Harvard Economist Sees Similarity To 1929 Boom-Bust Warning

By ED CREAUGH WASHINGTON (AP)—John K. Galbraith, Harvard economist said today the United States may be in the early stages of a boom-and-bust cycle that could end in a 1929-style crash.

Galbraith told the Senate Banking Committee there are "formidable safeguards" against another such crash. But he spoke in his prepared testimony of "resemblances" between conditions in the late 1920s and today that he said "are certainly interesting and possibly disturbing."

He urged that the government and Wall Street be ready to halt credit buying of stocks and to put on other emergency brakes if the 1 1/2-year-old bull market shows no sign of slackening in the near future.

House Members Introduce Measure Last Night New Reallocation Attempt

RALEIGH (AP)—A new attempt is being made to get the House membership reallocated on the basis of population change.

Rep. Radford G. Powell of Rockingham and seven other House members introduced a bill last night to amend the State Constitution and empower the secretary of state to reallocate the House seats automatically after every 10-year federal census.

Last week the Senate defeated a bill to reappropriate the House membership. Under the new bill, the people would vote on the constitutional amendment in 1956.

Commissioners Defer Records Issue; Talk Local Legislation

By ROBERT SMITH Reflector Staff Writer The Commissioners yesterday afternoon took a quick look at the Bar Association resolution to eliminate the microfilming system in the Register of Deeds' office and decided not to do anything about it for the present time.

Instead, they referred the proposal to the "Courts and Constitutional Offices" committee for further study. The one-man committee is composed of Robert Little of Grimsland. He was asked by the Commissioners to check on the advantages and disadvantages of the microfilming system with the Register of Deeds and report his findings back to the board at a later date.

Some observers have maintained that the microfilming system is both less expensive and more advantageous; while some members of the local Bar Association say that, expense aside, the microfilming process is less efficient. The latter would substitute large legal-sized photographic sheets which are said to be easier to read.

Training Craft Bursts Into Flames On Striking Ground Student Pilot Killed In Plane Crash

By ALVIN TAYLOR Reflector City Editor An Air Force officer was killed yesterday afternoon when his plane crashed and burned west of the city in a field just off N. C. Highway 43.

Colonel R. A. Clendenin, commander of Stallings Air Base in Kinross, said Manion was making practice landings at the local air field when the accident occurred. The colonel stated details of the crash had not been definitely determined this morning but a group of officers had been assigned to investigate the fatality.

Manion was alone in the aircraft when it crashed in a small field within sight of the nearby highway. Col. Clendenin said the student had been soloed prior to yesterday's crash.

The plane apparently came in over a group of trees into the tiny field. It tore a gaping hole in the soft field and apparently came to rest in an opposite direction from which it came into the field. Both wings were nearly torn from the T-6 trainer. It caught fire after it crashed and a fire truck from the local airport poured foam on the burning wreckage to extinguish the blaze.

Storekeeper Is Robbed, Beaten

A combination store and filling station operator was held up, beaten and robbed by two armed white men around 11 o'clock last night, Sheriff Ruel W. Tyson said today.

Victim of the armed robbery was W. J. (Pete) Smith, 46, who operates a store about two miles east of Stokes on the Bear Grass road.

The sheriff said that approximately $250 was taken from the store cash register and from Smith's pockets. In addition approximately $4 was taken from a customer who entered the store as the two gunmen were in the process of robbing the rural establishment.

FTC Hearing On Wilson Tobacco Market Charges In Second Day

WILSON, N. C. (AP)—A Federal Trade Commission hearing on charges that the Wilson Tobacco Market engaged in monopolistic practices entered its second day here today.

Alton B. Boswell, acting secretary of the Wilson Tobacco Board of Trade was to produce today the minutes of meetings in which he said the board discussed limiting the area the Wilson market would encompass.

Roswell, who was on the stand all day yesterday, testified that his group held several meetings on the subject of limiting the area. Boswell is superintendent of sales of the Wilson Tobacco Market and secretary of the Wilson Warehouse Assn.

The government has charged that members of the Wilson Warehouse Assn. through dominance of the Wilson Tobacco Board of Trade, controlled buying and selling of tobacco on the Wilson market. The government also has charged that the method of allocating selling time on the market is monopolistic.

The present system for allocating selling time is based on the previous year's sales and has been in effect for three years. Prior to that, the system was based on floor space in warehouses.

Storekeeper Is Robbed, Beaten

A Negro boy, William Layton Clemmons, entered the store during the robbery and was met at the door by one of the two men. The robber took a dollar from Clemmons' hand, forced him into a back room of the store at gunpoint. There, the boy was tied up and his wallet, containing $3 was taken.

Smith was treated at Pitt Memorial Hospital for head injuries. He remained at the hospital overnight. The sheriff's department is being assisted in its investigation of the robbery by Clyde Festress, State Bureau of Investigation agent assigned to this area.

Solicitor's Work Expands When July 1 Rolls Around

Judicial district. Rouse now serves six counties: Pitt, Greene, Craven, Carteret, Pamlico and Jones. He will continue to serve as Superior Court solicitor in this six counties although the counties will compose parts of three separate judicial districts after July 1. Pitt, Craven, Carteret and Pamlico Counties will compose the new third judicial district, which will be served by Rouse. Greene County will be part of a different judicial district, and Jones County will be part of still another judicial district.

Rouse was elected to the post of solicitor last November for a four year term.

Most of Boswell's testimony yesterday concerned his background and the background of the organizations he represents.

He said that the Wilson market has five sets of buyers at nine warehouses each selling day. To belong to the board of trade, Boswell said, a tobacconist must be a warehouse owner, a rehandler (speculator) or a representative of a buying company.

The Wilson market, he declared, is the largest in the Bright Belt Warehouse Assn., consisting of 17 markets.

Miraculous Margo Of Dallas Waves Wand For Playwrights

By MARSHALL COMERER
DALLAS, Tex. — It is curtain time at Theater '55. As the house lights dim, a small, slightly plump lady in her early 40s and wearing an evening dress slips around a corner, smiles and nods to friends as she takes her seat.

As she watches the play, an alertness in her manner and a faint smile on her face remind you of a fond mother watching the performance of a gifted child.

The lady is Margo Jones, whom many playwrights look upon as a fairly godmother.

They have good reason. She is the lady who founded the foremost professional theater in America today, dedicated to producing new plays.

She is credited with establishing America's first theater-in-the-round, the highly popular modern stucco-and-glass theater on the Texas State Fair grounds here.

She produced her first play in the family barn at the age of 11, and since has produced or directed almost 300 plays, ranging from high school amateur productions to a hand in such Broadway shows as Tennessee Williams' "Glass Menagerie" and Maxwell Anderson's "Joan of Lorraine."

"She is so determined to use only new scripts that she cancelled one play scheduled for this season when she learned that it had been given once before by a summer stock theater."

"You see, I want to live in a golden age of the theater," says Margo, one of those friendly, dynamic persons you call by first name as soon as you are introduced.

"Theaters in the past have been great because of the quality of their writing. You can have good writing only if young authors have a chance to get their plays produced."

This is a chance playwrights dream about, and they have been sending Margo new scripts on the average of one or two per day.

Margo reads every play sent her and sends her comment to the author.

"It's the only decent thing to do," she says. "He has worked hard in writing his play and he is waiting for your answer."

On tables and a book shelf in Margo's hotel apartment, which serves as both office and home are neatly arranged stacks of new plays sent her by playwrights, agents and friends.

"There are more good plays being written today than people realize," says Margo. "They need only to be produced. If they don't get a chance to be seen, a lot of our promising talent will be lost."

"If we just had 20 theaters like ours around the country, young writers could support themselves while developing their talents."

MARGO JONES

Even during her Broadway successes Margo was working out the plans for her dream theater, which became a reality in the summer of 1947.

Margo originally planned a flexible playhouse. But the city fire department refused to approve the building selected. With no other suitable building available she decided her plans could be carried out just as well by arena staging—the theater-in-the-round.

She opened the theater on June 3, 1947, calling it Theater 47. She changes the name on every Jan. 1.

The tiny theater can accommodate 198 people. Its seats, a gift from Texas theater owner Phil Isley, the father of movie actress Jennifer Jones, are arranged in elevated rows on the four sides.

The playing area, 12 by 18 feet, is in the center. Theater-goers walk across it to get to their seats. If he wanted to, a person sitting in the front row could reach out and touch the actors.

Her still growing theater has expanded in nine years from a 10-week season of four new plays and one classic to a 45-week season and 12 new plays and 2 classics.

Foushee Art Exhibit Being Shown In Local Art Gallery

An exhibition of twenty paintings by Mrs. Ola Mae Foushee, talented and widely known Chapel Hill artist, opened Saturday in gallery number one in the Community Art Center in Sheppard Library. They will be on display through March.

Titled a "Retrospective Showing of Paintings," the collection includes works which have won for Mrs. Foushee prizes and acclaim within and without North Carolina. In addition she is showing some of her favorite oil, water color, crayon abstracts, ink and scratchboard. The pictures exhibited were chosen because of size and variety of techniques.

Among the titles are "Sarah" which captured for the artist the S. Clay Williams cup in the 1948-49 annual exhibition of North Carolina Artists and "Foggy Night" an abstract which took honorable mention and cash award at the 1950 annual exhibit at Butler Art Institute at Youngstown, Ohio.

Mrs. Foushee has the responsibilities common to any mother of two children, a home and the usual community obligations. She has been very active in art circles in Chapel Hill and Durham; was one of the leaders in securing an art teacher for the Chapel Hill public schools and is an active member of the Durham Creative Art Group.

The public is cordially invited to visit the gallery, which is open from two until five-thirty daily. Special hours can be arranged for classes or other groups by calling Mrs. J. H. B. Moore, exhibit chairman.

Skit Is Presented For P.T.A. Program

BETHEL—The regular monthly meeting of the Parent-Teachers Association met on Thursday night in the high school auditorium. The president, Mrs. J. L. Gurganus Jr., presided at the meeting.

Several members of the first, second and third year girls from the Home Economics classes stated what they studied and each was explained.

