates Going And Coming

Tar Heels are going to be able to see license plates going and coming for the next 12 months. State officials think it is a mighty fine thing, but we still cling to our earlier position it is a waste of the state's money.

When you go to buy your 1955 auto license tags (if you are not one of those early birds who has already made the purchase) you'll get two plates for the family car this time instead of one as in the past few years.

What good it will do owners of the one and one-half motor vehicles to have two license plates on each vehicle, we do not know. The folks in Raleigh decided we should have them and now we got 'em. Frankly, we think one state license tag per vehicle has proved a very satisfactory arrangement since the state switched from the two-plate system several years ago. It is apparent that it cost the state (which means the taxpayers) a considerable amount of money to supply the extra license plate for each car and truck.

When the folks in Raleigh begin looking for ways to save state money during the coming fiscal year, we suggest they consider going back to the one-license-tag-per-vehicle system.

Strength for the Day

By EARL L. DOUGLASS
REFRESHING OF THE SPIRIT
Some of the great problems Christianity has encountered in its history were encountered in the early years of the Church's life.

One of these had to do with the relation of the written law of the Jews to the unseen spiritual laws of Christianity and especially of the living presence of Christ in the human heart. Although Christ declared that he came to fulfill the law and not a jot or tittle of it would pass away until all was fulfilled, nevertheless there was a way in which he made a definite break with the past. For he insisted that religion is primarily a matter of the inner heart, that it may exist quite apart from any prescribed rituals. He declared that he could bring to men's hearts spiritual refreshment, which in turn would give them the joyful realization of the forgiveness of sins and the realization also that they have power to meet life with all its problems, difficulties, and sorrows. This refreshment of spirit would become a permanent inner matter with them. As Jesus expressed it, the water that he would give a believer would, in turn, become in the believer's heart a well of water springing up into eternal life.

Christian faith, therefore, is among other things, the joyful realization on the believer's part that he has a continual source of power within his own nature. The emphasis is on "continuous."

Big Developments In Bolivia

By RAY TUCKER
WASHINGTON—Almost the only Latin-American nation which has not demanded more generous handouts from the United States at the current Rio de Janeiro economic conference is Bolivia, and the reason for her failure to do so may have far-reaching political, diplomatic and military repercussions.

The answer lies in present and prospective strikes of oil fields that may equal the rich treasures of Venezuela, the Middle East and our own Southwest.

Geological experts, including non-Bolivians, report that the oil belt is 120 miles wide, extending across the inland state. Although there have been five or six separate discoveries, actual operations have been at a minimum so far. But production is high enough to supply the country's domestic requirements, and soon there will be sufficient for export. Proven reserves are estimated at 50,000,000 barrels.

Bolivia is now seeking funds for greatly expanded development, but she does not feel that she has to beg for them. Her government is relatively conservative, and is enacting new petroleum laws favorable to private, foreign investors. Glenn McCarthy of Texas has received concessions on both natural gas and oil wells.

MAY BE REMARKABLE DEVELOPMENT—This new source of production has been watched by the U. S. State Department and the great petroleum interests in this country. If prospects are borne out, it will be a truly remarkable development.

It will, for instance, reduce or terminate our present dependence on the Middle East, with the long water haul through the narrow and, in wartime, dangerous Mediterranean.

talk ourselves into believing that the sum provided by the last General Assembly means North Carolina will not need additional large expenditures to provide adequate facilities for caring for mentally ill.

Few people will deny that the state's mental institutions were sorely neglected for many years. In the past few years, the citizens of the state have begun to take cognizance of the needs of mental institutions, and funds have been provided for new facilities. The state is still a long way from equipping itself with adequate facilities for taking care of its mentally ill.

An item which makes the situation more pressing is that an increasingly larger percentage of the state's growing population is requiring mental treatment.

It is no secret that the state's mental institutions are still overcrowded. It is no secret that mental patients in many counties—Pitt included—have to be housed in jail for days, and sometimes weeks, before admittance for them to state hospitals can be acquired. It is a disgrace to North Carolina that such action must be taken. Yet, the condition will not change until adequate facilities are provided for caring for the state's mentally ill.

North Carolina is in the process of spending a large sum of money on its mental hospitals, but even more is needed. In the face of financial problems in state government will we will again relegate the needs of mental institutions to a secondary position as was the case in the past?

"Spare" Acres Must Be Put To Work

The five per cent reduction in tobacco allotments announced for next year should not leave many idle acres in Pitt County if farmers make up their minds to utilize the acreage left by reduced tobacco allotments. Neither should the tobacco acreage reduction appreciably affect the farm income.

Pitt farmers have learned through experience they are better off to produce to meet the demand for their major cash crop than to produce much more tobacco than the market can consume and thereby cause appreciable drop in prices.

Most farmers hereabouts likewise have learned through the years of strict tobacco acreage control to utilize their land for production of other revenue-producing crops when tobacco acreage is reduced. Such is the course Pitt farmers must follow during the coming year in an effort to hold up their income.

Considering the overall production of flue-cured tobacco this year, the five per cent reduction in acreage for next year was less than we had anticipated. Pitt farmers should not find it difficult to utilize the land left by the reduction in the number of acres which can be planted in tobacco.

may need U.S. Government assistance in the early stages.

As of today, Washington is notably conservative and cautious in advancing funds. The Export-Import Bank will not make loans to finance oil development, which it regards as speculative. This is a reversal of previous policies, for it advanced $35,000,000 for a Bolivian pipeline in 1946. The money has been repaid in full.

And here the Latin Americans believe that they have a legitimate grievance against Uncle Sam. Although the United States has advanced between $75 billion and $100 billion to European, Asian and Middle East countries since World War II without any demand or expectation of repayment, we insist on payment of both the interest and principal of all advances to our southern neighbors.

THE SUPREME COURT OF COURT ATTITUDE—Judicial and legal circles are still debating, although quietly, President Eisenhower's forecast of the Supreme Court's attitude toward making effective its ruling against public school segregation. White House explanation that it was only an assumption—that is, a guess—suggests that word of the puzzled reaction quickly reached the White House.

The Supreme Court is meticulously careful that advance notice of its decisions do not leak out. The composers who set their opinions into type are given only a portion to prevent them from knowing the conclusion, which is put into type at the last moment.

When a decision affects the economic system, it is not handed down until after Wall Street has closed for the day, thus giving the market time to recover from or rejoice over its impact on stocks, bonds and business conditions generally.

HAD GOOD PRECEDENT—Eisenhower's prediction, of course, had no such economic effect. It dealt only with a political and constitutional question. And he had good precedent for his foreknowledge. Attorney General Brownell had told him that he would ask for delay in setting up any new system, and he expected that the Court will grant the request. It had already indicated that it would proceed slowly with this revolutionary social experiment.

The National Broadcasting Company in New York wired television station WNCT and stated that they would like for the station to know that they were telecasting coast-to-coast a special program about "a doctor from your town" who has been chosen the "Family Doctor of the Year" in the USA by the American Medical Association.

What Other Editors Are Thinking

IT SHOULD BE SHORT (Washington Daily News)
There is much speculation already about the length of the next session of the North Carolina General assembly which convenes in January.

Some people are predicting a long and drawn out session. Others are saying it will be relatively short.

The most important matter of business to come before the legislature is of course that of finances. How to meet the increasing money needs is first on the agenda. Either taxes must be raised or services cut. Perhaps both will be employed. But it is generally conceded now that taxes will be raised somewhere along the line. Where to place these raises offers a big question.

But in every session the question of finances is always a big one. And it'll be the big one this year. But the question need not keep the legislature in session for any great length of time. Those who have been predicting a long session are thinking in terms of the segregation question and how it will be met by the state. If that question has to be debated before the next General assembly, then we would agree that a long session is in prospect.

But recently the United States Supreme court has said that it will not implement the decision on how to desegregate until there is a full membership on the court. With one vacancy not yet filled, it will be sometime next spring in all probability before President Eisenhower's nomination will be confirmed.

So we agree that to take up the matter of desegregation in the next General Assembly will be like groping in the dark. The state has no way of knowing what the Supreme court will say on the methods to be employed in bringing an end to school segregation. And until we know what the Supreme court proposes, we are not prepared to take positive action in line with the high court decrees. There probably will be some legislators who will want to bring it up for discussion. But nothing concrete can be accomplished under the circumstances.

If it should so happen that both finances and the desegregation methods would come up at one session, then the session would be long. But right now it seems too unlikely that such will be the case.

So in the final analysis the question of finances will be the big one. And the question of desegregation will wait. In all probability a special session will have to be called later to study and discuss the methods of desegregation when the high court outlines its methods of adhering to its decision.

So why is there any need for a long session next January when the prospects for a special session later on are so real? We believe many members of the legislature will take the same view and that the session convening early next year will be a short one.

United States Senator. That was proven by the fact that more people attended the later reception in the conference room of the Senate Office Building than were able to get into the Senate galleries. It was apparent, however, that many of the visitors were attracted by the bargain day show.

BARGAIN — The Bargain was three shows for the price of one. Senator Sam Ervin Jr. was also being sworn in as an elected Senator, continuing the tenure which he already had by executive appointment for the remainder of the term to which Senator Clyde Hoey had been elected in 1950.

