Foes Say Removal Of Price Controls Will Cost Consumers

Senate Passes Disputed Gas Bill

WASHINGTON (AP)—A bill to free natural gas producers from direct federal price controls was passed by the Senate last night 53-38 and sent to President Eisenhower.

Both backers and opponents, in the three weeks of Senate debate which preceded the vote, predicted Eisenhower would sign the bill into law.

Opponents said that would bring a sharp rise in householders' gas bills. The bill's chief Senate sponsors, conceding there might be some slight increase, said the long-term effect would be beneficial. They argued that removal of federal regulation would stimulate exploration and thus result in a more adequate supply of gas.

All efforts to change the bill were beaten down by margins similar to that on final passage. The Senate then accepted a version which the House had approved 209-203 last year in place of the one drafted by its own Commerce Committee.

That action bypassed another test in the closely divided House.

On the final Senate test, 31 Republicans and 22 Democrats voted for the bill. Opposing it were 14 Republicans and 24 Democrats. The vote came at the end of a 10 1/2-hour Senate session.

A disclosure by Sen. Francis Case (R-SD) that he had rejected a proffered $2,500 campaign contribution which he said seemed to be intended to sway him by the bill, apparently had little effect on the final tally. Case, as he had said he would do, voted against the bill.

John M. Neff of Lexington, Neb., insisted there were "no strings attached" to his offer of the money to Case.

With the bill itself out of the way Senate leaders arranged to press today for a bipartisan investigation into circumstances of the incident.

The closeness of the vote in both branches of Congress indicated that proponents probably could not muster the two-thirds majority which would be required to enact the bill over a presidential veto—but such a veto is not considered likely.

Rep. Harris (D-Ark) and Sen. Fulbright (D-Ark) the sponsors, predicted Eisenhower will sign the bill.

Proponents contended that "burdensome" regulation of natural gas prices by the Federal Power Commission discourages production and would result in scarcities in years to come. They argued too that there are no similar federal controls on competing fuels such as oil and coal.

Opponents asserted that lifting controls would mean a 600 to 800 million dollar hike in consumer gas bills and a multibillion-dollar "windfall" to big oil companies owning most of the gas.

Proponents say that consumers would be protected by a provision which would require local distributing utilities must not reflect more than a "reasonable market price" paid to producers.

The effect of the bill is to nullify a 1954 decision by the Supreme Court that the FPC had a duty to fix wellhead prices for gas sold to companies for shipment through interstate pipe lines. Previously, the commission held that the 1938 interstate pipe lines. Previously, the commission held that the 1938 Natural Gas Act did not give it such authority. A 4-1 majority of the present commission backed the legislation.

Highway Tax Bill Launched

No Compromise Stand By Sponsors; Would Finance Huge Construction Plan

WASHINGTON (AP)—A "no compromise" program calling for 12 billion dollars in new federal gasoline and other highway-use taxes was started through Congress today by House Democrats.

It would help finance a massive federal-state road construction program sought by the Eisenhower administration.

The bill would provide a 1-cent increase in the present 2-cent-a-gallon tax on gasoline and other motor fuels, a 3-cent hike in the 5-cent-a-pound levy on all automobile tires, a rise from 8 to 10 per cent in the tax on trucks, trailers and buses, and a new tax of 3 cents a pound on cambelco, or tire-tread rubber.

The measure was introduced in the House late yesterday by Rep. Boggs (D-La) after it was cleared by Spaker Reaxas and other House Democratic leaders.

The House Ways and Means Committee held hearings on the bill starting Feb. 15.

A companion bill to authorize a 5 1/2-billion-dollar highway improvement plan was introduced last week by Rep. Fallon (D-Md.). It now is before the House Public Works Committee.