Miss Jeanne Stewart then read an impressive poem about building a home instead of a house during which Mrs. Sam Keel, accompanied by Mrs. S. C. Whitehurst at the piano, sang "Bless This House."

The poem was illustrated on the stage which concluded their part of the program. Their teacher is Mrs. Lucile Mayo.

The commercial department, under the leadership of their teacher, Mrs. Sam Dewar, gave a skit portraying the inefficient and efficient secretary and boss. The inefficient secretary was Mary Ann Manning and the boss was Bob Jack Manning. The efficient secretary was Patricia Whitehurst and the boss was Lawrence Cobb. The announcer was Billy Steton and the narrator was Mary Frances Whitehurst.

The first and second year typing classes gave an illustration to the rhythm records which was very interesting. Patricia Whitehurst and David Weathersby took shorthand which was dictated by Shirley Jean Whitehurst.

The Commerce Club then recited the creed by the president, Barbara Whitchard.

During the business meeting, Mrs. Ruth Thomas read the minutes due to the absence of the secretary. Other routine business was transacted and the group was invited to visit the Home Ec and Commerce Departments.

Refreshments were prepared by the girls from the Home Ec Department and consisted of lime punch, open-faced sandwiches, cookies and nuts. The members enjoyed the program and open house as it is always nice to see what the children are studying in the classrooms.

Man wanted to work in dynamite factory. Must be willing to travel.

The above ad appeared in a French newspaper. We often wondered who took that job.

And speaking of traveling where would you go to find anything that would clean carpets like the new Triple Strength Fina Foam.

It's made from an entirely new formula. You add water to turn one gallon of concentrate into three gallons of ready to use foam cleaner.

Another innovation is the long handled brush to apply the foam that makes cleaning so easy. The nap is left open and fluffy. The dirt is removed consequently there is no rapid resotting. One gallon of concentrate for $2.25 cleans three 9x12 rugs.

Legislators And A Birthday

Today Greenville and East Carolina College are honored by the visit of members of the state General Assembly.

They are here, along with hundreds of East Carolina alumni and local citizens to pay homage to the educational institution which has meant so much to the eastern section of the state, and to the men of vision who have guided its progress since its inception.

The Reflector joins East Carolina and the citizens of Greenville in welcoming the legislators to the local campus. We likewise join the townspeople and legislators in paying tribute to East Carolina College.

From its modest beginning in 1909 with a student body of "104 females and 19 males", East Carolina has grown into one of the major educational institutions of North Carolina. It is bursting at the seams with eager young men and women from all parts of the state seeking higher education. It is sadly turning away each year other prospective students for lack of physical facilities to accommodate them.

Throughout the past 48 years members of the legislature have contributed in an appreciable degree to the success of East Carolina by the support, financial and moral, they have given the institution.

Without support from the legislature the leaders who have guided the institution could not have brought it to its present place of prominence among the institutions of higher learning of the state and nation.

In spite of its outstanding contribution and its phenomenal growth in recent years, East Carolina has not reached its potential of service to North Carolina and particularly to the eastern section of the state in which it is located. Its past achievements will be eclipsed only by service it renders the people of North Carolina in years to come. Its future contributions, as its past contributions, depend in a large measure upon the support East Carolina receives from the General Assembly.

We trust the visit of the members of the General Assembly will afford the legislators a better understanding of the work being done at East Carolina College, and will give them a keener appreciation of the great contribution the institution is making to North Carolina.

Major Step In Polio Prevention

Through efforts of the Pitt County Health Department and the local Medical Society, some 3,600 Pitt County boys and girls will be in line for the new polio vaccine if it is released this year.

Pitt's request for the new vaccine already has been forwarded to the proper authorities, and there is little doubt that the county will receive the vaccine if it is approved by the National Institute of Health.

If Pitt children are inoculated against polio with the new vaccine, it will not be part of an experiment or a widespread test. The vaccine which will be used already has gone through the test period, and if it is used in Pitt County it will have received the certification of eminent medical authorities as a polio preventative. If the vaccine is not so certified, it will not be used in Pitt County.

There was some misunderstanding on the point by some parents when the local health department sent to parents of first and second grade students forms asking permission for their children to receive the inoculation.

In anticipation of the release of the vaccine for general use, local health officials wanted to know whether the parents of second and first grade students would be willing for their children to have the vaccine. If the new vaccine is released, it will be available only in limited quantities and will be released to health departments on a first-come-first-served basis according to their requests. It was necessary, therefore for Pitt County to determine how much of the vaccine it would need before submitting the request. In order to secure that information, parents of the eligible youngsters were asked to indicate by the farms whether or not they would be willing for their youngsters to receive the vaccine.

Although Pitt has not been hard hit by polio in the past few years, the inoculation of more than 3,500 first and second graders against the disease will prove an important factor in polio prevention.

The health department and Medical Society are to be commended for putting Pitt County on the list to receive the vaccine if it is approved for general use this year.

Somebody Told Me

Auto Wrecks Are Fatal, Too

Wish I had a count of the crowd of people drawn by yesterday's crash of the Army trainer, shown elsewhere in the Reflector. It would be interesting to compare the crowd with one drawn by an auto accident in which one person was killed.

Of course it doesn't seem to impair the progress, but the aircraft industry gets a bad break on publicity. Hundreds are killed daily in automobiles and it's routine news, but an air crash makes the headlines.

I say this to emphasize the fact that we should have more concern about traffic deaths. Figures show that airplanes are safer, considering the number in the air with the number of cars on the roads and figuring in the comparative number of deaths.

merce President Bancroft Moseley and Secretary Bill Kysner went to Philadelphia to visit the headquarters of the Art Loom Mills.

Bancroft and Kysner wanted to find out first hand information about any possible plans for expansion. Right now there are none, but the Art Loom Company is very well pleased with the operations of their plant here, Greenville Mills. These figures are not on the nose, but when the plant opened it employed 140 people and now there are over 200 workers.

The Vice President of the company spent most of the day with Bill and Bancroft and the entire staff was very cordial.

Greenville's Chamber of Commerce is determined to bring an industry to Greenville in 1955. If the present enthusiasm prevails, there should be a good chance to attain that goal.

Last night the excellence of programming at television station WNCN was pointed out when awards were presented for the top performers and shows of 1954.

Here are a few of the awards to shows and performers seen over WNCN: Best male singer, Perry Como; best actor, Danny Thomas; best actress, Loretta Young; best mystery, Dragnet (seen over WNCN as Badge 714); best variety show, Disneyland; best family show, Make Room for Daddy; best dramatic show, U.S. Steel Hour. There are others I didn't note, plus the fact that many of the nominees who did not win are also seen over WNCN.

And I thank you.

IMPROVED INTER-AMERICAN RELATIONS

(Charlotte Observer)

The Inter-American Investment Conference at New Orleans probably did more in three days to break down business barriers between the United States and Latin America than government bureaus and politicians could accomplish in three years.

This was a meeting of United States and Latin American businessmen who tried to find a common ground for doing business with one another. Being tradesmen, they understood the difficulties far better than government officials could have done, and they made definite progress toward smoothing the way for more American investment in the republics to the South.

They did not, of course, bring out any blueprint or total plan for such investments, for that was not the purpose.

Neither did the conference result in any big orders for American firms. But the Latins and the Americans got each other's viewpoint, and the way was cleared to better future relations.

They decided to provide a clearing house that would bring American investors in contact with projects in South America and Central America and to establish an investment pool that would enable Americans with limited amounts of money to share in the development of Latin American resources.

Best of all they emphasized time and again that the role of governments in this interchange of business should be kept to the very minimum. It was brought out emphatically that, if Latin American governments are willing to give meretricious aid by the United States government and better can firms. But the Latins and the Americans got each other's viewpoint, and the way was cleared to better future relations.

It has been demonstrated time after time that a private business going into an underdeveloped country under circumstances that will allow it to make a reasonable profit and take enough of the profit out of the country to pay its American stockholders a fair dividend will do more good than any amount of bureaucratic aid.

American oil companies in Arabia and Venezuela, United States Steel in Venezuela, Sears Roebuck in Mexico, and United Fruit in Central America have so improved the living conditions of their employees in those countries that they have whetted the desire for more such investments in such meetings as the Inter-American Investment Conference in New Orleans we may have made progress toward finding the best of all methods to improve the condition of underdeveloped countries.

N. C. Requires More Water, And It's Scarcer

By C.A. UPCHURCH JR.

WATER — Bread is called the staff of life, but without water there would be no staff.

You might survive a month without food, but you might not last a week without liquid nourishment.

Everything requires more water these days, even plants. Farmers are raising two to four times more plants per acre, and growing plants are the greatest users of water.

It takes 100 gallons of water to produce one ear of corn, 21 inches of rain on one acre to grow 100 bushels. A bushel of oats requires 7,000 gallons of water.

And—relatively—water is getting scarcer.

DEMAND — The nation's fast-growing population—7,500 new babies every 24 hours—is steadily pushing water resources toward the limit.

New industries, new industrial methods, require more water. It takes a river to cool atomic material processed at the Hanford plant in Washington State. Production of one ton of wood pulp requires 57,000 gallons of water; one North Carolina pulp plant reportedly uses 50,000,000 gallons each day of operation. For each ton of coal burned in a steam plant producing electricity, 200,000 gallons of water is needed. Water is the chief ingredient in industry.

Increasing population, more and bigger industries, higher production on crop and land and cattle pastures—they are only a few factors in the water problem.

OTHERS — New and expanding municipalities require more water. The stupendous growth in home ownership means more use of lawns, more home laundries. Air-conditioning takes a lot of water. Crop irrigation is increasing annually in North Carolina.

The bulldozer and the axe have played their part in reducing ground water storage. And there's been drought four straight summers here in North Carolina.

The arid states of the West, dependent upon irrigation for their very life, zealously guard their water supplies with strict laws.

Now the East is awakening to the need for water conservation. Lowering ground water tables, ever-rising demand, are making water conservation essential to preservation.

BILL — You can't pass a law to get more water. But you can attempt legislation to safeguard the water you have, to allot it fairly, to avoid waste and to prevent selfish hoarding that hurt others.