The unusual event of two Senators from the same State being inducted in the same ceremony attracted some visitors from other States as well as from North Carolina.

A major item in the bargain sale also was Senator Joe McCarthy, and he almost stole the show from Ervin and Scott—even for the North Carolinians in the galleries. He walked into the chamber just before the dual oath was administered to the North Carolina Senators by Senator Styles Bridges of New Hampshire in absence of Vice President Richard Nixon. His staged entrance with his voluminous bandaged arm much in evidence made a good many of the Tarheels in the galleries forget what they had been presumably come for, and even while the oaths were being administered it was observed from the press gallery that more people were watching McCarthy than were watching the ceremonies at the base of the president's dais. A number of the guests at the reception for Senator Scott left early in order to get back to hear some of the McCarthy debate and a good many stayed over the next day to hear more of it.

The bargain day appeal of Senators Ervin, McCarthy and Scott all in one package undoubtedly attracted a large part of the visitors from North Carolina. The fact remains that the main attraction was Kerr Scott's induction as a Senator.

The much publicized "branch head boys" were there, but it was difficult to distinguish them from the bankers and manufacturing executives. It was a typical North Carolina group. Alameda county gave the new Senator a distinguished citizens plaque. Moore county folks gave Mrs. Scott a native mink necklace and the Stokes county ham and eggs were served—cooked on an electric hotplate in the conference room instead of the spectacular capitol steps show.

TYPICAL — The men and women who made these presentations and the banking industrial and insurance executives who stood by and were photographed with the new Senator were dressed approximately alike and used comparably good English in what they said.

The occasion was a special session of the Senate. The House of Representatives was not in session. Yet about half the membership of the House from North Carolina showed up for the ceremonies, and the offices of every one of the Democratic Representatives was officially represented

Business Today

The Vending Business

By ELMER ROESSNER
Many a man has dreamed of investing his life's savings in a string of vending machines and thereafter living a life of little work and much income.

An alarm clock rings on the old dream today. Harvard Business School is publishing "Automatic Merchandising," a book by Professor Martin V. Marshall, which points out that operation of vending machines is hard work and that the profit ratios are low.

Quoting figures from the National Automatic Merchandising Association, Professor Marshall found that of 70 operators, the average profit before taxes was 2.7 per cent of sales for cigarette machine operators, 1.0 per cent for diversified operators, 8.2 per cent for cup operators and 4.8 per cent for ice cream and milk machine operators. Those, of course, are only averages; there were companies operating at a loss in each category—including one with a loss of 19.36 per cent.

"Vending is a high-cost method of doing business," Professor Marshall concluded. "Although there are wide ranges in operating expense ratios for various types of operations, it appears that most operators have expense ratios in excess of 25 per cent, with ratios of 35 to 50 and even 60 per cent being not at all unusual."

"Vending is a field which requires relatively heavy investments per employee, ranging from $6,000 to $10,000. Yet the reported net profit ratios of all operators in the NAMA study indicate that profits are fairly modest for large operators and high only for a few small companies."

Professor Marshall's book (which is published at $3.50) is far from being an expose of any phase of the industry; instead, it is a broad and relatively impartial analysis of all phases of it, including detailed analysis of the results of department store experiments in vending-machine selling, lists of manufacturers of coin machines and sample location agreements. But his data on costs and profits are particularly timely in view of current efforts to sell machines and routes to the unwary.

SEES LONG-TERM RISE IN TEXTILE MARKET

The long-term outlook for the textile industry is more favorable than in many years, A.W. Zelomak, economist, told textile students at City College of New York.

"The 1953-54 recession in the textile industry has been over for several months, even though the upturn has been only moderate," he said. "Fluctuations in the textile economy will continue, with the general upward trend in line with the further growth of

A Reluctant Christmas Spirit

By HAL BOYLE
NEW YORK (AP)—I approach the Christmas season reluctantly. It opens many wounds in my lifetime. Christmas gives scars as well as pleasure.

I was one of five children and cannot remember that as a child at Christmastime I ever gave a present to make my mother happy. Big scar to me. None to mother.

When I was young, there was no real overty. The tree was strung with cranberries and popcorn, the gift of love was an orange—how strange an orange was then—and a few nuts from Brazil to make the day strange and merry.

There was also a gift for us all, something like a sled we could all use and fight over.

But it was all for us. At my age I still can't recall when the idea first came to us that we should also give a present to our father and mother—that this was also part of Christmas.

We were used to taking things—and there were many of us, and our parents were used to giving and expecting nothing that we rather grew up and never knew quite what we owed. And perhaps our debt grew beyond our realization.

One of the torments of a grownup is that he realizes his obligations too late. What gift can I give my father 17 years dead, except a mellowing remembrance?

He infected my heart beyond repair—he and his love of everybody—and so, if I lived by his strength, nobody would ever be friendless utterly.

As I said before I approach the Christmas season reluctantly.

It isn't that I don't enjoy glad times, because I do. But where my father sowed the seeds of charity in his time with complete good will, I feel that now in trying to do the same thing I am but his echo, and never himself indeed.

Some of the other four boys in the family say I dream my father too high now that he is gone, but my sister, Dolores, who has two children of her own, says:

"There'll never be another man like dad."

Nor will there ever be. He still is the king of our Christmas tree. Bitterly the family regrets he isn't there to ignite the holiday—just by the warm light of his presence.

Certainly a lot of other people miss a lot of other people—just thinking of Christmas.

BROWNIE MOVIE CAMERA KIT $499

This Kit plus low-cost 8mm. Cine-Kodak Film is all you need for making movies indoors or out. Let us show you.

The photographic fates have been picking on my friend Bill lately. After his most recent experience in a makeshift darkroom, Bill was tempted to give up photography altogether. But being a sensible guy, it taught him instead to handle photo materials more carefully and plan things more thoroughly—in advance.

Bill's apartment was in the throes of redecoration and the hall closet was a little more crowded than usual when Bill pushed the clothes aside to load film holders. He put the film on the shelf and the holders on a small stepladder which he jammed in also, then he closed the door.

He had opened the package of film and was groping for the holder when it was brushed off by his fingers and fell to the floor. He stooped over and his hand went down to feel for the elusive holder—and right into a pile of wall paper paste, up to the wrist!

What a dilemma! He couldn't turn around and open the door—that would ruin the open film. Any other movement in the closet would get the paste on the clothes. After figuring the alternatives, he finally wiped his hand on his trousers. Then, using the other hand mainly, he replaced the film in the box before opening the door.

Right after this Bill went out for a weekend of picture taking, this time in 35 mm. color. He glanced at his camera's film indicator to make sure he was using the right type of film for daylight shooting. He didn't start worrying until his film counter went past 36 exposures to 37, 38 and 39.

At that point Bill found another closet to investigate whether the film was torn or extra long. He found—no film. Then he remembered what happened. He had started to load the camera and had the film box opened. First thing, he set the film indicator on the camera correctly for daylight type film. At that moment his wife called him—urgently. Rather than leave the camera open and the film lying around, Bill closed the camera back and put the film in the gadget bag.

Well you know what happened. By the time he got back, the fact that he was supposed to load the 35 mm film had slipped his mind. He had a vague memory that he had attended to the chore... until the sad awakening.

The photo field is full of booby traps waiting to trip up fans. A good way to avoid Bill's first experience in a closet is to jam two chairs or a chair and a stool inside. Sit facing one chair which has a back. Thus, the equipment is in a small, protected area you can reach.

Probably no warning is as effective as one experience of leaving the lens cap on the lens while shooting home movies or the slide in while shooting stills. Unfortunately, forgetting to turn the film immediately after shooting is a common failing, even after previous double exposures.

A camera fan has to develop a personal routine of shooting that checks each item off mentally: camera ready, exposure, focus, background, camera firm, squeeze gently change film. In time, a regular routine becomes entrenched and you're not likely to slip up on any one factor in the rhythm.

In the darkroom, all solutions in bottles should be labeled and dated. Labeled so that beginners, who aren't familiar with the odor of hypo, won't use it as a developer; and dated so that old solutions may be discarded.

Darkrooms should be kept clean and orderly to circumvent gremlins. Materials should be put away after a working session and the trays cleaned. In an apartment without a regular darkroom, the working equipment should be stored together on a closet shelf, if available, in an old suitcase or a wooden or cardboard carton.

Better idea, probably is to get a small chest of drawers to store equipment and materials. It should have a marble or plastic top which makes a good working surface and an enlarger stand.

Young Son Has Scientific Turn

RICHMOND, Va. (AP)—Mrs. H.J. Griffiths says her 14-year-old son, Arvon, has been a practicing scientist since he was three. As a toddling infant he used to beg for soap powder, starch and cooking ingredients to "make chemistry."

