Nationalists May Choose To Fight Over Withdrawal Tachen Evacuation Asked

By FRED HAMPSON - Official reports said the bombers destroyed two vessels near Nantien Island, 30 miles north of the Tachens, scored hits on two more about 11 miles northeast of the Tachens and bombed nearby Yikiangshan with excellent results.

The United States balked at giving clear-cut guarantees to defend the two outposts just off the China mainland. Chiang apparently wanted such public guarantees as an inducement to abandon the exposed Tachens.

By ROWLAND EVANS JR. - WASHINGTON (AP)—Sen. H. Alexander Smith (R-NJ) said today Communist China is trying "a great bluff" in demanding a seat in the United Nations Security Council as a condition for discussing a Formosa cease-fire.

Chairman George (D-Ga.) of the Senate Foreign Relations committee said "it may be a propaganda bluff," and Sen. Mansfield (D-Mont.) a committee member, said, "We must remember that all negotiation is a matter of trading back and forth."

Says Many Are 'Committed' Pending Official OK, Demos Will Rally In Chicago

DENVER (AP)—Sen. George W. Malone (R-Nev.) says that "many high government officials in Washington are committed to the recognition of Red China and are 'holding their breath' as the Supreme Court Justice Douglas' support recognition of Red China. 'Books and Stuff'

By DR. ED HIRSHBERG

Book news of the week is the announcement of the 1955 National Book Awards, given each year by the American Book Industry in honor of outstanding American authors in the fields of fiction, non-fiction and poetry.

This year's winners are William Faulkner, for his latest novel "A Fable," which so far has sold 32,000 copies despite the difficulties most people have in reading it; Joseph Wood Krutch, for his book of essays "The Measure of Man"; and Wallace Stevens, for his "Collected Poems." A "Special Citation for Poetry" was given to E. E. Cummings for his "Poems: 1923-1954."

Like many others who have commented on these awards, we were not particularly happy about them. For example, E. E. Cummings certainly deserves as much recognition, we think, as Wallace Stevens, whose poems have never thrilled us as they perhaps should. . . . And great as Faulkner's book no doubt is—we haven't read it—many critics seem to think that "A Fable" should not rank among his best. And we would like to nominate personally among the non-fiction books that might have qualified for the Award, "The Reason Why," by Cecil Woodham-Smith, as fine a piece of scholarly writing that is also readable that we have read.

We came across an item from Macmillan about the February Selection of the Farmer's Book Club, which we never knew existed—does anybody around here belong? Anybody who never knew existed—does anybody around here belong? Anybody who never knew existed—does anybody around here belong? Anybody who never knew existed—does anybody around here belong?

no research. During its writing the only time I was in a library was to pay fines incurred by my daughter for overdue books. So we all do it—even the author's daughter.

People who are always in a hurry will be interested in the current edition of the Reader's "Best Condensed Books Series." For less than two dollars you can get a one volume condensation of Pearl Buck's "My Several Worlds," Marjorie Davenport's "My Brother's Keeper," Frances Gray Patton's "Good Morning, Miss Dove," Dick Pearce's "The Darby Trial," and the one we mentioned above, "The Reason Why," by Cecil Woodham-Smith—all best sellers, and all now in one book. We personally do not appreciate condensations, feeling that if the author wanted to have his book shortened he would have written a shorter book in the first place. But there you are—five books in one if you want them, straight from the Reader's Digest—or should we say, the horse's mouth.

On the local scene: "Julius Caesar" will be shown at one of the neighborhood theatres next week, and we hope you get to it—it's considered one of the best pictures to be made in the last few years, and is well worth seeing not only because it's a thriller, complete with gore, gieland, Brand and Calhern. And for those who like gentler fare, Yma Sumac, the songbird of the Andes, will entertain at the College Entertainment Series Wednesday evening, in Wright Auditorium. We hope you have tickets, because Yma, we understand, packs them in. No room for books either, so good-bye for today.

Has To Pay For Dali Portrait

NEW YORK (AP)—Socialite Mrs. William Woodward has paid surrealist Salvador Dali $7,000 for a portrait she says she can't stand and won't have in her home.

The attractive Mrs. Woodward sat for Dali for a year agreeing not to look at the painting until it was completed. Came the finish—in April 1953—and after one look Mrs. Woodward said take it away. Dali sued for "the reasonable value of his services."

Yesterday Theodore Miller, Mrs. Woodward's attorney, said Dali got a $7,000 check and agreed to withdraw the suit.

The painting shows a woman resembling Mrs. Woodward standing on a beach in front of a coral cave. Commented Dali: "She has now paid the agreed price. The painting will be delivered to her. I have no further comment."

Friendship Night Gala Affair For Greenville Eastern Star

Friendship Night was a gala affair of Greenville Chapter 149 O.E.S. on Tuesday evening in the Masonic Hall.

The chapter room was beautifully decorated with baskets of greenery, red berries and red gladioli.

The meeting was formally opened with the officers march. Mrs. J. B. Jackson, worthy matron, presided in the east, assisted by John Carrington, worthy patron. The flag ceremony was led by the worthy patron and the "Star Spangled Banner" sung by the group.

Mrs. Maude Baynor Foy of Kinston, past grand matron and Vernon J. Spivey, past Grand Patron of the Grand Chapter of N. C. O.E.S. were introduced, heartily welcomed escorted to the east and given grand honors. Mrs. Marise Conyers of Tarboro, Grand Conductress, and Mrs. Lila Duke, of Washington, N. C., Associate Grand Conductress, Mrs. Esther Spivey, of Williamston, Grand Martha; Mrs. Geneva Meyers, district deputy Grand Matron of 6th district and Mrs. Raye Bisette of Grifton, District deputy Grand Matron of 7th district of the Grand Chapter of N. C. O.E.S. were properly introduced, welcomed and seated in the east.

Grand Chapter Committee members, Worthy Matrons and Patrons, past Matrons and Patrons were recognized and given a hearty welcome. Other Masonic order heads were recognized also.

A short business meeting followed the introductions. Mrs. George Smith gave her Sickness and Distress report.

