Mrs. George Clapp gave the treasurer's report.

Mrs. J. Vance Perkins, first vice-president and program chairman, introduced Mrs. W. Jesse Moyer, chairman of the Literature Department, who in turn introduced the speaker, Elizabeth Copeland, head librarian of the Sheppard Memorial Library.

Miss Copeland, in her talk on "The Library and Its Place in the Community," quoted Luther Evans, once Librarian of Congress, as saying: "The American public library is one of the great bulwarks of liberty and democracy in this great land. It must remain a place where citizens can go to learn what is to be said for and against all of the proposals made on the great issues of the day, issues which they either must face or they must forfeit the claim to being good citizens."

Miss Copeland then told of the many intricate workings going on behind scenes to enable a library to operate efficiently. She described a library as not exclusively an educational institution because it has other ends: not primarily a social agency, though it has important aspects, the library is essentially concerned with intelligence, its nourishment and growth. One of the most vital social phases of the public library today, Miss Copeland continued, is its work with children and young people. However, since Professor Thorndike in 1928 exploded his intellectual bombshell that adults can learn—that a man's mind does not stand still at a given age, adults in increasing numbers have been seeking additional education—a public library is their natural recourse. Too, drama and discussion groups are rapidly becoming parts of library programs.

Miss Copeland closed with the following challenge: "A people's university" ably describes the great potentialities of today's public libraries. Never before has it been so important for the world to have a literate, informed and maturely developed citizenry. Continuing education provides an answer to this need. We can continue our education by the regular use of our public library."

A social hour was enjoyed by the members, with Mrs. George Clapp, co-chairman, Mrs. H. L. Andrews, and their committee serving as hostesses. Delicious refreshments were served at a table featuring in exquisite taste the Valentine motif. Mrs. C. L. Russ and Mrs. Tige Gardner presided at the table.

Pitt Civil Defense Organization In 'Skeleton Form'

In war-time or peace-time, in the event of floods, hurricanes, an air raid attack, Pitt County and Greenville must depend upon the Civil Defense Program.

In the event of an unforeseen disaster caused by a second Hurricane Hazel, a community has to be prepared or suffer needlessly exaggerated consequences.

Civil Defense is a home-front activity and everyone in the community is necessarily subject to call.

On the county level J.H. Rose is the director of the Civil Defense Program, which is now organized only in a "skeleton form".

Ground Observer operations are scattered around the county, in Greenville, Farmville, Grifton, and Bethel.

In case of an enemy attack, the first agency in Greenville to be notified would be the police department, by radio from the highway patrol. A radio desk clerk is on duty 24 hours a day seven days per week.

The police force would be charged with the responsibility of aiding in the movement of heavy military traffic through Greenville, in the event of war.

Civil defense would involve cooperation of various local and county agencies, including the Fire Department, the Police Department, the Health Department, the Utilities Department, the Red Cross, and other auxiliary organizations.

Armed forces organizations such as the National Guard, Army Organized Reserve, Air Force Reserve, and the Naval Reserve have only an extremely limited responsibility in a Civil Defense program. They do cooperate in conducting black outs and air raid warnings, etc.

Dr. Walter C. Humbert of the Pitt County Health Department has recently said that there are plans for approved deep wells in case of the Tar River, which is the source of Greenville's water supply should become contaminated. Vaccines are available now for mass immunizations.

Typoid and typhus shots would be the first to be given. The health department would also be responsible for the examination of imported foodstuffs, Dr. Humbert continues, and would check for possible radiological or bacteriological infestation.

Another method of defense and communication is an elaborate system known as "Conelrad", which means "Control of Electro-Magnetic Radiation", and involves the assignment of key radio stations in various sections of the country. All other radio stations in the area would go off the air during an air raid, and the Conelrad stations would broadcast without identifying themselves. This rigid and well-timed system would prevent enemy planes from ascertaining direction from the broadcasts.

Civil Defense Director Rose says that utilities commission forces would be used to check the city's water supply if an atom bomb ever "popped within 300 miles of Greenville.

However, the supposition of civil defense officials is that an area such as Pitt County would be virtually a non-target area for enemy attack. They theorize that the primary responsibility of a rural area like Pitt County would be in receiving evacuees from the Richmond and Norfolk areas, and utilizing the local large tobacco warehouses and schools to house these people.

Civil Defense officials believe that rural areas in a future war would have to accept a greater role in the home-front effort of civil defense than was played in any of the past wars. "Newly-developed bombs, even if dropped in heavily-populated cities, are so powerful that the rural areas would be affected as well, and farmers must realize that a bomb dropped on a city 100 miles away could stop the flow of electricity which draws water from their wells, milks their cows, and provides their refrigeration and lights their homes." The same bomb could cut off their labor supply, their markets, and their transportation facilities.

Farmers who think that civil defense is no responsibility of theirs, are urged by officials to re-examine their traditional attitudes of unconcern.

Sam Winchester, Pitt County Farm Agent, recently said that any farm program in war time would involve an intensification of the peace time program—that is to say, farmers would have the responsibility of growing more food than they do now. The raising of tobacco, the farm agent noted, would continue to be a major role in the Pitt County agricultural set-up, in war-time or peace-time. And he pointed out that townspeople, as in the last war, would have to chip in and help by planting victory gardens.

Winchester says that his office has received some materials from the Extension Service in Raleigh on farm civilian defense practices.

The Greenville Fire Department, in the event of war or other emergencies, would play an important part in Civil Defense operations, in fighting fires and in rescue operations.

The recently-acquired fire department rescue truck is frequently in use even during the most superficially-quiet periods.

Fire Chief George Gardner says that fire trucks would have to be dispersed around the city more than they are now in the event of enemy air attacks. State Civil Defense officials have said that the local fire department rescue unit is one of the best in the state, Gardner pointed out.

All local agencies, including the fire and police departments, stand to lose many men in a wartime draft. In the last war, however, firemen were "called among the last", Gardner concluded.

Leonard Bloxam, Utilities Superintendent, explained that the role of local utilities would have to be determined on a state or national level, because of fuel rationing and other considerations that go and purely local control and supervision.

"I was told to block out Greenville," Bloxam said, "we could do that by simply throwing the switch."

Bloxam pointed out that the local commission could help supply Norfolk and other Virginia military bases if any of VEPCO's plants were wiped out by air attack. This could be arranged since some electricity is now being bought from VEPCO by the Greenville Utilities Commission.

The superintendent also said that there is a special Civil Defense telephone in the department used only in the event of an emergency. The telephone was first placed in the office at the beginning of the Korean War.

If disaster comes to any area, the American National Red Cross would be one of the first organizations on the scene, and would be instrumental in saving lives, and in dealing with emergency conditions immediately following the disaster.

The Red Cross recently held a "Disaster Institute" in Pitt County to brief all persons participating in the Red Cross program with their duties in the event of an emergency in the county.

It is also understood that Anne George of Richmond, Va., and Roy Askew of Elizabeth City are in charge of plans for the event. They will also act as mistress and master of ceremonies at Tuesday's performance.

Among entertainers will be "The Confederates," a popular student quartet at East Carolina College, which will be among attractions at the Talent Show sponsored by the campus newspaper, "The East Carolinian," next Tuesday night. "The Confederates," who will be presented in a group of popular songs, are (left to right) Clifton Leonard, Gerald Murphy, Theodore Smith, and Charles Fishel.

Civil Defense mobilization has to be swift and well-planned to meet any exigency. The citizens pictured above met shortly before the arrival of Hurricane Hazel to mobilize Civil Defense forces in Greenville and Pitt County for the big blow. (Reflector Staff Photo).