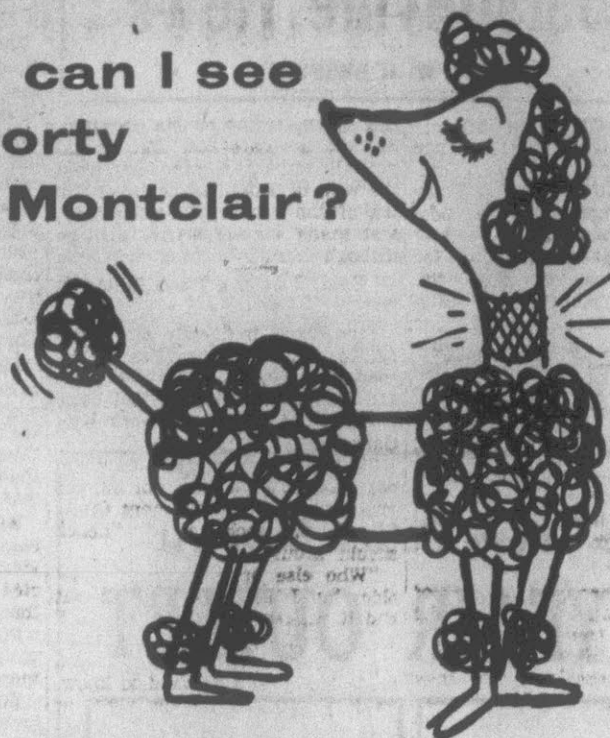

Arvon's room looks like the home base for a rocket flight to Mars or the Moon. There's a short wave radio, an electric tic-tac-toe, a photo laboratory, parlor magic equipment, telegraph equipment, a public address system linking upper and lower floors of the house, and lights go on automatically when the door is open. Some of it frightens Mrs. Griffiths—like a small box with parallel upright antenna wires which give off weird, dancing lightning flashes when a switch is flipped.

One gadget mother Griffiths likes very much. Arvon rigged up a recording microphone outside an upper window and his mother hears birds broadcast as she works downstairs.

"I have the most beautiful music in the mornings," she says.

Americans use about 17 billion gallons of water a day for domestic purposes.

JANE ABBOTT

CHAPTER TWENTY-ONE

Cindy was light of heart once more; the loneliness, the homesickness she had admitted to Gary Norbeck that morning at the pool had vanished. She had not had to keep her "flags flying" for, for these past several days, SHE, the aunt, was staying shut in her wing when she was not driving away somewhere. And Aunt Jennie, who before had been the one to shut herself in, now came frequently out into the yard. Aunt Jennie left the door between her part of the house and the kitchen wing open, day and night. Aunt Jennie brought food to her which she needed, for her stock was running low, her money, too.

Cindy made her first stew out of beef from a can and carrots and small onions from her garden. Proud of her effort she invited Aunt Jennie to share it. While they were eating, Aunt Jennie asked her about her father, though not in a prying way. And Cindy told of the wonderful times she always had when her father came to Covington. Telling about them brought those good times and her father close to her.

"I'm sure he'll be here before the summer's over. Dan said he'd come. He'll come unexpectedly—the way he's always come to Dan's and Bright's. He had a key and he'd just open the door and walk in."

"I'll be glad to see him," Aunt Jennie said. "I haven't, for a long time." And Cindy was ready to accept this aunt, for saying that.

Two days ago Aunt Jennie had asked, "I've some marketing to do in the village. Would you like to walk down with me?"

"Oh, yes, I'd love to!"

It was something different to do. And Cindy liked the way Aunt Jennie introduced her to the woman at the post-office and to the man at the bank. "My brother's daughter." Then they stopped at Mr. Middleton's house. "I want Mr. Middleton's cousin to meet you." The cousin Nettie and Aunt Jennie seemed to be good friends, though how that had come about Cindy could not understand. The cousin pressed a box of cookies on her to bring back with her. The cookies were very good.

It was swimming at the pool which contributed mostly to her light-heartedness. With Gary Norbeck there every morning, and Enid not there some of the times. On one of these mornings she went with Gary to his cabin to see his last painting of her. She had liked this one. She went back in the afternoon of that day and he painted her again, sitting on his doorstep. She did not care now that he did not talk while he worked; she liked the way he looked at her over the top of the canvas, a seeing way, that made a queer warm thrill go through her.

"Enid, I believe I am falling in love."

Enid drove frequently after supper to a farm a few miles up the road for milk and butter and eggs, and this evening Cindy had gone with her. She had to talk about Gary.

"What Gary Norbeck?" Enid did not make it a question, nor did she give any sign of excitement. Cindy considered such a confidence should arouse.

"Who else up here? He's a lot older but I like him more for that and it makes it—sort of serious!"

"Is he falling in love with you?" A bluntness in Enid's question made it almost a demand to know. As if a girl could know right at first at least for certain! It showed that Enid knew nothing of the thrilling stages of falling in love! Cindy answered, a little loftily, "Well, he looks at me sometimes, as if he were!"

Now, whenever she saw Hester drive out of the yard she let Nip and Tuck outside to play. They liked best to play in the barn, and from her back window she could see them if they came out into the yard. Often she sat in the barn door while, inside, they sniffed in cobwebby corners, and chased each other in and out of the empty stalls.

But this afternoon, after she let the cats out, she put water over her stove to heat for some washing. Everyone was gone. She had seen Aunt Jennie walk down the road an hour earlier. A few minutes ago Hester had gone out to her car, started it, then stopped, gone back into her wing, and Enid had come out with her and got in behind the wheel looking unwilling. Cindy thought, peeping at them through her window.

She sang happily as she rubbed and rinsed, and again as she hung out her wash. Gary had not come to the pool this morning but there was tomorrow. . . . Maybe, tomorrow, he'd want to do another painting of her.

Later, mindful that Hester might return any minute, he went out to the barn to corral her cats. They were nowhere in sight but she heard the crackle of dry old hay in the loft and climbed up the ladder. The cats were in a corner, jumping into the hay, tossing it up, rolling in it. Cindy joined them in their play, picking up handfuls of hay and burying them under it.

Then her hand slipped between the planks, touched something hard. A small tin box. She lifted it out curiously. It was exciting to find it. The cats, tiring of their game, were rubbing against her ankles. "Let's go down," she said to them. She went down the ladder, a little shiver running through her fingers from the clammy feeling of the box in her hand. The cats scrambled down after her.

The big car came into the yard just a moment or so after she closed her door behind herself and the cats. She waited until she saw Enid and Hester go into their door. Then she opened the box.

Money. She gave a gasp of surprise. Bills—the box was packed with them. Some $20 bills lay on the top. She drew back from the table. It must belong to the old man who'd lived here, and he was dead.

Alarm struck her. Hester might come in—she might accuse her of stealing it! She closed the box, opened the drawer that held her father's uncle's clothes and hid the box under them. She would leave it there until her father came.

Jennie Todd always had taken her early walks along the road. But one day she went into the fields. She liked the feeling of the rough grass under her step, the smell of it. She sat down on the ground under a tree. "Tomorrow I'll bring a book over here with me!"

She was aware of a feeling of competency which she never had felt before. Of thinking without the old confusion which so often had troubled it. She thought as she sat under the tree: "I'm staying here, but I've got to have something to live on! My savings won't last very long." And she dwelt on the problem quite practically. Boarders?

Her wing would not accommodate any. A bookshop in town, or a lending library? "There wouldn't be enough income to make a living out of it."

Then suddenly she remembered what the postmistress had said about being tired of her job. She knew such appointments were made in Washington—but were they for a small town like Killbuck? She thought: "I'd like it. Having people come in, giving them their mail. Talking to them the way that woman talked to me. Like a friend. . . . I'll ask Wick Middleton about it!"

The next day she walked down to the town. She went to Wick Middleton's office.

She went at once into the matter that had brought her here. "I've resigned from that school—I have to do something to earn some money. I thought. . . ." With the warm interest that came into his face it did not seem fantastic to tell him what the postmistress had said to her and suggest that perhaps she could get the appointment.

"You really want to stay there on the farm?" he asked.

Jennie flushed, laughed. "It is a new experience for me—to make a different life for myself, even to think about it! To be—not afraid to think!"

"Good," said Wick Middleton.

Another day of rain and Gary Norbeck found himself waiting for Enid to come. She had said she would.

He explained his eagerness in anticipating it by the fact that he had something to tell her. That Bressi was sending his canvas back to him and she could have it, if she still wanted it.

He was far from discouraged by its return. Bressi had written that it was not up to others of Gary's he had seen in the past.

Gary had read the letter a dozen times since he had got it, the day before. It lay open on his work table now and he reread some of it.

"I have often wondered what had become of you. I made a few inquiries but no one seemed to know. Then I came to the conclusion that you had abandoned your painting which possibility, when I contemplated it, gave me deep regret for I felt you had more promise than most young artists and also the will to work hard, which, put together, should have taken you far. Where is Killbuck and why are you there? I am hoping that some day you will come to Boston and stop in to see me. I would like a good talk with you."

"The will to work. . . ." That had been before he met Ursula. Near noon, Enid appeared in the door, a gray figure in her hood and raincoat. And Gary felt the impulse to kiss her as he had before. He checked it, said: "Come in. I was looking for you!"

She took off the coat, the hood, slipped out of her boots, came in, barefooted, carrying a box in her hand.

"You've had your long walk?" "No, I've been cleaning the kitchen. And I made a pie—a lemon pie. It was quite exciting—I never made one before. Oh back in school but with the domestic science teacher telling me every little thing to do. Silly to be proud of a pie, but I am! I gave half of it to Cindy and Aunt Jennie, but I brought the rest with me—if you'd dare eat it!"

