Fountain Man Reports Two Marines Pulled A Gun Probe Robbery-Kidnap Tale

By BOB HILLDRUP Reflector Staff Writer An air of mystery today surrounded the highway robbery of a Fountain man and the possible kidnapping of an unidentified traveler near Farmville last night.

Stantonsburg Road at Butt's store. The car turned off again on a dirt road and the driver, along with Baker, was forced out of the car at gunpoint.

The only clue to the identity of the driver was that he said he was on his vacation and planned to head for Scotland Neck and then north on US 268. A car, later described by Baker as a gray, 1952 Dodge stopped and Baker got in.

The marines, Baker added, also appeared to be quite familiar with the roads in the area. Footprints at the scene of the robbery apparently corroborated Baker's story. He said the car was headed toward US 264 when he and the driver were forced out and that the vehicle did not pass him as he fled back toward US 268 and Farmville.

French Photography Exhibition Now Being Displayed At ECC

Outstanding reportorial photography by the contemporary French cameramen Brassai, Cartier-Bresson, Doisneau, Ronis, and Izis will be exhibited at East Carolina College from September 24 through October 12.

Eighty-five works by these noted photographers have been selected for circulation throughout the country by Edward Steichen, director of the department of photography of the Museum of Modern Art in New York City.

The exhibition at East Carolina will be on display in the lobby of the Joyner Memorial Library. Arrangements for the show, sponsored at the college by the department of art, were made by Dr. Paul Runnig, department head.

The public is invited to see the exhibition. The library is open at the following hours: Monday thru Friday, 8 a. m. to 10 p. m.; Saturday, 8 a. m. to 5 p. m.; and Sunday, 2 p. m. to 5 p. m.

Henry Cartier-Bresson is represented entirely by his Asiatic photographs taken in China, Indonesia, Burma, India, Bali, and Ceylon. Most of these works are being exhibited for the first time, and only a few have been published in this country.

Brassai at 52 is the senior member of this group. Both he and Cartier-Bresson have exercised a considerable influence not only on French photography but on the best photography of all Europe. Work by both these men has been published here in Harpers-Bazaar, and by Cartier-Bresson in Life Magazine.

Photography by Robert Doisneau has appeared in Vogue. The work of Izis and Ronis is practically unknown in this country.

Except for the Cartier-Bressons, all the photographs in the exhibition were taken in Paris or in the provinces of France.

Statements by each of the photographers represented accompany the prints and give an interesting insight to their approaches to their work.

'Books and Stuff'

By DR. ED HIRSHBERG . . . It must have been the $1000 reward that caught her eye — but anyway, now we know somebody reads our column, because our good friend Miss Eunice McGee, college dormitory counselor and former teacher for 25 years or so — primary teacher, called us up and said she had an old edition of "The Little Engine That Could." . . . Last week we told you about the $1000 reward the publisher is offering for editions of the children's classic published before 1911, and Miss McGee promptly came up with a 1911 edition — which we don't know will win the $1000, but anyway we can ask the publisher, and if Miss McGee does win — well, that'll teach you not to miss Books and Stuff, ever again. . . .

TV-Jeebies . . . We came across an item about a librarian in New York who made a survey on the effect of television on reading habits. As we figured, she discovered that people who have TV sets read less than people who don't. . . . The same is true, we suppose, of people who have radios, bridge tables and scrabble boards — certain ones, if they can find anything that they like to do better, will do it rather than read, and TV just adds to the confusion in their lives. . . . Except, of course, educational TV, than which for culture, refinement, and general edification we can think of nothing better. . . . How's that for a personal plug for our Shakespeare course at 6 o'clock every afternoon? — if you don't think it's hard work, come out and try it sometime. . . .

Today's Review . . . We are being very short on Staff because we're so long on Books today — the review below takes up more space than usual, because it's about an unusually lengthy book, called "The Tontine," a two-volume job by best-selling writer Thomas Costain, and the Literary Guild's selection for October. . . . Our reviewer is new to these pages, Dr. Floyd Overly of the English Department at East Carolina, who has, we think, done a remarkably fine job in reading such a long book so quickly and writing about it so well. . . .

THE TONTINE, by Thomas Costain. Garden City, N.Y. Doubleday & Co., 1955. . . . Here is a novel interesting enough, with its vast fabric of innumerable exciting episodes, to hold the attention of the reader throughout its almost incredible length (921 pages), and long enough to provide (with proper rationing) enough action, intrigue, and suspense to last him all winter. . . .

The course of the action covers most of the 19th century, its characters would fill a sizable "Who's Who," the scenes involve all levels of British society, and the story ranges geographically all over England, to France, across the Atlantic to the West Indies and to the U.S. Running through it all is a simple thread of continuity that serves as a kind of clothesline on which to hang a huge washing, holding the whole hodge-podge together: Who will win the Waterloo Tontine?

A tontine is a kind of grand-lottery-life insurance plan, popular in the 18th and 19th centuries. Initial subscribers bought shares to set up a fund, later sharing the dividends as long as they lived. As the shareholders grew older and fewer in number, interest payments increased, until the last survivor won the jackpot. . . . The Waterloo Tontine was set up in 1815, and the novel follows the lives and fortunes of certain shareholders from this time on till their deaths. Such a narrative has to be a long one, as its principal agents live a long, long time, and in the course of their eventful careers a great deal happens not only to them but to a great multitude of other people as well, who are also affect-

Lady JP Likes Job On A Bench

AP Newsfeatures . . . BLUEWATER, N.M. (AP) — Vivacious Jane Cosper, Valencia County justice of the peace, says most of the people brought before her "are very cooperative." . . . That may well be true. Those who step out of line and are caught at it probably notice that this pretty little brunette with the blue eyes also has a determined-looking chin. . . .

She was appointed Jan. 1. . . . "We've needed a justice of the peace up here for a long time," she says. "I like the job. I think I can put up with the inconveniences until it ends." . . . She has inconveniences all right. She lives with her husband, Lee Roy Cosper, 16 miles west of here near the gas company plant where he is employed. Twice a day she has to drive the 16 miles between her home and her Bluewater office, taking her 2-year-old son Henry with her. . . .

Fortunately, her parents live next to her office. She says: "I can have my baby right here with me except when I'm in the courtroom. I can help mother, and I don't have to meet the public all day long. . . . I don't have much time for housework, that's for sure. My poor husband gets neglected a little bit." But she thinks he'll bear up. . . . The pretty young JP says, "I've never had a tough case — not what I'd call tough. It kind of shocks them to find themselves facing a woman."

Curiosity Pays For 6-Year-Old

ELKIN, N.C. (AP) — Curiosity paid off for 6-year-old Janice Marshall. . . . While playing in a smokehouse at her home, she saw a mouse run into a hole in one of the logs. She gazed at the hole and uncovered a small tobacco sack containing some money but couldn't get the sack out. . . . Her father saved the log in two and found $160 in old U.S. currency. . . . Marshall doesn't know how the money got there. He plans to redeem it and buy U.S. savings bonds in Janice's name.

Suffrage Boast Made Good; Lady Is A Gravedigger

AP Newsfeatures . . . WENONA, Ill. — Women have been proclaiming their ability to do anything men can since long before suffrage was granted them in 1920. And a bit of substance has been added to the boast by a young mother whose occupation is . . . a grave digger. . . . Mrs. Edward Bartelt, 27, janitress at St. Mary's school here, recently assumed the job of grave digger at St. Mary's cemetery. . . . "It shocked some of the men at first," says Mrs. Bartelt, "but they've gotten used to it by now. The work itself isn't too hard. . . . When I get to the clay, which is about six feet down, I wait until my husband comes home to finish the job. . . . Mr. Bartelt is a truck driver for a cookie factory. When he is home, he helps his wife in her work. They have two small children, Edward and Barbara." . . .

MRS. EDWARD BARTELT

In addition to digging graves at the cemetery, Mrs. Bartelt also has the task of filling the excavations after a burial and keeping the grounds in order. . . . Mrs. Bartelt said her grave digging assignments are not too strenuous, for they usually do not come too close together. At one time however, she had three graves to dig in one week. . . .

"It's still hard for some men, especially strangers, to get used to the idea," Mrs. Bartelt observed. "Last week, a man came up to me at the cemetery and told me he was looking for the grave digger to pay HIM for a job. . . . He asked me where I could find him. When I told him I was the grave digger, he walked away, a little unsure of himself, and asked the priest. He still didn't seem completely positive when he paid me." . . .

Irish Daffodil Visits Virginia

GLOUCESTER, Va. (AP) — Virginia has a beautiful visitor from Ireland, and it hopes she will like her new abode. . . . She is a pure white daffodil, a type so rare that only two bulbs of her species have been allotted the United States this year. . . . The daffodil, called "Empress of Ireland," will make her home on the Little England (would the Irish like that?) plantation in southern Gloucester county. She is expected to bloom next spring. The only other similar bulb is owned by a Staten Island fancier in New York. They are valued at $200 but are not for sale. . . .

Midwife Attended Rare Birth Of Triplets

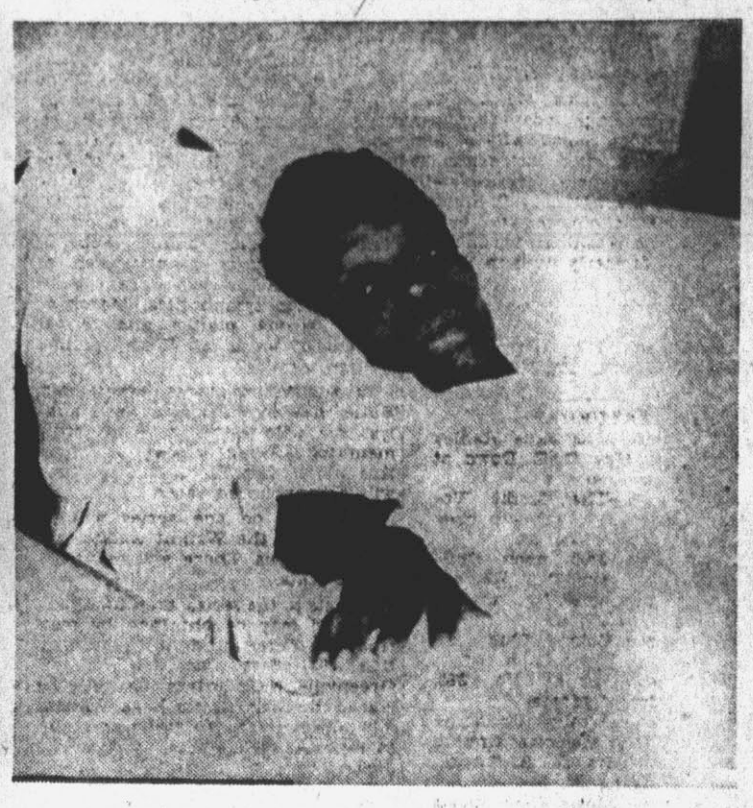

Mrs. Mary Daniels is the midwife who delivered the first triplets born in Pitt County in at least seven years. The triplets were born September 16. One has since died, but the other two are being cared for in incubators at Pitt Memorial Hospital.

