'CONNIE' DUE ON COAST TONIGHT

Expected Arrive 9:00 p. m.

Forecasters Look For Storm To Hit Between Myrtle Beach And Wilmington

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — This advisory on Hurricane Connie was issued today by the Miami Weather Bureay:

During the past few hours Hurricane Connie has shown a slow drift in a direction between northwest and north-northwest at 6 to 7 miles per hour. At 11 a.m. EST it was centered near latitude 32.7 north longitude 77.4 west, or 110 miles south-southeast of Wilmington, N.C.

The central pressure of the hurricane has filled more than an inch during the past 48 hours and there are indications the hurricane has lost some of its force. Highest winds are estimated around 100 miles per hour over a small area near the center and hurricane winds extend 100 miles to the northeast and west and 50 miles to the southwest. Gales extend out 300 miles to northeast and 150 miles to southwest.

Continued movement in a direction between northwest and north-northwest at about the same speed would bring the center on the coast between Myrtle Beach and Wilmington around 9 p.m. EST tonight. Winds up to 62 mils per hour are now being reported in the Wilmington area. Winds will continue to increase along the Carolina and Virginia coasts as the center approaches, reaching gale to hurricane force in the area from Georgetown, S. C., to the Virginia Capes this afternoon and tonight.

Tides are now running between 4 and 6 feet above normal in some places and will continue to rise to at least 8 or 10 feet above normal especially in the area north and northeast of the center. Rains will become heavy in the Carolinas as the hurricane approaches and spread northward into Virginia later.

All precautions should be continued in the area of hurricane and storm warning display for the protection of life and property until the hurricane passes.

Hurricane warnings are displayed from Cape Romain, S.C., to the Virginia Capes and northeast storm warnings elsewhere from Savannah to Block Island.

Secured For Possible Trouble

CONNIE'S COMING—This and other aircraft at the Greenville Airport have been securely tied down and sandbags placed on their wheels to forestall as much damage as possible in the event Hurricane Connie comes this way. Meanwhile, other precautions were being made elsewhere through the city in an effort to forestall possible property damage. (Reflector Photo by Bob Hilldrup.)

High Gales And Towering Seas On Carolina Beaches

WILMINGTON N.C. (AP) — Hurricane Connie, losing some strength but still plenty powerful, battered the Carolina coast today.

Winds just under hurricane force of 75 miles an hour, and towering waves broke up fishing piers and filled the air with flying debris in many exposed areas. The hurricane's eye, now packing winds of about 100 miles an hour, moved at a steady 6 to 7 miles an hour toward the resort beaches between this port city of Wilmington and Myrtle Beach, S.C. At the present rate the eye would reach shore about 9 p.m. EST.

It was about 110 miles southeast of Wilmington at 11 a.m.

Huge waves tore at natural and artificial sand dunes thrown up after hurricane Hazel's death-dealing swipe through the same area last October. Hurricane flags flapped from Cape Romain, S.C., some 50 miles northeast of Charleston, to the Virginia Capes.

Connie still menaced much of the seaboard north of Virginia. But the Boston Weather Bureau said she was no threat to New England for at least the next 36 hours.

The Wilmington airport reported gusts of 72 miles an hour—only three miles below official hurricane force—at 11 a.m. At Frying Pan Shoals near the mouth of the Cape Fear River gusts up to 92 miles were recorded.

Connie's central winds have reached as high as 135 miles an hour. Storm forecasters warned that although the eye seems to be spreading out slightly the hurricane still is highly dangerous. Hurricane winds licked out 100 miles to the northeast and east and 50 miles to the southwest. Gales extended 300 miles to the northeast and 150 to the southwest.

The pounding waves came in on tides that ran four to six feet above normal in some places and were expected to go nearly twice that high.

Few persons remained on the ocean front in the Carolinas as Connie drew steadily closer. Sand piled up in the streets and extensive street flooding was reported.

Communication lines went down in many areas making it increasingly difficult to guage the effects of the severe gales preceding Connie's real punch.

Piers at Carolina Beach and Kure Beach were beginning to break up. Asst. Chief of Police E. S. Brewer said at Carolina Beach that Fishermen's Steel Pier, built since Hurricane Hazel, "is beginning to go to pieces." The three seaward sections of the Kure Beach pier were washed away.

At some North Carolina beaches, the surf was breaking through the boardwalk and threatening homes and amusement concessions.

R. L. Frost, head of the Weather Bureau at Wilmington, said "It looks as if the hurricane is headed in the direction of the Cape Fear" River an inlet of the Atlantic on which Wilmington is located. He added, "We can expect hurricane winds by mid-day, continuing all afternoon. It will be after sunset before the center reaches our latitude."

The Weather Bureau reported that at 11 a.m. winds reached 72 miles an hour in gusts—only three below hurricane force—at its observation post at the Wilmington airport, and there was a sustained wind of 45 miles an hour. At Frying Pan Shoals the wind reached 92 miles an hour in gusts.

Shortly before 11 a.m. Brewer said "It's pretty bad. The wind is terribly high, estimated at 60 to 65 miles an hour," at Carolina Beach near Wilmington. The beach has been evacuated, but a few hardy residents remained and Brewer said they were being told to leave. Water came across the beach to the vicinity of the city hall, which is about 100 yards from the beachfront. Water last night seeped across the floor of the fire station in the city hall. Fire trucks and equipment were moved today to higher ground.

The boardwalk at Carolina Beach was torn up in a few places. Brewer said it was quite likely the boardwalk would be destroyed by high tides. He added several waterfront cottages had been undermined, and probably would be further damaged by high tides. Water seeped into several entertainment concessions near the waterfront.

Brewer said a high tide 8 to 10 feet above normal was expected this afternoon at Carolina Beach. Hurricane Hazel, which did an estimated 16-17 million dollars damage at the beach, had high tides 6 to 8 feet above normal.

Pawley's Island, summer resort near Georgetown, S.C., was being evacuated. Vacationists streamed over two causeways to the main land to find shelter at the Moose Club and the National Guard Armory in Georgetown.

However, a spokesman at the police station said everything was calm in Georgetown, intermittent rain had stopped, and the sun was shining and drying things off. The tide was rising and shortly after 11 a.m. the wind was estimated at 35 miles an hour.

Shortly before 12 noon, New Bern had wind gusts up to 42 miles an hour and heavy rain. The Red Cross opened two shelters in the city, both in churches. The Salvation Army opened an emergency post. And a restaurant man offered his establishment, with its emergency electric power, if needed.

High tides were slopping over East Front St. near the Neuse River seawall in New Bern. At Union Point, where the Trent and Neuse Rivers meet, the New Bern Women's Club was surrounded by water.

Local Preparations For Refugees Announced

Storm Shelters Designated

Both the Civil Air Patrol and C Battery, one of two local National Guard units, had been placed on a stand-by basis today in anticipation of Hurricane Connie's arrival.

"We're ready to mobilize if needed," C Battery's commander, Capt. Franklin P. Redmond said this morning.

Meanwhile, Civil Defense Director June Rose announced this morning that the following buildings will be used tonight as shelters if needed:

(1) All city school buildings
(2) Court House
(3) Armory
(4) City Hall
(5) Wright Building, the training school and gymnasium at East Carolina College
(6) All brick churches

Rose also said that all school buildings and city halls in Pitt County would be open tonight to house any refugees and that someone would be on duty at each place throughout the night. "The entire county is covered," he said.

Red Cross workers also have made arrangements to feed persons in the event of a major disaster, Rose added.

Rose also emphasized that Civil Defense and Red Cross headquarters would be at City Hall and as long as telephone lines remain in service, help can be obtained from there.

Information can also be obtained from the police department (3141), the utilities (3124) and the mayor's office (2932).

Should telephone service be interrupted, communication service will be provided by law enforcement officers' cars stationed at various points in the county and the radio trucks of the College View Cleaners.

At the local airport meanwhile, all aircraft were being tied down and sandbags placed on their wheels in an effort to hold them against the blow. Some store owners were reported preparing to tape their windows in an effort to protect them against the winds.

Citizens have been advised to remain inside during the storm by Chief of Police S. G. Gibbs, and Fire Chief George Gardner has suggested that windows be raised a trifle to equalize pressure should the winds become serious.

Pitt Man Held In Shooting Case

BELVOIR—Eugene Lloyd, who was shot in the face near here yesterday, is in serious condition at Duke Hospital where he was taken.

Under arrest in connection with the shooting is Clifton James, who lives on the Porter Road near here. James is charged with assault with a deadly weapon with intent to kill. Sheriff Ruel W. Tyson said James is being held in Pitt County jail without benefit of bond pending the outcome of Lloyd's condition.

Medical authorities described Lloyd's condition as "serious" this morning. They said the .32 caliber bullet entered his head just under the right eye and lodged within his head.

Sheriff Tyson said the shooting apparently took place in front of the combination living quarters-"juke" joint operated by James on the Porter road. He stated that the shooting was believed to have occurred around 12:30 a.m. yesterday. Deputies were called at 1:30.

After Lloyd was shot he was taken to Pitt Memorial Hospital. The sheriff said deputies were unable to talk to the wounded man before he was removed to Duke Hospital.

Lloyd's age was given as 22 and James is believed to be 48 years old.

Also arrested at the scene of the shooting was Ada Smith of Wilson She is charged with being drunk and disorderly and is in the county jail.

The sheriff said the investigation of the shooting is incomplete.

President Names New Air Secretary

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Eisenhower today named Donald A. Quarles—top man in the earth satellite project—as the new secretary of the Air Force.

Quarles is now assistant secretary of defense for research and development. He is 61, a native of Van Buren, Ark., and more recently a resident of Englewood, N.J. He is a Republican.

Quarles will succeed Harold Talbott who resigned Aug. 1, effective this Saturday, after the Senate Investigations subcommittee publicly explored Talbott'a outside business interests and raised a question of ethics.

The appointment will be subject to Senate confirmation when Congress reconvenes in January.

White House press secretary James C. Hagerty said Quarles was recommended to Eisenhower by Secretary of Defense Charles E. Wilson.

When a reporter asked about Quarles' private business holdings and what was being done about them Hagerty said he was not in a position to answer that.

At a news conference Tuesday Wilson told reporters his job of picking a successor to Talbott was a tough one. He commented at that time:

"I don't know anyone who sits next to God and has financial and engineering experience."

The Air Force has planned a mammoth farewell salute to Talbott for late this afternoon, including a display of jet planes if the weather does not interfere.

Car-Train Crash Kills Two Men

A 34-year-old Shelby man and his companion were killed about noon today when the car in which they were riding collided with a southbound Atlantic Coast Line train on NC 33 in Stokes.

Dead are Ezell Poole, 34, of 32 Mitchell Street, Shelby, and Billy Carswell, 33, of Morganton, who later succumbed to his injuries at Pitt Memorial Hospital.

Cpl. Carl E. Whitfield, investigating State Highway Patrolman, said the car was headed north and struck the south bound train on the left hand front corner of the engine. The car "skidded 50 feet" Whitfield said.

Whitfield quoted witnesses as saying the vehicle was traveling at a high rate of speed. A light rain was reported to have been falling at the time of the accident.

Arriving Tomorrow Morning On West Coast

Freed Fliers Due Friday

HONOLULU (AP) — Eleven U.S. transport planes late today, heading for California and reunions this weekend with loved ones they haven't seen for years.

The airmen, freed in Hong Kong last week after 32 grim months as prisoners of the Chinese Communists, are due at Travis Air Force base, northeast of San Francisco at 8 a.m. (10 a.m. EST), Friday.

At Travis they will be transferred to other planes and whisked to airports nearest their homes.

They are relaxing in balmy Hawaii. They reached here in excellent spirits, and were greeted by two of Hawaii's prettiest maidens, armed with flower leis and quick to present the traditional aloha kiss.

They were out on the town last night, after politely refusing an offer of a nine-course (count 'em, nine) Chinese dinner.

Spencer Weaver, owner of several elegant restaurants, hosted the men with steaks and Hawaiian entertainment at his nightclub, a home in 1944 when President Roosevelt conferred there with Gen. Douglas MacArthur.

MacArthur's former plane, The Bataan, brought five of the 11 men to Hawaii.

Airman Harry M. Benjamin of Worthington, Minn., said the Red Chinese served out punishment "according to our rank."

Therefore, he said, Col. John Knox Arnold Jr., "got the worst of it." Arnold was commander of their B29 which was shot down over North Korea in January, 1953, on a leaflet dropping mission.

Arnold was in good humor here.

A Pentagon Air Force information officer, Maj. William McGinty, told reporters at a news conference to stay clear of torture and other such subjects, pointing out the men had been through that in two previous conferences.

McGinty also asked that Airman Daniel C. Schmidt not be questioned on his family problems.

"The Air Force is very proud of the way this boy has conducted himself in this affair. He would like a little privacy," McGinty said.

Schmidt's wife, Una, says she married a California logger last year. She said she thought the airman was dead. She has left her second husband to decide her future after she meets Schmidt, father of her son.

U.S. Studying Proposed UN Closed Sessions

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP)—The United States is taking a hard look at a suggestion for more closed Security Council meetings as part of the current drive for secret diplomacy in the U.N.

A delegation source said today the question is being studied carefully here and in Washington. He pointed out that Henry Cabot Lodge Jr., chief U. S. delegate, has always favored the open forum idea in the U.N., which he has said produced dramatic results by enlisting the force of public opinion.

U. N. Secretary General Dag Hammarskjold has been plugging what he calls "quiet diplomacy" since the 10th U.N. anniversary meeting in San Francisco in June. He says it should supplement the U. N. "conference diplomacy" which he argues falls short of world needs.

'Connie' Ignored This Dollar Day

Shoppers turned out in large numbers for Dollar Day here this morning, in spite of the threat of Hurricane Connie.

Though the crowd was not believed to be as great as on previous Dollar Days, buyers were out early to take advantage of the semi-annual sales event, and spent the morning shopping under gray skies which threatened rain at any moment.

Because of the weather, a number of merchants have announced that, though Dollar Day will not be extended, special shopping values will be offered tomorrow and Saturday.

The streets were lined early with cars, and vacant parking spaces were rare. Shoppers also made use of the off-street parking lots. A holiday on parking meters was declared by the City Council as a convenience for the purchasers.

Traffic was relatively heavy—Police Chief S. G. Gibbs described it as "about like on a Saturday"—and generally was moving smoothly though Gibbs said it was tied up to some extent in the early morning. No downtown accidents had been reported at noon today.

Opinions Conflict

Local merchants, who cooperate in sponsoring the sales promotion through the Merchants Association, voiced conflicting opinions on the success of this Dollar Day.

Some predicted that sales "will come up to all expectations," while a number felt the hurricane threat had caused a decrease in Dollar Day business.

Several merchants agreed that, "In dollar volume, sales might run just as high as on previous Dollar Days, but there is not so much shopping traffic as usual." They declared, "Those who are here are buying."

As usual, women were making the largest number of purchases, though one department store manager reported his sales were general, and "about the same" in all departments "Men and women both are shopping here today," he said.

Manager of one ladies ready-to-wear store described the day as "beautiful in spite of the weather." He said his Dollar Day sales are better than usual, and attributed this in large measure to the new merchandise he said he had purchased especially for this occasion.

Business Contrast

Contrast is evidenced in another ladies clothing shop on the same block. This manager reported business slow, and said the specials will continue tomorrow and Saturday, "when we hope the bad weather will be over."

Mothers converged on the children's stores this morning, and in

Adlai Virtually Announces As Candidate For Demo Nomination

CHICAGO (AP)—Adlai E. Stevenson was all but an officially announced candidate today for the Democratic presidential nomination next year.

In an informal and unusual news conference last night, the 1952 Democratic nominee made it plain to all who came to question that he will announce in November he is running again.

Without committing himself finally at this time Stevenson outlined what he regards as a possible winning Democratic campaign against President Eisenhower. He said he doesn't believe Eisenhower is "invulnerable" despite the outcome of a similar race three years ago.

The Stevenson campaign credo, as revealed at a crowded news conference after a cocktail party and dinner given by former Democratic National Chairman Stephen A Mitchell was this:

1 Eisenhower has "sharply reversed" the previous GOP foreign policies in favor of "bold and vigorous" action at the Geneva Big Four conference but those policies could change for the worse again "at any moment.

2. While the Eisenhower administration now seems to agree generally with the Democrats in Congress that action is needed on education, health, housing and highways programs the Republicans only make promises "and the Democrats believe in action."

3. He has "some misgivings" about the threat offered by the Republicans to federal development of natural resources and what he said is the Eisenhower administration's opposition to "the Democratic concept of government for all of the people and not the few."

Having laid down this outline, the tanned and healthy appearing potential candidate told reporters he will have something definite to say about his political intentions by November.

Several Democratic governors have suggested at the 47th Annual Governors Conference here that Stevenson had better make up his mind quickly if he wants their party's nomination. Stevenson said he had been listening for a year to such advice—and to some contrary opinions—and "I'll do what I believe is best for the party."

What was best for the Democrats, in Stevenson's obvious opinion was to quit thinking about other potential nominees such as Gov. Averell Harriman of New York and Sen Estes Kefauver of Tennessee.

Harriman, who repeated after a dinner meeting with the former Illinois governor that "I'm for Stevenson," was described by Stevenson as "understanding my thinking."

Asked if he thinks he or any other Democrat could beat Eisenhower next year Stevenson replied:

"Anyone could do better against Eisenhower than last time. The Democrats are stronger now."

Stevenson indicated that if he is the party nominee he will not shrink from challenging Eisenhower's foreign policies.

He said that three years of "tough talk" on the part of Eisenhower and Secretary of State Dulles had "brought many people abroad to the conclusion that the Eisenhower administration was more of a threat to peace than Russia."

He said Eisenhower has "sharply reversed" that trend at Geneva and he hopes that "what was done there was for the best."

"But I think it would be foolish to think that the cold war was ended by that sharp reversal of policy," he said. "I don't think we can relax because that is precisely what Russia wants us to do."

Although he was laudatory of Eisenhower's position at the Geneva conference, Stevenson criticized the President for occasions with Marshal Zhukov, Soviet defense minister and a World War II comrade in arms.

"I never expected to hear an American President plead with a third string Communist to please believe that the United States wanted peace," he declared.

Stevenson brushed aside earlier comment by Gov. G. Mennen Williams, Michigan Democrat that President Eisenhower is "an old man" who probably wouldn't be nominated again unless the Republicans were desperate for a candidate and forced him to run. Eisenhower is 64.

Asked about the statement of the 44-year-old Williams, Stevenson, who is 55 years old, replied:

"A man is only as old as he feels."

Essentially that was the answer of Republican Governors Arthur B Langlie of Washington and Theodore R McKeldin of Maryland Langlie said Williams was "slandering one of the best workmen and the best minds of the country" by questioning Eisenhower's age.

Wedding Took Place Though It Took Some Doing By Everybody

SCOTTSBLUFF, Neb. (AP) — Patricia Maupin and Danny B. Garcia got married okay but it took some doing.

Patricia is 19 and under Nebraska law her mother's permission was needed. Here is the story told yesterday of what happened:

When Patricia and Danny, 21, went to County Clerk Evelyn Carlson for a license they learned that mother's permission was needed. But Patricia's mother, Mrs. Etta S. Tringali was in Naha, Okinawa.

Miss Carlson—she's going to be married herself soon — had Patricia telephone her mother who went before U. S. Consul William W. Blackerly of Naha and signed a statement of approval. Blackerly telephoned Miss Carlson and Miss Carlson issued the license.

Then the Rev. J. R. Whalen got out of a sick bed and performed the ceremony.