For the good of the Order a friendship program was presented. With an introduction to the program from the east, star points, Julia Harris, Byrdie Williams, Eula Cannon, Frances Wahl, Annette David with Helen Sermons, Ethel Allen, Martha Forrest, Sadie Wrae Carrington, and Blanche Smith each defined a letter spelling out "Friendship," while the associate patron held a large Friendship poster in the background. Each letter of the word was placed on a large red heart, mounted on the chart over a small ship. The program was ended by a lovely poetic thought read by the worthy matron in which all chapters and visitors were warmly welcomed as true friends and invited to come often.

Richard David favored the chapter with a violin solo "Melody in F" with Mrs. George Smith as accompanist at the piano, to begin the program. To close it he played "Viennese Refrain."

Mrs. Maude Foy told of her recent trip to Florida and how glad she was to be back in N. C. for friendship meetings. All distinguished guests expressed pleasure in attending the meeting and dinner.

One hundred and seven members and visitors attended the chapter meeting. The chapter closed at 9:45 with the officers marching out.

Prior to the meeting a buffet banquet was held in the Fred Stokes dining room. The chapter was host to all ten chapters in the 7th district and the husbands and friends of local members.

The tables were artistically arranged using the valentine motif. Large red hearts with the words

"A hearty welcome to our Friendship Meeting" were placed about the arrangements of ivy, berries and red candles. The guest table was centered with a red arrangement of gladioli in a heart shaped swan bowl.

Mrs. J. B. Jackson, worthy matron extended a hearty welcome to approximately 150 persons at the banquet. She asked that the meeting be not mine, not yours but ours as we unite in fraternal service. The invocation was in the form of a dramatization of the Lord's Prayer, presented by three F.H.A. students of Miss Alya Ray Taylor of Winterville High School. Miss Alice Waters and Janet Allen were in the drama followed by a solo "The Lord's Prayer" by Joy Faulkner accompanied at the piano by Mrs. Howard Borkin.

John Carrington, Worthy Patron, recognized all distinguished guests, and all visitors. New members were asked to stand. The meeting was closed with the benediction by Jesse Brown.

Coffee was poured by several students from the Greenville Beauty School. Mrs. Helen Sermons was recognized and thanked for her work as over all chairman. Mrs. A. C. Tadlock and Mrs. Alfred Kennedy were co-chairmen for the coffee and rolls. Mrs. Susie Ragsdale and Sadie Carrington co-chairmen of decorations.

Visitors were present from Winterville, Williamston, Washington, Tarboro, Ayden, Grifton, Kinston, Farmville and Snow Hill.

Another Threat To Local Government

What appears to us a most dangerous precedent has been set by the Ohio Supreme Court in declaring counties of that state must accept federal aid in their program for assistance to totally and permanently disabled persons.

Little Harrison County for four years has flatly refused federal aid for its welfare program. When he was unable to persuade the county officials to accept federal aid amounting to $400 a year, the state Welfare Director took the matter to the Ohio high court which ruled against the county's stand.

For a local government unit to freely avail itself to federal aid funds is one

Draft Extension Is Essential

Congress can ill afford to scuttle the nation's defense program by failing to extend the present draft law for an additional four years.

Military authorities have made it plain they need the draft to keep the armed forces built to adequate strength. In addition, it is obvious that the nation needs to maintain its growing pool of civilian manpower with military training and experience in case of war.

Optimistic as we would like to be, there is little prospect that international conditions will change appreciably for the better in the next three or four years. The uneasy peace which now exists seems the best this nation can hope for in the next few years. Under such circumstances it is vital that our defenses are kept at razor sharpness.

If the worst comes we must be as ready as possible. If international tension eases, the nation's military program can be modified to meet the demands of the times much easier than we can effect a sudden build-up in armed strength.

The approval of the draft extension by the 32-0 vote in the House Armed Services Committee indicates the measure will be enacted by the Congress with a minimum of opposition. The members of Congress would do well to follow suit.

Strength for the Day

By EARL L. DOUGLASS
THE FORGIVENESS OF SIN

A psychiatrist was speaking. "Almost everyone with whom we deal in mental institutions is overwhelmed with a sense of guilt. Sixty to seventy per cent of all our patients would walk out of mental hospitals tomorrow if they could be relieved of a sense of guilt."

This sense of guilt is probably no stronger today than it has been in the past. We are just discovering more cases and subjecting more cases to study. Every person has felt a sense of guilt settling down upon him at some time or other, and many have carried this sense of guilt through life, an awful burden indeed. We can readily understand therefore how Christianity swept across the world with its message of liberation and new hope, for it promised men forgiveness of sins to all men. The only people who will not be forgiven to all men, the only people who will have nothing for which to be forgiven, or who scoff at forgiveness and thrust it aside. All who truly want it may have it. The only requirements are repentance and faith.

The gospel, or the good news, involves kindness, justice, and fills the believer with hope, but its promise release comes when people accept on faith the assurance of the Word of God that, through Jesus Christ, the Heavenly Father has offered forgiveness to all men. The only people who will not be forgiven to all men, the only people who will have nothing for which to be forgiven, or who scoff at forgiveness and thrust it aside. All who truly want it may have it. The only requirements are repentance and faith.

Still Concerned By Cleopatra

By RAY TUCKER

WASHINGTON—The Egyptian Embassy here, which seeks to interpret for Americans the revolutionary Nasser regime's modernization of that ancient and biblical land, has now given a "new look" to an extremely misunderstood lady—Queen Cleopatra.

Egyptian historians blame our misconception of the so-called siren of the Nile on Roman and British detractors, who depicted her as a wicked enchantress rather than a wise and strong ruler. Hollywood, too, has accepted the old rather than the new characterization of Cleopatra, thus helping to perpetuate it.

According to this latest version, which is set forth in an interesting Embassy pamphlet, entitled "Egypt—The Youngest Republic in the World—6,000 Years Old," history's knowledge and judgment of Cleopatra have been based entirely on prejudiced Roman writings. They portrayed her as a naughty girl.

CLEOPATRA MALIGNED—As the British mangled Joan of Arc for political purposes, so the Roman writers blackened Cleopatra because two great Caesars fell for her charms, according to this new viewpoint. She was capitalizing on her feminine beauty in order to save Egypt from Roman conquest.

Here is how her new Egyptian eulogist, almost 2,000 years after she died from the sting of an asp, describes one of history's most famous women:

"Rome was then trying to replace Athens, and it was inevitable that she should look with envious eyes on Egypt. When Julius Caesar came to power, there were on the throne of the Two Lands (Egypt) two youngsters quarreling among themselves.