Pictured above is the new Civilian Defense rescue truck which will be added to the rescue equipment at the Greenville Fire Department. The truck will be used for rescue work by the department as well as being available for Civilian Defense work in case of national emergency. Money for the vehicle was raised by the Greenville Junior Chamber of Commerce to match funds offered by Civilian Defense.

Days Of Flop Hats, Shirt Waists And 9-Cent Cotton Recalled In County

Days when cotton averaged nine cents a pound, ladies were wearing "real switches and puffs" of hair, and the latest styles were shirt waists, flop hats, dimity suits and reversible ties, were recalled by two local residents recently discovered by chance early 1900 editions of The Daily Reflector.

Miss Eloise Ellington found a July 5, 1902, issue the other day while going through some old papers. Last month an issue issued by W.D. Boyd, paint contractor, as he was in the process of redecorating the home of David C. Moore on East Eighth Street. Boyd said the paper was discovered under a carpet which was being removed from the room.

On the yellowed pages of the 1902 edition were noted numerous sales. One advertisement offered 10,000 yards of Challess and Scotch lawns for four and one-half cents a yard. (This quality elsewhere seven cents a yard.) Ladies 50-cent belts were selling for 29 cents, and petroleum jelly (vaseline) was three cents per bottle. J.B. Cherry & Company advertised as "The Only Department Store in Greenville."

News notes stated, "There was one fight or two to disturb the equilibrium of the 4th of July," and "There is an abundance of dust, but the street sprinkler continues to rest."

By 1911 cotton had gone up to 14 cents a pound, and more local activity was noted in the news columns of the paper.

Greenville residents were being encouraged to support the public library, which was then located upstairs in the Winslow Building at Fifth and Washington Streets. Mrs. W.A. Bowen was librarian, and the library hours were from 3:30 to 5:30 p.m. every Monday, Wednesday and Friday afternoons.

A new court house was being constructed, and ladies of the Methodist church were having a shirt waist sale. It was observed that "Bicycles are on the increase here."

Grifton residents were excited at the prospect of having a baseball team that season in the Coast Line League, which was already composed of teams from Greenville, Kingston and Ayden.

Ayden news disclosed a "gentleman of means" had visited that community "with a view of building a nice three-story brick hotel, and there was also a move on foot to erect a suitable and up-to-date banking house" in that community.

Playing at the local Amuzu Theatre were two feature films "Apache Gold," "a grand Western epic picture," and "He Laughs Best Who Laughs Last," which "must be seen to be appreciated." Also advertised was the farewell performance "We regret to say" of the Lewis Comedy and Dramatic Company. There was an announcement of "Orchestra Music Tonight 7:30 to 8:00," and "If it rains bring an umbrella, and come anyway."

New Authority Eliminates Two Major Problems For President

By JAMES MARLOW
Associated Press News Analyst
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Eisenhower killed two birds with one stone — at least temporarily — when he asked for, and got, congressional approval to defend Formosa and the Pescadore Islands, as he thinks best.

The birds were (1) the demands of some Republicans, like Sen. Knowland (R-Calif.), for stronger action against Red China and (2) the old question of the President's power to take action which might lead to war.

Persons familiar with the administration's thinking have been saying around Washington the President's request for the resolution has had a quieting effect on those Republicans who didn't consider him tough enough on the Reds.

Knowland, who has repeatedly called for a blockade of the China coast, supported the resolution. But if there is any real Republican unity on Formosa policy now, it will almost certainly dissolve if, for instance, Knowland thinks Eisenhower uses this resolution to make concessions to the Reds, instead of stiffening them.

The resolution, with language Beard Raising Time Is Here both broad and vague, sounds tough. Under it Eisenhower could order the bombing of Red China, even if it meant war, if he felt that was necessary to frustrate an attack on Formosa.

The resolution is clear on only one thing: that this country will specifically defend Formosa and the Pescadores. But that has already been the clearly stated American policy for five years under Presidents Truman and Eisenhower.

The resolution says Eisenhower can take action to defend other areas around Formosa, now held by Chiang Kai-shek. Or, since the resolution says nothing to the contrary, Eisenhower could let the Reds have those other areas with out a fight from this country.

Eisenhower was quizzed closely at his news conference yesterday about his intentions on defending Chiang's islands near the China mainland. He declined to be any more specific than the resolution. There has always been a constitutional question, going back to the Republic's beginning, about this.

The Constitution says only Congress can declare war. But once a president actually gets the country into war, that making the actual declaration by Congress only a recognition of an accomplished fact.

Presumably a president could, by some action of his, plunge the country into war, Congress has been a check on any president's warming inclinations.

The reason: Congress could refuse to back up a president with a declaration of war after he had started one. It's always been a thin line. The problem has become more acute in the atomic age when, to save the country, the President might have to act be-

French Two-Way Policy For North African Colonies Causing Considerable Trouble

By PRESTON GROVER
ALGERS, French North Africa (AP) — The problems arising from a divided and almost immobile French National Assembly are complicated by a conflicting two-way policy for North Africa. At the same time that France is trying to graft Algeria onto herself, she is agreeing to early home rule for Tunisia and, later on, for Morocco.

If Tunisia gets home rule first, will the nationalists in Algeria sit quietly by?

Just to make France's problems more difficult, the Communist Arab radios in Cairo, Beirut and Karachi bombard North Africa with daily broadcasts inciting nationalist demonstrations and terrorism. Even Franco's radio in Spanish Morocco takes a daily knock.

Aside from petty party squabbles in the Assembly itself, the government is heavily influenced by hundreds of thousands of French colonists in North Africa. They live there. They are tough people. They have little sympathy with the nationalist yearnings for self-rule. They admit they have a privileged position and intend to keep it if they can.

They have brought high-quality farming to North Africa which the Arabs would not likely have produced. The increased yields from French farming provide much of the food for the increasing Arab population. And the more Arabs there are, the more they cry for a share of the land the French are farming.

It is a problem which calls for money, might and a clear policy. France is short of all three.

Many Arab eyes are turned toward America to help. Much American capital is ready to go into Morocco if it can be assured of stable conditions. Millions of dollars of foreign capital moved into Morocco right after the war and Casablanca boomed like a mining town. But the flow has almost stopped.

I met one American investor hoping to buy resort property in Agadir, on the south Atlantic coast of Morocco.

"It's the future Miami of Europe," he said, "if these charters wouldn't scare away all the tourists." He was pretty unhappy.

American military figures have a worried eye on the problem. America has important air bases, not only in French Africa but in nominally independent Libya, farther east.

These bases are also part of the daily Communist radio target.

"The Russians are afraid of those bases. They can't get at them directly, but they can endanger them by stirring up France and Morocco." That was the analysis of Abdel Hal el Kittani of Fez, often referred to as the "Moslem Pope of the West."

America is backing France in North Africa, hoping evidently against hope that she will make those decisions which will restore a happy and progressive climate in North Africa. But France is handicuffed by her own internal conflicts and animosities, especially in the Assembly.

In one big sense, France is in a better position than she was in Indochina. Indochina was a far

People Saving More; Going Deeper In Debt

By SAM DAWSON
NEW YORK (AP) — Americans are stashing their money away in the greatest volume of savings ever — and at the same time they are going deeper and deeper into debt.

Deposits in mutual savings banks have reached a record high. Saving and loan associations have had a record year. Total liquid savings have risen. At the same time, installment debt and mortgages have taken a sudden spurt and reached the highest levels in history.

