"It's not fair to say I haven't! Everybody has fathers . . . specially me! Daddy may not be here . . . but he takes just as good care of me as yours does. Maybe better! My Mother told me so. She says all fathers try to take care of their children when they're here. But it takes a pretty special kind to look after you . . . even when he's called away. She says Father planned and planned . . . and gave up things, too . . . because he loved us more than lots of dads."

Sinatra Sues Film Studio; Feuds With Ed Sullivan

NEW YORK (AP)—Crooner-actor Frank Sinatra is suing the producers of the prize-winning movie "On the Waterfront" for $500,000, charging they withheld an oral agreement to give him the starring role. At the same time, Sinatra is feuding with Ed Sullivan of the TV show "Toast of the Town." Sullivan yesterday denounced what he called Sinatra's "reckless charge" that he does not pay performers on his show. Sinatra's suit, naming as defendants Samuel Spiegel, also known as S. P. Eagle, Horizon-American Horizon-American Pictures, Inc., Horizon-American Pictures, Inc., came to light yesterday when the producers announced they would appeal from a court decision refusing to dismiss the complaint. According to the papers filed in State Supreme Court, Sinatra and the producers entered into an oral agreement Oct. 22, 1953, under which Sinatra would get $55,000 and one per cent of net profits for playing the lead role in "On the Waterfront." The papers charge the producers repudiated the agreement one day before Sinatra was to start work in the film. The lead role in "On the Waterfront" went to Marlon Brando. Both the film and Brando won academy awards. The feud between Sinatra and Sullivan apparently stems from the fact that Sullivan wanted to put on a 30-minute documentary showing production of Sam Goldwyn's picture "Guys and Dolls." Sullivan offered to pay $32,000 to cover technical costs and invited Brando and Jean Simmons, key figures of the movie, to appear. Sullivan said both Brando and Jean Simmons "were to be paid by me." Shortly afterward, Sinatra called upon the Screen Actors Guild to clamp down on free appearances on commercial TV shows. "I think a stand has to be made on these free appearances," Sinatra said. "It is not fair that I do a show for Sullivan with no pay." In this week's Variety, entertainment trade newspaper, Sullivan took a page out of his hit called Sinatra's "reckless charge" that his show doesn't pay its performers...

Women Of The Church Are Feted By Presbyterian Men

"We have a great privilege as Christians to be able to say we believe in Christ," Rev. Milton B. Faust, State Commander of the American Legion, told the men and women of the First Presbyterian Church Wednesday night at the annual Ladies Night given by the men of the Church.

In referring to the dinner meeting, Rev. Faust, who is Director of Evangelism for the Synod of North Carolina, spoke of the joys gained through Christian fellowship. He emphasized that the very privilege of spiritual communion where Christians gather together in a spirit of holiness and friendship sets them apart from other groups.

The Ladies Night is a reversal of the usual procedure where the church circles serve the men at their monthly fellowship supper meetings. The men of the Church were the hosts and showed their appreciation by preparing and serving a delicious fried chicken dinner. Mr. E. W. Harvey Jr. was chairman of the event.

The ladies were received in the church lobby where they were served a chilled appetizer from an attractively decorated punch bowl of molded ice.

After the dinner, Mrs. John E. Moss sang two solos, "Beyond the Blue Horizon" and "With a Song in My Heart," and was accompanied on the piano by Mrs. Guy Smith.

Dr. S. R. Bartlett, president of the Men's Fellowship Club of the church, welcomed the guests and presided over the meeting attended by 112 persons including 62 women of the Church as special guests.

The guest speaker was introduced by Dr. W. C. Humbert, vice-president and program chairman.

Rev. L. W. Topping, minister of the church, led the devotional and Rev. Faust pronounced the benediction.

The welcome to the mothers was given by Miss Julie Lewis and the response was given by Mrs. Marguerite Woodin. Each mother was introduced by her daughter. "The Lord's Prayer" was very capably narrated by Miss Barbara Jenkins and then the song was beautifully rendered by Miss Jo Ann Harrington. Miss Shirley Clark gave a very fine toast to the mothers.

Miss Gurganus, the girls' F. H. A. leader, secured for the occasion a charming and attractive speaker for the evening, who is a student from France, Miss Pauline Castel. She is studying under a scholarship from France at East Carolina College.

She gave a very informative talk on "The French Way of Life." She told of the great rarity of new cars, television and washing machines in her country. Miss Castel particularly stressed the point of people being misled that the abundance of wine in France makes them get drunk often. She said that it is so weak, in comparison to the American wine, that it is served to all the little children with no more effects than Pepsi-Colas have on people in the United States.

She emphasized in her talk the strong family custom which they have in their country of closing all business houses and their schools at 12 o'clock for everyone to go home and eat and be together for two hours, or until 2 o'clock when everything opens up again. This tends to make the home the center of interest, as it is supposed to be, and thereby makes the family ties stronger. After her talk she asked for and answered questions from the girls and mothers. Miss Castel will return to her country in August and may apply for a position as an interpreter of languages for the French government.

After the talk Miss Janet Norville took flash camera pictures of the banquet. Miss Gurganus' mother of Oxford was a guest for this happy occasion. The evening was closed with the presentation of a lovely red rose to each mother and daughter by Miss Gurganus and the beautiful song "Mother" was sung by all the girls of the Future Homemakers of America club.

Circle K Club Members Aid In 'Bread Sale'

The Circle K Club of East Carolina College is going to assist the Greenville Junior Woman's Club's annual "bread sale" next Tuesday and Wednesday nights at 8 o'clock. Proceeds of the "bread sale" will be used to aid needy children of Pitt County, Mrs. Robert E. Lee, of the Junior Woman's Club's publicity committee stated.

The Circle K Club was organized among college students in December, 1949. It is a service club sponsored by the Greenville Kiwanis Club and Kiwanis International at Chicago. It is self-perpetuating in membership and this club was the fourth of its kind to be organized in the United States and Canada. Membership is restricted to college boys, and it is based on scholarship, leadership and prospect of leadership. Circle K's purpose is to develop leadership and future work in civic organizations. It is under guidance of Dr. John O. Reynolds and Dr. James Poindexter of ECC faculty. Gary Scarborough is president, Ben Wolverton is vice-president, Frank Moore is treasurer, and J. B. Nichols is secretary.

The Circle K Club members have participated in numerous worthwhile community activities. Included are egg hunts for school children, milk aid to needy families, television set for the Pitt County Home, assisting the Kiwanis Minstrel for underprivileged children, the Welfare Department and other projects.

Red Oak News

We hope to have a large crowd present at the minstrel show to be given at the Red Oak Community Building next Tuesday night, May 3, at 8 o'clock by the Eastern Pines Men's Club.

There are about thirty-five people connected with this minstrel and they really put on a good performance. Minstrel jokes, singing, tap dancing, specialty numbers, the Parrott Brothers String Band and students make for an evening of hilarious entertainment. If you do not like a real minstrel show, then you had better not come for it is tops.

All the proceeds from this minstrel will go to pay for fifty chairs for the club building.

Home made cakes, candies, sandwiches, cold drinks will be sold and it is hoped that everybody in the community and other friends will be present and help to purchase these chairs.

Father And Son Have 60-Odd Clocks To Wind Every 7 Days

By ALVIN TAYLOR
Reflector City Editor

FARMVILLE — Next time you stop to wind your watch, think of Paul Vaughn and his son Jimmy of 604 Church Street in Farmville.

When timepiece winding time comes in the Vaughn household either the father or son spends an hour and 35 minutes at the steady work of tightening springs. It isn't a matter of winding one watch for the pair, however. The Vaughns spend that time winding some sixty odd clocks which they have acquired and placed in working condition.

To their advantage in keeping the ancient clocks running is the fact that all the timepieces will run for eight days on one winding, although actually they are wound every seven days.

While getting the correct time around the Vaughn household is no problem, that is not the reason the father-son team began their hobby of collecting old clocks.

Began Two Years Ago
It all began about two years ago when young Jimmy Vaughn, now 15 years old, visited relatives in Virginia. While he was in the old Dominion state, an aunt presented him with an old clock which had long since ceased to run.

Jimmy returned to Farmville with the time piece and he and his father carried it to a Greenville jeweler for repairs. The jeweler placed the clock in good running order but when the Vaughns eyed the bill of $20 that they received for repairs they wondered if they could not repair old clocks on their own.

Thus they began collecting the old timepieces which were soon to line the walls of their home. The elder Vaughn is a section foreman with the State Highway Commission and his job calls for him to travel a great deal in this area. He says the clocks might be found anywhere, abandoned in old pack-houses or rusting in attics of country homes. One group of the old clocks were obtained when a jeweler went out of business.

When the Vaughns obtain an old clock, many of which are hand carved, the timepieces are usually long past working. The wood work has generally turned black from years' accumulation of dust and dirt, the mechanical portion has generally rusted, and the face and glass front are blackened with age.

The father and son, who spend virtually all their spare time in the work shop of their home, completely strip the timepieces to begin the tedious task of re-working the antique clocks.

Pint of Paint Remover
Vaughn says that a pint of paint remover—at 70 cents—is required to remove the accumulation of varnish and dirt from the woodwork. When that job is finally completed, the cleaned hand-carved wood is given a new coat of varnish and is ready once again for the installation of the mechanism.

The clock works in the meantime have undergone a complete overhaul, with worn gears being replaced with spare parts which have been collected during the past two years.

Spare parts must be obtained from other clocks, Vaughn says, since new parts for the timepieces are no longer available. The only parts which he has been able to obtain are pendulum rods which, he says, he orders from a Richmond jeweler.

And soon even those will be unobtainable since the jeweler has informed him that as soon as present stocks are exhausted no more can be obtained.

That will not prove a problem to the Vaughns however, since they can make their own pendulum rods, from plain metal rods and double-edge razor blades.

Takes Two Rooms
The hobby has grown to such proportions that it has taken over two rooms of the Vaughn home. One of the rooms is used for a workshop by the pair and the second is lined with the rebuilt clocks.

Sixty clocks in one room sounds roughly, as Vaughn says, "like hail on a tin roof." But even that is quiet compared to the hours and half hours when the timepieces begin their chorus of chimes to signal the time.

Amazingly the ticking and chiming does not interfere with sleep in the Vaughn household and the elder Vaughn says that by closing the doors to the room the remainder of the house is kept relatively quiet.

So fascinating has the hobby become to the pair, that Jimmy and his father spend virtually every afternoon and evening in their workshop repairing the newly-acquired timepieces. In addition, the elder Vaughn uses vacation time from his state job to work at his hobby.

The clocks have completely replaced a former love for fishing with the father Vaughn and for Jimmy there is nothing quite so interesting.

"He has always been interested in mechanical things," says Mrs. Vaughn of her son. "Even when he was younger he wanted screwdrivers and other tools rather than toys."

Mrs. Vaughn, incidentally, has not shared her husband's and son's interest in re-paring-of-clocks. "My job," she says, "is to keep food on the table."

100 Years Old
One of the clocks owned by the pair was said to have hung in an ancient court house in which there were no electric lights. Age of the time piece was estimated at "over 100 years" by Vaughn. In fact he believes all the clocks which he possesses are beyond the one-hundred-year mark, although there is no accurate way of determining the age.