The 1953 General Assembly authorized appointment of a commission to study the problem in North Carolina and report to the current session. The commission is headed by Dr. David S. Weaver, director of the North Carolina Agricultural Extension Service, and from its study has come proposed legislation introduced by Senator William Medford of Haywood, chairman of the Senate Committee on Conservation and Development, and Reps. Clinton Blue of Moore and Bruce Ethridge of Dare, co-chairman of the House C&D committee.

Dr. Weaver and Assistant Attorney General Claude Love, who drafted the bill, have given a general explanation of the bill at a public hearing on it Tuesday, March 15, at 10:30 A.M. in the C&D board room.

Nobody expects the bill to have easy sailing. Many will be surprised if it is passed at this session in its present form. It makes a radical departure from the old doctrine of riparian and vested property rights.

In effect, the measure declares all water in natural streams and lakes the property of the State. And everybody using water in any large quantity would have to get a permit from the State.

It means appropriation by the State.

LAW — The Weaver commission is giving a job to do to study the State's water situation and make recommendations for conservation and fair use of existing supplies. Several legislators sitting with the commission advised it to prepare its report without thinking about the general explanation of the bill by the Legislature and they were done. No sugar-coating, no ducking the tough issues.

It was a difficult job. Even experts in water conservation and use don't know all the answers. That includes authorities consulted by Dr. Weaver and his group: a conservation expert in California, a TVA consultant, to the National Farm Bureau

Stressing Of Credit

By ELMER ROESSNER

Credit will be stressed much more in the advertisement and promotion of consumer goods in the coming months.

Merchants checked by the National Retail Dry Goods Association put credit as the best means of increasing 1955 sales.

The National Association for Consumer Credit is urging manufacturers to put greater emphasis on credit in their national advertising. William J. Cheyne, executive vice-president, points out that of 266 current advertisements for durable goods in national magazines, only 20 pointed out the products could be purchased on time.

Credit outstanding is at a high mark. American consumers began the year owing $30,125,000,000 Federal Reserve figures show.

The fact consumers are owed so much before is giving some manufacturers and retailers pause.

But there were never before so many consumers. The population is now more than 164,000,000. It increased 2,075,000 during the 1,153,600 seconds of 1954.

And there never was so much personal income. It was $286.5 billion last year, about $400,000,000 more than in lush 1953.

Disposable income increased even more because of the cut in income taxes. If that level of income is maintained, there should be no difficulty in paying off even greater indebtedness.

There's another incentive to more intensive credit selling: Surveys show that there are about 10,000,000 family units that make little or no use of their credit. That means that one household out of every five is a new prospect for credit sales.

SALES UNDER NEW TAX LAW

Salesmen and others who pay part of their own expenses get a break under the new tax laws. Commerce Clearing House points out. Previously, they had a choice of taking the standard 10 per cent deduction or of deducting business and other expenses.

The new code allows all employees to deduct from gross income any qualified expenses incurred in the course of their work for which they are not reimbursed, and still take advantage of the 10 per cent deduction.

BUREAU OF STANDARDS STUDIES AVAILABLE

A total of 134 reports and books resulting from scientific work by the National Bureau of Standards is available at prices ranging from 10 cents to $3.75. Titles range from "Table of Dielectric Constants and Electric Dipole Moments of Substances in the Gaseous State" to "Tables of the Chebyshev Polynomials S_n(x) and C_n(x)." This list of "National Bureau of Standards Publications" is free from the Superintendent of Documents, Washington 25, D.C.

16 MILLION POUNDS OF FLUFF PROMISED

Production of polyurethane, a new "wonder" synthetic, is being increased at an enormous rate. A.L. Friedlander, Dayton Rubber president, told the New York Society of Security Analysts. By the end of the year his company will produce at least 10,000,000 pounds, he said.

Foam can be made in any thickness, and can be milled, tacked, sewn, ground and sawed. It can be sprayed as an insulator, and adheres to metals and glass. However, it is not competitive with foam rubber for most uses. No bounce.

FORECASTING ACCURATE WHEN TIMES ARE GOOD

Sales forecasting has been achieving greater accuracy since the war. C.M. Crawford reports in a study for the University of Illinois Bureau of Economic Research. He surveyed the sales forecasting methods used by 20 large companies.

One reason forecasting has been accurate, he said, is the fact that there has been no severe recession to upset calculations. When the next recession arrives, it will probably force changes in present methods of forecasting, he said.

Strength for the Day

By EARL L. DOUGLASS
CHAINS EASILY FORGED

The story is told of an East Indian holy man who every year added a chain to his hands and feet. At last he got himself so cluttered up with chains that when he wanted to take a railroad trip, the station master would not sell him a ticket because he had ceased to be a passenger and become instead a hunk of baggage. He would have to go either in a freight or an express car.

A lot of us have loaded ourselves with heavy chains until we are no longer joyful, hopeful, children of God but bunks of freight. Our Lord Jesus told us not to be anxious, yet we are anxious all the time not only concerning what we shall eat and drink and wear but what people say about us, or whether we will keep up with our neighbors and excel them in the popularity of cocktail parties or in the hit we make with the country club crowd. Every physician knows that the world is full of professional invalids who spend their lives and their money going from one doctor to another and frequently having fancy and expensive operations performed, about which they keep talking endlessly. Everybody knows how the young mother worries about her first baby. If she has a half-grown, the last one gets a lick and a promise and grows up the better for it.

What are your burdens? Are you a passenger in your journey through life, or a hunk of freight, weighted down with chains of your own forging?

Was The Crusade Political?

By RAY TUCKER

WASHINGTON—The prosecution of the Kansas City Star for alleged violation of the antitrust statutes shows vividly how a vindictive President can use his power to obtain political revenge. The behind-the-scenes story of Harry S. Truman's personal vendetta against this great Missouri newspaper is an incredible and sinister drama.

The Star was convicted recently by a jury of violating the anti-trust laws because of its low package price for its morning, evening and Sunday editions. The Government apparently contends that efficiency and economy in production and distribution of a product—any product—constitutes a crime.

The same issue has been raised against the newspaper's combined advertising rates. In a sense, the Government asks a jury of lay people to pass upon such a complex problem as a newspaper's circulation, advertising and accounting structure. It amounts to an indirect method of price-fixing.

In addition to the criminal case, in which the Star has been found guilty, there is pending a civil suit. Since the Star will appeal, the Supreme Court may yet pass upon the Government's attempt to coerce and influence the press. If it can be done to the Star, it can be applied to any newspaper.

SHADES OF A POLITICAL BOSS—But the more important story here lies outside the courtroom. It is a fantastic tale of crooked Missouri politics, a newspaper's crusade to clean up Kansas City, and a former President's mistaken loyalty to a political grafter.

For 40 years, the political boss of Kansas City was "Old Tom" Pendergast, who ended his career in Federal prison for cheating on his income tax. He ran a wide-open town—gambling, prostitution, speakeasies, poolrooms. He controlled business and industry with his control of City Hall, sometimes the Governor and Legislature.

He stuffed ballot boxes and voted the dead. He was an influential figure at Democratic national conventions. The makers of Presidents sought his favors.

TRUMAN'S YOUNGER DAYS—But Harry S. Truman would still be an unknown except for "Old Tom." After the bankruptcy of his law partnership, Truman was handed a $6,000 county job by Pendergast because his nephew, who had served with Truman in World War I, asked for help for his campfire buddy.

Truman begged the boss for nomination to a $22,000 local job, but "Old Tom" didn't think he rated such a fat plum. Instead, the boss nominated and elected Truman to the Senate in 1934. Even as President, Truman returned periodically to the Pendergast organization's shindigs, and made a special trip to his benefactor's funeral.

HARD-HITTING EDITOR—The third leading figure in the drama is Volney Davis, managing editor of the Star. As a prominent Washington correspondent for 25 years, Roberts became a national political figure. Almost alone, he nominated Alf Landon in 1936. He was an old friend and original promoter of Ike Eisenhower. Although independent, his newspaper is a Republican bible in the Midwest.

The hard-hitting Roberts shattered the Pendergast machine, helping to land the "old man" in prison. He exposed ballot-box stuffing, and the voting of nonresidents and deceased. He assailed Truman and his various Attorneys General for their failure to prosecute the political crooks. Once a good friend of Truman, Roberts became the Missouri politician's "hatshirt."

ANTI-TRUST ACTION—Two weeks before Truman quit the White House, he instituted the civil suit and criminal action against two Star officers, including Roberts. The FBI assigned scores of its ablest agents to the case. In contrast to its indifference to the Pendergast election frauds, Attorney General Herbert Brownell Jr. carried on vigorously when he took office.

The first case was tried before a Truman-sponsored judge, Richard Duncan. A former House member, Duncan was nominated by F.D.R. at Truman's suggestion over the objection of former Attorney General Francis Biddle, who questioned his fitness. Judge Duncan's instructions to the jury have been characterized as "highly prejudicial" to the Star.

Earl Jinkinson, who directed the prosecution against the newspaper for the Department of Justice, has been promoted by Brownell. He has been made head of the antitrust division of the Midwest, with headquarters at Chicago.

Starting Today, Democrats Taking Good Look At GOP Security Work

By JAMES MARLOW
Associated Press News Analyst
WASHINGTON (AP)—Now, for the first time since President Eisenhower entered the White House, the Democrats are able to examine his employ security program. They're taking a double look, starting today.

The program has generated a lot of Democratic heat no doubt because of it political, ever since 1953 when the administration began issuing numbers on the people fired from the government as security risks.

Because the administration doesn't say how many of them actually were subversives, the Democrats called the whole performance a "numbers game." The administration claims 8,008 "security risks" have quit or been discharged.

There has been wide concern, inside and outside Congress, that the program, for lack of sufficient safeguards may be working injustices. Eisenhower stands pat on his program. Over the weekend Atty. Gen. Brownell came up with a few alterations but they were minor.

Until they got control of Congress this year the Democrats couldn't set up an investigation. Now they're ready.

