

Surprises For Seal Buyers

John G. Clark, right, president of the Pitt County Tuberculosis Association, and Dr. Karl B. Pace, Seal Sale chairman, look on as little Miss Mary Anne Peele, six-year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert L. Peele of Fountain, select ten letters which will contain gift certificates for items donated by local merchants. The envelopes have been stuffed with Christmas Seals and are scheduled to be in approximately 8,000 homes in the county next Thursday, kick-off date for the TB Association's annual Seal Sale. TB Seal Sales Start Thursday

Pitt County's 1955 Christmas Seal Sale will open officially next Thursday with the delivery of seals in the morning mail to county residents.

The annual sale, which will continue until Christmas, represents the yearly appeal for funds to carry on the year-round tuberculosis control work of the Pitt County Tuberculosis Association.

Organizations in every area of the county are assisting in the seal sale under the direction of John G. Clark, president of the Association, and Dr. Karl B. Pace, Seal Sale chairman. Judson Blount Jr. is serving as Bond chairman, assisted by J. T. Marston, Dr. Dan Wright and Jerry Adcock, the latter from East Carolina College. W. G. Leggett, superintendent of county buildings and grounds, is supervising the mail to the post office.

Though no set goal has been established, president Clark said it is hoped that $12,000 can be raised through the mail sale of seals and bonds.

Approximately 8,000 letters containing seals will be mailed to county residents, with ten of the letters containing gift certificates for items donated by local merchants. The letters were stuffed by college students and members of various women's clubs in the city and were addressed by business students at Greenville High School under the direction of Miss Laura Bell.

From December 12-17, members of the Service League will man booths in the post office and on December 17 the Girl Scouts will conduct Bangle Day. The Credit Women's Breakfast Club and the Business and Professional Women's Club have been asked to assist in the bond sale by reminders. The overall drive is being sponsored by the Newcomers Club, assisted by the B and PW organization.

Signs advertising the sale have been painted by John A. van Wageningen of Greenville and will be placed on the courthouse lawn here and in Farmville.

In urging support of this year's sale, President Clark declared, "It is an inspiring thought that the American people themselves, through their annual purchases of Christmas Seals, have contributed materially toward the conquest of tuberculosis."

Nickels Pay For Much Research

RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina State College has received $536,803 for agricultural research and educational work through the "Nickels For Know How" program.

T. Clyde Auman of West End, president of the Agricultural Foundation, told the college's development council yesterday that the amount has been realized since the program began Jan. 1, 1952.

Farmers pay an extra five cents per ton on feed and fertilizer purchases under the program. The State Agriculture Department collects the money and turns it over to the college.

A referendum in November, 1951, approved the program for a three-year period. An extension of three years was voted in October, 1954.

President Flies To Washington

Council Kills City Engineer Proposal; Agree Study Parking Meter Changes

By ALVIN TAYLOR
Reflector City Editor

Employment of a full-time city engineer died a quiet death last night as City Councilmen voted unanimously to "continue to retain the services of Rivers and Rivers on the same basis as in the past."

Thus an issue of several months standing was resolved by the city fathers. City Manager James S. Hughes had requested when the present fiscal year's budget was being prepared that provision be made for adding a city engineer.

Engineering work is now being handled on a fee basis by the local firm.

Mayor W. L. Whedbee made the motion for retaining the services of the firm.

Councilman S. Eugene West asked that the motion be recorded to say that the city "not hire a city engineer."

"I'm going to have to vote against it," he declared, "and I don't want to vote against Rivers and Rivers. I've got nothing against them."

Whedbee said he felt he must let the motion stand as it was worded.

West then offered a substitute motion that "in view of the fact we have enough funds to finish out the year, I move that we hire a full-time engineer."

West and Councilmen Wesley Harvey voted for the substitute motion with Whedbee, J. A. Collins and A. C. Ruffin voting against.

With that motion defeated all the councilmen voted for the original motion.

Thus for the present the city's engineering operations will continue as in the past.

Parking Meters

Another thorny problem was also injected into last night's meeting when Frank Strawn, who said he represented the local Junior Chamber of Commerce, appeared before the council to ask that certain changes be made in the city's parking meter set up.

Strawn asked that all meters be made multiple coin, thus accepting either pennies or nickels. Second, he asked that all meters on Washington St. be made two-hour meters. That would make all side streets two-hour meters, he noted. Third, Strawn asked that the 15-minute meters from the banks be removed and replaced with regular meters.

The Jaycee representative said the decision to ask for the changes was made by the council.

Dip In Estimate Of Tobacco Crop

RALEIGH (AP) — The month of October saw a drop of 19 million pounds in estimates of Tar Heel flue-cured tobacco production, but a record crop is still in sight.

The States Crop Reporting Service said yesterday prospects as of Nov. 1 were for a 1955 harvest of 1,001,705,000 pounds of flue-cured leaf.

Although this was 19 million pounds short of the Oct. 1 estimate, it still would be 23,330,000 pounds above the previous record crop of 1951. It would be an increase of 12.6 per cent over the 1954 harvest.

Old and Middle Belt farms are expected to produce 353,175,000 pounds, with an average yield of 1,385 pounds per acre. The forecast for the Eastern Belt is 519,800,000 pounds and an average yield of 1,640 per acre. For the Border Belt, a crop of 128,650,000 pounds and an average yield of 1,550 pounds per acre is expected.

The North Carolina burley crop is estimated at 22,660,000 pounds, with a record yield of 2,200 pounds per acre.

October also resulted in a 3 per cent drop in peanut prospects, while the outlook for corn brightened. There was little change in the soybean estimate.

As of Nov. 1 a peanut crop of 259,350,000 pounds was estimated. Despite the decline from Oct. 1, the 1955 crop still would be 3 per cent above last year when drought cut the crop sharply.

Corn production was estimated at 65,696,000 bushels based on Nov. 1 conditions. The forecast a month earlier was for 63,643,000 bushels. The soybean crop was placed at 4,132,000 bushels.

was made by the Jaycee Board of Directors and the rank and file members of the club knew nothing of the request.

City fathers agreed to study the request for 60 days.

The councilmen also approved the moving of Sam Fleming's scrap metal yard from its present location on the east side of N. Greene St. to a new location across the highway and on the opposite side of the railroad track. The action was taken after a property owner of land adjacent to the new area withdrew her objections to the move.

Councilman S. Eugene West voted against the motion granting approval but he said he was not against the removal of the scrap metal yard but felt there should be a hearing on the matter to give residents of the area a chance to express themselves.

Action Deferred

Mayor W. L. Whedbee reported on his investigation of complaints of noise and illegal parking on Fifth St. near the new dormitory. He said he had talked to college officials and they told him nothing further could be done about the situation. They said a parking lot constructed next to the dormitory is being used 100 per cent.

The councilmen voted to defer indefinitely any action on the matter.

Action was deferred on the installation of a traffic light at the college entrance next to the administration building until next year's budget is prepared.

City Manager James S. Hughes reported that the Highway Commission had no objection to installation of a fixed time stop light at the entrance. However, he pointed out that even during rush hours the first car in a line of vehicles could leave the gate in eight and one-half seconds and the fourth car in a line could leave in 39 seconds.

On the re-routing of N. C. Highway 43, Mayor Whedbee reported that Highway Engineer R. Markham had said it would not be feasible to re-route the highway over Memorial Drive at present because the route will soon be under construction.

However, councilmen discussed the idea of beginning to obtain the right-of-way for a new road which would be needed from Hillsdale to U. S. 264.

Colonial Heights

Spight noted that Colonial Heights was taken into the city without posting money for installation of water and sewer lines. However, City Manager James S. Hughes pointed out that there were more than enough houses in the area to justify the installation of the lines. Thus it would have been only a question of accepting the money from the residents and returning it as they tapped on it.

In Lakewood Pines, Hughes said there are not enough houses to justify the installation of the lines.

Spight said that the Colonial Heights annexation was just as much an amendment of the city's subdivision ordinances as would be the case if Lakewood Pines were annexed.

Cost to the City

The attorney argued that the Utilities Commission and the city are "separate entities."

"We don't feel that it (the Utilities Commission) will be spending tax money for the purpose," Spight said of the plan to run water lines to Lakewood Pines.

Whedbee said, however, that the Utilities Commission and the city are one and the same. He was backed up in that opinion by City Attorney R. B. Lee.

Spight presented the council with a petition requesting the public hearing on the issue. After the January 30 hearing councilmen will then be able to decide whether or not the area should be taken into the city limits.

Mayor W. L. Whedbee asked the representative of the area if plans had been made for complying with the city's subdivision ordinances which require that water and sewer lines be installed in a subdivision before it is taken into the city.

"The Utilities Commission will furnish those lines," Spight replied.

"But this says with no cost to the city," Whedbee said referring to the subdivision ordinance.

"We think that in a case such as this, if we take a long-term view of it, this will not result in any cost to the city," Spight replied.

Appears Fit And Cheerful

DENVER (AP) — "An eternally grateful" President Eisenhower left Denver for Washington today after telling of his thanks to all who have aided him in his illness.

Speaking from the ramp of the Columbine III in raw, damp 39-degree weather he said that the misfortune of his illness made him aware "of how good people are."

The President, looking surprisingly well, told an audience of Air Force personnel and a small group of friends and dignitaries, that the force at Fitzsimons Army Hospital and at Lowry Air Force Base had "earned my eternal gratitude."

He expressed appreciation too, for the "messages of friendship" and to the people around the world who had "sent up their prayers" for his recovery when he was stricken seven weeks ago tomorrow.

He spoke but briefly after he and Mrs. Eisenhower drove up to the ramp of their plane to be greeted by a bipartisan group headed by Democratic Gov. Ed Johnson and Republican Mayor Will Nicholson.

The President wore a camel's hair top coat and a brown hat.

Standing on the sixth step of the ramp, he spoke simply and with no word about any major domestic or foreign policy.

"Again, it is time for Mrs. Eisenhower and me to say goodbye," he began.

"We leave under somewhat unusual circumstances this time," he referred thus to his illness and said that the seven weeks he spent in the hospital had not been "wholly a loss" for it gave him and Mrs. Eisenhower an understanding "of how good people are."

He then paid the medical staff, nurses, carpenters, enlisted men and others at Fitzsimons Hospital "my very grateful thanks."

"They have done so much," he added.

The President had a kiss from Mrs. John S. Doud, his mother-in-law, immediately upon his arrival at Lowry as he left the car in which Mrs. Doud rode with him and Mrs. Eisenhower from the hospital.

Mrs. Doud remained behind, planning to join the president's family later.

The crowd around the airport was chilled to the bone by the time the President left at 9:02 a.m. as the temperature dropped from 36 degrees at 8:30 a.m. to 31 degrees.

A crowd of several thousands turned out to bid farewell to the beaming President along the six-mile drive from the hospital to the air strip at Lowry.

Riding in a big black limousine with Mrs. Eisenhower and Mrs. Doud, the President waved a greeting all along the way. Just before he left the hospital grounds a group of youngsters turned up on the curb holding a big sign which read "Good Luck Ike."