"There were the 13-year-old boy, Ptolemy XIV, and his sister, Cleopatra, who was about 18 years old. Though of necessity only passing reference can be made to Cleopatra, I must at least say that this poor woman has been discussed throughout the centuries primarily through the unjust propaganda of her enemies, the Romans."

QUEEN OF THE NILE—In view of Egypt's still unresolved resentment toward 70 years of British hegemony, only recently terminated by the Suez Canal settlement, the following paragraphs have historical value. For a local government unit to be forced by the courts to accept unwanted federal aid, and by so doing to likewise accept federal regulations which go with the money, is quite another matter.

Are we moving into a period in which it will become a requirement for every local governing unit to participate in federal aid projects whether or not it wants to? Is this the beginning of another move by the Washington bureaucracy to strip local governments of their already limited authority?

If state courts can require counties to acquiesce to accepting federal funds and federal regulations governing aid to totally and permanently disabled, can counties likewise be forced to accept federal aid and regulations pertaining to health projects, roads, schools and other forms of federal monies?

If such is the case, it may not be many years before local government units are reduced to mere puppets of the centralized state. Such an eventuality would be disastrous to the American political system as we know it.

General Assembly Visit A Significant Occasion

We can find no grounds for the expressed fears of Rep. Roger Kiser of Scotland County that members of the General Assembly will be showing favoritism toward East Carolina College by their scheduled visit here March 8.

Members of the General Assembly have visited other state institutions in the past and it is only fitting that they visit East Carolina. Rather than an act of favoritism over other state institutions, the General Assembly visit appears to us the culmination of long overdue courtesy to the institution which has made such a tremendous contribution to North Carolina and particularly the eastern section of the state.

Greenville, of course, will share with East Carolina College the honor of the visit from the General Assembly. The college is already formulating its plans for entertaining the members of the legislature along with its Founders Day program. The citizens of Greenville should stand ready to assist the college in entertaining the legislators during their visit if they are called on by the college to do so.

The visit by the General Assembly will be a significant occasion not only for East Carolina College, but for Greenville as well.

RED BEND, ILL., PILGRIM: "There is a large number of people who by their actions aid the cause of socialism, although they are frequently unaware of the direction they are traveling. Most are sincere people. If the choice was direct they would be against state socialism but the things they advocate would, if put together, make it a genuine reality."

CHISHOLM, MINN., TRIBUNE-HERALD: "The new French Government's milk campaign is designated to curb alcoholism. . . . The government crusade is a noble one, but like all crusades it will not be accepted easily. The French people, like all others in the free world, dislike being told what to drink by their government."

an literary significance. "In our modern literature, she (Cleopatra) has been influenced by Shakespeare and George Bernard Shaw. "Cleopatra was neither the voluptuous woman nor the silky little kitten, seeking love in the arms of the Roman Generals, she was the Queen of the Nile, who forced Rome to fear her."

BRITISH AUTHORITIES QUOTED—"Sir Idris Bell, famous professor of Roman history at Oxford, agrees with Professor Tarn of Cambridge, foremost living authority on the Hellenistic Period, that Cleopatra was a woman of outstanding genius, and a worthy opponent of Rome; and that she has long been seen through the distorting medium of Roman propaganda."

"He says further that Rome, which had never condescended to fear any nation or people, did in its time fear two human beings. One was Hannibal, and the other was Cleopatra. Professor Bell believes that the young Queen of Egypt was the greatest of all the successors of Alexander the Great."

PRESS CLUB AUDIENCES—The National Press Club at Washington has gone "eggshead and intellectual," contrary to theatrical and theatrical characterization of newspapermen as "roughnecks."

In 1954, the club sponsored 46 luncheon speakings in its ballroom, which will hold only about 450 comfortably. Only seven speakers attracted more than 500 listeners. Here they are, in the order of their drawing power:

Premier Mendes-France in Paris, 560; Chancellor Konrad Adenauer of Germany, 556; former President Truman, 553; historian Arnold Toynbee, 535; Admiral Lewis Strauss, Chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission, 525; Nathan M. Pusey, president of Harvard, 507; Robert R. Young, then fighting for control of the New York Central Railroad, 504.

The only speakers involved two politicians—Republican National Chairman Leonard W. Hall and Stephen A. Mitchell, then Democratic National Chairman. After hard playing by club officers, they drew about 250.

Somebody Told Me

Shop Talk About Ham Radio

Shady Lane, one of the happiest streets in town, is sad. King is lost again. He's a four-months-old collie, brown and white, belonging to Billy Davoport, telephone 3288.

Last night I had a call from a reader who had several questions about short wave radio. Never make the mistake of asking me such questions unless you want your ear bent. After a year on the air, amateur radio remains the most fascinating pastime I have ever encountered.

The reader wanted to know the range, which is a hard question to answer. In my case, I have talked to Japan on one occasion. The contact was not at all satisfactory, but I could understand the operator (an American GI) and he could understand me through heavy interference.

However, Europe is duck soup. Recently I have had long conversations with Germany, France and North Africa. The British operators come in fine and now then Italian stations are heard.

South America? Booms in, but I usually keep the rotatable antenna toward Europe because of the language factor. Newfoundland and Labrador are usually rolling in.

The "skip" is the thing. A radio wave goes up in the air, hits the ionosphere and is reflected back down. The ionosphere is about 500 miles up, but it varies. Therefore, different countries come in at different times. Across-town operation is done on a short ground wave.

Unfortunately, the ionosphere flops the wrong way at night and the long distance band goes dead as a rule. And getting into Europe would be rough even if it stayed open because it's five or six hours later over there depending on the section. The operators are asleep when we get home from work.

Power? The amateur is allowed to operate with 1000 watts. My transmitter runs 120. The other night I talked to a 17-year-old in Mississippi who was running 28 watts and doing a fine job. Antennas properly set up will do an amazing job with low power. And the power situation boils down to this: The additional expense required for additional power to give you a small improvement in signal is not worth it to me at this point. Of course if I were loaded financially I would run 1000 watts.

Reid McLawhon in Winterville (K4-AZE) is now on the air, as of about a week ago. Grifton now has an active amateur, but I haven't met him as yet.

My radio rig has recently been moved from the bedroom to the closed-in breezeway. As soon as we can get the breezeway presentable, visitors will be welcome to watch the operation.