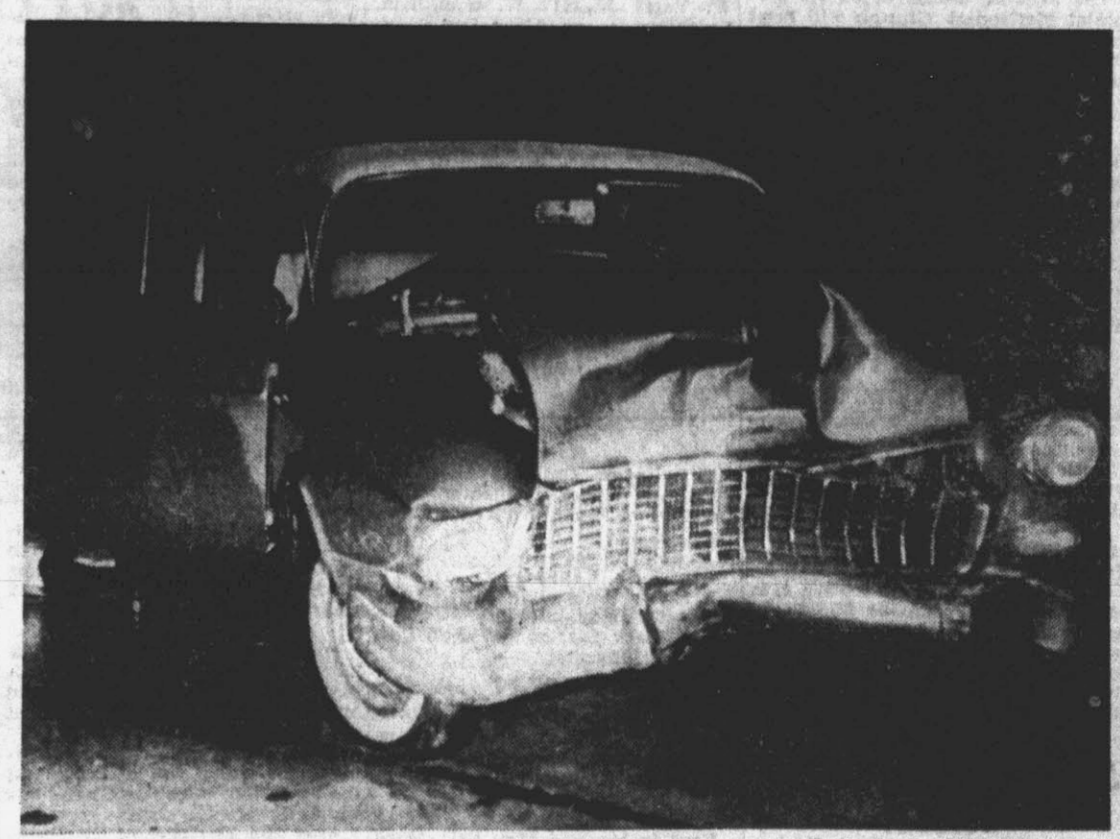

The tax-increase proposal faces an uncertain election-year reception in Congress.

Democratic leaders made it clear they do not intend to budge from their position that highway improvements should be on a pay-as-you-go basis, through road-user tax boosts.

"There is no room for bargaining or maneuvering," Boggs said. In proposing the road building plan last year, President Eisenhower recommended that the federal share be paid for out of the proceeds of a special bond issue. This plan ran into strong opposition in Congress.

A week ago, Rep. Martin of Massachusetts, the House Republican leader, came out of a White House conference with Eisenhower and told newsmen the President had decided the alternative was either to "give up the roads" or accept the Democratic financing plan. Martin said Eisenhower had chosen the latter course.

Administration View On Import, Surplus Issues

WASHINGTON (AP)—Agriculture Department officials give today the administration's view of legislation aimed at solving the surplus and import problems confronting the cotton industry.

Earl L. Butz, assistant secretary of agriculture, was at the head of a list of department officials called before a House Agriculture subcommittee.

The committee is studying a bill by Chairman Gathings (D-Ark) and Rep. Abernethy (D-Miss) which would: (1) direct the secretary of agriculture to sell surplus U.S. cotton on the world market at competitive prices; (2) impose import quotas on cotton textiles and (3) provide minimum cotton acreage quotas for small cotton growers.

This linking of producer-manufacturer interests has drawn support for the bill from both those segments of the industry. Cotton growers and textile manufacturers endorsed the bill yesterday.

"There were indications that Butz might be questioned closely as to why more surplus U.S. cotton hasn't been sold in world markets at competitive prices."

The question was discussed in one form or another by several witnesses yesterday.

Arthur M. Klurfeld of New York, executive director for the Textile Fabrics Assn., told the committee his group has been unable to get any administrative relief from permitting the free flow of cheap Japanese cotton imports.

He said, for example, that Japan sent this country 130,000 dozen blouses in 1954 and hiked this to three million dozen last year. "This," he said, "was an absolute displacement of the domestic product."

Klurfeld said the industry has been told it could seek relief under the escape clause of the tariff act but that it runs into opposition from the State Department which "will allow us no import quota because that would breach the good neighbor policy."

W. Ray Bell, president of the Assn. of Cotton Textile Merchants, New York, said, "We have been given the brush by the State Department" and asked whether this country should permit the free flow of cotton from the East to undermine the economy of our entire cotton industry."

The Gathings-Abernethy bill would set import quotas of cotton textiles at 150 per cent of the average for the years 1953-54.

He said he thought this would establish a fair base.

Democratic Leader Lyndon B. Johnson of Texas called the Senate into session an hour earlier than usual with the announced determination to shove through a resolution to authorize an inquiry by a bipartisan four-man committee headed by Hennings.