By EDWINA HAYMES . . . Reflector Staff Writer . . . A week ago last night in a run-down three room house on Roosevelt Avenue a 29-year-old Negro woman gave birth to the first triplets born in Pitt County in at least seven years. . . . One of the babies has since died, but the other two are still being cared for in incubators at Pitt Memorial Hospital. The mother, Mary Annie Perkins, is receiving treatment at the hospital and at last report was "doing fine." . . . According to statistics, chances for the birth of triplets is one out of every 6,400 cases in the United States, which has a higher rate of multiple births than anywhere in the world. In general, chances for triplets is one in every 7,910 births. Approximately one out of every 20 births in the United States results in twins. . . . Multiple births are always a novelty, and sometimes they can come as a surprise and a shock. . . . Mrs. Mary Daniels, Negro midwife in this case who had never before delivered more than one baby at a time in all her 20 cases, said, "We had no idea it would be triplets. But I didn't lose my nerve; there was too much work for me to do." . . . Artificial Respiration . . . As each babe was born, the first about 10:30 p.m. and the other two about a half-hour later. Mrs. Daniels had to administer artificial respiration by mouth using sterilized gauze, to effect breathing. Each child, two girls and a boy, was born "lifeless," she said. . . . Together they weighed only 8 pounds, 11 1/2 ounces. Each girl weighed 2 pounds, 14 ounces, the boy weighed 2 pounds, 15 1/2 ounces. One of the girls died, but Saturday. The surviving infants have not been named. . . . After the birth, Mrs. Daniels summoned the local rescue truck which has a supply oxygen and mother and infants were transported to the hospital. . . . The mother's first reaction on learning of her three new offspring was to cry the midwife said. "She was wondering how she would take care of them." . . . Mary Annie Perkins lives with her four other children, the oldest about 10, in an unpainted three-room dwelling, very sparsely furnished. She has been working as a domestic and in green tobacco. Her case is now in the hands of the county Welfare Department which will supply some relief. . . . Midwife Service . . . With births such as this, midwives are usually the agents of delivery. In Pitt County there are 12 registered midwives, all Negro. They set their own standard of fees. . . . Mrs. Daniels, who attended the mother of the triplets, has been a midwife for two years, and prior to that was a practical nurse, having taken a correspondence course from a Chicago nursing school. She also received training under two local physicians. . . . As a midwife she attends classes once a month at the Health Department to keep informed. The Health Department also offers prenatal clinics where expectant mothers may receive free examinations and check-ups by a physician. . . . Mrs. Daniels, herself the mother of seven children likes midwifery and declares, "I become more interested in my work every day. I've always been interested in helping the sick." Her husband is a mechanic Isaiah Daniels, and they live at 202 Hudson Street.

Call For Nebraska Map Goes Through Channels

OMAHA (AP) — Frau Elsa Taake is an expert with the embroidery needle. Because she is, this story unfolded. . . . Frau Taake decided she wanted to make an embroidered writing case for the North Atlantic Treaty commander in chief, Gen. Alfred M. Gruenther. . . . And it being that Gen. Gruenther comes from Nebraska, Frau Taake decided she should embroider Nebraska's state flag into the case design along with the NATO coat of arms and the U.S. flag. . . . So she wrote the adjutant general of the U.S. Army forces in Europe asking a color reproduction of Nebraska's flag. . . . He didn't have one. But he figured the adjutant general at Washington would have it. So on went the request. . . . The adjutant general at Wash-

Year-Old War On Leprosy Has Shown Results

BRAZZAVILLE, French Equatorial Africa (AP) — This colony's mass campaign against leprosy is yielding its first results. Launched about a year ago with new sulfone drugs and revolutionary methods which do away with the forced seclusion of the lepers, the campaign has brought all the sick people into the open. . . . In January 1952, there were only 37,500 official lepers in the territory and leprosisia could cope only with 2,268 cases. . . . By April this year 102,000 persons freely submitted to tests and were found to be suffering from leprosy. Those under treatment jumped to 84,700 cases. . . . Mobile squads of African male nurses tour even outlying districts by car, bicycle, boat or foot to distribute weekly or biweekly the sulfones which cure the disease in the early stage and curb it in advanced stages. . . . While previously all lepers strenuously tried to hide as long as possible the marks on their skin they hurry today to the nearest dispensary or tell the passing drug distributors as soon as the first suspicious sign appears. . . . The contempt in which the lepers were held by their own people has quickly melted. . . . It is expected that within 10 years leprosy will have been eradicated.

Bob Hope Very Busy For 'Retired' Actor

By BOB THOMAS . . . HOLLYWOOD (AP) — This week Bob Hope was filming the first of eight TV hours he'll do this season, including one in London and another in Paris. He'll also make two or three pictures in the coming year. . . . "And I'm the guy who was going to retire last year," he laughs. . . . "I was down in Palm Springs playing golf with my first agent, Charlie Yates," Bob related. "Charlie dropped dead right in front of me. He lay there stone cold for 20 minutes until they came for him. . . . "It didn't really affect me for three days. Then the shock set in. I was terribly upset. Then I thought I was dying. About this time, NBC came to me with a new contract deal. I told them nothing doing; I was retiring." . . . The depressed Hope went to his doctor for a complete physical. That's when his spirits changed. "He told me to get out of his office," Hope said. "In fact, he chased me down the street. I was too healthy." . . . As a result, he signed a new pact with NBC calling for eight TV shows a year. His first one, Oct. 4 will be on film because Hope will be making a movie, "That Certain Feeling." He reported that six of the shows will be revues, two of them plays. He'll do "Sorrowful Jones" and another comedy. . . . This winter he goes to England

Perfumed Checkbook May Be Bankers' Next Move

By DOROTHY ROE . . . AP Women's Editor . . . One day soon you may get perfumed checks and compactly with built-in checkbooks, if American bankers continue their efforts to woo feminine customers. . . . It seems the bankers are really serious about this drive to glamorize their business, ever since they discovered that outside the metropolitan centers women do 85 per cent of the family banking. They believe women are most likely to patronize the bank that makes them feel most at home. . . . So nowadays the country's banks are tripping over each other in their efforts to make banking as much fun as shopping in the supermarket. . . . Some of this may be due to the fact that there are at present some 8,500 women officers in U.S. banks and more than 293,000 women bank employees, according to officials of the New York State Bankers Assn., which is sponsoring "Know-Your-Bank Week, Oct. 18-22." . . . Women bank executives just naturally understand how women like to do their banking. Like Miss Agnes Cooney, assistant vice president of the Stamford Trust Co., Stamford, Conn., who says: . . .

Fire Chief Dennis Murphy quoted the unidentified tiller man as saying that because of the nature of the fire he didn't bother to board the vehicle at the fire station. . . .

BASEBALL'S BIGGEST SHOW

One fascination about the World's Series is the unexpected. It always seems to happen. Every year there are goats and heroes, bonehead plays and impossible catches.

Each year since 1903, with one exception, national attention has been focused on baseball's great fall classic. It is one of the few events in sports to make page one. Reading the sports pages, listening to broadcasts, watching television--or even attending the games--are people who hardly know the difference from a bunt and a bingle. They all want into the act of second guessing the umpires, managers and players.

That's what has packed as many as 390,000 people into the stadiums for a single series, and run receipts up as high as $2,979,000. In over half a century, some 11 million people have paid their way into ball parks to see the National and American League pennant winners clash each fall.

For some of the flavor and excitement--and the surprises--of the American institution that is the Series, look over these pictures.

Everything happens in Brooklyn. Here's Yankee Tommy Henrich striking out to start a four-run rally in the 1941 Series. Dodger catcher Mickey Owen missed the third strike. The Yankees won the game and next day they won the Series.

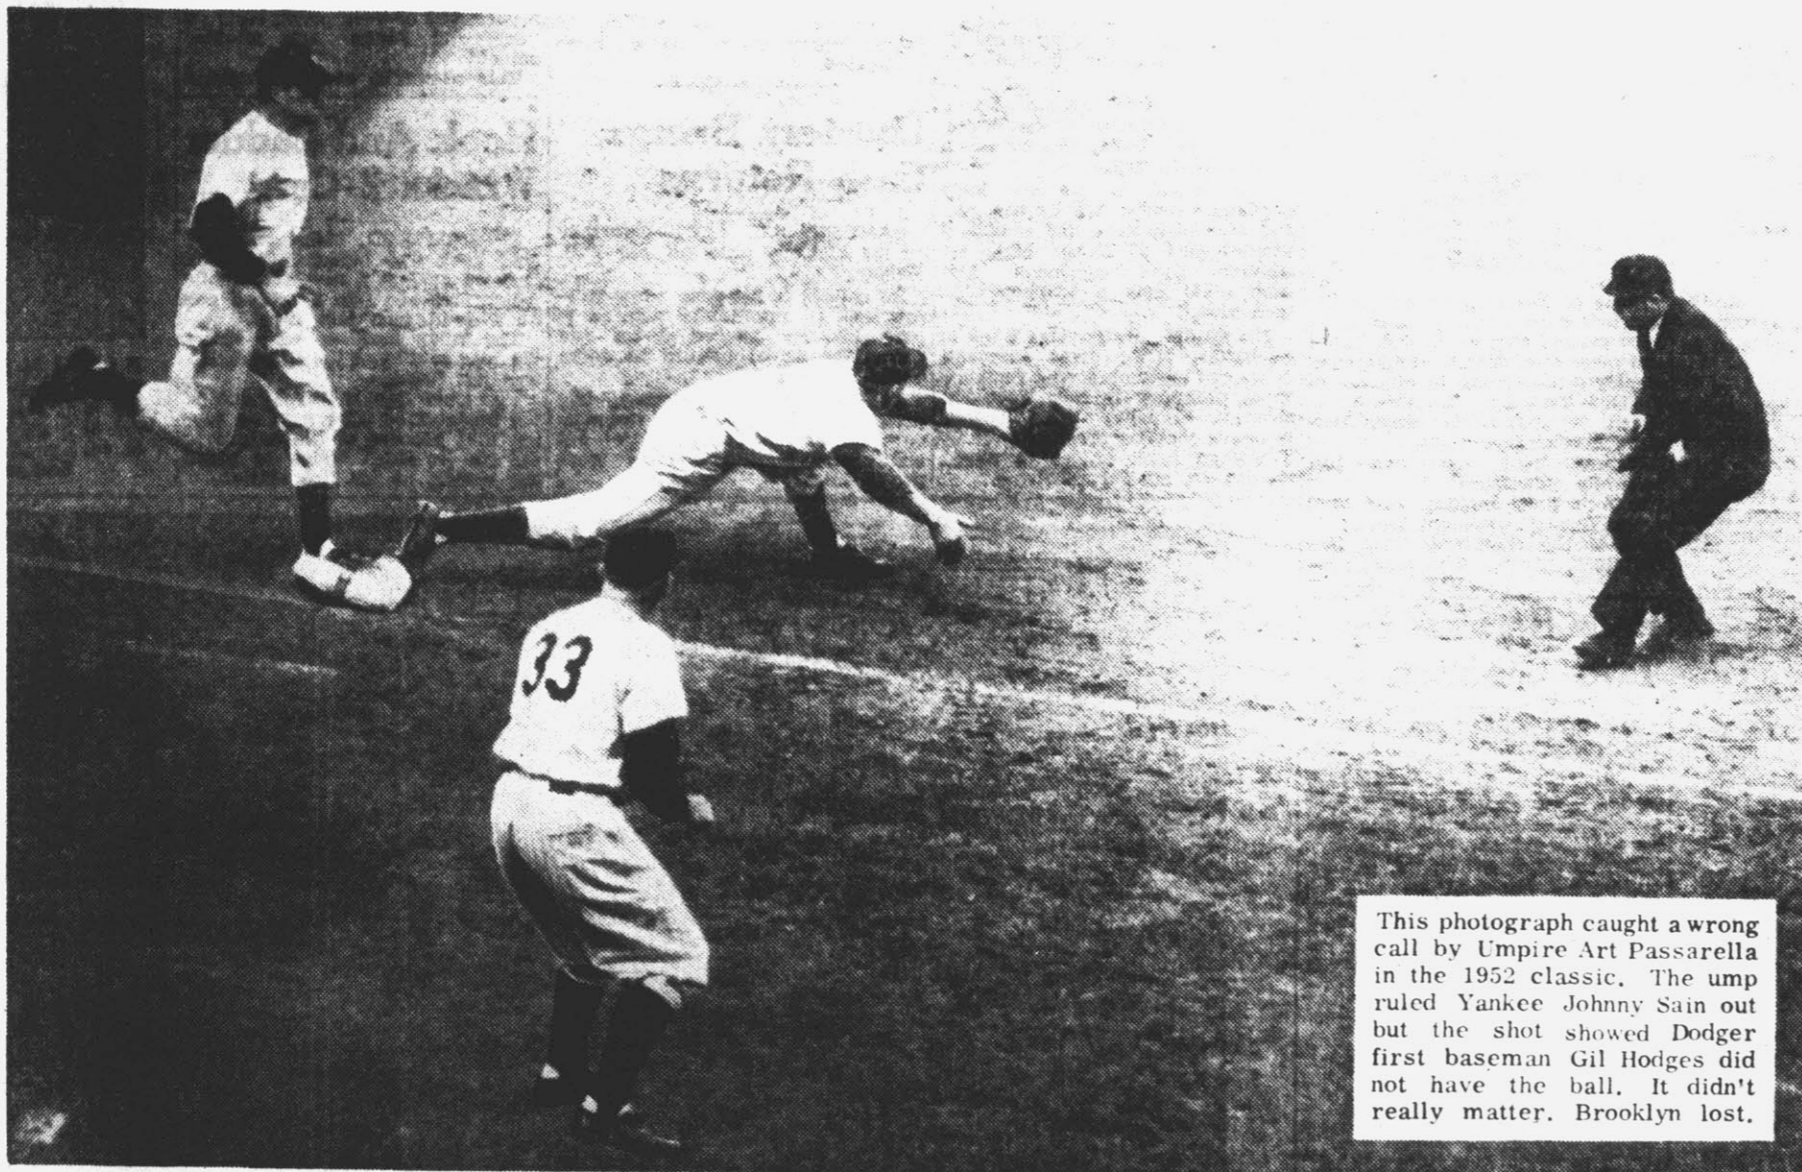

Managers run the teams but umpires handle the Series. Here John McGraw, who managed the Giants nine times in Series, strikes one of his typical Napoleonic poses as he confronts an umpire in 1911. Even then the man in blue was right.