Total debt — what is owed by government, corporations and individuals — has risen 47 per cent since 1946 with corporate and personal debts leading the way. Total debt now exceeds 600 billion dollars.

Is this dangerously high? If not, where will the danger point be? Mortgages on family homes have climbed to 75 billion dollars. The Home Loan Bank Board estimates that more than 16 billion additional dollars will be needed this year to finance home buying.

Installment buying totals spurted with the advent of the new auto models and are now put at 22 billion dollars. At the same time, the total of single-payment loans, charge accounts and service credit rose to 7 1/2 billion dollars.

Federal government debt is now 278 1/2 billion dollars but hasn't been climbing much recently. State and local governments, however, increased their debt totals about six billion last year and now owe around 34 billion dollars.

Total business debt has risen to around 187 billion.

Farm debt has held around 16 billion with nearly half of it in mortgages.

Against this record of rising debt, there is the other record of growing savings.

For one example, the nation's mutual savings banks added nearly two billion dollars to their deposits last year, a gain of 8 per cent, for a total of 26 1/2 billion. And they used this increase in individual savings to face the total of their mortgage loans by 16 per cent. They now hold almost 15 billion dollars worth of this form of individual debt.

Bankers, and other managers, of the nation's money and credit, say that the growing total of debt isn't the important thing — what matters is the relation of debt to income. And they point out that in general income has been rising as fast as debt.

Copper Boom Expected Soon

LANSING, Mich. (AP)—State geologists are following closely developments at two Upper Peninsula copper mines which may result in better days for the lagging Michigan copper industry. When it reaches peak production next year, the White Pine mine, in Ontonagon County, is expected to produce 75 million pounds a year — compared to 48 million pounds produced by Michigan mines currently in operation.

The Osceola, another mine, near Calumet, abandoned in 1931, is being cleared of some seven billion gallons of water which have flooded the shafts. Engineers expect to extract some 14 million pounds of copper a year.

But Geologists of the State Conservation Department feel the White Pine operation is the more promising. "It is the first attempt in Michigan to exploit copper sulphide commercially," says H.H. Hardenberg, conservation department mining geologist. "Most of the world's supply comes from copper sulphide," he says, "but Michigan's industry — until now — has been restricted to the mining of native copper."

HORSE TRAINER

Trainer Randall puts his eight Palominos through precision drill in hip stand. His only cues to horses are by whip motions and words.

BREAKING IN A BRONC'

Randall uses special kind of harness to make bronco turn his head—the first step in training him to be lead pony in a show.

Then with soft-spoken voice cues Randall gets his horse to lie down. He made this bronco into a riding horse within few days.

Another breaking-in lesson: Randall uses can of rocks which he shakes near horse to overcome shyness and get accustomed to noises.

Randall's son, Corky, puts Elmer, a Palamino, through bucking stunt. Movies have used Elmer for his bucking ability.

With whip-pointing cue, Randall teaches Trigger, Jr., Roy Rogers' famed movie horse, to whinney or open his lips.

"Kindness and soft words are a great asset in training horses," says Glenn H. Randall of North Hollywood, Calif., the famous professional trainer.

Although he specializes in teaching horses what to do in shows, circuses and motion picture work, he also trains wild horses for ranches, for stock shows, parades and rodeo performances. Randall believes also that much of his success is due to the fact that he gets the confidence of the horse before he starts basic training.

For 15 years, Randall has trained many horses that have become trademarks for famous cowboy actors, such as Trigger and Trigger, Jr., for Roy Rogers, Hi-Yo Silver for the Lone Ranger and Koko for Rex Allen. He also coached Midnight for Casey Tibby, four-time world champion cowboy. These famed horses are boarded at the Randall ranch where he schools them constantly in their tricks.

A shake of the whip and a few words, and King, an Arabian-bred show horse, gracefully rears up on his hind legs. Randall's training has perfected King's showmanship.

Follow-Up Work Is Most Important

With the controversy over the possibility of parking facilities on the Sheppard Memorial Library property apparently over now, perhaps objective consideration can be given to at least two matters which came to light during the squabble.

First is the matter of parking which is necessary if optimum use is to be made of the library facilities. The four 15 minute zones to be provided in front of the library must be enforced if they are to serve the purpose for which they are intended. With proper enforcement those short time zones together with other metered parking in the area should take care of the daytime parking problem. It is obvious, however, that they will provide little relief for patrons who want to park in front of the library at night.

It is quite possible that further study will be necessary before an adequate solution to the night parking problem is found.

Secondly is the matter of beautification of the library grounds. While the grounds surrounding the library cannot by any stretch of the imagination be considered an eyesore, most people agree that in their present condition they do not lend to the building the aesthetic compliment they should.

Plans which are being formulated for beautification of the library grounds should be completed as rapidly as possible and actual work on the grounds begun. Some improvement of the library grounds has been noted in recent years through efforts of the Library Board, Garden Club and other local organizations, but more work in that direction needs to be done. The sooner over-all arrangements for planning and financing the necessary work can be completed, the sooner the appearance of the grounds can be achieved.

Efforts To Reduce Divorces Helped By Senate Action

In killing the proposal which would have reduced the waiting time for divorces in North Carolina, the Senate has contributed to efforts to cut down the divorce rate of the state.

North Carolina and other states are faced with the problem of broken homes and divorces. The matter has gained considerable public attention in recent years and various efforts have been made to reduce the ratio of divorces to marriages. Proponents of the measure which would have reduced the period of separation before a divorce is granted included in their argument that the reduction may to some extent reduce the number of divorces.

From the record of other states which have reduced the waiting period for divorces, there is little to support such an argument. One of the proponents of the measure asserted that in 80 to 90 per cent of the state's divorce cases the parties have not been separated for the two years required under the present law. If that is so, it is reasonable to assume that a one-year separation requirement would be just as flagrantly violated and in reality only a few months' separation would be sufficient for seeking a divorce.

The Senate did a considerable service to the people of North Carolina by maintaining the two-year separation requirement for divorces.

Strength for the Day

By EARL L. DOUGLASS
WALK IN FAITH

St. Paul in one of his epistles urges his followers to walk in faith.

This is a striking statement—walk in faith. There are plenty of people who talk in faith. There is nothing easier than that. One can memorize a creed and recite it with a glib tongue and call himself a Christian—that is, if he is utterly naive and unfamiliar with the Bible. For the Bible nowhere states that people are saved just by believing something. It insists that this belief must be of a variety which makes a spiritual difference—manifests itself in new attitudes and in new ways of living.

All religion begins with belief, but religion which and a snare. Belief is the first step in the direction of faith. One of the great religious leaders of the past often put in parenthesis after the word "faith" the hyphenated word "trust—obedience." The seed of religious life is belief; the tree is faith; the fruit is obedience.

A test to which all of us should subject ourselves is a regular check-up on the extent to which we really practice the things we profess to believe. Many people have perfectly good Christian doctrines that rattle around in their empty hearts and minds like loose cargo being tossed about in a ship during rough weather.

Walk in faith—don't just talk in faith.

Every Saturday, Mr. Tucker answers readers' questions of general interest on national and international policies and personalities. Questions may be sent to him at 7008 Hillcrest Place, Chevy Chase, Md.

WASHINGTON—"What has happened to the plan to ask the Chief Justice to appear annually before Congress," asks H. F., of Richmond, Va., "and to make a report on the Federal Judiciary?"

Answer: The proposal, which is in the form of a Concurrent Resolution and therefore does not require the signature of the President, is still before Congress. Although there is some opposition to it, it is the general belief that it will be passed.