"Sweet," declared Gary. "How is the career coming?"

She sat down on the stool. "I am getting somewhere," she said. "By the process of eliminating what I can't do. I'm good with figures—my best grades in school were in math—I thought I might study to be an accountant. Gary sprang to his feet in protest. "That's too dull!"

"Figures are not dull," she countered. "They are real—they never change and you know what they are—you don't have to guess! You put them together. . . ."

Gary said: "I want something different for you!" He stopped abruptly. What did he want for her?

Enid said: "But I think I'd like it—and isn't it best for one to do what one can do and likes to do? You do your paintings."

"Here—read this letter." He gave her the letter.

She read it, then a second time as if she were learning something from it. Then she looked up at him. "You will send him more? I mean—like the ones you painted before—the good ones? You'll really work?"

"Yes, I'll work! If it's in me to do it!" Then a smile broke the soberness of his face. "Do you know, girl, that you'd be good for me? A slave driver—that is what I need!"

She glanced over the room. "Maybe you should go away from here—maybe you're too shut in with yourself here to get ideas of what you want to paint."

"That's something to think about," he answered. Then: "What say we eat?"

As they ate, Gary told her more about Bressi. "He's one of the best critics in the country—has a gallery in Boston. If you have anything you've done hung in one of his exhibits you're getting places!"

He told of Bressi's kindness to him when he was beginning to paint Bressi's encouragement. "Everyone else thought I was a fool to chuck college so as to give all my time to painting, but Bressi didn't."

She asked, "You have a family?"

"I did then. Not much of a one—a grandfather and a brother. I've only the brother now and he despises me, so I don't count it a relationship."

Enid said: "I'm awfully confused about relationships. I do think everyone has a right to be free! I've talked about it—yes, I told you I had to feel free of my mother and now, lately, I'm worried about her—she isn't herself at all. Maybe you can't get wholly free of others. There are strings. . . ."

"Strings," Gary repeated. "And maybe we wouldn't like it, without them."

Enid cut the pie, and as they started to eat it Enid gave a cry of disappointment.

"It's awful! I must have forgotten something—put something wrong in it! And I was so proud of it!"

Then with tears in her eyes she began to laugh, and Gary laughed with her. "Oh, not too bad! Let's finish it!"

"No, no! And what'll Cindy and Aunt Jennie think of me? That I am useless. . . ."

"What—you a future accountant? Set neither of them can add up a column of figures!"

"They washed the dishes. They disposed of the pie. 'I'm going to make a good one,' Enid declared. 'I found an ancient cookbook on a kitchen shelf—but next time I'll ask Cindy.'"

"Strings," said Gary, smiling. "Yes, strings."

Then she put on her boots her raincoat, her hood.

"Next rainy day?"

"Yes."

A letter came the next week to Hester from Anne Babbitt. It read:

"Darling: 'I was in too horrible a rush to write you before I left Buffalo and you will observe that I left before the pageant. I simply was not going to stay and see Lydia Holly features in a big way when it should have been you! I'm here in Salem with my cousin Janet. Price for two weeks then going to Bar Harbor. Any chance of your joining me there?"

"This Gary Norbeck you wrote to me about—the name of Norbeck was familiar to me because of the Norbeck Mills. But I never knew any of the family. I figured this man who you said had been a might be some distant, poor relation. But, NO."

"The second day I was here, Janet took me to a bride luncheon—12 women. And straight off I was introduced to a Mrs. Alec Norbeck. Incidentally, she is the most stunning gal I've ever seen! She sat across from me at the table and I asked her: 'Is your husband any relation of Gary Norbeck's?'"

She laughed and said: "Very much of one—they're brothers." But when I asked her there was the queerest hush as if each one at the table held their breath. Then, quick, one of them started talking madly about something else. I still wasn't certain this brother and your man were the same, but before we sat down to play she came up to me and asked if I were a friend of Gary's. I said he was a friend of a friend of mine who was spending the summer in Killbuck where he lives. And she said: 'Oh, yes, Kill-buck. Gary's ridiculous, living in a place with such a name.' So then I knew they were the same. But, Hester, I wish you could have seen her face when she said it—well, probably you've seen a cat's face when it sights its prey and she looked just that way."

"The moment we got home I asked Janet to give me the low-down about it. And she had it—she's older than Mrs. Alec's set but she gets in with them quite a bit. Seems this Gary Norbeck is the black sheep of the family. Simply no good, Janet has heard some say. He wouldn't finish college, wouldn't go into the Mills, just hung around night clubs and cocktail lounges. Pretended to be an artist, but Janet said no one ever saw anything he had painted. He was in the Navy for a part of the war and while he was away Alec married his girl. When Gary came back he went on seeing her. It was the big scandal at the time. That was when mother was living in Florida and I wasn't coming back to Salem so I missed it all."

"But there was more, Janet said. His grandfather died very suddenly and after the funeral Gary Norbeck simply disappeared. He had to disappear or else be charged with the murder of his grandfather for he had knocked the old man down!"

"That's your man, darling. I hope this dope is what you want. It's fantastic to think of a brother-in-law of Mrs. Alec as a farmland but funny things do happen. If you are having the fellow do any work for you, I'd discharge him."

"I ran into Hubert on the street downtown a day or so before I left Buffalo. You don't have to worry about him—he looked very well."

"By now, this is a long letter for me. I'm exhausted."

ACC Students In Who's Who Edition

Shown above are the eight Atlantic Christian College students who have been selected for Who's Who In American Colleges And Universities. They are front row, left to right, JoAnn Moore, Greensboro, Peggy Ward, Rocky Mount, Kenneth Lamm, Wilson, Joan Kelly, Cameron, and Elena Lawler, Long Beach, Calif. Back row, left to right, Susanne Gill, Wilson, Peggy Nicholls, Greenville, and James Hemby, Ayden.

WHEN TO RETIRE an audience here when he was me," the senator said. "That time going to retire. I'll know when I'm too old to serve you — you won't have to tell me when I'm too old for hunting and fishing."

Nearly 4,000 Persons In Pitt Have Mental Illness, Disorder

There are almost 4,000 persons with mental illness or personality disorder in Pitt County, according to a report recently released by the North Carolina Mental Hygiene Society in Raleigh.

The report reveals facts and figures concerning the extent of mental illness in the nation and in North Carolina as prepared and furnished by the North Carolina State Board of Health, with a rough estimate of the extent of mental illness in each county in the state obtained by applying mental illness rates from two surveys to the 1950 census figures for North Carolina.

Pitt County ranks sixteenth in the state in the number of persons with mental illness or personality disorder with a total of 3,986.8, according to the survey. Counties with a higher total than Pitt are Alamance, Buncombe, Cumberland, Durham, Forsyth, Gaston, Guilford, Johnston, Mecklenburg, Robeson, Rockingham, Rowan, Wake and Wayne. Tyrrell County has the least number of mentally ill, with a total of 213.5.

Later Treatment
The survey reveals 168.9 persons who will need hospitalization later for mental disorder were born in Pitt County in 1952. Only nine counties, Buncombe, Cumberland, Durham, Forsyth, Gaston, Guilford, Mecklenburg, Robeson and Wake had higher totals, with Dare County having the smallest total of 4.5.

There are 516.7 children in Pitt County with behavior disorders, and 503.9 children who present school progress problems without mental deficiency.

Pitt ranks sixteenth in the former category, behind Alamance, Buncombe, Cleveland, Cumberland, Durham, Forsyth, Gaston, Guilford, Johnston, Mecklenburg, Robeson, Rockingham, Rowan, Wake and Wayne. Tyrrell County ranks lowest with 40.9 children with behavior disorders.

In the number of school progress problems without mental deficiency Pitt is tied for sixteenth place with Cabarrus County. Tyrrell County again has the lowest total with 39.9.

The report states the actual figures for each county may be either greater or less than those shown in the survey.

Ratio Doubled
It is pointed out that though the ratio of patients in mental hospitals to general population has doubled since 1903, this does not necessarily mean there is a real increase in the incidence of mental illness.

The report states the population is aging and there are more people in the age groups where admission to mental hospitals is highest, and there is greater awareness and understanding of the problems of mental illness and more confidence in mental hospitals, with the result that admissions are increased.

In 1953 there was a resident population of 9,699 patients in North Carolina State hospitals, 2,599 new patients being admitted in that year. The report states in 1952 $862.36 per patient was spent for the care of the mentally ill in state hospitals.

Number Suffering
Six to seven per cent of the total population is suffering from mental disorders and other personality disorders, according to two separate surveys in Baltimore and rural Tennessee, with ninety per cent of these cases being psychoneuroses and personality disorders which do not require hospital care.

Local Health Director Walter C. Humbert stated, "Mental hygiene is one of the immediate severe problems of this state and of the nation. This is evidenced," he pointed out, "by the fact that for the past two years the discussion of mental illness has been one of the top features of the agenda at the annual governor's conferences."

Humbert noted, "The proper finding and early management of disturbances can prevent severe permanent mental illness in 65 per cent of all persons affected."

December Can Become Best Business Month

NEW YORK (AP)—A home-stretch spurt can make December the best month of this year in industry and trade.

Merchants have high hopes Christmas retail trade will top last year's. And industrial output, in spite of a slowdown for the holiday, may hit its best pace of the year.