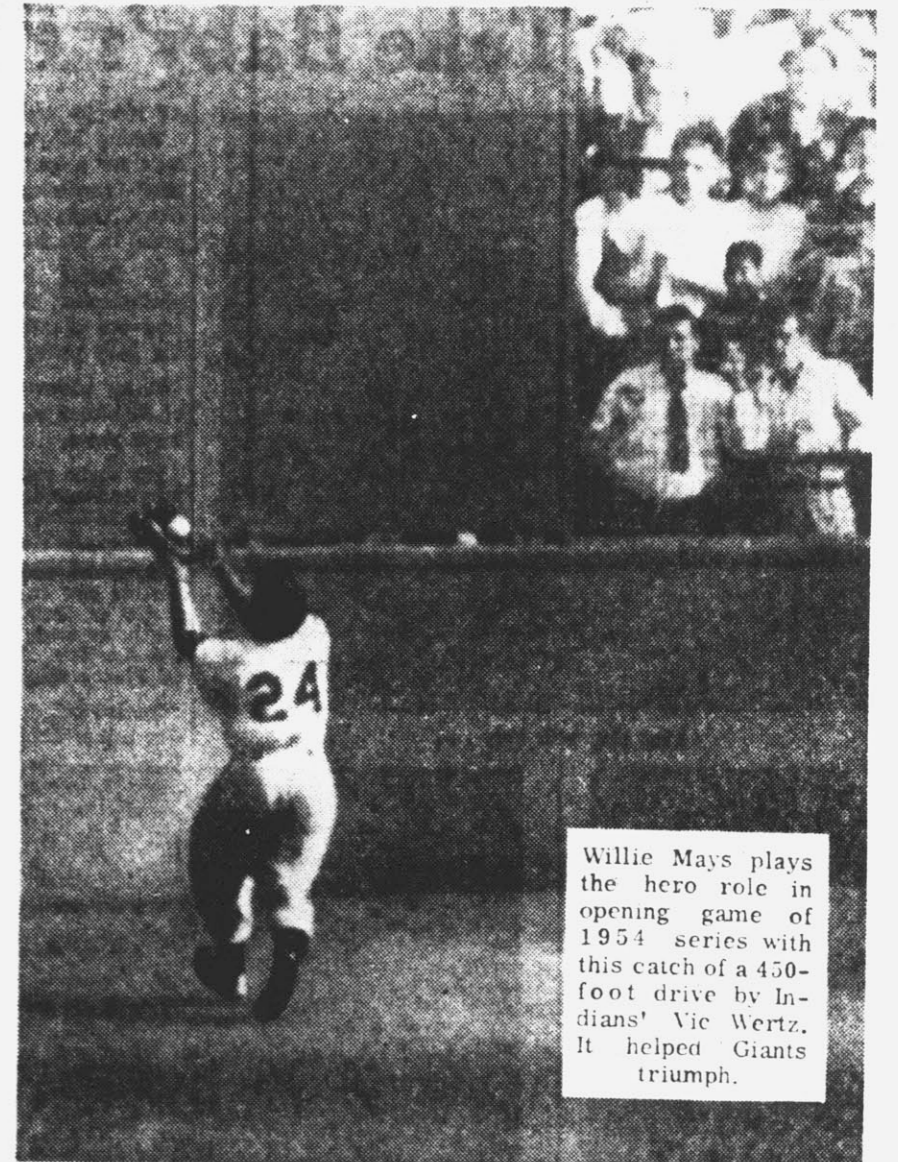

Of all the Series heroes none could match Babe Ruth's exploits. In ten Series he clubbed 15 homers, scored 37 runs. Twice he hit three homers in a single game. Here the Bambino is congratulated by Lou Gehrig in the 1932 classic.

Here is a classic case of confusion, snapped in the fourth Series game in 1939. Knocked down and dazed, Cincinnati catcher Ernie Lombardi lies on the ball as three Yankee runners cross the plate.

This photograph caught a wrong call by Umpire Art Passarella in the 1952 classic. The ump ruled Yankee Johnny Sain out but the shot showed Dodger first baseman Gil Hodges did not have the ball. It didn't really matter. Brooklyn lost.

Willie Mays plays the hero role in opening game of 1954 series with this catch of a 450-foot drive by Indians' Vic Wertz. It helped Giants triumph.

Dark Intent

By RAE FOLEY

SYNOPSIS
Death of Roger Brindle, an extremely popular syndicate newspaper columnist, opens new chapters in the lives of those whom he wrote so well. He leaves his young widow Carol, and an entourage of persons who he had befriended. Carol learns that Roger left her no more than five thousand dollars. When he learns from his wife, Bessie, that Roger's first wife, Jane, has come to Stoweville for the funeral, Albert Ribbee, one of those befriended by Roger, refuses to see her. Bessie expresses the hope that Carol will get rid of Joe Hatery and Ethel Hatery, another couple whom Roger had helped. Carol tells Shandy Stowe, descendant of an old village family, that she has received a cryptic note regarding Roger's death. Shandy learns that a ghost writer is coming to help Carol write a series of stories on Roger in Lois Fleming, whom he had known seven years before.

CHAPTER SIX
"I am sure," said the literary agent, "that it will prove to be a successful collaboration," and put down the telephone.
"That's that," Mignonne Franks said briskly. "When I suggested having someone else write about her husband, Mrs. Brindle felt all over herself. I told her you'd be there on the fifteenth. But you heard all that."
"I still don't like it," Lois Fleming said stubbornly.

Mignonne Franks, Mignonne to the publishing trade to a score of professional actors on Broadway and in Hollywood to the musical world and a fair share of those in politics, as well as to half a dozen other separate New York worlds for which she had, incredibly, the time and energy to devote her alert intelligence, was small and plump, with shining black hair as smooth as a cap, snapping dark eyes, and tiny hands and feet. She moved at prodigious speed but with so much efficiency that she never appeared to be in a hurry. As an agent, she was always at leisure to hear the troubles of her clients, whether they involved writing and marketing or related to their marital and extra-marital crises and at the same time she got through more work than most of her competitors.

At the moment one small hand, weighted down by a magnificent jade ring, rested on a lowering pile of scripts that she had read promptly. Mentally she reviewed the hours ahead, canceled a Carnegie Hall concert she had looked forward to hearing, and switched all her attention to the immediate problem before her.

At least one week Mignonne swore a solemn oath that she would be taking on other people's burdens and just as regularly she forgot all about it. There was Lois Fleming, for instance, facing her across the desk. The girl had never really recovered from that bout of pneumonia, she was too thin and pale. Probably she nibbled little snacks and heated cans of soup instead of eating properly. Mignonne, blessed with a superb digestion and a nice taste in food, had no patience with women who neglected their bodies. She lived as much alone as her host of friends would permit, but she ate sensibly.

Lois should have married again. She had been badly shattered by her husband's death, but seven years had passed since then. Time she made a new start. The shrewd eyes studied the young woman across the desk. Lois Fleming was twenty-nine with dark hair cut very short and curling all over her head. Her features were not symmetrical enough for beauty but she had big eyes and a small nose. A warm voice and a vivid quality which Mignonne could not quite define. Perhaps it was the way she walked like a thing in flight, always on the verge of taking off the ground. People turned for a second look at the eager, charming face.

Lois had always maintained roundly that a ghostwriter had no right to a personality. A ghost was only a reflection. But Lois Fleming was something more than

Solution of Yesterday's Puzzle

AP Manufactures 9-24

THRESHOLD

What is education but a broadening of man's knowledge, enabling him to live a better life? Education is like a doorway leading to the fulfillment of dreams and ambitions. Beyond it lies the vast chamber of the mind, and scientists know that in a lifetime most men develop only a small part of their mental potentialities.

In our search for education today, one type is sometimes slighted . . . religious education. Yet in all the fields of learning what could be more important? Man needs Faith and a knowledge of his Church if he is to reconcile so much that is happening in the world of today with the kind of future he would like to have. In your reading and studies, don't forget religion. There is nothing stuffy about the study of it, nothing dull. It is as significant as yesterday . . . as full of promise as all tomorrow.

THE CHURCH FOR ALL . . . ALL FOR THE CHURCH

Schools Working On Part-Time Basis

The problem of classroom space in public schools of North Carolina becomes more critical with each passing year. We are putting more money into outlay for new schools than ever before in the history of the state. Yet the number of additional classrooms which are needed increases each year.

At the start of this school year some 220 million dollars was needed for school construction in North Carolina according to Gov. Hodges. By 1960, he added, there will be a total need of 391 million for school construction.

That compares with the 25 million dollars the state has earmarked for public school construction and an estimated 62 million which local units are expected to spend for new schools. That leaves a deficit of more than 300 million dollars needed for school construction. Needless to say, we must find an answer to this lop-sided problem if our public schools are to continue to function properly.

The Reflector agrees with the state's chief executive that serious consideration must be given the suggestion that children attend school in shifts in order to achieve greater utilization of school buildings we now have. This would at least curtail a portion of the outlay necessary for new construction.

Classrooms of our schools now are used about six hours a day, five days a week, nine months a year. Through the use of a well planned shift system for youngsters attending schools, we should be able to get one-fourth to one-third more use of each classroom every day during the regular nine-month school term. If the shift system were extended to span the summer months when classrooms normally are not used at all, we may be able to handle 50 per cent more students in North Carolina's public schools without adding a single new classroom.

Many educators will come forth with countless reasons why the system cannot be effective. Maybe they are right; but we must recognize the fact that from purely an economic standpoint, we should be able to make more use of the school buildings for instruction of pupils than we are now making. We are going to have to do so if the public school system is to keep pace with the growing number of students.

Under a full scale shift system for public schools, we would of course have to have more teachers. We will need more school buses, and we will have to build more gymnasiums, cafeterias and other "extras" which will be needed anyway as the number of students increases. But by greater use of the classrooms through a shift system, North Carolina would realize a much greater utilization of the multi-million dollar physical plant it has built and maintains for public education.

In the interest of public education in North Carolina, Gov. Hodges should appoint a special committee to make a thorough study of the possibility of a shift system for North Carolina public schools. The recommendations of such a committee might well point a way out of the classroom shortage which is constantly becoming more acute in our public school system.

Obligations Not Met In That One-Family Strike

The power of a picket line, no matter how small, has been displayed in Bessemer, Ala., where a discharged worker and his wife have halted operations of the multi-million dollar Pullman-Standard Car Manufacturing company.

With the feeling that he had lost his job without proper cause, a former employe of the plant, with his wife and two small children, picketed the entrance of the plant. More than 900 workers observed the family picket line in spite of the announcement of the district Steelworkers union that the strike was unauthorized and that the union must abide by its contract with the manufacturing company.

The strike crippled the company's operation on the first day the family line was set up, and on the following day caused a complete shutdown of the plant.

Like all other strikes where a huge number of people are involved, losses in wages to the workers will amount to many thousands of dollars before operations are resumed. The company likewise will suffer by the strike. The most amazing part of it is that the strike and picket line, for all practical purposes, has been brought about by a one-man campaign.

Although local union officials have asked the discharged worker to remove his family picket line—which he refused to do—it hardly seems to us that the union has discharged its responsibility to the company with which it has a work contract.

In this strike, as in the recent dock strike which cost millions of dollars, it appears to us that the union has flatly failed to exercise the means at its disposal to fulfill its obligation to the company.