Jean Tetterton Complimented Ar Tea On Friday Afternoon

ROCKY MOUNT — Miss Jean Stewart Tetterton of Greenville, whose marriage to Dan Hinton will take place August 13, was honored Friday afternoon at a tea given by Mrs. M. N. Hinton and Mrs. J. B. Corinth, mother and sister of the bridegroom-elect, at the home of Mrs. Hinton, 1331 West Thomas St.

Mrs. Corinth greeted guests at the door and introduced them to the receiving line composed of Mrs. Hinton, Miss Tetterton and Mrs. Tetterton. Miss Tetterton was wearing an attractive princess dress of mauve crystalette and was presented a corsage of white carnations, a gift of the hostesses.

The home was decorated throughout with arrangements of white and pink flowers.

Mrs. D. H. Waters and Miss Martha Rose Tetterton, niece and sister of the bride-elect, invited guests into the dining room where Mrs. W. C. Walston presided at the punch bowl. The table was covered with a cutwork linen cloth and centered with a massive arrangement of pink and white carnations, gladioli, tuberoses, baby's breath and fern in an antique silver bowl flanked on either side by tall branched candelabra with pink lighted candles.

Mrs. Bob Stanfield of Nashville, aunt of the bridegroom-elect, and Mrs. Frank G. Watson assisted in serving chicken patties, bridal cakes, cheese straws, rosette mints and nuts arranged on silver trays.

Goodbyes were said by approximately 100 guests to Mrs. R. D Jones of Nashville.

Appeals Verdict For Fraud Sale

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP)—An auctioneer convicted of falsely advertising five paintings as the works of celebrated French artists is appealing his $250 fine and suspended 60-day jail sentence.

A jury decided July 13 that Roy J. Goldenberg had made misleading statements in newspaper and catalog advertising, but that he had not made the statements with deliberate intent to defraud.

Goldenberg's attorney filed notice of appeal yesterday after Municipal Judge Henry H. Draeger levied the fine.

ASC Workers Hold Meet Here

Some 60 Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation workers from 21 eastern North Carolina Counties were gathered here today to hear explanations concerning the 1955 and 1956 Agricultural Conservation Programs and a detailed budget discussion.

The meet, which began yesterday at Respess Bros. Barbecue House on North Greene Street, was scheduled to end at 1 p.m. today.

Highlighting the sessions were talks by State Administrative Office Horace D. Godfrey and ACP Specialist H. V. Mangum, also of Raleigh.

The 60 persons present come from Divisions One and Two. Division Two is supervised by Johnny Bryan, of Greenville, while One is headed by J. L. Kelton, of Edenton.

In addition to hearing budget and program talks, the group heard instructions on office management and marketing quotas for tobacco, cotton and peanuts. Price supports were slated for discussion also.

The persons in attendance hold ASC positions as committee members, office managers and office workers.

Blount Named To Committee

Judson H. Blount, local merchant, has been appointed to membership on the Legislative and Governmental Affairs Committee of the N. C. Merchants Association.

Announcement of Blount's committee appointment was made today by W. W. Kale of Charlotte, president of the 7,000-member retailers' organization.

Other members of the committee are Ray Cline, Concord; George E. Royall, Elkin; Clyde R. Greene, Boone; and Roy L. Phillips, Rockingham.

Jaycee Meeting Slated Tonight

Greenville's Jaycees will meet tonight at 6:30 at the Rotary Club building Jaycee president Dr. M. W Aldridge announced today.

Some confusion, it was reported, had resulted from a dinner meet held last week and the possible approach of Hurricane Connie.

Funeral Friday For Mrs. Frank Dupree

FARMVILLE—Mrs. Olivia Overtreet Dupree, wife of the late Frank Dupree, Sr., died at Pitt Memorial Hospital Thursday at 12:45 a. m. She had been in declining health several years.

Funeral services will be held at the First Presbyterian Church Friday afternoon at 3 o'clock. Rev. E. S. Coates will officiate. Burial will be in Hollywood Cemetery.

Mrs. Dupree was a lifelong member of the Farmville Presbyterian Church and active in its affairs. Surviving are three daughters, Mrs. J. P. Shackelford of Atlanta, Ga., Mrs. G. P. Bergeron of Farmville and Mrs. M. E. Pollard of Farmville; one son, Frank Dupree, Jr., of Farmville; one sister, Mrs. Minnie Overstreet of Whitakers. Five grandchildren and two great-grandchildren also survive.

Washable Woolens Featured

SOAP-AND-WATER STYLES . . Here are three popular styles for juniors and sub-teens, in sanforlan washable woolens. They are (l. to r.): Charcoal gray flannel jumper with buttonhole trim on slash pockets; unlined wool shirt-jacket, newest enthusiasm of the high-school set, worn with or without a blouse; men's wear flannel slacks with smart tapered legs. All are machine or hand washable.

By DOROTHY ROE
Associated Press Women's Editor

It looks like a carefree winter for this year's school belles—and their hard-working mothers.

Washable woolens have arrived with a bang, and are available in quantity in shops throughout the country. While last year only eight mills were producing sanforlan washable woolens, this year 22 mills are turning out the shrink-resistant wool fabrics, which are being made up into almost every conceivable type of garment.

Parents of both big and little school boys and girl will be glad to know that the new washable woolens can be tossed into the washing machine with the rest of the family laundry. In shopping for these woolens, here are a few things to remember:

1. First look for the label which identifies the fabric as treated against shrinkage.

2. Be sure the garment doesn't have a lot of interlinings and padding which might not be washable.

When washing the new sudsable woolens you may use an automatic washing machine, use warm (not hot) water and set the washing cycle to not more than two minutes for lightly soiled garments, three or four minutes for clothes which are heavily soiled. The spin-dry type of machine is all right for these woolens but they should not be put through a wringer.

When you take them from the machine, put on a hanger and pat into shape, to avoid a complicated pressing chore.

If the clothes are washed by hand, they should be squeezed gently—not wrung—and again hung on a hanger to dry.

Report Drop In Farm Population

WASHINGTON (AP)—The government estimates the nation's farm population declined 11.6 per cent in the five years ended last April 1.

The number living on farms this year was put at 22,158,000 compared with 25,059,000 in 1950 in a survey issued yesterday by the Census Bureau and the Agriculture Department. The nation's total population increased from 151,132,000 to 164,595,000 in the same period.

Estimate Flue-Cured Leaf Crop 2 Percent Over 1954

WASHINGTON (AP)—A flue-cured tobacco crop of 1,479,000,000 pounds nearly 2 per cent larger than 1951 record crop, has been forecast by the Agriculture Department.

Total production for the United States of all types of tobacco was set at 2,240,000,000 pounds in the department's August crop report. The predicted figure is a 3 per cent increase over the estimate of July 1.

The figure is considerably over the 1954 production mark of 2,236,000,000 pounds and the average of 2,098,000,00 for 1944-53.

A forecast of 507 million pounds of burley tobacco was an increase of 5 million over the July 1 estimate but less than the 1954 harvest of 667 million.

North Carolina's estimated production of burley was 24,384,000 pounds. Last year's was 20,600,000.

Type 11—North Carolina, 344,250,000 (297,920,000).

Type 12—Eastern North Carolina Belt, 523,050,000 (477,620,00).

Type 13—North Carolina, 126,575,182,900,00 (148,050,000).

The national corn crop was forecast at 3,477,711,000 bushels, compared with 2,964,639,000 bushels produced last year. The wheat crop was estimated at 910,598,000 bushels. Last year's crop was 969,781,000 bushels.

Carolinas production forecasts included:

Corn—North Carolina 73,908,000 bushels; South Carolina 28,730,000.

Winter wheat — North Carolina 6,966,000 bushels, South Carolina 3,059,000.

Oats—South Carolina 22,456,000 bushels, North Carolina 18,480,000.

Soybeans for beans—North Carolina 4,702,000 bushels.

Apples (commercial production)—North Carolina 40,000 bushels.

Peanuts (picked and threshed)—north Carolina 277,550,000 pounds, South Carolina 8,800,000.

Pecans (production only)—North Carolina 1,140,000 pounds, South Carolina 900,000.

Potatoes—North Carolina 6,760,000 bushels, South Carolina 1,102,000.

Sweet potatoes—North Carolina 4,950,000 bushels, South Carolina 2,640,000.

Charge Violation Of Secrecy By 2

WSHINGTON (AP) — The Justice WASHINGTON (AP)—The Justice Department today announced the indictment and arrest of a former Air Force captain and congressdocument.

The man is Rea S. Van Fosson, who resigned from the Air Force last Nov. 23 and was hired the next day as a $8,200-a-year investigator for the House Un-American Activities Committee.

He left the committee last January.

At the time of his employment at the capitol, a committee source said Van Fosson's separation from the Air Force was associated with his delivery to the committee of a secret document.

Van Fosson was arrested this morning by U.S. marshals at his Silver Spring, Md., home.

At the same time a sealed indictment returned by a federal grand jury here yesterday was opened in district court.

It charged the 36-year-old former Air Force captain with unlawfully removing and "converting to his own use" a classified document from the files of the Air Force office of special investigations.

In six other counts, the indictment charged Van Fosson with making false statements to investigators about this document.

The indictment itself disclosed that the document related to Jay Lovestone, general secretary of the Communist party in the United States 25 years ago, and now executive secretary of the Free Trade Union Committee of the AFL.

No Injuries In Two-Car Crash

A two-car collision three miles west of Greenville on US 264 did an estimated 400 dollars in property damage about 7 p.m. last night but all persons involved escaped injury.

The crash apparently came about when Jeremiah Carter, 41, Negro, of Route 2, Greenville made a left turn while traveling west. At the same time, Louie D. Hines, 28, of Kinston was attempting to pass Carter and the collision resulted.

Carter, State Highway Patrolman James Boykin reported, has been charged with having no operator's license.

Hodges Offers Freedom Of Choice

Following several days of consideration we can only conclude there was a touch of greatness in the Governor's address to North Carolinians on the problem of school segregation. No previous Governor has ever spoken to a comparable audience on so purely a non-political basis.

Six points contributed to the quality of "greatness" in Governor Hodges' address Monday night: (1) a rapidly approaching crisis; (2) simplicity of approach; (3) an appeal to logic; (4) no firebreathing, threats or promises; (5) no supplications; (6) his words were those of a friendly, interested counselor to all Tar Heels.

Hodges offered food for thought, not empty words; and he had the considered reasoning of a number of North Carolina's most able men to lend weight to his logic.

He reminded his listeners of Federal Judge John J. Parker's statement, in part: "Nothing in the Constitution or in the decision of the Supreme Court takes away from the people freedom to choose the schools they attend. The Constitution, in other words, does not require integration. It merely forbids discrimination."

That was one basic principal in his advising a voluntary approach to maintaining segregated schools.

Another was included in the Governor's own words directed to the Negro citizenry: "No right thinking man would advise you to destroy the hopes of your race and the white race by superficial and "show-off" actions to demonstrate this equality. Only the person who feels he is inferior must resort to demonstrations to prove he is not.

A person convinced of his own equality, of his own self-respect, of his own race respect, needs no demonstrations to bolster his own convictions."

The third and fourth key points in the Hodges' address were also addressed to North Carolina Negroes: "How can you get the best education for your children? Can you do it by mixing them in the public schools through force of law and risking the abandonment of the public schools? Or through having them attend separate schools by choice?"

Throughout his talk wound the possibility of whether North Carolina would be someday forced to choose between the tragedy of dropping its public school system or continuing the climb up the ladder of education with voluntary separation at the school level. It is this choice the people of our state are facing.

If the truculent banners of folly flown by the NAACP are followed by our Negro citizenry, all of us lose.

On another page in today's Reflector is reprinted an August 7 editorial by a Negro publisher in New Jersey who has long been opposed to NAACP campaigning in the South. Davis Lee, in no uncertain terms, warns against adopting a policy of coercion and breaking old ties of friendship.

When such a man is so courageous as to speak out against the NAACP, virtually next door to the organization's stronghold, he must have something to say.

Two-Price Support Program Reviving

By LYNN NISBET

FARM PROGRAM — Support for a "two price" farm program, with surpluses in Government warehouses being offered on the domestic market at one price and on the world market at another, is being revived. There is also renewed talk about direct subsidies to farmers in lieu of the present rigid parity support policy. There are basic features of the much discussed "Brannon Plan," sponsored by former Secretary of Agriculture Charles H. Brannon.

Then Governor Kerr Scott was among the few Tarheel farm leaders who openly favored the Brannon idea. Most of them vigorously opposed it. Reporters who attended the Governor's news conference in 1951 and '52 will recall that Scott said many times that the country would eventually accept the major points of the Brannon plan—but under some other name..

OLLA RAY — Olla Ray Boyd, the Pinetown hog and shrubbery raiser and perennial candidate for high office, was around capitol square early this week. He said he has not paid the filing fee but has notified the State Board of Elections that he will be a candidate for Governor in the Democratic primary next spring.

He will run mainly on a segregation platform, pledging to maintain separate schools for the races at all costs. He hopes and expects that Dr. Beverly Lake will run for Attorney General and he believes a cooperative team of Governor Boyd and Attorney General Lake can handle the situation to satisfaction of a majority of the people.

Boyd got 2,069 votes for Governor in the Democratic primary of 1944. Four years later he received 2,011 votes for the same office. He stepped up to 5,900 for U.S. Senator in 1950, dropped back to 1,674 for that office in 1954. He figures that if everybody who wants schools segregated will vote for him next year he'll do a lot better.

PROFESSIONALS — The State Board of Medical Examiners last week granted license to 206 new doctors. Couple days later the Board of Law Examiners passed 124 aspirants for the bar. A member of law board said that probably means more new lawyers than doctors for North Carolina. He explained that many of the medical candidates were out of state students at Bowman Gray, Carolina and Duke, who very likely would somewhere else take their internships and establish medical practice, whereas "we done turned loose 124 lawyers on the public."

BEACHES — Operators of vacations facilities in the Myrtle Beach area complain that the tax drive and liquor boycott by South Carolina officers is turning their patrons to the North Carolina beaches. Meantime, the Carolina Beach and Wrightsville operators bitterly complain that the new ruling applying the 3 per cent sales tax is driving their customers to South Carolina.

The North Carolina folks can cite names and cases of cancellations of advance bookings because customers resent the tax. What they protest most is that the tax ruling is not due to recent legislative act, but to a new interpretation by the commissioner of revenue of a 1939 statute. The 3 per cent tax itself is new, but legislators from the area say when they voted for it they had no idea that a 15-year policy of exempting rental cottages from the Schedule B license tax would be changed.

Beach property owners have made several formal protests without avail. A meeting is scheduled for Friday night of this week to further protest and perhaps initiate court action to have the old policy reinstated.

CAGED — When Ed Rankin, Governor Hodges' secretary, gets back from the National Governors' Conference at Chicago, he will find they're prepared a cage for him in his absence. Rankin's desk has been out in the open of the big ante-room of the executive suites in the capitol, sort of sandwiched between the reception clerk and a couple other stenographers. No privacy for telephone or personal conversations, and subject to bother by every person who comes into the office.

Workmen this week are building a half-ceiling high partition setting off the southwest corner as a private office for the private secretary.

At the same time, partitions of similar type are being erected in the State Auditors office, providing office space for the overflow from the Governor's office. When the pre-auditing work was transferred to the Budget Bureau, it left a lot of unused space in the large outer office of the Auditor's suite. The partitions permit use of that space by attaches of the Governor's office without interference with normal functions. There will be separate entrances from the corridor into the spaces assigned the different agencies. There will also be a door with a lock to the Rankin sanctum, so that ultra-confidental documents and memoranda can be left on the desk safe from the prying eyes of casual visitors.

Meanwhile, because of the type of construction of the ancient capitol, the Governor, the Secretary of State, the Auditor and the Treasurer still have private offices almost big enough for small conventions. Lots of floor space is wasted in the older buildings around the square, because it is necessary for the top officials to have privacy and type of architecture does not lend itself to dividing the space. The more modern buildings have smaller private offices with board or committee rooms provided elsewhere in the buildings.

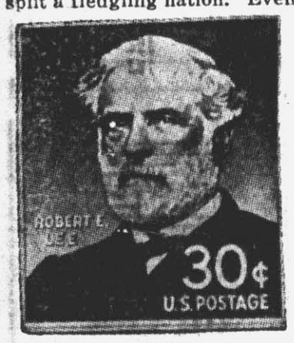

Robert E. Lee Stamp Is An Appropriate Tribute

We count it a right laudable gesture by the U. S. Post Office to honor the memory of Robert E. Lee with a new 30-cent stamp.

To the best of our knowledge, which never did focus very srtongly on stamp issues, this is the first or among the first U. S. postage stamps honoring a Confederate leader.

Additionally, we consider this stamp issue as recognition of Lee as a great figure not only to the South, but though he surrendered at Appomatox, he eventually captured the imagination of the nation as a whole.

General Lee was more than an actor in the war that split a fledgling nation. Even in his lifetime he was a hero in the South, and we hear that even in the North he epitomized the old gallantry and courtliness of a more gracious era. At war's end he served The UNITED States in fields other than those of arms to which he had been trained.

Because he is a magnetic figure in the eyes of all Americans, and because he served Americans in war and peace, we consider it appropriate that a symbolic tribute be given him.

The Post Office Department in Washington Monday released this copy of the new 30-cent Robert E. Lee postage stamp. The stamps will go on sale at Norfolk, Virginia, September 21.

Something Was Funny To 1,500 Top Russians

We'd argue our sense of humor is as keen as anyone's: but something made 1,500 deputies of the U. S. S. R. laugh aloud, and it keeps eluding us.

The occasion was Boss Bulganin's address to the Supreme Soviet last week in which he dismissed as unworkable President Eisenhower's proposal for mutual air inspection of military establishments and exchange of military blueprints.

News stories emanating from the scene didn't mention anyone keeping a straight face when Bulganin said both countries had vast areas in which anything could be hidden. They all laughed. Why?

Was there an undercurrent of hidden significance in such a statement, or were the deputies just playing up to the boss?

If for no other reason than our high degree of distrust for anything a Communist says or does, we suspect the element of humor was not present in that laughter by 1,500 top Communists.

Matter of fact, we wonder if there aren't grounds for terming that a "dirty laugh."

Somebody Told Me

Everybody Wants In On The Act

Quote yesterday's Connie column: "By the time you read this we'll know whether or not there was any cause for alarm." Perhaps that will be true today.

If something doesn't happen soon, one way or the other, all of the state's amateur radio operators will be exhausted.

In a way it's funny at this point. Everybody, including me, wants to get into the act. Amateurs are mainly concerned with being prepared, having the network well organized and their equipment in top shape. But running a strong second is the task of glorifying amateur radio.

It seems that most amateurs are piping late reports into the radio and TV stations for rebroadcast. Last year the amateur activity during Hazel won us special license tags. It made amateurs aware of the importance of giving the hobby publicity. This year I guess if the storm hits we'll be hollering for tax exemptions.

One station in Raleigh has an angle which is very interesting and effective. On the air he lines up stations in Wilmington, New Bern, Aurora, Morehead City, Edenton and Elizabeth City.

Each one of these stations is called upon by the net control station of the North Carolina Emergency Network (meeting at 3865 kilocycles) for reports from one end of the coast to the other. He gives his location, the wind velocity, the barometric pressure, temperature and general weather conditions. The Raleigh amateur station tape records this procedure and releases it to the local broadcast station WRAL.

In advance of the taping each amateur is warned: "Be sure about your reports. Do not insert opinions."