Hennings said his subcommittee, meeting today, might decide to go immediately into Case's disclosure that he had been offered a $2,500 campaign donation from John M. Neff, an attorney from Lexington, Neb.

Neff declared there were "no strings attached" to his offer. He said he resented the senator's implication that the money was designed to influence his vote in favor of a bill to free natural gas producers from direct federal price controls.

The bill favors the bill, which the Senate passed last night 53-38 and sent to President Eisenhower. Case voted against the bill.

Case read to the Senate yesterday Neff's telegram of explanation and said he never has contended that any "bribe" was intended.

Thirteen Escaped Serious Injuries

Thirteen teenagers escaped serious injury last night when the cars in which they were riding collided head-on in front of Lummie's Drive-in on N. Greene Street.

Investigating police officers C. D. Doss and J. A. Briley reported no arrests pending further investigation.

Drivers of the vehicles were listed as Floyd Preston Harris, 17, of Route 8 and Cecil Cordelle, 16, of New Bern. Damage to Harris' '56 sedan was estimated at $700 and to Cordelle's car at $500.

Passing motorists took the injured to Pitt Memorial Hospital.

None were believed seriously hurt, but at least nine were treated. They included Harris and the following passengers: Carolyn Dixon, 18, of Route 1; Patricia Allen, 16, of Route 1; Vera Windham, 18, of 2125 N. Village Drive.

Also, Robert Tingle, 18, of New Bern; Joseph Jones, 18, of New Bern; Edna Brown, 19, of 1013 W. Fourth Street; Thelma Nunn, 18, of Greenville; and Faye Taylor, 18, of 921 Evans Street.

Eight persons, Doss said, were believed traveling in one vehicle and five in the other.

Dulles Says Preservation Of Israel, Arab Amity Sought

U.S. Aims In Middle East Outlined

WASHINGTON (AP)—Secretary of State Dulles says U.S. foreign policy "embraces the preservation of the state of Israel" and maintenance of "our friendship with Israel and the Arab states."

This statement, a general American aims in the Middle East was contained in a letter Dulles wrote to 40 Republican Congress members who had joined in urging that Israel "be allowed to obtain in the open market such weapons as would assure her protection against aggression."

The letter was made public yesterday when five of these GOP lawmakers called at the State Department.

After the conference, Rep. Scott of Pennsylvania told newsmen he and his four colleagues were reassured by Dulles' letter.

Congressional pressure built up on another front yesterday as 87 Democratic House members got together on a statement urging that Israel be allowed to buy the U.S. weapons that it requested months ago.

The Democratic statement said Israel seeks 59 million dollars worth of arms "strictly for purposes of self-defense."

The Israeli request was made after Egypt completed an arms-for-cotton deal with Czechoslovakia last year. Under that deal, Egypt bought about 80 million dollars worth of Communist war gear.

Yesterday, too, Israeli Ambassador Abba Eban visited the State Department to press his country's arms bid and reportedly to argue again for a security treaty.

While not ruling out "the possibility of arms sales to Israel," Dulles said in his letter, "it is our belief that the security of states in the Near East cannot rest upon arms alone but rather on the international rule of law and upon the establishment of friendly relations among neighbors . . . "Let me say," Dulles wrote, "that the foreign policy of the United States embraces the preservation of the state of Israel. It also embraces the principle of maintaining our friendship with Israel and the Arab states . . ."

The secretary said the combined influence of the United States, Britain, France and other United Nations members "against any armed aggression" forms a "far more effective deterrent" to any potential warmaker than would an arms race.

Rivers Rising In Eastern N. C. As Result Of Rains

RALEIGH (AP)—Eastern North Carolina rivers were still rising today as a result of heavy rains yesterday following last Saturday's downpour.

However the U.S. Weather Bureau here said it expected nothing more serious than some lowland flooding on the Neuse and Cape Fear rivers.

It said the Tar River had risen sharply but was not expected to reach flood level. Flood stage for the Roanoke River, the Weather Bureau said the big Buggs Island dam was holding all the water running off in that area and could take more without the lake being filled.

At Moncure the Cape Fear had reached a depth of 17 feet this morning and a crest of 18 was expected around noon. Flood stage there is 20 feet. At Fayetteville, where the flood level is 35 feet, the river had reached 25 1/2 feet this morning and a crest of around 33 feet was forecast for Wednesday.

At Elizabethtown, where flood stage is 20 feet, the Cape Fear had exceeded its 20-foot flood stage by about 1 1/2 feet this morning and a crest of 27 feet was expected Thursday. The Weather Bureau said this depth would cause water to flow over navigation locks and might interfere with river barge traffic.

The Neuse at Neuse, where flood stage is 14 feet, had reached 14 1/2 feet this morning and a crest of 16 1/2 feet was expected tomorrow morning. At Smithfield, where the flood stage is 13 feet, the Neuse had reached a depth of 15 feet this morning and a crest of 16 1/2 feet was expected tomorrow.