Although it started out lamely, 1954 can still make a good showing.

First reports from the stores tell of good Christmas traffic. The magazine Sales Management predicts December retail sales will total $16,900,000,000, 3 per cent above the year-ago dollar volume.

Merchants are wooing customers with advertising and price promotions. Finding prices either stable or a trifle lower customers are believed to be in the mood this year to buy. Last year many were waiting for big price breaks, which never came.

Forecasts of an industrial activity spurt this month are based largely on the early start auto makers got with new models. The industry plans to turn out more cars this December than in any other month this year.

A further rise in steel production and in a number of other industries is also looked for. As a result, the Guaranty Trust Co. of New York notes, "for the first time since early 1953 general business appears to be rising at a more-than-seasonal rate." It sees "a strong possibility of a further gain in December."

Purchasing agents report that in many industries new orders are now coming in faster than production is rising.

The steel operating rate has risen above 80 per cent of capacity. The American Iron & Steel Institute reports, and output is higher than at any time since early December 1953.

The U.S. Bureau of Mines forecasts an increase this month in the amount of crude oil that will be consumed here or exported. The bureau thinks the total will average out at 6½ million barrels a day.

The Federal Reserve Board looks for the December spurt to lift the year's total dollar volume of goods and services to $56 billion dollars. This would be only 2½ per cent under 1953's gross national product, a record $58 billion.

The expanding business activity is expected to keep employment high in December and make work weeks a little longer, and pay checks fatter.

Find Submarine Sabotage Tried

LONDON (AP)—Security police questioned the 60 crew members of the 1,120-ton Royal Navy submarine Artemis today in an attempt to discover who tried to sabotage the craft's engines while en route to exercises in Scottish waters last Wednesday.

The admiralty, announcing the investigation, said no charges had been made against anyone. It gave no indication of how the sabotage try was made.

The Daily Express reported a hand grenade had been placed in the sub's engine room. But a navy spokesman said: "As far as the admiralty is aware, no explosives have been found in the engine room."

BALTIMORE (AP)—"Go ahead and smoke—moderately" is the recommendation of Dr. William F. Reinhold, noted Baltimore surgeon, who discounts the idea smoking causes lung cancer.

Dr. Reinhold, who also is a member of the Scientific Advisory Board of the Tobacco Industry Research Committee told members of the Baltimore Rotary that he doesn't believe smoking has "anything whatever to do with causing lung cancer."

He called recent articles concerning the relation of cigarette smoking and lung cancer "irresponsible and unprovable."

COPPER ANNIVERSARY

AJO, ARIZ. (AP)—The 100th anniversary of the opening of the first copper mine here by white men was celebrated with a pageant. "The Copper Giant." More than 200 persons took part. The first mine was opened in 1854 by 14 men.

G-Men Whip Rocky Mount Quint, 46-35

By WAYNE BISHOP
Reflector Sports Writer

Coach Bo Farley's Greenville Phantoms pulled away in the last half last night to record a 46-35 win over the Rocky Mount Blackbirds in the season opener for both teams at the GHS auditorium.

At the end of the first half the G-men had only a 20-18 margin but they steadily pulled away in the last two periods for the final 11 point margin. The game was marred by the usual first game mistakes as both teams quite frequently threw the ball away. The Phantoms gave the impression of being a much better defensive club than they were last year.

Birds Start Fast
The Blackbirds started the game rolling like they were in midseason form. They fired in their first three shots without missing but the G-men came back to take the lead at 7-6 on Bob Howell's driving layup. After Jack Stallings put the Birds back into an 8-7 lead, Harold Edwards hit a jump shot to give the Phantoms a 9-8 margin. The G-men led until the final seconds of the first period when two long field goals by Gilbert sent the Birds ahead 14-13.

In the second period neither team could buy a basket and the Greensies led 20-18 at halftime. In the third stanza the G-men came out running and raced into a 34-29 third quarter advantage. In the final period crack shot Tommie Saleded poked in seven points to personally keep the G-men way ahead.

Coach Farley went with only seven players during the game. He used his starting five of Howell, Moore, Edwards, Sawyer, and Saleded plus subs Clark Noble and Ike Riddick. Edwards took high scoring honors for the night for the Phantoms with 15 points. The big Phantom strong-boy also snatched 15 rebounds off the boards. Edwards racked up eight of his points in the first quarter with Bob Howell passing brilliantly to set up most of those. Howell faked off the defense on several occasions to slip a pass into the unguarded Edwards for the score.

Saleded picked up 13 points for the Green Phantoms, 11 of those in the last half. The Phantom senior sharp shooter was firing them in right and left at the end of the game. Howell picked up nine points and grabbed 11 rebounds plus setting up several scores with his passes. Edgar Moore with four points, Ike Riddick with 3, and Pat Sawyer with 2 rounded out the scoring for the night.

Sawyer was content to be the playmaker last night, attempting only four shots during the game. The Phantom senior directed the attack and led the defensive play. Edgar Moore alternating between forward and guard pushed in two long shots but had an off night on his one-hander. Moore is capable of breaking into the double figures in the scoring department at any time. Riddick scored three points, all at valuable times for the Greensies. The junior guard still is not fully recovered from the illness he suffered last week and is a trifle weak.

The G-men go after their second win of the year tomorrow night when they go to Wilson for a ball game with the Cyclones. The Cyclones are another AAA team and the G-men hope to make it two straight against the AAA Eastern Conference.

Durocher Predicts Giants May Be Stronger In 1955

By JOE REICHLER

HOUSTON (AP)—Leo Durocher refused to predict another pennant today but declared the New York Giants might be stronger in 1955 and hinted that Brooklyn and Milwaukee would have to be better if they are to prevent his world champions from repeating.

Relaxing in his plush hotel suite while attending the minor league convention here, the dapper Giant manager conceded his job "might be a bit tougher" if the Dodgers' Roy Campanella and the Braves' Bobby Thomson return to top physical form.

"I don't know whether we can win or not," he said frankly. "I do know we have a good ball team. It may be even better than last year's. But it might be harder to win. It all depends on how much the Dodgers and Braves help themselves from now until the start of the season. You've also got to remember that every club shoots at the camp. That's the way it should be."

Durocher also conceded he could use another starting pitcher but added quickly his team was set and that he had made no attempt to make a deal here.

Calling Johnny Antonelli and Ruben Gomez his "Mr. Left and Mr. Right," who would pitch every four days regardless of the opposition, he said he was counting on Sal Maglie, 37-year-old clutch pitcher, as a one-week starter.

He said he was counting heavily on Monte Irvin making a comeback and predicted the big left fielder would climb back into the .300 class again next year.

Trading business picked up a bit as the New York Yankees and Baltimore Orioles finally announced completion of their 18-player deal. The Orioles sent first baseman Dick Kryhoski, catcher Darrell Johnson, outfielder Jim Fridgey, pitcher Mike Blyzka and farmhand Ted Delguercio, an outfielder with Wichita, to the Yankees for southpaw Bill Miller, and infielders Kai Segrist and Don Lepert. Kryhoski stays with the Yankees but Johnson, Fridgey and Blyzka go to Denver and Delguercio to Birmingham. Another Baltimore player must be sent to New York by April 1.

In the first half of this gigantic transaction two weeks ago, the Orioles sent pitchers Bob Turley and Don Larsen plus shortstop Billy Hunter to the Yankees for pitchers Jim McDonald and Harry Byrd, outfielder Gene Woodling, shortstop Willie Miranda and catcher Gus Triandos and Hal Smith.

In another major league deal, the Detroit Tigers purchased left-handed Bob Schultz from Pittsburgh, Ray Kennedy, former farm director of the Pirates and Tigers, was named to the job of personnel director of the Kansas City club. The title is equivalent to the rating of general manager.

Seven N.C. Cage Teams In Action

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The fledgling basketball season got into the swing of things last night with seven games played, involving North Carolina teams.

Wake Forest's center Dickie Hemric bagged 36 points to set a scoring record for the school as George Washington went down in defeat 107-86 in the season opener.

The Deacon's previous high score was 103 against South Carolina last year.

Hemric, All America contender, hit on 13 of 18 field goal attempts as more than 2,000 fans cheered. Superior marksmanship was the difference as the University of North Carolina downed the McCarry Eagles 79-75 in the official opening of the season at Asheville. The halftime score was 44-31 in favor of the Tar Heels when the Eagles staged a comeback that had the collegians battling to hold a slim lead as the game approached the end. Looking like a veteran, Tar Heel forward Len Rosenbluth, a sophomore, scored 22 points to lead.

Elon College took an easy 101-51 victory from Mayodan YMCA at Mayodan with forward Clay Brown leading the way with 25 points.

Conference champion, had a shooting average of 42 per cent, attempting 98 and hitting 41.

At Johnson City, Tenn., Milligan College defeated Appalachian State 77-61. The closest the Apps came in the second half was four or five points. John Pycha of Appalachian was the game's high scorer with 20 points.

FAMILY AFFAIR
ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP)—One man's family had a tight hold on the Barton Hills Country Club golf championships.

Susan LeClair won the women's championship. Two days later her husband, Keith, took the men's title.