If Connie would just take a reverse I would say that she has offered us a great deal. She has shown us that we can get well prepared and in quick shape. As much of a she-devil as Hazel was, you have to give her a little credit for teaching us a lesson.

In the meantime, the suspense is killing me. "Getting into the act" helps relieve the tension a little.

And I thank you.

Notebook On Life

Remember Edward Everette?

By ED CREAGH

GETTYSBURG, Pa. (AP)—Almost 6,000 men had been killed in the battle. Hundreds more were dying by the day. Gettysburg — a peaceful bustling town today — was a charnel house in 1863.

So, to bury the dead, a cemetery was started. And a consecration ceremony was decided upon. That called for an orator. Edward Everett was the silver-tongued choice of all concerned.

Would he come? He would, he informed the committee but he was a busy man. Couldn't they put the ceremony off a month or so?

They could and did — for Edward Everett. Then, pretty much as an afterthought they sent an invitation to the President of the United States.

He came — on the date selected by Edward Everett.

Abraham Lincoln and his party came by train, after a horse-powered switch from one railroad to another at Baltimore. He walked from the station to David Wills' house in the village square.

There he stayed the night. He knew he would be called upon to make a few remarks so he brought some notes from Washington. He didn't think much of this first draft so he called in the reigning expert. Edward Everett was not the first nor the last outside consultant called in to help on a presidential address.

In the end, though, it was Abe Lincoln's speech.

He wrote it, painstakingly, on a little oval table you still can see in a little room over a drugstore here in Gettysburg.

But he didn't get to deliver it on schedule.

For one thing, the parade to the cemetery was late in starting. Then Edward Everett was a half-hour late arriving at the cemetery. He had been out inspecting the battlefield.

Every school child has been told what happened next. Everett spoke for two hours.

"Standing beneath this serene sky," he began, "overlooking these broad fields. . ."

It got pretty deadly before he was through.

Abraham Lincoln pumped Everett's hand and then spoke his own few words, starting "Four-score and seven years ago. . ."

It is a tribute to his audience that those who could hear the President applauded — six times, according to the Adams Sentinel and General Advertiser's correspondent.

Strength for the Day

By EARL L. DOUGLASS

MEASURE OF OUR FAITH

Only a few people come to the end of their lives with large fortunes. The overwhelming majority of the people who inherit money, lose it. Most people who start out to make money never come anywhere near attaining their goal.

Yet when those of us who are past middle life look back over the financial situation we wonder how we could have been so stupid. A few investments, the soundness of which must have been evident to everyone, if made twenty-five or thirty-five years ago, would have resulted in vast wealth today. Probably htere are similar opportunities confronting us now and some will see them and act—and some will not.

Recently I was told of a company in which the principal officers had no faith. The enterprise simply had no future, they said. Sometimes they would shoot a hole of golf for a share of stock. But the man who fired the engine in the boiler plant believed in the enterprise, drew out all his savings, and begged and borrowed every penny he could lay his hands on. Today he has such a fortune that he scarely knows what to do with his income. The company's officers could not see it, but he saw it.

Faith! Faith! Faith! It works in business, in romance, in the pushing of one's life toward the goal of success. "Now faith is the giving substance to things hoped for."

Other Editors Are Saying . . . Jumpeth On The Editor

Cowlitz County (Washington) Advocate

G.F. McClane, Editor, May 20, 1915

Consider the editor. He weareth purple and fine linen. His abode is amongst the mansions of the rich. His wife hath her limousine and his first-born sporteth a racing car that can hit her up in forty flat.

Lo! All the people breaketh their necks to hand him money. A child is born unto the wife of a merchant in the bazaar. The physician getteth ten gold plunks. The editor writeth a stick and a half and telleth the multitude that the child tippeth the beam at nine pounds. Yea he lieth even as a centurion. And the proud father giveth him a Cremo.

Behold, the young one groweth up and graduateth. And the editor putteth him into his paper a swell notice. Yea, a peach of a notice. He telleth of the wisdom of the young woman and of her excellent comeliness. Like the roses of Sharon is she and her gown is played up to beat the band. And the dressmaker getteth two score and four iron men. And the editor getteth a note of thanks from the S.G.G.

The daughter goeth on a journey. And the editor throweth himself on the story of the farewell party. It runneth a column solid. And the fair one remembereth him from afar off with a picture postal card that costeth six for a jitney.

Behold, she returneth and the youth of the city fall down and worship. She picketh one and Lo, she picketh a lemon. But the editor calleth him one of our most promising young men and getteth away with it. And they send unto him a bid to the wedding feast and behold, the bids are fashioned by Muntgummery Hawbuck, in a far city.

Flowery and long is the wedding notice which the editor printeth. The minister getteth ten bones. The groom standeth the editor off for a twelvemonth subscription.

All flesh is grass and in time the wife is gathered into the silo. The minister getteth his bit. The editor printeth a death notice, two columns of obituary, three lodge notices, a cubit of poetry, and a card of thanks. And he forgetteth to read proof on the head, and the darned thing cometh out "Gone to Her Last Roasting Place."

And all that are akin to the deceased jumpeth on the editor with exceeding great jumps. And they pulleth out their ads and cancelleth their subscriptions and they swing the hammer unto the third and fourth generations.

Water Power Wasted By Dillydallying

By RAY TUCKER

WASHINGTON — More than $5 billion worth of water power urgently needed for national defense and industrial expansion has gone to waste because of Congressional dillydallying over this problem, although President Eisenhower and his two predecessors must share part of the responsibility.

It is estimated that the overall loss from these politically stalemated projects amounts to $1 billion annually, and it can never be reclaimed.

The major responsibility falls upon extremists on both sides of the 20-year-old controversy over public or private development of these vast untapped resources. Wilfully and deliberately, according to the record, they have preferred to preserve a political issue for future campaigns rather than solve a great national problem.

The quarrel over the Dixon-Yates TVA—AEC contract has given the most dramatic illustration of this economic absurdity. But the loss involved in this two-year-old controversy is only peanuts by comparison with the wastefulness on several other more important but delayed developments.

STAGGERING LOSSES The treaty with Canada for joint development of hydroelectricity at Niagara Falls for instance, was signed in 1950. Canada immediately began construction of facilities that will soon generate $60,000,000 worth of power annually, plus the share allocated to the United States when we are ready to use it.

Engineers estimate that our loss on this single undertaking is $60,000,000 a year, which means waste of many millions already. Even if we could begin to build now, there would be five more years before completion, or a total loss of $300,000,000.

Nor does this figure include revenue that would have accrued from establishment of new industries, workers' pay envelopes, taxes and all the other economic benefits based on a new and vast utility system.

POLITICO-ECONOMIC TILTING The pattern of politico-economic tilting at partisan windmills with respect to Niagara Falls conforms to that in all the other water-power disputes. They involve needless delay in construction of dams and generating facilities at TVA in Tennessee, Hell's Canyon in Idaho, the John Day Dam in Washington and the Fryingpan and Upper Colorado Basin developments in Colorado. There are also many other smaller works.

The Congressional heirs of the Roosevelt-Truman-Ickes faction demand that Uncle Sam build, own and operate these proposed projects along the lines of TVA. Advocates of private enterprise insist that they be financed and developed by the utility companies. Their forces are so equally matched on Capitol Hill that all rival bills are stymied in committee or in differences between House and Senate.

IKE INCONSISTENT President Eisenhower tried to break the deadlock with his "partnership" idea although he has not been completely consistent. He departed from that path when he declared in favor of Federal development of the two Colorado projects.

Despite political pressure from both sides, or perhaps because of these powerful and conflicting interests Ike has not yet formulated a definite program for cuttin; this Gordian knot. He must share some responsibility for this continuing waste of national resources.

PRACTICAL PROPOSAL General disgust with these costly and unnecessary delays may induce Congress to adopt the practical solution proposed by Representative Edmund P. Radwan of New York. He suggests immediate start on construction at Niagara Falls, with the question of eventual ownership and operation to be determined upon or before completion five years hence.

All this additional power, as World War II demonstrated, will be essential in a future conflict, especially in atomic warfare. It will be necessary for peace time industrial expansion now foreseen by economic advisers to the White House. So, as Radwan urges, why not cut out the ideological argument and start to build now?

We Never Had It So Good

By ELMER ROESSNER

We never had it so good.

Total production of goods and services, personal income, employment and stock prices never were so high. Business is cocky and is stepping up the rate of capital investment; consumers are confident and are buying their heads off. What an era!

But before we see what the boys in the back room will have, let's see if there aren't a few flies in our champagne. Such as:

INVENTORIES. The picture isn't sharp. Some economists say present inventories could be beefed up; others say that any general increase is simply buying against future production and sooner or later will have to be worked off—which would mean a drop in industrial buying.

MORTGAGES. The total outstanding on one to four-family homes is now more than $80 billion. While that is an unprecedented high, the payoff is probably less than rent would be. However, if there is a downturn in employment, or an unseemly number of postwar homes start bursting at the seams, failures to make payments on this huge indebtedness could accelerate any decline.

CONSUMER CREDIT. Total outstanding is now about $32.5 billion equal to 12 per cent of the total annual personal income, or the total of every retail sale for two months. Many economists think this is a dangerous level.

OVERPRODUCTION. There are more than 500,000 unsold cars in dealers' hand with new models not too far off; there are unsold quantities of various appliances in warehouses, and in some areas houses are selling pretty slow. We have worked out of this kind of situation before; can we keep on doing it forever?

FARM SURPLUSES. While it's always best to have a good reserve, recovery in other parts of the world make these surpluses poor tender in buying friendships, and there is a limit to what the youngsters can demolish in the school-lunch program. Surpluses themselves are not a problem; it's the results that are bothersome. One result: farm income keeps on declining. It was the only important figure to drop in the second quarter.

No single factors could puncture the boom but, in total these are exerting a negative pressure. This does not mean that the boom is nearing an end but it does mean that adequate measures should be taken to offset the downward pull.

SEES "READJUSTMENT" IN BUSINESS IN 1956

At least one noted economist has predicted a business "readjustment" in 1956. V Lewis Bassie, director of the University of Illinois Bureau of Economic and Business Research, has gone on record warning "if inventories move temporarily higher still, it would be only at the cost of aggravated instability later." Aggravated instability — hm-m!

Half of the increase in business in the year ending June 30 was caused by inventory buildups, he finds.

"There is nothing in sight of sufficient magnitude to stop the decline" when this and other factors turn down, he declares.

However, there are those who believe the growing atomic energy industry can do more than merely stop a decline.

WORMSEED, ALAS, SLIPS A LITTLE LOWER IN PRICE

Prices for lobelia herb and prickly ash bark have declined with new crops coming, the National Association of Purchasing Agents reports. However goldenseal root, sarsaparilla, rauwolfia serpentina, senega root saffron and gum aloes were firmer. Wormseed slipped a little lower in price.

While these strange-sounding commodities may have some interest to witch doctors and charm merchants, they are very important in the pharmaceutical business.

CAMPAIGN IS SWELL BUT SLOGAN MUMBLES

"Operation Snowflake" — U.S. Steel's campaign to boost appliances as Christmas gifts—was so successful last year that it will be repeated this year with the slogan, "Make it a White Christmas—give her a major appliance."

Retailers and business news reporters know what "major" appliances are. But do husbands? Some we know will think they are being asked to give their wife a pair of brass rosettes.

PLANS UNANNOUNCED—A trans-Pacific telephone conversation between Airman 2nd class Daniel C. Schmidt (left) and his wife, Una Schmidt-Fine, failed to disclose publicly whether she will return to him or stay with husband No. 2 whom she married in the belief Schmidt was killed in Korea. Mrs. Schmidt-Fine and her 2 1-2 year-old son, Danny Schmidt, (right), are in seclusion at Nevada City, Calif. She is living apart from her second husband, Alford B. Fine, while trying to decide which mate to choose. Schmidt, one of 11 American airmen released recently from a Red China prison, talked to Una from Japan. He and the other freed airmen are en route home. (AP Wirephotos)

GOP Putting All Bets On Ike As A Candidate

By JAMES MARLOW
AP News Analyst

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Republicans are contentedly putting all their bets on President Eisenhower's running again and winning in 1956, and the Democrats are gloomy about their prospects if he does.

That's the picture which emerges from this year's governors' conference in Chicago where most of the states' chief executives, Republican and Democratic, are meeting to discuss politics and their mutual problems.

At Chicago nearly all the Republicans who have done any talking for print are not speaking in terms of any Republican presidential candidate except Eisenhower. The Democrats who talked are divided and unenthusiastic about their prospects.

Because the Republicans are putting all their eggs into Eisenhower's basket, they seem destined for panic next spring if he says he will not seek another term. He has said he would decide in the spring.

They won't have much time left then to build up a successor for him. No other Republican is outstanding. But they probably won't have any more trouble picking a candidate in 1956—if Eisenhower doesn't run—than the Democrats.

Here are some samples of what the Democrats at Chicago had to say:

Gov. Abraham A. Ribicoff of Connecticut: he doubts any of the three top Democratic candidates now could carry his state. The three he named: Adlai Stevenson, the Democrats' unsuccessful 1952 candidate; Gov. Averell Harriman of New York; and Sen. Estes Kefauver of Tennessee.

Gov. Robert B. Meyner of New Jersey: as of today there's doubt any Democrat could beat Eisenhower in 1956. There is more sentiment in his state for Stevenson than for Harriman, he said, although he thinks Harriman is interested in the nomination.

(Harriman reaffirmed his own preference for Stevenson. He said he wouldn't encourage a move to nominate him. But he declined to say he would discourage it, either. (This can be interpreted as running while standing still.)

And Gov. Frank J. Lausche of Ohio—one Republican said Lausche was the best man the Democrats could find—issued what must be the master understatement of the year.

He didn't say he would like the Democratic nomination in 1956. He said he would not seek it "avidly or fanatically." This leaves him plenty of room to seek it without acting silly.

The best Gov. G. Mennen Williams of Michigan seemed able to think of at the moment was more negative than positive. He said Eisenhower, now 64, is an "old man." Immediately Republican governors rushed to the defense of old men.

The Republicans, who offered no doubts about Eisenhower's candidacy and victory next year, appeared divided among themselves only on the question of what Democrat would be easiest to beat.

Gov. Goodwin J. Knight of California, while predicting another Eisenhower victory, though Stevenson would be a softer touch than Harriman. So did Gov. Arthur B. Langlie of Washington.

Gov. George N. Craig of Indiana thought the Republicans would have an easier time knocking off Harriman. It was Craig who suggested the Democrats could put their best foot forward by nominating Lausche.

Store Break-In Attempt Probed

An investigation of an attempted break-in at Lowe's women's clothing store on Evans Street Wednesday night is continuing today, police authorities reported.

The break-in was discovered by police officer J. W. Jenkins about 10:30 p. m as he was making his rounds. An attempt had been made to enter a rear door but the prospective thief or thieves apparently had been frightened away.

No merchandise was taken.

Tribe Whips Tigers To Take Lead

Yanks Close At Third With Chisox In Second

By ED WILKS
The Associated Press

Whoever thought the Kansas City Athletics would have a voice in the American League pennant race? Yet it's been the A's who have had the big say in the snarled flag chase over the past two weeks.

In that span, Lou Boudreau's sixth-place also-rans have thwarted the big contenders in five of nine meetings. And last night, they rapped the Chicago White Sox out of first place with a 5-4 decision, leaving the way clear for Cleveland to claim the lead for the first time since May 21 as Ralph Kiner smacked a ninth-inning grand slammer to trim Detroit 6-4.

That left the Tribe two percentage points ahead of the White Sox, who in turn are four points to the good over New York after the Yankees' 3-2, 13-inning victory over Boston. The defeat sent the Red Sox two games behind.

The A's, who took two of three from Boston and split a four-game set with the Yanks before matching Chicago 1-1 in their three-game series, belted the Chisox for two first inning runs on back-to-back triples by Vic Power and Enos Slaughter. Hector Lopez then put them beyond reach with a home run and single that made it 5-2.

Chicago had just four hits in seven innings off winner Alex Kellner, one a two-run homer by Minnie Minoso while the A's were belting Harry Byrd. Then when reliefer Tom Gorman opened the eighth, the Sox got two more runs, one on Bob Nieman's homer, before the righthander fanned Minoso with the bases loaded.

Cleveland had home runs by Al Rosen and Hal Naragon (his first in the majors) but trailed the Tigers 4-2 on the strength of Earl Torgeson's two-run shot off Mike Garcia in the seventh. Then after pinch singles by Hoot Evers and Hank Foiles and Al Smith's bunt single, Kiner put Al Aber's first pitch over the left-field fence.

Two innings earlier, Aber had relieved rookie Jim Bunning to fan Kiner with the bases loaded.

Only Lou Gehrig (23), Jimmy Foxx (17) and Babe Ruth (16) hit more grand-slam homers than Kiner, who has 13, in the majors.

An error by Billy Klaus and a drawn-in outfield that enabled Andy Carey to line a run-scoring single over the head of Ted Williams, broke up the Yank-Red Sox duel. Don Larsen, making it three straight since returning from the minors 11 days ago, took it over Frank Sullivan after New York had matched Grady Hatton's two-run single in the second with a pair in the third.

Rain postponed Washington at Baltimore in the only other American League game on tap.

In the National, Brooklyn topped New York 5-4 in a game called in the seventh by rain; St. Louis put second place Milwaukee 15 games back 7-2; Pittsburgh edged Philadelphia 3-2 in 10 innings, and Cincinnati took two at Chicago, 7-2 and 6-3.

Gil Hodges drove in three runs with a double and a single as the Dodgers packed their scoring in the first two frames. Karl Spooner won in relief after Roger Craig went wild in a two-run Giant fifth.

St. Louis smacked 11 hits three each by Stan Musial and Alex Grammas, while Tom Poholsky held the Braves to six. Musial got his 1,000th extra base hit with a double.

Ted Kluszewski hit his 37th homer (his 200th lifetime) and the Cubs' Ernie Banks tied Brooklyn's Duke Snider for the major league lead with his 38th in the second game as the Redlegs snapped Chicago's six-game winning streak. Rookie Don Gross won his first major league decision in the opener.

A bases-loaded single by Jerry Lynch won for the Pirates, who had an early 2-0 lead on Frank Thomas' two-run homer.

Eddie Brannick is completing his fiftieth year with the New York Giants. Man and boy, the popular secretary of the team has been the good will ambassador of the club. He's lived with the team's successes and died with its failures. Over the half-century stretch Eddie has gained friends from all walks of life, ranging from captains of industry, leading political lights and civic leaders to the newsboys along the road which the Giants have traveled on spring tours and during the regular season.

Brannick joined the Giants in 1905 as an office boy for Owner John T. Brush. A bright youngster from New York's West Side, Eddie was thrilled when Manager John McGraw suggested that he come up to the Polo Grounds and guard the baseball bag during the practice sessions and during the game. Bustling around for Mr. Brush in the mornings and hustling up to the Polo Grounds in the afternoons, Eddie was the happiest kid in the world.

Naturally, Eddie had dreams of playing in a Giant uniform, but he wasn't cut out for that role. McGraw pointed out that the front office was the place for his talents. It offered a great future and a job that might last as long as he lived. Even to this day, Eddie respects the great Giant manager by referring to him as "Mr. McGraw" whenever he recalls the great triumphs of the past. Not that Eddie lives in the past. He got as great a kick out of the Giants winning the pennant last season as he did in 1905, his first season with the club. Happy anniversary, Eddie!

Carmen Basilio Wins, But Booed

By JACK HAND

NEW YORK (AP) — Boos are a new experience to Carmen Basilio. On his way to the welterweight championship of the world there were only cheers for the native son of Canastota, N.Y.