The Vaughns have one clock which not only gives the hours, minutes and seconds but two cylinders also indicate the month and day. That one is still being repaired, however. Also included in the collection are a couple of clocks with cast iron cases and several twin clocks.

An ample supply of old clocks always seems to be on hand for repair by the tireless pair. At present they have over a dozen awaiting the rebuilding job and Vaughn says the number has been cut considerably recently.

In their hunts for old time pieces the Vaughns run across other antiques also and some of them have been repaired and placed on display in the room with the clocks.

Included is an old organ which came from the Vaughn home in Murfreesboro. It is over 100 years old and is still in good shape as Mrs. Vaughn demonstrated by playing a few notes.

Also included in the collection is an old spool desk which in years gone by was used for storage of spools of threads in a store. That was picked up in Falkland, cleaned and varnished.

Old Spinning Wheel
An old spinning wheel handed down from Vaughn's great-great-grandmother sits in the center of the room. That, too has been repaired. Also included is a hall stand, an ancient coffee grinder, and an old brandy jug which dates back to Civil War days.

Collection of such antiques brings about some interesting incidents for the Vaughns.

Hanging on the wall of the living room is an old mirror which, Mrs. Vaughn says she bought from a Negro woman in Virginia. Mrs. Vaughn notes that she had hidden by the woman's house several times and seen the old mirror hanging on the back porch of the dwelling. Finally one day she stopped and asked the woman if she would sell the mirror.

"The Lord must have sent you," the woman replied. "I've been sick and I need the money."

Thus another antique was added to the Vaughn collection.

Pictured above is one corner of the room in which Paul Vaughn and his son, Jimmy, keep their collection of some 60 clocks. All the timepieces shown above were completely reworked by the pair. Woodwork was cleaned and varnished and the mechanism repaired and placed in good working order. (Reflector Photos by Alvin Taylor).

This ancient organ came from the Vaughn homeplace in Murfreesboro and is said to be over a hundred years old. It was in relatively good shape when it was brought to Farmville and little repair was needed. The organ is on display in the room along with the Vaughn's clock collection.

Fifteen-year-old Jimmy Vaughn is pictured above as he repairs a clock mechanism at his bench in the work room of the Vaughn home. The Vaughns keep a large number of spare parts, gathered from discarded clocks, for use in their work of rebuilding the antique timepieces.

Paul Vaughn holds an old coffee grinder which he picked up in his quest for old clocks. The grinder is one of a number of antiques which the Vaughns have found as they looked for old clocks.

The above clock not only gives the time of day but also the month and day of the week. The two cylinders in the lower portion give that information. A second face also fits over the bottom half indicating seconds.

Paul Vaughn stands beside one of the clocks on which he recently completed repairs. Many of the timepieces in the collection are said to be hand-carved and designs on the glass front hand-painted.

Strike Is Strangling Harlan

HARLAN, Ky. (AP)—This community's economic heart died March 14.

The Louisville & Nashville Railroad was struck that day and one of the first casualties was Harlan County's 6,500 coal miners.

All are out of work. They're worried; the operators are worried; and some businessmen are preparing for a slump.

Since he is losing $18.75 a day in wages, the miner must fall back on unemployment compensation—$28 a week. Before the strike the county's average claim load was about 2,000 cases a month. Now it is four times greater.

Most of the coal firms are helping by extending credit to their men at the company stores. Some permit unlimited credit; others $4-$5 a day.

Privately, some miners will admit their sympathy lies with the strikers. When the coal mines were strike-bound during the war years, it was the railroader who suffered.

What about the miner's boss? "Until March, our picture looked better than it had for two or three years," says George S. Ward, secretary of the Harlan County Coal Operators Assn.

"We had prospects of increased shipments to the Great Lakes but the strike has gone on so long, some firms have lost these orders."

afraid customers will turn to another field next year. Time is also a factor. The railroad plans a 35 cent a ton rate increase on steam (fine) coal on June 20 and most operators want to get their orders filled before then.

Ward says, however, the "frame of mind here isn't as low as it was in February, 1954, when there were no coal orders."

Some merchants disagree. Their customers come from the 4,786 residents here and the 65,000 in the county. "Up until two weeks ago," said one, "optimism was high and people continued to trade because they expected the strike to be settled."

Today, he continued, "people are holding on to what little they've got until work starts again."

Coming Out Party

DESERT PARTY. By truck and auto, the Apaches come from all parts of the Arizona reservation to attend Little Cornflower's debut.

1. Little Cornflower is blessed by the "shaman," or medicine man. Her garment has been rubbed with yellow ochre, for to the Apaches yellow symbolizes fertility and life.

2. Tribeswoman sprinkles pollen, another symbol of life and fertility, on Little Cornflower's head, while her sponsor, right, stands beside her. Pollen is used in all Apache ceremonials. It's gathered in fall, then left to dry.

An Apache Indian girl has a ritual party when she comes of age. The rites, carried out by the Apaches since time immemorial, stem from legends of the White Painted Woman, an Apache goddess.

On the Apache Indian reservation north of Tucson, Ariz., 13-year-old Little Cornflower made her debut recently. It was a grand four-day affair under bright desert skies. Whole families bearing gifts of food came from all over the reservation to attend the ceremony. There, in Grandma's heirloom beaded buckskin blouse, Little Cornflower, her face smeared with white clay, went through the various rites. She was blessed by the "shaman," or medicine man, her hair was sprinkled with pollen, the symbol of fertility, she knelt on the sacred white deer rug, and everywhere she went she was accompanied by her sponsor, a woman appointed by her family, and who had trained her in the rituals for many months. The rites were followed by dancing to the beat of tom-toms and a feast of barbecued beef, squaw bread, fruit, beans and black coffee.

3. She kneels on sacred white deer rug. According to custom, rug must be skin of four-year-old black tailed buck.

4. Apache babies, strapped to their mothers' backs, are not able to get peek at ceremony.

5. Native drummers and singers provide the music for the tribal dances that follow. Here two beat their tom-toms as another one sings.

6. Wearing colorful headdresses and carrying yucca wands, Crown Dancers put on big show for guests. Dancers impersonate supernatural beings who live in the mountains.

7. Food in cartons and baskets is laid out for all to see—and eat. Little Cornflower's papa has provided some of it; guests have donated the rest.

8. At end of ceremony, young brave steps up to Little Cornflower. She has now come of age.

Take MY PLACE

By FRANCES SARAH MOORE

CHAPTER EIGHTEEN
Judith Kennedy came in, hung her coat in her hall closet and went into the living room, fluffing tawny hair off her temples with her hands.

Bill kissed her. She twisted her mouth away. "Darling! I am late with dinner, and rehearsal night, too. Eric is such a crackpot about punctuality. I wonder why he didn't call it off tonight with the town coated in ice and Christmas on us. I'll do the steak and French fry potatoes if you'll toss the salad."

Her trailing words, the clatter of saucers and rattle of cupboard doors swept across Bill's thoughts furrowingly. He rubbed at the tiny cleft between his eyes. Probably her ducking his kiss pre-tended nothing. It was this morning's unexpected encounter with Mrs. Ireland, downtown that had thrown him into this state of unrest over the ghost he thought he had laid. They had talked, or, rather, she had. Disconcertingly, about Jarvis. "He is alive," Bill Moore, where I know." She actually had said that, her voice vibrantly but restrained and so quietly positive that a shiver had zinged down Bill's spine. It was haywire. The guy dead and buried somewhere in Korea, and that undimmed belief in an old woman's eyes. She had almost convinced him. A thought had wheeled through his mind. "If she is right, if Jarvis comes back—then I'll know. I'll know beyond any doubt if Judith is still in love with him." He broke the thought angrily. The old woman was daffy. What she'd said in her rational conversational tone was not only distressing; it was shocking. But, distressingly Bill knew that the thin resurgence of doubt within himself was even more shocking.

In the kitchen Judith said over her shoulder, "I saw Kay Ireland downtown. We had tea."
"Oh?"
"She said something Bill-up-setting."
"Don't tell me she thinks Jarvis is still alive!"
"Heavens, no. Doesn't old Mrs. Ireland give you the creeps? No, Kay said she thinks we ought to stop pairing Eric and Landon off, the way everyone's been doing, like a married couple. She says it is unfair."

"Unfair to whom?"
"Landon."
"Well, that's a new slant," was Bill's comment.
Judith went back in her mind over the conversation with Kay, surprised at recalling with clarity Kay's intensity and earnestness; surprised, also, at discovering by the end of their talk that her dislike of Kay had abated considerably.

"No one seems to consider Landon at all," Kay had said almost accusingly. "All of us—knocking ourselves out being helpful to Maggie and Eric—and who gives a passing thought to Landon? Who cares what at this is doing to her?"
"What is it doing to her?"
"She is in love with Eric."
Judith's mouth dropped open. "You are out of your mind."
Kay moved her shoulders faintly.

Judith recovered her breath. "I don't believe it. Landon isn't in love—not with Eric, anyway. She is not a husband-snatcher. And Maggie's husband!" She almost laughed at something so highly improbable it was fantastic. "Oh, no."
"Kay said, 'I don't think that Landon is altogether to blame. Naturally she finds Eric attractive. I find him attractive, too. Any woman would. Being his sister-in-law doesn't give Landon any special immunity to his charm. Besides, she is living Maggie's life temporarily. Aren't the emotional hazards obvious—for a girl as young and impressionable as Landon?"

"Perfectly obvious, now you have mentioned it." Dryly. "And now that's said, why not get a step further. Eric could be tangling with a hazard or two of his own."
"No. Not possibly." Kay shook her head. "He's not so young. And his love for Maggie is an in-solator."

"What about Landon's love for Maggie?" Judith countered. "Kay, I have known her all her life. Landon would do more for her than with Maggie's husband than she'd be or cheat or steal."
"You don't pick the person you fall in love with," Kay said quietly.

Judith looked at her. There was no prying curiosity, no maliciousness behind this, just kindness. "You like Landon, don't you?"
"Yes I do. I'd like to be her friend. She won't let me, though."
Now, leaning under the steaks, Judith remembered her "innocent little conspiracy" with Laurie Nichols. Innocent as a stick of dynamite, she thought; liable to blow up in our faces.

"Bill," she said, "I've got myself into a slight quandary."
Bill caught the grave, at-a-loss tone. For one she listening to the bowl of greens he was staring into was an abyss holding nothing but darkness. Then he looked up. "It might not be so bad if you tell me about it."
So she told him; about her talk with Laurie on the way home; about her own, and that undimmed belief in an old woman's eyes. She had almost convinced him. A thought had wheeled through his mind. "If she is right, if Jarvis comes back—then I'll know. I'll know beyond any doubt if Judith is still in love with him." He broke the thought angrily. The old woman was daffy. What she'd said in her rational conversational tone was not only distressing; it was shocking. But, distressingly Bill knew that the thin resurgence of doubt within himself was even more shocking.