Australian Davis Cup Hopes Slump

MELBOURNE (AP)—Australia's Davis Cup hopes tumbled to a new low today as America's Vic Seixas cut down an unhappy, ill-kickadical Lew Hoad in the semifinals of the Victoria tennis championships.

Supremely confident and showing a rare touch, the tall U.S. titleholder from Philadelphia won over Australia's problem child in a drizzling rain and tricky galelike winds at Kooyong Stadium 6-4, 6-2, 7-5.

On Saturday, Seixas plays Aussie Ken Rosewall for the title, but nothing that happens then can lift the pall hanging over this tennis mad nation as the result of the complete collapse of Australia's No. 1 star.

Rosewall won the right to play Seixas by whipping his fellow countryman, Rex Hartwig, 6-2, 6-2, 6-3 in the other semifinal.

The 20-year-old Hoad, who scored two important singles victories in the Challenge Round against the U.S. a year ago, was on the verge of tears when he left the court a badly beaten victim of Seixas' nubile racket.

"Lew is a badly mixed up kid," said Adrian Quist, the younger's employer and adviser. "He's so troubled with himself he just does not give a darn. It will be necessary to do something to revive his enthusiasm for the game."

Bill Talbert, captain of the U.S. team, was greatly pleased with Seixas' victory, but was quick to point out the danger of thinking that the U.S. is sure to win back the cup this year.

"It would be foolish for us to be lulled into a feeling of satisfaction at this stage," Talbert said. "Certainly Hoad is in bad form and his mental attitude is not all to be desired, but we know this much, Australia has many good players and they will have a singles player against us who wants to win. If not Hoad, it will be somebody like Mervyn Rose, Hartwig or someone else."

The U.S. captain contrasted America's position this year compared to last.

"Seixas was out of touch and badly troubled last year," Talbert declared. "This year he is sharp, confident and in prime condition. Meanwhile the Australians are troubled about Hoad. The shoe is on the other foot now and naturally we are pleased."

Big Vic was pleased with his play, too.

"I felt eager and in good form, but of course Lew played very badly," Seixas said. "He is troubled about something and is taking it out on the ball."

Seixas' victory, but was quick to point out the danger of thinking that the U.S. is sure to win back the cup this year.

"It would be foolish for us to be lulled into a feeling of satisfaction at this stage," Talbert said. "Certainly Hoad is in bad form and his mental attitude is not all to be desired, but we know this much, Australia has many good players and they will have a singles player against us who wants to win. "Seixas was out of touch and badly troubled last year," Talbert declared. "This year he is sharp, confident and in prime condition. Meanwhile the Australians are troubled about Hoad. The shoe is on the other foot now and naturally we are pleased."

Big Vic was pleased with his play, too.

"I felt eager and in good form, but of course Lew played very badly," Seixas said. "He is troubled about something and is taking it out on the ball."

Seixas' victory, but was quick to point out the danger of thinking that the U.S. is sure to win back the cup this year.

"It would be foolish for us to be lulled into a feeling of satisfaction at this stage," Talbert said. "Certainly Hoad is in bad form and his mental attitude is not all to be desired, but we know this much, Australia has many good players and they will have a singles player against us who wants to win. If not Hoad, it will be somebody like Mervyn Rose, Hartwig or someone else."

The U.S. captain contrasted America's position this year compared to last.

Coach Porter Has Hoard Of Potential Basketball Power

By BRUCE PHILLIPS

Reflector Sports Writer

When Coach Howard Porter fields his 1954-55 cage team against Guilford Saturday night in Greensboro, he'll be introducing one of the finest collections of former high school stars in the state.

Porter is quick to point out that upon these frosh and their development rest the fortunes of the hardwood Pirates for the next several seasons.

The list contains several All-State players of last year and all made All-Conference and All-Tournament teams.

To begin with, there's Jerry "Moose" Bosquet of Haw River. Although playing with a comparatively small school, the 6-5, 205-pounder made almost every All-State list conceivable. He played four years of varsity in high school and led his team to the state's district playoffs.

Marion Hales of Wilmington's New Hanover High was one of the most sought after prep basketballers in the state when he graduated in 1951. After two-year hitch in the Army, he came ECC way. While at New Hanover, a AAA school and the biggest in North Carolina, he won laurels that runs on and on. He was All-Conference. All-Tournament. All-State and the standout in the All-Star game at Greensboro. Besides these, he led Wilmington to the state championship. He averaged, while in high school, a nifty 16.4 points.

Then how about Guy Mendenhall, 6-5 tower from Cary? He was probably one of the most heralded high school cagers around last season. He was profoundly instrumental in Cary's Class A championship in 1953-54. He was named All-Conference and All-Tournament and was high in the balloting for All-State.

Nick Nichols is another bona fide charley from the prep world. He stands 6-4 and was one of Leaksville's big guns in their drive to the Class AA championship last year. He was the team's second highest scorer and an All-Western AA conference selection. Waddell Solomon is a runt as basketball players go, standing only 5-9, but what he lacks in size he makes up for with ability. Playing with Greensboro Whirlies last season, he contributed a lot to the winning of the Western AAA Conference title. He was the team's second highest scorer and outstanding playmaker.

Getting nearer home, there's Maurice Everett of Robersonville. The fiery little guard played four years of varsity for Coach Bob Lee's Rams. He led his team to the state's district playoffs.

The only "foreigner" on the squad is Fred James of Churchland, Va. The sharpshooter holds the Virginia high school scoring record. He once popped in 83 points in one game. He averaged in the neighborhood of 40 points per contest. He was, naturally, All-State last season.

So, Coach Porter could have a top-notch ball club if the jump from high school to college isn't too broad for his celebrated frosh. Anyway, the players certainly came to East Carolina with good recommendations.

taking an easy contest by a 25 point margin. Vance Taylor, a reserve forward, took the limelight by scoring 20 points, 17 of which came in the last eight minutes of play, and took high scoring honors for both teams. Latham poured in 17 for the winners and Manning added nine.

Oak City's Worsley tipped in 19 points to lead his team. Harrison and Etheridge contributed 10 apiece. The box:

The Bethel boys had equal success.

Four Indians On '1,000 Fan Club'

CLEVELAND (AP)—Four pitchers on the Cleveland Indians are members of the "1,000 Fan Club." To be a member of the mythical society, a hurler must strike out 1,000 batters.

Bob Feller leads the active hurlers in this organization. He has fanned 2,538. Hal Newhouser is next on the Tribe with 1,788. Early Wynn has 1,172. Bob Lemon made it this year. He now has 1,030.

Saxton Fights Non-Title Bout

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Newly crowned world welterweight champion Johnny Saxton and challenger Ramon Fuentes meet in a 10-round non-title bout tonight, and every fight fan worthy of the term faithful hopes the encounter will turn out better than it shapes up, meaning dull.

This is the first appearance for Saxton, the 24-year-old Brooklynite, often described as a specialist in defense, since he out-defended Kid Gavilan for the title in their struggle in Philadelphia Oct. 20.

Smash 2 Violins, And Find Pianist

By W.G. ROGERS
Associated Press Arts Editor
NEW YORK (AP)—Smash two violins to pieces and you get one pianist.

That's the story of Robert Casadesu, the Frenchman whose piano playing is one of the rare delights of the concert hall.

It started in Spain two generations back, according to the pianist, who uses perfectly adequate English to begin his story, then gets excited by it and, before he knows it, relapses into his native French.

Casadesu's grandfather, a Spaniard—the origin of the name is "House of Jesus"—longed to be a musician. His mother hated the idea, so she took his violin and broke it. That left him with the guitar and nothing else. Caught in Paris in 1870 by the Franco-Prussian war, he was put into uniform and packed off to the army; he settled in France, married and told his wife:

"Every child we have is going to be a musician."

There were nine children; he almost fathered an orchestra.

The first child, Francis, was a conductor. The second, Robert Casadesu's father, was an actor and singer. The third, Henri, will be remembered here for his appearance in the 1920s in an apartment called the Society for Ancient Instruments. Under the management of Arthur Judson who now takes care of Robert's business interests. The fourth brother was a 'cellist killed in World War I; the fifth, their concert on a limited edition of 2,700 disks exclusively for patrons of the evening affair and friends of the Library.

Casadesu remembers a man in his forties who came to him to be taught to play professionally.

"Too late," he declares. "At 12 years of age the pianist must be able to play the most difficult pieces. After that his muscles stiffen."

"I practice three hours a day. Anyone working with modern music needs four hours, but that's the maximum."

It was 30 years ago that Paris-born Casadesu first went to teach in Fontainebleau at the American Conservatory, of which he became director in 1935.

"Pianists were very poor then. They were better in 1935; they are much better now. I prefer them now because of their technique, because their playing is always clean."

He divides his time now between Paris and Princeton, where he has had a home for 14 years.

Audience Abuses On TV Are Criticized By Panel

NEW YORK (AP)—Ever have the sound on your TV set adjusted nicely for the program only to be almost blasted out of your chair by the commercial? Ever feel sometimes that there are only brief interruptions of the commercials for entertainment?

Then you have company. Those are among the abuses singled out by Chairman Deems Taylor and fellow judges of the Sylvania Television Awards Committee in their annual report last night.

The committee gave TV credit for "a definite upward swing in the quality of programs" in the past year but added that "unfortunately, television retains some less commendable features."