Sen Humphrey (D-Minn) and

Sen. Stennis (D-Miss) have proposed creation of a special 12-man commission to look into the whole broad problem of government security—ranging from the Eisenhower employ program to laws on spying and sabotage—and report back in March 1956 with recommendations.

Today, Humphrey, head of a Senate subcommittee, opens hearings intended to acquaint Congress, if it sets up the commission, with information on the broad problem of security. So his hearings won't be on Eisenhower's program alone.

But soon the Senate's Post Office and Civil Service Committee, headed by Sen. Olin D. Johnston

(D-Sc), will start hearings concentrated on the Eisenhower program alone. That will probably be a stormy one full of political implications for 1956.

Eisenhower's administration didn't like President Truman's program for getting rid of government employes who might endanger the country if allowed to keep their jobs.

Eisenhower, on April 17, 1953, substituted his own program. It differed from Truman's in two main ways:

1. Under Truman the test was a man's loyalty. Under Eisenhower a man can be fired if he's a security risk. What's that? It might be a Communist or a drunk or a homosexual or a person with a Communist relative.
2. Under Eisenhower a man about to be fired can appeal to the head of his military department. If turned down there, he's out. Under Truman such a man, if turned down by his agency head, could appeal to a special loyalty review board whose work was final. Eisenhower abolished this appeals board.

Career Officer Is Cleared Of Collaboration

FT. SILL, Okla. (AP)—Maj. Ambrose H. Nugent was free today to return to his first love, the field artillery. A court-martial acquitted him of aiding the enemy while a prisoner of war for 38 months in Korea.

His seven-week trial was the longest in U. S. military history. The court deliberated just over two hours yesterday before acquitting the Army career officer on nine specifications. Seven of the nine colonels on the court were Korean veterans.

Nugent, 45, was the first of five former Korea POWs tried on collaboration charges to be found innocent.

After the verdict, he broke into a big smile. A handful of spectators rushed to congratulate him.

He said his acquittal was a vindication of military justice. He told newsmen:

"I want to take a short leave for a physical checkup and have my teeth fixed and then I want to resume my career in the Army."

Nugent, of Merrill, Wis., began his Army career with the Wisconsin National Guard 24 years ago and for the past 14 years has served continuously.

The graying, bespectacled officer was accused of collaborating by making propaganda speeches, forming peace committees, signing and circulating documents detrimental to his country, offering aid to the enemy and foiling escape plans. He based his defense on the fact he was subjected to duress, followed orders of his superior and that he acted always for the welfare of his men.

Each of the counts could have brought as much as a life sentence.

The charges were based on the period between June 5, 1950, when he was captured at the start of the Korean hostilities, through the next summer when he was moved as a peace delegate to Camp No. 13. It was there that the Army had accused him of making propaganda speeches and signing surrender leaflets.

During that period, Nugent testified he lost more than 100 pounds from his original weight of 215 pounds because of maltreatment.

TV Entries Walt Disney And Danny Thomas Win 2 Emmies

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Walt Disney and Danny Thomas, clutching two Emmies apiece, today proved that television has three solid networks.

The two ABC stars, along with NBC's George Gobel and Loretta Young, plus Art Carney and Audrey Meadows of the CBS's Jackie Gleason Show, dominated last night's seventh annual Emmy awards of the Television Academy.

The show, sparkling with entertainment, was nationally televised over NBC-TV.

Disney, already the possessor of 22 movie Oscars, won an Emmy for the best variety series on TV. And his "Operation Under Sea," an episode in the Disneyland series, was adjudged the best individual program of the year.

Thomas, star of Make Room for Daddy, was named the best actor in a regular series. His show was selected the best situation comedy series.

John Daly of ABC won for being the best news reporter, and the U. S. Steel Hour, also on ABC, was named the best dramatic series.

The six awards out of a possible 21 gave ABC its healthiest showing yet in the awards. NBC and CBS, which heretofore had dominated the annual awards, got seven apiece.

Loretta Young became the first actress in Hollywood history to hold both a movie Oscar and an Emmy. She said the thrill "was equal in both cases." She was named the best actress in a regular series.

George Gobel, in his first year on TV, climaxed a meteoric rise by being named television's outstanding new personality. Carney and Miss Meadows were named best supporting actor and actress in a regular series.

Other awards: religious or educational program: Omnibus. Best sports program: Gillette Cavalcade of Sports. Best children's program: Lassie. Best daytime program: Art Linkletter's House Party.

Best Western or adventure series: Stories of the Century. Best audience guest participation or panel program: This is Your Life. Best actor in a single performance: Robert Cummings, "Twelve Angry Men," Studio One. Best actress in a single performance: Judith Anderson, "Macbeth," Hallmark Playhouse. Best male singer: Perry Como. Best female singer: Dinah Shore. Best mystery or intrigue series: Dragnet. Best situation comedy series: Make Room for Daddy.

Gore Polling Governors On Highway Attitudes

By FRED S. HOFFMAN
WASHINGTON (AP)—Sen. Gore (D-Tenn) polled the nation's governors, today in an effort to find out whether the states are ready, willing and able to put up more money for highway improvement.

Gore is chairman of a Senate Public Works subcommittee now considering President Eisenhower's plan for a huge new 10-year federal-state highway modernization program and Gore's rival proposal for an increase in the present federal aid highway program. Both proposals would entail bigger state outlays.

In separate telegrams to the 48 state chief executives, Gore said the subcommittee had instructed him to ask for the governors' views on "the ability and present inclination of their respective states to raise the additional funds to match and implement proposals now before it."

Gore explained that he proposes to nearly double the present $75-million-dollar annual federal highway allocation. The states would continue to match most of the federal funds on a 50-50 basis.

He said the Eisenhower administration's highway program, while recommending "greatly increased" federal spending on interstate roads, provides "no increase in federal funds for primary, farm-to-market, or urban projects."

In the same wires, Gore cited figures to show that his bill would boost federal outlays for roads not part of the interstate system by 400 millions a year.

Gore said the administration program calls for the states and local governments to put out within the next decade 29 billions more than they are spending now to bring all roads and streets outside of the interstate system "up to required standards."

Under present plans and programs, 47 billion dollars would be spent on highway work over the next 10 years, the federal govern-

Object To Navy Funds Request

BOSTON (AP)—A navy request for $150 to transport 100 seamen to march in the annual Evacuation Day-St. Patrick's Day parade March 17 in South Boston drew a broadside last night from the City Council.

"Anybody could almost hit a golf ball from the Fargo Building (naval headquarters) . . . to the starting point of the parade," said Councilman William J. Foley, a World War II Navy officer.

Parade officials said they are hopeful the Navy will withdraw its request.

Sheehy was arrested for doing 90 miles an hour while trying to "blow out" the carbon.

Souchak Enjoys Cheers Of Tournament Gallery Fans

By W. B. BAGSDALE JR.

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — Mike Souchak, a double winner on the winter tournament trail, is a bear-like young golfer who learned to like the cheers of a crowd as a football star at Duke.

He still likes them, even during a tense golf tournament.

"I play better golf when I've got a large gallery," says Mike. "When there's nobody watching, I have a tendency to think the shots don't count as much. But with a crowd watching, I always know each shot is important."

Souchak is a novelty in a sport where stars often are angered by crowd noises.

The love of cheers pays off for the 27-year-old former Duke end, who has a big lead in the race for the two spots reserved for new comers in the Masters tournament at Augusta, Ga.

Cheers helped him win the $6,000 first prize at the Houston Open and set three records in taking the Texas Open at San Antonio.

At Houston, the 210-pound, 5-10 Souchak had the largest gallery of his brief career.

"We were the last threesome to tee off," he says. "And we had about 6,000 people with us all the way around. As we got near the end we had about 10,000 and on the last hole they say there were 17,000 watching."

The cheers helped him come from behind to win the $6,000, which was more than he won all last year in his first full swing on the tournament circuit.

At San Antonio, the crowds cheered him to a record 27 for nine holes and records of 60 for 18 and 257 for 72.

Mike has another theory:

"When you make a bad shot, you bear down harder on the next one. This is something you learn from watching the better players. It's the difference between shooting par when you're in trouble, and staying in the running, or blowing up with several bad shots."

Souchak made that theory pay off, too.

In the $12,500 Baton Rouge Open tournament, which finished Sunday, Souchak played spotty golf. He was in steady trouble on the par-72 Baton Rouge Country Club course, but he shot steady subpar rounds of 71, 72, 71 and finished with a three-under 69.

Another thing Souchak says he learned from tournament golf is not to hit his drives so hard.

"When I turned pro, I was one of the longest drivers in the game, and one of the wildest," he explains. "Now I don't hit the ball so hard and control it better." Souchak still outrives most pros by 10 to 20 yards.

The only thing Mike doesn't like about big-time golf is the absence of his wife and nine-months old son, Michael John, who remain in Durham, N.C.

Mike graduated from Berwick, Pa., high school after starring in football and golf. He served in the Navy and in 1947 went to Duke. He graduated in 1951.

An older brother, John, started Mike and his brother Frank in golf. John was pro for a time at Berwick, but has regained his amateur standing and is in business at Norristown, Pa.

Frank was low amateur in the U.S. Open in 1953.

Mike turned professional in 1952 and worked as assistant to Claude Hartman at the Wingfoot Country Club in Mamaroneck, N.Y.

"Harmon and Tommy Armour did the most to develop my game," explains Mike. "Armour was a member and we used to play together a lot."

The reason for the improvement in his game is "consistency and overall improvement in my putting. In tournament golf you've got to be a real good driver and a real good putter."

Managers Trying Position Shifts

By SHELDON SAKOWITZ
The ASSOCIATED PRESS

Major league managers often experiment during spring training with position shifts designed to strengthen their clubs. These shifts don't always work out, but there's no harm in improvising with the material at hand.

This season has been no exception. The big league skipper have been switching players all around.

The Washington Senators have been toying with the idea of moving third baseman Eddie Yost to the outfield, provided an adequate replacement can be found.

Manager Chuck Dressen and coach Cookie Lavagetto, a former top third sacker, have been concentrating on polishing the play of 18-year-old Harmon Killebrew. They are striving to improve the bonus youngster's throwing with hopes of stationing him at third.