In the kitchen Judith said over her shoulder, "I saw Kay Ireland downtown. We had tea."
"Oh?"
"She said something Bill-up-setting."
"Don't tell me she thinks Jarvis is still alive!"
"Heavens, no. Doesn't old Mrs. Ireland give you the creeps? No, Kay said she thinks we ought to stop pairing Eric and Landon off, the way everyone's been doing, like a married couple. She says it is unfair."

"Unfair to whom?"
"Landon."
"Well, that's a new slant," was Bill's comment.
Judith went back in her mind over the conversation with Kay, surprised at recalling with clarity Kay's intensity and earnestness; surprised, also, at discovering by the end of their talk that her dislike of Kay had abated considerably.

"No one seems to consider Landon at all," Kay had said almost accusingly. "All of us—knocking ourselves out being helpful to Maggie and Eric—and who gives a passing thought to Landon? Who cares what at this is doing to her?"
"What is it doing to her?"
"She is in love with Eric."
Judith's mouth dropped open. "You are out of your mind."
Kay moved her shoulders faintly.

Judith recovered her breath. "I don't believe it. Landon isn't in love—not with Eric, anyway. She is not a husband-snatcher. And Maggie's husband!" She almost laughed at something so highly improbable it was fantastic. "Oh, no."
"Kay said, 'I don't think that Landon is altogether to blame. Naturally she finds Eric attractive. I find him attractive, too. Any woman would. ## STAIRWAY TO GOD

Since the beginning of time, man has recognized the need for divine worship. He has ever sought a stairway to God. For nearly two thousand years the Christian religion has pointed man to such a stairway. And through the centuries millions have climbed it. But millions have not! And the reason they have not is the most serious problem that faces the Church and the world today: • You see, the only stairway to God is FAITH IN JESUS CHRIST, HIS SON. And Faith is not something which men can possess collectively, as all Americans possess freedom. Faith is something we can only possess individually like life itself. The man who lacks it is dead, even though millions around him possess it. • The faith of your wife, or your father, or your son, or your nation is not—for you—a stairway to God. Christ has given you the Church to plant and cultivate faith in your heart. But the Church must have your heart—in person!

THE CHURCH FOR ALL... ALL FOR THE CHURCH
The Church is the greatest factor on earth for the building of character and good citizenship. It is a storehouse of spiritual values. Without a strong Church, neither democracy nor civilization can survive. There are four sound reasons why every person should attend services regularly and support the Church. They are: (1) For his own sake. (2) For his children's sake. (3) For the sake of his community and nation. (4) For the sake of the Church itself, which needs his moral and material support. Plan to go to church regularly and read your Bible daily.

It was almost inevitable that sooner or later East Carolina would gain the dubious distinction of being a member of the panty-raided set of institutions of higher

A Million Saved Means A Million Less In Taxes

There was a most encouraging development in Raleigh this week with the announcement of the revised estimate of the new revenue which will be needed to operate the state for the coming biennium.

For the second time the amount of new revenue anticipated to meet the needs was reduced. When the first revision was announced in March, it was encouraging that state budget officials boosted their estimates of the amount of revenue current tax schedules would bring in during the coming biennium. That indicated carefully calculated predictions that the state's economy would continue on the upward trend during the biennium.

This latest revision announced this week as based on an entirely different analysis. It said that tight-fisted economy measures which have been in operation in state government will result in a savings of four million dollars during the current biennium which ends June 30. The economy program is likewise expected to result in the saving of another four million dollars during the coming biennium.

Although there is constant conversation about economy in government, there seldom appear practical economy measures which really provide less costly operations while not curtailing services to the people served by the government. The fact that North Carolina's economy program has borne results in the past two years and is expected to provide equal savings in the next two years is most encouraging.

We trust legislators and other state officials will continue to give sufficient study to practical methods of economizing on government operations while they seek means to provide the revenue for additional facilities and services which are constantly in demand.

Strength for the Day

PLAY BOTH SIDES OF THE RECORD
If you want to whittle yourself down to size in your own estimation, just begin making a list of the weaknesses and vices to which you are addicted and then consider the strident excuses you can make for everyone of these weaknesses.

You are not lazy; you just recognize the fact that in this world of tension people have to have some relaxation. Furthermore, what's the use of working so hard when, if you make a little money, you only have to send it down to Washington anyway? That bad temper of yours—it is not a bad temper, of course, but just the heaping of righteous indignation upon the heads of stupid and evil people who are always under foot. "Me-elfish? Why brother, I am only looking out for Number 1, and if you don't do that you soon end in the ash can." "Sure, I take a drink once in a while, but with me it's medicine. After a hard day at the office, I just have to have some kind of sedative or I'd be jittery all evening and couldn't get to sleep at night."

So the record keeps on playing, and when it is finished, there is the same old song on the other side of the record, and there are a dozen or a hundred records just like it. If we don't object to having them run off in our hearing.

It is probably not an exaggeration to say that everyone of us can excuse every weakness he has and find it in a way that will convince him, even if it convinces nobody else.

Financing Of Social Security

Every Saturday, Mr. Tucker answers readers' questions of general interest on national and international politics and personalities. Questions may be sent to him at 7008 Hillcrest Place, Chevy Chase, Md.

WASHINGTON—"Will you tell us," asks H.C.B. of Santa Cruz, Calif., and many other readers, "under what authority the Treasury can 'borrow' from the Social Security fund and leave only I. O. U.'s. Will you please publish all the facts on S. S."

"How much has gone in, how much has been paid out, how much remains in cash or I. O. U.'s? Social Security workers, in speaking before union and consumers' groups, cannot or will not answer these questions except to say that, if not another dollar went in, there is enough to pay out at the present rate of disbursement for five years."

Answer: The basic Social Security Act permits the government to use these payments—or taxes—for financing routine operations. In their place, the Treasury contributes Federal securities to the fund.

SOCIAL SECURITY OPERATION—This is the most common complaint against the operation of the system, with critics maintaining that it amounts to double taxation. That is, a worker first pays his withdrawal taxes, and then must pay taxes to finance the invested securities.

Social Security and Treasury officials make light of this argument. If current payments were not used to pay current expenditures, they say, today's taxes would be higher than they are now. According to this thesis, it is only a bookkeeping arrangement.

Obviously, the government cannot simply keep that cash in a strongbox, earning no interest. And it cannot, with propriety, invest such a large sum in private industry without becoming the controlling and dictatorial owner.

PERTINENT FIGURES—Here are further pertinent details on the finances and operations of the Social Security system:

learning.

It happened sooner than the majority of the faculty, students, alumni and supporters of the college hoped for. It happened later than many expected.

Unfortunately as it is, East Carolina's student body, in the minds of many people throughout the state, will be included in the ever-expanding group of "panty-raiders." Particularly is this unfortunate in that the vast majority of the student body had no part in the raids themselves. The majority of the students were spectators to the first round about 10 o'clock Thursday night, while a relative handful of the students participated in the misbehavior. Worse still, there were a few hotheads who were not included in or not satisfied with the first fiasco of the evening and took it upon themselves to stage a second outbreak in the wee hours of the morning after the dormitories were closed and the campus had quieted down.

It is bad enough that the reputation of the college and its student body has been damaged by the misbehavior of a few students Thursday night. But the outcome of the panty raids could have been much worse. The demonstrations at times approached the proportions of mob action which is bad in any case. Under such circumstances raiders, student spectators, and officers seeking to preserve the peace could have been injured. Severe property damage to college buildings could have been caused.

Although the beginning of Thursday night's disturbance on the local college campus has been attributed to visiting Guilford College baseball players, that fact in itself does not absolve East Carolina students for their part in the first raid, or their action in staging a second.

Now that East Carolina has had its panty raid, we trust the entire student body has it out of their system and there will be no recurrence of the spectacle.

The Stubborn Stand Appears To Have Won

After being alternately approved and disapproved, it appears now the proposed tobacco tax will not pass the current session of the General Assembly.

The Reflector attributes the failure of the tax to win approval to the diligent fight which has been waged in committee and behind the scenes by senators and representatives from the tobacco producing areas.

Admittedly these legislators who have fought the tobacco tax all the way have been up against heavy odds. Even some of the legislators from tobacco counties, who by all rights should have opposed the measure, have been big guns in trying to get the tax adopted.

Of course the tobacco tax may be written into law yet, but we seriously doubt it.

Somebody Told Me

'I Love You', Except When....

If you want to know what impresses a child, try the Do-you-love-me test. I tried it on the four and a half year old daughter Nancy the other day.

"Do you love me?"
"Yes," she said, and then she puffed her cheeks over her face. "Except not every day," she continued, "almost every day but not every day."

"Why don't you love me on certain days?"
"Don't you remember that day you spanked me?"

"Oh, brother! One or two spankings in four and a half years and she remembers every lick—all three of 'em!"
"How about all the rest of the days?" I continued.

"Well, don't you remember the time Mother gave me something that you wouldn't give me?" I had to confess that I didn't remember it. But the point is that she did. It's the memory of a child that's almost alarming. The idea of a spanking, you want remembered, but not the lack of love because of it!

Quite often Nancy wants me to lie down with her at night. And quite often I'm pressed for time; something important is coming up—you know, like Studio One.

So I say to Nancy, "I have to go shave (the truth) and I'll come back when I'm finished if you want me to." That "if" is always on there, but I know she'll be asleep before I finish shaving.

When I pulled that deal the other night she said, "But every time you say that you don't come back." When she starts remembering what I do wrong in her sleep that's too much!

And then there are times when Wife Rachel and I want to discuss something like a panty raid. Can't be done these days. And when we mention something about someone getting in trouble, Nancy wants to know all about it. W.R. picked this one up from her parents, "Oh, that's just somebody out in the country."

Let's face it; we have to try our level best to be perfect if we're going to succeed as parents. Nothing can be pulled over the eyes of a four-year-old. Their memory is too good and the negative things make a lasting impression.

The understatement of the year: the responsibility of parenthood is the world's greatest.

And I thank you.

What Other Editors Are Thinking

IF SERVICES ARE MAINTAINED (Wilson Times)
Governor Hodges says that the citizens of North Carolina are willing to pay the taxes provided that the services of the state are maintained.

He says that in his trips around the state, he finds the average citizen far more interested in services than in taxes. By that the governor doesn't mean that the average citizen is cheerful about paying taxes. He does mean that if it comes to the point of either raising taxes or cutting services, the citizens prefer the former.

It is safe to say that once a service is given to the people, it is almost impossible to abandon it in later years. People become accustomed to some plan, and once it is used, then in a sense it is likely to become permanent. For that reason we believe that the Governor is finding the tempo of the people to be in the direction he claims. Once services are started, it is most difficult to discontinue them. We can talk all we want to about cutting services, but in this modern time that just doesn't happen.

The very moment we speak of discontinuing one service, we'll get far more opposition than we will when we talk of one tax approach. And what services, if any, would one propose that the state discontinue?

There is one thought in mind now, and it has been there all along. The position the state of North Carolina finds itself in now is not one of reducing services but one of finding new taxes so that present services can be maintained at least on the present level.

If it should so happen that additional services are started this year, then by next year the people will want these new services maintained.