And I thank you. JACK EDWARDS

What Other Editors Are Thinking

ECC'S PROGRESS IS MOST IMPRESSIVE (Kinston Free Press)

Among the educational requests now before the General Assembly is that of the East Carolina College in Greenville, which has requested $608,084 in increased operating expenditures and $2,825,000 for new buildings. This was the biggest request to come from any of the various state-supported institutions, and it is not surprising that ECC should head the list.

Dr. John D. Messick, ECC president, pointed out to the Legislature that the college since 1932 has had the greatest percentage gain in student enrollment, and the smallest per capita increase in appropriations. The present enrollment is 2,345, compared with 2,386 at Woman's College of the University of North Carolina, yet the operating cost at ECC is far below that at WCUNC.

In the post-World War 2 period in which the demand for school teachers, business course graduates, and other college-trained leaders has soared with every passing year, ECC has moved to meet the challenge in record fashion. Its graduates are more and more in demand in all the needed fields and academic standards have risen steadily, despite personnel and building shortages.

Dr. Messick invited the members of the General Assembly to visit the Greenville institution on March 8th and see for themselves the progress that has been made. It will be an important day in the life of the college, because that is the dedication day for the Joyner Library, a facility pressed into service last year and which is named for the late Dr. James Yaddin Joyner of LaGrange, North Carolina's grand old man of education, who died early last year.

East Carolina College is an institution that has rapidly approached the big college status. If it is to continue to meet the demands being made upon it for trained leaders in education and industry, much of what Dr. Messick has asked will have to be provided and that promptly. When the solons go to Greenville next month they will not only pay tribute to one of North Carolina's most illustrious sons at the Joyner Library dedication, but they are bound to see the impressive progress this institution has made in the training of leadership for a better tomorrow for all of North Carolina.

Fishing In Eastern Carolina Is Big Business For Many

By LYNN NISBET

FISHING—Fishing in the broad eastern rivers, the sounds and the ocean is big business. Thousands of people earn their livelihood in that manner, and provide food for hundreds of thousands more.

Fishing in the smaller streams all over the State and in the mountain lakes is generally classified as sport, although it is the basis for profitable business on part of operations of facilities to provide fishing and accommodations for visiting fishermen.

For many years prior to 1925 the commercial fisheries industry was regulated by the State Fisheries Commission, while the sports fishing in inland waters had very little statewide regulation. That year the Department of Conservation and Development was formed, one of its main components being the old fisheries commission. The new department also was given regulatory powers over inland game and fish.

That situation maintained until 1947 when, after several years of discussion, the Wildlife Resources Commission was established, and supervision of inland game and fish was transferred to the new agency. Along with that transfer went title to lands and property owned by C&D and used exclusively in the game and fish activities.

The Wildlife Commission received all license fees for hunting and fishing, assumed responsibility for protecting game and fish, propagating replacement stocks, and such other functions. The commission is under budget control, financed by appropriations by the Legislature; but to all intents and purposes it is self sustaining. Receipts from fishing and hunting licenses are sufficient to pay the bills, and to match certain Federal aid funds in propagator work.

FEUDING—The divorce of game and inland fish control from the C&D department was vigorously opposed by a large number of people, but was just as vigorously supported by the so-called sports fishermen. The spokesman and active agent for the sportsmen was (and still is) the non-governmental North Carolina Wildlife Federation.

This group frequently ran into conflict with farmers and land owners over hunting and fishing rights, closed and open seasons, and other administrative policies. It was this group which sponsored enactment by the last Legislature of repeal of the one and five-day non-resident fishing licenses, requiring every person who fishes to buy a one-year license for $6.10—even though they fished only one day. Operators of motor courts, resort hotels, for-rent fishing boats and equipment on rivers and lakes, soon felt the effect of this law in reduced patronage.

Casual visiting fishermen were going, into South Carolina, Tennessee and Georgia rather than pay a license fee of $6.10 for one day's fishing in North Carolina. Sporting goods dealers in North Carolina border counties also noticed a drop-off in business, and joined in the chorus for restoration of the short term licenses.

The Wildlife Federation voted a few weeks ago to ask for reinstatement of the one and five day licenses. The Wildlife Resources Commission, opposing the idea, contending it will mean substantial loss in revenues.

There are further ramifications. One of the bills, sponsored by Rep. Kelly Bennett of Swain county, would not only restore the short term licenses, but by indication would transfer back to the Department of Conservation and Development the proceeds from the license fees and regulatory powers over inland fish. Another Bennett bill would give C&D also the authority to fix seasons and bag limits for game. So the lines are being drawn for renewal (or contribution) of the long drawn controversy between the control agencies.

ADVERTISING—There are still other indications that everybody engaged in the business of servicing sports fishermen are not entirely happy. While proceeds from hunting and fishing license fees are regarded as the property of the Wildlife Resources Commission, the cost of advertising the fishing and other tourist attractions in North Carolina is charged to the C&D appropriation.

The operators of tourist and travel facilities have complained that too large a part of the overall advertising fund is being used for industrial advertising. They contend that the advertising

Business Today

Tory Thinking Jolted

By ELMER ROESSNER
Let's give Tory thinking a little jolt today with this idea: The right side almost always wins strikes over economic issues, if there is a winner. It also wins wage disputes that don't go to strike.

By right we mean economically right, not necessarily morally.

If workers gain an increase in wages or other economic benefits, it is only because the company can pay them and still make a profit. The company may have to increase its prices or its stockholders may have to take smaller profits. But unless there is still some profit—or hopes of future profit—the company simply cannot meet workers' demands. If it tries to meet them at the expense of all profit, it is only a matter of time until it goes bankrupt. Then both sides lose.

To see how this works, let's play around with a hypothetical case:

Employees of the Pistachio Bolt Co. strike for an increase in basic wages of from $2 to $2.50 an hour. That would cost the company $100,000 a year. If the company makes $200,000 a year, and if the workers are firm in their strike the company will have to grant the increase eventually unless it compromises. True, that will cut its profits by $100,000. But a strike cuts its profits by $200,000 and runs up a deficit in addition.

On the other hand if the company has been making only $75,000 a year, it simply cannot grant the increase. To do so would be making a commitment to bankruptcy, or to close the plant and sell the assets. In these circumstances, the workers must eventually compromise or drop their demands.

There is another alternative. Perhaps Pistachio can increase the price of its bolts 25 per cent. Even if it loses a few sales, this step could meet the pay increase without disturbing the profits. Might even increase them.