Dressen also is looking over some other prospects on the 50-man squad in an effort to send Yost to the outfield.

Chicago White Sox skipper Marv Marion shifted two of his rookie infield prospects to the outfield in an intrasquad game yesterday.

First baseman Jim Marshall and third baseman Joe Kirrene were the displaced players as the "Myatts" edged the "Gutteridges" 5-4.

Brooklyn Dodger manager Walt

Alston named his starting lineup for Thursday night's opener with the Milwaukee Braves and veteran shortstop Pee Wee Reese was not listed. Alston considers Reese his regular shortstop, but would like to see him perform at both second and third base.

Milwaukee Braves' Manager Charlie Grimm has two young shortstop prospects in camp—Al Pacchini and Bill Caro—so he put Caro at third in yesterday's intrasquad game. Grimm, elated at their "surprising ability," said, "They looked sharp in our early workouts last week, but did even better in competition."

Kiwanis Classic Players Briefed

CHARLOTTE (AP)—Two teams of gangling basketball players representing the Carolinas were here today in preparation for the second annual Kiwanis High School Classic.

Twenty-four picked senior players received a briefing from game officials. Two-a-day practices will be held tomorrow and Thursday. The game comes Friday at 8 p.m. in the Johnston Memorial YMCA.

Proceeds will go to the Charlotte Spastic Hospital.

A change in the North Carolina lineup was reported yesterday. Joe Ladd, 6-6 center from Lowell, replaced Richard Odom of Ahsokie. Odom's team is involved in a state playoff.

The sharpshooting Ladd has scored more than 1,800 points in four years and scored more than 700 points this season.

Of the 24 players reporting, 21 are six feet tall or more. Two of the exceptions are Chick Kelton, 5-10 guard from Gastonia, the low man on Tar Heel team, and Alvin Roof of Springfield, S.C., at 5-6½, the shortest man in the game.

Despite his height, Roof has tallied over 1,500 points in three years of varsity competition and more than 600 points this season.

To go with their short player, South Carolina boasts the game's tallest player, 6-7 Robert Jenkins of Blue Ridge.

Rocky Just Eliminates His Future Opponents

By GAYLE TALBOT

NEW YORK (AP) — Roland LaStarza who was a highly regarded challenger for the world heavyweight championship less than two years ago, was stiffened in five rounds the other night by a Cuban fighter who probably never heard of before, one Julio Mederos.

In his last fight previous to that, LaStarza looked like a sleepwalker in losing a 10-rounder to Charlie Norus, strictly a second-rater. And in the one before that he dropped a decision to Don Cockell the chubby cove who has been sentenced to face Rocky Marciano in May.

Those are the only times the Bronx Battler has climbed into a ring since the fall night in 1953 when Marciano starched him in the 11th round of their title bout at a local ball park. LaStarza, who thought he was going to be champanion before the bombs went off that night, appears to be washed up.

The point we would like to make is that when Rocky gets through laying it on a man there is one less opponent who can figure on making a buck with later on.

The only reason the Brockton Belter is matched with such an improbable customer as Cockell now is that he killed off Joe Walcott, Ezzard Charles and LaStarza in his previous title defenses.

Before that, while he was coming up, Rocky left a string of broken dreams behind him. Not one of the scores of men he dynamited out—Rex Layne, Lee Savold Harry Matthews, Carmen Wingo, among others—has amounted to anything since. Wingo never fought again, only now is recovering from a paralyzing blow struck him by the future champion Joe Louis hung up the gloves after Rocky stopped him in the eighth round in 1951.

This, we believe, is the only true way to judge the worth of a champion — what becomes of his victims after they have felt the power in his fists. Taking them on this basis, we feel certain we have seen two great ones in the past quarter-century, Louis and Marciano. Joe fought himself out of competition, just as Rocky has done.

Hemric Selected For ACC Player Of Year Tribute

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP)—Dick Hemric, Wake Forest's record breaking center, is the Atlantic Coast Conference basketball player of the year.

The 6-6, 227-pound senior, a second team All-America choice, was selected for top ACC honors by 45 newsmen, members of the Atlantic Coast Sports Writers Assn., covering the conference tournament here last weekend.

Three players received all the votes, Hemric picked up 22, with junior center-forward Ronnie Shavlik of North Carolina State's champions, getting 12 and Richard (Buzz) Wilkinson, Virginia's senior guard, No. 2 scorer in the nation, receiving 11 votes.

Voting was based on performance throughout the regular season and the tournament.

Hemric who closed the season, his fourth as a regular, with a record major college career total of 2,587 points, is from Jonesville, N.C.

Shavlik also made the Associated Press second All-America team with Wilkinson getting a third team berth.

La Grange, Farmville, Falkland, Snow Hill, Greenville, Rocky Mount, and Stantonsburg were represented at the meeting. The league still is open for entry and any team interested is asked to contact John Allen Farfour of Goldsboro.

At the meeting last night the rules, entry, and general play were discussed. It was decided that the league teams would play on Wednesday, Saturday and Sunday.

The next meeting will be in Wilson Tuesday March 15, at 7:30. Further plans for the league will be developed then.

All Greenville prospective baseball players are asked to attend a meeting Thursday night at 7:30 at Sandwhich King restaurant in Greenville. The Greenville team has already purchased most of the equipment and will begin practice in the near future. It is important that all men wishing to play for the Greenville team be present at the Thursday night meeting.

Winger Wins His First PGA Tourney Victory

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — Chunky Bo Winger today headed a week's rest at his Oklahoma City hotel with his first PGA tournament victory and the $2,200 first prize in the $12,500 Baton Rouge Open Golf Tourney.

After a week's layoff the touring professionals play next at St. Paul, Fla.

The 5-7, 37-year-old Oklahoman, displaying accurate iron shots and deadly putting, easily trounced Jimmy Clark of Laguna Beach, Calif., and Billy Maxwell, of Odessa, Tex., yesterday in an 18-hole playoff for first money.

Winger stroked a 6-under-par 66, four strokes better than Clark, who won the $1,500 second money, Maxwell, who had putter trouble, shot a 1-under-par 71 to take home $1,170 third-place money.

Dons Eke Out Over Kentucky In Final Cage Standing Poll

By JOHN CHANDLER
The ASSOCIATED PRESS

The San Francisco Dons, leader in The Associated Press poll of college basketball powers for the last four weeks, remained in the No. 1 spot today after a close ballot duel with Kentucky.

With San Francisco, Kentucky and other teams headed into tournament play, the final regular-season poll of the nation's sports writers and sportscasters brought out a heavy vote.

A total of 171 votes were cast. San Francisco receiving 67 for first place and Kentucky—which finished the 1954 season as No. 1—collecting 58. On points, based on 10 for first, 9 for second, etc. San Francisco received 1,424 and Kentucky 1,358.

LaSalle, heading into defense of its NCAA title scramble along with San Francisco and Kentucky, clung to the No. 3 place with 1,043 points.

A couple of late upsets juggled the top 10 rankings, as the conference championships were decided. Iowa, rulers of the Big Ten and ranked only No. 12 last week, leaped all the way into the No. 5 place. Minnesota, beaten by Iowa and then by Wisconsin, skidded from No. 6 to No. 11.

UCLA, in ninth place last week, lost a pair to Oregon State as the Pacific Coast race was decided, and dropped to No. 13 with the Northern Division champions taking over the No. 10 spot. Marquette, fourth a week ago, dropped to eighth after being defeated by Notre Dame.

Conference Honors Go To Coach Schaus

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Fred Schaus, who guided West Virginia to the Southern Conference championship in his first season as head coach today was chosen as the conference's basketball Coach of the Year.

Schaus, a 6-foot-5 native of Newark, Ohio, was named for the honor by the Southern Conference Sports Writers Assn.

Other coaches receiving votes in the balloting held here last week during the conference cage tournament were Bill Reinhart of George Washington; Billy McCann of Washington and Lee; Lester Hooker Jr. of Richmond and Lyles Alley of Furman.

Schaus took over as West Virginia coach last summer when the veteran Robert N. (Red) Brown vacated the position to become West Virginia athletic director. His first Mountaineer team posted a 16-10 record for the regular season and added three more triumphs in winning the conference crown in last week's tournament at the Richmond arena.

This year's championship was the first West Virginia had won since the university joined the Southern Conference in 1950. No other Mountaineer basketball team ever had gotten beyond the semifinals.

West Virginia earned a 9-1 conference record in regular season competition to enter the tourney as the top-seeded team. It was the only team in the country to whip George Washington twice. The Mountaineers are scheduled to meet LaSalle's national champions tonight at New York in the first round of the national playoffs.

Schaus himself made basketball history at West Virginia as a player. In three years, he scored 1,009 points in 61 games to post a 16.5-point average which was a West Virginia record until Mark Workman and Eddie Becker surpassed it in the 1950's. Schaus played on West Virginia varsity teams of 1947, 1948 and 1949, enjoying his best season in 1949 when he scored 442 points.

After his college career Schaus played for the Fort Wayne Pistons and the New York Knickerbockers in the National Basketball Assn. He was captain of the Pistons for three seasons. His best year as a professional was his second, 1950-51, when he tallied 1,028 points for the Pistons.

Schaus turned in a top-notch job in coaching West Virginia and its sophomore ace, Rod Hundley, this season. The Mountaineers, after starting off well lost four games in a row in late January and February and were just about counted out of contention for the conference title when maulled by Richmond 106-67. But they came steaming back to win their last eight in a row and captured the championship in the very arena where they had turned in their worst performance of the campaign.

Mechanical Brains For Small Business Field

By SAM DAWSON
NEW YORK — Mechanical brains cut down to handle the problems of the small business man are being offered in increasing numbers today. And still more are in the building or testing states.

King-size electronic computers are already in the field to handle scientific and engineering problems so complex that the average man can't understand what they're trying to do let alone how they do it. They are part of the move toward automation — with the theoretical goal a completely automatic factory — and some factory workers worry lest they spell loss of jobs.