A GOP REASON—The opposition derives from the fact that the present Chief Justice, Earl Warren, of California might use the opportunity—or his friends might—to build him into a 1956 Presidential candidate. GOP leaders, who fear that Ike might not seek a second term, look upon the former Governor of California as their next strongest man.

Warren's friends scoff at this objection. They say that he is delighted with his present work, and that he has forewarned politics. However, to meet this criticism, it has been proposed that his appearance be postponed until after the 1956 election. Warren would be 69 in 1956, and too old to be a White House threat.

FEDERAL COURTS' NEEDS—Advocates of the idea believe that it would dramatize the needs of the Federal Courts, which are so clogged in some jurisdictions that it takes three or four years for final settlement of a case. Obviously, such delays sometimes defeat justice and work serious hardship.

However, Congress itself can remedy this situation by appropriating more money for more judges, more secretaries, more facilities. Also, as Representative Emanuel Celler points out, Ike can improve conditions without Congressional action.

BENCH VACANCIES—The Brooklyn legislator, who heads the House Judiciary Committee, notes that there are about 20 vacancies on the Federal bench now that some have existed for more than a year, and that immediate appointment of more jurists would help to relieve congestion. Other M.C.'s propose that the judges work longer hours, and take less prolonged vacations.

During the 1954 fiscal year, Federal courts disposed of 93,161 cases, which seems like a lot of work. But 78,531 were still pending, and, of course, each year brings a new accumulation. It would seem that these facts alone should persuade Congress to expand the system, whether the Chief Justice appears before them or not.

BARKEY'S ADVICE HEHEDED—"What is Senator Alben Barkley's status in the Senate since his return?" inquires G. J. of Lexington, Ky. "Does he have the influence he had before he left the chamber? Or is he just another member of the Senate?"

Answer: Technically, because of his absence from the upper chamber, Barkley stands at the foot of the seniority ladder, and must make the long climb back. Actually, a man of his experience, service and former rank exerts power and influence far beyond his senatorial classification.

The youngsters ask and listen to the Kentuckian's advice on almost all political and legislative matters.

BRITAIN'S PROPOSAL—"Is Great Britain going to propose that the United States and the United Nations recognize Communist and Nationalist China as one way out of the Formosa mess?"

Yes, T. R., of Concord, N. H., that appears to be London's solution. Since nobody on our side wants war over this question, there is general belief that Ike and Dulles would settle on that basis. But such a plan will run into heavy and vocal opposition on Capitol Hill, especially from the Knowland-McCarthy faction.

This Will Really Work

Somebody Told Me

First Thoughts On Arising

What races through your mind when you wake up in the morning? No doubt psychiatrists have written books on the subject, but I simply like to compare my list of thought with other people's. My first conclusion is that I shouldn't have stayed up to see that last TV show; after all, it wasn't worth losing the sleep. Next, I feel of my face and declare that I should have shaved the night before, then look at my watch and see that I don't have time.

What am I going to write about? For several years I tried writing this column at night, but later concluded that my feeble mind is less feeble early in the morning. Thus, it is written as fast as I can type, under the pressure of deadline time at the Reflector office. This particular idea was conceived as I was driving to work. How ambitious are you early in the morning? I wake up full of drive with plans to accomplish three days' work on that particular day but lose momentum as the day wears on. By 5:30 in the afternoon I find myself quite often wishing it were six. The contrast between the 5:30 slump and the early morning drive is discouraging.

Food? So early in the morning? If I don't eat within an hour after getting up I'll get sick. But to jump out of the bed and into an egg is a trifle too sudden for me. A big glass of orange juice is my choice. Then, breakfast about 10 minutes later.

Mood? First thing in the morning my attitude is average, I think. It's disturbing to get into an even worse mood before you're hot awake good, so I avoid such if possible. Even if they come up later in the day I think most of us are better prepared after several hours of being awake.

Regrets? Sometimes. Usually it's what I intended to get done yesterday and didn't accomplish. Then again, in the early-morning survey it seems that I accomplished more than I had expected to the day before.

Mostly, the mind is working fast after awakening, I think. And its pattern is inventory. It's a quick review of yesterday and anticipation for today.

Quite often the new day brings a solution. "Let me sleep on it," we say. And I think that method quite often works.

And I think you.

What Other Editors Are Thinking

IT WOULD BE A COSTLY CUT (Washington Daily News) Dr. Charles Carroll, State Superintendent of Public Instruction, speaking in Beaufort County last week, said that if present recommendations of the Advisory Budget Commission are allowed to stand, then the vocational program in our schools will have to be reduced.

The Advisory Budget Commission, according to Dr. Carroll, has recommended a cut in appropriations for the vocational program. That would mean, says Dr. Carroll, that we would lose many of our agricultural and home economics teachers.

To our way of thinking the vocational program is one of our most important phases of our high school educational curriculum. We think it is far more important than many of the other courses being taught.

We don't know the position of the State education officials on this matter, but to us a vocational program is one of the most practical courses which can be taught in our schools.

Not all boys and girls can be smart in the liberal arts courses. They might not learn the parts of speech in English, or the theorems in geometry, or the equations in chemistry.

But many of these boys and girls can learn to do many things with their hands and mind working together. They can learn to cook, sew, and keep house in the home economics courses. And they can learn to rotate crops, build machinery, care for animals, and become better farmers and citizens in the agricultural courses.

If we cut down on the opportunities in this work, we are reducing the value of the very life line of many of our younger people. And we are squarely opposed to any reduction in our vocational program. In fact, if we are to change the program in any way, we ought to accentuate it and enlarge it rather than reduce it. It is just that valuable to our young people, according to our way of thinking.

Not all our boys and girls will go to college to continue their formal educations. If we teach them to be better farmers and better homemakers in high school, have we not spent tax money wisely and practically? How could we possibly spend it better than that?

When we make for better farmers and better homemakers in our families, we have at the same time made for better citizens and better community builders.

We just cannot afford to reduce our vocational program. It would be one of the most tragic mistakes we could make. We owe it to the boys and girls to equip them for life's journey with all the tools we can give them. If we take away a valuable tool, then we have not only hurt the boys and girls, but we have hurt future citizenship in our community.

Some Legislators Wonder If Time Is Secret Strategy

By LYN NNISBET
STRATEGY—Some of those who might be classified as the "second level leadership" in the General Assembly, and many of the people who are interested in specific legislation, are manifesting concern over the apparent strategy of the top leaders.

Thirty of the ninety days for which members can draw pay have passed. Yet approximately half the House committees have not been appointed, and three or four others usually regarded as highly important were not named until just a few days ago. Members with bills already prepared, and folks back home who desire certain bills to be introduced, do not want them put into the mill until the committees have been named.

Although the House adopted permanent rules more than two weeks ago very few members know what they provide, because custom has long been to include in the printed rule book a listing of committee assignments.

With one hind of the pay-time already used up, none of the major administration-sponsored reorganization measures have been offered. Legislators and others concerned are beginning to wonder if the master strategy is to hold these bills back for a while longer, then dump them all into the hooper at one time with the insistent demand that they be enacted forthwith because "time is running out."

That was practically what happened with respect to adoption of session rules, two weeks after convening in the House and there was no prospect of any of the reorganization recommendations being effected.

That situation has raised the question in the minds of some members and observers whether the top leadership does not expect any changes in governmental structure to be made, or if it is the purpose to go along as usual with the money bills until action has been taken on the reorganization proposals and then the money committees go into "executive subcommittees may suggest. It is certain that if the reorganization plans go through some agencies will require more, some less, than the amounts currently being discussed in the appropriations committee.