A bit further along there was another sign saying "Good Luck, Ike and Mamie."

Big Four Foreign Ministers To Adjourn Meet Wednesday

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER
GENEVA (AP) — The Big Four foreign ministers decided in secret session today to adjourn their current Geneva conference with a final meeting next Wednesday.

The American delegation issued this formal statement:

"The ministers at their private meeting this afternoon, bearing in mind their agreement at New York that the conference would last three weeks, agreed to organize their work here so that the conference could finish its work on Wednesday."

This will conclude the conference one day short of the three-week target.

The conference so far has been notable mainly for the evidence it has provided that Soviet foreign policy tactics have taken the most radical shift since the death of Joseph Stalin more than two years ago.

Unless evidence of Russian behavior at the current Big Four conference is completely deceptive the softer line of Soviet strategy has been replaced by a return to much harder tactics.

For the first time since the Kremlin started its more conciliatory approach toward the West in early 1953 a Soviet spokesman has been speaking out in blunt uncompromising terms on great issues.

Foreign Minister V. M. Molotov has made it unmistakably clear that the major aims of Soviet world policy remain unchanged.

The July smiles at the summit conference here have almost vanished in Molotov's November presentation of Russia's position and aims.

The latest piece of evidence in this emerging pattern came yesterday when the Soviet foreign minister spoke on disarmament.

There had been speculation here that Molotov might make some gesture toward agreement with the West, perhaps on President Eisenhower's proposal for immediate U. S.-Soviet exchange of military blueprints and reciprocal aerial inspection.

Instead Molotov delivered the hardest blow yet struck by a Soviet spokesman at the Eisenhower plan.

Terming Russia's attitude toward the plan "negative," Molotov rejected it and assailed every American argument advanced in its favor.

He denied it would create confidence or could serve as a first step toward a complete disarmament program. He said it would increase the fear of war.

Molotov said Russia's attitude would be "favorable" if the plan were tailored to Soviet demands for abolition of atomic weapons and prior development of a complete arms reduction program.

Such conditions are contrary to Eisenhower's purpose of getting some action taken immediately as a first step in working out a disarmament program.

The Big Four foreign ministers were to continue their discussion on disarmament today after a 30-minute private meeting on how the remaining work can be handled and the conference concluded, probably late next week.

Molotov's outline of Soviet disarmament policy came as no particular surprise to Secretary of State Dulles, British Foreign Minister Harold Macmillan and French Foreign Minister Antoine Pinay after hearing his precise enunciation of hard Soviet policy on the future of Germany the day before.

The Soviet statement on Germany did astonish the Western ministers and their advisers, because it completely abandoned even any pretense of trying to entice the West to keep up negotiations on German unifications.

Exciting Career In Diplomacy

By DOROTHY ROE
Associated Press Women's Editor
Girls who yearn for exciting careers couldn't do better than enter the diplomatic service, says Frances E. Willis, U. S. Ambassador to Switzerland.

"I can't think of a more rewarding life for a woman," says the tall, blue-eyed Miss Willis. "We have had more and more young women coming into the foreign service since the last war. The only trouble is that they usually don't stay with it long—they get married."

In New York on a special advisory assignment for the U. N., Miss Willis is enjoying one of her few opportunities for an unburied look at her native land since her first foreign assignment with the State Department 27 years ago. She makes it a point to come home for Christmas every year. Says she:

"Our diplomatic service offers a wonderful career for women as well as men. But it takes a special kind of temperament. You have to be willing to pull up roots every couple of years and start all over again in a different country. You have to be interested in the people around you, and you have to have a certain dedication to your job."

"A college girl aiming for a foreign service career should study history—not only the history of other nations, but particularly the history of her own country. American history is the best groundwork I know for any kind of government job."

"She should have at least one language besides English—and be able to speak it fluently. And she should study political science and international law."

"After all this, she can learn the rest of the job only by experience. For you can't learn human relations in a classroom. And dealing with people is the most important part of any diplomat's job."

A high point of her current home visit is Ambassador Willis' selection for the 1955 Award for Eminent Achievement given annually by the American Woman's Assn.

Although she is the third woman to represent the United States as a full Ambassador to another country, Miss Willis is the first to achieve this distinction by working her way up through the ranks of the foreign service.

Born in Illinois, she took her Ph.D. at Stanford University in California, taught history at Goucher College and political science at Vassar before entering the foreign service with an assignment as vice consul at Valparaiso, Chile, in 1928.

She served in Sweden, Belgium, Luxembourg, Spain and Finland before being appointed Ambassador to Switzerland in 1952. Her home town is Redlands, Calif.

Speaker Urges King's Daughters To Enlist Young Women

The November meeting of The Patient Circle of The King's Daughters and Sons was held Tuesday night, November 8, at the home of Mrs. C. B. Rowlett with Madames A. R. House, Charles Blanchard, E. L. Baker, Nan Evans, W. J. Hardee, Louis Lewis, Miss Estelle Greene and Miss Mamie Ruth Tunstall as co-hostesses.

The meeting was opened with praying the prayer of The Order, after which Miss Estelle Greene led a very inspirational devotion on "Why the Great Creator Made Creatures Like Ourselves."

Mrs. C. B. Rowlett, Circle treasurer, gave her report. Miss Martha Lee Cowell, treasurer of the Building Fund, reported $1,057.51 in the Building and Loan. She urged all the members to use the Circle's memorial cards in bereavement.

The Emergency Committee reported visits to the sick and shut-ins, groceries and clothing for the needy of the community and the hours spent in nursing the sick during the past month.

Mrs. Paschal spoke very ably on the Young Women's and Young Men's Department of the International Order of The King's Daughters and Sons. She opened her remarks by saying that in this department which takes in young women and young men from 18 to 35 years of age. That the department of young women was created in the International Order in 1946 at their convention in Chicago, Ill., and that in 1950 at the International Convention in Buffalo, N. Y., young men were added to the same department.

"This could well be considered the most vital element in the life of The Order today," declared Mrs. Paschal. "The Circle members should invite young women as guests so they may become aware of the work of the Order. And women should be made aware that one not only gives to the Order but receives from the Order such things as lasting friendships and the joy of participating in Christ's work. If these things are done, surely many young women will come into the Order," stated Mrs. Paschal in closing.

Following the informative talk by Mrs. Paschal delicious refreshments were served by the hostess and co-hostesses.

Mrs. E. E. Rawl Sr. and Mrs. Herbert Paschal were guests for the meeting.

30 Years Ago Today

THE DAILY REFLECTOR
November 11, 1925

The seventh anniversary of the signing of the Armistice which brought to an end the world's greatest conflict was fittingly observed here today by a parade of veterans of all wars, followed by exercises in the auditorium of the East Carolina Teachers College, a barbecue dinner for veterans and an afternoon of pleasure consisting of horse racing, football and movies. All business houses observed holiday hours from 10 a.m. until 3 p.m. The day's program was staged under the auspices of the Pitt County American Legion.

Mr. E. L. Bridges, commander of the Pitt County Post, presiding over the exercises, introduced Dr. Robert H. Wright, president of the college, who delivered the address of welcome. Col. J. Monroe Johnson of Marion, S. C., head of the Rainbow Division Engineers, delivered the principal address. He praised the achievements of Woodrow Wilson, who he characterized as the "greatest of all Americans," and expressed regret that American politics had prevented this nation entering the League of Nations.

These three persons were principal participants on the program at a city-county-college Parent Teachers Association meeting last night in McGinnis auditorium. From left to right they are: Walter Jones, Pitt County Representative to the state General Assembly; Mrs. W. C. Hollowell, president of the Greenville PTA Council; and Ray Wilkinson, chairman of the State Education Committee of the Junior Chamber of Commerce. Jones spoke on "The Forward Look in Education," while Wilkinson discussed "The Status of Education Today." Mrs. Hollowell presided over the meeting. (Reflector Photo by Edwina Haymes).

Addresses by Ray Wilkinson, chairman of the State Education Committee of the Junior Chamber of Commerce, and Walter Jones, Pitt County Representative in the state's General Assembly, highlighted a city-county-college Parent Teachers Association meeting last night in McGinnis Auditorium.

The meeting was one of the features of this area's observance of American Education Week.

Wilkinson, who was introduced by Dean Leo W. Jenkins of East Carolina College, spoke on "The status of Education Today," while Jones' topic was "The Forward Look in Education." He was introduced by Miss Mary Thomas Smith, president of the Greenville unit of the North Carolina Education Association.

Wilkinson told the group that "North Carolina is standing on the threshold of a great day, because industry is knocking on her door and the day of inefficient farms is passing. We citizens are in a position to cripple the generations to come as a result of the decisions we make today."

He noted that the state has a shortage of school buildings. "We rank thirty-third in the amount of salary paid to teachers, and forty-third in the number of students each teacher must teach. Yet North Carolina ranks fifth in the quality of its teachers and seventh in the percent of its income that is spent on schools."

"The number of pupils is increasing yearly. Greenville has had a 56 per cent increase in the last five years; likewise Pitt County has gained 600 children in the same period. Yet the supply of teachers is dwindling." The speaker further pointed out that for this year and next year a state can only count on the availability of 1,500 teachers to fill an anticipated need for 3,200 teachers each year. He said that teachers' salaries must be raised to the level that will attract qualified persons into the teaching field.

Wilkinson said that individual citizens are in a position to do something about the situation, and he suggested they make their wishes known to their legislators.

This suggestion was supplemented by Representative Jones' plea

WORLDWIDE, N.C. (UP)—A light plane attempting to land in a rainstorm crashed and burned, carrying a New Jersey couple and their 10-year-old son to fiery deaths near here yesterday.

The victims were identified as Mr. and Mrs. William Evanoff of Vineland, N.J., and their son, William Jr.

Capt. Eugene S. Tolson, commander of the Henderson Civil Air Patrol Squadron, said the identification was made by the CAA through the plane's serial number. The plane and its occupants were burned to a crisp.

The plane fell on busy Highway U.S. 1, and a traffic jam developed as the wreckage partially blocked the road.

Roy L. Harmon of Arcola, a motorist passing the scene with his wife, said the plane apparently was trying to land in a field beside the highway. It struck a power line and exploded into flames, he said.

Harmon said the craft appeared to be flying normally. It had circled the field before striking the power line, he said.

Government Is By All The Citizenry

Those officials of the Civil Service Commission who claim the "inherent power" of secrecy given their agency under the provisions of the constitution are about as far off base as any of the Wonderful Wizards of Washington we've heard lately.

The statement was made by the officials this week before a House government operations subcommittee which is investigating information practices by federal agencies. Rep. Ross of California, chairman of the subcommittee, promptly labeled the claim "fantastic."

He certainly used the correct word. It's not too fantastic to hear a bureaucrat make such a claim, for obviously many of them feel the government belongs to them, lock, stock and barrel rather than to the people of this country.