But last night at Madison Square Garden boos rang in his ears for the first time as he whipped Italo Scortichini in a nontitle 10-rounder. They were not directed especially at the champion but more at both fighters as the fight became dull in spots.

"The boos bothered me," Carmen said after the fight in his dressing room as handlers patched up the slice under his right eye.

"Never before when I fought, did I ever hear boos. I tried to make a fight of it but he ran. I was overanxious to please the fans. Maybe I was reaching too much. Anybody who fights him, has to miss. I licked him and that's what counts.

"I knew I had him from the first round on, outfought him inside and outside. The body punches took it out of him. He started running good in the fifth."

Basilio, making his first start since he won the title by stopping Tony MeMarco, June 10, wasn't quite up to par. Still he controlled the action all the way, except for sporadic bursts by the swarthy Italian.

The crowd of about 2,500 jeered and stomped for action in the slow middle rounds. They jeered again when the decision was announced. Referee Harry Kessler had it 9-1 and both judges Harold Barnes and Artie Aidala 7-2-1, a unanimous ballot for the champ. The AP card also had it 7-2-1.

Musial's Double One Of Thrills

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Stan Musial bagged the 1,000th extra base hit of his relatively short career on a line-drive double last night and further cemented his place among baseball's greats.

Only eight other major league ball players hold membership in one of baseball's most exclusive fraternities and most of them took 20 years to make it. Stan now is in his 13th full year with the St. Louis Cards.

"I guess that double I hit off Lew Burdette in the first inning rates among my dozen all-time thrills," a smiling Stan said after the Cards beat Milwaukee 7-2 to end a lengthy tailspin.

"After all," the modest slugger added, "there are some pretty fine ball players in that group."

The "group" includes Babe Ruth, Mel Ott, Lou Gehrig, Ty Cobb, Tris Speaker, Rogers Hornsby, Honus Wagner and Jimmy Foxx.

Tam O'Shanter To Open Play Today

By CHARLES CHAMBERLAIN

CHICAGO (AP) — A field of 105 starry-eyed pros today start chasing golf's rainbow for the post of gold going to the winner of the "World" Tournament at Tam O'Shanter.

One of them will be a wealthy man after the 72 holes are completed Sunday.

The champion receives $50,000, a $55,000 contract for an all-expense paid tour of 55 exhibitions, and an option to play 50 more at $1,000 each.

Without a doubt, this extravaganza, climaxing nearly two weeks of competitive frolic on Tam's 6,900 yard playground, is the world's greatest "choke-up" tournament.

"One bad shot and 20 guys will pass you up," said defending Champion Bob Toski, who last year recovered from the effects of a two-over-par 7 to carve a par 72 on the final round and win by one stroke over collapsing Earl Stewart and Jack Burke.

Toski won the hard way—as has been the case in many of these "world" meets. He had to can an 8-foot putt for a birdie three on the 72nd hole for a total of 274, 14 under par.

Perhaps the favorite in this year's contest is Doug Ford, who dropped a 40-foot putt yesterday to defeat Roberto de Vicenzo 1-up on the final green of their match in international team competition. The U.S. team swept 6 of the 8 match-play games to take the two-day affair 8½ points to 3½.

The 33-year-old Ford has been the country's hottest pro since he found an old hickory shaft and attached it to his mallet putter head. He won the national PGA and the All-American with it.

Patty Berg is the choice to beat a field of 22 other women pros competing in their "world" section for a $5,000 first award.

Wiffi Smith appears the logical choice among 12 women amateurs.

East Win 2-0 In High School Game

GREENSBORO (AP) — The West defeated the East, 2-0 here last night in the first North Carolina all-star high school baseball game.

West Hurlers Roger Sheppard of Gastonia, Harold Stowe, Belmont and Tommy Bridges, Shelby, fanned 17 East batters.

Sheppard poled a double in the third inning, stole third and came home on an infield error.

Kiner Homers To Join Star Group

CLEVELAND (AP)—Ralph Kiner, nearing 33 and the end of his major league playing career, today joined a select group of stars who have hit 13 or more grand slam home runs.

The veteran Cleveland outfielder hit No. 13 last night in a dramatic ninth inning as the Indians defeated the Detroit Tigers 6-4 and move into first place in defense of their American League title.

The blow hit off southpaw Al Aber after he had been fanned by the same pitcher in the seventh inning with the bases loaded, tied Kiner with Joe DiMaggio for fourth place among the major league sluggers.

Only Lou Gehrig, Jimmy Foxx and Babe Ruth ever hit more. Unless he breaks out all over with grand slammers, Gehrig's record is beyond his reach for the former Yankee Ironman hit 23 during his career. But Kiner is within striking distance of Foxx and Ruth. Double X hit 17 and the Babe 16.

Before he sent Aber's first pitch soaring over the left field fence, Ralph had been tied with Hank Greenberg, Rogers Hornsby, Ruth, York and Ted Williams with 12. It was Kiner's first grand slam homer since 1953 when he tied Hornsby's National League mark. His greatest output of homers with all bases occupied came in 1949 when he hit four.

Last night's homer, the 14th of the year and the 365th of his career, also boosted Kiner's runs batted in figure to 1001. Only five other active players have driven in that many. Del Ennis of the Phillies reached the 1,000 mark Tuesday night.

Ted Williams, Stan Musial, Enos Slaughter and Mickey Vernon are the only other active players who have passed 1,000.

Favored Netters Winning True To Form At Newport

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP)— The Newport Invitation Tennis Tournament was down to the quarter-final round today with the No. 1 rated players still in running for the title but with the seeded ranks otherwise fairly well riddled.

Defending Champion Ham Richardson of Baton Rouge, La., the No. 1 domestic seed, was paired against Straight Clark of Pasadena, Calif., the 1954 runner-up, in the top match of the day.

Denmark's Kurt Nielsen, No. 1 foreign seed and runner-up to Tony Trabert for the Wimbledon title, faced the dangerous Herb Flam of Beverly Hills, Calif., in the other match involving ranked players. Flam is seeded fourth and Clark fifth on the U.S. list.

The other matches send Australia's ninth-ranking player, Mal Anderson, against Atushi Miyagi, Japanese Davis Cupper and unseeded Cliff Mayne of Berkeley, Calif., against 20-year-old Bob Wilson of Britain.

Anderson turned in the big upset yesterday when he eliminated second-seeded Gil Shea of Los Angeles 8-6, 6-4. Richardson had no trouble against South Africa's Johann Kupferburger, winning 6-4, 6-2 while Flam disposed of Irv Dorfman of New York 6-1, 6-2. Clark sidelined Japan's Kosei Hamo 7-5, 6-4.

Hal Burrows of Charlottesville, Va., was blasted from the tourney by Mayne 6-4, 6-4.

Coast Guard Vet Fishes Hard Way

NORFOLK, Va. (AP)—Marcus Cordrey, retired Coast Guard veteran, caught his record fish the hard way.

Cordrey, working at the Naval Air Station said he saw the big fish in shallow water and threw rocks at him. The fish swam into deeper water. With the help of two sailors he went out in a boat. The fish continued to swim on the surface. Cordrey caught him in the gills with his hands and, backed by the sailors, got him into the boat. The fish, a black drum, weighed 93 pounds.

Cordrey believes the fish was stunned by blasting operations on the Norfolk-Newport News tunnel under Hampton Roads.

First Sailfish

Sailfish landed at Little River, S. C. The first sailfish of the season to be brought into this fishing center is proudly held by Toby Ward, of Greenville, N. C., and Captain Bill Vereen of the Little River Fishing Fleet. The large billfish, which measured 7 feet and 8 inches and weighed 55 pounds, gave Ward a terrific battle for 1 hour and 20 minutes. Little River is a "Fisherman's Paradise," which caters to deep sea trolling and channel fishing.

Pros Have Won Four Straight

Browns Favored By 2 TD's

By JAMES DAILEY

CHICAGO (AP) — The Cleveland Browns are two-touchdown favorites to take the College All-Stars in their big battle at Soldier Field tomorrow night, but it may not be that easy.

After four years of famine —the last collegiate victory was the 17-7 defeat of the Philadelphia Eagles in 1950—promoters of the game (Chicago Tribune Charities) have introduced a streamlined all-star organization in an effort to turn the tide.

The new policy, announced last year after the all-stars' 31-6 defeat by Detroit, finds a hard-bitten crew of old pros led by Curly Lambeau of Green Bay Packer fame calling the shots instead of college coaches, as in former years.

Assisting Lambeau is Steve Owen, once head man of the New York Giants footballers; Hunk Anderson, creator of those tough-old-time Chicago Bear Lines, and Hamp Pool, until recently head coach of the Los Angeles Rams.

Those veteran mentors have substituted the wide-open, predominantly passing game of the pros for the more stereotyped play of the collegians. They also have hand-picked 49 huskies for the job at hand, rather than permitting 70 or 80 all-stars to clutter up the camp as in previous years.

This hand-picked "professional model" aggregation recently hung a 9-6 defeat on the Chicago Cardinals in a practice game.

The game was expected to be played under fair skies in a 60-degree temperature.

It will be televised nationally (8:30 p.m. EST—ABC).

Lambeau announced he will start an offensive backfield unit of Ralph Guglielmi of Notre Dame at quarterback; Dick Moegle of Rice and Dave Middleton of Auburn at halfbacks, and Wisconsin's Alan Ameche at fullback.

Babe Doing Fine In Cancer Fight

By MAX B. SKELTON

GALVESTON Tex. (AP)— Babe Didrikson Zaharias cautiously got out of a hospital bed to show that she wasn't licked yet—and was determined to win her second battle with cancer.

The world's greatest woman athlete said, "get my shoes," when her husband encouragingly told her:

"Show us how you can walk. They hear all this talk about your being sick and may think you can't walk."

George Zaharias, the former "Weeping Greek" of wrestling fame, beamed happily as the Babe cautiously left her bed and walked around the room.

The Babe was making plans to return to competitive golf next season when Zaharias and a visitor entered her John Sealy Hospital room.

"I finished a nap a few minutes ago and have been thinking about my '56 clubs and how pretty they are going to look," she said.

"I'm feeling much better."

"It's my right foot that bothers me," she explained, "but it is much better after the treatments."

Babe began receiving X-ray treatments last Thursday, minutes after doctors told her a "small cancer lesion" in the pelvic area was the cause of pain that persisted after a successful spinal disc operation June 22.

It was a recurrence, a possibility that haunts many patients who have won a bout with cancer. In 1953 in Beaumont, the Babe underwent surgery for removal of a rectal malignancy.

Doctors were uncertain as to her golf future after the Beaumont operation but four months later she placed third at Chicago's Tam O'Shanter and won the Women's National Open at Peabody, Mass., in July 1954.

No surgery is planned this time, at least for the present. Both the Babe and George recognize they face another tough battle. Both are confident.

George puts it this way:

"The time we've spent here in the hospital is just a time out for a rest after being a champion 27 years."

The X-ray treatments at the University of Texas Hospital are expected to continue another 10 to 15 days.

After that?

"We're going to do just what our doctors tell us," George said.

"We believe in our doctors here and feel that what can be done will be done here. We are hopeful, just like before. The Babe will come out of it and believe she will. She's responding very well. She has less pain day by day. She took a ride night before last in a car, walks around and is talking about going to a beauty shop to have her hair washed and curled up.

"It is just one of the unfortunate things of life, but she took it with great courage."

Babe took periodic checkups following the Beaumont operation. All reports were good until after the disc operation.

Mail, flowers and telephone calls have poured into John Sealy since the Friday cancer announcement.

"She's heard from everybody, everywhere, sports world, kids, old people, people we don't know," George said. "She's asked them to donate to the Cancer Fund but they donate and send flowers anyhow."

Larsen Did Not Follow Advice

NEW YORK (AP) — Two years ago Marty Marion suggested Don Larsen throw his pitching toe-plate as far as he could and try his hand as an outfielder.

A year ago, still a pitcher, he lost the most games in the major leagues. Just three months ago, a masterful 13-inning performance thoroughly disgusted Casey Stengel shipped him as far off as he could —to the New York Yankees' farther-most farm club, Denver.

Today, the same Don Larsen, sometimes known as "Losing Pitcher Larsen," has emerged as the fellow Manager Stengel is counting on to become the saviour of the New York Yankees' frayed pitching staff.

Larsen, only 11 days out of minor league exile, has turned in three straight victories, his last coming yesterday when he cooled off the blistering Boston Red Sox with a The 26-year-old right-hander permitted only five hits, none in the last six innings, as he eked out a 3-2 triumph in a brilliant pitching duel with Frank Sullivan.

By his own admittance, it was not only Larsen's best pitched game as a Yankee but the best of his entire major league career. He's won only 14 games all told, three of them coming last year when he dropped 21.

"I guess you can credit my newly perfected slider," Larsen said as he attempted to explain his sudden success after two and a half frustrating campaigns.

Jaycees Win LL Title In Ayden

The red-hot Jaycees, who beat the Lions two straight to win in the semi-finals, also defeated the Rotary in three consecutive games to take the Ayden Little League title.

With pitcher Tommy Dunn winning two games and J. H. Loftin winning another, the Jaycees made it a short playoffs. The scores were 7-2, 6-5 and 6-5.

The newly-crowned champs stayed on top in the tight Little League race all season. Managers Red Nobles and Marvin Baldtree and assistants Sonny Smith, Ronnie Tripp and Leon Joyner did a grand job in tutoring the youngsters.

Manager Nobles cited players Loftin, Phillip Joyner, Robert Cannon and William Harrington for outstanding hitting during the year. Frankie Hart, Ernest Loftin, Artie McLawhorn, Alvin Wingate and Barrett Sarmell did a good job defensively for the champs.

Who Will Start For Aussies In Italy Cup Match?

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The draw for the three-day interzone Davis Cup final between Australia and Italy will be made today and the big question is who will play in the singles matches for the Aussies.

Australia and Italy open the battle for the right to meet the United States in the challenge round later this month with a pair of singles matches Friday. The Americans won the cup Down Under last year.

Harry Hopman, captain of the Australian team, has been silent on his singles selection. In recent interzone matches he has used Ken Rosewall and Rex Hartwig. Lew Hoad, young star of the Aussie cup team, has been passed over. There have been rumors that Hoad was in Hopman's "doghouse."

The Australians whipped Japan at Glen Cove, N.Y., last week, but looked poor in victory. Hartwig, who played in place of Hoad in the singles, was unimpressive although he won both of his matches. Hoad teams with Rosewall in the doubles and on handily. Just what Hopman will do about the singles position for the important Italian matches is anybody's guess.

Yesterday, the two teams met for the first time in ceremonies at City Hall as Philadelphia officially welcomed the players. Replicas of Independence Hall were presented to Hopman and Vannie Canpele, Italian captain.

Hartwig, Hoad, Rosewall, Neale Fraser and Ashley Cooper of the Australian team were on hand as were Fausto Gardini, Giuseppe Merlo, Orlando Sirola and Nicola Pietrangeli of the Italian team. Gardini is the Italian tennis champion.

Underwood Takes Ping Pong Finals

Southpaw Gill Underwood took the Summer School ping pong tournament yesterday at East Carolina College by defeating Dave Carson, in a hard-fought match, 3-2.

Both boys had reached the finals in previous tournaments but neither had won the championship.

Carson, the bespectacled stroker, took the first game with his powerful overhead smashes, 21-18. Underwood bounced back to win the second one on his fine vollying, 21-17. Carson went ahead 2 games to one but Underwood tied it up 2-all.

Th final game was close all the way with neither player getting more than a three-point lead. With the score 15-all, Underwood went ahead 16-15 and built it up to 19-16. With the count point-17 Carson drove a shot into the net and Underwood was the winner.

Shirley Moose had taken the women's tournament a couple weeks earlier. She defeated Jean Faulkner for the title.

Haney Sunbathes

PITTSBURGH (AP)—When Manager Fred Haney of the Pittsburgh Pirates was a major league ballplayer he didn't have to worry about getting enough sun. Now, because there are so many night games, Haney is a frequent afternoon sunbather on the roof of the midtown hotel where he lives while the Pirates are in the Steel City.

Reveals Charges In Heresy Trial Case

MILWAUKEE (AP)—The Rev. John Gerberding second small town Lutheran pastor ordered to a church trial on charges of heresy, made public yesterday the eight charges the church spelled out against him.

Rev. Gerberding, 33, of Menomonee Falls in nearby Waukesha County, was accused by the Northwest Synod of the United Lutheran Church of "preaching and teaching doctrines and opinions" in conflict with official doctrine. He issued a general denial of the charges and said "the thing now is to win the trial."

The minister appeared before a synod investigating committee last week. He was told then he will stand trial here Aug. 30.

Pastor Gerberding, father of three children, said "I am sure I will have a fair trial." The trial board will be made up of seven synod pastors.

The formal charges, which Pastor Gerberding made public yesterday, accuse him of "denying the divine authority of the Holy Scripture contrary to the witness of the Scripture itself and contrary to Lutheran confession." He refused to detail the other seven allegations except to say they were "derivative from the first one." He claimed they did not accurately describe" his ministry.

Dr. Paul E. Bishop of Minneapolis, synod president, said the charges against Pastor Gerberding were "generally" similar to those on which the Rev. George P. Crist Jr., of Durham, also in Waukesha County was convicted last month. Rev. Crist was suspended from his pulpit. His case is subject to review by the synod convention next spring.

Rev. Crist was found guilty of denying the virgin birth of Christ, the physical resurrection of Christ and the responsibility of Adam for man's sinfulness.

Tuesday Tobacco Prices See Gain

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

South Carolina and Border North Carolina flue-cured tobacco markets resumed sales today with a new mark to shoot at.

Tuesday's sales totaled 3,362,043 pounds averaging $56.15 per hundred pounds, $1.18 over Monday's average. It was the highest daily average since the North Carolina markets opened Aug. 3.

North Carolina markets sold 2,772,906 pounds for an average of $54.85 while South Carolina markets sold 3,589,083 pounds averaging $57.16.

Yesterday price variations of $1 to $4 per hundred were noted and quality showed little change. Leaf grades and low and fair lugs were unchanged to $4 higher than on Tuesday. Cutters and top lugs held firm.

Principal marketings were low to good leaf, fair and good lugs, low and fair cutters and primings. Sales remained light to heavy.

Auction bid averages per hundred pounds yesterday:

Cutters — fair lemon 67, low lemon 64.

Nondescript—best thin 14.

Boy And Turtle Out Of Hospital

LANCASTER Pa. (AP)—Ten-year-old Wilbur Yoder Jr. is home from the hospital today, and so is his turtle.

Wilbur went fishing for turtles Tuesday night from a bridge and caught the biggest one of his career. In the excitement he toppled off the bridge.

An ambulance was summoned but Wilbur, still in possession of the turtle refused to go unless his catch went with him.

Wilbur and turtle were taken to the hospital where the boy was treated for lacerations and bruises. Both were released in good condition.

Recovering Car, Piece By Piece

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP)—A state Supreme Court legal adviser is looking for a body, that of his 1954 automobile.

Morris Flynn, legal assistant to Justice N. S. Corn, reported his car stolen from the parking lot at the Capitol Monday.

Police have recovered five wheels, a jack, a tow chain and seat cushions but the rest of the car still is missing.

FBI Says Two Arrests Solved Bank Hold-Up

NEW YORK (AP)—The FBI says it has cracked the largest cash bank robbery in history, seizing two men as alleged members of a smooth-working quartet who held up a Queens bank to the tune of $305,000.