GOVERNOR—Almost unanimous opinion is that Governor Luther Hodges holds the key to the situation. The Governor right now has the respect and confidence of legislators and the people to as great degree as any chief executive in recent history. The General Assembly and the public applauded the Governor's position in turning thumbs down on bond issue, particularly the proposed $150 million for primary roads. So far, however, he has not come up with a positive plan or suggestion for financing the admittedly needed highway program.

He has publicly endorsed most of the reorganization commission recommendations, the report of the special commission on ways and means of best compliance with the U.S. Supreme Court segregation decision, and the revision of the public school laws. Except for one or two bills purporting to return larger share of responsibility for public school to local units, but without implementing financial provisions, no legislation has been offered to effectuate these ideas.

In all of this it is important to remember that one-third of the time for which members of the

Business Today

A March 1 Decision

By ELMER ROESSNER
As Americans now try to figure how they can save or borrow enough to pay their income taxes by next April 15, many businessmen are thinking about the new provision that permits partnerships or sole proprietorships to file as corporations. They must decide by March 1.

If the owner or owners of an unincorporated business wish to file as corporations they must notify the Internal Revenue Service by that date. And if they do, they are bound in future years by the decision.

Filing as a corporation is a promise of savings for many. But the promise is loaded.

The original proposal was to permit unincorporated businesses to file as corporations, and closely held corporations to file as unincorporated firms. Since businesses affected would be mostly small the sponsors of the amendment believed that each class should have the maximum tax advantage.

But "corporation" is a dirty word to some Congressmen and the part allowing corporations to file as unincorporated enterprises was lost.

In the past, all earnings of an unincorporated business have been taxed at personal income rates to the owner or owners. Now the owner or owners can pay personal income taxes on only that part of profits drawn as salaries. The rest is taxed at corporation rates, which are comparatively light in the low brackets.

For many, this will sound like a good deal.

But consider this: If one or more partners have other sources of income, the amount of savings will differ considerably. In some cases, reporting as a corporation might save one partner money, yet cost another partner more. Thus seeds of dissention could be sown.

And consider: Income may vary from year to year. In future years, reporting as a corporation may be much more expensive than reporting as an individual or individuals. In fact, the tax saving this year may be more than wiped out by higher taxes in the future.

And because the choice this year is binding on future years, the only escape of a businessman caught in that predicament would be to sell the business or close it up.

Before making a decision in this matter, a businessman should ask accountant or tax attorney to weigh his case carefully. And if his advisors should disagree or be uncertain, he'll be safer sticking to his unincorporated status.

PARKING FACILITIES MAY JUST FADE AWAY
The American Society of Planning Officials have spotted a joker in the wave of current city ordinances requiring builders of new buildings to supply off-street parking facilities.

The joker is that most of these laws do not require the owner of the structures to maintain these parking facilities after they are completed or if they do, they involve difficulties in enforcement. The society cites five cities which have ordinances requiring parking facilities to be maintained as long as the building is in use. One of these, Chicago, also specifies that the facilities be under the same ownership as the building.

MARKETING RESEARCH CAN HELP SMALL BUSINESS
Small manufacturers can gain from marketing research just as the large corporations do according to a new "Management Aid," published by the Small Business Administration.

The aid, a four-page leaflet, points out that marketing research can eliminate or reduce business risks, help make sounder decisions, and gain basic market facts.

Revolution In Grocery-Buying

By HAL BOYLE
NEW YORK (AP)—There has been a quiet revolution in the American family's food buying habits.

Wives may select most of their husbands' clothing, but more and more husbands now do the grocery shopping. They have to. It's the only way they can get what they want to eat.

"About a third of the sales in the average supermarket now are made by husbands who do the family food shopping alone," estimates Frank Packard, "and another third to husbands and wives who shop together."

Packard, a cherubic, well-fed businessman who gallants about the country in his own private plane, operates a pioneer supermarket at Hackensack, N.J. which for many years claimed it did the biggest food business under one roof of any store in America. This was before Texas started building supermarkets.

His long experience has led Packard to develop an interesting theory about women. They simply don't have as good taste as men—in food.

"I've never heard of any great professional women tea or coffee tasters—or chefs either," he said. "A man's taste for food is more glamorous than a woman's because his taste buds are more sensitive."

"If you gave them a physiological test, I'm sure you'd find women's taste buds are inferior to men's. That's probably why women are inclined to overseas food."

He has found women are less adventurous than men in trying new foods. A supermarket push cart brings out the Marco Polo in a man.

Most of the free recipe leaflets are picked up by husbands, not wives, Packard said. "Men like to experiment. They are more likely to buy things like Japanese octopus, buffalo steak or canned rattlesnake meat.

"They buy the rattlesnake meat as a gag usually—to fool a friend, or startle a visiting mother-in-law. I don't know of anyone who eats rattlesnake meat regularly. At $1.50 a can it isn't exactly habit-forming."

Here are some other differences he has noted between men and women grocery shoppers:

"Women enjoy buying new clothing but buying food is just a chore to them. They get it over as quickly and efficiently as possible. But it's fun for the men—a holiday.

"Women stick strictly to the household budget in buying food. Men throw the budget overboard. Sometimes they go on such good-buys jags our clerks actually have to discourage them.

"Children behave better when they are with their father. They never get lost, and they stick close to him. But they are more used to mother. When they come in with her, they run and romp all over the store.

"Left to his own choice, a man will rarely buy fowl or fish. He'll buy beef. And he won't even get near the bakery table unless it's to get something on his wife's list."

Packard predicts changing food habits will doom the home-delivery milkman within 10 years—because of the labor cost—and that frozen precooked foods such as fried chicken and pizza pies will hike in popularity. So will standardized prepackaged steaks and chops.

"The trend is toward what is easier, easier, easier," he said, and added:

"There is no longer much class distinction in food buying. A low income man today brags about the quality of the meals his wife cooks. But some rich people now serve the worst food in the world. Many wealthy people don't know or appreciate good food."

In "The Forest Lord" by Noel Gerson, Josiah Burney is plunged into debtor's prison and then shanghaied into the British navy through the machinations of a greedy uncle. He escapes to America and is thrown into further adventures with Indians and scoundrels as he seeks his lost father.

Another historical novel by John Brick is based on the actual capture of Dave Harper by Joseph Brant's Indians. This exciting story is "Eagles of Niagara."

A new novel by Kathleen Norris is set in Nineteenth Century San Francisco. A rich widow, Coralia and her best friend, Harriet Townsend almost come to grief over the same man until Coralia's girlhood love comes back into her life. This book by the popular author is "Miss Harriet Townsend."

Dr. Wooten comes to Greenville from New Orleans, La. where he has just spent six months at Charity Hospital. Prior to that time he spent four years in Baltimore, Md., at the Baltimore City Hospital and Kernan Hospital for Crippled Children. He served for two years in the United States Army.

The doctor received his medical training at Duke University, graduating in 1947. He then spent a year at Emory University Hospital in Atlanta, Ga. serving his internship.

Dr. Wooten, his wife and two children are now residing at 109 South Harding Street.

Queries Put To Pakistan Women

KARACHI, Pakistan (AP)—How many wives does your husband have? Does he let you help spend his income? Did you have any voice in choosing your husband? These are some of the questions being asked of 5,000 Moslem wives by the All-Pakistan Women's Assn. It aims to set up a bill of rights for the country's women, after analyzing returns from its questionnaire.