Most of the companies in the business machine industry also are turning to the field of the smaller computers for specific purposes — such as helping oil companies tabulate automatically the flood of on-the-cuff transactions of the credit card customers; or aiding finance companies handle mortgage loan accounting.

Here are few of the new devices just being offered, or promised for delivery within the next year:

National Cash Register says that early in 1955 it will install for commercial use the first of its National Computer priced at around $200,000, and tailored to the needs of "any business which can profitably use electronic computation."

The company has built a tape punching machine which can turn a cash register, accounting machine or adding machine into a device to feed recorded data directly into the new computer, rather than be handled by electronic rather than human brains.

At a more lowly level, the company is pushing a change-computing cash register. At checkout counters in self-service stores, these machines show both the clerk and the customer the amount of each item, the total charge, the amount of money the customer offers in payment, and the change due.

Underwood Corp. will market, at around $15,000, a baby brain for small business men. The electronic computer, Elecom 50, the company says, can handle an entire payroll.

Candidates For Judgeships Are Buzzing Around

By LYNN NISBET
RALEIGH — Candidates for appointment as Superior Court Judge and sponsors for them have been buzzing around the capitol like bees since passage of the judicial re-districting bill last Wednesday.

This bill provides for 32 instead of the present 21 regular elective judges. It also provides that appointment to these eleven additional positions shall be made as of July 1, 1955, by Governor Hodges to hold until the election of 1954.

It is anticipated that even with these extra regulars there will be needed two to six special judges, instead of the present twelve authorized, of whom eleven have been named.

As the new districts are set up several have both a regular and a special judge, which means that perhaps some of the special judges now serving may not be reappointed.

Two of the new districts are given two regular judges each—Guilford and Mecklenburg counties, neither of which has a special judge but both have resident regulars.

There are five new districts presently without either a regular or special judge. (Some of them have active emergency judges, who are not eligible for appointment.) It is from these presently un-manned districts that more pressure is coming.

These districts and their counties are: Third, comprising Carteret, Craven, Pamlico and Pitt Ninth, comprising Caswell, Franklin, Granville, Vance and Warren.

Thirteenth, comprising Bladen, Brunswick and Columbus. Twentieth, comprising Anson, Richmond, Stanly and Union. Twenty-second, comprising Alexander, Davidson, Davie and Iredell.

These five no-judge districts, plus the two 3-judge districts, assure at least seven new appointments before July 1. Information is there are approximately thirty very active aspirants for the posts.

Finest American Corn To Grow In Far Off Greece; Seed Gift

The finest and richest of America's tall corn will not only grow this season in Iowa, Kansas, Illinois or Indiana. Seedlings from improved American hybrids will break through top soil in such strange sounding places as Salonika, Ioannina and Xanthi in Greece.

As on the plains of America's Midwest, the young corn will grow into strong stalks on the hillsides of Sidhrokastron, in the valleys around Yanntias and on innumerable small village lots. It will be tended by hand and hoe instead of modern machinery.

Promptness Was Disappointing To Ex-Student

"And you," the judge reminded Eldredge, "stopped your lecture and dressed me down something awful. You said a lawyer had to learn to be on time. Yes, you gave me quite a ride."

And, continued Judge Satterthwaite, "when I heard you were coming here today, I was waiting to see what time you came in. If you had been late..."

BIRD MAN WANTED
LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — "Friends of the Birds, Inc." want the Arkansas Legislature to pass a bill prohibiting cats from running at large. Organization spokesmen said it would take "a legislator of unusual courage and regard for public welfare to sponsor a cat bill, but he would gain more renown than could be won on any other issue."

Best of all, it will yield three times as much as the native Greek variety and thereby substantially help the often punished people of northern Greece, among them escapees and expellees from surrounding Communist countries, seeking a new life in the old country.

It all came about when the Christian Rural Overseas Program, the food collecting appeal of Church World Service, was asked to supply hybrid seed corn to help in the rehabilitation efforts of the World Council of Churches and the Orthodox Church of Greece. In response, CROP shipped, on behalf of its many contributors in twenty-two states, 420,000 pounds of four varieties of corn seed, deemed most suitable by the Greek Ministry of Agriculture. The corn will plant 60,000 acres and yield almost 200 million pounds, in growing conditions are favorable.

At dedication services in Philadelphia prior to shipment of the seed late in February, Dr. Eugene C. Blake, President of the National Council of the Churches of Christ in the USA, in a broadcast beamed direct to Greece by the Voice of America said: "The United States is essentially a Christian country and contributors to CROP follow the teaching of the New Testament that the 'way to show one's Love for God is to show it for one's fellow men.'" Church World Service executive director R. Norris Wilson and national CROP director Albert W. Farmer sped the shipment on its way with the hope that it may fulfill the wishes of the donors for "there is nothing more hopeful than seed" to sustain life.

R. Norris Wilson, Executive Director of Church World Service, broadcasts direct to Greece via Voice of America from aboard SS Fernside in the port of Philadelphia. The occasion was the dedication of 420,000 pounds of hybrid seed corn donated by Americans to refugee farm communities in northern Greece through CROP, the Christian Rural Overseas Program. The gift will plant 60,000 acres this spring, yield three times as much as native Greek varieties. Others present included Dr. Eugene Blake, President of the National Council of the Churches of Christ in the USA, national CROP director Albert W. Farmer, clergy, representing the Greek Orthodox Church of North and South America, and church, government and business leaders.

Versatile 4-H Girl Cites Project Achievement Value

Rosalie Moore, member of the Stokes-Pactolus Senior 4-H Club, realized a heart's desire when she redecorated her room last fall. Assisted by her family, Rosalie had the work completed within a month and she capped a county championship for room improvement.

Notable Record In Seven-Year Effort

By EDWINA HAYMES
Reflector Staff Writer

"After being a 4-H club member for seven years, when the word 4-H is mentioned the first thing that comes to my attention is achievement."

So declares Phyllis Corbett, a member of the Farmville Senior 4-H Club and president of the 4-H County Council.

Phyllis can speak with authority on this subject, having completed 29 projects with a total value of $5,154.15. She has also entered 49 contests during her membership in 4-H capturing 32 honors.

This versatile high school junior, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Horace Corbett of Fountain, exhibits proof that 4-H is an organization which trains farm youth in the art of living. This is done by means of projects which may emphasize anything from agricultural engineering to child care.

Some of these projects, for both boys and girls, are health, raising and first aid, home grounds beautification, farm shop electricity and tractor maintenance, farm and home safety, arts and crafts, home industries, leadership, field crops, gardening and fruits and forestry. The farm youth also may choose to work with poultry, dairying, livestock and meat animals. Girls, in particular, choose clothing, home management, home improvement, food selection and preparation and food preservation. There are also fields to select from in good grooming, family life cooperation and good sewing techniques.

Phyllis' Projects Varied
Of all the 500 4-H girls in the county, Phyllis probably has undertaken the most varied types of projects. Her record book describes her work in clothing, farm-home electricity, food preparation, better grooming, home management, frozen foods, home improvement, family relations and home grounds beautification.

She was a member of the North-eastern District team that won the dairy foods contest last year. Her partner was Peggy Joyner. Phyllis has also been county winner two years for the girls record, and county winner in home management, home improvement, farm-home electricity, leadership and public speaking.

She won a blue ribbon last year at the county dress revue, and in 1952 was named Pitt County's most outstanding 4-H girl.

She has held all the club and county 4-H offices.

Though her 4-H activities keep her busy, Phyllis still finds time to participate actively in school events. She is a charter member of the Keyette Club, county historian of the Future Homemakers of America, and band reporter. She is a principal's list student (makes all A's and B's) and served as marshal her first two years in high school. Last year she was also president of her class. She is a member of the journalism club, and has been in the FHA for three years. She is in the class play, plays basketball and plays the cymbals in the band.

Will Enter Contest
On the basis of all these 4-H and school activities, Phyllis plans to enter her Girls Record book in the district contest this year. She also plans to participate again in the Dairy Foods demonstration.

Phyllis believes her work in 4-H has helped her to gain a better outlook on life. "The work done through 4-H projects has made me more well-rounded in the tasks I undertake," she declares. "This work is preparing me for life after I complete my schooling."

Phyllis is only one of a thousand 4-H club members in Pitt County who are acquiring new arts and skills as a result of their membership in this organization. In stating the purpose of this group, it has been said, "The spirit of 4-H clubs strives to make the life of our homes, schools, states and even the nation a happier and more useful one through purposeful service. It is the spirit of this service which unites the head, heart, hands, and health of its members."

This week 4-Hers throughout the nation are celebrating National 4-H Club Week, striving to bring to the attention of the public the objectives and activities of this organization, which is founded on the basis of "learning by doing." Members are taught to plan and conduct projects in an organized manner and to follow their motto—"To Make the Best Better."

Three Active 4-H Girls
Three Pitt County 4-H girls who exemplify this theme are Hilda Owens of the Farmville Senior Club, Parmie Moore of the Fountain Junior club and Rosalie Moore of the Stokes-Pactolus Senior club.

Hilda, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. C. Owens, has been county winner for her frozen foods project during the past three years.

This is particularly noteworthy since Hilda must do all her project work at night. After school, where she is an honor roll student in the tenth grade, she works in her father's grocery store. She helps on the farm, especially during the tobacco season.

Hilda first became interested in home freezing when her family purchased a freezer three years ago. She had poultry as her 4-H project at that time, having won the county poultry championship. Because she stayed so busy, she decided she could put up surplus vegetables during the summer better than she could start her chicks in the spring.

Hilda has frozen all sorts of vegetables, meats and fruits, most of the vegetables coming from the home garden. As a result of this work, she has also developed a project in family cooperation, as her sister helps her pick the vegetables and prepare them for freezing.

Hilda plans to continue this project work, as she declares, "I have learned much money can be saved by a family's working together in trying to save what they have. My project has helped me to realize that by saving what we have it will give us more money for other things we want and need."

Poultry Project Profitable
Parmie Moore, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Alton Moore, has also found a 4-H project can be profitable. Parmie's project is poultry, and she is participating in the Sears, Roebuck poultry chain idea, which is a program whereby 4-H boys and girls receive a certain number of chicks from that company, later selling some hens to finance the chain and insure its continuing.