"There still is too much time and energy devoted to trite, banal and downright silly concoctions," it continued. "Many shows, in aiming at the widest possible audience, altogether miss the target of true entertainment values."

Among the specifics cited against TV was the "pitchman technique" in which "announcers manage to turn a purported program into one long, repetitious commercial."

The committee also deplored "putting pressure on parents... through the children" and the fact that "youngsters are taught to chant singing commercials much the way they once learned nursery rhymes."

And on many programs shown at hours when children are watching, it said, "specific details of crime and clever criminal techniques are graphically shown" but "the actual punishment is left to the viewers' imagination." At no time, the committee added, "do the impressionable youngsters learn what it is like to spend a large portion of one's life in prison."

Warned the committee: "although we deplore censorship in any form, we cannot but feel that television, by failing to cope with its own problems, is providing potent ammunition to those who are anxious to impose restrictions up on it."

Pentagon Plans For Continental Defense Outlays

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Pentagon plans soon to increase its spending for continental defense and guided missiles.

Secretary of Defense Wilson included those items among several he said would call for heavier outlays in the 35-billion-dollar expenditure budget he foresees for the fiscal year beginning next July 1. Total spending at that level would be about half a billion less than docketed for the current year.

Wilson gave no details, but expenditures this year for continental defense — interceptor planes, anti-aircraft weapons and radar warning networks in the United States, Alaska and Canada — are expected to be about 600 million dollars.

The Pentagon also will seek authority to build a fifth 60,000-ton supercarrier, Wilson said in answering questions at a news conference yesterday. Three of the huge carriers are now under construction and Congress already has authorized construction of two more.

In the discussion of supercarriers, reporters asked Wilson's opinion of an address by British Field Marshal Lord Montgomery this week in which he expressed the view that the day of the aircraft carrier is "approaching its end."

The U. S. Navy finally obtained approval to start the supercarrier program only after several years of controversy and over the objection of the Air Force. Obviously with this controversial background in mind, Wilson said of Montgomery's comment:

"He is a very brave and bold man to come into another country and give some advice."

News From Ballards

By MRS. G. S. NICHOLS

Attendance at Piney Grove Baptist Sunday School has been excellent during the month of October and November reaching 206 on the second Sunday in October and 180 to 184 on several Sundays. Mrs. Frances Cassick, adult class teacher, asked the members of her class to try to get all the absent ones to come next Sunday and make the attendance record in December the best ever. Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Dickerson, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Coward, and G. S. Nichols have recently added their names to the adult class roll.

The regular preaching service will be held on December 12, at 11 o'clock. If you are not attending Sunday School and church, you are invited to come to Piney Grove.

Every one is invited to prayer service at Ballards Community Center on each Wednesday evening at 7:30 o'clock. Attendance increases at each service.

Mrs. Warren Reynolds and little son arrived Saturday evening to be with Mrs. Reynolds' mother, Mrs. W. H. Elks who has been ill at her home the past 8 weeks.

Mr. and Mrs. James R. Crawford and family of Grifton, Mr. and Mrs. Carlton Hyman and sons of near Bethel, Mr. and Mrs. James E. Gattin of Tarboro, Mr. and Mrs. Noah L. Edwards and son, Mr. and Mrs.

Leslie Evans and sons of near Greenville and Miss Malvina Crawford of Washington, D.C. were Thanksgiving Day guests of Mr. and Mrs. Ray Crawford.

Mrs. James E. Stokes and daughter Linda of Washington N.C. spent the Thanksgiving holidays at the home of her mother, Mrs. Mamie R. Holloway.

Mr. and Mrs. Owen Tyson and Miss Carol Ann Tyson visited friends in Kinston on last Tuesday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. I. B. Nichols and children and little Nickey Nichols of Charlotte spent the holidays in the home of Mr. and Mrs. G. S. Nichols.

Mr. and Mrs. Austin Briley were visitors of Mr. and Mrs. Whitfield in Washington, N. C. Thanksgiving Day.

Friends will be glad to know that Mrs. Cora Crawford has returned home from Pitt Memorial Hospital and is improving nicely at her home.

Willis Crawford who is attending school at Campbell College spent the holidays at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ray Crawford.

Mr. and Mrs. The Joyner and sons Brian and Doug were guests of their daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Fluke at a Thanksgiving supper at their home in Greenville on last Wednesday evening.

Friends of Mrs. John Wooten will be sorry to learn that she has undergone a major operation in Duke Hospital. Mrs. Wooten is a former resident of this community and we wish for her a speedy recovery.

Mr. and Mrs. John Flanagan spent the weekend in Richmond at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Bill Gillette. They were accompanied home by Mrs. Annie Flanagan who had been visiting in the Gillette home.

Hook Rug Demonstration For HD Women

Approximately 35 Home Demonstration club women attended the hook rug demonstration given Tuesday in the local Home Demonstration laboratory by Miss Rose Elwood Bryan, marketing and food conservation specialist from State College. This "special interest" meeting was held because of so many requests from club women for a hook rug demonstration, Home Agent Mrs. Lillie Little said. Following Miss Bryan's lecture, the women were given materials with which to practice the craft. Shown seated above are Miss Thelma Flanagan of Ballards, Mrs. Jarvis Tripp, Sr. of Red Oak, and Mrs. E. M. Tyson, Sr. of Ballards as Miss Bryan gives them further instructions on hooking rugs. Sees No Reason To Present Case To Grand Jury KINSTON—Efforts of the State Highway Patrol in Lenoir County to secure a grand jury probe of the roadway death of J. B. Bullock, 25-year-old Ayden war veteran, appeared to be thwarted here Tuesday.

District Solicitor Walter Britt said his office found only circumstantial evidence in the case and he could see no reason for presenting the case to the grand jury.

Bullock rode to instant death on September 12 when a late model car operated by his companion Tip C. Adams Jr., 28, of Greenville went out of control at a curve on N.C. 55, seven miles east of Kinston and overturned.

Adams, subsequently indicted by patrolmen for manslaughter, was freed at a preliminary hearing. Recorder Albert Cowper, noting that only circumstantial evidence was available, ruled "no probable cause."

Sgt. John Laws of the Highway Patrol I said the patrol felt the 511 feet of skid marks at the scene constituted evidence enough of negligence for a jury trial and approached Solicitor Britt, requesting an indictment for manslaughter for grand jury review.

Laws quoted Britt as declining, saying he did not care to contest a decision rendered by Cowper.

Britt, approached by The Kinston Free Press, concerning his alleged statements to the patrol, at first disclaimed any knowledge of such a talk.

However, upon reiteration of the accident details, Britt admitted he might have talked with patrolmen concerning the incident. Questioned by a reporter on his alleged stand as solicitor in declining to work with the Highway Patrol in a case marked with such physical evidence, Britt replied, "If there had seemed to have been a flagrant miscarriage of justice, I would have approved an indictment. There didn't seem to be much but circumstantial evidence in this case and I didn't see much use in going against Albert's (Recorder Cowper) ruling."

Heavy Ideology In Popular Songs

HONG KONG (U)—The Peiping Communists have been holding a popular song contest.

The Peoples Daily gives few titles:

"The Heart of the People Beat as One."

"March of the Chinese Peoples Volunteers in Korea."

"Song in Praise of Mao Tse-tung."

"Antie Wang wants Peace."

"We Are Not Afraid of Bloodshed."

One Red songsmith condemned reactionaries and counter-revolutionaries with "You Bad Fellow."

Peoples Daily says this should be sung with bitterness.

One set of lyrics goes this way:

"The U.S.S.R. is a Socialist state which we should well emulate. It has ways of construction, and its industry and agriculture prosper."

Even the Peoples Daily found this a little heavy with too much conceptualization for a good song.

The name of the song? "Emulate the U.S.S.R. in the Construction of Our Motherland."

Appliance Group To Meet Tuesday

Utilities Superintendent Leonard P. Bloxam, W. A. Darden and S. E. Briley of the local Utilities department will be guests at the Greenville Appliance Dealers' meeting Tuesday night at 7 o'clock at the Old Towne Inn.

Chairman Ed Tipton explained through the regularly scheduled meeting of the Association is for the second Tuesday in each month, dinner accommodations could not be secured on that date this month, hence the change to the first Tuesday night.

The guests from the Utilities department will make suggestions as to what can be done to correct the wiring situation presently existing in Greenville, Tipton said.

He pointed out most homes are wired with the minimum facilities and no provisions are made for ample electricity for appliances and future increases in the use of electricity. The lack of amp load results in the merchandise of appliance dealers being criticised for faulty appliances, he said.

Also on the agenda will be the discussion of plans for assisting the under privileged at Christmas.

Wives and employees are especially invited to attend the meeting.

Plan Tribute To Radio, Television

The Greenville Kiwanis Club will pay tribute at its supper meeting Friday night to the television and radio services of the country.

Special guests will be Television Station WNCN Manager A. Hartwell Campbell, Radio Station Manager Harry Severance and Banker B. B. Sues, who will represent Mayor Bill Whedbee.

Leonard Bloxam will be master of ceremonies and President John Barnhill will preside.