The constitution guarantees to the people of the United States open and unobstructed access to full information about their government and its operation. The sovereignty of the nation rests not in the sparkling government office buildings in Washington, but with the people at the grass root level. There will always be individuals in government who seek to grasp more power than is delegated to them; and we may be sure that one of their first acts will be an attempt to shut off from the people the free flow of information about what goes on in government.

The growing trend of secrecy in government should be alarming to the people of this country. Ever since since President Truman issued the directive to government offices telling them to classify any information they did not want made public, there has been a startling swing toward closing more and more corridors of public information.

To be sure, some information vital to the nation's security cannot be made public. By and large, however, the people of the United States should have free access to any information they desire from and about government and its individual agencies.

The "inherent power" of secrecy claimed by the Civil Service official is about as compatible with constitutional provisions as the "inherent power" of a government official to become a dictator.

Vaccine Kept In Bottle Will Prevent Nothing

Salk vaccine in a bottle contributes nothing toward the prevention of polio. Once it is injected into a child, it goes to work, and the process of stamping out the dreaded disease is pushed another step forward.

On Saturday the Pitt Health Department will begin another series of clinics for those who wish their children to receive the anti-polio vaccine. At the department's offices in Greenville and Farmville, the vaccine will be administered free of charge to all children ages one through nine whose parents wish them to receive the vaccine. While the local program, set up by an act of Congress, is designed primarily for children of families which feel they cannot afford to get the shots from a private physician, no rigid limitations have been set for those receiving the vaccine.

The response to recent make-up clinics for the vaccine held by the Health Department to administer the second shot to last year's first and second graders left something to be desired. Far too many parents whose children missed their second in the series of shots at school apparently did not feel it of particular importance that their children receive the vaccine. As a result they did not report to the make-up clinics.

The peak season for polio is still a number of months away. The newspapers are not carrying daily reports of large numbers of polio cases occurring in various parts of the country as during some months of the year. As a result the public is not as polio conscious—or scared—right now as they have been. It is difficult for the average person to get enthusiastic about preventive polio inoculations during the season when the number of new cases are at a low ebb. It's like trying to get excited over Christmas shopping in July.

The fact remains, that in order to have a reasonable degree of protection against polio next summer, youngsters must begin their series of shots now. If the parents of Pitt County see to it now that their youngsters get their polio shots, the county will be more likely to have a polio epidemic next summer. If parents delay just because the threat of the disease is not immediate, they can blame no one but themselves if their youngsters fall victim to the crippling disease next year.

No Avoiding Of That Newsprint Price Hike

The newsprint price hike which has been invoked by manufacturers in the United States and Canada is going to have a very real effect upon the operating costs of newspapers throughout the nation.

No newspaper can escape the increase in operating cost for two simple reasons. 1. No newspaper can get along without newsprint; and 2. The closely knit group of newsprint manufacturers always raise their prices together, leaving publishers either to accept the increase or do without newsprint. There is no other alternative.

Under the general $4 per ton price increase, the prevailing price of newsprint in New York will be $130 per ton. For North Carolina's newspapers, which are in a different rate zone, the cost of newsprint per ton will go from $130 to $134. For daily newspapers like The Reflector, the hike in newsprint cost will mean an additional cost of a few thousand dollars a year. For the larger newspapers of the State, the increase in newsprint price will represent an additional $50,000 or more in operation costs.

Already pushed with a declining margin between costs and revenue, few newspapers regardless of size will be able to absorb the additional cost which newsprint manufacturers have forced upon them. Almost without exception, the additional cost will have to be passed on to readers and advertisers.

Scott Strategy On The Political Front

By LYNN NISBET

STRATEGY — It was predicted in this corner several months ago that Senator Kerr Scott would lend every possible assistance toward the re-election of Senator Sam Ervin next year, and would stay aloof from any other campaign. Reason given for that prediction was that Ben Roney Senator Scott's administrative assistant, and Terry Sanford manager of his successful senatorial primary campaign, are building a cohesive and potentially powerful organization, which is not yet strong enough to take a chance in actively opposing so popular a candidate.

At the YDC convention at Durham a few weeks ago Senator Scott publicly endorsed Senator Ervin for re-election. Neither he nor any of his close associates has endorsed anybody else, despite claims of this and that senatorial "group" claiming them. There has been no denial of the claimed backing from anybody with authority to speak for the Scott group. The organization is not yet strong enough to exert itself.

If strategy is fairly obvious, if Senator Ervin can go through the next primary without serious opposition there will be no need for his friends to organize in his behalf. If Governor Hodges can get by without serious opposition there will be no need for a tight organization of his supporters.

On the other hand, if there is no contest at all it will be difficult for the Scott organization to hold its members in line. So, it is quite likely there will be taken opposition to Governor Hodges with recognized backing of the Scott folks, but without much real help from them. They are not ready to go all out for any potential candidate. It is improbable on that basis they can find a candidate willing to make the race if he has more to lose than to gain.

SECONDARY — Reluctant to tangle with incumbents having the popular support conceded to Senator Ervin and Governor Hodges, the budding Scott organization is likely to seek exercise for its muscles in races for lesser offices.

There is evidence that Kidd Brewer may get support of the Scott group for Lieutenant Governor. That field is so wide open that so many candidates are parading the back of any one will not suffer much loss of prestige if he is defeated and can claim a great victory if he wins. It is a "natural" opportunity to flex muscles and build momentum to deal with problems likely to arise in legislative races in 1958, and the more important gubernatorial and senatorial elections in 1960. By that time, if the organization schedule is maintained, there will be a very potent "machine" in state politics.

Meanwhile the strategy of the Scott-Roney-Sanford team seems to be to obviate necessity for the opposition building an organization by preventing contest for the major offices.

NATIONAL — The one thing which might upset that time table is the brewing contest for control of the delegation to the national Democratic convention next year. As the Philadelphia convention in 1948 Governor Gerry Chery was titular head of the delegation. Clyde Hoey and William Umstead were in the United States Senate. Joe Blythe was national committeeman and treasurer of the national committee. Melville Broughton had been named to succeed Umstead, and Kerr Scott had been nominated for Governor to succeed Chery. Broughton wanted to be national committeeman and Scott was agreeable. Unofficial poll of the delegation indicated majority support for continuing Blythe in that post, and Broughton and Kerr yielded without an open fight.

CHANCE — There was evidence that a Broughton-Scott coalition was forming to take over control of the party in this state, with an opponent named Blythe. Early in 1949 both Broughton and Blythe died leaving both factions without recognized leadership. And until now nobody has appeared on the scene to take over control of either faction.

Time and space preclude detailed report of developments during the years from 1948 and 1952. They were not politically happy years before Scott. Came the 1952 national convention at Chicago. By all rules the Governor should have headed the state delegation. Governor Scott was again sidetracked and Cameron Morrison was named chairman.

Long before the convention Scott had been an advocate of Adlai Stevenson for the presidential nomination. Majority of the delegation consistently voted for Russell of Georgia. After Stevenson was nominated and when he came to North Carolina, leadership of the party still sought to keep Scott to the sidelines.

Then in 1954 Kerr Scott came back to win nomination and election as United States Senator. Along the way he had recruited supporters with political know-how without losing any substantial part of his personal following. He has now what he lacked before, an organization—at least the hard core and nucleus of a potent organization.

Having been "snubbed" at two national conventions, will he take another brush-off without protest? It is doubtful. So some of the manipulations right now are directed toward leadership of the delegation to the next national convention perhaps even more than toward results in the next primary.

Whatever happens in the primary the fight for control of the national delegation is between Governor Hodges and Senator Scott.

Other Editors Are Saying... A Bid For Monopoly

(Charleston (S.C.) News and Courier)

A fairly widespread belief exists among citizens today that "Big Business" sticks together to scalp the customer. These are the same people who believe that government is a saintly institution, administered by angels to protect the customer from scoundrels.

The News and Courier holds the belief that neither industrial managers nor government bureaucrats quite qualify as angels, and that even a customer may rank somewhere between heaven and hades—say about on a par with an ordinary human being. If ever there was a spokesman for "business," and a good one, it is The Wall Street Journal. The Journal itself does not necessarily take up for every proposition a group of business people promotes. Some business interests oppose the anti-trust laws.

"The very purpose of the anti-trust laws," says WSJ, "is not to preserve business from competition but to protect the customer by preserving competition." The Journal's remarks were prompted by an effort of the National Automobile Dealers Assn. to regulate sale of cars. The NADA wants a law that will permit manufacturers to include in their franchise agreements "a provision which would prohibit dealers from selling cars to any unauthorized person for later resale." This law is designed to stop the practice of hunting up customers in other dealers' territories, or selling a car to another dealer who in turn would re-sell it to a customer. This type of automobile sale is called "boiler-plate" and the NADA is against it.

"The unhappiness with this kind of competition," says The Journal, "and the desire to stop it is perfectly understandable. Here it is, a word certainly a convenience for many dealers. But it would be a convenience, we are constrained to point out, acquired to the disadvantage of the customers."

In effect, what NADA wants is a local monopoly which would stifle competition for the sale of automobiles. A dealer then would not have to worry about competition from other dealers in the make of car which he handles. A law such as NADA proposes would exempt automobile dealers from the anti-trust laws, and that would be a bad precedent. We agree with The Wall Street Journal—speaking for business—in saying there is no excuse for it.

The World From My Window

A PEEK OUT THE WINDOW — I'm lucky. Of the seven people who work in the Reflector's newsroom, I'm the only one who has a nice window to stare out of to find inspiration when the words just won't materialize.

An old woman comes next, moving along with the aid of a cane, her head, her kerchief wrapped and bowed against the wind. What's she thinking? What does it mean to her, we wonder, to be old and lame and to know that life is slipping away more and more rapidly?

The wind whistles through the gutters, picking up bits and pieces of trash, sending them high into the air. But the same wind that tosses the debris about also unfurls the flag on the courthouse lawn, streaming it out against a blue and sunny sky.

Yep, you can see a lot of things from the newsroom window. An ever-changing scene, familiar and distinct but never quite the same.

One never knows just what will come next. Some days it's hum-drum, people passing quietly back and forth, some days too, there's a bit of excitement, such as the one-legged Negro escapes from the county jail going bumpity-bump-bump across the court house lawn with two deputies in hot pursuit.

So, you see, I'm lucky. My poor colleagues, they don't have a window.

Notebook On Life

A Toast To Vintage Soldiers

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK (AP)—If on this Veteran's Day some aging gaffer starts reminiscing about St. Mihiel or Chateau Thierry, don't offend him by asking:

"What in the world are you talking about?" Those words are carved deep in his heart—as are other words like "Bellevue Wood" and the "Argonne Forest"—and he finds it saddening that a younger generation remembers so little of names that once stirred all America.

For it was in places like these he lost part of his youth. The Aisne-Marne looms larger in his memory than the Mason-Dixon Line, and in his mind the poppies are still blowing in Flanders fields.