Warrants were issued for two other men thought to have been the ringleaders in the carefully planned holdup. A fifth man has been held as a material witness.

Arraigned yesterday and charged with violating the National Bank Robbery Act were James McCoo, 36, and Frank Cocchiaro, 34 both of Astoria, Queens — not far from the looted Woodside, Queens branch of the Chase Manhattan Bank.

McCoo, accused of taking part in the robbery, was held without bond. Cocchiaro was held in $50,000 bail, charged with aiding and abetting the stickup.

Cocchiaro's wife, Mildred, was a teller at the Woodside bank when four bandits appeared on the morning of April 6 and made off with their record haul without firing a shot. Mrs. Cocchiaro since has resigned.

Asst. U.S. Atty. Paul W. Windels said none of the stolen money has been recovered. Windels also said that the holdup was partly an inside job but did not point a finger at any employe.

Redmond (Ninny) Cribbins, 48, alias Mike Malloy, and Thomas (Duke) Connelly Jr., 30, both veteran criminals, are sought for questioning.

Vincent W. Kritil, 28 a Fire Island bartender described as "knowing" Cribbins and Connelly, is held in $40,000 bail as a material witness. Windels said he feared for Kritil's life if he were freed on bond. Aurthorities said Kritil has no criminal record.

A bank employe identified a rogue's gallery photo of Cribbins the day after the robbery.

Connelly, with a long prison record, dropped out of sight about the time of the holdup. His wife, Ann, and their two children, George 2, and Veronica, 3, disappeared about 10 days later.

The children were found abandoned last July 27—one in Baltimore, Md., and the other in Wilmington Del.

To get into the bank the bandits, one carrying a submachine gun, first kidnaped the bank's chief clerk outside his home and opened the bank door with his keys.

Better Garbage Can Approval Rate In Survey By Sanitarians

Seventy-one more garbage cans were exammed in the city survey by sanitarians this week, with 51 approved and 20 condemned.

This makes a total of 136 containers examined, 54 approved and 82 condemned.

The Greenville survey is being conducted by city sanitarian Henry Glisson, and Pitt Health Department sanitarian John Moss.

In Farmville, a similar survey is being conducted by Linwood Kilpatrick, Health Department sanitarian.

The surveys, planned to aid in the eradication of insects, will eventually cover all Pitt County towns, Moss said.

Approved containers are "standard metal galvanized garbage cans with tight fitting lids." A red sticker is being placed on each unsuitable container, and householders are being given ten days to obtain an approved can before legal action is taken.

The survey began here Friday when 62 of 65 receptacles examined in six blocks of a Negro section of town were condemned.

This week's survey has covered three white sections of the city: in West Greenville north of Third Street, Mill Village, and several blocks south of Dickinson Avenue

Moss described the garbage containers found as ranging from oil drums to rotted out washtubs. At four or five houses, he said, garbage was thrown on the ground.

In Farmville, Kilpatrick reports he has surveyed a total of 83 residences and business houses. Of 35 residences covered, all on South Main Street, five garbage receptacles were approved. Of the 48 business establishments covered, 38 containers were approved.

The sanitarian said he found a number of householders using 'swill buckets." These are five gallon cans with a handle and no lid, which are hung outside the back door and filled with garbage. Kilpatrick says the garbage remains there "until a man comes by and picks it up to feed his hogs."

The sanitarians urged all citizens to obtain proper garbage receptacles right away. Moss added that if one can is not sufficient to hold the quantity of garbage or refuse accumulated between collections, a sufficient number of similar receptacles should be provided.

He also advised householders to provide a rack for their garbage can, to keep it from being overturned by dogs.

Torrent Of Rain Flooding Homes

Islands Enjoying Tourist Boom

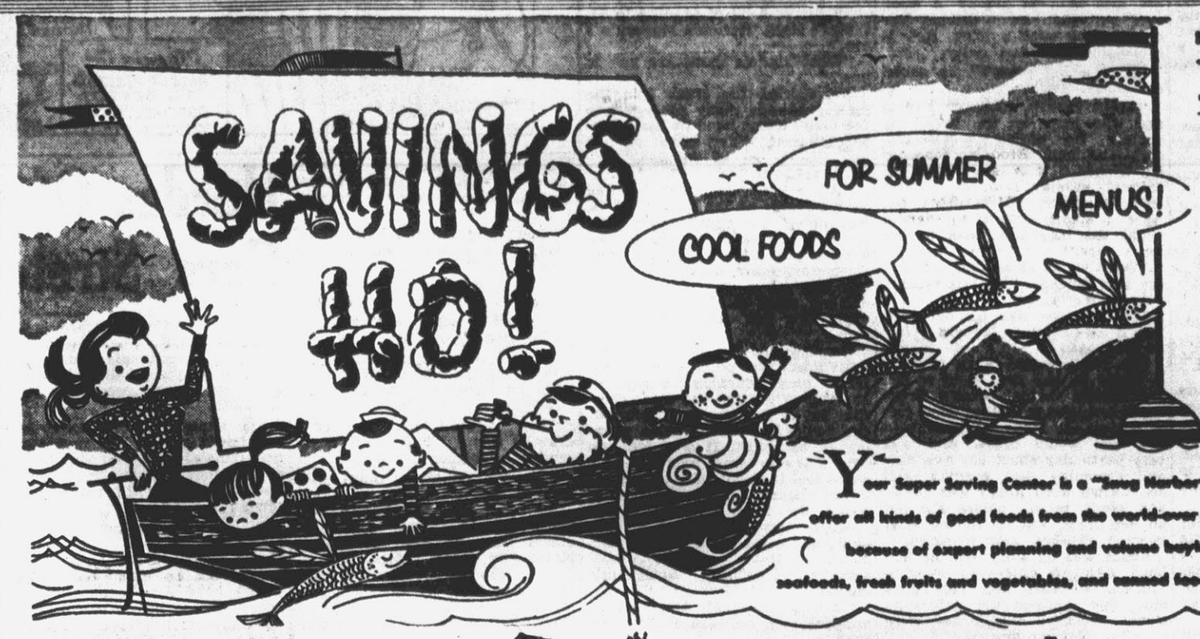

CHARLOTTE AMALIE, V.I. (AP)—Quickie divorces are out, but the Virgin Islands are still riding a high tide of tourist business.

These small Caribbean islands in the last year have attracted 110,000 visitors who spent about 6½ million dollars along the narrow, steep streets of St. Thomas Island.

The death blow was given the divorce business early this year when the Supreme Court in Washington upheld a District Court's invalidation of a law granting divorces after six weeks' residence. Those seeking divorces spent $700 or more during their six-week stay.

But summer travel to the tropics is on the increase. All the large hotels now stay open year round.

There's no better way to "save" your dinner menu than with a quick dessert sauce for ice cream, cake, or puddings.

1-2-3 Chocolate Sauce
(Makes 2½ cups)
1 large can (5⅓ cups) undiluted Carnation Evaporated Milk
2 cups granulated sugar
2 squares (2 oz.) bitter chocolate
1 teaspoon vanilla

Combine Carnation, sugar and chocolate in saucepan over hot water or low heat. Cook about 15 minutes, stirring constantly. Remove from heat. Add vanilla. Blend until smooth and thoroughly heated. Serve as a topping for ice cream or cake. For a thinner sauce, add additional undiluted Carnation or the desired consistency just before serving.

MARRIAGE for THREE

SYNOPSIS

The post-war housing shortage in Kennerly, Missouri, had induced the newly wed Lairds, Adam and Ann, to engage in a home building business there. Adam, an experienced carpenter had served with the Seabees during the war; Ann had been a secretary at the local lumber mill. So, bravely, these Lairds pooled their knowledge, formed a partnership of sorts and set forth to build homes for the people of Kennerly. But they made the mistake of first of all building a home for themselves. Need of cash for the business soon forced the sale of that home, Ann's "dream" house, a move which left her sullen, and rebellious. And unhappy in the small apartment where the Lairds now lived. But Ann escaped its boredom daily, by donating her services to the hospital. Here she enjoyed her association with Dr. Alexander, a mature and married man of great charm.

CHAPTER FOUR

Ann walked steadily away from her brother, her head up. Her feelings were mixed. She was more thoughtful than annoyed. She understood the love which had inspired Wendel's warning, but something he had said—

All along, ever since Adam had sold her house, Ann had been hurt and resentful, yet she somehow continued to believe that she really came first with Adam. But if others considered her mistreated—well—maybe she was. Anyway that idea was something to think about.

She did think about it, too and her thinking governed the manner in which she mentioned the party to Adam. "I don't suppose you'll have time to go," she concluded.

He turned his head sharply to look at her. "Don't you want me to go?"

"I told you that Dr. Alexander is giving a party for the people who work for the blood bank. I said we were invited. But I never know about you—you're busy so much of the time. Sunday mornings, and all."

"Gosh sakes, Ann, what's got into you?"

"Nothing's got into me. I go to church as regularly as always." She set his dessert before him, and took her chair. "Of course, now, I often go alone."

"We had that fight last Sunday," said Adam tightly.

Ann said nothing, but she put down her fork.

"I don't know why a woman can't say her say and quit," Adam fumed, eating his pie in great gulps.

"I'm sorry," said Ann, not sounding at all sorry.

Adam finished his pie jerked to his feet and went into the living room where he turned on the radio. Ann washed the dishes, powdered her face and joined him "Want to go to a show?" he asked.

"I don't think so."

"Still mad?"

"I'm not mad, Adam."

"All right, if you say so. What about that party? When is it?"

"Next Thursday evening. It's a barbecue supper."

"Do I have to wear a tie?" Ann laughed. "It isn't formal."

Adam sat looking at her. What got into both of them? A year ago, he would have thought her cute, to say such a thing. Now it sounded bitter—and catty.

"Is it a big party?" he asked cautiously.

"About twenty, at least. Everyone who helps at the bank—the doctors the nurses, the technician—and their wives, husbands or boy-friends. It's to be at the Alexanders' at six."

"I'll take you. Maybe this is the week I ought to talk to Wendel about that car I've been buying for a year."

"Don't worry about that, Adam," she said quickly. "I'd just as soon ride in the pick-up."

That sounded like his old Ann. "I'll take the ladders off," he promised.

The party meant a lot to Ann. It would be her first sight of Dr Alexander's home, except from the street. She wondered what sort of hostess his Mary would make—how she would dress. Ann was very particular about her own hair and grooming that evening and she waited until Adam was home, and ready to go, before she put on her dress, lest its flaring skirt become crushed and wrinkled.

Adam was on time, and he had been right to object to wearing "formal" clothes. His pale gray shirt, his shade-darker gabardine slacks, the dark blue jacket, were exactly right on him.

Tall, graceful, young, he'd easily be the best-looking man at the party. Ann could take pride in that. Even Dr. Alexander, nice as he was, already had a too-high forehead. Van Sant's boy-friend was positively ancient! With asthma, besides.

She caught up a yellow sweater, in case the evening should turn cool—her white dress had no sleeves—and came out to the living room. Adam looked her over appreciatively. "Very nice!"

She smiled at him and went to the door. Adam's hand was still on the doorknob when the phone rang. He turned back to answer, and she went on down, got into the truck and waited.

It was ten minutes before he came out, put the key in and drove down the street. His eyebrows were knit in a frown.

At the corner—"Alexanders live on Market," she murmured.

"Yeah. I have to go past Horton's."

"Not tonight!"

"It won't take a minute. We have time—these things never start promptly."

Ann's wrist watch said exactly six. "Why do you have to see Horton tonight?"

"So he won't picket that elevator job tomorrow." She glanced at Adam and saw that his jaw was set.

"Are you going to get into a fight this evening?" she demanded.

"I'll have a bit of arguing to do. I won't fight. Horton's biggern'n I am."

"What kind of mess are you in now?"

He whirled the truck into the rock road—the dusty road—where the union agent lived on his three-acre "farm." "You sound as if I got into a lot of messes."

"Adam—"

"It's nothing, Ann. I'm building that elevator at the mill. That is, I'm doing the construction. The elevator company brought its own gang to put in the machinery—and Horton's on my neck. I have to talk him out of picketing that job, and my other ones. He could have everything I'm doing at a dead stop."

He slammed the car door, and went up on the porch of the little frame house, ducking his head as he went in through the front door Ann sat in the truck and waited; she could feel the wrinkles growing in her skirt. It was hot and her make-up was melting—she could feel that, too. Her hair clung to her cheeks. She was tempted to sound the horn, but did not.

Adam was inside for a half-hour, and came out with an apology on his lips. "Let's get going," said Ann coldly. "We're late enough."

"It was important Ann," he attempted, as he turned into the road.

"I'm used to that, too," she said stiffly. "I know your work's important—and that I am not."

"For gosh sakes, Ann!" cried Adam. She didn't, he thought resentfully, care enough to ask how he'd come out with Horton.

They were probably the last to arrive. Adam had to park his car a good distance from the house, and walking with Ann along the sidewalk, he ventured to suggest that it wasn't good manners to carry a peeve to a party.

"Don't you tell me how to behave, Adam Laird!" she cried furiously.

"I know, honey, but you're wearing icicles a foot long. They show!"

"I'll do all right. See that you do the same."

She did do all right, once she was among the others. "We had to build an elevator," she gaily excused their tardiness.

"And you'd be surprised!" drawled Adam, "how much it resembles a doghouse!"

Everyone laughed Ann with them.

He knew half the guests and quickly made friends with the others. He and Ann filled their plates and found chairs.

Hordes Of Gaudy New Cars Stretching Credit

By SAM DAWSON

NEW YORK, (AP)—Those hordes of shiny, brilliantly hued cars flashing by you on the highway — are they running people too much in debt?

The unusually large stocks dealers' hands as the 1955 model year nears the close — will they be sold at a profit, or at big discounts and dangerously liberal payment terms?

It's one of the hottest debates today.

Never before have auto makers turned out so many cars. Never before have Americans bought so many. Never before has outstanding automobile credit been so huge.

Before World War II Americans owed 1½ billion dollars on their cars. This summer they owe 12½ billion.

Auto makers and finance companies say there's nothing to worry about. National income has gone up steadily. The load isn't too heavy for prosperous Americans to carry, they say, and besides — much of the present prosperity is due to credit buying.

For proof they point to the low rate of repossessions, to the American habit of meeting payments even when things tighten up a little.

"Our auto loan delinquencies are at an all-time low," says F. R. Wills, president of General Motors Acceptance Corp.

Universal C.I.T. Corp. reports that since the war Americans have financed 84 billion dollars to buy cars and have so far repaid 72 billion. It thinks 10 million car buyers will complete payments this year—and be driving debt-free cars.

But others aren't so sure. The Federal Reserve Board, for example, is nervous about the total debt in all fields. Corporate debt has been going up, and bank loans to business have grown at a season when they usually drop. The Federal debt creeps higher, and state and local indebtedness swells at a faster rate. The home building boom has been fed by easy mortgage terms.

The National Automobile Dealers Assn. warns its 30,000 members: "There's nothing smart about too-liberal credit terms. Right now, it's up to dealers to put a stop to crazy credit, and start back on the road to sanity."

Safety Havens For Small Craft

PORT AUSTIN, Mich. (AP)—The third of 15 small craft havens planned for Michigan's long and dangerous shoreline will be constructed at Port Austin at a cost of $1,210,000.

The Michigan Waterways Commission says construction will start next spring at the top of the state's thumb jutting up between Saginaw Bay and Lake Huron. Other refuge harbors have been built at Port Sanilac on Lake Huron and on Grand Traverse Bay off Lake Michigan.

Step in . . . and command the most modern truck power on any job!

New Chevrolet Task-Force Trucks

Seven new "high-voltage" high-compression valve-in-head engines!

Here's hour-saving, dollar-saving power for your job . . . the biggest choice of engines in Chevrolet truck history! And they're the most modern engines in the industry!

You've got it good under the hood with a new Chevrolet Task-Force truck! With two new V8's and five new sixes to choose from, you can pick the power that's tailor-made to do your kind of hauling.

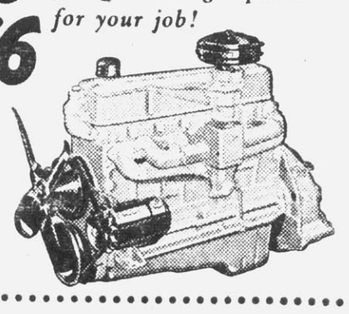

Shortest stroke V8's in any leading truck! Both of Chevrolet's new truck V8's have an ultra-short stroke—shortest of any V8 in any leading truck. They're of modern oversquare design, which means that the piston stroke is smaller than the bore. The result is less piston travel per mile . . . longer engine life. Also, Chevrolet's compact truck V8's deliver exceptionally high horsepower per pound of engine weight. More power is actually available for hauling your loads!

Modern 12-volt electrical system! You get this great development in all new Chevrolet truck engines—both V8's and sixes. The 12-volt electrical system delivers twice the punch for quicker cold-weather starting (up to 30% faster cranking speed). It also provides a hotter, fatter spark for better ignition.

Come in and command the most modern truck power for your job!

Year after year . . . America's best-selling truck! CHEVROLET

Do-It-Yourself Idea Clicks In Movieland

By JAMES BACON

HOLLYWOOD, (AP)—The "do it yourself" craze finally has hit moviemaking.

The reason is Andrew and Virginia Stone, a husband and wife team who have made a real suspense thriller for $71,000. By Hollywood economics that is something less than peanut shells, maybe?

Called "The Night Holds Terror," the picture is a real sleeper. Best proof of this is that Columbia Studios has allotted a quarter of a million dollars just for advertising a $71,000 picture.

Andy reveals that the studio had outlined a $295,000 budget for his script on a "B" picture basis, i.e., using old sets, stock footage and quick shooting.

"That's the absolute minimum the picture could have been made for inside a studio sound stage," he reported.

So the Stones used their own studio — a station wagon and a couple rooms in their home. It's a real do-it-yourself operation.

Andy is producer, writer, director. Virginia is feature editor, cutter, casting director, wardrobe woman (designer and purchaser) and location scout.

They used no sound stages. All shots are made in actual locations. If the scene calls for a restaurant, Virginia contacts the owner, pays him a $100 fee and shoots the scene in a real restaurant——often with the regular customers.

If the shot calls for a moving automobile, they shoot it in a moving automobile-sound and all. This is usually considered impossible by most producers. Usually, technicians build a car interior and shoot the scenes on a sound stage. Synchronized film supplies the traffic atmosphere.

One of the best scenes in "The Night Holds Terror" shows how the telephone company helps police in tracking down a ransom phone call. The whole scene, with telephone company technicians acting their everyday jobs, was shot in a major exchange of the Pacific Telephone Co.

"How can you get more realistic than that?" asks Andy.

Although the Stones work with 15 people, less than a third of the crew used on a normal movie, they claim they have no union problems.

"I get nothing but cooperation from the Hollywood unions. They know my problems and I know theirs. I hire all union crews and pay over-scale. There's a thrill in making pictures this way and the crew gets as much of a kick of it as we do."

Governors Seek Compromise For Highway Works

By JACK BELL

CHICAGO (AP)—The nation's governors searched today for a compromise highway construction program that might be palatable to a Congress which rejected President Eisenhower's proposals and Democratic substitutes.

Although the governors listened to praise last night from Britain's Ambassador Sir Roger Makins for Eisenhower's role at the Geneva Big Four conference and turned to a discussion of mental health problems today, their minds obviously were on the roads issue.

Makins told the governors at the state dinner of this 47th annual conference of the chief executives that at Geneva Eisenhower had succeeded "in laying, let us hope for once and all, the ghost of the pack of war mongers."

idea that the Americans are a pack of war mongers."