But if the price could be increased, then management has been at fault because, economically, a manufacturer is always entitled to the best price he can get under the law of supply and demand, just as the workers are entitled to as much as they can get under economic conditions.

There are special situations, of course. Sometimes a losing company will be kept running for years in hope of future profits. Sometimes management can out-bargain or out-last employees. Sometimes a firm will grant a raise and being unable to meet lower-pay competition, slide into receivership.

MANY INDUSTRIAL FIRMS PLANING EXPANSION

Thirty-four per cent of 178 industrial companies responding to a questionnaire told Mill & Factory that they plan to expand plant capacity during the next 12 months. Of these, half said they plan to enlarge existing facilities, a third said they plan to erect additional buildings and three-fourths said they would buy more and better tools and equipment. (Several gave more than one answer.)

Of the 178 companies 12 per cent said they plan to increase capacity over 30 per cent, and 35 per cent said their expansion programs would cost more than $100,000.

U.S. TIN IMPORTS FROM STRAITS RISING

The United States is using more tin, the Malayan Tin Bureau reports. While exports of Straits tin during the first 11 months of last year were 13 per cent higher than in the same months in 1953, exports to the United States rose more than 37 per cent in that period, it finds.

Comes By Free Will Of Heaven

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK (AP)—The snow is falling outside my window, softening this harsh jumble town with its white feathers.

Each passing year I enjoy snowfalls more, because they arrive by the free will of heaven and wear no man's label.

Mother nature has been put in harness in so many ways by man that it still is pleasant to some of her wayward children to see the old girl kick up her heels and show a little of her own will. Snowfalls in rain still have an emotional quality for mankind because they still have the freshness of surprise. They are awesome to me, because they are still wild and free demonstrations of a massive power that yet lies beyond our ability to control.

But how long will this last? "Everybody talks about the weather, but nobody does anything about it," said an editorial in the Hartford Courant in 1890. No, Mark Twain didn't write it. His friend, Charles Dudley Warner did.

But the remark is no longer true. The trouble with the weather today is that too many people are trying to do something about it.

One of man's oldest dreams is the wish to control climate and the weather. It might be a fine thing to be able to make the Sahara Desert bloom, though you might get an argument from the people who live there and prefer to keep their desert untamed.

It would be a fine thing also to avert the disasters caused by hurricanes, hailstorms, tornadoes and floods.

But there is considerable doubt that if man had the ability to muscle the weather around as he chose it would prove an unalloyed boon.

To begin with, the first nation that learned how to steer the weather would probably develop it first for war rather than peace. It is a weapon that would win the world.

"You other nations better do as we tell you," the nation with the big secret would say, "else we'll send you a 40-day rain that'll drown you and your crops and make Noah's flood look like a heavy dew."

This isn't really a ridiculous concept. How many scientists do you think right now are working on the possibility of ultimately using the weather as a weapon?

Even if this power were finally gained and employed for peaceful purposes, look at the turmoil it would cause. The summer vacationists would be howling for hot clear days so they could get a suntan, the farmers screaming for more rain to save their corn and wheat.

The long national quarrel over daylight saving time would be a bush league hassle compared to the problem of what kind of weather to have—and where and when. Politicians would be afraid to take a stand for either wet or dry, and national party platforms would contain only this noncommittal plank: "We stand foursquare behind a program for longer full moon."

But supposing they finally got so they could pinpoint the weather to please every group, make the rain fall in one block, the sun shine on the next. You might wake up some mornings and read in your newspaper:

"In response to numerous requests, the mayor has arranged the first snowfall of the winter season tomorrow morning. It will be limited to the north side of the municipal park between the hour of 10 a.m. and 2 p.m. Six inches will be allowed to fall. Please bring your children early and avoid the rush."

Doesn't that sound dismaying? But the worst thing about a government-controlled climate is that it would completely ruin what is left of the art of conversation.

Why would anybody bother to say "Well, how's the weather?" if the weather were already custom tailored to suit you? You would take the weather for granted, as you do electricity, now that it has been tamed and put in wires.

How long has it been since you heard anybody say "Well, how do you like the electricity today?"

No Vital Changes in Motor Vehicle Laws Anticipated

By LYNN NISBET

RALEIGH — Reception accorded several bills at the first meeting of the House roads committee indicates that chances are slim for material changes in the automobile laws.

Rep. Wayland Floyd of Robeson had two bills designed to promote safety. One would have made driver license suspension mandatory upon conviction of exceeding any posted speed limit by as much as 15 miles. Another would have repealed the provision in the Financial Responsibility Act that filing of a petition for court review automatically stayed suspension of license for a car operator involved in an accident and unable to show ability to pay damage claims.

Discussion developed the fact that the speed limit bill as written did not accomplish the desired purpose, and action was withheld pending a substitute bill. The license suspension bill precipitated spirited debate, during which echoes of the 1951 and 1953 debates were heard.

Rep. Floyd said the present law opens the way for a lawyers' racket, and Commissioner Ed Scheidt said in common practice it virtually nullified the whole financial responsibility act.

Mrs. Hardy Johnson, program chairman, presented Mrs. R. F. Speight, one of the members, as speaker for the afternoon. In a most pleasing and attractive manner, Mrs. Speight gave a resume of a recent trip to Boston and the New England states, vividly portraying various historical and interesting places she visited. Her talk was thoroughly enjoyable and informative.

At the close of the program the members and several guests were invited into the dining room. The table was centered with a lovely arrangement of red and white flowers and red candles. Mrs. J. L. Peelle served ice cream in Valentine motifs, while Mrs. Bruce Beasley Jr. poured coffee. Individual cakes, cheese biscuits and nuts were also served.

East Carolina Hands Atlantic Christian 82-77 Defeat

Bucs Pull Away In Second Half

By BRUCE PHILLIPS
Reflector Sports Writer

East Carolina's Bucs last night did what the other seven members of the North State Conference have tried in vain to do all season: upset league-leading Atlantic Christian, 82-77, in a pulsating affair here before 3,000 aroused spectators.

The Bucs, defending titleholders, dealt the Bulldogs their first loop setback in 10 games. The win moved the Pirates' record to 9-3 and strengthened their hold on third place. ACC's 9-1 mark still stands as tops.