He is a survivor of the 20th Century's first great conflict, and he feels that in his own lifetime his own sacrifices are now largely overlooked. And he is not without considerable justification for this viewpoint.

In every war many soldiers feel they are fighting on a forgotten front. The troops in the Pacific islands felt that way in World War II. So did the troops in Italy.

"Do people back home think the whole war is being fought in Normandy?" was the popular complaint. "Don't they know there's a war going on here, too?"

Time has a way of dimming most wars, but they rarely are forgotten while the men who fought them are still alive. Many veterans of World War I, however, are gloomily convinced that their war has been forgotten pretty much by everyone except themselves.

The "retreads"—World War I veterans who also served in World War II—took a heavy verbal beating from their younger comrades, who often told them mockingly:

"Pop, never mind telling us about your little war. If you'd done the right kind of a job in your war to end all wars we wouldn't be here fighting this one. That's why we're over here—to finish the job you started."

And poor middle-aged Pop had to take it and laugh. The kids had him outnumbered. They still do.

As of a year ago, America's veterans numbered 20 million. Of these some 80 per cent, or 15,424,000, were veterans of World War II, and 3,033,000 had served since the start of the Korean campaign in June 1950.

Pop is slowly being swallowed up by the masses of newer and younger veterans.

Yet it was in no bush league war that Pop won both his scars and his medals. It was a titanic conflict involving 27 nations and 65,038,810 troops. The total casualties were 37,508,686, of whom 8,538,315 were killed in combat or died. The American nation put 4,355,000 men under arms. It suffered 364,800 casualties, including 126,000 deaths. Some 17 million of the United States' mobilized men and 17 billion dollars from that field.

Mergers Helpful To Banks

By ELMER ROESSNER

Many banks in New York City and elsewhere are making more money than they ever have before. Even after years of bonuses that will make officers and employees the envy of their neighbors, bank dividends may set new records.

The principal reason is that banks are getting top prices for their commodity—lending money. A contributing reason in many instances are mergers.

The average bank interest rate on short-term loans in 19 cities in the third quarter was 3.76 per cent. In 11 Southern and Western cities, it was 4.07 per cent. It has been a long time since banks got returns like that. In 1953 it got up to 3.7 per cent; it was 3.4 in 1952 and 3.1 in 1951, but it never got above 3 per cent in almost two decades before that. It was down to 2.0 in 1941.

WHY INTEREST RATES ARE UP — Interest rates are high because demand for borrowing money is large, and, even more important, because the Federal Reserve has increased its rediscount rate—the price it charges member banks for money. The rate was raised to 2½ per cent to put a brake on runaway business expansion. This is intended to keep the boom from going bust.

The rediscount rate affects all other rates. Since banks have to pay more for the money they borrow they must charge more for the money they lend. And since finance and loan companies hire most of their money from banks, they must increase their rates. Banks, too, have been boosting their rates on auto and consumer loans.

At the same time, they find it profitable to pay higher rates on deposits.

Higher rates, of course, would mean little to banks if they couldn't find customers for the money they control. But the demand is terrific. Bank lending hit a new high in the New York Federal Reserve Bank's last week and, with the year-end upsurge in business ahead, many new records will be set this year.

On September 30, the total loans of 12 leading banks in the district were 11.9 per cent higher than they were on January 1.

This situation—lots of business at high interest rates—is expected to continue well into next year because many of the loans have been written for long periods. ADVANTAGES — OF — MERGERS — Banks benefiting from mergers in an interesting way.

When two bakeries merge, there is a direct saving in costs with no reduction in income. Some production and office expenses can be laid off some delivery routes combined and one general manager's salary saved. Perhaps one of two rented locations can be given up.

But bank mergers mean no such economies nor are they usually intended to. Once in a while two nearby branches can be united, but such savings are relatively small.

The big gain is the acquisition of more executive personnel. For a long time banks have been looking for good top men. Many have launched extensive recruitment and training programs in efforts to lure more young talent from the more glamorous fields of electronics, physics, aviation and the arts.

Now when banks merge they increase the size of their pool of executive talent. And that's what counts. It's not building, name or a supply of money that makes a bank successful. Instead, it is the experience, accuracy and judgment of the men at the top.

USEFUL BUSINESS NEWS IN CAPSULE FORM — "Homefacts," a reference book which builders are expected to present to buyers of their homes is being published by Home Facts Inc., New Canaan, Conn. Fearful of offending potential customers, Seagram gave New York tenants up to four years notice before tearing down an apartment house to make room for a new skyscraper. In an act of generosity, the government has decided mail carriers can deduct the costs of repair and upkeep of cars used in carrying the mail in calculating income for tax purposes. The Department of Commerce will display later this month American miniature electric trains in trade fairs throughout the world.

COMTEMPTUOUS TOURISTS The currency problem is also important. It is, naturally, difficult for us to appreciate that the American dollar is worth 30,000 drachma in Athens, 620 lira in Italy, 350 francs in France, etc. So we throw our money around foolishly tip too much, and may sometimes be kipped. Too often, we show a contempt for their currency.

Buying perfume in a shop on Rue de la Paix, an American customer threw a bundle of French paper money on the counter and said: "Take the bill out of this junk!"

In the face of too many instances like that, President Eisenhower and John Foster Dulles may find it hard to make and hold allies for Uncle Sam. In the long run, popular sentiment is more effective and influential than treaties.

American Tourist As U. S. Ambassador

By RAY TUCKER

PARIS — The average American tourist abroad can earn more good will for the United States than any diplomat could. He has the simple things—namely, take the trouble to obtain a working knowledge of one or two foreign tongues and foreign monetary systems.

The temporary sympathies which we win by spending billions on their survival in war and reconstruction, we constantly dissipate by neglecting the everyday human amenities. This conclusion was reached by almost every member of our delegation, which made the trip on the inauguration of TWA's new service from California to five European countries.

A slight knowledge in the lingua franca and financial fields may be far more important than an understanding of the Russo-American forces operating in the cold war. It means the difference between creating the impression that we are a friendly people. Finally, it eases the path and increases the pleasures of foreign travelers.

REAL PROBLEM It is difficult to present and to dramatize this problem, but it is real. Peoples of other lands have as high regard for their tongues—frequently higher—as we do for ours. They cannot comprehend why we do not and will not take the trouble to learn something about them. And they resent openly some of our suggestions that their languages are "funny" as not to be worth learning.

On the contrary, almost every European in the service of the public knows English, French or German sometimes Italian and Spanish. This observation applies particularly to head porters at hotels, waiters and waitresses, taxi drivers, bus and subway operators, salesmen and saleswomen, theater and night-club people.

Of course, it is a business with them, for tourism is one of Europe's most profitable industries. They have developed it to a science, far more than we have tried to do, with their governments leading the field.

FRENCH LANGUAGE MOST HELPFUL ONE Few Americans reciprocate linguistically. Outside of England, there can be no meeting of minds through the medium of a common vocabulary. The most helpful one to know, of course, is French, for that is still the international language. To see the delightful response in a foreigner's eyes and smiles when one can talk their tongue even poorly, emphasizes the importance of this problem.

In fact, although not too sympathetic to the Federal government's control of education, several Congressional members of our delegation thought the question might be subjected to a study on Capitol Hill. At the least, it would be worth a speech.

The need for greater emphasis on languages becomes more important, in view of the fact that air travel will permit more Americans to go abroad every year. And it helps in a practical manner. Several members of our party might still be sitting alongside the Appian Way, far outside

Rome, if we had not mustered sufficient French and Italian to command transportation to our hotel.

COMTEMPTUOUS TOURISTS The currency problem is also important. It is, naturally, difficult for us to appreciate that the American dollar is worth 30,000 drachma in Athens, 620 lira in Italy, 350 francs in France, etc. So we throw our money around foolishly tip too much, and may sometimes be kipped. Too often, we show a contempt for their currency.

New Future Teachers Group Formed

Bethel Methodist Circles

BETHEL—Mrs. L. J. Whitehurst Sr. and Mrs. R. J. Whitehurst were co-hostesses to the Sarah Whitehurst Circle of the Methodist Church on Monday afternoon in the home of the former. There were twenty members present.

The opening song was "He Leadeth Me." Mrs. S. C. Whitehurst, spiritual life leader, chose Psalm 25 for her scripture. Her subject was "Egotism" which she stated is the enemy of inner peace. She listed several things that a person should not do and closed with the thought that we should search our hearts each day to be sure that we are not egotist. If we would do this, we would then have peace of soul.

Mrs. R. N. Simmons, president, presided. Mrs. D. C. Carson read the minutes which stood approved. Plans for the men's supper this month were made. Self-denial contributions were collected and other business transacted.

The program was given by Mrs. E. J. Whitehurst. She explained where the money which was collected is sent. Among the places listed with Liberia, Burma, Korea, Brazil and India. The benediction was pronounced.

During the social hour, fruit cake topped with whipped cream and a cherry and coffee were enjoyed.

The December meeting will meet in the home of Mrs. J. A. Staton with Mrs. Harold Staton and Mrs. J. A. Edmondson as joint hostesses.

Circle No. 1 of the Woman's Society of Christian Service met in the home of Mrs. James Crandell with Mrs. Royal Carson and Mrs. Wadie Ward as co-hostesses.

Mrs. R. L. Goodall, the Spiritual Life Leader, gave a very inspiring devotional on "Taking Stock of Yourself." She used several verses of scripture and poems as illustrations.

Mrs. F. L. Blount Jr. gave the program. She used material from "The Fifteenth Annual Report of the W.S.C.S." to tell about the projects for which the Week of Prayer gifts would be used. She made each project very real and near to the members. After the explanations, the ladies joined in a prayer for these projects. The envelopes were then collected.

The minutes were read by Mrs. W. P. Thigpen and afterwards Mrs. J. L. Gurganus Sr. gave the treasurer's report.

Mrs. Blount, president, asked the circle to join the others in serving the supper for the Methodist Men's Club Ladies Night. The money realized from this supper will go toward the walks at the parsonage.

Everyone was given a chance to donate to the supper. Anyone absent can call Mrs. Blount and offer her your donation.

Mrs. Robert Davis was asked to place a cake and pie sale to be held Tuesday before Thanksgiving.

Mrs. D. T. House reported that progress was being made in the church kitchen. The cabinets were completed and the painting has started.

After the silver change was taken, the benediction was given.

The hostesses then served a delicious salad plate and coffee to fifteen members and one visitor.

The Mary Lambeth Circle met on Monday night with Mrs. J. M. Buttermore. There were fifteen members present.

The Spiritual Life Leader, Mrs. Clara Roberson, chose as her topic "Prayer." She read two articles, "Praying Hands" and "The Lord's Prayer." The last one was explained in detail.

Miss Camille Staton, program chairman, discussed the missionary efforts in five countries, the United States and even in North Carolina. The offering for the Week of Prayer was taken.

During the business session, Mrs. R. E. Riddick, president, called the meeting to order and Mrs. Harold Manning, secretary, read the minutes and called the roll.