Parmie received 102 chickens last February, and after selling 12, killing some for family consumption, and losing a number, she now has 70 for laying.

Her hens lay an average of 36 eggs per day, and by January Parmie had cleared $37 on her project. She plans to save this money for the time being, with a tentative plan to use some of it to attend 4-H camp this summer.

Another 4-Her has realized a heart's desire while completing a project which won her first place in the county room improvement division last year.

Rosalie Moore, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D. R. Moore and a high school junior, declares she had always desired to decorate her room

"Just like I wanted," and last September, with the help of her mother, she set out to do just that.

"All the family pitched in and helped," she said, and by the end of the month the room had been painted a warm rose, an old washstand had been repainted and covered with white organdy over a pink undershirt, and a nail keg had been padded and skirted for the dressing table stool. A white bedspread and white organdy curtains were purchased to complete the decorations. However, Rosalie has more ideas and plans to purchase some white scatter rugs and pink lamp shades before she is satisfied with her project.

Rosalie planned her color scheme and selected her materials with the help of Home Agent Mrs. Lillie Little. Her mother helped her with the sewing.

These are only a few examples of the work 4-H girls throughout Pitt County are accomplishing. It is the hope of local 4-H leaders that during this week the public will take notice of these activities, and will acquaint themselves with the work of 4-H boys and girls.

It is also the hope of the leaders that this week will encourage 4-H club members to take inventory of themselves and their project work and set even higher goals of achievement for 1955.

Parmie Moore of the Fountain Junior Club chose poultry as her project for the first time this year. Parmie now has 70 laying hens and has already netted $37 profit from the sale of eggs. She hopes to use some of this money to attend 4-H camp this summer.

Town Meeting Delayed By TV

IPSWICH, Mass. (AP)—The annual town meeting approved an $800,000 budget last night—but only after some 100 town meeting members were summoned from their television sets to vote.

Town officials reported that competition offered by a highly publicized TV show (the "Peter Pan" musical) delayed the town meeting about an hour while they telephoned members in order to secure a quorum.

Only 335 of the necessary 425 members were on hand at the 7:30 p.m. starting time to vote on the budget which Town Counsel William F. Hayes said may mean a $4 to $5 boost in the tax rate.

Young Patients Evicted By Fire

REISTERSTOWN, Md. (AP)—The Children's Rehabilitation Institute, a large private cerebral palsy treatment center, has closed its doors temporarily after a basement fire which routed the entire staff and 70 young crippled patients.

The patients, ranging in age from 3 to 25 and none of them able to walk, were carried to safety yesterday by about 50 quick-acting employees.

Firemen confined the blaze to the laundry and maintenance room. There was some damage to the dormitory on the floor above.

UNPROFITABLE THEFT
SAN ANGELO, Tex. (AP)—Thieves who robbed the Paradise Inn took a licking. They got only 70 cents from a juke box, left two expensive white shirts behind.

Tell Her It's MURDER

Jim Andrus had served a prison term for the vehicular slaying of eight-year-old Roger Pelham, whose lovely mother, Regina Pelham, Jim had been about to wed. Overindulgence during his bachelor dinner had blacked out Andrus' mind, and he had awakened next morning to find the lad dead in the driveway of the Pelham home in a suburb of New York. Unmistakably, Andrus' car had killed the boy, but Jim had no recollection of having driven his car that night.

CHAPTER TWO

The thing Andrus was looking for was the silver flask Regina Pelham had given him the day before they were to have been married. He had been sure of finding it. It wasn't in the topcoat or the suit he had worn up the river to jail. It wasn't in his room in the Wolf Hill Inn when he left it to start on that journey. His voluble, vivacious aunt, Jude Carmody had arrived as he finished packing. Jude had taken charge of the bag, no longer volatile and gay, but white faced and sad. "I tried to get here before, Jim, but your uncle is very ill. I'm sorry."

He had been almost a year in jail when the first doubt entered his mind. The blank he had pulled was not quite complete. It had very gradually thinned in a couple of spots. One spot was concerned with the silver flask. He had handed the flask after he left the Inn on the night young Roger had been killed. There were pictures attached to the flask, the picture of a tossing motion. He had been going to throw the flask somewhere. There were sounds too the sound of a voice, peevish, complaining, "Come on now, you don't want to do a thing like that."

A thing like what? He had built on the flask's telling him when he looked at it, handed it again. They said that he had got out of bed, driven over to the Pelham house, killed Roger driven back to the Inn and had then fallen into a drunken stupor behind the wheel until morning. There was more to it than that. He had done other things. He had hoped that the sight of the flask would widen the gap, bring back those other things. Odd that it wasn't in the bag. It certainly hadn't been left in that inn bedroom and Jude had brought the bag here the next day and put it in his locker downstairs. No one could get it there. Who would want to? Besides, if it were a question of pilfering, why take the flask and leave the rings, which were much more valuable?

Andrus got heavily off the bed and went into the bathroom and took a shower and changed into other clothes. There was a dining room on the first floor. He couldn't face it. He called room service, said, "A couple of chicken sandwiches—" and paused, gripping the instrument hard. Give in now and he was through. He added, "and a bottle of ale, as soon as you can make it."

He filled 15 minutes walking around and thinking about that flask. When the bell rang he thought it was the water with of the food. He opened the door and stared into Barry Lofting's face. Lofting was to have been his best man at the wedding that had not taken place. Regina had arranged it. He was an agreeable fellow with a long face, long chin, long nose and expressive brown eyes—inclined to ride hobby horses, but with a sense of humor.

Andrus led the way into the living room. "How did you find out I was back?"

Lofting sat down and lit a cigarette with deliberation. "Well, Susan saw you get out of a cab and come in here. She lives down the street. . . . You look fine."

Susan was Susan Dwight, Regina's stepsister. Andrus smiled. "I feel fine. It wasn't too bad on the whole, not unlike the Army between pushes. They gave me good jobs. I was cook part of the time. I was sorry they took me out of the kitchen. I like cooking."

Lofting said earnestly: "Look, Andrus, if there's anything I can do. . . ? I don't know what your plans are, but if there's any way I can help—"

Andrus said, "Susan Dwight sent you here, didn't she?"

"That's right. But I would have come anyhow."

"What does your wife want to know?"

Lofting looked startled. "My wife? Susan and I aren't married. What made you think so?"

Regina had wanted them to marry. She was fond of Lofting and thought her young stepsister would be happy with him. Evidently it had not come off.

He repeated the question. "Why did Susan Dwight send you here? What does she want to know?"

Lofting's nose grew longer. He said "Susan's worried. About Regina. Regina's just beginning to pull out of it. If she were to see you—"

"New York's a big place. Lofting, and Regina doesn't come into town very often."

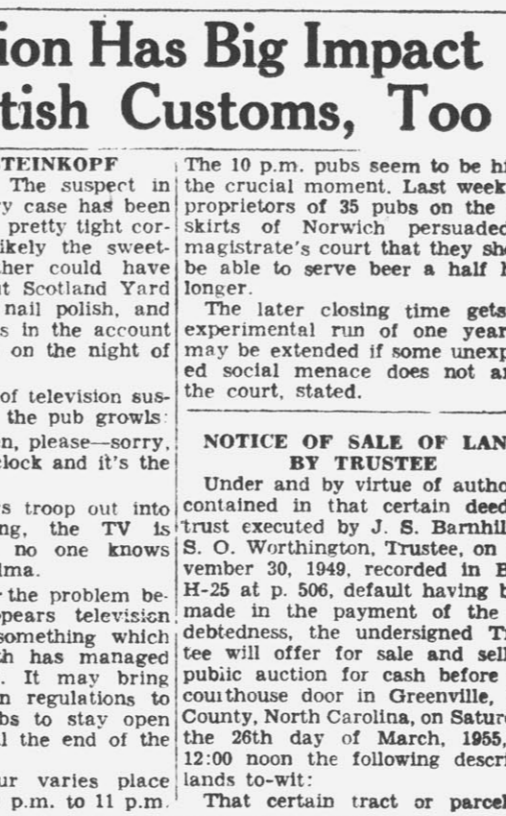

"No. But your aunt lives up there on the Hudson, doesn't she?"

"Yes in Hastings." They wanted an assurance from him that he would steer clear of Regina Pelham and any place she might happen to be, Andrus thought.

Lofting stared at him frowning. "A silver—" His face cleared. "I remember it, a nice thing—Susan and I helped Regina pick it out. Wasn't it with your stuff? You want to send it back to her? I suppose? I wouldn't, Andrus."

Andrus said, "I have no intention of trying to see Regina. You can tell Susan Dwight that."

Lofting was openly relieved. He did not like the errand he had been sent on, and was glad to have done with it. He got up. He had to run. . . . Andrus agreed to lunch some day soon, closed the door behind Lofting. There were a lot of things he didn't know about these people. They were all comparative strangers. Maybe Susan Dwight hadn't seen Lofting. Maybe Lofting had come on his own. . . . Andrus snatch-

THERE OUGHTA BE A LAW By FAGALY and SHORTEN

Television Has Big Impact On British Customs, Too

By ALVIN STEINKOPF
LONDON (AP) — The suspect in the jewelry robbery case has been maneuvered into a pretty tight corner. It seems unlikely the sweet-faced grandmother could have done the deed. But Scotland Yard has analyzed her nail polish, and there are loopholes in the account of her movements on the night of Feb. 15.

At this moment of television suspense, the boss of the pub grows: "Time, gentlemen, please—sorry, got to close, 10 o'clock and it's the law, you know."

So the customers troop out into the cold grumbling, the TV is switched off and no one knows what befell Grandma.

So irritating has the problem become that it appears television may accomplish something which no power on earth has managed to do up to now. It may bring about a change in regulations to permit British pubs to stay open a little later. Until the end of the play, anyway.

The closing hour varies place to place from 9:30 p.m. to 11 p.m.

The 10 p.m. pubs seem to be hit at the crucial moment. Last week the proprietors of 35 pubs on the outskirts of Norwich persuaded a magistrate's court that they should be able to serve beer a half hour longer.