One Second's Effort Is All That Seems Needed

It was a simple news story. Nothing spectacular about it. Probably didn't cause much excitement except to the persons immediately involved. Somewhere it happens almost every day. Perhaps that's what makes it important.

The news account reported the theft of an automobile. The driver, double parked, left the motor running and dashed into a building to pick up the raincoat he had momentarily forgotten. He dashed back to where he had left his car, but it was gone.

Literally thousands of automobiles are stolen each year purely and simply because of the carelessness of their drivers. These vehicles represent millions of dollars in owners' investment. While many stolen cars are recovered unharmed, many others are damaged or demolished by the thieves.

It takes only a second to turn off the ignition switch of a car when it is parked. The key can be removed from the starter switch and the car locked in less time than it takes to tell about it. Yet hundreds of automobiles are left parked with their keys in them every day. They make easy targets for automobile thieves who find car-snatching a lucrative business or entertaining pastime.

Within a matter of days American motorists could cause an appreciable decline in automobile thefts merely by taking time to remove ignition keys when they get out of their cars. It would save police and other law enforcement agencies countless thousands of man hours every month which are now spent trying to track down stolen vehicles. It would cut annual property losses in this country by millions.

Just take the key out. It's as simple as that.

Morale Boost For Area Was Needed

By LYNN NISBET
DAMAGE SURVEY — Governor Luther Hodges accompanied by a dozen high level officials representing federal agencies visited the hurricane damaged area of the state Thursday. Purpose of the visit was not actually to inspect damaged property, but to give local officials in the several communities an opportunity to present reports of losses and to hear the responsible officers explain what might be done to relieve them.

Stops were made at New Bern, Washington, Manteo and Elizabeth City. At each place spokesmen for several adjacent counties were on hand. All told there were some thirty communities represented. No composite estimate of total losses was developed. The civil defense and Red Cross folks who have had large experience in such matters agreed that previous estimates of $160 million might be low.

Judge Thomas H. Gooden, director of regional defense for the southeast with headquarters at Thomasville, Ga., and his chief engineer, Col. Earl Mader, were in the party. So was K.C. Lattimer of the Atlanta regional Red Cross office and Albert E. Rozar, head of the production loan section of the Farm Home Administration. General E.F. Griffin, state civil defense director, and half a dozen newspaper and radio men completed the group.

The plane got off two hours late because of dense fog at the Raleigh-Durham airport and the schedule ran behind all the way. But the local people seemed to appreciate the interest manifested by the big folks and they patiently waited around. Keynote of the several brief meetings was sounded by Mayor L.S. Blades of Elizabeth City when he said "this is not a time for speeches; it is a time for deadly serious consideration of the biggest problem our section has faced in many years."

ACTION — Governor Hodges emphasized his purpose to see that everything that is being done or promised for any other section of the country will be done for North Carolina. He urged the Red Cross and federal agencies to cut red tape and get relief items moving promptly.

Congressmen G.A. Barden at New Bern and Herbert Bonner at Washington added their insistence that usual routine be speeded up. Both congressmen said they had telephoned and written Washington authorities emphasizing the importance of immediate help.

The Governor and the congressmen admitted that it sounds good to hear that "all the resources of the United States government are at your disposal." That's on paper, and too often it takes six weeks to six months to get the matters handled through channels.

That is where Judge Gooden's promise that he will use every facility at his command to cut the tape and get relief measures in force was so well received. K.C. Lattimer pointed out that aid from the Red Cross is not charity. It is simply a neighborly expression of helpfulness in keeping with the American spirit.

The officials explained and the local people now better understand the two-sided methods of aid in hurricane damage relief.

Expenditures for repairing damage to public property—streets, water and sewer systems, power lines, and other essential service facilities may be reimbursed from federal funds. There is some provision for aid to farmers and other business operators through special emergency relief funds. On the whole, however, private losses cannot be paid for out of public funds, but the aid in an area is through loan provisions on generous terms and low interest.

It was announced that the small Business Administration would open an office at New Bern next week and have representatives to visit other communities to process applications for loans.

MORALE — The members of Governor's party sensed that the need for a boost to morale is almost as great as the need for immediate financial assistance. Communities which have been battered by four hurricanes in ten months are apt to become discouraged.

One of the principal achievements of the official visitation was to strengthen morale by taking the storm victims that they are not being overlooked or forgotten. Another accomplishment was better understanding on part of the officials of the real need existing and on part of the people that sincere effort is being made to meet the need.

Judge Gooden, Col. Mader and Mr. Lattimer concurred in commendation of the people of eastern North Carolina for the fine spirit they have manifested the moderation of requests for assistance, and the evident determination to work out of a bad situation.

Because requests for aid have been moderate Congressman Bonner insisted they should be more quickly granted. "Enable the people to pay a little bit on their debts, to pay interest on loans, and to maintain their credit standing," he pleaded. He said the banks and supply merchants would carry most of the debt burden but they cannot carry it all.

"Loosen the restrictions on government loans," he said, "so farmers and little business firms can make token payments and finance operations for next year."

The federal men promised to do anything they can to get relief items moving promptly. They said they would get the red tape out, and Governor Hodges repaid the assurance that he's going to stay right behind the federal folks and see to it that North Carolina gets all the help that is possible under most liberal interpretation of the laws.

Other Editors Are Saying ... Nixon To The Rescue

(Greensboro Daily News)
Vice President Richard Nixon took up the cudgel again the other day in defense of his chief's farm program.

At the National Plowing Contest in Wabash, Ind., Mr. Nixon offered a broad hint that the Republicans have at last found an issue to worry about. The Democrats, in turn, have lost no time exploiting the break-through. The vice president picked the difficult assignment of convincing a group of Middle Western farmers that Ike still means to get "full parity" for them in spite of the action of Secretary Benson in junking rigid parity for the flexible kind.

Nixon made out all right in his main address by admitting that farmers are "not getting their share of America's unprecedented prosperity." But the vice president laid all the blame at the door of Democrats and war-time accumulated surpluses and left none of it with Secretary Benson or Ike. Nixon's thesis was that the farm depression started under the Democrats (some two-thirds of the drop in farm prices did take place before Mr. Eisenhower took office); therefore the Republicans can't be blamed for the continuing sag.

The kind argument may hold water in theory, but the farmers know pretty well that the Republicans have had time to make changes; they don't see many signs that those changes have done much to stop the drop.

Secretary Benson promised a "new approach" in January, but the question is, can the beleaguered farmer wait that long? The problem, indeed, lies with surpluses, but when reporters afterwards probed at the issue, the vice president finally admitted he was "not expert on farm prices."

Of course, Mr. Nixon is no expert on a lot of things, but that doesn't seem to trouble him much. When the going gets rough, he relies on that perennial Nixonism, "Leave everything to Ike." Has he ever failed you? It's a good line if you can get an audience to swallow it.

Somebody Told Me The Big Aspect Of Fair Play

Recently I heard somebody say, "Every time her husband goes on a hunting trip she goes downtown and charges clothes that equal the expenses of the trip."

The lady who told me this story said that she did not think any wife should pull such a trick. But on the other hand, she did believe in a certain amount of equality in money spent for pleasure.

In most cases the husband has the purse strings at hand and is able to command the situation pretty well. Among the worst individuals I know are the radio amateurs, who buy expensive equipment and try to speak it into the rig without the wife being aware of it.

Amateurs have the advantage, because most women have no conception of the value of radio equipment. For example, Wife Rachel has no idea what a small dent the price of the sewing machine would make on my new receiver.

Then there's always the trading angle. "Why, honey, I got rid of that old equipment just before it was ready to blow up. If I had kept it another day it would have probably fallen apart and wouldn't have been worth a cent."

But then there's the matter of comparison. The wife can think of all kinds of things a man could spend his money for that would be worse. He could even throw it away on something really foolish, like taking a trip with his family. Kidding aside, the wife who complains too much should take a quick look of comparison.

Usually in a marriage there's one person who is more aware of the need for having ends meet than the other. And usually it's the person with the hobby who's unaware.

Last night I was handling a radio message from Labrador. The girl in South Carolina told her brother, "Jim (her husband) and I are getting along fine. We're not divorced, but he's in Atlanta and I'm staying here with mother. We get along much better this way than when we're together."

To make the understatement of the year, marriages have their problems.

And I thank you.

Five Remarks To Be Avoided

By HAL BOYLE
NEW YORK (AP) — "Yes, but..."

"Good morning. How do you feel?"

"What do you think I ought to do about fixing up the living room?"

"Don't you think you've spread enough joy for one evening?"

"You're wrong."

These are five remarks Lauren Bacall says a wise wife should never make to her husband.

When the young, tawny blonde actress married Humphrey Bogart, she said during a breakfast-luncheon at the "21" Restaurant, "That won't make him better—but it will make him worse."

"Let him run wild. He'll always come home then."

She glanced cheerfully over at Bogart, who was standing at the bar talking baseball with the bartender and some other close friends. She and her husband had come to town the night before for a fling to celebrate completion of her latest film, "Blood Alley," co-starring John Wayne.

"If a man has been drinking a little bit, it doesn't pay to disagree with him. It only means you'll both be up all night, and you'll end up with circles under your eyes."

Bogart came over, said: "Hi, ya don't, Sam?" to Miss Bacall, and wandered back to the bar, bourbon and baseball.

"To think I've given that guy one third of my active life," said Lauren, grinning. "But I'm tougher to live with than he is. I'm more selfish. He's very patient with me."

"If I'd married a younger man, he wouldn't have put up with me. I'd have probably killed him—or we'd have killed each other."

Miss Bacall said she knew of no single prescription for marital happiness—"I don't believe in formulas; everybody's an individual and has the right to stay one"—but that she believed a wife should join in as many of her husband's activities as possible.

"But there are limits," she added. "Bogie loves yachting, and I—well, I—" She shuddered to indicate she likes water only in containers smaller than the Pacific Ocean.

Miss Bacall says it's a mistake to annoy a husband with household matters and gave this reason why a wife should also never ask him how he feels in the morning.

They seem to have the feeling that because they have paid for a night's lodging, they have bought such incidental articles as hand towels and soap. People who do these things are for the most part honest in their business dealings and, on the whole, quite reliable. But they fail to realize that principles of honesty apply equally to the little things of life and to the big things.

However, the picture is not entirely dark. Yesterday I handed a man two five-dollar bills which had stuck together, believing I was giving him only one, and he discovered the mistake and handed one back to me.

Stretchable Fabrics In Public Eye

By ELMER ROESSNER
For years, consumers, merchants, trade associations and government agencies have been trying to get ready-to-wear manufacturers to use standard measurements in apparel sizes.

Now just as most manufacturers are accepting standardization it is becoming less important than ever. Stretchable fabrics are making sizes relatively unimportant.

A few years ago stretchable socks were put on the market somewhat cautiously. Manufacturers didn't know whether men would believe their claims and, if they did, whether the idea appealed to them. After all, if a man wears size 12 socks and he can remember it, what does it matter if his socks will also fit feet size 10 and 13?

Well it seems it does matter, because men bought them like crazy. Now the stretch idea (those in the trade always call it the s-t-r-e-t-c-h idea, even when they speak) is spreading ast.

It was quickly adopted in the women's hosiery industry and now even the shyest young man can buy a pair of nylons fit his best girl without asking how big her feet are. Now stretch fabrics are used for T-shirts, swim suits, lingerie, gloves and other items of wear.

They are also used for leotard which as far as we can make out, are tight used in practice by ballet dancers.

And says du Pont's magazine Better Living, some day one style of slip cover may fit any furniture design.

A Swiss concern, Heberlein & Co., pioneered the stretch idea and developed a process to convert rayon: nylon filament into a fluffy yarn that can stretch to three times its normal length and then snap back to original size. The process is called "Helanca" and has been licensed to twelve American manufacturers. In addition, other companies have used nylon and dacron to develop other stretchable yarns and it is a good bet that the cotton wool and rayon industry has scientists working quickly on ways to impart s-t-r-e-t-c-h to their fibers.

NITROPARAFFINS NEWEST GLOW ON CHEMISTRY'S HORIZONS

There's a new major development in chemistry, too. It may parallel the development of silicones. In trying to develop new synthetic rubbers from silicones, scientists stumbled on scores of other useful applications, from finishing fabrics to making paints.