So in our thinking there is only one approach. That is to find ways and means of keeping up services. The people will stand for nothing else. No one wants to be taxed, and those yelling for services will yell also at the new taxes. But when it comes to the choice of no new taxes or cutting services, the new taxes will be louder if the legislature tries to cut services.

So in the final analysis the legislature is faced with only one clear cut choice—raise taxes so present services can remain.

Work For Prisoners Poses Problem For Commission

By LYNN NISBET
PRISONERS—The acute problem of providing employment for prisoners by which they can earn their keep and not compete too much with free labor was pointed up at the highway commission meeting Thursday. Commissioner Emmett Winslow of the first division started the discussion when he asked if he could get relief from the condition of having to house and feed one-third more prisoners than he could provide road work for.

Every other commissioner chimed in with comparable reports, and Prison Director W.F. Bailey stated that the situation is statewide, and applies to other than highway work. Chairman Graham said the prison department has at least 2,000 men who could well be spared from current road work. (Prison population now stands at about 10,200—up 2,000 from the war time low, but more than 1,000 below the peak population of the late 30's.)

Beginning July 1 the pay scale charged against the highway fund for road working prisoners will be raised from the prevailing $3.60 per day to $4.50. That will have the effect of less bookkeeping deficit in maintenance of the prison, but heavier deficit in productive road work. The excess number of men assigned to specific road jobs not only runs up the cost in per diem pay, but it requires more money for transportation and results in less effective work because the men get in each other's way. It is not unusual to have a full squad of 12 men under one guard assigned to clean a ditch when six or eight men could do the job much more efficiently.

Chairman Graham said that in order to save money on guard salaries, oversize squads have been formed and some prisoners advanced too rapidly to honor grade, resulting in larger percentage of escapes.

EMPLOYMENT—Director Bailey said he and the Prison Advisory Council are seeking other employment for prisoners, but continuously run into the problem of no money to provide industrial facilities, or statutory provisions against hiring prisoners to private employers or competition with products of outside free enterprise.

Lack of planning in the past is largely responsible for the present situation. The director and the council are trying now to look ahead to the prospect of 12,000 to 15,000 prisoners within the next ten years.

MECHANIZATION—Development of machines has affected prisoner employment to far greater degree than free labor. Huge bulldozers, heavy duty trucks with dirt loading attachments, power ditch diggers and shoulder scrapers, enable three to five men to do more work with hand shovels, drag pans and wheelbarrows. It was suggested, half facetiously and half seriously, that it might become advisable to surrender the machines—many of which are on rental basis—and return to the manpower operations.

In that connection is recalled comments of the late Max Gardner, making the principal address at the dedication of the Carolina Power & Light Company's Tillery dam in 1927. He had just returned from a visit to Italy and was profuse in his praise of Mussolini's program for keeping citizens gainfully employed instead of resorting to big machines. Italians then were prosperous and happy. So were most other Europeans and North Carolinians. The tragic events of the next succeeding five to fifteen years could not be forecast or imagined. (Moral: Progress is never served by going backwards.)

The folks responsible for the North Carolina prison system are working on the philosophy that made-work solely for the sake of making work without efficient production is not sound economy.

ORDINANCES—Another matter of fundamental importance was given attention at Thursday's highway meeting. That is the overall policy of State agencies other than the General Assembly having authority to enact ordinances, the violation of which constitutes a crime. The State Highway and Public Works Commission is one a dozen or more agencies clothed with that delegated authority.

The commission at its April meeting somewhat casually adopted resolutions repealing all speed zone ordinances then in effect and reenacted a flock of new zoning regulations. Brooks Peters, general counsel for the commission, feared the informality of that action was not commensurate with the importance of the matter. He re-submitted formal ordinances couched in legal terms for re-enactment.

Business Today

Prosperity Questions

As the second half of the year approaches, economic thinking seems to be dividing sharply. Some observers believe that the boom will surely last the rest of the year; others say it simply can't.

Harlow H. Curtice, General Motors president says that with labor peace the auto industry can make and sell 7,500,000 cars this year—and with GM wages averaging $103.79 a week and Ford's averaging $106.67, that makes a downturn seem impossible this year.

Steel mills report heavy orders for the third quarter; the number of housing starts shows no weakness in home building, and outstanding contracts for construction are at record levels.

The Census Bureau reports that state and municipal governments are planning $27.7 billion in funds for them.

On the other hand, V. Lewis Bassie, University of Illinois economist, says that "inevitable inventory and seasonal cutbacks in auto production in the latter half of this year may be only the beginning of a decline from today's all-time high." He also says that the upward movement of income is unlikely to continue next year, that the stock market will move down with the economy and that the auto market is nearing saturation.

A.W. Zelonek, a private economist who has been usually correct in forecasts, holds that "the increase for the first six months, in relation to 1954 will be greater than during the final six months, especially with the prospects of some lead-in in the third quarter."

And Humphrey B. Neill, the head of the "contrarian school" of economic thinking, laments that: "If 'everyone' knows that (1) auto sales cannot continue the present pace; that (2) the building of houses is being overdone; and (3) that installment and credit business is being overextended—if everybody knows this cannot go on, where does it leave us contrarians?"

WE'LL CIVILIZE THE BRITISH YET!
Now it's an openers across the sea.

Lady Dorothy Haworth, an official of the Women's Institute of Cheshire, England, when on a recent lecture tour here, was heard to murmur that the British have nothing like the streamlined, wall-type can openers found in America. So quick like a bunny (or, perhaps a fox) the Can Manufacturers Institute arranged to send a collection of American can openers to the women of Cheshire. By no coincidence at all, they will arrive before May 1, the start of National Can Opener Week in the United States.

CUSTOMERS SUCCEED AS OWN SALESPERSONS

And now about a different kind of selling—

"Self-selecting selling" works in the small leather-goods field, a test (By Buxton, Inc.) indicates. In self-selection selling, by the way, neither shoppers nor salespersons serve themselves; the idea is that the shopper selects the merchandise.

The manufacturer of billfolds, purses, etc., who made this test, put self-selection showcases in 500 stores. During the past year, it found sales increased 40 to 60 per cent. A Cincinnati department store reported a rise of 318 per cent; a Richmond, Va., store, 286 per cent; a Memphis store, 233 per cent; and a Minneapolis store, 203 per cent.

Six-Ulcer Man Is Resurrected

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK (AP)—The tired businessman might prolong his health and life if he really learned to think of his job in terms of romance rather than work.

"I have been resurrected by this idea," said Harvey Greenspan, a former six-ulcer man.

At 42 Greenspan, a financial genius, cashed in his chips, figuring he would soon die. Now at 61 he has chipped in his cash—some $400,000—to pioneer in the marketing of a new vitamin-rich fruit juice concentrate made from a little-known Puerto Rican cherry called the acerola.

"It is my latest and maybe my last romance," he said cheerfully during a visit here. "But however it turns out, it is more fun than buying chorus girls jewelry. I don't want that kind of romance."

Greenspan learned the bitter way the dolor that can come from pursuing the dollar too hard for its own sake.

He worked his way through Columbia University here, specializing in business law. At 30 he had his own financial firm. For the next dozen years he worked himself ragged flitting back and forth across the country buying, reorganizing and selling corporations. One day in 1936 he collapsed. In addition to wealth he had piled up six king-size ulcers.

"I had more ulcers than freckles," he recalled. "A doctor told me that if I didn't undergo an operation for the removal of my stomach I'd die."

Greenspan thought it over and decided he'd rather die than part with his stomach. He sold out his business, interests and moved to Florida, figuring "I might as well be warm while I was dying."

"I decided I'd better do all the things I'd wanted to do and hadn't found time. One thing I'd always wanted was a home of my own on an island. I told an architect to build me one, and he was quick about it. He did it and I furnished it just the way I thought it should be.

"I took good care of my ulcers. For two years I did nothing but loaf and fish. Then I began to fear I'd die of boredom."

"All of us have a hidden romance in our souls. When you are out of circulation, this piles up on you. During those two years I decided that business really was my romance in life, but I hadn't been looking at it from that angle.

"I swore that if I ever got well, I'd be the busiest—and happiest—man in 48 states. And I am."

Greenspan never fully conquered all his ulcers but, as he says, "We worked out an agreement so we'd be able to get along together on a basis of mutual respect."

In a few years Greenspan became a citrus magnate. In keeping with his new philosophy, his office in his Lakeland, Fla., canning plant is in a kitchen, where he directs operations from a comfortable armchair. The telephone is in the next room.

"In 1949 while developing a citrus concentrate that could be taken by children allergic to orange juice, he conferred with Dr. James R. Wilson of the American Medical Assn. in Chicago. During the conversation Dr. Wilson, a nutritionist, mentioned that the Puerto Rican acerola was up to 80 times as rich in vitamin C as orange juice, and should prove a good natural source of this vital element for undernourished children.

"It should become a major industry in Puerto Rico and have a big market in Europe," he said. "Other producers are now entering the field. Maybe it's true that all pioneers die broke—but I've had a wonderful romance."

Those who know Greenspan best, however, doubt that he will ever be without a smile, an ulcer—or money in the bank.

Tobacco Variety 'Coker 139' Raises Hopes Of Even Greater Crop Yield

John Moye, who farms on the U. S. 264 by-pass, holds some tobacco plants of the new Coker's 139 variety. Moye and other Pitt County farmers are planting the new variety for the first time this year in hopes it will prove more productive than present varieties including the popular Dixie 101.

A new tobacco variety is making its debut on Pitt County farms this year for the first time giving what farmers hope will be a higher yield than the presently popular Dixie Bright 101.

Developers of the new variety, Coker's 139, are claiming 25 per cent greater yield over present varieties on the basis of their growing tests.

One Pitt County farmer who is using the new variety is John Moye who farms on the U. S. 264 by-pass. Moye says he is planting his entire 40 acre tobacco allotment in the new variety this year.

He says the variety is supposed to yield 28 to 32 leaves per stalk and will top out approximately shoulder high. Leaves on the stalks should be from one inch to one and a half inches apart and there should be no bottom suckers and only moderate top suckers on the stalks.

The new variety is black shank resistant and perhaps moderately resistant to Granville Wilt.

Developers of the new tobacco variety, Coker's Pedigreed Seed Company of Hartsville, South Carolina, claim the new tobacco plant is of the broad leaf type with moderately low nicotine content of about the same level as Golden Cure and Dixie Bright 101.

They say it is easy to cure as its Golden Cure parent.

It is compact, the developers say, with leaves closely spaced on the stalk.

Blooming for the new tobacco should be medium to late and it does not button or bloom prematurely under adverse weather conditions.

Coker's claims good yields with good quality acceptable to manufacturers for cigarette production.

They also say it is adaptable to wide range of soil and climatic conditions and produces exceptionally well on either diseased soil or disease free soil.

North Carolina Extension service is remaining mum on the new variety. Assistant County Agent Sam Weeks says the Extension service has made no recommendations on the variety pending the results of variety tests and use of the tobacco by farmers in the tobacco growing area.

Drainage Is Recovering Poor Fields

By W. CONNOR EAGLES
Pitt County Soil Conservationist
Pitt County farmers installed 383,567 feet of farm drain tile in wet, poorly drained fields on their farms in 1954. This is more than twice the best previous year's record and may be a county record for the state.