The Christmas project was discussed and plans for Ladies Night at the Men's Club were made.

After the benediction, Mrs. Buttermore served a salad plate with cheese straws and crackers.

Mrs. Clayton House will be the hostess in December.

Mrs. W. E. House was the hostess to the Marion Burton Circle on Monday night. The meeting was called to order by the president, Mrs. Hilton Tetterton.

Mrs. Clayton Purvis, Spiritual Life Leader, opened with the reading of a few verses of scripture. Her remarks were correlated with a prayer.

Mrs. Al Marshall, who was in charge of the program, had as her topic "Week of Prayer and Self-Denial." She asked questions that we should ask ourselves when we pray. She told of several places that the money which was collected will be spent including our own state.

At the business meeting, plans were made for the supper this month after the secretary, Mrs. L. L. Andrews Jr., gave her report and called the roll with 14 answering roll call. The circle benediction was pronounced.

For refreshments the hostess served pimiento cheese sandwiches, pickles, cookies and Coca-Colas.

Winterville Seniors Chose Superlatives

By LINDA NICHOLS
Winterville High School

Recently, the senior class nominated and elected fifteen superlatives. They are: Most dependable—Faye Mills; most likely to succeed—Peggy Mobley; most sincere—Helen McLawhorn; up looking—Pos Worthington and Patsy Tripp; most popular—Linda Nichols and Billy Moye; biggest pest—Carlton Branch; most athletic—Maggie Castelleo and William Corey; most courteous—Sherrill Garris and Ray Russell; wisest—Harold Nobles and Joy Faulkner; most intellectual—Peggy Mobley; best all around—Maggie Castelleo and Kent Worthington; cutest—Linda Nichols and Billy Moye; biggest flirt—Sherrill Garris and Horace Moore; best dressed—Ruby Lee McArthur and Marvin Joyner; friendliest—Joy Faulkner.

These and other group pictures will be taken for the annual, Wednesday, November 16.

Congratulations and Rah! Rah! to you, our newly elected basketball cheerleaders who are Carolyn Evans (chief), Betty Jean Mobley, Janice Boyd, Connie Bowen, and Tommy Day. Although there's been an understandable amount of complaining of soreness among them, they're still continuing to practice hard these days preparing for our first big game at Beargrass Tuesday night!

"The day was just too short!" Carolyn Evans sadly admitted as she summed up the details of her visit at Oak Ridge Military Academy Sunday. She left Winterville at 6 a.m. (no-hum!) with Mr. and Mrs. Luther Morton, Ronnie's parents, and they arrived at Oak Ridge in time for church. Afterwards they met Ronnie and had lunch. The afternoon was spent riding around Greensboro and High Point sight-seeing.

It seems as if the Winterville students are trying to keep at least one room at Pitt Memorial Hospital occupied. Shirley Tyndall, a senior, became a patient there last week after undergoing an operation. She is at home now. You're missed Shirley, so hurry and get well!

Certain members of the American history class have learned that making history projects can be fun. Wednesday night, Janice Worthington, Barbara Evans, Geraldine Mills, Presbytery's Camp on Bogue Sound. It is hoped that many of the young adults will attend. Please see Dr. S. M. Walter for further information.

A young adult social will be held Thursday night at 8:00 in the Fellowship Hall. Mr. and Mrs. Robert Kirkland will be host and hostess.

A young adult retreat is planned for December 3rd and 4th at the Harold Nobles and Charles Smith sauntered over to Peggy Craft's house for the sole purpose of making history projects. But tell me now—was it their fault if there just happened to be a stack of popular records beside a record player just waiting to be played and danced by, some refreshments waiting in the kitchen, and a sudden non-interest in history project?

LINDA

Just how luck can a girl get? Jeannette Moye thinks she has the answer, as she has received an invitation which promises a most exciting weekend! Friday afternoon she leaves for Chapel Hill where she will meet her date who is a student at Carolina. Together they plan to attend the Stan Kenton concert. Then on Saturday she and her date will be seen and heard hollering for Carolina (naturally) at the Carolina-Notre Dame football game. "I'm really planning to have a ball!" Jeannette was heard to say, and we know that she will too.

"Come to our Old Fashioned Barn Dance at Greenville High School, Thursday, November 10," the card read that was addressed to the Winterville FFA and dates. As you guessed that's exactly what a number of them did too, along with other county future homemakers. The dance lasting from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. was over "too soon."

Frances and Connie Sutton were among those present at EOC's last football game of the season Saturday night. We should say part of the game as they left at the half, because it was so-o-o cold. They went to the dance afterwards, however, although they said it was a trifle awkward dancing with frozen feet.

Sunday afternoon Barbara Evans and her date were really flying high. They took a sightseeing tour around Greenville in a rented Piper plane (driver included, of course.) It was worth the $4, so Barbara said.

$600,000 Issued In Storm Repairs

RALEIGH (AP)—Federal funds of $600,000 already have been approved for repairs of public property damage caused by Hurricanes Connie, Diane and Ione.

Gov. Hodges gave this report yesterday. The bulk of requests for federal aid, amounting to about seven million dollars, is still awaiting action by government authorities.

As a result of last year's Hurricane Hazel, North Carolina counties and communities asked $1,700,000 in federal aid. A total of about one million dollars was finally approved.

Hodges also reported that three state officials will attend a Nov. 16 conference in Atlanta on making government surplus goods available to those who suffered storm damage. The group will include Gen. Edward Griffin, state Civil Defense director; Director David Q. Holton of the Division of Purchase and Contract; and A. W. Honeycutt, Holton's surplus property expert.

Never Been Happier, Is Marilyn's Disclosure

By BOB THOMAS
NEW YORK (AP)—I've never been happier in my life.

That's what Marilyn Monroe said, and it appeared to be true. She smiles readily and talks excitedly about her interest in acting, plays, books and living in general. She also indicated she was ready for romance.

"My divorce decree (from Joe DiMaggio) became final — finally," she remarked. "I haven't been going out. But now — who knows?"

Marilyn's day in New York begins early. She spends much of her mornings observing the classes of Lee Strasberg, the dramatic coach whose pupils included Marlon Brando, James Dean, Julie Harris, Shelley Winters. She also attends classes at his actors' studio.

"I do all kinds of roles," she said. But so far no Shakespeares. She reads Shakespeare, however. I asked her which plays of his she liked.

She pondered and then smiled. "No comment," she added. "I'm not going to get into the same thing I did with 'The Brothers Karamazov.'" She was aware of the vast amount of kidding she received for expressing a desire to do that Russian novel on the screen.

"It didn't bother me," she commented. "I knew they hadn't read the book. Or if they had, they had forgotten it."

"Actually, it would make a wonderful movie," Samuel Goldwyn himself told me that. I'll take his word for it."

When she isn't studying dramatics, Marilyn often will stroll around the museums and book stores. She enthused about a metropolitan exhibit of Goya, her favorite artist.

Don't the crowds bother her? "Not terribly," she said. "I have a few disguises that work pretty well. I won't tell you what they are, because that would give me away."

She reads a great deal, is now plowing through James Joyce's "Ulysses." It's a novel that baffles some college professors, but Marilyn said it makes sense.

This past year in New York has gone faster than she can remember, she said. She left no doubt that she intends to remain a New Yorker for some time to come.

The record was broken in Sunday School attendance last Sunday. It looks like the goal of 300 will be reached in the very near future. Something is being done to provide more classroom space. A new class has just been organized for college age young people. Sunday School meets at 9:45 a.m. with Jimmie Spain directing. Morning worship at 11 o'clock will be conducted by the pastor. Congregational singing and special music will be directed by Samuel Johnson with Peggy Evans at the piano. A 10-minute business meeting will be at 12:00. The league, directed by Henry C. Hagan, meets at 4:30. The league is being well attended now but it needs more faithful support from all. The evening worship will be conducted by the pastor at 7:30. Edward Earl Sutton and T. N. Stocks will render special music. The choir will render a special number. A warm welcome awaits everyone in all the services of the day.

Monday night at 7:30 Circle No. 1 meets with Mrs. Herman Benson, 2114 North Village Drive.

Tuesday at 4 p.m. the Good News Bible Club for all boys and girls of all ages will be directed by Mrs. Samuel Johnson. The first Good News Club was conducted last Tuesday with 37 boys and girls present and 11 workers. Tuesday night at 8:00 the Passion Play Committee meets at the First Presbyterian Church.

FIVE EAST CAROLINA SENIORS PLAY FINALE

Five East Carolina seniors bowed the final curtain on their collegiate football days in last week's Tampa game: Louis Hallow of Goldsboro, Harold O'Kelly of High Point, J. D. Bradford of Fayetteville, Emu Bodo of Wilmington and Bob Chambers of Salisbury.

This quint enrolled together in 1952 and during their stay here saw—and had much to do with—East Carolina's capture of its first North State Conference football flag. This came during their sophomore year (except for Hallow who transferred from Wake Forest).

These boys have had a big hand in EOC's fine 23-12-3 record over the past four seasons. All (except Hallow) played their freshman seasons. All became stars. Hallow starred as a Baby Deacon his freshman year and sat out the '52 campaign here.

He got his baptismal of North State fire in 1953 when he and his cohorts ran ablaze through the league, copping the crown on seven straight victories. Hallow was named All-Conference that season and Bradford, Bodo and O'Kelly were cited for outstanding play.

Bradford, Bodo and O'Kelly broke into the starting lineup in 1954, and Chambers saw extensive reserve duty. Before the season began, the Pirates were built to defend their title successfully. Then quarterback Dick Cherry broke his ankle. The five seniors, then juniors, helped carry on and the Bucs compiled a 5-4-1 season against the most rugged opposition ever scheduled.

This season, all five have performed valiantly. Hallow, who just this week was nominated by the coaches of N. A. I. A. District 26 as a candidate for Little All-American, has been particularly outstanding. O'Kelly has been used at fullback and halfback on offense and teamed with Hallow to back the defensive frontal. He impressed many fans with his determined ball carrying.

Bradford, an All-Stater in high school, really came into his own in 1954. His first two years were spent in the shadow of the great Bobby Hodges. He was regarded as one of the finest defensive ends in the conference in '53 and again this past season after a slow start.

Bodo, who is known by the familiar "Emu" to all Pirate supporters, blossomed into a real star. His particular style of running pleased crowds everywhere the Pirates played. He was also one of the "Buc" ablest defenders. Some of the best games were played in the secondary. It was a tough bit of misfortune that he got hurt at East Tennessee and couldn't perform in the final game before the home folks.

Salisbury's Chambers is typical of the unsung player who is mighty valuable to a team. Not quite good enough to be a regular, he proved very handy as a reliever and helped a lot in the important practice sessions.

A salute, if you please, to Hallow, O'Kelly, Bradford, Bodo and Chambers, East Carolina's only departing gridder.

BASKETBALL ALREADY ON THE SCENE

With another two weeks of good football weather left, the sport that draws more fans than all others, basketball is crowding in. The big bounce is already a familiar sound at many of the Pitt County high schools.