Like silicones, nitroparaffins have long been known but their applications have never been fully explored. Now they are being produced in volume for the first time, with the opening of Commercial Solvent's new plant at Sterlington, La. They are used in textile surface coating, petroleum, photographic and chemical industries. With ample quantities for experiments and tests, scores of other new uses may be found.

IS HARDWARE GROCERIES? SUIT MAY DECIDE

The current trend toward adding new lines has its hazards. A hardware store is considered part of a shopping center to a variety store and part to a grocery store on "exclusive" bases.

Now the variety store owner is suing the landlord, alleging the latter violated the lease when he permitted the grocery store to sell hardware, housewares, electric supplies, notions, cosmetics, patent medicines, toys, stationery, birthday party goods, wash cloths, tablecloths, plastics and baby bottles.

The variety store will call it square for $25,000.

Cost Of Drainage Canal Improvements Will Run High

LOST CROP—Bent and twisted stalks of corn are shown in a cornfield bordering the Grindell Creek Canal a waterway badly in need of cleaning and expansion. Thousands of acres of Pitt County farm land are covered by water each year from this canal because of mud-filled stream beds and weed-choked right of ways. (Reflector Photos by Bob Hilldrup).

By BOB HILLDRUP
Reflector Staff Writer

In this era of progressive and scientific farming, soil conservation is playing a leading role. And one of the prime concerns of Connor Eagles, director of Soil Conservation work here, is the watershed of the Grindell Creek Canal drainage district.

This canal, which flows for 27 miles from near Bethel to near Pactolus, serves as the only outlet for surplus water from an area estimated at 50,000 acres.

Dug some 30 years ago at an original cost of about $145,000, the canal provided an outlet for water that often flooded the lowland farms after severe downpours.

Recently, the actions of Hurricanes Diane, Connie and Ione have made it clear that the inadequacy of the present system. Years have past since the canal has been cleaned and as a result in many spots it has filled with mud and tangled vegetation has grown close to its banks.

Consequently, when heavy downpours threaten the area, the canal and the laterals or drainage ditches that flow into it have not been large enough to carry off the overflow. Crop lands have been inundated, homes have been flooded and in recent years the annual loss to farmers has been estimated in excess of $50,000.

Currently however, plans are underway to do something to restore the canal to the efficiency for which it was designed.

The estimated cost for clearing the canal itself of 750,000 cubic yards of dirt has been set at $225,000. In addition, some 320 acres of right-of-way also will have to be cleared.

The cost of this project, Eagles says, will have to be borne largely by the farmers with as much assistance as possible from the federal government.

Once the canal itself has been cleared however, the problem still will not be completely solved. Individual farmers must then take the responsibility for opening up their weed and mud choked drainage ditches and laterals so that surplus water can flow off to the canal immediately.

If this project can be successfully completed then perhaps the present scene of croplands covered with water and acres of good topsoil being inundated can be corrected.

Then perhaps the $50,000 that is being lost each year because of inadequate drainage can be saved to promote other improvements for Pitt County farmers.

Low Prices Fail To Discourage

EDENTON — Low prices don't discourage some hog breeders according to Chowan County Agent C.W. Overman.

For instance, he says Preston Nixon of Perquimans County, after receiving low prices for his animals, said: "Somebody has to produce the breeding stock to keep up the quality of animals produced on the farms in the area and we might as well expect a break in price occasionally when conditions of this kind with a lowered hog market prevail." Of course some will comment, "That doesn't buy baby any shoes."

Right Diagnosis Is Needed First

SHELBY — Mrs. W.C. Shuford of the Union community will agree that "it's a good idea to know what you're treating for before you begin the treatments."

Cleveland County Assistant Agent J.W. Hanby Jr. says that Mrs. Shuford treated her 700 pullets for round worms, with practically no results because the pullets had tapeworms rather than round worms. Now she's got it to do over and at extra expense.

BLOCKED ROADWAY—This public road near Bethel is blocked often for stretches of more than a half mile simply because the Grindell Creek Canal is so choked with debris as to prevent the handling of water brought into it by drainage ditches dug by farmers. A project is planned to clear the canal and prevent future flooding such as this.

'Comeback Farm' Garner Honors

RALEIGH — Mr. and Mrs. C.L. Wilson of the Etowah community of Henderson County have demonstrated just how far a family can go in bringing an eroded and run-down farm back to a productive, attractive farm and home.

The Wilson family was selected as the most outstanding test demonstration family in the county by a committee of fellow farmers.

County Agent D.W. Bennett says that "it seems like a miracle" to see the changes Mr. and Mrs. Wilson made in their farm in the past four years—or since they became a part of the test demonstration program.

During the past year they seeded six acres of alfalfa, cleared six acres of land with a bulldozer, heeled over galls on three acres of land, built terraces on another six acres, seeded three acres of Ladino clover orchard grass pasture, built a machine shed and corn crib, added a lounging shed to the barn, enlarged and improved the garage, built a white board fence around the home and barn, painted the house and re-roofed part of it.

In addition they had an outstanding silage crop of Sudan grass and soybeans and cane and soybeans, had an excellent corn crop, and controlled erosion completely. In their "spare time" they started work on a fish pond.

Bennett says that Russell Wilson, their son and partner in the 20-cow dairy, played an active part in improving the farm.

Should Be Envy Of Cattlemen

DANBURY — Luther Francis of Francisco should be the envy of other Tai Heel beef cattlemen. Francis figures he won't have to feed his cattle hay over twice this winter.

Stokes County Agent S.B. Brandon says the reason for this optimism is that Francis has 40 acres of Ladino pasture; a 15-acre field of lespedeza which he turned his cattle on the first of August; and a 10-acre field that he plans to use when the first one is grazed down. Then he has his pasture to graze again.

UNWELCOME TITLE

CADILLAC, Mich. — Cadillac hopes to lose its unwanted distinction of being "Michigan's icebox." Temperature reports will be read this winter at the Consumers Power Co. pumping station on Lake Cadillac instead of at the city airport, where residents say it's from 5 to 10 degrees colder.

BACKED-UP WATER—This scene is a prevalent one in Pitt County following heavy rains when drainage ditches are filled with water that, though it should be flowing into the Grindell Creek Canal, generally pours onto farm lands instead. The choked condition of the canal prevents flow-off from such ditches as these and results in severe farm flooding in the area between Bethel and Pactolus each year.

FLOWING FREELY—This is one of the few laterals, or drainage ditches, leading into the Grindell Creek Canal, which flows freely following heavy rains. Most of the others are too choked with mud and plant growth to carry off the excess water and the result is flooded farms and an economic loss amounting in the thousands of dollars.

THE Soviet Union, without any loss to herself, made new moves this week to foster her "Operation Co-operation."

She made a treaty of autonomy with puppet-controlled East Germany designed to appear much like the one covering similar ground between the Western Powers and West Germany. She said, in effect, "Now let the two governments meet and work out plans for reunification of the country."

She made a new treaty of friendship with Finland including an agreement for immediate withdrawal of Russian forces from Porkkala, which she has "leased" as a military base since Finland's defeat in the war.

Roberts

She made a mild and quickly defeated plea for Red China's admission to the United Nations on the grounds that relaxed tensions should be carried farther than they have been.

She advocated her own not-quite-secure proposals for disarmament on the same ground.

Meaningless Move

She said he was getting out of Finland because she had decided she ought not to have foreign military bases, and suggested the United States should adopt the same policy. She didn't say that under modern war conditions, Porkkala, only 50 miles from home base, was no real good to her, or recognize that Communist territory actually makes bases available to her from East Germany to Southeast Asia.

The United States just snorted at the idea of a bases-abandonment trade with Russia.

The East German deal served to crystallize the issue surrounding unification and make it clear that nothing could be hoped for in that direction. The stage merely is set for a bitter conflict between Bonn and the East German puppets, with the latter already threatening to use their newly won authority over their eastern border as coercion in other matters. New strictures swept six states which had thought themselves safe. Two hundred lives were lost and billions of dollars of damage done.

Red Weapon

Russia's whole object obviously is to stimulate German hunger for reunification to the point where the West Germans would be willing to give the East Germans a large share of authority in a joint government. This joint, or coalition, government system is the weapon Russia always uses for Communist conquest when the use of direct force is imprudent.

The new situation merely means that Russia will play the harp and the sounds will come out through East Germany.

Chancellor Adenauer of West Germany clearly recognizes the situation he is in. He has just issued another warning that neither hope nor fear must displace the Western eye from one truth, that "the Russians have not changed their basic aims."

That was something Western diplomats had to bear in mind as they met to work out their program for the foreign ministers meeting in Geneva next month.

They wanted to make some offer which would leave Russia no excuse for professing continued fear of a reunified Germany. One idea was to approach security and reunification simultaneously, making the new Germany part of a Big Five security arrangement. Another was to include more of the smaller nations on both sides of the Iron Curtain.

Germans Steadfast

The Big Three foreign ministers will meet next week to consider lower-level recommendations on these matters.

A good bit of "stiffening" for the Allied backbone is coming from Germany, while there are still important French elements with a feeling that Russia has something in her desire to keep Germany separated and disarmed.

There also seems to be a growing feeling on all sides that German unification, indeed settlements of any sort with Russia, can only be discussed now in an atmosphere of unreality. Close attention was being paid, however, to any bits of information seeping out of the discussion at Geneva of issues between Red China and the United States. The two ambassadors, who don't "diplomatically" recognize each other, were working toward arrangements for a higher-level conference later. The West still was seeking clues to the over-all Communist line.

Weather

Hurricane Jitters

One thing the Northeast is learning well about hurricanes: they always do the unexpected.

A month ago when everyone relaxed after reports that Diane had blown herself out over the Carolinas, torrential rains born in the hurricane's earlier period swept six states which had thought themselves safe. Two hundred lives were lost and billions of dollars of damage done.

This week the entire upper half of the eastern seaboard braced itself for a performance expected to be just as bad or worse. But while police and civil defense forces were marshalled to cope with any development, hurricane Ione backed and filled off the Carolinas. She finally surged ashore in North Carolina, taking at least five lives and causing property damages estimated in the millions, but then erratically curved out to sea again and spared the upper coastline.

As Ione went swirling harmlessly off to the east, an older sister—Hurricane Hilda—died out in the rugged north central mountains of Mexico after States started commercial use of electricity derived from nuclear energy when a reactor at West Milton, N. Y., built for the U.S. by General Electric, began turning generators which feed the wide upstate New York territory of the Niagara Mohawk Power Corp.

The Rise and Fall of Argentina's Strongman

DRESSED as a simple 'candidate of the people,' Peron first won office in 1945.

EVA PERON was the dictator's most powerful instrument in consolidating power. She ruled with him until her death in 1952.

ONCE FIRMLY in control, Peron could parade in splendor. But after 1952, relations with the church began deteriorating.

Quote
Senate Democratic Leader Lyndon Johnson, in pointing to declining farm income and criticizing the administration's farm policy: "This is a perfect illustration of what happens under the sliding scale of parity—prices slide down while mortgages slide up."

Science

Red Reactor

Moscow officially unveiled its long-secret atomic power plant to newsmen this week. Twenty foreign journalists were taken on a guided tour of what the Russians claim was the first such reactor supplying industry. The station is 60 miles southwest of Moscow, although the press party reached it by a winding route which covered 100 miles.

Housed in a three-story building with a deep basement, the atom plant requires a staff of 100. The reactor room, where the atomic heat that eventually turns conventional generators is built up, appeared to the visiting newsmen to be completely modern in design and construction. The graphite rods controlling the speed of the reaction are moved mechanically by operators some distance away in a radiation-proof room.

The electricity generating section of the plant contains two turbines and a bank of four generators. The unit appeared to be one which could supply the electrical needs of a city of about 15,000.

There was no indication whether output could be stepped up. The general impression that reporters took away was that the Russians have evolved a small, compact, but still largely experimental plant.

The Russians say the plant began operation two years ago. Earlier this year, the United States started commercial use of electricity derived from nuclear energy when a reactor at West Milton, N. Y., built for the U.S. by General Electric, began turning generators which feed the wide upstate New York territory of the Niagara Mohawk Power Corp.

FINAL CHAPTER in Peron's history started this week, as elements of the Army and Navy revolted and seized cities of the interior. Faced by a naval threat to bombard the capital unless he resigned, Peron capitulated. Freedom's return touched off wild celebrations.