The victory also preserved East Carolina's home court winning streak at 23 straight games. It was the 11th consecutive win over ACC by a Howard Porter-coached team. From the opening horn, the game was a thriller. During the first half the score was tied 10 times before John Marley dropped a hook to put the visitors ahead 37-38 at intermission. After the hulk, East Carolina took the lead 41-40 on Guy Mendenhall's shot and the Pirates were never headed.

Pirates very effectively and had Porter's charges missing badly for a while.

Buc Strategy

Toward the end of the first half and in the early minutes of the second, Thomas and Heath started connecting from outside and McComas ordered his command into a man-for-man defense. The Pirates seemed to be waiting for this and ran out from under their taller opponents.

ACC's floor shooting was below its usual accuracy. Many of their shots just won't drop and ECC was usually at the right place at the right time to nab the rebound. Nichols and Harris were the rebound leaders for ECC. Nichols grabbed 10 and Harris swiped nine. ECC had trouble at the free throw line. They made only 16 of 30 attempts for 53 per cent. Seven of 10 opportunities were missed by them in the first half. ACC also experienced a porous night at the line. They made only 17 out of 32 attempts for a similar 53 per cent.

Thomas Leader

J. C. Thomas collected 23 points to take individual high scoring honors. His play, particularly in second half, paced the home team. Seventeen of his points came in those 20 minutes and in crucial moments. Three other Bucs hit in the double figures. Carvel (Nick) Nichols scored 19 points and was a defensive standout. Don Harris, the team's leading pointmaker, pushed in 16 after a slow start and held the Bulldogs' high scorer, Jerry Williams, to four points. Cecil Heath added 14 markers, all on setshots from outside.

Marley, a 6-11 tower, poured in 20 points to head Coach Jack McComas' bunch. His hook shots and follows were night unstoppage with his height advantage. Bill Beacham, at 6-7, found the range for 12 counts. Two other Bulldogs hit in double figures, Kim Buchanan and Billy Widgeon getting 11 apiece.

ACC took an early 7-6 lead and kept it until East Carolina caught up and went ahead 12-13 on Harris' bucket, with 12:32 remaining in the half. The Pirates held this advantage until the 4:30 reading when Buchanan hit to knot the game at 28-28. Mendenhall fired in a hook for 30-28 but Beacham tied it up again. The Bulldogs got their 37-38 halftime margin three minutes later.

Nine Point Lead

The longest lead the Bucs ever held was nine points, 72-63 with 5:57 remaining. The Bulldogs quickly cut that down to the final 82-77 advantage. The last time the score was deadlocked was when Beacham rammed the ball down through the hoop for 47-47 with four minutes and 40 seconds left. Nichols and Harris hit twice in a row and the home team moved out front.

East Carolina had difficulty getting under the backboards throughout the game with Marley, Buchanan and Beacham stacked inside. ACC used a zone defense on the

Phants In Dubious Shape For Contest

By WAYNE BISHOP
Reflector Sports Writer

With seven straight smashing conference wins at their back, the once-beaten Greenville Phantoms try for win number 13 tonight against the Elizabeth City Yellow Jackets in Elizabeth City.

So far this season Coach Bo Farley's dandy dribbling duos have outscored 12 opponents and lost only one, to Rocky Mount in a non-conference game. In conference play the goal-happy Greenies have an undefeated seven wins-no losses record.

Elizabeth City was one of the victims in the seven loop wins earlier in the year by the overwhelming margin of 104-56. The Green Phantoms were in top form that night firing in shots right and left as they racked up 100 points for the second time in the season.

Although the Phantoms seemed to be in just about top shape earlier this week, they now appear to be in the worst of the season. Pat Sawyer and Tommie Saled, both starting guards averaging over 10 points per game, have terrific colds and certainly won't be able to go at full steam all the way. Then Harold Edwards, the 6-3 center, twisted his ankle yesterday in practice and will probably be slowed down considerably. Edwards' ankle is swollen up some but he said he would definitely dress for the game. Clark Noble, 6-5 center, is ready to step in at the center position in case Edwards can not go the entire ball game. Bob Howell and Edgar Moore are the only two starters left that are in top form. Ike Riddick is ready to spell either Sawyer or Saled at guard if need be.

For the past two seasons the Greenville Phantoms have had trouble with the Yellow Jackets in Elizabeth City. Two years ago the Jackets upset Coach Farley's crew by one point, then last year they refused to wilt before the Phantom attack and stayed right in the game all the way.

Edwards and Howell will lead the Phantom offense tonight against their rival. Edwards is averaging 18.3 points per game and Howell is averaging 15.1. Pat Sawyer and Tommie Saled are both averaging over ten points per contest. Sawyer at 12.7 and Saled at 10.1.

The Jayvee game that precedes the varsity game should be a thriller. The Greenville Jayvees downed the Baby Jackets in their previous meeting. Coach Bill Kittrell's gang now has a 3-4 record in conference play.

Haddix Signs His Card Contract

ST. LOUIS (AP)—Harvey Haddix, the St. Louis Cardinals' top winner the past two seasons, has signed his 1955 contract and joined three other signed Redbird pitchers who make up the "big four" of the staff.

The Cardinals also got auto-graphed contracts yesterday from pitchers Gordon Jones and Herb Moford and first baseman Tom Alison. There now are 18 players in the fold.

Jones, Tom Poholsky, Brooks Lawrence and Haddix represent the heart of the mound corps.

Alston, first Negro for the Redbirds, played first base the early part of last season, but went to Rochester when his hitting fell to 246. He'll battle Joe Cunningham for the job this year.

Brennan On Banquet Tour; Wants Talent

By JERRY LISKA

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP)—It was just a year ago yesterday Terry Brennan, then 25, became Notre Dame's head football coach succeeding illness-plagued Frank Leahy.

Brennan hardly noted the fact. He's reading plane schedules more than calendars these days.

"I don't know how many banquets I've hit in the past two months, but it's two seasons of the knife and fork circuit crammed into one because I didn't appear at any banquets last winter," he said.

Take the past several weeks, for instance. On Jan. 16, he appeared at Owosso, Mich.; Jan. 18 at Appleton, Wis.; Jan. 19 at St. Paul, Minn.; Jan. 20 at Milwaukee; Jan. 22 at Louisville (as one of the nation's outstanding young men chosen by the National Junior Chamber of Commerce); Jan. 24 back at Milwaukee; Jan. 26 at San Diego; Jan. 28 at St. Francis; and Monday night at Philadelphia.