Several of the rural teams have opened their schedules and another rip-sport in Pitt County race is in store. Bethel and Stokes-Pactious were the first teams to kick the lid off the 1955-56 season. Other teams yet in the swing next week.

East Carolina's eagles are working hard to get ready for their opener on Dec. 2. Coaches Howard Porter and Earl Smith are drilling the candidates daily with a rough schedule lying ahead.

Coach So Farley has some of his GHS boys working out. Full scale practice will be held up, however, until football draws to a close. The Phantoms have two more grid appearances, tonight here against Wilson and next week in Ronoake Rapids.

Speaking of Phantom football, the locals are expected to get another good lacing tonight. The strong Wilson club holds victories over Washington (18-0), Goldsboro (20-7), Dunn (11-0) and Fayetteville (20-0). You know what you come to think of it, Pitt County had two fine rural high school football aggregations in Farmville and Ayden. Coach Elbert Moyer's Farmville Red Devils finished up their season last week losing to LaGrange. They topped the year with a respectable 5-4 won-lost record. Ayden last week upset Tarboro, 20-19, and meet Beaufort tonight. Coach Stuart Tripp's Tornadoes have compiled a fine 6-3 mark. Nice going!

Clemson Braced Today For Maryland Invasion

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
Clemson College Football Coach Howard, his Tiger football team and the entire Clemson student body were braced today for Maryland's invasion tomorrow in the "big" game of the Atlantic Coast Conference.

Maryland will have its big guns trained on at least three targets: a perfect conference record, a trip to the Orange Bowl Jan. 2 and the possibility of a perfect season.

Clemson and Maryland each have 3-0 conference records. Maryland has an 8-0 season record with only a game with George Washington remaining after tomorrow's clash. Over-all Clemson has won five and lost one, 7-21 to Rice. After Maryland Auburn and Furman remain on the schedule.

Duke has three ACC foes remaining, starting tomorrow with South Carolina but with two defeats and a tie the Blue Devils are counted out of the Orange Bowl picture.

Howard is hoping that his "at home" record will serve him tomorrow. In his 15 years as head of Clemson coach his teams have won 23, lost 12 and tied one at home. Only one team has beaten his charges twice at home.

A general rain which fell over most ACC football camps yesterday failed to hinder Clemson's work. Fundamentals and passing were stressed.

Maryland continued its week of practice holding a light workout in a rain. The Terps practiced in light equipment at College Park today before leaving for Clemson. They were in top physical shape. The rain forced North Carolina indoors yesterday for a light practice.

Admits Indians Used Telescope

CHICAGO (AP)—Kansas City Athletics Manager Lou Boudreau has denied published reports that his team used a telescope to steal signals during the baseball season but said the Cleveland Indians did.

Boudreau at his home in suburban Harvey, said the reports "are not true" that the A's had a surveyor's telescope in the bullpen and Kansas City bullpen pitchers would steal signals from rival catchers and tip off their batsmen.

"I'll admit when I was at Cleveland (in 1948) we tried that a few times but so far as I am concerned the gimmick is passe now," Boudreau said.

Battered G-Men Facing Strong Visitors

Ayden And Wilson To Win

By BRUCE PHILLIPS

Reflector Sports Editor
Last week two upsets caught us napping and didn't do our percentage any good. Ayden toppled Tarboro, 20-19, in a big surprise and LaGrange stopped high-flying Farmville, 22-13.

Our "rights" were Tampa over East Carolina and Goldsboro over Greenville. But we have to admit, these prognostication efforts didn't add much to our genius.

Our percentage now stands at .666 with 10 correct guesses out of 15 attempts.

This weekend, the games narrow to two. East Carolina and Farmville concluded their season last week. So, our chances of increasing our mark should be better.

With the weary crystal ball in hand, here we go again:

Ayden Vs. Beaufort
Coach Stuart Tripp's Ayden Tornadoes really showed their power in the upset of Tarboro. The winners came from behind in the last minute to win.

The victory has spurred the squad to new heights in spirit, along with the fact that they're celebrating homecoming.

With the backfield trio of R. L. Collins, Tommy Edwards and Lindy Dunn ready to spark the offense and Latham Dennis and his cohorts in top condition up front, the Tornadoes look like two touchdown winners over the Beaufort visitors.

Greenville Vs. Wilson

For the second straight week, Coach Guy Lewis fields his injury-riddled Greenville team against a powerful AAA foe. The Wilson Cyclones are expected to be more than the locals can handle.

The Phantoms are probably in the worst physical condition of the season with star end Harold Edwards out and capable halfback John Ed Arnold no longer with the squad.

Wilson is enjoying a fine record, having defeated Goldsboro, Fayetteville and Dunn. The Wilson team is too big and too fast for the Greenies and should win by at least 21 points.

Yost Says Long Ball Is Hard If You're Trying

WASHINGTON (AP)—Eddie Yost, who sometimes hits that long ball himself, figures, "You very seldom hit the long ball when you're trying."

"Maybe some of them can, players like (Washington's) Roy Sievers or Boston's Ted Williams, but most of the time when you start swinging for the fences, you don't make it," Eddie said.

Yost was holding forth late yesterday at contract signing ceremonies. He became the first player for the Washington Senators to sign up for 1956, a surprise development since Eddie has been one of baseball's most persistent holdouts in the past.

He took a cut this year, he said, from the $22,000 he reportedly was paid last year, but he told news-men he was satisfied or "I wouldn't be signing."

Someone asked Yost if he thought the Senators' action to move in the left and center field fences some 20 feet would increase his home run output.

"Oh, sure," Eddie said, "eight or 10 a year. But I hope I won't be swinging for the fences."

It was then that he offered his observation about the futility of distance swinging.

Sievers, last year an outfielder but ticketed for first base duty next season, has broken Washington's home run record in each of the past two seasons. He hit 24 in 1954 and 25 last year. President Calvin Griffith believes that moving in the fences will enable Sievers to hit the 40-plus bracket in home runs.

Despite 1-5 Record, The Blue Midgets Rated A Strong Threat

Coached by Byrd Humphries and Tom Shuts, the Blue Midget team figures to be a strong threat in the coming Little League football playoffs, during the Thanksgiving holidays.

Though holding only a 1-5 record thus far, the Blues have shown a powerful offensive punch with half-back Erskine Duff and fullback Skip Wright providing a good running game. Ray Corbett has played fine ball at the other halfback and Harry Forbes, quarterback, has commanded the field play.

The most effective offensive weapon for the Blues is a fast ground attack, however. Forbes' passes to Garris Evans and Benny Carraway have kept opposing teams open for the runners.

Linemen for the squad are Carraway and Evans, ends; Sonny Hodges and Reggie Johnson at tackles; Championship finals. The Blues will meet the Golds Tuesday afternoon, November 15, at Elm Street Park to begin the Championship series. The winner of this contest will battle the victor of the White-Red match on Thanksgiving day for the title.

Benny Murray and Wayne Sumrell at guards, and Donald Pierce at center.

On defense, Sumrell and Johnson have been effective in stopping enemy thrusts, along with Wright, who handles defensive chores at center. Forbes and Duff are defensive standouts in the Blue backfield.

Most of the Blue squad of this year will be too old to compete in Little League activities next season, however several key players will return and the coaches have expressed a belief that a strong nucleus will guide the future Blues to success.

Concerning the Thanksgiving playoffs, Coaches Shuts and Humphries have stated that they have confidence in their squad, and see a possible Blue victory in the

Quite A Rhubarb Before Golliday Gets Recognition

By ORLO ROBERTSON

NEW YORK (AP)—Jim Golliday, 24-year-old Northwestern senior, may be the world's newest fastest human at 100 yards but before it is official there's likely to be quite a rhubarb in the ranks of the Amateur Athletic Union.

Nearly six months after it was announced that the 160-pound Negro sprinter had matched the world record with a 9.3 seconds clocking in the Big Ten relays at Evanston, Ill., the records committee of the AAU said today it would consider his time of 10.9 seconds for a new standard.

If the .09.3 is approved at the annual convention of the AAU in Louisville Dec. 1-4 it will be forwarded to the International Federation for certification as a world standard. The listed world mark of .09.3 was established by Southern California's Mel Patton in 1948. The time was equaled by Australia's Hector Hogan in 1954 but the Aussie's performance has not yet come before the international body.

Complications developed when the records committee of the national organization discovered that the cards of two of the three timers caught Golliday in .09.3, the other in .09.2. The Central Assn. had applied for .09.3 for the Northwestern runner.

"We have asked the Central Assn. for an explanation," said Dan Ferris, secretary of the AAU. "But meantime we are going Golliday on the basis of .09.2 since two of the three timers caught him in that time."

At the time of the race, last May 14, Northwestern Coach Russell Walter said five watches were on Golliday.

"Two caught him at .09.2, two more at .09.3 and the other at .09.4," he said.

At the time Golliday credited his start from blocks as the big thing in his career.

Costa Lacking In Knockout Punch

NEW YORK (AP)—If Carmelo Costa could punch, he might be the featherweight champion of the world. Instead of fighting for the title, the flashy Brooklyn boxer takes on Jock Lopez, the No. 2 lightweight, tonight at Madison Square Garden in a rematch of their March 18 bout.

Ranked No. 4 among the 126-pounders, the slick Costa owns a classy left and trigger-fast hands. Instead of forcing a match with champion Sandy Saddler, who is overdue for a defense, Costa has been standing still despite an elimination victory over Lulu Perez and two decisions over Bobby Bell.

The bare facts tell the story. Costa, 21, has lost only twice in 33 pro starts for a 27-2-4 record. He never has been knocked out. The catch is that he has knocked out only three. In fact, he had to go hard in the 10th round to pull out a split decision over Bell, one of his conquerors in his last start.

Costa took Lopez on a unanimous decision eight months ago.

Saddler hasn't put his crown on the line since Feb. 25 when he thumped Red Top Davis in 15 rounds. He lost to Lopez in an over-the-weight match that Sacramento, May 24 and was beaten by Flash Elorde at Manila July 30.

Elorde was to have met Costa but Lopez was given the match. There was talk by the International Boxing Club that Flash wanted more time to get ready.

Costa took Lopez on a unanimous decision eight months ago.

Lewis Counts On His Forward Wall

By BILLY ARNOLD

Reflector Sports Writer
Coach Guy Lewis' Greenville Phantoms play host tonight to the AAA Wilson Cyclones in a non-conference contest at College Stadium. Action is scheduled to get under way at 8 p.m.

The Phantoms will be plugging for their fourth victory of the 1955 season tonight against five losses. However, the Cyclones are rated heavy favorites. Coach Walter Rogers' Wilson eleven, though holding only a 4-4 record, is a powerful crew and boasts a 20-7 victory over Goldsboro. Goldsboro walloped Greenville 57-0 last week. Statistically speaking, tonight's visitors are rated 70 points better than the Greenies.