THE U.N.: Red Chinese Again Rejected

Line Holds

It didn't take long for the United Nations to show that the Communists' current "smile campaign" was far too flimsy to cause any change of sentiment on a U.N. seat for Red China.

As they have in each session for the past five years, the Russians demanded a seat for Red China immediately after the 10th General Assembly opened its session this week. Just as promptly, the United States offered a proposal that the subject not be taken up this year. The U.S. motion carried, by the overwhelming vote of 43 to 12.

Two Countries Switch

Only two changes occurred in last year's vote lineup. Indonesia this time joined Burma, Denmark, India, Norway, Sweden, Yugoslavia and the Communist bloc nations in siding against the United States; and Israel, which voted with the United States last year, abstained this year with Afghanistan, Egypt, Saudi Arabia, Syria and Yemen.

The Assembly decision came after a hour and a half of talk which lacked fireworks of previous years. Soviet Foreign Minister V. M. Molotov, heading the Russian delegation, did not attack the West as previous Russian delegates have done. This apparently is one result of the widely heralded "Geneva atmosphere."

British Backing

Anthony Nutting, British minister of state, spoke in favor of the American motion. He said items as the bitter British-Turk-Britain again felt, as it did last year, that an argument over Red China at this time would do more harm than good.

In its first day of business, the States-Soviet conference in Chile president for this session. He received all 60 votes to cast and took office immediately.

MOROCCO: Cabinet Bows

Three-Point Plan

A new phase in the efforts of France to control but pacify French Morocco started this week.

It was opened by Premier Edgar Faure's success in winning a free hand from the French Cabinet to replace the Sultan of Morocco with a three-man regency and start government reforms aimed at giving Moroccans more power in conducting their own affairs.

In Short . . .

Promised: By Rep. John McCormack (D-Mass.) a thorough congressional investigation into a two-billion-dollar contract signed by the Air Force with private telephone companies for construction of a vast communications network connecting radar stations with air defense centers.

Urged: By Walter Reuther, president of the CIO, that the United States build atomic power plants in underdeveloped countries of the world to help them raise their living standards.

Predicted: By President Tito of Yugoslavia, that the Russians will soon dissolve the Cominform—the Reds' international organization of Communist countries dedicated to spreading communism throughout the world.

Announced: By Red Bulgaria, that it will follow the Soviet lead and reduce its army by 18,000 men before Dec. 31.

Other explosive issues facing the 10th Assembly include such items as the bitter British-Turk differences with France over Morocco and Algeria, United States-Soviet differences over a charter revision conference in Chile president for this session. He received all 60 votes to cast and took office immediately.

The scene of argument immediately shifted from the Cabinet in Paris to the palace in Rabat where aging Mohammed Ben Moulay Arafat resides. The Sultan's supporters and French colonialists were reported soon after the Cabinet action to be urging defiance of Paris as a means of reopening the whole issue when the French Parliament—which might be severely critical of the Cabinet—reconvenes next month.

According to unofficial reports, the French government now is prepared to pledge limited home rule or semi-independence to Moroccans through this three-point program of action:

1. Immediate establishment of a regency to placate Moroccan nationalists who have regarded Ben Moulay Arafat as an illegal sovereign.

2. Appointment of a new Moroccan "Government of National Union," including representatives of the main political groups in the protectorate.

3. Negotiation of a new French-Moroccan partnership between this government and France, leaving foreign affairs and defense in French hands.

A brief forecast of reaction of some French settlers in Morocco to this program came in Paris where anti-Faure leaflets were scattered in front of the Premier's offices. They accused the government of selling out the French families in Morocco. "Give arms to our settlers," said one of the leaflets, "and they will settle the problem."

Dictator Was Reds' Spiritual Bedfellow

By WILLIAM L. RYAN
Associated Press Foreign News Analyst

IT is plain that events leading up to the revolution in Argentina brought distress to Moscow. The Kremlin entertained considerable sympathy for the dictator in Buenos Aires and the manner in which he organized his power.

Moscow professes to see a sinister United States hand in the Argentine revolution. The Communists also express belief that Juan Domingo Peron's regime was a government based on "the masses." From the Communist point of view, the continued existence of the Peron regime in Latin America made the future in more promising.

Ryan

In view of the current Soviet program of deciding the cold war, Moscow has been rather circumspect in commenting upon events outside the Communist orbit. Little comment appeared in the official press. But Moscow radio's home service looked to the Soviet public little nuggets like this:

Soviet Version

"It is said that Peron's proposal to resign was caused by the activities of the bourgeois opposition which became active after the failure of the armed anti-government rebellion on June 16, during which 360 persons were killed and more than 600 were wounded, mainly civilians."

"The Argentine papers at that time reported that the rebellion had been started by units of the navy, the command of which had close links with the naval circles of the United States. The rebellion failed because it was not supported by the population. It is also characteristic that the foreign circles fanning political discord in Argentina are using Catholic clerics in their attempts to prolong and intensify tension in the country."

Common Means

Whatever the surface differences between them, Peron's regime and those of the Communist "people's democracies" were spiritual bedfellows. Their organization and means to power had much in common. Like the Nazi regime in Germany before the war, the Peron rule tended to confirm the notion that extremes eventually will merge into a single pattern. Peron represented the extreme right. The Communist regimes are the extreme left. Differences of operation, however, were hard to find. Like the unlamented Nazis, the Peronists raged at "Wall Street" and "Yankee imperialism" as the chief sources of all the world's woes. The Communists do likewise.

Like the Nazis and the Red regimes, the Argentine rule was based upon naked power. Like Hitler and the puppet Communist rulers of East Europe, the Peron regime seized power through domination and complete control of the "proletariat," meaning the working classes and their various union movements.

Model for Reds

"Peron, in a sense, could have been a model for Communist planners. When he rose to power in a military revolt in 1943, Peron's first target was unionized labor. Like many a dictator before him, he won the workers over with glittering promises and social laws that appeared most generous. But he destroyed all the unions which would not join his own organization. Thereafter, it was no difficult job to institute a ruthless campaign of suppression against any voice which might oppose him."

Like the Communists and the Nazis before him, Peron had to attack the church if he wanted to remain in power. The church represented too solid a front. No dictator can tolerate divided loyalties. The church could have been the source of a Christian Democratic political movement which eventually could threaten the totalitarian control of Peron's regime. He set out to crush it.

Sympathy Not Surprising

Peron used the tested device of the Communists and Fascists—the organized mass demonstrations—in his attempts to frighten all his enemies into submission. It had worked for him before.

It is not surprising, therefore, that sympathy for Peron should stem from the Kremlin and from other Communist capitals. The Communists looked upon Argentina's situation as a classic development in the blueprint for world revolution—the advanced industrial country in a state of fascism which would be only a step away from the Red revolution and dictatorship of the proletariat. After all, the framework was already set up for such a dictatorship, by Peron himself.

The continued resistance of Peron's opposition to his repressions demonstrated once again that totalitarianism carries the seeds of its own destruction. What happened in Buenos Aires might well happen one day in Prague or Budapest.

KINSTON—Through a combination of sheer brute force and backfield deception, the powerful Kinston Red Devils rolled over Coach Guy Lewis' Greenville squad 21-7 here last night.

Attacking from a tricky formation that could be called a combination single-wing and split T, the Kinston Red Devils confounded the Phantoms throughout the first half, then broke away in the third quarter to completely dominate the game. The first half play was mainly a defensive struggle, moving at an even pace. Linemen for both teams commanded the major part of play.

East T.D.

Kinston scored first, early in the second quarter on an eight-yard plunge through tackle and kicked the extra point. Greenville fought back, chopping off yardage at a determined pace. Halfback Tommy Norris and fullback Jimmy Kelly covered most of the ground. The Red Devils held back over and marched back into Greenville territory, threatening to score. Fullback Billy Sermons poked off a Kinston pass and scampered 30 yards to give his team the ball.

Bob Shackelford tried the line for no gain. Seconds later, quarterback Jerry Drum rifled an aerial pass to end the Riddick, who carried 30 yards to the Greenville 10-yard line. The Red Devils held back over and marched back into Greenville territory, threatening to score. Fullback Billy Sermons poked off a Kinston pass and scampered 30 yards to give his team the ball.

The third and fourth quarters were a nightmare for the Greensies, as Kinston quarterback Foo Rochelle, making a strong bid for All-State honors, directed his huge team through maneuvers that ripped their opponents to pieces. Greenville fought back, led by tackle Pete West, guard Howard King, end Billy Johnson and center Wade Jordan, but the tide was too strong.

No Mercy

Kinston's George Graves, a bull-like fullback, hacked at the Phantom line for another Red Devil score midway in the third quarter and a third and final touchdown was added later. Granger High was a devastating machine that felt no mercy as it smashed the Greenville running attack to a virtual halt.

Beginning the contest for the Phantoms were Riddick and Johnson at ends; King and West at tackles; Nobles and Hudson at guards; Jordan at center; Drum, Sermons, Shackelford and Kelly in the backfield. Others who saw action were Edwin Wilkerson, Tommy Norris, Jack Calhoun, Kelly Barnhill, Charles Smith, Angus Duff and John Ed Arnold.

West, Sermons, Riddick and Wilkerson were outstanding on defense, each grabbing a Kinston fumble or pass for an effective runback. Fred Nobles and Peter Hudson, along with Angus Duff, turned in fine jobs in the Phantom front wall.

"Good First Half"

Coach Guy Lewis stated after the game that his boys had "played a good club, and performed well against them. We played fine ball during the first half, but just couldn't keep up with them after that."

Neither team suffered any injuries, however. Greenville's Harold Edwards and Charles Hollingsworth (first-stringers at end and guard) failed to perform last night because of previous wounds.

The deadlock was the first mar for Coach Stuart Tripp's boys. They had won their first two encounters comparatively easy.

Robersonville, coached by Bob Lee, came into the game with one win and one loss. The Rams just couldn't put together a touchdown drive.

Pirates And Lenoir Rhyne Battle Here Tonight

Yanks Win Pennant, Knew It Was In Bag Days Ago

By ED WILKS
By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The Yankees knew they had it all the time.

Days ago the New Yorkers circled Friday, Sept. 23, on the clubhouse calendar as the day they'd clinch their 21st American League pennant, the sixth in seven years.

It was last night, Friday, Sept. 24, that they did it, beating Boston 3-2 behind the great relief pitching of Whitey Ford, the stubby southpaw who will open the World Series against Brooklyn Wednesday at the Yankee Stadium.

Manager Casey Stengel had it figured, too. Back last spring he said "we'll have to win 95 games to win this one." By winning last night, after losing 8-4 in the afternoon if of the day-night twinbill at Fenway Park, the Yankees now have exactly 95 victories.

Cleveland, the defending champ and last of the challengers, has 91. The Indians, rained out at Detroit yesterday, have three games left, but even by winning 'em all they'd finish with only 94 victories—one less than the Ol' Professor called for.

With all that crystal ball gazing, the Yankees still had to battle to put No. 95 in the bag. They had reached 94 with eight straight triumphs before being side-tracked in the afternoon game as Boston snapped its own seven-game losing streak.

Going into the seventh inning of the nightcap, big Don Larsen had a 3-0 lead with only one wobbly inning in the first six. Then three singles produced a Boston run and Stengel, hungry for the big one, waved to the bullpen to bring in his ace.

Ford, who had won 18 for his one-season high in the majors, opened his sixth relief job by walking Billy Klaus on a 3-2 pitch to load the bases as Ted Williams, with two earlier hits, stepped in.

"I was scared," said Ford afterward. "I knew I had to get the ball over. I didn't want to walk him."

Williams fouled one off and the count reached 3-1. Then Williams whacked a ground ball to second baseman Billy Martin and the rally-killing doubleplay was under way.

Jackie Jensen tagged Ford for his 26th home run to open the eighth, but that was the last noise Boston made.

Eddie Robinson drove in what was the winning run, lashing a punch single off Willard Nixon, an old Yankee nemesis, in the fifth inning after a walk and a single by Martin.

The Yankees had racked Nixon, who had beaten them four times this season, with three hits—one Gil McDougald's 13th homer—for a 2-0 lead in the first.

In the afternoon game, Boston routed southpaw Tommy Byrne—Stengel's pick for the second game of the world series—with six runs in the third inning. Jensen started the rally with his 25th homer after one was out.