Putting it a little differently, this is more than 72 miles of drain tile. This is enough tile so that if laid from Grifton in the extreme south of the county, it would reach all the way to Bethel in the northern part, back again to Grifton, and then on up the road to Winterville. It would cross the county from north to south nearly two and one-half times.

It is estimated that this tile installed cost an average of 30c per foot, or a total in excess of $115,000. These figures are given so that the reader may realize something of the importance our farmers attach to tile draining wet, poorly drained soils.

They are progressive enough to want to drain the wet fields so as to more profitably cultivate them. But more particularly are they looking for enough suitable land for properly rotating their tobacco fields.

One farmer Ichabod Allen, of Farmville, stated it rather quaintly but well when he said, "I want the soil conservation man to come and make me enough tobacco soil so that I may properly rotate my tobacco against the ravages of the dreaded Black Shank disease." And that is virtually what is done when such soils as Lynchburg and Dunbar are tile-drained.

This tremendous record could not have been established without the great interest of our farmers in the wet land problem and the everlasting team work of our various agricultural agencies in helping our Soil Conservation District attack the problem. There were the County Agents and the Vocational Agriculture teachers in particular helping to stir up the interest of our people. There was the county ASC committee lending encouragement and real financial assistance in the ACP program. There was the Farm Bureau, and there were the local district supervisors leading the way; also the SCS technicians giving needed technical advice and assistance.

This fine piece of work could not have been achieved had it not been for the manner in which the farmers who make up the Pitt-Greene Tile Drainage Corporation responded when called upon for the purchase of a second tile trenching machine. How to finance this venture posed quite a problem until our local Farm Bureau came forward with the offer of a loan. This loan is being paid back in its entirety.

Some Changes In Popular Machine

This tobacco harvester, though similar to a model brought out last year, has added advantages in that it has room for additional loopers to aid in the harvesting of heavy tobacco. Machinery advances such as this have meant much to rural residents.

Two-Way Hit By Lightning Bolt

PORTLAND Oreg. (AP)—An explosion in an electric substation caused by lightning blew Harold Judd of Vancouver, Wash., 25 feet across a room and out the door. After he counted his bruises and scratches — not serious — he found his car, outside the building, had been damaged to the extent of $100.

New Owners Are Moving Homes Away From Town

POLEY, Fla. (AP)—At the end of next summer the only buildings left here will be a church, post-office, schoolhouse and a couple of stores and service stations.

No homes.

Foley is 26 years old and at one time had a population of about 1,600 in 200-odd homes. The Buckeye Cellulose Corp. bought the townsite and other properties and built a huge pulp mill which went into operation last year. Then it began selling the home to its employees on condition they find new sites for them.

Most of the houses are being moved to nearby Perry but some are being taken farther away.

What will happen to the post-office church and other structures remaining is still a question. The company hasn't said what it plans to do with the Foley townsite.

Suspect Driver Had Explanation

DES MOINES (AP)—Every conservation warden knows how a poacher goes about his business of stealing the public's game: He drives slowly along the road in game country, stopping occasionally to peer about; car doors open stealthily and close again, the car creeps on.

An air-borne warden spotted just such behavior from his aircraft recently in the Iowa pheasant country. He radioed an officer on the ground, who raced to cut off the suspicious car and question the driver.

Poaching wasn't on the driver's mind. There was a wasp in his car, and he was trying to get rid of it.

There are 25,000 U.S. communities that depend entirely on highways for transportation.

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. (AP)—Judy Johnson, 8, has a flock of rare Araucans chickens. They lay eggs in pastel shades of blue, pink and green. Each hen produces a single color egg.

Judy's father, C.E. Johnson, farm editor of the Grand Rapids Press says the chemistry of the hen, not the feed, determines the color of the eggs.

Premier Of Free Viet Nam In Difficult Hour

By JOHN RODERICK SAIGON, (U)—The pink-faced man in the sharkskin suit knelt before a wooden crucifix and prayed for strength, as he has done all his life.

For Ngo Dinh Diem, premier of free South Viet Nam, this April was the worst and the best in a career whose twin goals have been the independence of his country and devotion to the Christian ideal. It was the best because Viet Nam was virtually independent. It was the worst because in Viet Nam's dark hour he stood almost alone, assailed by his enemies and abandoned by many of his former associates.

Only one powerful friend remained, the United States. It had said he offered a last chance against communism in Southeast Asia. There were moments when he wondered whether Americans believed what they said and abandoned by many of his former associates.

His enemies did not attack his principles or his program so much as they poured their fire against him as an individual. A complex, lonely, little-understood man, Ngo Dinh Diem had much they could criticize. And much, if they wished, to praise.

Their criticisms were for his stubbornness, his frequent unwillingness to take advice. They said he was arrogant and dictatorial, inefficient and maladroit. They accused him of converting the government into a patriarchy dominated by the Diem family.

They could have added that he has temper, that he makes many of his decisions alone and that he sometimes bypasses his own ministers.

Against these adverse qualities the United States has found three in his favor—his honesty, his consistent nationalism and long record of unwavering opposition to communism.

Diem was born at Hue, ancient capital of the Annamite emperors, Jan. 3, 1901. The son of a court official, he is the descendant of a noble family which fought the battle of nationalism for years and contributed hundreds of martyrs: As a boy he was solemn and industrious. He added scholastic brilliance, a love for flowers, hunting and horseback riding and a profound faith. At first he was destined for the Roman Catholic priesthood but he renounced it to become a court administrator.

As a youth he vowed to live a life of chastity. He remains a bachelor, uncomfortable in the presence of women. But he urged women to vote in general elections he has said he will hold three months from now.

He refused to become premier under the Japanese or to serve with Vietminh leader Ho Chi Minh. He became premier last July. Soon the Geneva conference sliced Viet Nam in two. He confronted the problems of resettling some 800,000 refugees, coping with a revolt in the army and trying to eliminate corruption gripping the South.

That he survived was due partly to his own stubbornness, partly to the stiffening support of the United States.

Today he is crushed with work. Most of it is done in his simply furnished bedroom on the second floor of the Independence Palace. When the going gets tough, he withdraws more and more. He takes his meals alone in his room, emerging for Sunday dinner with nieces and nephews.

Because he is a lonely man he depends more and more on four brothers. Ngo Dinh Luyen, 41, he was named roving ambassador. Ngo Dinh Nhu, 48, is a trade union leader. Ngo Dinh Thuc, 37, is bishop of Vinh Long, and Ngo Dinh Can, 43, lives with their 87-year-old mother at Hue. All are able, but the Premier's frequent reliance on them rather than on his ministers has made him vulnerable to criticism.

Quick to anger over petty things, Diem is serenely calm in emergency. During the Binh Xuyen bombardment of his palace March 30 he appeared in pajamas to direct the care of wounded. He is personally courageous and often disarms his bodyguards by striding into the midst of crowds.

His program, he says, is to turn over complete power to the people through general elections. Before this can be done, he declares, the private armies must be disbanded and the government control established.

His opponents say they agree, but that he is not the man to carry out such a program.

Rough Road In Politics Found

CHICAGO (AP)—Restaurateur Anton Keracher now is convinced that politics is a rough road. In 1946, his place was torn down to make way for a new expressway. He blamed the Illinois Democratic administration and became a Republican.

Now he has quit the Republicans because a new toll road connection between the expressway and the proposed Tri-State Turnpike will cut right through the new restaurant he built in 1951.

Some Waiting In Store For Sale Of Salk Vaccine

NEW YORK, (U)—Suppose your children aren't in the first or second grade. How do you get Salk vaccine shots for them?

The answer is you don't right now. You must wait—how long isn't clear. Possibly your family doctor may begin getting some through commercial channels in two weeks or a month. More likely it will be longer.

Last week Health Secretary Oveta Culp Hobby called a meeting in Washington of dozens of medical men and health officials to set up a voluntary program of commercial distribution that will be fair to everyone.

They said that by Aug. 1 enough vaccine will be ready to inoculate every child in the country under 10—the age range most susceptible to the disease.

The National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis, which backed the development of the Salk vaccine, has first call on what is produced by the six participating pharmaceutical companies.

The foundation has ordered enough vaccine for nine million children, enough to cover all children in the first and second grades of all public, parochial and private schools.

That is what the foundation is distributing now, free of charge. It started in the South because the polio season starts earlier there. It worked northward through the states and now expects to complete the job—including Alaska—by May 6.

What the pharmaceutical houses produce above this requirement is what will go into commercial channels. The firms will sell it like any other drug they produce.

If your children are preschool age, or older than first and second graders you will have to pay to have them immunized. A tiny amount of Salk vaccine has been distributed to private

Frantic Father Halted Daughter

The girl, Lim Peck Lian left home last Saturday without her parents' permission or knowledge. With a party of student friends, she boarded the Dutch ship Tjwangi for Hong Kong. Here they planned to cross the border into China and enter Communist schools.

Dr. Lim Kim Tong flew here yesterday to intercept her. She had neither money nor clothes when she left home.

Survival Tips By Civil Defense

In the event of disaster you could get along for quite a while without food, if necessary, but you must have safe water or its equivalent, to drink.

Every family should have in their home a three-day emergency supply of drinking water. These instructions have been widely publicized by the Federal Civil Defense Administration and State and local civil defense agencies.

But in the event of a sudden sneak attack you might be caught without this all-important supply on hand. Normal water supplies might be abruptly disrupted. What happens then?

There are ways of obtaining substitute supplies of fluids, FCDA points out. Right in your home. And it isn't in the least bit complicated. For example:

- 1. Water in the hot water heater can be used for drinking purposes.
2. You can allow the ice cubes in your refrigerator to melt.
Then there is milk. It serves as a substitute for water and provides required fluids for the body.

Fresh fruits contain a large proportion of water. The same is true of other bottled and canned beverage, such as soft drinks, fruit drinks, and liquids from water-packed fruits and vegetables.

However, these are only substitute sources, the FCDA emphasizes. Every family should keep available at least one gallon of water for each member of the household. This would represent a three-day supply.

If an enemy attack should occur, there would be possible blast damage to water mains, as well as contamination of the supply through leaking sewage, poisonous chemicals, radioactive materials, or disease organisms from biological warfare attacks.

In storing water for emergency use, FCDA advises, only thoroughly cleaned containers should be used. Glass jugs used for storing liquids should be protected with wadded newspapers, excelsior or other packing materials against blast or shock.

Because of the growth of algae (tiny aquatic plants) water may develop objectionable tastes if stored over a long period of time. FCDA health officials state. Storage in a dark place will help slow the growth. Water storage containers should be rinsed and refilled every three months.

Reds Profit from Formosa 'Crisis' Their Words Created

Records Being Set By U.S. Business

By J. M. ROBERTS
Associated Press News Analyst

RECORD sales, record net earnings, record wage payments, record production and record construction of plants for still more production. That is the tune of quarterly reports from American business.

The slight case of jitters created when America went off the boom standard in 1954 had not been entirely eliminated. As prosperity charts neared the peaks of 1953, some people were still worried that things might look better than they are.