Gov. G. Mennen Williams, Michigan Democrat, told his colleagues in a prepared address that "the problem of mental health is still one of the biggest faced by the people and the states."

"One out of 12 babies born today will spend some time in a mental institution," he said. "Over one-half of our hospital beds are required for mental cases. The total annual public cost of mental health in the United States amounts to over $1,100,000,000."

President Eisenhower told the governors in a message yesterday he is ready to cooperate with them in attempting to solve the highway and school construction programs. After a discussion, the governors named a resolutions committee to take up the road issue.

The makeup of this committee seemed pointed toward some sort of compromise on highway financing. Most of the members called for quick action to get road building started but they differed in methods.

As chairman of the committee, Gov. Robert B. Meyner, New Jersey Democrat, called on the governors to "compromise with Congress and the appropriate pressure groups" in working out their recommendations.

Gov. William G. Stratton, Illinois Republican, proposed a five-year road building plan instead of the 10-year program urged by President Eisenhower. Gov. Fred Hall, Kansas Republican, plugged for a cooperative federal-state program.

Indiana's Republican Gov. George M. Craig urged continuous consultation between the governors and Congress in working out a highway bill. Gov. Walter J. Kohler, Wisconsin Republican, said he is supporting Eisenhower's proposal for a long term, bond financed program.

Gov. Edwin C. Johnson, Colorado Democrat, said he wants a pay-as-you go system, without any increase in federal gasoline and other taxes.

Woe Betide A TV Drama With A Technical Error

By CHARLES MERCER

NEW YORK (AP)—Perhaps the most ancient pastime of television viewers is taking pot shots at dramas when their sense of authenticity is outraged.

A viewer may disagree with a drama's philosophy of life and still accept it passively. But woe betide the drama that has a minor technical flaw.

If an actor picks up a cross-cut saw when he should have reached for a rip saw, the do-it-yourself addicts rise in wrath. Physicians demand a medical school graduate's technique from an actor who trained on Broadway for his doctor's role.

This old sport of shooting sitting ducks has grown pretty tame, however. Television's technical accuracy has improved. And viewers are coming to accept something you might call "television license," dimly related to "poetic license," whatever that used to mean.

Yet now I wish to revive the sport and report a vast, gross inaccuracy that unfolded before me during long, long hours of staring at daytime programs. It's this: All those women on the screen undergoing all those harrowing domestic crises, are not remotely dressed like those real women of the audience.

The heroines of soap opera face up to life with straight stocking seams and dresses decollete. Hattie Carnegie or Balmain of Paris must be proud of 'em as they win and lose husbands in staged kitchens and living rooms.

But, as any man who has stayed home on a week day knows, life at home just ain't like that. To wit: Under pressure of the job I was sitting home before the set the other day, staring at an unfolding emotional crisis, while in the kitchen a woman was unfolding a real-life emotional crisis to my wife.

You never saw better dressed women than those on the screen. But what were my wife and the woman in the kitchen wearing? They were dressed in shorts, T-shirts and sandals. It being a hot day.

I must report that while us fellows are at work the women are lounging or working around in shorts or slacks or pedal-pushers or old house dresses. And they aren't particularly worried about their stocking seams because most of 'em aren't wearing stockings. The gaily clad creature who greets you at 6 p.m. was hastily assembled at 5:30 p.m.

No ungallantry is intended. That's simply the way life is. So, life being that way and the soap operas wanting to be lifelike, let's have the wardrobe departments throw in a little authenticity.

Forecloses, And House Vanishes

One Is For Her, Other For Him

This means the Williams' home for school purposes is in Arkansas, but for ranch and retirement purposes, his home is listed in Oklahoma.

Authorities in Arkansas ruled the Williams' car must have an Arkansas tag and Oklahoma officials say it must carry an Oklahoma tag.

The family car now carries both — Arkansas for "her" and Oklahoma for "his".

Eerie Light Of Atomic Blast Could Blind Person For Life

By ALTON L. BLAKESLEE
AP Science Reporter

NEW YORK (AP)—A brilliant silent eerie light, like nothing you've seen before, marks the beginning of an atomic blast.

If it ever comes, don't look at it, or you might be blinded for life.

If you sense such a flash, duck, fall flat or jump behind some protection. You could be injured by being knocked down by the blast, or by flying debris.

Out in the open, you have a better chance if you fall flat. And a still better one if you could duck behind a ravine, behind any little hillock, into a hole. In town, fling yourself behind the protection of some building, if there is time.

In Nevada, hundreds of persons have crouched quite safely in trenches within two miles or less of atomic blasts as big or bigger than those exploded over Japan. These people would undoubtedly have been safe even closer.

The light comes first, and with it, simultaneously, the flash of heat and the X-rays unleashed by the bomb. They are all quickly gone. Next comes the blast.

If you're in an automobile, open the windows a bit and fall flat on the seat or floor.

Autos have been exposed to test bombs. With windows closed, windows and windshields often were blown in, and broken glass could cut occupants. Tops were caved in. But with windows slightly open, this damge often did not happen.

Underground shelters are, obviously, the best protection. But even shelters that stand above ground could save many lives in areas outside the immediate center of destruction. Concrete shelters—usable as toolsheds or spare storage rooms near homes that lacked strong basement shelters—stood up well despite being within a half mile or so of the atomic blast in Nevada last May.

Animls survived that blast in those shelters. These animals now are being observed to learn whether humans in such shelters might have suffered harm from the blast effects, or from radiation.

The heat flash is one hazard of atomic blasts. An intense heat wave reaches out, capable of giving skin flash burns, or setting fire to highly ignitable materials. The intensity—the ability to cause burns—falls off extremely rapidly with distance from the bomb.

Generally speaking, anything which is dense encugh to cast a shadow can give protection against the flash burn.

The heat fish can start fires. So can a blast which might knock over a kerosene lamp or even a candle.

Danger from fires started by pilot lights on gas stoves may be very minor. In one test home in Nevada, the blast blew out the pilot light on a kitchen gas stove, with no fire or damage.

Closed venetian blinds in one test stopped the heat flash, preventing fires of draperies or furniture. The blinds were blown down by the blast arriving some seconds later.

One atomic specialist gives this advice:

"If you see or sense that intense light, duck, and count to 10. If you reach 10, you have survived. Then you can check to see whether you have suffered any injuries."

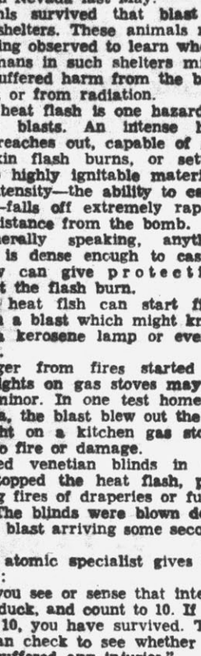

There still could be hazard from radioactive fall-out.

Bites The Hand That Burned Her

EVANSTON, Ill. (AP) — Topsy had a good reason for biting her master twice on the left hand.

Jack Van Dermeir, 22, was washing some automobile parts in gasoline in a filling station. The pail of gasoline caught fire and Van Dermeir tossed the mass of flames through the door just as Topsy, his dog, was passing it. Van Dermeir then chased Topsy, trying to put out the flames. When he caught her she bit him, putting him in a hospital.

Disregarded His Father's Advice

RICHMOND, Va. (AP)—Henry G. Gilmer, who says he was born in a southwest Virginia log cabin almost entirely surrounded by Republicans, is retiring as State Comptroller of Virginia after 14 years.

A staunch Democrat, he says he disregarded the advice of his father to stay away from politics. In the Old Dominion he has a reputation for picking the outcome of political contests. He is 74 and has been active in politics for nearly 40 years.

Hoover Believes Americans Could Answer Critics

NEWBERG, Ore. (AP) — Herbert Hoover said yesterday on his 81st birthday, "We should lift our eyes unto the hills from whence cometh our help. We should occasionally mention something good about ourselves."

The former President, in an address prepared for delivery at the dedication of his boyhood home here as a national shrine, said, "During the last score of years our American way of life has been deluged with criticism. . . .

"Altogether, if we look at the criticisms alone, we seem to be in a very, very bad way."

But, he continued, "we could point out that our American way of life has perfected the greatest productivity of any nation on earth; that our standard of living is the highest in the world. . . .

"In the government field we could suggest that our supposedly decadent people still rely upon the ballot and the legislative hall to settle their differences without a secret police with slave camps. . . .

"And we could suggest that we alone, of all nations, fought in two world wars and asked no indemnities, no acquisition of territory, no domination over other nations."

Hoover said he, himslf, has joined in criticism of the American scene "because of my anxieties over mistaken policies and especially the influence of Karl Marx on our way of life."

Other criticism, he said, "comes from the fuzzy-minded totalitarian liberals who believe that our creeping collectivism can be adopted without destroying the safeguards of free men.

"It comes bitterly and daily from the Communists at home and abroad who would overthrow our American system. And it even comes from free nations whom we have tried to help."

Hoover recalled that he was brought here some 70 years ago to live with his uncle, Dr. Henry J. Minthorn, a physician and Quaker educator, and his wife.

He told of Minthorn's experiences as a pioneer country doctor and said "America needs more family doctors" today.

He said it is the family doctor's knowledge that moral and spiritual services he provides "could not survive socialized medicine that leads him to fight it at every turn."

The Herbert Hoover Foundation restored the Minthorn home to its condition of 1884 when Hoover went to live there after the death of his parents. He was educated here and at Salem before going to Palo Alto, Calif., to attend Stanford University.

Hoover, looking snappy in a straw hat, arrived in Salem, 30 miles south of here, by plane from San Francisco Tuesday evening and spent the night there.

He came here for the birthday-dedication as a guest of the Oregon Legislature.

Before the ceremonies a new stretch of th Pacific Highway between Newberg and Portland was officially dedicated as Herbert Hoover Boulevard.

Farm On Slope Of Fiery Volcano

Year after year he has felt the earth tremble beneath his feet, seen flames lash 500 feet into the air high above his farm, watched the red glow of lava creep down upon his orchard. Why does he stay?

"It's a living.

"I inherited the farm from my father before me. If I left, I would be unemployed. There would be nothing for me to hand on to my sons."

Danger? The bronzed farmer thought a moment.

"The worst is the work. It's hard farming up here. It is backbreaking hard.

"There's a sort of family tradition, following the old pattern, like all of us who climb the mountain to our farms from Zafferana or Milo or Fornezzo or Passopisciaro or Linguaglossa.

"I was only 10 when I first started making the climb, to help my father.

"I can never tell you of the weariness, the long, long walk up trails twisting through the hard lava beds.

"Most of the way is by half light. We start long before dawn. We have to carry blankets and food for a week on our backs, to avoid making the trip daily."

"It's not ordinary farming," Giovanni explained. "You can't use a plow on Etna. Her hide is too tough and too old. You have to spade by hand, with muscle. But the volcanic soil is rich. Crops are good."

Rocky Road For Turks' Economy

ISTANBUL, Turkey (AP)—Turkey, southeastern anchor of NATO, is traveling an increasingly rocky economic road.

Prices are rising. Shortages have developed in some food and industrial items. The country has exhausted its foreign exchange and foreign credit is drying up. It is already heavily in debt.

Premier Adnan Menderes has inaugurated a series of measures designed to ease the situation — chiefly a crackdown on hoarders and speculators.

Western diplomats have been urging even more drastic measures.

Ironically, Turkey's problems stem from its own great energy, ambition and desire to complete the modernization begun 32 years ago by Kemal Ataturk Since then Turkey has achieved remarkable economic progress for an underdeveloped, predominantly agricultural nation.

Menderes is pushing a development program that includes construction of five hydroelectric plants, 16 cement factories, sugar refineries, new port facilities, rail lines and roads. All this has been a heavy drain on the treasury and on foreign earnings and credits.

Thrills In Riding A Fire Engine

(Ever wonder how it feels to travel to a blaze on the rear of a fire engine? The Reflector editors did and a staff member was assigned to ride one of the trucks. Here are his impressions.)

If you have any repressed desires to ride a fire truck such as the one shown above read the accompanying story. A Reflector staff member was assigned to ride one of the big trucks. He did and these are his impressions.

It was night at the city's downtown fire station. On-duty fire fighters had been sitting on the lawn watching Greene St. traffic as it passed the station.

At 9:00 o'clock, someone mentioned the $64,000 Question was due on television and the six firemen moved inside for the big show.

The quiz program moved on until the Italian immigrant who had to make up his mind whether to try for the $64,000 question or take his $32,000 came on the show. It's times like this, firemen will tell you, when alarms come in. It was not to be the case that night, however. In fact the show was completed at 9:30 with no interruptions for the fire fighters.

Then just as the popular program faded from the screen the alarm came. The big whistle atop city hall rattled your teeth as the first blast sounded.

A lot happens around a fire house when an alarm comes in. If the fire fighters have retired for the evening, there's no danger of sleeping through an alarm. The big whistle is pointed directly towards the sleeping quarters of the station. Inside the building both downstairs and upstairs are gongs which rival the whistle for attention. As the first blast sounds lights in the building are automatically turned on.

All that was not necessary for this alarm, however. The firemen were on their feet instantly. They ran to a device in the station which automatically records the alarm as it comes in. Each blast punches a hole in a paper tape.

The fire fighters dash to the two trucks that will make the run. The assistant fire chief on duty, Berry Sumrell, climbs in the cab of the high pressure fog truck alongside the driver. That is the truck which will lead and I hopped on the rear with Dawson Nethercutt.

"I've got a feeling I'll need this," says Nethercutt as he tosses a raincoat on the back of the truck.

The motor of the vehicle roars to life, the red beacon light atop the cab flashed on and the truck rolls onto Greene St. Several cars are on the street and the wail of the siren brings them pulling over to the side.

People do funny things when they see the trucks coming. Take the auto which we met just as we pulled out of the station. The driver stopped and promptly cut off his headlights.

The truck swings into Dickinson Ave. I wondered if the siren would clear the long line of cars which I saw up and down the street. Slowly they pull to the side as the trucks approach. It appears that many do so begrudgingly.

There's a red traffic light at a blind corner ahead. The big vehicle slows slightly as it approaches the intersection, then roars through.

The next intersection is Ninth St., then Dickinson, Albermarle and Tenth, a busy one. The lights are green however and traffic has pretty well stopped anyway.

As we hit the railroad tracks I felt nothing but air under foot as I hung to the rails for dear life. I mentioned it to Nethercutt.

"Bend your knees when we hit the bumps," he instructed.

I tried it and it worked.

Next intersection is Boyd Ave. We had the green light at that one, also. At that point I thought of the substation nearby.

I asked Nethercutt if they would answer the alarm, too.

They would, he replied.

Finally Hillsdale looms into view, the truck turns into Arlington Drive followed closely by the pumper which has been directly behind us all the way.

The sub-station truck sits at the end of the street with its two high pressure lines stripped off their reels.

"It's an automobile," someone says.

The substation firemen are inside the vehicle with the hoses and the fire is practically extinguished.

With no need for their equipment the main station trucks turn around and thread their way through the rapidly growing number of cars which are converging on the area.

Small Tornado Injures Seven In S. C. Towns

CONWAY, S.C. (AP) — A small tornado apparently skipping alongside Hurricane Connie dipped through the lower part of North Carolina and into South Carolina last night, injuring at least seven persons and damaging homes and curing barns in this rich tobacco section.

The twister made its first dip near Wallace in North Carolina, and then hit the South Carolina areas of Conway, Latta, Georgetown and Dillon.

One person was injured at Penderlea near Wallace. And four members of a family were hospitalized when the tornado demolished a small house on a tobacco farm near Conway. The twister cut a swath 200 yards wide and 400 yards long near rural Bucksport, 10 miles from Conway, injuring Mrs. Margaret Bromell, 28, her two daughters and a son. None was seriously injured. The wind also damaged other buildings in the area.

At least two persons were injured at Dillon, where several buildings were demolished, including dwellings and tobacco barns.

No injuries were reported when the twister dipped briefly into a rural section three miles north of Latta, tearing down a tobacco barn and damaging crops in the field.

Penderlea and Willard, near Wallace, suffered property damage, and Mrs. Pearl Kohler was injured at Penderlea. She was pinned in the debris of a tobacco barn, one of which was destroyed at Penderlea, along with two dairy barns. Pender County Memorial Hospital said she was in satisfactory condition.

Barbee Retains AFL Leadership

Barbee was re-elected here yesterday at the 48th annual convention of the organization at which it endorsed in principle a merger of the AFL and CIO.

Other officers named at the closing session were J. E. Jervis of Asheville, secretary - treasurer; W. J. Burton Jr. of Spencer, first vice president.

The convention instructed its standing committee to continue working with state representatives of the CIO until the national merger with the AFL is effected in December.

Estimates Up On Georgia-Florida Flue-Cured Leaf

VALDOSTA, Ga. (AP)—The government's crop reporting board has hiked its estimates of Georgia-Florida flue-cured tobacco to a record high of 164,075,000 pounds. This exceeds the old record by 500,000 pounds.

In spite of the estimated 13 million-pound increase over last year's sales yesterday's prices remained about the same as Tuesday's when the general average dropped to $48.12, lowest since the $47.50 paid on the second day of sales. This was $1.24 under Monday and 97 cents below the same day last season.

Although the average has been off, total cash receipts through Tuesday stood at $67,484,434 compared with $60,978,416 for the same period last year.

Ask Equal Time To Make Reply

RALEIGH (AP) — Raleigh Negro leaders want the same radio and television coverage on their planned reply to Gov. Hodges as the governor was given during his recent segregation speech.

The Rev. G. A. Fisher of the Raleigh Citizens Assn. announced the plans for the reply yesterday. "We are hoping for the same facilities granted the governor," he stated.

The broadcast is tentatively set for Monday, or as soon thereafter as possible.

"It is expected that Kelly Alexander of Charlotte, state NAACP head, will deliver the reply," Fisher said.

In his address last Monday, the governor called for a voluntary segregation program. He said if the voluntary system of running the schools essentially as they are now operated is not accepted, it could well destroy the state's public school system.

The Raleigh Negro leaders have labeled the governor's proposed program "an attempt to divide the people."

Figured Jail Is Rightful Place

OMAHA (AP)—Francis W. Warner of Omaha paid fines in County Court yesterday of $1 for not having a vehicle registration certificate and $5 for driving with only one license plate.

Then he turned to State Safety Patrol Lt. J. R. Emery and said "I don't think you are very efficient!"

"Why not? I arrested you," replied Emery.

"Yes, but I think you should have put me in jail," Warner shot back.

Organized Korean Demonstrations Ended By Protests

By MURRAY FROMSON

SEOUL (AP)—Organized Korean demonstrations against the Neutral Nations Supervisory Commission virtually halted today as free world opinion came crashing down on President Syngman Rhee and his government's threats against the truce teams.

Crowds were still milling around at the five ports of entry throughout South Korea where the truce inspectors are stationed. But most of the demonstrations consisted of shouting and waving banners.

Demonstrators, once numbered in the thousands, had dropped off to 200 at Inchon Kunsan and Taegu, 300 to 600 at Pusan and 100 at Kangnung.

The government again today cautioned against violence.

In five days of riots, 22 American soldiers and 80 Koreans have been injured, none seriously.

Official spokesman Dr. Hong Kee Karl said, "it is greatly to be regretted that those who have come to our aid should be injured as a result of trouble with the Korean people."

He added, "our aim is to survive not to harm others.

"Our people therefore, should be careful not to cause any trouble for our friends through violence or disorderly actions."