Elsewhere, the Chicago White Sox, still scraping for a piece of second place, whacked Kansas City for nine runs in the first two innings and won 12-4. Washington, trying to escape the cellar, snapped Baltimore's seven-game streak and drew to within a game of the seventh-place Orioles by sweeping a two-night doubleheader 6-4 and 7-3.

In the National, Warren Spahn won his 17th and hit one of four Milwaukee home runs, two by George Crowe, as the Braves beat St. Louis 4-2. Philadelphia clinched at least a tie for fourth with idle Cincinnati by whipping the New York Giants 5-1. Willie Mays, leading the majors with 56 home runs, went hitless.

Rain postponed Brooklyn at Pittsburgh.

Ford Will Open World Series For Champion Yanks

BOSTON (AP)—Whitey Ford will open the World Series for the New York Yankees Wednesday at Yankee Stadium, probably facing Brooklyn's Don Newcombe in the sixth renewal of the lopsided Yankee-Dodger rivalry.

Manager Casey Stengel named Ford last night as the visitors' clubhouse at Fenway Park rang with cheers for the little left-handed pitcher who had won the pennant-clinching victory over Boston.

Tommy Byrne probably will pitch the second game with Bob Grim, Don Larsen and Bob Turley ready for the Ebbets Field games.

"Don't worry, the Yankees always take care of the series," said Stengel with an extra special double wink for the cameramen. After winning six pennants in seven years, he has discarded the single wink attack for the double wink.

There was times when I screamed for a strike and all I got was another ball," said Casey. "I'm glad we had to fight so hard for the pennant. It'll make us just that much tougher for the job of beating someone else."

"I want to congratulate my players for coming from behind when there were four clubs to beat. Detroit was a big help at the right time."

Stengel had something nice to say about everybody. He didn't have to point out how the Red Sox fought down to the end, delaying the clinching for about seven hours by winning the day half of a day-night doubleheader, 8-4. He said Chicago fought hard all year although they "fell down a little at the end, and the players were not always healthy."

He paid tribute to Al Lopez of Cleveland as a "splendid manager." He said the Indians were handicapped by crimples. "By that I mean injuries that kept Al Smith, Al Rosen and other key men out of the lineup in important spots," he added.

As for the series, Stengel said he was counting on injured Mickey Vernon who has been sidelined for a week since pulling a muscle in his right leg. Mantle hasn't been able to run yet but has taken batting practice.

Billy Martin, who joined the club for the final month on terminal leave from the Army, has been granted permission to extend his furlough from Ft. Carson at Colorado Springs, Colo. until Oct. 6.

Sooners Confident Of Victory Over Carolina

UCLA's ranking as the nation's best football team faced its first major test of the still-young season today when the Bruins invaded College Park to face Maryland, the expected powerhouse of the Atlantic Coast Conference.

This one and the Oklahoma-North Carolina clash at Chapel Hill overshadowed other ACC action which included three conference games, the first of the season.

Maryland, badly shaken last week by its 13-12 squeaker over Missouri, needed a victory to protect its No. 5 ranking and stay among the nation's giants.

Coach Jim Tatum spiced the week's work for Maryland with a secret drill, ostensibly aimed at perfecting a defense to stop tailback Ronnie Knox, the sparkplug of UCLA's single wing offensive.

The highly publicized Knox tossed three touchdown passes in UCLA's 21-0 drubbing of Texas A&M last week.

Maryland is not without its own sparkplug for its split-T. Quarterback Frank Tamburello handles the quarterbacking. Maryland hoped to average a 12-7 defeat handed the Terps last year by the Bruins. All told, the battle of the giants was expected to be a rock-ribbed affair, with a packed crowd of more than 46,000 expected.

Oklahoma, picked as the nation's No. 3 team in the week's AP poll, wasn't expecting too much trouble from North Carolina, still faced with a major rebuilding job after a fair 4-5-1 record last year.

The Sooners fielded a complete new backfield and several replacements in their line, in a squad badly hit by graduation. New strength in the line and sophomore quarterback Buddy Sasser gave the Tar Heels hope. The game was expected to draw more than 40,000.

The conference games sent Clemson to Virginia and Wake Forest against South Carolina at Winston-Salem. Duke, last year's unofficial ACC champion, invades North Carolina State tonight.

Strong fullback, Jim Bakhtiar, a punter, and a speedy halfback, Herb Hartwell, give the Virginians a better than average running attack. The more depth in the line make the Cavaliers respected, despite the fact they have yet to win their first game over an ACC foe.

Coach Frank Howard tested his 1955 Clemson squad last week with a 39-0 victory over Presbyterian College. The Tigers' offensive revolves around quarterback Don King, a delux runner and passer.

Wake Forest, smashin, 13-0 victors last week over strong VPI, hoped the absence of starting South Carolina quarterback Mack Prickett would help. Prickett missed last week's opener because of a broken finger. Sophomore Bobby Bunch was slated to take his place today.

But South Carolina was expected to have the stronger running game sparked by speedsters Carl Brazell and Mike Caskey, veterans who helped down little Wofford last week.

N.C. State always is tough against Duke, losing 21-7 to the Blue Devils last year. Duke has been hit with sickness and injuries which cut into its early season practice but should be strong for tonight's game.

Ayden And Robersonville Tie 0-0 In Hard-Fought Affair

AYDEN—Two long-time foes, Ayden and Robersonville, didn't get anything settled here last night as they fought back and forth over the gridiron with neither team able to score.

The deadlock was the first mar for Coach Stuart Tripp's boys. They had won their first two encounters comparatively easy.

Robersonville, coached by Bob Lee, came into the game with one win and one loss. The Rams just couldn't put together a touchdown drive.

Ayden played the Rams off their feet in the first half but on approach of the goal line would bog down and stop. With Tommy Edwards, the "Tornadoes" sophomore fullback, leading the threat, Ayden penetrated inside Robersonville's 5 but could push the ball over.

Just before the half ended, the Rams' Murphy Smith intercepted an Ayden pass on his own 3 and set-sail down the sidelines to Ayden's 35 before he was caught from behind by Edwards.

The Rams, however, died there with Ayden taking over as the half ended.

Robersonville didn't pick up a single first down in the first half. Ayden had five. The Tornadoes had six first downs in the second stanza against Robersonville's three.

Defensive standouts for Ayden were Lathan Dennis, Billy Vandiford and Bert Trupp. Edwards and quarterback Lindy Dunn sparked the offense.

Murphy Smith and E. H. Roberson paced the Rams' defense and Smith was the whole show on offense.

THICK OF THE BATTLE—Ayden halfback Manning (No. 80 shown in the middle) runs into a whole nest of Robersonville Rams in the above photo. Manning picked up 10 yards on the play, though, as Ayden and Robersonville battled to a 0-0 standstill.

League Openers For Both Teams; 'T' Vs. Single-W

By BRUCE PHILLIPS
Reflector Sports Editor

The East Carolina Pirates and Lenoir Rhyne Bears collide in College Stadium here tonight at 8:00 to open North State Conference schedules of both teams.

Coach Jack Boone's Buccaneers will be seeking victory No. 2 against one defeat. East Carolina edged Norfolk Navy, 6-0, to get its season under way two weeks ago but lost to West Chester (Pa.) last week, 9-0.

Coach Clarence Stasavich's Bears also look for victory No. 2, but so far they haven't lost. The Hickory boys churned over Newport News Apprentice School, 40-0, in their only effort to date.

The contest tonight promises to be an exciting one from the spectators' point of view. Two entirely different offensive formations will be pitted against each other, ECC's "T" vs. LR's "Single-Wing."

To win, the Pirates have to cap the steam of the Bears' power smashes by getting behind the Bears will have to pin down the Pirates' master quarterback, Dick Cherry.

The winner is given a good chance to place high in the final conference standings and maybe win the whole thing.

As just mentioned, Cherry is expected to pace the Pirates' offense. The Washington, N.C. junior missed last season's battle with the Bears but in 1953 broke their backs in the first half by tossing three touchdown aerials.

Big Lou Hollow, the finest line-backer in the league will bulwark the Pirates line. The 220-pound Goldsboro senior will work from the snapper-back post on offense.

Three sophomores will be in the thick of the action. They are forward tackle Jerry Brooks of Rockingham, guard Ken Burgess of Burlington and end Bobby Clark of Tarboro. The latter two, along with tackle Waverly Chesson, just this week broke into the starting eleven.

Junior end Ray Pennington and Kinston's Paul Poppy, a guard, round out the starters up front.

Several other boys will see plenty of action in the home team's backfield and line. Gary Mattocks and Milton Cooper will work behind Cherry. Bobby Gaver and Bobby Perry will relieve the halves, and Bob Maynard will spell O'Kelly.

Dickie Bonds, Ray (Bull) Overton, J. D. Bradford, Tommy Wagoner, Charles Smith and Tom Mixon are linemen who'll get into the action.

The main threat of the Bears is big Bob Campbell, hard-running fullback. Reports from the Bears camp say Campbell is another Steve Trudnick, the All-Stater who used to terrorize the conference with his bull-like rushes.

The Bears also have an outstanding brigade of freshmen and are supposedly making a bid to regain the football prominence that was once theirs.

SA. PEDRO, Calif. (AP)—A 38-year-old mother has joined Florence Chadwick as the only female swimmer of the tricky Catalina Channel.

Mrs. Daisy Murchie completed the 21-mile crossing in 17 hours 4 minutes yesterday and predicted "Next year I'll make the English Channel."

Miss Chadwick swam the Avalon-to-San Pedro stretch in 13 hours 47 minutes in 1952.

Mrs. Murchie has a son, Farrell, 19, in the Navy, and a daughter, Patricia 17.

The record for the Catalina Channel swim is 13 hours, 25 minutes, set by Canadian Tom Parks.

Farmville Downed, 31-0 By Morehead

MOREHEAD — Farmville's Red Devil football team bowed 31-0 because of injury. End Billy Hare did not play, nor did Dale Russell. Sonny Mall, injured previously, returned to quarterback position after a layoff. Mack Holmes, a hard-running fullback, could not crack Morehead's forward wall.

Coach Elbert Moye's charges were outclassed by the coastal aggregation, which put on a devastating display of offensive strength and defensive prowess.

The entire Morehead line, though, and last, crushed the vaunted Red Devil attack to a stand-still, with three touchdowns, carrying 42 yards for one of the tallies. The coastal errors' blocking opened gaping holes in Farmville's line and accounted for the other three scores.

Nashville, could not break away for any substantial gains.

Farmville entered the encounter with several first-stringers missing

Alumni Prepare For Homecoming

Homecoming plans were developed by the Greenville-Pitt Chapter of the East Carolina College Alumni Association at a meeting in the Alumni Building on the campus Thursday evening.

Major project for the chapter on Homecoming Day will be the serving of a buffet luncheon in the Alumni Building, with college and alumni association officials as guests.

Also adopted as a project, a Christmas corsage activity will be conducted for the third year, with a larger quota unanimously accepted. The annual game tournament of the alumni chapter will be conducted on Friday, February 10, a date nearest the Valentine Day.

Mrs. Robert W. Pennell, chapter president, named committees who will be in charge of the Homecoming buffet. Reservation for the luncheon will be handled by the Alumni Office.

Letters were read from ECC Librarian Wendell W. Smiley acknowledging presentation of Harper's Bios Dictionary as a memorial to the late Mrs. Gatsy Stanton Butler, mother of Alumni Secretary James W. Butler, and Miss Johnnie Simpson, recipient of the chapter's ECC tuition scholarship for 1955-56, in expressing thanks for the award.

The schedule of meeting for the new year was considered and plans adopted for Christmas corsage making.

Game Protector Is Discharged As Accounts Short

RALEIGH (AP)—A Currituck County game protector has been discharged following the discovery of a $6,178 shortage in his accounts. State Auditor Henry Bridges said yesterday a special audit showed the shortage, mostly in fees from hunting and fishing licenses handled by Protector Ronald A. Dowdy of Grandy.

Bridges said Dowdy made good the entire amount. Dowdy was game protector in Currituck for the past six years. Walter F. Anderson, director of law enforcement for the commission, said it would be up to Solicitor Walter Cohoon of Elizabeth City to decide whether any charges should be brought against Dowdy.

Arm Broken In Traffic Mishap

A Forbes Street man suffered a broken left arm in a hit-and-run accident last night at the intersection of Robinson Ave. and Pitt St. Bernice Crawford, about 40, received a broken left arm. He reportedly was giving a hand signal prior to making a turn when his arm was struck by a Person-Garrett tobacco truck operated by Willie Teel, a police report said. Teel, a police report said, failed to stop following the accident and has been arrested for hit-and-run.