The government took the view that there might be some water in the stock market, and put on the squeeze by ordering margin requirements increased from 60 to 70 per cent. Only a few drops of liquid showed up, and the market hesitated only momentarily before going ahead as usual.

The index of national living costs has now been steady for four months, while individual incomes have been increasing, and people are spending the money right and left.

New Prosperity
Some commercial experts even began to worry that the buying spree be directed at stockpiling of consumer goods by individuals, which if true would bring an eventual slowdown.

The government said the boom had not yet returned to some of the smaller businesses, but that they showed signs of doing better, too.

President Eisenhower pictured a new prosperity for the world brought about by atomic power and the creation of new customers for American products through loans and technical development of other nations. By these means, he said, the dynamism of the American industrial complex can be maintained and extended.

There were new signs of worry, however, among the Democrats in Congress, some of whom have seen their predictions of a new depression go awry. The Senate Banking Committee's investigation of the stock market having produced no great signs of boom leading to bust, the corresponding House committee now is planning an investigation of Federal financing policies. This would involve both the Treasury and the Federal Reserve Bank.

Inflation Abroad
One question which worried political and non-political economic experts alike was whether there might be a return of inflation. Other countries are facing it, or fearing it.

A novel suggestion is being made to relieve purchasing pressure in Sweden, a country where people are accustomed to have the government look after almost everything. They are talking about a forced savings plan, under which people would have to turn in a 10 per cent addition to their normal taxes, which the government would sequester for two years and then return with interest.

The cost of living index so far this year, however, shows no inflationary trend in the United States, an evidence that production is keeping up with consumption, and vice versa. Prices in some fields were higher, but not generally.

Sidelights

There's a thief in Dallas, Tex., so absent-minded he'll probably starve to death if the cops don't catch him soon. He took $290 from the pocket of a coat a printer left hanging in a locker room, and on the way out decided to trade his soiled trousers for some clean work clothes. He left his old trousers behind. Checking these after he discovered the theft, the printer got a pleasant surprise: the thief had forgotten to transfer the $290 to his new clothes.

People are wondering in Hartford, Conn., whether these mechanical gadgets are not more human than we think. The automatic device which gives Hartford citizens the time when a specified telephone number is dialed blew a fuse the other day and for hours told everybody who called it was 4:59. The machine's misconduct came the day before Hartford went on Day-Light Saving Time.

Key Comments on Formosa Peace Talks

GEORGE K. C. YEH, Gen. Chiang Kai-shek's foreign minister. Representatives of the Nationalist Chinese government "will never sit at the same table" with representatives of Communist China.

SEN. GEORGE (D-Ga.), Senate Foreign Relations Committee chairman: "I think it would be advantageous to have preliminary talks with the Communists to learn if it is possible to make some . . . settlement."

JOHN FOSTER DULLES, U.S. secretary of state: "There seems now a chance that the Communist Chinese may be deterred from pursuing the course of violence which has characterized their (earlier) actions."

CHOU EN-LAI, Premier of Red China: Negotiations "should not in the slightest degree affect the exercise by the (Communist) People's Republic of its sovereign rights in the liberation of Formosa."

Chou Gets Praise For Meeting Offer

By TOM WHITNEY
Associated Press Foreign Staff Writer

AGAINST the U.S. 7th Fleet with its fast carriers and air support from U.S. Air Force units based on Formosa, any Chinese Communist attempt to invade that island at the present stage of affairs hasn't a chance.

This is an important factor in the Formosa situation and the one least mentioned in commentaries on it.

In other words all the talk from the Red Chinese capital on "liberating Formosa" this year has never, so long as the 7th Fleet occupied its positions in Formosa Strait, been anything more than just talk. And the Chinese Communists at any rate understood this very well even if the rest of the world did not.

This week Peiping was able to make use of the Formosa "crisis" which it had created itself with aggressive statements previously.

On April 23 Communist Chinese Premier and Foreign Minister Chou En-lai made headlines all over the world by announcing that Red China is willing to negotiate with the U.S. government to discuss relaxation of tension in the Far East and "especially the question of relaxing tension in the Formosa area."

Chou made clear he was not talking about a multilateral peace conference but about bilateral conversations between representatives of Washington and Peiping.

There was a very quick State Department reply to Chou saying that in any discussions on Formosa the U.S. government would insist that Nationalist China participate as an equal. If Communist China is sincere in the offer to negotiate, the statement continued, there are steps which could be taken to demonstrate sincerity—for instance putting an immediate cease-fire into effect, releasing the Americans held in China, and accepting the invitation of the U.N. to take part in talks to end hostilities.

Cold Reception
The Chou suggestion got a very cold shoulder from Chiang Kai-shek's government.

The next day Chou reiterated the stand which Communist China has been taking for a long time now—that Formosa must be "liberated." Chou didn't, however, reveal the secret of how he was going to get around the U.S. 7th Fleet to do this.

The next development was a change in the U.S. position. Secretary of State Dulles said in a news conference that Nationalist China would not have to be present at any negotiations on a cease-fire. But he said the Nationalists certainly would be brought in as equal participants in any talks which sought to dispose of territory in the area.

This position was reiterated by President Eisenhower the following day. He said the earlier State Department announcement may have been a bit of an overstatement.

Islands in Background

In the background was the fate of the two Chinese offshore islands of Quemoy and Matsu. As things have worked out it would indeed be a serious blow to Chiang Kai-shek's prestige should he have to evacuate Quemoy and Matsu—unless the United States could devise some compensation for him which would counteract the effect of this loss.

Somehow the "Formosa crisis" and the concentration on Quemoy and Matsu have managed to distract everyone in the West from the basic issue posed by the U.S. stand on the Chinese Nationalist government and Formosa.

The Main Point

Signature of the Chinese-American mutual assistance treaty earlier this year whereby the United States undertakes the obligation to come to the aid of the Chinese Nationalists on Formosa if they are attacked which the United States had previously served on the Communists that it does not intend to let free, anti-Communist China perish. It was a reaffirmation of the policy formulated when Communist aggression in Korea took place—that America would see to it that there continued to be two Chinas, that two different Chinas would compete for the loyalty of Chinese on the mainland and overseas.

So long as Formosa remains non-Communist there must always remain the hope among Chinese on the mainland that they will not always be ruled by the Communists in Peiping.

Success Possible

This "two-China" policy requires very effective implementation, of course. For it to succeed Nationalist China would have to become a strong center of attraction to Chinese everywhere. Formosa would have to become such a flowering center of Chinese culture, such a lighthouse of prosperity and material welfare as to be the showplace of the entire Far East. With American military protection, material aid, and political and technical advice this would be possible.

One of the most effective weapons in the Communist armory is their ability and skill at distracting attention from the main issues in the world. The evidence is that once more they have been successful at this. There was no real "Formosa crisis" this week, but Peiping had convinced the world there was one.

The really important question is the future of Formosa as the center for development of a new China. And not much, at any rate not enough, thought is being devoted to that formidable but inspiring task.

Quote

Sen. William F. Knowland (R-Calif.), GOP leader in the Senate: "A two-China policy requiring the Republic of China to give up the islands of Quemoy and Matsu and leave it only in control of Formosa and the Pescadore Islands, and even that control under question, is unacceptable."

DEFENSE: The Opponent

He's Powerful

Questioning legislators have been given expert evaluations of Communist military capabilities, and the picture painted by intelligence reports is not likely to cause a reduction in congressional criticism of administration cuts in the strength of the armed forces.

The reports were made to a House appropriations subcommittee earlier in the year at secret sessions and not made public until this week.

In Short . . .

Approved: The administration's reciprocal trade bill, without major change, by a 13-2 vote in the Senate Finance Committee. The measure, already passed by the House, now moves to the Senate floor for final action.

Reported: By the Federal Bureau of Investigation, that while United States population was growing by 7 per cent in the last five years, the crime rate was increasing by 26.7 per cent.

Announced: The appointment of Gen. Earle E. Partridge as head of the Continental Air Defense Command. Gen. Partridge replaces Gen. Benjamin W. Chidlaw, who is retiring.

Gen. Nathan F. Twining, Ridgway's counterpart in the Air Force, reported on the air potential of the Chinese Communists. He said their "rapidly expanding system of bases . . . gives the Communists the ability to move in aircraft rapidly from the Soviet Union."

"We cannot ignore their capability to double or triple their air strength in the Far East overnight," he continued.

Reds Reduce Ratio

The screened record of the proceedings also disclosed that Communist ground forces in Korea have been reduced to a 1 1/2 to 1 ratio of numerical superiority over South Korean and United Nations troops.

Ridgway told the legislators that the Army is engaged in a program of intensive studies and field tests to determine changes in tactics required by nuclear warfare.

He said these have not yet been completed, but first results indicate the necessity of dispersing men across "a zone of battle (measured) not in terms of 30 to 50 miles, which we have had so far, but in terms of 150 to 200 miles."

"We continue to predict," the Army's top soldier continued, "that future war with new weapons may well require more, rather than fewer, men in ground operations."

ATOMIC: Ship for Peace

'Big Stick' Reversed

Nearly a half century ago in 1907 President Theodore Roosevelt dispatched a fleet of battleships on a voyage around the world to focus the attention of the world on America's fighting prowess.

This week President Eisenhower revealed plans for another grand globe-circling voyage, but this time the aim will not be to brandish America's "big stick" before the peoples of the world.

Floating Museum

Addressing the annual luncheon of The Associated Press in New York, the President told of a project soon to be presented to Congress for final approval. It involves the design and construction of a merchant ship powered by nuclear energy and equipped as a floating museum to carry throughout the world the message of America's application of atomic energy to peaceful purposes.

The nation already has an atomic submarine in service and a second under construction. Recently there have been increasingly optimistic reports on success in converting the energy of the atom to the propulsion of other types of craft. The Eisenhower administration, however, apparently has chosen to dramatize peace rather than military muscle by setting up the merchant ship as the government's next project in the atomic field.

Immense Range

"The new ship, powered with an atomic reactor, will not require refueling for scores of thousands of miles of operation," Eisenhower said. "Visiting the ports of the world, it would demonstrate to people everywhere this peacetime use of atomic energy, harnessed for the improvement of human living."

"In part, the ship will be an atomic exhibit, carrying to all people practical knowledge of the usefulness of this new science in medicine, agriculture and power production," he continued.

"In every possible way, in word and deed, we shall strive to bring to all men the truth of our assertion that we seek only a just and lasting peace."

ARMY: A Problem Faced

Policy for POWs

Hoping to avoid the kind of confusion which came after the Korean War, the U.S. Army has formulated a policy for its men to follow in future conflicts where capture means probable subjection to brainwashing.

Outlined in testimony last month before a House appropriations subcommittee and released this week, the program is designed to prevent American POWs from succumbing to Communist "persuasive" techniques—as the Army says many did during the Korean War.

Avoid Capture

The first and most emphatic point of the new policy is this simple advice to U.S. GIs: Don't get captured.

Army spokesmen pointed out that the ground soldier is in a situation considerably different from the plight of an airman, who might be left with no choice but to parachute into enemy hands. "In the confusion of combat on the ground," the Army testified, "much responsibility rests with the individual soldier who in actuality may decide whether to fight on to death or raise his hands in surrender under crucial circumstances."