Edwards, Arnold Are Out
Ed Harold Edwards will be out of uniform for the second consecutive week, due to an ankle injury, and will be missed sorely by the Phantoms. Edwards was the key receiver of quarterback Mack Roebuck's aeriels earlier in the year and also stood out as a defensive stalwart.

Halfback Johnny Arnold, a 140-pound speedster, dropped off the Green squad Monday and will not play the rest of the season. Taking over the vacated spot in the Phantom backfield will be Robert (Hopalong) Howell, a sophomore. Howell has played regular ball for Coach Lewis, alternating frequently with Arnold in previous games.

Lewis Confident in Linemen
Coach Lewis expressed strong confidence in his linemen earlier this week and stated that he expected the Green forward wall to be tough against Wilson.

Leading the frontal attack for Greenville will be senior tackle Howard King, a 180-pound workhorse. King has played tremendous ball for GHS in every game thus far this season, and is making an impressive bid for All-Conference and All-State honors. He is a veteran of three years of football wars at guard, tackle, end, center and linebacking posts.

With King will be Ike Riddick, Edwin Wilkerson, Barney Barrett, Jack Calhoun, Roy Martin, Angus Duff, Ken Whitchard, Billy Cox and Peter Hudson.

Greenville's backfield will be commanded by quarterback Mack Roebuck, and will include fullback Billy Sermons and halfbacks Pete West and Howell.

Answers Critics Of West Va. Schedule

MORGANTOWN, W. Va. (AP)—West Virginia's Coach Art (Pappy) Lewis, answering critics of his schedule on the eve of the big game with Pittsburgh, said today he felt that a conference of Southern Eastern independents was inevitable.

"I can't see that West Virginia's schedule is any weaker than that of Maryland and Oklahoma," the outspoken Mountaineer coach said.

"Oklahoma played only two tough games—with Pitt and Texas—and then loafed through an easy conference card. UCLA and Baylor, and the latter isn't strong this year, are the only two tough teams played by Maryland."

"Like Oklahoma, we are committed to a Southern conference schedule and it is unfortunate that all of these teams cannot be put in the big time class. But I feel that over-all our boys are facing

Inviting 40 To Early Training
ST. LOUIS (AP)—The St. Louis Cardinals said today they will invite about 40 major and minor league players to open spring training at St. Petersburg, Fla., Feb. 12.

March 1 is the official date for the start of spring training, but under baseball rules players may accept an invitation to report earlier for special conditioning and instruction.

General Manager Frank Lane said among those to be invited for the early date were catchers Dick Rand and Hal Smith, pitchers Frank Smith, Ben Flowers, Lindy McDaniel, Stu Miller and Larry Jackson, infielders Eddie Kasko, Don Blasingame and Dick Schofield and outfielders Archie Wilson and Russell Rac.

THE QUICKSILVER POOL

Newly married Lora accompanied her husband, Wade Tyler, to his family home on Staten Island after nursing him back to health from a serious wound he received while fighting as a Union soldier. She met Wade's aristocratic mother, Amanda Tyler, and Jenny, son of Wade and his dead first wife, Virginia. Wade forbids Lora to walk up the hill near the house but offers no explanation. Amanda attempts unsuccessfully to forbid Jenny to call Lora Lora. Another rift develops between the bride and her mother-in-law when Amanda informs her that Wade is still in love with Virginia.

CHAPTER FIVE
As Lora went down the hall she saw the library door closing just ahead of her and she pulled it open and walked in. Here, too, the shutters had been drawn and portieres swung across the windows to shut out any semblance of daylight. But at least a fire had been lighted and a lamp burned in the center of a table.

Jenny might well have been eaves-dropping, for he looked guilty when he saw her face. He picked up a book and scurried to the red damask before the hearth, where he curled up pretending to bury himself in the story.

Lora went straight to the portieres and flung them aside. Then she opened a window, thrust back the shutters and fastened them before closing it again. The outside world was bright with sunlight. Jenny ceased his pretense of reading and came softly, to stand beside her and look into the brilliant outdoors. A few sparrows hopped about the neglected garden and, as he and Lora watched, a small rabbit scuttled across the drive disappeared in a clump of bushes. Jenny's voice was no more than a whisper.

"Don't you suppose God is out there, too, even on Sundays?" he asked.
Lora looked down at him for a moment. Then she put her two hands on his shoulders and this time he did not wriggle away. "Let's go out there and see," she said. "Let's go right away and find out."

He looked at her with a mingling of fear and hope in his eyes. Then he nodded solemnly. They put on their coats and went outside without a word to anyone. Jenny wore a striped stocking cap, a red muffler and red mittens which brightened him up considerably. He had turned into a surprising dynamo of excitement and Lora tried to quiet him by making the adventure seem as natural as possible. She wanted him to have no sense of wrong-doing about this. They belonged outside on the bright day of grace that had been given them before full winter set in. She did not hold with any notion that respect to the Lord could only be shown through moping indoors.

"Where shall we go?" Jenny asked when they had left the driveway behind them.
"You choose," Lora said. "Isn't there some special place you know that you'd like to show me?"

He skipped along beside her, a bundle of nervous energy, and there was a look about him both speculative and purposeful. Already he had turned along Dogwood Lane in the direction she had taken yesterday.

"I know a place," he said. "A place up there in the woods." Halfway up the hill and around a turn in the path they came unexpectedly upon a clearing. Here sloping banks of brown grass led down to a small lake. On the far side birches graced the edge of the still water, their reflection white and pencil slim. Beyond was another opening where the path picked up again and wound uphill.

With blue sky above and the sun high and golden, the surface of the little pool had a yellow shimmer which contrasted with drab surroundings like an amethyst set down upon a brown carpet. Jenny ran to the edge of the water, studying its quiet surface with a gaze so intent that he seemed to forget her presence. The pond was an irregular oval in shape, curving to its sloping banks, and not far from where Jenny stood natural stepping stones led to a larger mound of rock that rose dry and brown well out in the water.

"What a heavenly quiet. It must be beautiful in spring when the woods are in leaf and the grass is green. It's so still and lonely and secret. A lovely place to dream."

For some reason Jenny shivered. It's awfully deep," he said. "Higher even than my father's head. But when there's a breeze the water's not like glass the way it is now. You should see it when there are little moving crinkles all across it. Mama said it looked like quicksilver then."

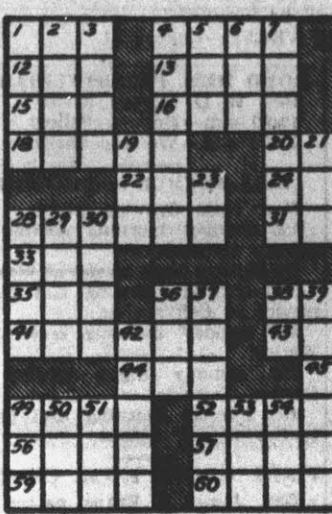

Moving quietly, with the strange tenseness upon him he edged along the left bank of the pool to where the stepping stones began his attention fixed upon the big rock.

"Sometimes turtles come out on the rocks in the sun and you can catch them. All my turtles came from here."

There was so strained a note in his voice that Lora glanced at him anxiously. Perhaps he should not come here where he had been happy with his mother. She wished she could find some way to comfort him, and knew helplessly that there was no way. Like herself, Jenny could only wait for the healing of time.
He turned suddenly toward her and she saw how pale he was and how the blue of his eyes had darkened. His lips trembled and he had

We're surprised every now and then when a black-and-white snapshot fan says color is too complicated for him. We're surprised because color pictures are as easy to take now as black-and-white shots. You should see some of the Kodak color pictures (Mr. X) got with his (box Brownie). Actually, you can take color pictures with most any camera. If you want a real thrill, let us show you some stereo color slides we made with our Kodak Stereo Camera. The depth and color are breathtaking. I can't describe them adequately; you'll have to view them yourself. And stereo color slides are as easy to take with this camera as they are gorgeous to see. Average exposure settings are marked on the camera so you can't miss. Best of all, the Kodak Stereo Camera sells for only $84.50, inc. Fed. Tax which is considerably less than you might expect for such a top-quality model.

If There's A Code, No One Appears Concerned

By CHARLES MEECE
NEW YORK (AP)—There comes from Bruce G. Bond of 7 College Ave., Arlington, Mass., a communication so literate, thorough and interesting that you pick up the phone and call Bond immediately. Bond on the telephone is as persuasive as Bond by mail.

Bond, like all of us, is of the grassroots of television viewers and radio listeners. Despite the contention of some cynics that nothing grows from the grassroots but grass, much of America listens alertly to the small voices from the roots.

Bond, an actual veteran, a statistician, a graduate of Boston University and the author of an unpublished book on political theory, has given up other pursuits to devote himself exclusively to the study of TV and radio commercials. He has formed an organization called the Society of Listeners against Commercial Emphasis, which he aptly names SOLACE. This is Bond speaking:

"SOLACE is a nonprofit society formed this summer to unite the many individual listeners whose single complaints have little or no effect into a strong demand for a return to normalcy in home entertainment. Our object is not to destroy commercialized entertainment. But to bring it under control and help it be responsive to customer demand."

"Claims that there is a code are vague and varied, compliance is voluntary, and it is honored by nonobservance. The straitjacket of government control seems less desirable in this country than the united voice of the people concerned."

The Television Code of the National Assn. of Radio and Television Broadcasters says that "in accordance with good telecast advertising practices, the time standards for advertising copy" in prime program hours run to three minutes for a 30 minute show and six minutes for a 60-minute program.

Bond contends that practically no body is observing this. Many viewers have muttered the same thing. He has come up with an impressive statistical analysis of the percentage of nonentertainment in about 40 TV shows and 40 radio shows.

Bond claims some TV shows run to 20 per cent and up of "nonentertainment" instead of the 10 per cent prescribed by the Code.

Now Bond wants viewers and listeners throughout the country to become members of SOLACE. "I'd like a basketful of reports on programs from other viewers," he says. "I'd like to check my findings against those of others and compile the studies before sending them to the proper network sources. If there are enough of us maybe we'll get somewhere."

Supreme Court Has Set Its Terms, May Not Rule Again

By JAMES MARLOW
Associated Press News Analyst
WASHINGTON (AP)—The Supreme Court may have listened for the last time to arguments about racial segregation in any place—city or state—this, is supported by public tax money, like a school beach, park, or playground.

It has already laid down the doctrine, giving its reasons at length, that this sort of segregation is unconstitutional. It may never again bother to give its reasons in ruling on any future case of this kind.

In any such case appealed to it from a lower federal court, the Supreme Court may simply say "affirmed" or "reversed," depending on whether the lower court has ruled in accordance with, or contrary to, the high court's doctrine.

An indication of this can be read into the way the Supreme Court handled a couple of segregation cases this week.

In any appeal to the high court from the ruling of a lower court, the lawyers on both sides state their arguments in writing. The nine justices of the Supreme Court get copies of these arguments.

The lawyers can't walk up before the justices and argue orally. It is only when the justices want more information than is contained in the written arguments that they ask the lawyers on both sides to appear in court and speak their piece.