The association was founded by Begum Liaquat Ali Khan, Pakistan's ambassador to Holland. She is the widow of the country's first Prime Minister.

Behind the questionnaire is a tradition. Moslem husbands have dominated their wives keeping them at home and also pampering them. The pampering has contributed to the domineering, and vice versa.

Husbands of years ago, when nomadic raiders considered women a top prize, husbands tried to protect their wives by segregating them and making them stay home. The tradition of purdah—where a woman is secluded from the sight of all men except her husband—grew up. Wives began to wear veils. In public buildings, they sat behind perforated stone screens.

The father often determined whom a girl could marry. The husband was allowed four wives. He controlled their finances and decided on almost anything they might want to do.

When Pakistan became independent, moves were made to reform Moslem society and emancipate the woman. Many of the traditions broke down.

The All-Pakistan Women's Assn. originally started to aid refugee women, entered the controversy as the practice of polygamy persisted, despite many attempts by women to stamp it out.

Marry A Soldier And See World

PITTSBURGH (AP)—Should Mrs. Marie Ruckman coin the slogan "Marry an American Soldier and See the World" she should not be blamed. Mrs. Ruckman, an Italian, met her husband, Chief Warrant Officer Albert Ruckman, when he was stationed in Italy in 1944. They were married a year later.

In 1945 the couple came to America, where their first child was born. Shortly afterwards Ruckman was transferred to Germany where the couple became parents again.

Ruckman was ordered to Japan a short time ago. En route to join him, his wife stopped off in Pittsburgh, was naturalized as an American citizen and promptly left with her children to join her husband in the Far East.

Recently Convert To Gas Heat

CHICAGO (AP)—The order read: "fill 'er up" at 6211 N. Bernard St., the home of the Norman Bernants Albert Berg, fuel deliveryman, removed the outside cap for the oil storage tank and delivered 250 gallons of fuel oil. He knew the place; he had delivered oil there before. It was just routine.

He realized he was at the Joseph Slonim home, a block away, at 6111 N. Bernard St., too late to prevent damage to a basement playroom.

The Slonims recently converted to gas heat and had removed their storage tank but left undisturbed the outside hose connection.

Communist War Threats Being Used to Scare Neutralists

Battle Over Military Cut Out in Open

By J. M. ROBERTS
AP News Analyst

The long-brewing battle over the allocation of strength to the different branches of the armed forces produced two distinct areas of conflict this week.

1. Army Chief of Staff Ridgway said the administration program for cutting the size of the Army jeopardized the national security.

2. The House Armed Services Committee displayed irritation that the administration had presumed to order reductions below the figures established by Congress.

Ridgway, who has done his job so well he has been asked to stay on despite approach of his retirement time, provided no surprise, except insofar as he openly declared a decisive split with the civil administration of the Defense Department in an area where heretofore there had been acquiescence, if grumbling acquiescence.

Administration Position
He testified on the same day as Secretary of the Army Stevens, who seemed to have argued himself into the position that the allocations were all right and best for the country.

The administration position has been that it can have an army, equipped with modern weapons and highly mobile, which is just as powerful with fewer men. With part of the savings, the strategic Air Force can be built up for its vital role in backing up diplomacy, somewhat after the former fashion for navies "in being." The net savings even after this are considered important to maintenance of a sound national economy, without which no modern armed force could long operate.

But the trouble is, said Ridgway, diplomatic commitments already have over-extended the Army. If reductions keep up—the administration proposes to drop 170,000 men in about 18 months—reallocations of manpower are going to be necessary, affecting not only the ability of the Army to defend itself in assigned positions, but also affecting the strength of its support for diplomacy in various areas.

Concern Over Reserve
The administration itself has expressed concern over the reserve situation and is making plans for a new system to insure a prepared reserve. But this is as yet far away.

Defense officials only this week, while the Army reduction fight was under way, told Congress at their hearing, that a four-year extension of the present draft laws was essential.

The same committee held both hearings. It is headed by that long-time supporter of the armed forces, Rep. Carl Vinson.

The sympathy shown for Ridgway's views, and the bitter questions about who is going to control the size of the forces, Congress or the administration, were by no means a personal expression. The attitude of the committee as a whole was clearly shown.

Faith in Ike
It was sitting while fears of a war in the Pacific mounted. Senators were not merely defending what they considered their own prerogatives. They were wondering, as so many others have wondered out loud in recent months, whether the administration was being carried away in its effort to balance the budget.

There was a great faith in President Eisenhower's ability to make military decisions, but they were not sure about the advice he was getting, especially when it ran directly counter to the views of the Army chief of the staff.

In the background of the dispute was the ancient question of how far a nation's leaders can go in resting the national security on their own assessments of what is going on in the world. If there is a chance that they are wrong in such an area, they cannot take risks. Eisenhower and his responsible secretaries are convinced they have struck the proper balance not only between the different services but between the armed forces and the national economic picture as a whole. Congress seemed to be in mood to say that this is perhaps correct, but that it will not accept any hardships.

CHIANG KAI-SHEK, protected by the U.S. 7th Fleet, awaits the Reds' next move.

U.N. Faces Up to Crisis in Pacific

RUSSIA'S Arkady Sobolev keeps his hand down as Sir Pierson Dixon of Britain, center, and Henry Cabot Lodge of the United States, right, vote in favor of inviting Red China to U.N.-sponsored cease-fire talks.

CHO EN-LAI, with a war machine built in Russia, issues belligerent threats.

Reds Baiting U.S. To Confuse Allies

By WILLIAM L. RYAN
Associated Press Foreign News Analyst

A PARALYSIS of American foreign policy, both in Europe and the Orient, seems to be the goal of the combined planning of Soviet and Red Chinese strategists in the cold war.

The timing of the threatening Peiping assault can hardly be regarded as accidental. It fits in too neatly with Communist global strategy. It would be utterly idiotic of the Red Chinese to risk war with the United States at this time, and it is unlikely that they will do so. But the threat of war can be used with great potency as a weapon with which to scare the neutralists of both Asia and Europe.

The United States has now found itself jockeyed into an unpleasant position. Because of the very real-looking threat of the Red Chinese, the United States has announced to the world that it will, if necessary, carry an attack to the Chinese mainland to prevent the seizure of Formosa.

Yet the Chinese maneuvering all along had the look of a deliberate provocation not only to test the intentions of the United States, but to maneuver Washington into some sort of position which, from the eyes of Asia, and indeed from the eyes of much of Europe, would have little justification.

Reluctant Allies
The Soviet Union, while making much noise about Asia, was not overlooking its immediate interests in Europe by any means. The Asian situation fitted its purposes. In the United States, friends of the United States began to look a bit like reluctant allies, far from convinced that Chiang Kai-shek was worth saving at the expense of a new war. Certain delegates were expressing the wishful thought that the result of the Formosa crisis would lead soon to admission of Peiping to the United Nations.

Before the Chinese made any reaction to the invitation the Security Council extended to Chinese Premier Chou En-lai to send a representative to the United Nations to join in Security Council cease-fire talks, there were indications that what the Western Powers had in mind was something more in the line of a clarification of policy through both public and private discussions rather than a formal cease-fire resolution.

Interest in Peace
Asia is frightened at a critical moment in history. This spring the Asian-African nations' representatives are to gather in Bandung, Indonesia, to discuss their mutual interests. The principal interest of these nations, most of them newly emerged from the era of colonialism, is to prevent war on their own continents and to be assured that they will have time enough to build themselves into more self-sufficient, sovereign communities.