The later closing time gets an experimental run of one year. It may be extended if some unexpected social menace does not arise, the court stated.

'Feeble' Churchill Continues To Be One Of Liveliest Around

By EDDY GILMORE
LONDON (AP) — Sir Winston Churchill remains one of the liveliest feeble men in the world.

Just over 15 years ago the late Wendell Willkie, here for a private visit, confided:

"Churchill's a great old man, but I'm afraid he's getting a little feeble."

Two days after he said that Willkie called on Churchill at No. 10 Downing St. Following their talk the Prime Minister accompanied the visiting American to the door step.

They stood there for photographs and as Willkie was leaving, Churchill took him by the arm, saying:

"Here, Mr. Willkie, let me show you down this step. When it rains it sometimes becomes slippery."

Back at his hotel Willkie smiled and said "And I called him feeble."

One year later Churchill was in Moscow having his first meeting with Joseph Stalin. The late Lord Inverchapel was then the British ambassador in Russia.

"He looks fine," mused the envoy, "but I'm afraid he's showing signs of feebleness."

Before he left Moscow on that trip Churchill exhausted the ambassador and half his staff of young men.

Two years later, in October 1944, Churchill was back in Moscow for more talks with Stalin. The late Maxim Litvinov, who'd known Churchill for years, signed and shook his head.

"At last, I'm afraid he's getting feeble."

A few days ago (Feb. 28) Churchill was the guest of honor at a correspondents' luncheon. At one table was a British newsmen who has been watching Churchill for 26 years.

"He's all right," he confided, "but watch him when he comes in. You'll see what I mean. He's getting a bit feeble."

Five minutes later Churchill surged into the dining room, marched with sure strides around the hall, using no walking stick and holding no one's arm.

"Well, I'm damned," said the newspaperman. "He's made a liar out of me."

The truth is Churchill has good days and bad days. Some days he may give the appearance of feebleness. And then he bounces right back with the energy of a man many years his junior.

Today's Young Folk Live In A New World

By DOROTHY ROE
Associated Press Women's Editor
Many of today's parents are trying to enforce the rules of another age on their teen-age sons and daughters, says Millicent McIntosh, president of Barnard College, New York.

"The whole pattern of young people's thoughts and actions has completely changed in the decade since the war," says Mrs. McIntosh. "Older people in many cases do not realize this, and lay down the same rules that worked when they were young. Actually they are living in a different world."

4-H Leaders Attend Recognition Banquet

Miss Maxine Young, 1954 Shaw University graduate, home economics major and International Farm Youth Exchange student, was the speaker last week at the 4-H leaders' recognition banquet.

The meeting was held at York Memorial Methodist Church educational building and was sponsored by the Pitt County Council of Home Demonstration Clubs.

The speaker related some of her experiences during her travels in Europe last summer. Her journey abroad began with a visit at the White House in Washington.

She used stereopticon slides to illustrate some of her travels. Miss Young's selection to make the "good will tour" was a result of her 4-H Club work, with eight years membership and her training in home economics at Shaw University in Raleigh, she stated.

Assistant 4-H Club specialist Mrs. Idell J. Randall of A. and T. College, Greensboro, introduced the speaker. Rev. H.R. Reaves, principal of Grifton elementary school, said the invocation.

Pitt County Health department Director Dr. H.C. Humbert spoke briefly.

Supervisor of elementary schools Miss Madaline Blount extended greetings on behalf of the school principals. Home Demonstration Club members and others were present.

About 150 leaders in home demonstration club work, school principals, Home Demonstration Club members and others were present.

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP)—The stock market was pushed down today by a series of moderate selling waves. In the early afternoon, prices were off 1 to 4 points in many key areas of the list.

Aircrafts were hardest hit by the selling and displayed the widest losses. No major division was able to stand against the lower trend. Trading stepped up its pace sharply on the fall and maintained a rate above yesterday's 2,630,000 shares changing hands in a falling market.

The Senate Banking Committee in Washington in its study of the stock market heard a witness who said the country may be in the early stages of a boom-and-bust cycle that could end in a 1929-style crash.

The day before, the committee under Senator Fulbright asked the Defense Department for details of companies engaged heavily in defense work.

Yesterday's market was lower all around with the aircrafts weak. Today right at the opening prices were lower.

RALEIGH (AP)—NCDA — Hog prices mostly steady to 50 cents lower. Tops to 15.50 at Hillsboro and Beulaville; 15.25 at Castle McChinnis, New Bern, Kenly, Kinston, Benson and Rich Square; 15.00 at Goldsboro, Tarboro, Enfield, Hamilton, Plymouth, Jacksonville, Rocky Mount and Washington; 14.75 at Micro, Freeman, Siler City, Elizabethtown, Whiteville, Tabor City, Shallotte, Bladenboro, Fayetteville, Clinton and Lumberton; 14.50 at Clarkton, Dunn, Newton Grove, Fair Bluff, Warsaw, Bay and Smithfield.

RALEIGH (AP)—NCDA—Central North Carolina poultry markets: Fryers and broilers steady with farm prices at 29 job plants. No sales reported. Raleigh eggs steady with a large at 46.

Asheville fryers and broilers steady with farm price at 28 Asheville eggs steady with a large at 40.

Hear Report On Kinston Meeting

A brief report on the 279th Rotary district conference held last week in Kinston was made to the local Rotary club last night by Dr. Howard McGinnis, past district governor of the district.

McGinnis said more than 600 Rotarians representing all but one club in the district were present for the meeting. He outlined briefly the highlights of the two-day meeting.

Club Secretary Wendell Smiley had charge of the club program at its meeting, discussing the duties of the secretary of a Rotary club. Smiley outlined the qualifications of a secretary as set forth by Rotary International and then discussed the various matters which must be handled by the club secretary.

It was announced that the annual ladies night of the local Rotary Club will be held at 7 p.m. on March 14 in the cafeteria of the West Greenville School. The annual ladies night banquet this year will be in conjunction with the celebration of the 50th anniversary of Rotary.

Guest of the club last night was Miss Anna VanAndel, Rotary fellowship student from Holland who is attending East Carolina College.

Attendance For Ministerial Meet Is Revival Growing

Attendance at the Spring revival of the First Pentecostal Holiness Church of Greenville continues to increase, the pastor, the Rev. H. E. Johnson said Tuesday.

The Rev. R. L. Rex, guest preacher for this series, Monday night preached on Personal Christianity, emphasizing that through each individual's personality as a Christian one may live alike in the essence of moral standards, but each reflect his or her individual traits of character.

Christianity is a life lived according to Christ's standards, and not a mold for uniformity of action with everybody doing and talking alike, the evangelist said.

Through March 20, the Rev. Mr. Rex, Oklahoma City, Oklahoma preacher, will be occupying the pulpit at the Greenville church. The Rev. Mr. Rex is chairman of the Board of Home Missions of the General Board of Administration of the denomination.

Pastor Johnson noted that the Rev. Mr. Rex is also preaching each morning on the daily devotional program of radio station WGTC. An invitation is extended the public to attend the services at the church each night throughout the duration of the campaign.

Mrs. W. H. Hudson Funeral Wednesday

Mrs. Hattie Clyde Hudson, wife of William Henry Hudson of Washington, N. C., died in Tayloe Hospital in Washington at 10:30 o'clock Monday night. She was 49 years old. She had been in failing health for several months and critically ill for the past six days.

Funeral services will be conducted at the Wilkerson Funeral Chapel Wednesday afternoon at three o'clock by the Rev. Robert B. Crawford, pastor of the Greenville Free Will Baptist Church. Burial will be in Greenwood Cemetery. Nephews will be active pall bearers.

Mrs. Hudson, daughter of Clyde L. Skinner of Greene County, near Ormondsville, and the late Ida Johnson Skinner, was born and reared in Pitt County in the Grifton community. She had lived in the Simpson community since her marriage to Mr. Hudson on December 22, 1926, until four years ago when they moved to Washington. She was a member of Elm Grove Free Will Baptist Church near Grifton.

Surviving are her husband; a daughter, Mrs. Gaston Elks of Washington; a grandson, Billy Dean Elks; her father; four sisters: Mrs. Lottie Sumrell of Grifton, Mrs. H. M. Bowen and Mrs. Wesley Moore of Greene County, and Mrs. D. D. Bethurum of Norfolk, Va.; three brothers: E. W. and R. T. Skinner of Greene County, and F. J. Skinner of Ayden; and three half sisters: Mrs. Carl Jones of Dover, and Mrs. Cecil Erwin and Mrs. Walter Moore of Trenton.

Attendance For Ministerial Meet Is Revival Growing

A joint meeting of the Greenville Ministerial Association and the Greenville Ministerial Alliance, the latter an organized Negro pastors group, was held Monday in the York Memorial A.M.E. Zion church, with an attendance of 30 ministers.

Presiding over the session, the Rev. J. A. Nimmo, pastor of the Sycamore Hill Baptist Church, welcomed the members of the white pastors organization, and the Rev. J. A. Nelson, pastor of the Immanuel Baptist Church, made the response to the address of welcome.

The business matters were deferred to permit an address on "The Basis of Christian Brotherhood" made by the Rev. J. A. Mumford, pastor of the host church.

The fellowship of Christians, the acts of the early Christians and the teachings of the first century Christians were cited as examples of Christian love out of which grew the program of evangelism and extension of the church, declared the speaker.

Christ is the hope of the world and His life reflected through the lives of individual Christian will be the effective means of extending His kingdom in our day, the clergyman pointed out. His address touched briefly upon issues being discussed among inter-racial groups throughout the world.

Decision was made to hold the May meeting of the two ministerial units at St. Paul Episcopal Church.

Capitol Square

ple owning land adjoining streams and lakes will certainly howl. Opposition will be loud and zigged, with much breast-beating over property rights.

The commission knew in advance such opposition would develop, realizing few would like the bill. But it has laid down a general pattern, and North Carolina can take it or leave it.

The commission just hopes that the great debate will further awaken our people to the seriousness of the water problem and get them to do something about it—before it's too late.