In the 1890s the Supreme Court blessed segregation with a ruling which said Negroes could be kept out of public places reserves for whites provided that the Negroes, while kept separate, were given public facilities equal to those of the whites. This became known as the doctrine of "separate but equal." For half a century no later Supreme Court knocked it down.

As a result, segregation continued in public schools and other public places throughout the South and in other states. But in 1954 the present Supreme Court unanimously wiped out the "separate but equal" doctrine in the case of public schools.

That kind of segregation, the court said, was unconstitutional and must stop. But this ruling dealt with schools. Did the Supreme Court mean segregation was illegal in other public places, too? For instance, in parks and playgrounds?

Already two test cases were moving through the lower courts. Maryland had segregated public parks and beaches. Georgia had segregated public golf courses. A U.S. Court of Appeals which covers Maryland cited the Supreme Court ruling in the school case, said it applied to parks and beaches, and ordered segregation in Maryland's public parks and beaches ended.

But another U.S. Court of Appeals, one which covered Georgia, ruled that it was all right to have segregation on public golf courses.

Both cases were appealed to the Supreme Court.

The court considered the written arguments of the lawyers in both cases but called none of them to state their cases orally. It had heard long oral arguments in the school case.

The court, deciding its ruling as a first segregation in public schools applied to segregation in other public-supported places, apparently felt it neither had to listen to more oral arguments nor explain its own position further.

So, in rulings about as brief as it could make them, the high court did this:

It said the lower court was right in following the Supreme Court's lead by knocking out segregation in the Maryland case. It said the other lower court was wrong in ignoring the Supreme Court's lead and approving segregation on Georgia's golf links. That meant segregation on those golf links had to end.

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (U) — The stock market resumed its advance today with moderate gains in the early afternoon.

The market yesterday turned quite mixed after four strong sessions of recovery that sent it up to a new peak in the present drive ahead.

Prices today were up between 1 and 2 points while losses usually were fractional.

Business was modest because of the semi-holiday for Veterans Day. It hit a pace around two million shares. That compares with 2,550,000 shares traded yesterday.

Motors were especially active today and higher. Most of the steels were higher while aircrafts were unchanged to higher utilities unchanged to higher, copper mixed, chemicals mixed, railroads mostly higher, oils unchanged to higher, airlines unchanged to higher, and motion pictures mixed.

Higher stocks included Bethlehem Steel, American Telephone, Nickel Plate Railroad, General Motors, Chrysler, U.S. Rubber, Boeing, Union Carbide Interna-

Fear Hunter Is Drowning Victim

NEW BERN, N.C. (U) — Officers continued a search today for Sammy Tilghman, 22, of New Bern, believed to have drowned yesterday in the Neuse River.

Tilghman was last seen when he left his home to go duck hunting. A boat he borrowed, its motor still running, was found about noon yesterday. It contained a shotgun, an overcoat, several duck decoys, and several recently killed ducks. The gun and overcoat belonged to Tilghman.

Police believed Tilghman may have been thrown from the boat and was unable to survive because of his heavy clothing.

Pitt Man Is Looking For Mother After 31 Years

Ernest Keith Stocks, 31-year-old tenant farmer on the Grimesland highway, who was left at the Children's Home Society in Greensboro (1924) when six months old, is still looking for his mother.

Stocks, tenant on the farm of his foster parents, Mr. and Mrs. Zeno Stocks, Route 3, Greenville, said the last information he had about his mother, then Mrs. Frances H. Keith Snipes, of 1830 Statesville Ave., Charlotte, was in 1942. The Children's Home Society wrote him at that time, stating that his mother wanted to locate her son, Ernest Keith Stocks. Contact with the mother was lost after this information was sent to Stocks' foster parents.

The society in 1942 also had a letter from a John Ward of the same address in Charlotte, who stated that he was related and wanted to meet Stocks. There was no further contact.

Mr. and Mrs. Stocks reared young Stocks and he still lives on their farm. He is married and has a small boy and girl. The young man is desirous of hearing from any person who knows anything about his mother or relatives. His address is Route 3, Greenville, or he may be contacted at Rose's Store in Greenville or by phone at H. R. Sutton's Store on the Grimesland highway, near Greenville.

Hunters Buy Up All Duck Stamps; More On Way

Prospective duck hunters who haven't gotten their duck stamps are just plain out of luck—for the time being anyway.

Postmaster J. Knott Proctor said this morning that additional stamps had been requisitioned and would be put on sale "just as soon as they get here."

The post office was caught short yesterday, Proctor said, by a "terrific" number of requests for stamps by hunters planning a little Armistice Day hunting.

"We just simply sold out," Proctor said. "I was the biggest rush I've ever seen."

Proctor estimated that at least 75 or 80 persons requested the stamps yesterday. Hunters planning to hunt ducks must have the stamps in addition to their regular hunting license.

Council Kills . . .

They also called for a public hearing on a major street plan which was recently approved by the Planning Board. The hearing is to be held at the January meeting of the Council.

A claim for damage to an automobile which was said to have hit a manhole under construction was denied by the council in line with the insurance company's action on the matter.

City Manager James S. Hughes reported that the lease on a city parking lot at Second and Evans St. had expired. The property has been rented for $30 per month and the owners are now asking $50 per month, he said.

City fathers authorized Hughes to offer rental not to exceed $30 per month with the lease to be negotiated until the end of the fiscal year.

Approval for the elimination of parking on the east side of Wade St. was approved. Also approved was an amendment to the city code which would prohibit parking on Evans St., Washington, Cotanche and First, Second, Third, Fourth and Fifth from Reade to Greene from 1 a.m. to 6 a.m.

A lease for rental of a strip of airport property to the Pitt County Fair Association was tabled until further technicalities are worked out.

Robert S. Moye was appointed to the Board of Adjustments by the Council.

Dr. Hoot received his B.S. and M.D. degrees from the University of Oklahoma and did graduate work in eye, ear, nose and throat at Tulane University in New Orleans. He began his medical practice in Oklahoma City, Okla., and in 1942 entered the Army Medical Corps where he rose to the rank of Major. Dr. and Mrs. Hoot and their three children make their home at 1505 East Fifth Street in Greenville.

The new officers of the society will be inducted at the annual ladies night banquet of the organization on December 8.

Principal speaker at last night's meeting was Dr. William J. Frohbose of Rocky Mount, an urologist from the Boice-Willis Clinic. Dr. Frohbose spoke to the group on a type of kidney stones and kidney infections. His talk was illustrated with slides taken from a number of cases.

Bloodless Coup; Navy, Air Force Stay Aloof

By FRED L. STROZIER

RIO DE JANEIRO (U) — The Brazilian army, led by Gen. Henrique Teixeira Lott, ousted provisional President Carlos Coimbra D. Lus and took over the government early today.

The navy and air force refused to support the army coup and issued a joint statement pledging loyalty to Lus. A few hours later the fashionable Copacabana Beach section was rocked by cannon fire from Copacabana fort.

Witnesses said the fort's big guns were fired across the bow of a warship heading out of the harbor and that the ship turned back.

Army units took over central police headquarters and the office of the mayor, and issued an order closing all stores at noon. Other army units surrounded government buildings, the radio station, the post office and several newspaper buildings.

Lott issued a communique claiming support of the president of the Supreme Court, the presidents of both houses of Congress and most army officers in Rio de Janeiro and the interior.

Lus was rumored to have taken refuge aboard the cruiser Barroso, but other reports said he and several ministers had been arrested.

The Navy Ministry was surrounded by armed marines with field pieces spotted strategically nearby.

A heavy rain fell on the capital and the center of the city was quiet although tension was apparent.

The bloodless coup was carried out so quietly most residents of Rio de Janeiro did not even know it was happening.

A special session of Congress was called to decide who would assume the presidency. Constitutionally the post would go to Nereu Ramos vice president of the Senate.

Lus, former president of the House of Deputies, took over as temporary president only last Tuesday.

The capital went about its early morning business normally under a driving rain. A few extra military police and troops were on the streets.

Cabinet ministers, including Minister of Justice Prado Kelly, were reported under arrest.

Only last night Gen. Henrique Teixeira Lott who had been holding the lid down on army elements which wanted to prevent the inauguration of President-elect Juscelino Kubitschek, resigned as war minister in a dispute with Lus.

After resigning, Teixeira Lott went to the central army barracks of the federal district and took command.

He issued a proclamation to the nation saying a movement was being made against the temporary president because his decision in the case of a rebel whom the resigned war minister wanted to discipline for political activity.

The proclamation said the deci-son had provoked the army and injured its honor.

A special session of Congress was called for 6 a.m. EST.

Gen. Alvaro Piza de Castro, formerly chief of staff of the army under the late President Getulio Vargas, had been called out of retirement by Lus to take charge of the War Ministry.

Foes of Kubitschek consider him the political heir of Vargas who killed himself in August, 1954 after a coup by some elements of the armed forces.

But Teixeira Lott ruled out any coup to prevent the installation of Kubitschek, advocating strict compliance with constitutional processes.

He had attempted to discipline Col. Jurandyr de Biazara Mamede, a member of the staff of the Superior War School, for a speech on Nov. 1 which was interpreted as encouraging Kubitschek's foes.

But Lus rejected a request to send the colonel back to regular army duties. Lus, president of the House of Deputies, succeeded to the presidency Tuesday when President Joao Cafe Filho took an indefinite leave to recover from a heart ailment. Lus had denied he intended to shake up the cabinet to give extreme elements in the army a chance to stage a coup.

Kubitschek was elected president in last month's balloting. He and Lus, from the same home state, both belong to the social Democratic party but Lus was a member of a dissident party faction which opposed Kubitschek in the election.

Lus was chosen president of the House of Deputies early this year, defeating Kubitschek who was a candidate for the post.

Hughes and Humbert Speak Before Class

James S. Hughes, city manager of Greenville, and Dr. Walter C. Humbert, director of the Pitt County Health Department, appeared as guest speakers this week before students in the department of social studies at East Carolina College.

The two officials gave their audiences observations and analyses of city and county government gained through first-hand experience.

AYDEN — On November 3 the Jolly Doers Club of Ayden held its regular monthly meeting at the home of Mrs. Bessie Gray in Winterville. The president, Mrs. L. P. Ormond, presided. Plans were formulated for the Yuletide season. In striving to bring happiness to others, we in turn find happiness ourselves. The club purchased a Health Bond from the Pitt County Tuberculosis Association. This is a worthwhile project and we as civic club members are asking the individuals of the community to contribute to this cause when called on to do so. The club also made a contribution to a local citizen, Robert Blount, who is attending Shaw University in Raleigh.

At the end of the business session, Mrs. Gray, the hostess, served a delicious repast. The room was beautifully decorated with carnations, autumn plants and flowers. Mrs. Nina Scott Phillips thanked the hostess for her hospitality in behalf of the Jolly Doers.

The December meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. J. W. Jackson, 604 Venters St., Ayden.