Brennan, to be sure isn't making the rounds just to test his popularity. A very astute chap, he knows Notre Dame's national appeal to Catholic prep stars and his eyes and ears are open on the road as a good will salesman of the Irish.

"You can never have too many good players on hand in the fall," is Terry's cryptic coaching philosophy. It's no secret around Notre Dame that a superior frosh group is needed and wanted.

His second Irish season next fall will be a sharper test than

Wake Forest Loses Services Of 3 Gridders

WAKE FOREST, N.C. (AP)—Wake Forest College Football Coach Tom Rogers received gloomy news yesterday: Three players have been declared ineligible for the 1955 season because of scholastic difficulties.

They are Charles Topping, sophomore fullback of Littleton who was being counted on to fill the full-back vacancy when Nick Maravic graduated; Ernest Fitzgibbons, 215-pound tackle of Munnhall, Pa.; and Leo Ward, sophomore halfback of Fayetteville. They were not allowed to register for the second semester yesterday.

Topping, fastest player on the squad, had a 3.9 rushing average last season for 29 carries. He was outstanding in the 13-13 tie with Maryland. Fitzgibbons, a junior, was a reserve last year. Ward carried the ball only four times for a 5.8 rushing average.

For First Time In A Long Time, Gavilan Is 'Mr. X'

By JACK HAND

NEW YORK (AP)—Kid Gavilan, the known quantity in so many fights, plays the role of Mr. X tonight at Madison Square Garden in his bout with slugger Ernie Durando.

Nobody knows how much the Cuban has left, whether the cement jaw that absorbed the toughest punches in 117 fights has begun to crumble. It remains to be seen if the mambo routine and the three-day chores of a dancing M.C. have taken their toll from his legs.

Gavilan and Durando, a crude puncher from Bayonne, N.J., don't belong in the same ring if—and it's a big if—Gavilan is 50 per cent of the Gavilan of old. The former welterweight champion always had too much speed, boxing skill and ring savvy for Durando, whose style could be summed up in one word—punch.

BC will broadcast and televise the fight at 10 p.m., EST.

The odds favoring Gavilan at 1 to 3 indicate that expert opinion still thinks they don't belong in the same ring. Still, Gavilan's unimpressive (to say the least) fights against Bob Olson and Johnny Saxton, plus a three-month layoff, hardly justify unlimited faith. Incidentally, this will be the Keed's first fight for his new manager, banker Yamil Chade.

Ike Williams in 1948 and Carmen Basilio in 1953 are the only men who ever knocked Gavilan off his feet. He got up each time, so he never has been stopped in a career dating back to 1943.

Durando has the punch to drop Gavilan, or anybody else. The only problem is landing it. Always a threat but seldom actually dangerous against a good boxer, Durando could hit the jackpot if Gavilan gets too careless. He has knocked out 28 opponents while compiling a 39-18-4 record for 61 bouts since 1946.

Maryland Quint Loses Its Center

COLLEGE PARK, Md. (AP)—Frank Fuqua, University of Maryland basketball center, has been declared ineligible because of scholastic deficiency.

White Sox Pull No. 4 On Marion

CHICAGO (AP)—The Chicago White Sox today pulled playing uniform No. 4 out of retirement for the first time since 1949 and bestowed it upon Manager Marty Marion.

No. 4 was worn by former Sox star shortstop Luke Appling, but it was the same number which adorned Marion when he was "Mr. Shortstop" for the St. Louis Cardinals. As a Sox coach last season under Paul Richards, Marion wore No. 28.

Famous Trichologist Tells Truth About Saving And Improving Hair

This new method of home treatment for saving and growing thicker hair will be demonstrated in Greenville, N. C. Sunday only, Feb. 6, 1955.

These private individual demonstrations will be held at the Proctor Hotel on Sunday only, Feb. 6, 2 p.m. till 9 p.m.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Feb. 3—In an interview here today, D. Russell Collins, internationally famous trichologist and director of the Collins Hair and Scalp Experts, Inc., said, "There are 18 different scalp disorders that cause most men and women to lose hair. Using common sense, a person must realize no one tonic or so-called cure-all could correct all the disorders," he explained.

Guaranteed

"The Collins firm, recognizing that most people are skeptical of claims that hair can be grown on balding heads, offers a guarantee," Collins said.

Once a person avails themselves to the Collins treatment his skepticism immediately disappears. To insure this, we offer this guarantee: "If you are not completely satisfied with your hair progress in the very first 30 days your money will be returned."

Hopeless Cases Discouraged

First the Collins specialists are quick to tell hopeless cases that they cannot be helped. But the "hopeless" cases are few. Only if a man is completely, shiny bald is he in this lost category.

If there is fuzz, no matter how light, thin, or colorless, the Collins firm can perform wonders.

Everyone is given a complete, private examination to determine the condition of his scalp, and cause for his hair trouble.

Free Examinations

This examination is very thorough and highly technical; it requires 20 to 30 minutes. There is no charge for this examination and no appointment is necessary. After the examination he is told the required length of treatment and how much it will cost.

After starting treatment, he makes regular reports to the Collins firm in Oklahoma City, and a trichologist will return to check his progress periodically.

To spread the opportunity of normal, healthy hair to the thousands who are desperately looking for help, the Collins firm is sending specialists to various cities throughout the United States to conduct examinations and start home treatment.

No Cure-All

"We have no cure-all for slick, shiny baldness," Collins emphasizes. "If there is fuzz, the root is still capable of creating hair and we can perform what seems to me a miracle."

There is one thing Collins wants to be certain every man and woman knows. If a recession appears at the temples or a spot begins to show up on the crown of the head, there is something wrong and it should be given immediate attention.

Hair For Lifetime

"If clients follow our directions during treatment, and after they finish the course, there is no reason why they will not have hair all the rest of their lives," Collins said. "Our firm is definitely behind this treatment, it all depends on the individual client's faithful observation of a few simple rules."

How's Your Hair?

If it worries you call Trichologist Lynn Jones at the Proctor Hotel in Greenville, N. C., on Sunday only, Feb. 6, 2 p.m. till 9 p.m. The public is invited. You do not need an appointment. The examinations are private and you will not be embarrassed or obligated in any way.