Special Training

If you are taken prisoner, the Army now tells its men:

1. Try to escape.
2. If questioned by the Reds, give them only name, rank, serial number, date of birth and "remember that as a POW you are still obligated to risk your life for your country."

The Army reported GIs are getting special evasion and escape training overseas as it applies to that locality, and that in a new compilation of regulations laying down the duties of all soldiers "from combat to prison camp" will be issued soon.

DIPLOMACY: Plans Set

Paris Meeting

The first concrete step toward a meeting of the Big Four powers will be taken next week when Secretary of State Dulles meets with British and French foreign ministers in Paris on May 8.

In announcing that date this week, the U.S. State Department gave no official word as to whether the Big Four meeting for which the Western Allies will lay plans would be at the foreign minister's level or higher.

This immediately set off speculation by diplomatic observers that earlier Western ground rules for a conference with Russia, which specified meetings at lower levels gradually leading up to a meeting "at the summit," had been modified.

Part of the ammunition for this view was a remark dropped by Russian Premier Bulganin over the weekend in Moscow. He told newsmen he was interested in a high level meeting but that they would have to "ask Eisenhower and Eden about the date."

A further boost for speculation on the possibility of high level talks came when President Eisenhower disclosed he has been in private correspondence with Soviet Defense Minister Zhukov, his wartime friend, and that the correspondence holds out some slim hope of betterment in U.S.-Soviet relations.

Dulles reportedly will propose at Paris a Big Four foreign minister's meeting in June.

Authorities familiar with Dulles' views said the secretary

Germany

Adenauer Loses Ground

West Germany voters got their first chance this week to show through the ballot box their reaction to ratification of the Paris pacts and the new Russian move in Austria. The result was a strong rebuff to Chancellor Konrad Adenauer's policy of strong alliance with the West.

The voters of Lower Saxony gave victory—but not a clearcut mandate—to the Social Democrats, who bitterly fought Adenauer on the rearmament issue. The Socialists argue German reunification through negotiation with Moscow should be West Germany's main goal and that rearming will hinder rather than help its accomplishment.

Adenauer's Christian Democratic party lost nearly half a million votes in the legislative elections which sent 59 Socialist deputies to the new 161-member state parliament. The Christian Democrats dropped to 43 seats.

Pirates Take Early Lead To Wallop Guilford By 11-8

Cline And Turner Clout Home Runs

By BRUCE PHILLIPS
Reflector Sports Editor

East Carolina College exploded for seven runs in the third inning against Guilford College here yesterday and held on to down the Quakers in a slugfest, 11-8.

Gaither Cline and Gene Turner walloped home runs to account for three of the tallies. Turner smacked his with one aboard and Cline hit his with the bases clear. Both blows came in the third inning.

Bucky Reep set off the big third inning fireworks by gaining a base on balls. Shortstop Jerry Stewart beat out an infield hit that scored Reep after pitcher Charlie Russell was walked. Cecil Heath drove a hard double into right-centerfield, scoring Russell and Stewart.

Lumbering Gaither Cline, the senior leftfielder, stroled into a pitch and parked it over the right-field fence, some 350 feet away. After B. Cline had struck out for out No. 1 first baseman Nick Smothers collected his second base hit of the game.

4th For Turner

This set the stage for Turner's mighty smash. The Morganton freshman hit a line drive into the leftfield fence and was around the horn before the ball could be retrieved. The blow was Turner's fourth roundtripper this week. He hit two against Guilford in Greensboro and one against High Point there Wednesday.

Righthander Charlie Russell scattered nine Guilford hits to go the distance for his second win. He struck out five and walked four. Charles Benedetto started for the visitors and was the loser. He gave up four hits, including Cline's homer, in two and one-thirds innings. Lanky Guy Dowd followed Benedetto on the mound and allowed six hits in four and two-thirds innings. Frank McGuinn pitched the last inning without permitting a hit.

Smothers Hot

The Buc's leading hitter, percentage-wise, was Smothers. The tobacco-chewing first baseman had three hits in four official trips to the plate. The big junior has collected eight hits in the last three games.

Stewart and G. Cline had two hits apiece. Stewart had a single and double and Cline had a homer and two-bagger. The latter was also the Buc's RBI leader for the game with three to his credit.

The leading stickmen for Guilford were Chick Trafford, the leftfielder and Bill West, the second baseman. Trafford had two hits in four trips and one RBI. West collected two hits in three trips and three RBIs.

Quaker Outbreak

The Quakers scored three runs in the fourth frame on four straight singles. Lynn Buckner, Oz Schmidt, Trafford and West did the slugging. Again the sixth, three straight singles accounted for scores. Buckner and West trotted across on West's hard single.

The Quakers grabbed three runs in the ninth to come close to challenging the Buc's lead. Don Hemric punched out a safety and Russell walked John Beck, pinch-hitting for the third Quaker pitcher, McGuinn. Fullen Cashion, Guilford's first shortstop, tripled to the left-field fence driving in the final two runs.

Coach Jim Mallory's charges added three runs in the fifth inning and a final tally in the sixth. B. Cline singled to open the fifth stanza and was followed on base by Smothers who singled. Turner then drew a base on balls to fill the sacks. B. Cline, though, was out sliding at the plate when Ollie Baker grounded to the second baseman. Smothers scored on an error and Stewart's two-base knock brought in Turner and Baker.

In the sixth, G. Cline doubled and later scored on B. Cline's sacrifice fly to conclude the Pirates' attack.

The win was the fifth North State Conference triumph this week for the Pirates and moved their won-lost standing to nine wins against one loss. The win also strengthened their hold on first place in the Eastern Division.

Farmville Host To Greenies For Action Tonight

The Greenville Greenies of the Coastal Plain League get back into action tonight in Farmville meeting the home club there at 8 p. m.

Manager Junior Yohn sends his club out after win No. 2 after the first week's action saw the locals win one and lose one. Greenville tripped Falkland in the opener last Saturday by a 0-2 count. Falkland dumped the Greenies, however, in Falkland 11-3.

Sunday the locals are back home against Farmville at Guy Smith Stadium.

The other Pitt County club, Falkland, is at New Bern tonight and entertain New Bern in Falkland tomorrow afternoon. Falkland has home games every Sunday and play their Wednesday night games in Farmville.

Bobby Flye, hard-throwing right-hander, will probably get the pitching nod for Greenville tonight. In his only other appearance, he chunked a beautiful 3-bitter against Falkland. He struck out 12 men in the victory.

Manager Yohn will count on the booming bats of Blaney Moyer, Brownie Tripp and Fred Soles to lead the way. Moyer blasted a grand-slam home run last Saturday night. Tripp, the first baseman, is the leading percentage hitter. The remainder of the Greenies line-up will consist of J. T. Mills, shortstop; Mat Hall, third base; Bill McRoy, catcher; Hobbie Hoggood, rightfielder; and Tom Boyd, second base.

HITTING THE DIRT: East Carolina College catcher Bill Cline is caught in the climax of his slide into third base in yesterday's game against Guilford. The hard-running Cline advanced from first to third on Nick Smothers' hit in the fifth inning. Guilford third baseman Bill Atkins waits for the throw that came too late. ## Slugger Furillo Ignores Lineup

By TED MEIER

BROOKLYN (AP)—Carl Furillo, who has helped the Dodgers on top of the National League with his home run hitting, doesn't care what position he bats.

Right now the hard hitting rightfielder is batting No. 8 in the lineup, a spot some of his teammates shun.

"I don't care where I bat as long as I'm in the lineup and getting paid," remarked the majors' circuit clout leader after last night's game with the Cubs was rained out.

"And, of course, as long as I'm hitting," he grinned as an afterthought. "That's all that matters."

It was Furillo's three-run homer that brought the Dodgers a 4-2 victory over the Cubs Thursday.

It was his 7th roundtripper of the season and boosted his RBI total to 19 and his batting average to .350 in 15 games.

His goal is to knock in at least 100 runs this season. He believes he will do it no matter where he bats.

"They can pitch to me any old way," asserted the Italian from Stony Creek Mills, Pa. "I'm a swinger and I can get hold of ball bats as well as good pitches."

Phant Trackmen Lose To Raleigh By One-Third Of Point In Dual Meet

Greenville's hard luck track Phantoms came just as close as it is possible to win without doing so yesterday afternoon in Raleigh, but lost a track meet to the Capitals by the score of 56 2-3 to 56 1-3.

The Phantoms, who gave it all they had in the revenge match with the team that had defeated them by 18 points in Greenville, thought they had it wrapped up after winning the mile relay event. After the relay was over a check of the score showed Raleigh still ahead by 1-3 of a point. It was a tough one to lose for the Phantoms, but they were playing without one of the steadiest performers in Junior Pete West. West is out with a badly blistered foot, and he was certain to have placed in both the high jump and the pole vault.

For the G-men it ended their dual meet season for the year, but they still have three more meets to go. Next Wednesday the Phantoms are host to the Northeastern Conference track meet. On the 13th of May the Phants travel to Raleigh again for the Eastern District Meet, which qualifies the individuals for the State Meet on the 20th at Chapel Hill.

Phant Trackmen Lose To Raleigh By One-Third Of Point In Dual Meet

Speight Leads Scoring

Captain James Speight led the scoring for the Phantoms with another fine all-around performance. Speight took first in the broad jump and seconds in the 440 and 100, plus running the first lap of the mile relay for 12 1-4 points. Larry Powell took first in the shot put and a close second in the discus for eight points Mitchell Johnson with 7 1-4 and Harold Edwards with 7 were other big scoring leaders for the G-men.

In the 13 event meet, the Phantoms wound up with six first places. In the last meet between the schools Greenville only had four firsts. This time Speight took the broad jump, Edwards won the high jump, Powell won the shot put, Wayne Bishop won the mile. Bob Shackelford won the pole vault, and the Phantoms won the relay for their six first place finishes. The main cog in the path of the Phantoms' drive for a win was Jack Wilson, the brilliant Raleigh sophomore. Wilson got first in the 100, 220, and 440 yard dashes. His 100 time of 9.9 is 2 of a second below the state record. Speight finished his 100 in second place behind Wilson in 10.1, which would have tied the state record.

Raleigh Takes 880

The big difference in the meet was in the 880 yard run. In the first meet Greenville swept all three places in that event, but this time could only get a second place by Edwin Wilkerson. Wilkerson had a bad day, but the failure of one of the other Phantom half-milers to finish their mile did the difference in the meet. That one point would have turned the tide to Greenville's favor.

The Green Phants get one more crack at the Raleigh team in the Eastern District Meet. In that meet Raleigh, Greenville, Durham, Fayetteville, Goldsboro, Roanoke Rapids, and Henderson will compete. The individuals that finish up in the top four in each event will enter the state meet.

The Eastern District winner will receive a big trophy. The Phantoms are hoping the rough competition between Durham and Raleigh will help them in their drive to bring back the trophy.

The summary for the meet:

Golfers Split 2 Matches In Meet

Greenville High School's golf team split two matches this week with the local linksters tripping Washington 13-5 after losing the New Bern match in Greenville by 14-4.