There seems little doubt now that the Red Chinese will attempt to dominate the meeting and impress upon the entire nonwhite world the idea that the only real threat to their existence comes from a white world with a history of colonialism and imperialism.

Dual Purpose
The Soviet government, meanwhile, has told the world—and its own people—it was alarmed at the state of things in the Orient. It told the United Nations its sole interest was in preserving peace.

Fear in the Weapon
It seemed highly likely that with regard to Formosa the Soviet Union and Red China had dovetailed their strategy. Perhaps that was the reason for the visit of top-ranking Soviet military and political leaders to Peiping last fall. With the weapon of fear, the Red allies appeared confident they would be able to discredit American policy by forcing it into a dead end.

By dissolving the Formosa crisis when the time is ripe—as seems their likely plan—the Communist side can hope to emerge in the light of saviors of world peace. Similar tactics have been undertaken by the Soviet Union in Europe, threatening to build up a joint command of Soviet and satellite armies as a protection against a Western European army, and at the same time holding forth the alluring prospect of compromises.

With the United States discredited in the Orient, the U.S.S.R. might well hope for success in Europe in a general turning away from American leadership by people who are frightened of war and eager for an end to everlasting international tension.

ALLIES: Trouble in Germany

Remedy Prepared
Chancellor Konrad Adenauer of West Germany, who has pulled the fat from the fire in a dozen political crises in the past, girded for new battles this week.

Told by advisers that his government is now on the defensive, the 79-year-old Adenauer announced plans to launch a nationwide campaign next week to offset the Socialist party's aggressive anti-rearmament drive.

The Socialists, supported by Socialist-led labor and some youth groups and churchmen, are opposing Adenauer's program.

Court
Sometime before the middle of next summer, the Justice Department will resume its attempt to break up the International Boxing Club on charges that it is a monopoly violating federal antitrust laws.

The government received the green light to prosecute from the Supreme Court, which refused this week to grant boxing the exemption from antitrust laws it gave baseball in 1953.

If successful, the government suit would end the domination of boxing promotion by the IBC. Last year all of the 10 world championship bouts staged in the United States were promoted either by the IBC itself or by the IBC in partnership with other promoters.

The organization currently has exclusive contracts with six of the eight world's champions, which specify any title defense must be under IBC promotion.

The government argues that Jim Norris and Arthur M. Wirtz, who head the IBC, have since 1949 been conspiring to monopolize the promotion, exhibition, broadcasting and television of big-time boxing.

The Supreme Court decision was by a 6-2 vote with Chief Justice Earl Warren writing the majority opinion. He noted that baseball first was exempted from antitrust laws in 1922 by the Supreme Court. In 1953 the court held that Congress, by failing to pass legislation specifically bringing baseball under the antitrust laws, had indicated it wanted baseball exempted.

But no such situation prevailed for boxing, the opinion continued. If it is to be exempted, "the issue is for Congress to decide, not this court."

Sidelights
In Wichita, Kan., Patrolman Luther Flowers questioned a woman whose home was burglarized. "Do you have any friends who might be regarded as possible suspects?" he asked. The woman gave him lots of help. "Yes," she replied, "all of them."

Police in Toronto, Canada, became suspicious of Kenneth Rapson's "confession" he had committed 11 different safe robberies when his details failed to match all the facts. They began asking questions and Rapson finally admitted his "confession" was false. He made it up, he told puzzled officers, because he wanted to get away from his wife. An obliging judge sentenced him to nine months for being a public mischief.

The good salesman is on the right spot at the right time, and Orville Hansen fulfilled all the requirements in Harrisville, Utah. Hansen was trying to sell a fire extinguisher in a Harrisville home when fire broke out in a house nearby. Hansen rushed over and had the blaze almost under control with his sample extinguisher by the time firemen arrived. He made his sale.

Quote

Adm. Felix B. Stump, asked whether he thought the Communists would try to seize Formosa: "If you asked me what I thought England or France or some free nation might do, I might try to answer. With totalitarians, where a few men rule, it might depend on when they get up in the morning or what they have for breakfast. I do not want to guess what such people might do."

HEALTH: Ike's Blueprint

The Second Try
"Because the strength of our nation is in its people, their good health is a proper national concern; healthy Americans live more rewarding, more productive and happier lives."

With that introduction, President Eisenhower this week laid out a broad program for federal activity in the field of health.

The feature of the program most likely to stir debate was the President's request for a federal reinsurance system designed to help bolster and expand private health insurance plans.

This is substantially the same recommendation which the last Congress pigeon-holed. It was opposed by the American Medical Assn. on the grounds that it was unnecessary and might provide "an opening wedge to socialized medicine."

No Details
Although the President gave no specific details in the new health message, under the original proposal the federal government would set up a capital fund to reinsure private insurance companies against abnormal risks of expanding coverage benefits. The insurance companies would pay premiums to the fund, which eventually would become self-sustaining.

"The purpose of the reinsurance program," Eisenhower said, "is to furnish a system for broad sharing among healthy insurance organizations of the risk of experimentation. A system of this sort will give an incentive for the improvement of existing health insurance plans."

A Stimulation
"It will encourage private, voluntary health insurance organizations to provide better protection—particularly against expensive illness—for those who are now insured against some of the financial hazard of illness. Reinsurance will also help to stimulate extension of private voluntary health insurance plans to millions of additional people who do not now have, but could afford to purchase, health insurance."

Eisenhower also proposed something entirely new in his 1955 health message—establishment of a federal system of guaranteeing private mortgage loans for the construction of health facilities such as hospitals and clinics.

Other recommendations:
1. Special federal aid to states to give medical care to persons now receiving public assistance under federal-state programs.
2. New programs to cope with "critically short" supplies of trained health personnel.
3. Intensified attacks on smog and water pollution causing mounting hazards in some large cities.
4. Additional care and facilities for the mentally ill.
5. Federal grants to states to help them combat juvenile delinquency.
6. An increase in the U.S. contribution to the world health organization.

DIPLOMACY: Pact Ratified

Another Link
The Senate put the stamp of approval this week on the Southeast Asia Defense Treaty, forging another link in the chain the United States hopes will block further Red expansion.

By a vote of 82-1, senators ratified the agreement Secretary of State Dulles negotiated at Manila last year in which the U.S. joins with Great Britain, France, Australia, New Zealand, the Philippines, Pakistan and Thailand in a pledge to block external aggression and internal subversion in Southeast Asia.

The territory the pact embraces is restricted to Pakistan, Thailand, South Viet Nam, Laos and Cambodia.

Sen. H. Alexander Smith (R-NJ), who accompanied Dulles to Manila when SEATO was set up, told the Senate: "The net effect of this treaty is to serve notice on the Chinese Communists that they shall not encroach farther on these free nations of Asia. They are no longer free to isolate and absorb these countries one by one."

Only Sen. Langer (R-ND) voted "no." He said he thought the United States "ought to mind its own business and keep out of foreign entanglements all over Europe and Asia." Sen. Langer has voted against a long succession of international agreements, going back to the U.N. Charter.

LABOR: Forecast for '55

Unemployment Up
The leaders of the American Federation of Labor, meeting in Miami Beach this week, heard a report from their economists that 1955 holds the prospect of both higher wages and higher unemployment.

This apparent contradiction was based on estimates that business and consumer purchasing power will be a little higher in 1955 than in 1954—making it likely wage negotiators will be able to secure favorable contracts—but that reduced plant and equipment expenditures, along with rising productivity, will mean fewer jobs.