CHAPTER SEVENTEEN

"I'm not being jealous!" Katie cried heatedly in reply to Murphy. "Why, Murphy, you said this afternoon that Fred was immune—"

"Ah-ha!" cried Fred. "So you talked me over this afternoon. And to what did you find me immune?"

"To Linda Kyle," said Murphy softly. Fred hiccuped in surprise. "And he is immune there!" Katie was declaring, still swept along on the tide of her indignation at Murphy's charge of jealousy. "And if he's immune to Linda, he's pretty safe anywhere. So why should you call me jealous, Murphy Hudson?"

"Oh," said Murphy, "but there are other ways for you to be jealous. I agree that no other woman has a chance with Fred against you. I told you that, as you seem to remember. But what about his profession, darling? You're jealous of that, aren't you?"

"Why—?" Katie looked confused. "That's what you're afraid of, isn't it? His rise, his increased stature, the way he looks, the honors which will come to him?"

"Oh, Murphy, I don't—!" Then she stopped and her face fell into doleful lines. "I guess you're right," she agreed. "And if you tempt Fred enough to get him across the river, it's up to you of doctoring you think he should be doing. I expect I'll have cause for jealousy."

"But still you told me that the doctors must be his."

"Yes, I did say that. And—I may not like it—but, yes—he must be the one to decide."

"Good girl!" said Murphy heartily. Then he turned toward Fred, his eyebrow up. "How about it, Fritzy? What will your decision be?"

Fred drank and last of his coffee, and looked keenly at his friend across the table. "Murphy's staying for a few days, Katie," he said emphatically. "I'd like to give a party for him—Friday night, or Saturday? Could you manage that, sweetheart?"

"He wants me to meet your car-penter," laughed Murphy. "Katie knows whom I want you to meet," said Fred. "We'll leave the party to her."

On the day of Katie's party it was raining-pouring, in fact. But the house was ready. The halfbreed girl who was to serve seemed to understand her instructions, though Katie would have to be in the kitchen part of the evening. She fed Fred and Murphy a dinner of sorts, at five, and sent them upstairs to dress. She herself was ready except for her gown and slippers. She went around, lighting the right lamps, setting matches ready to touch off the tall yellow tapers on her beautiful table, checking on the materials for cocktails. At the last minute, before going upstairs, she pulled on Fred's raincoat for a dash out to pick the lilacs of the valley for her table, and stopped short, moaning, on the door step.

"Oh, no!" she said under her breath. "Not tonight!"

It did no good even to cross her fingers. For there it was the unmistakable old car, inching into the driveway, looting up to the side door. A funny, square old car. And climbing down from it was a funny square old woman. Fred's mother.

Ludmilla Beier, a dear and admirable, old lady—Katie loved her warmly—but not tonight! Not on this night dedicated to the graceful entertainment of sophisticated guests. Ludmilla could be pungent, witty, but it was not the gay wit of Mirandy and Myron Bohmann. Ludmilla had been born a block from the Hotel Sacher, but she had brought wicker souvenirs from Vienna, not jewels and naughty stories.

She was proud of her American citizenship, and in no way ashamed of her accent, nor of her appearance. Now she backed out of the car, held out her arms to Katie. "Was gust dat?" she asked happily.

"Oh, Mamma! We didn't expect you."

"No? It is spring vacation. I wrote you." Ludmilla supported herself by serving as house mother at a boys' school two hundred miles away.

"I know you did—"

"I thought you would invite me to visit . . ." she said wistfully. "When you did not, I came anyway. Where is Fritz?"

"He—oh, here he is!" Here were both men; of course they had heard the car. Who wouldn't? Fred kissed his mother warmly and helped bring in the bundles and boxes and bags which she had brought with her. Helplessly Katie saw these things being stacked in the side hall. Ludmilla draped her babushka over one chair back, her coat over another. She and Fred talked happily to each other, and both at once, Ludmilla repeated that she had awaited an invitation, but had come when one failed to appear.

"We've been busy," Fred apologized. "See, we have a guest."

"I see," said Ludmilla. She had already shot one sharp look at Murphy, who had stood back, amusedly watching the busy scene. Now she bustled up and stood before him. "Why are you here, Hudson?" she demanded truculently. "What is it you want of Fritz now?"

Murphy's face reddened, but before he could find an answer, Ludmilla turned back to Katie. "Is Katie sick?" she asked.

"No, Mamma."

"I thought maybe—in a wrapper—"

"It's a housecoat," laughed Katie. "We—I—we've asked some friends in for the evening, and—"

"Oh, a party!" cried Ludmilla in delight. "And I am here to help! Tell me now what is it to do?"

"There's nothing—"

But Ludmilla, of course, found plenty to do. Murphy was sent out to move her car back into the yard. Fred must carry her "telescope" up to her room, her coat and scarf. She would unpack the things which she had brought; some could be put out for the party.

They were put out too. Ludmilla was all over the place like a busy, broody hen, her full skirts flashing about her ankles, her round face glowing with happiness. She turned on the center light in the parlors and in the dining room. She had brought tulips from her own garden. Red tulips, wedged into a painted china vase which Katie thought she had hidden. This was set at one end of the table, the silver bowl of roses moved to the other. Vigorously she old lady sliced a loaf of pumpernickel rye, and set the platter of it where the roses had been. A bowl of "smear cheese"—she beamed at the triumph of this American translation—a green glass dish of jam—a huge strudel—she made delectious ones, thin strips of golden dough wrapped meltingly about apples and nuts and brown sugar. All the delicacies she had prepared for her Fritz were unpacked and plumped down on poor Katie's table, each contribution made with a satisfied "Nat!" The table became crowded, its delicate beauty completely wrecked.

The telephone rang, and Fred was called away. But Katie heard this in numb despair. What difference did it make? Her party was doomed to failure. When Fred was gone she took the phone and called Jessie, said she had not been able to get her—

"No, Willie and I have been to Boise. Got back tonight. We knew you were partying, and planned to come. Can I help you Katie?"

"Thank you. I've had all the help I can take." Trying to be funny, but with tears threatening to take over, she told of Ludmilla's advent. "We love her, but tonight she looks an awful lot like a family skeleton."

"And you're all tired out—"

"Yes, I am. And as last straw, Fred's been called out."

"To White's?"

"Well, things will work out. Can't you lie down before you dress?"

"I don't dare . . ."

"I'll be there as quickly as I can get Willie on the move. Take it easy, Katie."

"Yes—"