In the New Bern match both the number one and two players lost for Greenville. Lewis Phelps and Don Conley each had seven over par 79's. Lucian Bryan had an 87 but lost for Greenville also. The only winner for the Greenies was little Buddy Murray, who shot an 84.

On the Washington course Conley won 3-up with an 81. Phelps defeated his man 1-up with his 91. Bryan and Murray each won their matches in Washington. Bryan had a 94 and Murray had a 90.

Greenville now has won two matches and lost one for the season.

Phils, Red Legs In Player Deal To Get Seminick

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—The Philadelphia Phillies today traded catcher Sneydy Burgess, pitcher Steve Ridzik and outfielder Stan Palys to the Cincinnati Reds for outfielders Jim Greengrass and Glen Gorbous, and catcher Andy Seminick.

General manager Roy Hamey said it was a straight player deal with no cash involved.

The deal brings Seminick, balding aging veteran back to the team that brought him up into the big time in 1943. Seminick was traded to the Redlegs in 1952.

For the Phils the main attraction was the hard-hitting Greengrass, who batted .280 and drove in 95 runs last year. Philadelphia has needed a power-hitting outfielder to team with Del Ennis and Richie Ashburn.

Cincinnati picked up a badly needed, good-hitting catcher in Burgess who batted .368 last season while driving in 46 runs.

Learn To Laugh At Boss' Jokes

CHICAGO (AP)—Laughing at the boss' jokes makes for a clever secretary says Wilbert E. Scheer, who helps operate a secretarial school.

It's just as important to her career as her ability to run a typewriter, take dictation and file letters. It makes the boss feel good, he says to have his help appreciate his "funnies." Besides it makes his job easier.

After all, that's the reason for a secretary he says.

Speed Counts, Not Speedometer

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP)—Russell Graham, 43, appeared in Municipal Court on a speeding charge and presented an instrument survey taken on his auto's speedometer to Traffic Judge Philip Bagley. It showed that at 36 miles an hour his speedometer registered only 27.

"I'd hate to think of all the people who would get out of paying fines if we recognized faulty speedometers," said the judge in fining Graham $14.

Industry, Trade Back At Peak Of Spring In 1955

By SAM DAWSON
 NEW YORK (AP)—Business recovery has brought industry and trade roughly back to the peak they climbed in the spring of 1953. The month of May could see new records set in many lines.

The feeling that the recovery is firmly based grows among businessmen. This leads an increasing number to look for good business all through this year, giving 1955 an excellent chance of being the best year yet.

May gives every sign of confirming this belief.

As for the longer pull, President Eisenhower says he had no "earnest warnings" from his economic advisers of a possible downturn in the second half of the year. What his advisers apparently worry about most is the chance that the business upsurge might tempt the country to "get into a false rush and then fall back."

Warnings against such overconfidence and speculation have come recently from Washington. The Federal Reserve Board has raised margin regulations for the second time this year, making it necessary to put up more cash when buying stocks. Federal agencies in the housing field have put a mild curb on mortgage credit.

The big question worrying businessmen has been: What will happen if the home-building fever cools, if auto production stops its record pace?

One answer is offered today by the economists at the Chase Manhattan Bank, New York's largest. They look for a further moderate rise in consumer spending, which is now gratifyingly ahead of last year. And they expect business itself to increase its spending for new plants and especially for new equipment.

"Over the year as a whole," the bank's economists think, "rising trends in these two areas should, if continued, more than outweigh the easing in autos and housing."

Excess Acreage Penalties Raised

Penalties on excess tobacco marketed have been increased from 50 to 75 per cent of the average market price under a new law recently enacted by Congress. This law change, plus others recently enacted by the Washington legislature, apply to the 1955 crop.

Other items included in the new laws mean that the penalty on excess flue-cured tobacco will be 30 cents per pound. Also, future tobacco allotments will not be increased because of excess acreage.

Farm acreage will be reduced if any producer files false acreage reports. In addition, the 1955 acreage will be measured in acres and hundredths of acres. Re-measurement however, may be requested provided request for re-measurement is filed at the county ASC office within five days after the farmer is notified of the first measurement results. The charge will be 70 cents per acre or a minimum of six dollars per farm.

Excess acreage may be disposed of through the ASC office provided the office is notified within five days after receipt of acreage measurement results. Acreage must be disposed of within one week after the farmer's declaration to do so.

Further information concerning tobacco acreage problems may be obtained at the ASC office.

ROK Ambassador Threatens Step

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—The South Korean ambassador says his government will place a "rigid embargo" on all trade to and from Japan the instant the Japanese government enters into any relations with Communist North Korea.

Dr. You Chan Yang said last night South Korea would regard any move by the Japanese government to open negotiations with North Korea "as a preliminary to recognition and an open affront to our nation."

Dr. Yang was a guest here for a benefit for "Welcome Home, a Bucks County orphanage for Asiatic-American children."

School Menu

Churchmen Hear S. B. Underwood

BETHEL—At the Bethel Methodist Men's Club last week, Attorney S. B. Underwood, Jr., of Greenville was the speaker. He discussed the "Freedoms" under Christian interpretation as compared with those behind the Iron Curtain. President Paul Spier presided.

It was voted to have a supper meeting next Wednesday night, during "National Family Week."

The annual Sunday school picnic will be held at Rocky Mount Park the afternoon of May 25. F. L. Blount, Jr., J. M. Butterworth, W. P. Thigpen and J. L. Watson compose the picnic committee.

Cancer Society Canvass Netted Roughly $1,200

The house-to-house canvass Thursday night by the local Cancer Society netted approximately $1,200 it was reported today.

Ed Harris, canvass campaign chairman for Greenville, said this morning team leaders who have so far made their reports show a total of $1,139.18 collected in the campaign in residential districts of the city. Harris said when reports are complete it is expected a total of $1,200 will have been collected.

Harris today expressed his appreciation to the housewives who took part in the canvass in their respective neighborhoods. The drive was under the sponsorship of the local Woman's Club, Harris said, but a number of women in addition to members of the Woman's Club participated in the drive. "Everybody has been very cooperative in this campaign," Harris said, "and we want to express our appreciation to all these ladies who went from door to door in their neighborhoods to collect funds which will be used to fight cancer."

More than 100 women participated in the canvass Thursday evening.

Belvoir News

Students from Belvoir-Falkland High School who attended the F.H.A. Rally at EOC Thursday afternoon were Julie Lewis, Jo Ann Harrington, Shirley Clark, Anne Harris, Dorothy Harris, Patricia Thomas, Joan Parker and Barbara Jenkins.

The annual Mother-Daughter Banquet sponsored by the F.H.A. Club was held on the night of April 27 in the Belvoir-Falkland lunchroom. The tables were beautifully decorated with dolls fashioned of lace doilies, place cards and vases of red roses flanked by candlelight. Red and white streamers were used effectively throughout the room.

Julie Lewis, president of the club, welcomed the guests and Mrs. Marguerite Wooten responded for the mothers. The Lord's Prayer was narrated by Barbara Jenkins and sung by Jo Ann Harrington, Shirley Clark and a "Toast to Mothers" after which a delicious repast was served.

Miss Pauline Catel, a French Exchange student from EOC, was the after-dinner speaker and gave an interesting and informative talk on her native land. She had a very attentive audience and encouraged them to ask questions of her after her discourse. As a conclusion the F.H.A. girls sang M-O-T-H-E-R.

Students from Belvoir-Falkland High School who recently attended the Beta Club Convention in Asheville were Marlene Clark, Shirley Pecker, Barbara Jenkins, Shirley Clark, and Gaynelle Harris. They were accompanied by O. H. Forrest, principal of the school.

In the closing days of the 1955 Cancer Crusade, Mrs. J. O. Teel, chairman of the Belvoir District, reports a splendid response on the part of everyone in the community. Special thanks go to the volunteer workers, Mrs. O. H. Forrest, Mrs. Wade D. Lewis, Mrs. C. E. Hagan and Mrs. Wiley Clark for their part in helping Belvoir go over its quota.

The teachers and students of Sallie Branch School made a very generous contribution of thirty dollars to the Cancer Fund which had a great deal to do with enabling the district to go over its quota.

A second accident, this one occurring at noon yesterday at 5th and Greene Streets, did property damage to a pick-up truck operated by James A. Harper. The other vehicle involved, operated by Julius Reeves, had only minor damage. No injuries were suffered and no arrests made.

Eppes Creative Art Class To Offer Original Fantasy In Festival Week

The Creative Art Class of C. M. Eppes High School will present an original creation during Art Festival Week.

"Mute Fantasy" is the story of a "Boy" plagued by his "Persistent Conscience," because he will not finish his work. He runs away from her and attempts to join several groups of people at play. He is pursued constantly by "Conscience" and finally has to finish the jobs he started.

The humor in the Fantasy is when "Boy" becomes lost in a graveyard and is almost caught.

The students of the class have created their own story, dances, scenery and costumes.

Donovan Phillips is the "Boy" and Rosa Luman is his "Persistent Conscience." Rovena Hardy is responsible for designing the costumes. Barbara Norris and Roxy Kilpatrick have programs in charge. Clunie Cox will handle the music. All the class is responsible for the stage design and for properties.

Because of conflicts with other programs "Mute Fantasy" will be given in Eppes Auditorium Tuesday night, May 3, at 8 p. m. There will be no charge and the public is cordially invited.

THE ASSASSIN WAS SHOT THROUGH THAT WINDOW--BY ONE OF HIS CULT--FOR FAILING TO KILL THE NEW QUEEN.

THAT'S THE END OF THAT!

NOT THE END--THE BEGINNING. THESE ASSASSINS WON'T STOP UNTIL THEY SUCCEED!

I CAN'T BELIEVE ALL THAT ABOUT A CRESCENT CULT OF MOON-WORSHIPPERS. HOWEVER I'LL INCREASE HER GUARD.

BUT IN THE RUINS OF A REMOTE HILL TEMPLE--THE ANCIENT CRESCENT CULT OF MOON-WORSHIPPERS--

OUR BROTHER FAILED IN THE FIRST ATTEMPT. WE FINISHED HIM--AS HAPPENS TO ALL WHO FAIL!

LET ANOTHER NAME BE CHOSEN FROM OUR ANCIENT JAR--

YOU HAVE BEEN CHOSEN! YOU ARE A MEMBER OF THE QUEEN'S OWN HOUSEHOLD GUARD. YOU HAVE THE OPPORTUNITY, BOGAR.

I WILL NOT FAIL, KRATAN.

THE CHIEF WOULDN'T BELIEVE ME. INCREASING THE GUARD WILL DO NO GOOD AGAINST THEM.

I'VE GOT TO GET HER TO A SAFE PLACE, THEN WORK AGAINST THEM DIRECTLY.

AS THE NEW QUEEN PREPARES FOR BED--

DID I HEAR TALK OF ASSASSINATION DURING THE CORONATION PARADE TODAY, AUNTIE?

JUST TALK, DEAR. FORGET IT.

OUTSIDE HER CHAMBER--THE CHANGING OF THE GUARD.

THERE WAS AN ATTEMPT MADE AGAINST THE QUEEN. STAY ALERT, BOGAR.

I WILL.