Hal Boyle . . .

"He knows how he feels. Why remind him of it?"
"Aked whether she thought a husband should help his wife dry dishes and share other kitchen chores, she gave a wonderful belly laugh and said frankly: "I don't know. I don't go into the kitchen myself if I can help it."

What are the five remarks a wife should make most often to her husband to keep peace in the family? Miss Bacall, letting out with another fine belly laugh, gave these:
"Yes, darling, yes."
"You're absolutely right. I couldn't agree with you more."
"You were perfectly charming last night. No I'm not kidding. I really mean it. Everyone simply loved what you said."
"If it weren't for you how would I have all these lovely things: our nice big house, our beautiful car—even our children?"
"Now don't move. Sit there. You're comfortable. Is there anything I can get for you—like a double-edged saw, or something?"
Miss Bacall's ideas may seem strange to some wives. But there is one thing about them: They work. After 10 years she still has a happy husband.

IT'S STILL WITH US—Two employees of a soft drink bottling company were making their deliveries as usual yesterday despite water which has remained high in the wake of Hurricane Ione. Two Drivers Arrested In Wake Of Two Traffic Accidents Last Night

Two drivers have been arrested and charged with traffic violations in the wake of a pair of accidents occurring on Pitt County roads last night.

David John Frederick, 43, of Washington, was charged by State Highway Patrolman James W. Boykin with careless and reckless driving and no operator's license after the truck being driven by Frederick ran off US 264 and wrecked. Damage was estimated at $800.

The second accident, which also occurred on US 264 west of the city, resulted in damages of about $250 and the arrest of Alfred Payton, 18, of 1210 Battle St. on charges of no operator's license and improper parking on the highway.

The accident apparently occurred when a pick-up truck driven by Josh L. Hazelton, 32, of Winterville, collided with Payton's car which was reported to have been parked on the roadside without lights. Payton was arrested by Patrolman Boykin.

Color Television Sets Prepared

The color telecast of the Judy Garland show to be presented over Station WNCN tonight at 8:30 may be seen locally in the showroom of the John Flanagan Buggy Co. In Farmville a color set will be placed in the Farmville Furniture Co. and in Winterville at the Vincent Electric Co.

The announcement was made by the station this morning. It is the first telecast of color television locally. The telecast can be received on regular sets in black and white but color TV sets will be in operation at the above locations.

Made Her Look 'Pretty Dum'

HONOLULU (AP)—A girl wrote to a Honolulu newspaper she liked a "fory" about her very much but complained:
"You said I was 17, I'm 18. I don't mind people thinking I'm 17 but you said I was a sophomore. Well, that makes me look pretty dum."
That's the way she spelled it—d-u-m.

Opening Of TV Station Delayed

Opening day for Washington, N. C. television station WITN has been postponed.

The station was originally scheduled to begin its operations Monday. However, officials say that the combined forces of three hurricanes which hit this region threw construction and installation schedules off.

High waters in Grifton at the transmitter site have plagued engineers who have been working around the clock installing the equipment.

W. R. Robinson Jr., president and manager of the station, said telecasts will begin in a few days. He did not set a target date but said the delay would be for only a short while.

Robinson added that all the technical equipment has arrived and is installed.

He also announced that the staff is complete and is now working on all phases of television operations. "When we go, we'll be ready in every way," he declared.

The new station is an affiliate of the National Broadcasting Company and will operate on channel 7 with full power.

Postponed HD And 4-H Meets Rescheduled

Three Home Demonstration and four 4-H club meetings postponed from last week because of the bad weather have been rescheduled for the coming week.

According to the schedule of the Home Agent, Mrs. Lillie Little, the clubs will meet as follows:
Monday—Falkland's 4-H Club at 9 a.m. at the school; Fountain 4-H Club at 10:30 at the school; St. John's Home Demonstration Club at 1:30 p.m. at the community building; and Falkland Home Demonstration Club at 7:30 at the school luncheon.

Tuesday—Chicoed Senior 4-H Club at 9 a.m. and the junior club at 10 a.m., both at the school.
Wednesday—Clark's Neck Home Demonstration Club at 7:30 p.m. with Mrs. Milton Smith.

At the Greenville Exchange Club's weekly supper meeting last night, Lester Turnage, chairman of the Blood Donor Recruitment of the Red Cross for Greenville, showed a film, "The Prescription of Life," about the vital need of the blood program.

Dr. Jack Walters inducted Harry Douglas as a member of the Exchange Club and Dr. Walter Pott presented the club pin.

P. G. Lauzares was a guest of the club. President Ed Parkinson presided over a brief meeting of the club's Board of Control after the regular meeting.

President Taken Sick; Said 'Digestive Upset'

DENVER (AP)—President Eisenhower "suffered a digestive upset during the night" and failed to turn up at his office at the usual time this morning.

Murray Snyder, assistant White House press secretary, told newsmen that Eisenhower's personal physician, Maj. Gen. Howard M. Snyder, was summoned during the night and was with Eisenhower again a few minutes before 8 a.m.

"The President suffered a digestive upset during the night," Murray Snyder announced. "If he comes in (to his office) at all, it will not be until considerably later."

Asked whether the ailment was serious the press secretary replied that "all I know" was what Dr. Snyder had told him—that it was "a digestive upset."

A reporter then asked whether Dr. Snyder had been summoned during the night to the home of the President's mother-in-law Mrs. John S. Doud.

"Yes," the press secretary replied, "and he is there now."

Snyder said Eisenhower was remaining in bed for the time being. It was the President's first known illness in many months, and it served to recall his statement of last August that the state of his health next year would be a factor in determining whether he runs for reelection.

Since he came to Colorado Aug. 14 for a work and play vacation, the President outwardly has been a picture of health. Visitors to the Denver White House have reported that they never have seen Eisenhower looking so fit.

Eisenhower, who will be 65 Oct. 14, returned to Denver only yesterday from four days of trout fishing and general relaxation at a Rocky Mountain ranch at Fraser Colo., 70 miles northwest of Denver.

Aides reported that the President thoroughly enjoyed himself there. He did most of the cooking, paid without cover in the New Bern Recreation Center.

Eisenhower was up about 5 a.m. yesterday, drove back to Denver, then spent 2 hours and 20 minutes at his Lowry Air Force Base office. He was ruddy and in excellent spirits on arrival there.

Except for two trips to Fraser for a total of nine days, Eisenhower has golfed in Denver almost every day but Sundays since he came to Colorado.

Today's "digestive upset" recalled a similar ailment Eisenhower suffered in April 1953. At that time he completed with great difficulty a speech he was making in Washington when stricken.

Relief Drive For Storm Victims Now Under Way

Greenville Junior Chamber of Commerce President Dr. M. W. Aldridge today received the following telegram from Jaycee Vice President Sonny Geer of the Ninth North Carolina District:

"Many families in New Bern have been left homeless. They are in dire need of 2,000 sheets, 2,000 pillow cases and 1,000 blankets. Please start drive to collect these articles. Must deliver to New Bern Recreation Center Sunday. This is urgent. Let's do a good job."

President Aldridge said today: "Don't let your local Jaycee chapter down. If you are willing to donate these articles please phone me at 6892, or Forl McGowan, 4608, Harry Douglas at 4739, or Radio Station WNCN, 6740 and your donation will be picked up."

"We will be glad to accept sheets, pillow cases, blankets or cash donations to be applied on this urgent project. These people in New Bern are without homes and are sleeping without cover in the New Bern Recreation Center."

SO THEY HAVE BENNY? OKAY—SO WHEN DO WE START CRYING? CRIMSTOPPERS TEXTBOOK BE ALERT TO ANY SUSPICIOUS LOOKING CAR WEIGHTED DOWN IN THE BACK. IT MIGHT CONTAIN A STOLEN SAFE OR OTHER HEAVY CONTRABAND.

WHAT CAN A DETECTIVE FIND OUT FROM BENNY? THE ONLY THING THAT IRKS ME IS HE DIDN'T GET HOME WITH THAT BANK LOOT. 470 POUNDS! YOU AIN'T LOST AN OUNCE!

BUT, OODLES, THEY'RE WORKING HIM OVER ON THIS GEORGE VULCAN ANGLE—NOT THE STOLEN CAR AND BANK JOB. STOP, BEFORE I DIE LAUGHING.

BESIDES, BENNY WAS THE EXECUTIONER ON THAT VULCAN JOB. THIS IS SERIOUS! SO WHAT? RELAX! HAVE SOME SKIMMED MILK! THAT JOB WAS AIR-TIGHT!

MEANWHILE— YES, WE HIT YOUR FLAT, BENNY, AND WE FOUND THIS VEST. IS IT YOURS? BOOK ME OR RELEASE ME.

LET'S HAVE THE SUIT THAT WAS AROUND THE SKELETON, SAM.

IT'S THE SAME MATERIAL, ALL RIGHT—NO QUESTION ABOUT THAT. THE BACK OF THE VEST MATCHES THE COAT LINING, TOO.

MOST FELLOWS SELDOM WEAR A VEST. THE SMALL SECTION CUT FROM BENNY'S VEST INDICATES HE MAY HAVE HAD TO PATCH SOME OTHER PART OF THE SUIT.

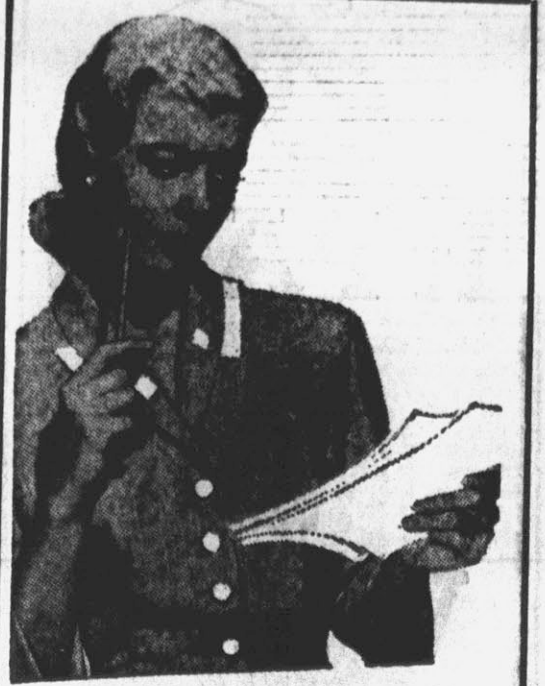

LET'S GO OVER EVERY PART OF THE TROUSERS AND COAT— THERE'S STILL A LOT OF CEMENT AND DIRT ON THEM.

HEY, TRACY—LOOK! NEAR THIS LEFT COAT POCKET? HOME-MADE—AND A PRETTY CRUDE JOB.

SAME SIZE AS THE CUT IN THE VEST. TIMES WERE NOT ALWAYS GOOD WITH THIS HOODLUM. HE HAD TO PATCH HIS OWN CLOTHES.

LIKE WE FIGURED, GEORGE VULCAN'S MURDERERS EVEN DRESSED HIM IN A SUIT THAT WAS TOO SMALL IN ORDER TO THWART ANY POSSIBLE IDENTIFICATION. NOW, WE CAN BOOK BENNY.

MEANWHILE— BUT, MRS. VULCAN— YOU CAN'T TRAVEL THE STREETS ALONE IN THAT— GO BACK! I'VE GOT BUSINESS TO ATTEND TO—AND I'M GOING TO TEND TO IT ALONE!

Will Reaching Hands Leave ANYTHING For Her?

WHEN A MAN DIES, PEOPLE ARE SORRY, but they wait their money. The funeral director, the doctor, the nurses, the hospital—all are there. There'll be unpaid bills at the stores... There may be legal fees, and probate and administration costs. State inheritance taxes take their toll, even from smaller estates—and if what a man leaves goes into federal estate tax brackets, the cost climbs fast. All of these bills must be paid somehow, even if it wrecks long-time plans for the family's future. Only after she has paid each one does a widow know what she really has left to live on. HOW LONG HAS IT BEEN since you checked your fund for final expenses? Check it while you can do something about it, BECAUSE WHEN YOUR WIDOW CHECKS IT, IT WILL BE TOO LATE!