Another factor affecting the employment picture in the eyes of union economists is that because of scheduled reduction in the size of the armed forces, approximately 900,000 workers will enter the labor market during the next 12 months—a figure higher than the average for the past few years.

With more new workers and the introduction of labor saving equipment and more efficient production methods, stimulated in recent months, the AFL expects unemployment in 1955 to average about four million, a full million higher than the average for 1954.

The estimate that wages will rise despite the opposite trend in unemployment appeared to be largely based on collective bargaining experience last year. The economists' report said that even though a "recession" was in progress during most of 1954 "unions insisted on and succeeded in gaining agreements on wage and benefit adjustments."

In Short . . .
Killed: More than 30 persons—with another 100 injured—by fierce tornadoes which swept through parts of Mississippi and Alabama.
Endorsed: The Senate-House Atomic Energy Committee's resolution asking cancellation of the Dixon-Yates power contract, by Thomas E. Murray, a member of the Atomic Energy Commission.
Assumed: Command of the U.S. Army in Europe, by Lt. Gen. Anthony C. McAuliffe, hero of the Battle of Bastogne.

Royalty

Tour Starts
The Caribbean subjects of Queen Elizabeth of England played host to her young sister Princess Margaret this week, who was making her first visit to the New World.

Traveling in the royal airliner Canopus, the vivacious Princess crossed the Atlantic for the first time in a flight from wintry London to the tropic climate of romantic Port of Spain, Trinidad.

The schedule for Margaret's month-long good-will tour of British possessions in the Caribbean included a liberal acknowledgment of her preference for a good time over stuffy and formal official receptions. Before she leaves she will have had dozens of chances to hear the native Calypso singers, exotic tropic rhythms, and will meet hundreds of West Indians at informal parties.

THAT DEMON. TEMPTATION. AGAIN!

STILL HOT ON THE TRAIL

New Destroyer Launched Today

BATH Maine (AP)—The USS Forrest P. Sherman, first in a new line of all-purpose Navy destroyers, slides down the ways at the Bath Iron Works today.

Adm. Sherman's widow came here to christen the 390-foot vessel, described by the Navy as "fast, flexible and potent."

Navy representatives included Vice Adm. M. B. Gardner, deputy chief of naval operations, and James H. Smith Jr., assistant secretary of the Navy for Air.

Sherman was chief of naval operations at the time of his death in 1951.

The ship named in his honor is somewhat larger than the 2,425-ton destroyers of World War II but the superstructure has kept the weight increase to a minimum.

Present plans call for building 10 more Sherman-type destroyers, five here and five at the Bethlehem Steel Corp.'s Fore River Shipyard in Quincy, Mass.

The Sherman will carry the latest in rapid-fire, radar-controlled 5-inch and 3-inch guns, homing torpedoes and antisubmarine weapons.

Her top speed is a secret but she is expected to better the present destroyer maximum of 35 knots.

The crew of 260 will be among the most comfortable sailors in the Navy. Interior decorators and artists were consulted to make the Sherman as habitable as a war ship can be.

Architects made a special effort to spot sleeping quarters where they would be relatively free from heat, noise and vibration. The ship will be air conditioned throughout. Messing facilities for the crew have been moved closer to the gally to insure that hot meals will be just that when served.

Says Friendship Is 'Immutable'

TOKYO (AP)—Foreign Minister Mamoru Shigemitsu declared today Japan's friendship with the United States is "intimate and immutable... the sheet-anchor of stability and progress in East Asia."

Emphasizing "our American friends may always count on us," Shigemitsu hinted that a rejuvenated Japan hopes again to become a major world nation—this time as a peacemaker between East and West.

The peg-legged veteran diplomat who signed Japan's World War II surrender, addressed the America-Japan Society, often a sounding board of U.S.-Japan relations.

He called on Red China to prove its actions "her avowed intention of pursuing the policy of peaceful coexistence."

Shigemitsu expressed "grave concern" over the Formosa Strait crisis and hopes for a quick U.N. cease-fire. He implied Japan stands ready to help ease tension in the role of a "bridge" between East and West. But he told reporters afterward he had nothing specific in mind.

Safety Man Was Found Reckless

Fetto is a safety supervisor for a Detroit trucking company. He was off duty at the time of the accident.

Vandals Shatter More Windows

Rock-throwing vandals smashed two more Greenville store windows in the early hours before dawn this morning, according to the local police department.

Police received a report at 12:52 this morning that a window had been shattered at the Barber Electric Store at 11th and Evans Streets.

A man living upstairs over the store stated that he heard the impact of falling glass and other noise on the street "and saw two persons running down street but didn't know them."

A second report came to the police department at 1:05 this morning, stating that a window at Paul's Cleaners at 12th and Evans was broken by someone throwing rocks.

The two stores reporting broken windows are located only one block from each other, and both windows are believed to have been shattered by the same group of vandals.

The two shattered windows this morning brings the total to at least eight reportedly smashed during the past month.

None of the owners have reported any goods missing from the establishments.

Full Moon Fire Again Started In Elizabeth City

ELIZABETH CITY (AP)— Another full moon general alarm fire hit the Elizabeth City business district today.

There have been more than a score of downtown general alarm fires in the last year, most of them on the full moon. The suspected firebug has not been caught.

The fire early today caused extensive damage to the Carolina Building on Main Street, a four-story structure with a theater and stores on the first floor and offices above.

THIS MESS O' ROCKS IS A HEAP SIGHT BIGGER THAN IT LOOKED FROM TH' MOUNTAINS. TH' "INJUNS EYE" IS A REGULAR MAZE.

SOMEBODY'S SHIPIN' AT US FROM THAT SHACK!

KEEP DRAWING HIS FIRE! I'LL TRY "SMOKING" HIM OUT....

THIS OLD SHINGLE SHOULD DO IT.

SMOKE FILLS THE SHACK FROM THE BLOCKED STOVE AS A FIGURE STAGGERS BACK FROM THE WINDOW, OVERCOME BY THE FLUMES.

HE'S QUIT SHOOTIN'. WE GOT 'IM, HOPPY!

TAKE THE FRONT DOOR! I'LL COVER THE BACK!

NO CHANCE OF ESCAPE.... YET HE'S GONE!

I KNEW IT! W'VE DEALN' WITH RAFE JENKINS' GHOST!

I APPRECIATE THE WONDERS OF NATURE, ZARKOV, BUT WE OUGHT TO KEEP MOVING!

LOOK! THERE! A HERD OF EOHIPPIUS! THIS ISN'T AN ALIEN PLANET! WE'RE ON EARTH!

YES! PREHISTORIC EARTH! BUT NOTHING LIKE THOSE ALIENS EVER SHOWED UP IN MY HISTORY BOOKS!

CAN IT BE THAT PREHISTORIC EARTH WAS INVADDED FROM OUTER SPACE?

...IF IT WAS. IT SURE UPSETS A LOT OF SCIENTIFIC THEORIES!

ZARKOV! WHAT'S THAT UP AHEAD?

LOOK! A COMPOUND!

WE'VE STUMBLED ONTO THE ALIENS' CAMP! IF WE COULD GET CLOSER, WE MIGHT FIND OUT WHAT'S BEEN GOING ON!

LATER THAT NIGHT, THE TWO MEN SLIP QUIETLY INTO THE CAMP...

THIS PLACE IS CRAWLING WITH GUARDS!...BETTER WATCH OUR STEP!

ZARKOV! LOOK AT THAT MACHINERY! THESE ALIENS CAME HERE TO WORK!

YES-- BUT AT WHAT?

SUDDENLY...

LOOK-- EARTHLOS!