Similar sentiments were expressed by Rhee yesterday.

But they came only after a knuckle rapping from the British Foreign Office, which said it deplored violence by the Rhee government against the Communist members of the truce commission.

This morning, the reactions poured in from Washington and London Secretary of State John Foster Dulles said the United States would fulfill its armistice obligation to protect the truce commission and admonished the Korean government to move with caution in attempting to drive the NNSC from the Republic of Korea.

Dulles said the United States feels many of the armistice provisions have become obsolete and impractical, but he said the United States would not try to change them by force.

Meanwhile, at Panmunjom a Swiss spokesman said the NNSC had decided to turn over a South Korean ultimatum handed it last Saturday to the Military Armistice Commission "for appropriate action."

The ultimatum orders Communist inspectors of the NNSC out of the country by Saturday.

The Communists, apparently acting on the widespread demonstrations against its satellite Czech and Polish representatives on the commission, called a full dress meeting of the Military Armistice Commission for tomorrow morning.

Extend System Of Mica-Buying

WASHINGTON (AP) — The federal government's present plan for the purchasing of mica will continue for another 30 days.

Rep. Jonas (R-NC) said yesterday the General Service Administration will consider a purchase plan on the basis of a study to be made by miners this month and in September.

Carolina miners asked the government to adopt a permanent policy for mica buying that included recognition of increased mining costs.

A change in the present plan was to go into effect Aug. 5 was postponed until yesterday and extended another month.

BARN BURNS

Another tobacco barn went up in flames early this morning.

Greenville firemen were called to the Mark Smith farm on the Stantonsburg road around 7:10 a. m. when the barn caught fire.

RICHMOND, Va. (AP)—A gun-toting secretary thwarted a holdup here yesterday—because her huntsman boss had left the weapon lying around the office.

"This is a stick-up. Come on down with your hands up."

Mrs. Craddock obeyed—but not before reaching for a nearby shotgun and waving it at the men. The intruders fled.

BUSINESS IS RELYING ON NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING TO KEEP SALES CLIMBING

In 1955's first half, newspaper advertising has made its biggest contribution on record to the continued growth of American business.

In the first six months, business invested more dollars in newspaper advertising than in any half-year in history.

Manufacturers' advertising set a new record.

So did retailers' advertising—including the department stores, chain stores and all the rest.

So did classified advertising—mainstay of real estate, used cars and many another business.

• • •

Manufacturers and retailers alike are profiting from the salespower of newspapers—the salespower that stems from the fact that newspapers are the shopping medium—where consumers look eagerly for advertising—and from the fact that nowhere else can manufacturers' ads and retailers' ads work together so effectively to increase the productivity of both.

IF YOU ARE • a manufacturer • a retailer • a distributor • a merchandise broker • a manufacturer's salesman

...ASK YOURSELF: Is newspaper advertising being called on to do all it can to keep my sales going up?

HERE'S THE RECORD*
1955 VS. 1954

	June	1st Six Months
National advertisers	Up 15.9%	Up 9.5%
Retail advertisers	Up 8.9%	Up 6.8%
Classified advertisers	Up 17.8%	Up 14.4%

Negro Publisher Fighting NAACP

The following is a reprint of an editorial in The Telegram, of Newark, N. J., published on August 7 of this year, one day before Governor Luther Hodges' address to North Carolinians on the school segregation problem.

By DAVIS LEE,
Publisher Of The Telegram, Newark, N.J.

For the second time in this century, our nation has become split over the race issue.

A revolutionary concept has been forced upon the Southern part of our Nation by our Courts which has precipitated fear, confusion and misunderstanding. The slavery issue did not create any more bitterness than has this school issue. The difference now is that Negroes have something to lose.

The May 17th decision of the United States Supreme Court in which it declared unconstitutional the "separate but equal" doctrine, is more far reaching than many legal experts realized at the time.

And in pursuit of the supposed benefits that may result from these changes, the southern Negro needs to be careful because he could be headed down a blind alley, and when he reaches the end, he might not even have his pants.

This fight for integration is the most vicious, ruthless and undemocratic, with absolutely no regard for the rights of others. Some of our would be leaders have gone stark raving mad in their threats and demands. And it shows to what extent some of our people will go once they have the authority.

And any Negro who dares to raise his voice in opposition to the methods being employed will be lucky indeed if he doesn't lose his neck. These supposed to be leaders believe in law and order but they want to make the law and give the order.

There are 15,000,000 Negroes in this nation, and they are captives of a small group who have everything to gain and nothing to lose. Negro leaders throughout this nation have been silenced unless their views coincide.

Everyone knows how these agitators have tried to destroy me with my own people and with the white people. No one has been subjected to more vilification, slander and lies than I have. These agitators went far enough to have the Government seize the mail edition of my paper and the Solicitor General ordered it released. That one incident caused me to lose $2,000.

But what they have caused me to lose is not a drop in the bucket to what they are going to cause the southern Negro to lose.

Following the Supreme Court decision hundreds of Negro teachers in Kansas, Indiana, Missouri and Illinois, Etc., lost their jobs. Just last week the Montgomery County, Maryland, School Board demoted Mrs. Margaret T. Jones, a teacher-supervisor because under integration the "white teachers would chafe under the supervision of a Negro".

This is just the beginning. The price tag on integration is high, and the advantages are not commensurate with the price. For instance, at present southern Negroes own finer homes and drive more and better cars than do the Negroes elsewhere. If they want to, they ENJOY every other luxury.

However they do not have to pay as much down, and their installments on purchases are not as much. Southern Negroes get more consideration than many whites. But forced integration is going to change the attitude of white people in this respect and they will demand that Negroes pay through their noses. Banks and credit firms throughout the south are now very kindly disposed towards Negroes.

If these friends become enemies, who will provide the relief our people will need? These agitators can't do it, or they won't. Not long ago propagandists declared that Mississippi Negroes were victims of economic pressure and a public appeal was made for help. Despite the urgency and reported seriousness of the situation, the Nation's would be sympathizers of oppressed Negroes raised less than $300,000 to aid one million Negroes.

Now if that is all that could be raised for alleged Mississippi victims of economic pressure, where will aid come from to aid the Negroes of the other southern states?

Just a few years ago there were top notch national Negro baseball teams. Those teams produced Jackie Robinson, Roy Campanella, Don Newcombe, etc., and then they were raided by the majors. Everyone knows what happened to Negro baseball.

Under this proposed change in the educational system of the south, every Negro high school coach can kiss his job good bye, and our kids will not have the opportunity to become star athletes. Every Negro football and basketball team will become a thing of the past.

Only the most outstanding will have an opportunity to play on the integrated teams. For the sake of integration the Negro is going to scrifice the full and unrestricted privileges which his youngsters now have to participate in all sports.

In this fight to give to the Negro that feeling of dignity which he certainly needs and should have, he is being deprived of that feeling of pride in his race which he also needs.

Forced integration by court decree or legislation is going to do the southern Negro more harm than good. Integration must start in the hearts and minds of both races and both will benefit. This can be accomplished by christian training and an educational system slanted towards that end.

No fair minded southern white man will deny that the south neglected to do its duty in giving the Negro good schools, but that is not true today. In most communities today the Negro school excels the white school.

I visited a community recently in Mississippi in which the new Negro school cost $1,000,000. No white school in that section cost that much. The State Legislature recently voted to spend $14 for the education of each Negro child and $12 for each white child. Last year the State paid its 7028 Negro teachers nearly $12,000,000 in salaries.

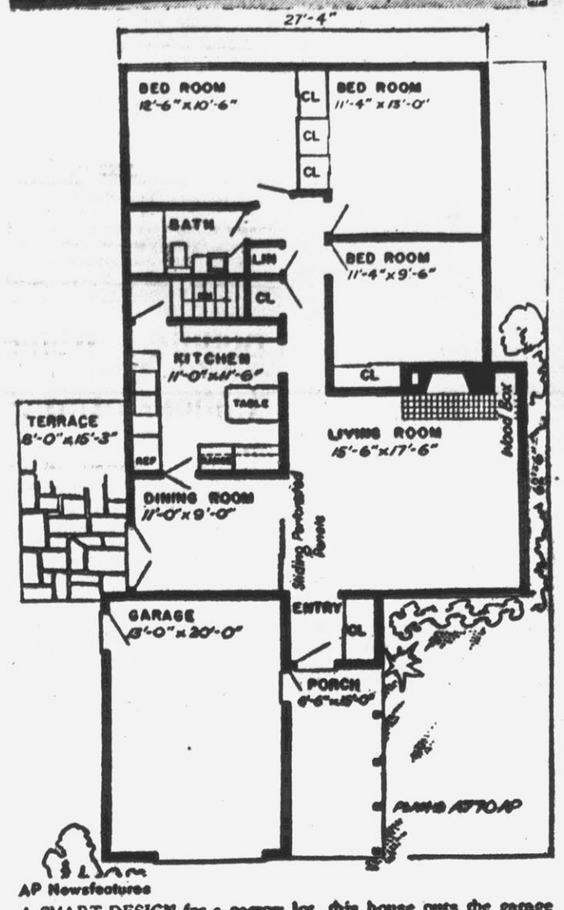

It should be left up to the southern Negroes themselves to decide whether they want to surrender these benefits and improvments for the mere privilege of sending their children to school with white children.

We should certainly bear in mind that as Americans, while we are entitled to every right, privilege and opportunity that other Americans enjoy, that we are consumers. We don't produce anything, and we are wholly dependent upon white people for everything. Instead of destroying the friendship and good will which we now enjoy, let's strive to acquire greater benefits through job improvement, equal pay for the same work.

We are a great people and we haven't yet reached the heights of which we are capable. But let us not become guilty of running rough shod over others. They have helped us get where we are, and they are willing to help us go further.

HOMES FOR AMERICANS

A SMART DESIGN for a narrow lot, this house puts the garage close to the street to keep the driveway short and sets the living room back for privacy. The plan also is attractive from the side when envisioned on a corner lot. This is plan A770AP by Walter T. Anicka, 617 Forest St., Ann Arbor, Mich. The house has 1,240 square feet of floor area and a utility basement. The architect suggests a brick or stone chimney, asphalt shingle roof, ponderosa pine millwork for the large picture windows, mineral wool insulation and waterproof paper vapor barriers.

Business Fails; Illegal Anyway

TULSA, Okla. (AP)—Choate Kirby, 7, who lives near the Tulsa entrance to the Oklahoma City-Tulsa turnpike, noticed a lot of travelers were throwing empty pop bottles along the shoulders. He decided he could make some spending money picking up the bottles. To get into the fenced super-highway Kirby found a culvert big enough for him and his wagon.

Business was good for a few days until patrolmen found the boy pulling his loaded wagon along the shoulder. They warned him his business was illegal and closed him down.

Diesels Retire Old Cannon Ball

DECATUR, Ill. (AP)—The Wabash Cannon Ball has blown its last head of steam. Steam power on the Wabash Railroad ended with the retirement of a 56-year-old locomotive, No. 573. The road now is completely dieselized.

At one time, the Wabash had 850 steam locomotives in service, an official of the road said. Since dieselization began in 1939 the railroad has scrapped or disposed of approximately 300 steam locomotives.

Six Buildings Leveled In Ohio City; Nineteen Die In Explosion, Blaze

ASHTABULA, Ohio (AP)—A violent explosion and fire leveled six buildings on the nearby Andover village square last night, killing at least 19 persons and injuring 15. The blast was in the Gateway Restaurant in which many of the victims had crowded to escape a fierce thunderstorm which raged outside.

The two-story frame building disintegrated with a force that shook houses throughout the village of 1,200. Several victims plunged to the basement of the structure. Their charred bodies were recoverd later by winches mounted on trucks.

Debris showered Main Street in front of the restaurant, ripping up sections of the street and wrecking several automobiles. Then the flames whipped on to other buildings.

A Cleveland policeman, Elmer Bumblis, was driving past the restaurant at the time of the explosion and gave this description of the disaster:

"The walls blew out and the roof fell in. There were arms and legs sticking out of the wreckage all over the building."

No one was certain what caused the explosion. Firemen, however, speculated that accumulated gas was set off either by a bolt of lightning or a spark from electrical equipment in the basement, flooded by the heavy rains.

Today, tired firemen and volunteer rescuers still were searching for more bodies. They worked through the night with searchlights and emergency generators, as the storm had knocked out power lines and telephone communications.

In a makeshift morgue, set up three blocks from the scene, Ashtabula County Deputy Coroner H. K. Lynne was attempting to identify the bodies. Many were burned beyond recognition, and Dr. Lynne said it may take days to identify all of them.

The fire itself was brought under control in four hours as firemen from 20 nearby Ohio and Pennsylvania towns rushed equipment to the stricken village.

Traffic was snarled through much of the night by the effects of the explosion and hordes of curious motorists who drove to see the fire. Law enforcement officials threw a cordon around the community and the state highway patrol said martial law had been declared there at the request of the Andover mayor. Sixty troops were sent to the village to enforce it.

Frank Lacky, a Massillon, Ohio truck driver, was eating in the restaurant when it exploded.

"Suddenly the restaurant was gone," he recalled later at Ashtabula Hospital where he was taken for treatment of his injuries. "It just blew up. The next thing I knew I was lying in the grass."

There was no official estimate of property damage, but it was expected to run into the hundreds of thousands of dollars.

The building in which the restaurant was located also housed an Isaly store, part of a national dairy store chain. The other buildings housed Ohio Edison Co. offices, Hall Insurance Co., Freddy's Shoe Shop, Grabert Market and Taylor's barber shop.

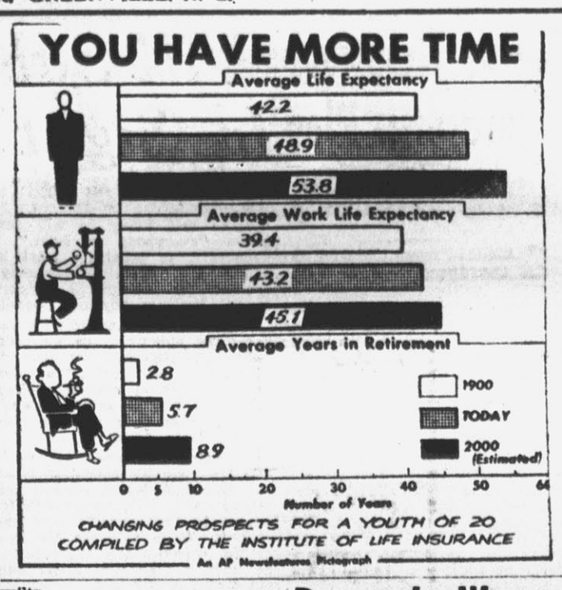

Injured were taken to hospitals here and in Conneaut and Youngstown. At least three of them were reported on the danger list.

Coroner Clyde C. Roller and the state highway patrol said five of the dead had been identified. They were George A. Schroeder of Pittsburgh, Pa.; Schroeder's father-in-law, Thomas Kenell, also of Pittsburgh the 8-year-old son of Edward Surman of Solon, Ohio, whose name was not available; and two Isaly waitresses, twins Arlene and Darlene Cuttlip, 21.

In addition, the officials said, Schroeder's wife and son, age unavailable, were missing and presumed dead.

YOUTH SOUGHT—Police at Columbus, O., reported Tuesday they were looking for Robert Jacob Miller (left), 19, former inmate of a reformatory, for questioning in the hammer-knife slaying of his mother, Mrs. Betty Thomas, 39, and his step-father, Gomer Thomas, 45. Their blood-spattered bodies were found in their bedroom Monday. Bogota's Women Staging Protest

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP)—Undeterred by a baptism of tear gas, women of Bogota scheduled another demonstration today to protest government press restrictions. The wives of three former presidents were to lead the marchers.

More than 500 women marched to Bolivar Plaza yesterday carrying banners saying "long live liberty." Police moved to break up the demonstration when the parade turned toward the presidential palace and the office of the closed newspaper El Tiempo.

The ladies fixed umbrellas and charged the police line as male spectators cheered. Police tear gas ended a 15-minute struggle and scores of demonstrators were carted to jail.

Press censorship, covering all messages sent abroad as well as domestic publications, has been extended throughout Colombia. The direct censorship of domestic publications is under control of the Army. It replaces a self-censorship editors were asked to accept in a move to eliminate violent political attacks.

Censorship of messages going abroad is under Gen. Gustavo Berrio Munoz, minister of communications. All messages in foreign languages must be accompanied by Spanish translations.

El Tiempo, Colombia's largest newspaper, was closed Aug. 4 after it refused to publish a government-dictated corrective statement. El Tiempo said the statement was misleading and threatened the newspaper's independence.

The censorship originally was aimed at the liberal press because of its criticism of the Army campaign against guerrillas — mostly liberals — in Tolima Province.

Cases Heard In City Police Court

By CHESTER WALSH

In Police Court Wednesday morning, Judge Charles H. Whedbee found Bill R. Griffin of Colonial Heights not guilty of driving a motor vehicle while drunk.

The warrant, signed by Lt. W. E. Peterson, charged Griffin with driving drunk "on information and belief." No testimony of an eye-witness was offered that Griffin was driving drunk and the court dismissed the case.

Among the papers in the case was a bill against Griffin from a resident of the Second and Greene street neighborhood for $35 property damage.

James R. Willoughby, Negro, 705 Carolina avenue non-support, was called and he was not present. An instanter capias was issued for him.

SUN-FLASH lighting difference is shown in these comparison pictures, originally shot with slow color film. At left, the brilliant sun and backlighting result in a silhouette effect. At right, addition of a Press 25 blue bulb, 8 feet away, brought out the details in the shadow area. The exposure was 1-50 at f 5.6.

By IRVING DESFOR
AP Newsfeatures

Twenty-five years ago, along about this time of year, the photoflash bulb was introduced in this country, to replace the rather cumbersome and sometimes dangerous method of igniting flash powder on trays. It went off with a loud boom, a dense cloud of smoke, an acrid odor and there was no practical way to gauge the amount of light involved. Many photographers were burned or injured handling flash powder.

This year about a half billion flashbulbs are being produced in this country. Today this source of light is conveniently simple to use, small in size, extremely safe, fairly economical and quite accurate in measurable light output. A flash-gun has become standard equipment on practically every camera now being made, even the most inexpensive.

Most camera fans are aware of the normal uses for flash as a convenient method of bringing bottled sunshine where and when it is needed artificially. To some, however, it is quite a surprise that flash can sometimes be very helpful when shooting pictures outdoors in bright sunlight.

The explanation is that bright sunshine also brings deep, dark shadows. Many shutterbugs accept the black shadows of summertime as necessary evils of the season and do nothing about them.

Here are some of the things you can do if the shadow portion of a picture is important enough:

1. Shift the subject, if possible, to change the shadows. A wide brimmed hat, for instance, can be removed or tilted.

2 Expose for the shadows. Open the lens or increase the time.

3. Use bright reflectors to shine light into the shadow area.

4. Use flash as a fill-in light to lighten the shadows.

Flash fill-in lighting is especially helpful with the more dramatic effects of backlighting when the sun is behind the subjects. However, it is important to let the sunlight remain predominant and keep the flash subdued otherwise you lose the effect of a sunny day picture.

Here are the things to remember when you are shooting sun-flash pictures, where the flash is secondary and merely to lighten the shadows: 1 Expose for regular daylight conditions according to film you are using. 2. Use newest, smallest size flashbulbs. 3. If these aren't available, place regular bulbs on extension wire behind camera. 4. If flashbulbs can't be placed further away, diffuse them by wrapping a handkerchief around them. One fold reduces light output by half; two folds reduces it four times. 5. Take reflector off flashgun and shoot bare bulb to lessen flash intensity

1. Compute the normal exposure For example, using medium speed, black-and-white film with a rating of ASA 50, we determine the exposure to be 1-100 of a second at f 16.