Antarctic Trip For Icebreaker

BOSTON (AP)—The 6,500-ton Navy icebreaker Atka headed southward today carrying civilian and government specialists towards the antarctic.

The 269-foot vessel commanded by Cmdr. Glen Jacobsen, of Seattle, Wash., left Boston yesterday on a five-month expedition.

Chief purpose of the voyage, first U.S. expedition toward Little America in seven years, is to make preliminary scientific surveys in preparation for a larger expedition planned for the International Geophysical Year in 1957-58, in which 38 nations will participate.

'Intrigued' By The Open Road

DETROIT (AP)—Dr. Murlidhar Sahum, an interne from India, told Traffic Judge John D. Watts yesterday he was so "intrigued" by a Detroit expressway he "just had to speed."

He was arrested for driving 85 miles an hour in a 55-mile zone on the John C. Lodge Expressway. "I was not going 85 but I will admit to 70," said Dr. Sahum. "The open feeling on the expressway intrigued me. We do not have roads like these in India. They are beautiful, almost unbelievable."

Judge Watts fined him $25 for reckless driving.

AID AIROPPED—WASHINGTON (AP)—An airdrop of U.S. aid supplies in northern Laos is under way, according to reports received by the Foreign Operations Administration. The reports indicated the supplies are going to soldiers and civilians either released or escaped from Communist forces in the recent Indochina fighting.

Jaycees Holding Bulb Sale In City Tonight

The Greenville Junior Chamber of Commerce tonight will conduct a house-to-house sale of electric light bulbs in an effort to raise money for its annual Christmas gift baskets to needy families.

Proceeds from the sale will be used to provide baskets for 20 to 25 needy families to be distributed shortly before Christmas.

Harry Douglas, chairman of the Christmas Activities Committee for the organization, said today that bags containing two 60 watt bulbs, two 75 watt bulbs and one 100 watt globe are to be sold by Jaycee teams in the house-to-house campaign tonight.

Douglas pointed out that the number of bulbs contained in the bags would retail for $1.01. The bags are to be sold for $1.

The sale is scheduled to begin about 7 p.m., according to Douglas, and the Jaycee teams hope to visit most of the homes in Greenville. "All proceeds will go to buy Christmas baskets for needy families in the City of Greenville," the chairman stated.

He said a list of names will be obtained from the welfare department from which families to receive the baskets will be chosen. Each of the families will be investigated by a committee headed by Neil Singletary before the baskets are distributed.

Douglas said the baskets are to contain staple food items such as flour, sugar and other foodstuffs. Also included will be candies and toys for the youngsters in the families.

Jaycee President Frank Dail urged Greenville citizens to purchase the bags of light globe when called on by club members tonight.

Dail declared that purchasers will receive a good value for their money and at the same time will be helping to provide a brighter Christmas for persons who would otherwise go destitute during the holiday season.

Willard T. Kyzer At Atlanta Meeting

Willard T. Kyzer, local Chamber of Commerce Manager, is attending the fall meeting of the Board of Trustees of the Southeastern Institute of Chamber of Commerce Executives in Atlanta, Ga. today, tomorrow and Saturday.

Plans will be made at this meeting for the institute to be held at the University of North Carolina next June, including the selection of courses to be offered at that time.

Kyzer serves as chairman of the L. P. Dickie Memorial Scholarship committee. He is also a member of the committee on general lectures.

Give Judgments In Five Cases

In Superior Court Wednesday, the Court handed down judgments in 5 cases, with Judge Grover A. Martin presiding.

The cases and judgments: Willey James Tyson, charged with an attack with deadly weapon with intent to kill; case was not pressed with leave.

James Waldrop Williams, charged with assault and battery; case was not pressed with leave.

Harold Ray Wilson, charged with driving drunk; jury rendered a verdict of guilty as charged. Judgment of court: that Wilson be confined to the common jail of Pitt County for 6 months; pay a fine of $100 and costs. The sentence was suspended upon the conditions that Wilson pay the fine and costs at this term of court; and that he not operate a vehicle on the highways of North Carolina for a period of 1 year.

Edward Earl Eason, charged with being drunk and resisting arrest; at the close of state's evidence, the defendant pleaded guilty to public drunkenness, which plea the state accepted. Eason was fined $50.00 and costs.

Raymond David Holden Jr., charged with driving drunk; case was not pressed with leave.

The money would be used to: (1) recapture the portion of the potato market formerly held by North Carolina producers; (2) promote research in consumer packaging, considering the size of package, variety, methods of sale and market preference. (3) stimulate sale and consumption through advertising, promotion, personal contact, and other means; (4) encourage research on harvesting, handling, packaging, grading, and transportation to increase efficiency of marketing and to carry a more desirable product to the consumer; (5) support research to develop varieties more acceptable to consumers; (6) to promote the fact that North Carolina potatoes have excellent eating quality; (7) keep potato farmers informed of all new developments in production, marketing, and processing; (8) promote practices which will maintain quality and result in a better product for the consumer; (9) keep producers informed on prices, demand, and supply; (10) promote a better understanding among producers, market handlers, and consumers.

Even if the referendum carries any potato farmer who is dissatisfied fifth paying the assessment will have the right to reclaim the payment under the rules and regulations provided by the Board of Directors of the North Carolina Potato Association.

The farmer has the right to demand and receive from the Treasurers of the N. C. Potato Association a refund of the assessment collected, providing such a demand for the refund is made in writing within 30 days from the date the assessment is collected or deducted from the proceeds of the sale of potatoes by the producer.

Exact location of the polling places for Pitt County were not available today. However, one polling place will probably be set up in the Old Hospital building in Greenville and second poll in Bethel.

Hours for voting will be from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m.

F. L. Blount Sr. is county chairman for conducting the referendum in Pitt County.

County Farm Agent Sam Winchester said today that all farmers engaged in the production of early potatoes on a commercial basis in Eastern North Carolina, including owners of farms on which potatoes were produced during the year 1954, and tenants and sharecroppers, will be eligible to vote in the referendum.

The farm agent declared that any farmer producing Irish potatoes for commercial sale is considered in commercial production of potatoes.

A two-thirds majority of the voters going to the polls on Friday will have to vote in favor of the assessment to carry the referendum.

If the referendum carries the Commissioner of Agriculture will be responsible for collecting the one cent per hundred pounds of potatoes marketed. The program, which would be set up if the issue carries, would be administered by the North Carolina Potato Association, Incorporated.

Officers of the district for the present year were: E. C. Davenport, district governor; D. R. House, E. M. Early, and Alton R. Dale—lieutenant governors; and William R. May, secretary-treasurer.

District Governor Elwood C. Davenport urges all Ruritan Club members to attend the convention.

Pitt County potato raisers tomorrow will join with other North Carolina farmers in deciding whether an annual assessment of one cent per hundred pounds will be levied on potatoes for the three year period—1955, 1956 and 1957.

If farmers approved the assessment the money will be used to stimulate consumption, sale and use of potatoes.

If the referendum carries the Commissioner of Agriculture will be responsible for collecting the one cent per hundred pounds of potatoes marketed. The program, which would be set up if the issue carries, would be administered by the North Carolina Potato Association, Incorporated.

The money would be used to: (1) recapture the portion of the potato market formerly held by North Carolina producers; (2) promote research in consumer packaging, considering the size of package, variety, methods of sale and market preference. (3) stimulate sale and consumption through advertising, promotion, personal contact, and other means; (4) encourage research on harvesting, handling, packaging, grading, and transportation to increase efficiency of marketing and to carry a more desirable product to the consumer; (5) support research to develop varieties more acceptable to consumers; (6) to promote the fact that North Carolina potatoes have excellent eating quality; (7) keep potato farmers informed of all new developments in production, marketing, and processing; (8) promote practices which will maintain quality and result in a better product for the consumer; (9) keep producers informed on prices, demand, and supply; (10) promote a better understanding among producers, market handlers, and consumers.

Even if the referendum carries any potato farmer who is dissatisfied fifth paying the assessment will have the right to reclaim the payment under the rules and regulations provided by the Board of Directors of the North Carolina Potato Association.

The farmer has the right to demand and receive from the Treasurers of the N. C. Potato Association a refund of the assessment collected, providing such a demand for the refund is made in writing within 30 days from the date the assessment is collected or deducted from the proceeds of the sale of potatoes by the producer.

Exact location of the polling places for Pitt County were not available today. However, one polling place will probably be set up in the Old Hospital building in Greenville and second poll in Bethel.

Hours for voting will be from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m.

F. L. Blount Sr. is county chairman for conducting the referendum in Pitt County.

County Farm Agent Sam Winchester said today that all farmers engaged in the production of early potatoes on a commercial basis in Eastern North Carolina, including owners of farms on which potatoes were produced during the year 1954, and tenants and sharecroppers, will be eligible to vote in the referendum.

The farm agent declared that any farmer producing Irish potatoes for commercial sale is considered in commercial production of potatoes.

A two-thirds majority of the voters going to the polls on Friday will have to vote in favor of the assessment to carry the referendum.

Pitt County potato raisers tomorrow will join with other North Carolina farmers in deciding whether an annual assessment of one cent per hundred pounds will be levied on potatoes for the three year period—1955, 1956 and 1957.

If farmers approved the assessment the money will be used to stimulate consumption, sale and use of potatoes.