2. Divide the lens setting (f 16) into the guide number of the flashbulb being used. For example, a number 5 or 25 flashbulb has a guide number of 160 according to the table on the flashbulb package (for film of ASA 50 when shot at 1-100th second).

3. The answer is the distance normally used for a full strength flash picture. In our example: 160 divided by f 16 equals 10 feet.

4. Double the distance to get proper fill-in light strength. In our example the flashbulb should be at 20 feet.

5. If the bulb cannot be put at 20 feet, you can compensate by using it closer and removing the reflector or diffusing it with a handkerchief.

In all cases when using daylight color film, use blue flashbulbs to maintain correct color balance.

Having learned the rule about subduing flash in daylight pictures, there are occasions where you can break the rule to make better pictures. Sometimes the background in a picture is much too distracting or messy. By shooting a regular flash on the subject in the foreground, you can make the background go black, losing it.

You can partially overcome a messy background without a flash by focussing sharply on the foreground subject then compute the exposure so as to shoot with the lens wide open. In the final picture only the subject in front will be sharp and the background will be soft and hazy—and less distracting

Seven Thousand Guardsmen Plan Annual Training

RALEIGH — Seven thousand National Guardsmen from 99 North Carolina communities wound up training this week in preparation for the annual shmmer encampment, to be held for 15 days beginning Sunday, August 14, at Ft. Bragg. During the 15 days of training, the Guardsmen will put to test through field exercises all they have learned during 48 armory drills in the past year.

This is the first encampment for the 30th Infantry Division since it became an all-North Carolina division last October. It is the second encampment at Ft. Bragg for the Old Hickory division. In 1948 the Guardsmen spent two weeks at Bragg for its first encampment following the World War II.

The 30th, which gained the reputation of the "Work Horse of the Western Front," is commanded by Major General Claude Bowers of Warrenton. The assistant division commander is Brigadier General Maston Parham of Morganton, and Chief of Staff is Colonel Ivan Hardesty of Raleigh.

Commanding the 30th Division Artillery, which includes four battalions of light and medium artillery and one anti-aircraft battalion, is Major General Edward Griffin of Louisburg.

Because of the rapid expansion of the North Carolina National Guard during the past year, special emphasis will be placed on individual training during the encampment.

"A third of our men are recruits," Col. Hardesty reported at a staff planning conference last week, "and another third were transferred from one branch of service to another when the entire 30th came to North Carolina."

Because so many men are new at their jobs, a tremendous amount of preparation has been necessary to insure the success of the 15-day training.

This week units from the mountains to the coast are making a final check of equipment. The units will depart home stations early Sunday morning, arriving at Ft. Bragg before dinner.

The 30th Tank Battalion, tank companies of the three infantry regiments, the 130th Reconnaissance Company, and the 130th AAA Battalion, will be at Camp Stewart, ,Ga., this year.

The Georgia post is the Armored and AAA Training Center for all Army units located east of the Mississippi River and includes 280,000 acres of training land.

In 1949 and 1950, the citizen-soldiers of the 30th Division spent the summer encampment at Ft. Jackson, South Carolina, and for the past four years have been at Ft. McClellan, Ala., for the active duty period.

The change of site to Ft. Bragg will mean an extra four days of training for the Guardsmen because of the travel time saved. The trip to and from Ft. McClellan required six days of travel for many of the North Carolina Guard units.

Refuse Bid For Naval Inquiry

BUENOS AIRES (AP)—The Argentine Chamber of Deputies turned down an opposition request last night that it investigate whether warships of a "big foreign power" trailed the Argentine fleet during recent Atlantic maneuvers.

The surprise request was made last week by Radical party Congressman Oscar Alende in a bill to Congress. Alende didn't name the power, but congressional circles said he meant the United States.

Both British and American spokesmen denied their Navy's ships were in the South Atlantic during the Argentine exercises.

On the religious front, a congressional committee last night approved a Peronista bill to allow President Juan Peron to delay until next spring the constitutional assembly Congress voted previously to end Roman Catholicism's favored position as the state church The full Congress presumably will enact the bill.

As a key point in Peron's campaign against the church, Congress last May authorized elections for the assembly before Oct. 23, but since the June 16 revolt government and church leaders have been trying to ease strained relations. The new bill gives the President another six months — until next April 23 — in which to call the elections.

Will Subpoena 'Everybody In Sight' For Probe Facts

By B. L. LIVINGSTONE

WASHINGTON (AP)—Rep. Celler (D-NY) said today he will subpoena "everybody in sight," if necessary, to penetrate what he called the "aura of secrecy" around the Commerce Department's Business Advisory Council.

Celler is chairman of a House Judiciary subcommittee on monoplies investigating the role in government of "WOC's," or business men serving without compensation in federal agencies while continuing to draw salaries from their private firms.

Secretary of Commerce Weeks and the council's executive director, Walter S. White, refused yesterday to give the subcommittee access to the council's files and records. White said the files are in the department's custody and he could not produce them without violating the law.

The BAC is an unofficial group composed of some 165 officials of the nation's large corporations to advise the secretary of commerce on national business policy. It was established in the 1930s and has continued through Democratic as well as Republican administrations.

Celler said that unless Weeks agrees to testify personally on the council's role, he will subpoena "a whole slew of people" to get at the facts.

Recessing further public hearings until October, Celler said transcripts of White's testimony would be referred to all committee members to "decide what we'll do" about citing White — or possibly even Weeks — on charges of contempt of Congress.

White, an affable witness, said that under Weeks' orders he could supply the subcommittee only with BAC's bank statements.

For the rest of the council's files White referred the subcommittee to a letter by the commerce secretary ordering him not to surrender the files to "any person or ?y of the committees of Congress."

Weeks said they contain business statistics and other information obtained in confidence.

Under questioning, White testified that the BAC:

1. Disregarded most of the regulations prescribed by the Justice Department for government industry advisory committees. White said the Commerce Department's general counsel ruled the BAC was "too broad" to come under attorney general's criteria governing one-industry groups.

2. Gave advice to agencies outside the Commerce Department — including the Selective Service director, the State Department and the Wage Stabilization Board.

3. Recruited "WOC's" into government from industry, and provided some "top government officials" from its membership. White said one of its members — Averell Harriman, now governor of New York — became secretary of commerce and several others were appointed to Defense Department posts involving defense procurement and disposal of military surplus.

4. Maintained special funds to finance studies of the antitrust laws with a view toward their revision, and for research into labor policy. Among contributors to these funds Celler brought out, were officials of big firms which had been defendants in antitrust suits.

White acknowledged writing a 1951 letter which the subcommittee produced from its files. The letter reported that John Gall, a paid BAC consultant, led a fight to upset President Truman's "commitments" made to organized labor in efforts to reconstitute the Wage Stabilization Board after labor members walked off.

Child Severely Injured In Fall From Rooftop

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — A 22-month-old boy fell from a third-floor roof, dropped through the arms of a youth trying to catch him, and was injured seriously yesterday.

The child, William Nevitt, fell in an apparent effort to retrieve a toy pistol he had dropped from the roof.

His mother, Mrs. Ardena Nevitt, gave this account:

She went to the roof to sleep, after which the child apparently climbed out the window to join her.

Mrs. Ilene Cook and her brother, Jimmy Payton 18, first floor residents, were standing outside talking when a toy pistol fell at their feet. They looked up and saw a child's legs dangling over the roof edge.

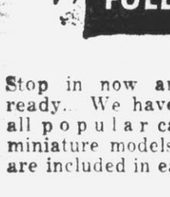

Just then William fell. Payton reached out to catch him but the child slid through Payton's arms and struck the concrete pavement.

Sixty-Seven Die As Giant Planes Crash

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP) — A selective rally in the stock market today pushed some issues up around 2 points. 3

There was little interest, however, in the bulk of the list and most price changes were small in either direction in early afternoon.

Trading was light. In the first hour, only 260,000 shares changed hands. Yesterday, also a quiet day saw the market move moderately higher on volume of 1,580,000 shares, smallest since June of 1954.

The steels, rails, coppers, and aircrafts won buying support today and a few other issues such as Standard Oil (NJ), Union Carbide and Chrysler were singled out for attention and scored good gains.

Combustion Engineering was up better than a point on news that it has a contract to develop an atomic power plant for a small submarine. Superior Steel advanced on higher earnings.

Other shares showing gains included Kennecott, Anaconda, U.S. Steel, Goodrich, United Aircraft (o increased earnings), Southern Pacific Western Maryland and U.S. Gypsum. 6

Governor Hodges Is On-The-Spot

RALEIGH (AP)—Gov. Hodges headed for the hurricane threatened Tar Heel coast today with a staff of top state officials to set up headquarters for on-the-spot relief work in case of disaster.

The governor, accompanied by state highway Chairman A. H. Graham, prepared to leave Raleigh early this afternoon in his official No. 1 automobile.

The governor's office said Motor Vehicles Commissioner Edward Scheidt and Col. James R. Smith, State Highway Patrol commander, would follow later in the afternoon. Top civil defense officials already are on the scene.

At the same time, the governor's office said Adj. Gen. John Hall Manning has ordered to active duty Wilmington National Guardsmen, including some 80 officers and men.

The governor will set up temporary headquarters at Wilmington's Cape Fear Hotel.

A strong, young, male elephant is worth $800 to $1,400 in East Pakistan, says the National Geographic Society.

Group Will Help In Rehabilitation

RALEIGH (AP) — Gov. Hodges has formed a "task force" to handle rehabilitation work that may be necessary following Hurricane Connie.

He set up the task force at a special meeting in his office last night.

The governor used a jet plane to return from the National Governor's Conference in Chicago yesterday.

Immediately after landing at the Raleigh-Durham Airport, the governor conferred with Gen. Edward Griffin state civil defense director, and representatives of federal, state and volunteer agencies concerned with hurricane relief.

At the meeting in his office, the governor was told by:

State Highway Chairman A. H. Graham and Chief Highway Engineer W. H. Rogers Jr. that highway crews and equipment were standing by.

Motor Vehicles Commissioner Edward Scheidt and Highway Patrol Commander James Smith that extra patrolmen were stationed in the east.

Dr. Roy Norton, state health officer, and Dr. Ellen Winston, state welfare head, the public health and welfare personnel were ready for emergency duty.

Agriculture Commissioner L. Y. Ballentine that arrangements were made for quickly appraising damages to farms and crops for handling resulting claims for relief measures.

In addition, Adj. Gen. John Hall Manning said National Guard units were on standby notice. Red Cross and Salvation Army and other service agencies also reported on the status of their preparations.

A number of regional federal civil defense officials also reported they were centering their operations in North Carolina.

Following Hurricane Hazel last year, 1½ million dollars in federal funds was allocated to help North Carolina coastal counties and towns recover from disaster.

Ex-President Of Soviet 'Unseen'

MOSCOW (AP)—Western observers have noted the continued absence from public gatherings of Nikolai Shvernik, former President of the Soviet Union. Recurring reports say that he is ill.

Shvernik is now chairman of the Central Council of Trade Unions of the U.S.S.R. When the body opened its third plenary meeting here recently, Vice Chairman L.N. Solovyev presided.

Flying Over The "Eye" Of Hurricane Connie

Workmen Risk Lives, Stay On Floating Radar Station

BOSTON (AP)—The Coast Guard cutter McCulloch today brought ashore 43 men evacuated from an Air Force radar platform at sea — including a dozen spilled into the water during a perilous transfer to the McCulloch.

Left behind on the "Texas tower" artificial island were 60 workmen who gambled their lives on their faith that the platform they are building 100 miles off Cape Cod can withstand hurricane Connie's worst.

Cmdr. Louis F. Sudnik of Dedham, Mass., skipper of the McCulloch, said about a dozen men were dunked in the Atlantic yesterday transferring to one of the cutter's boats. The men were lowered four at a time in a bucket-like carrier resembling a rubber boat with railings. Sudnik called it a "doughnut."

Several times the "doughnut" tipped and spilled its human cargo as a crane operator aboard the tower maneuvered to drop the men into the cutter's boat. The men, all wearing life jackets, were fished out unhurt.

As for the 60 men remaining aboard the radar platform—with its three permanent legs now imbedded in the ocean floor on Georges Shoal—Cmdr. Sudnik said their chances to ride out the hurricane are "in the hands of the Lord."

Sudnik said no rescue craft dare venture near the tower in heavy seas.

The 10 million dollar radar platform is the first of a string to be built out in the Atlantic for the Air Force. Its radar is intended to provide early warning for the East Coast in event of an enemy attack.

Seas of 35 to 40 feet were forecast today for the Georges Bank area. But the bottom of the steel platform stands 63 feet above the normal water line.

"We don't think there is any danger or we would evacuate all the men," said H. C. Duncan, project engineer for the contractors.

"The only danger," Duncan said, "would be if green seas (water in a solid mass) should hit it. It doesn't look as if that would happen."

Despite heavy swells, work proceeded as usual around the clock. Because of the risky nature of the work, the isolation and the long hours, the men average $300 a week with overtime.

one such crowded shop, the manager declared, "Dollar Day has turned out much better than we expected, in view of the hurricane warning. As of now (mid-morning) we are very pleased."

Men's clothing stores reported sales "about the same as usual." One manager commented he was having "a very good day, and I think this will be one of the best Dollar Days we've ever had here."

Sales were running high in the shoe stores, and one manager remarked, "We were very surprised to find a crowd waiting outside the store when we got to work this morning. Our sales are going very well, and I believe they will be just as good as the biggest Dollar Day we've ever had." Another shoe merchant said his business had started off rather slow this morning, "but it has picked up considerably, and I think it will be a lot better this afternoon."

Furniture Sales

In the furniture stores, traffic was reported heavy, with the sale of small items "going very well."

One druggist offering special Dollar Day bargains commented his business was "excellent, considering the weather prospects. Certainly the hurricane has hurt us some."

One jewelry store offering several "specials" for the day reported business as slow. "We expect it will stay that way," one clerk remarked. "Dollar Day is never a big event for us, and we don't go all out for it."

Dan Saleed, chairman of the Merchants Association Trade Promotion Committee, commented that "The crowds have left earlier than usual today because of the weather, but taking the weather into consideration, Dollar Day has been a success."

Clinton Armory Given Go-Ahead

RALEIGH (AP) — The State Armory Commission has given the green light to building a $100,000 National Guard armory at Clinton.

In announcing a call for bids, Adj. Gen. John Hall Manning said yesterday Sampson County will pay 15 per cent of the cost, the state 10 per cent and the federal government 75 per cent.

Polio Cases

RALEIGH (AP)—Poliomyelitis cases reported to the State Board of Health last week totaled 23, compared with 22 cases reported the previous week.

The board said today that two of the cases reported last week had received Salk vaccine. However, it said, "The time interval from vaccination to onset of illness rules out any association between these two events."

The interval was three months in one case. In the other instance, the first vaccine shot was given three months before onset of the disease and a second dose was administered the same day the child showed the first polio symptoms. Paralysis was not present in either case.

Through Aug. 5, North Carolina polio cases totaled 127 for this year. This compared with 211 cases for the same period last year.

Another Tropical Storm Shapes Up

MIAMI, Fla. (AP)—Another tropical storm, Diane, has developed in the Atlantic about 400 miles northeast of San Juan P.R., the Weather Bureau reported today in its first advisory on the fourth storm of the season.

The advisory stated:

Ships reports indicate that a tropical storm has formed in the Atlantic and was located at 7 a.m. EST) near Latitude 23.0 north, Longitude 62.0 west, or about 400 miles northeast of San Juan, P.R. Since no report has been received from near the center this position may be in error by as much as one degree.

"This storm appears to be moving towards the west-northwest or northwest at about 14 miles per hour attended by winds of 50 to 60 miles per hour near the center and gales outward 100 miles.

"Further intensification is expected during the next 24 hours with movement continuing about the same.

"The next advisory will be at 11 a. m. EST) but an exact fix on the storm may not be obtained until early this afternoon following aircraft reconnaissance."

Diane formed about 300 miles north and considerably to the west of the area which spawned Connie, the great Atlantic hurricane now threatening the U.S. mainland.

It was too early to determine whether Diane would follow in Connie's path.

Report Tornado Destroyed House

GOLDSBORO, N.C. (AP)— A report from the Grantham community near Goldsboro said a five-room frame dwelling was destoyed during the night by a tornado.

The dwelling was occupied by Mr. and Mrs. T. K. Britt and their three children. No one was injured.

The twister reportedly struck between 3 and 4 a.m.

LEFT TO BENSON

RALEIGH (AP)—The initiative for special legislation to cut next year's flue-cured tobacco crop more than 12 per cent should come from Agriculture Secretary Benson, Rep. Harold D. Cooley said yesterday.

Troop-Carrying Flying Boxcars Fall In Germany

STUTTGART, Germany (AP)—Two C119 Flying Boxcar transports collided and crashed into the Black Forest today. The U. S. Air Force announced 67 men were killed.

The Air Force said the death toll included the crews of the two American aircraft as well as soldiers being transported.

The Flying Boxcars have a normal seating capacity of 67, with a maximum capacity of 78.

The planes were two of a nine-plane flight which had just taken off from Echterdingen field, near here on a training mission with troops from the U. S. 7th Army aboard.

The Air Force announcement said:

"Initial reports said that one plane went down immediately. The second plane flew level for almost one minute, then went out of control and nosed into the ground."

The announced death toll would make this the fourth worst air disaster in history. A total of 129 U.S. servicemen died in the flaming wreckage of a C124 Globemaster near Tokyo in 1953. In 1952 another C124 crashed on taking off from Larson Air Force Base in Washington state, killing 87. In 1950 a commercial plane carrying soccer fans crashed at Cardiff, Wales, with a death toll of 80 persons.

Today's was West Germany's biggest postwar air disaster and also the biggest military death toll in an air crash in Western Europe.

The Air Force said today's crash occurred less than 15 minutes after take-off in midafternoon.

The announcement said there were 42 passengers, a crew of 5 plus one loadmaster in one plane, and 14 passengers a crew of 4 and a loadmaster in the second.

A few hours later, Lincoln stopped by at the Presbyterian church — where another Republican president, Dwight D. Eisenhower, sometimes worships today. Lincoln didn't stay for the end of the church exercises. His train to Washington was waiting.

Few people remember that in the midst of all this tumult, Lincoln made another speech. A crowd gathered outside the Wills house and clamored for him. Finally his tired figure loomed up in the doorway.

"I appear before you, fellow citizens," he said, "to thank you for the compliment. The inference is a fair one that you would hear me for a while, were I to commence to make a speech.

"I do not appear before you for the purpose of doing so, and for several substantial reasons. The most substantial is that I have nothing to say."

"Laughter," reported the newsman on the spot.

"In my position," he went on, "it is somewhat important that I should not say foolish things."

"If you can help it," a heckler interrupted, according to the same observer.

"It very often happens," concluded the President, "that the only way to help it is to say nothing at all. Believing that is my present condition this evening, I must beg you to excuse me from addressing you further."

What ever became of Edward Everett anyway?

Files $100,000 Suit For Libel

RALEIGH (AP) — Radio commentator W. E. Debnam has filed a $100,000 libel suit against the News Leader Co., publisher of the Chapel Hill News Leader.

Debnam charged in court papers filed yesterday the bi-weekly newspaper carried an article which defamed him last Sept. 30.

Debnam is asking $50,000 actual and $50,000 punitive damages.