Education Board Approves 'Loan'

Pitt County Board of Education yesterday decided to recommend to the County Commissioners a $40,000 loan for a school building program at Griffin.

According to a request last month by the Griffin School Committee, immediate need of the school is a physical education building estimated to cost around $85,000. The committee proposed that the board of education request a $40,000 loan from the county, with the remaining $45,000 to be requested from state bond funds.

Board members told a Negro delegation from Bethel that no money is available at the present time for the construction of a cafeteria at the school, also denied them that bids for additional classrooms and a gymnasium will be opened in March.

The board recommended that the cost of operating a cafeteria at the school be studied to determine if enough students would eat there to justify the addition of that facility.

Bobby Lane Crisp was approved as Arthur School's new principal, succeeding Joseph L. Lupton who resigned, and Florine Vaughan was accepted as third grade teacher at the Bethel Elementary School.

There will be a giant reception at the palace at which Monacs will be presented to the prince and his new princess. An official dinner, attended by representatives of 28 nations, will also be held.

Sources here said the civil ceremonies April 18 will be in the throne room of the palace, which is a huge rock jutting into the Mediterranean. Marcel Foranier, director of judicial services of Monaco and president of the Council of State, will officiate.

The religious ceremony the following day will be in the nearby Monaco Cathedral.

Train Derailed By Landslide; One Man Injured

WEST NEWTON, Pa. (AP)—A landslide rolling down from a rain-sodden hillside struck and derailed a Baltimore & Ohio Railroad passenger train moving at an estimated 45 miles an hour early today.

One car was overturned, two others tilted and three more derailed within a few feet of the surging Youghiogheny River. The diesel engine and two cars remained upright on the tracks.

Only one passenger of the more than 100 on the train required hospitalization. He was detained at McKeesport Hospital for treatment of possible back and neck injuries. The railroad said he was James S. Stern of Pittsburgh.

"There was no warning of the landslide," a B & O official said. He said normal speed for passenger trains in the area was 45 m.p.h.

Train No. 18, eastbound from Cleveland to Baltimore, was rolling through hilly country about 30 miles southeast of Pittsburgh when the accident occurred at 1:25 a.m.

Recent heavy rains apparently caused the landslide that sent tons of rock crashing down the hill, the railroad said.

Rocks slammed into the second car behind the engine with what a B & O spokesman called a "pushing force." Engineer J. E. Hinish of Pittsburgh braked the train to a stop as cars behind him rattled off the rails.

James C. Hagerty, White House press secretary, said in response to newsmen's questions that he had no information on:

1. Whether the President might announce a second-term decision before the new physical is completed.

2. How soon after the examination—if the President waits until then—there would be disclosure of his physical plans.

Shortly after the physical examination, however, he has borne up since returning Jan. 9 to what he termed "the full duty of the presidency."

A program of nuptial music was presented by Miss Mable Lewis, organist.

The bride had as her only attendant Mrs. Nancy Moore who wore a suit of blue with black accessories. The groom's father served as best man. Lighting the candles was Lewis Fleming.

The bride, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gus Rogers, is a graduate of Greenville High School.

The groom, son of Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Landing, is also a graduate of Greenville High School and is currently employed by the Du Pont Company.

Ullmann Concert Has Varied Selections For Program Tonight

Selections from the works of Brahms, Mendelssohn, Schumann, Liszt, and Chopin will be included on the program to be presented tonight at East Carolina College by Theodore Ullmann, well-known American pianist.

The concert is scheduled for 8:15 in the Wright auditorium. Ullmann will appear here under the sponsorship of the college Entertainment Committee.

As a concert artist, the pianist has played in each of the forty-eight states, and has made appearances in Canada and in Europe as well.

He received the B.S. and the M.A. degrees from Columbia University and did post-graduate work "with the highest honor" at the Juillard School of Music. As a teacher he was connected with the American University at Biarritz, France and is now a member of the Juillard teaching staff under the Hutcheson administration of this institution.

His outstanding ability as a pianist has won him more than a score of competitive awards in music. These include the McDowell Club Young Artists Contest and the $1,000 Bamberger Competition.

MacDowell Club Holds Meeting

ROBERSONVILLE—When Mrs. Robert K. Adkins was hostess to the MacDowell Music Club Friday afternoon, her home on Outerbridge Street was decorated with gladioli and early spring flowers. The Valentine motif was carried out.

After the routine business, there was a discussion of having the Grass Roots Opera give a program in Robersonville. No decision was reached and the matter was left with Miss Jeanine Taylor, chairman of opera.

Mrs. J. B. Hurley presented the hymn of the month "Prayer Is the Soul's Sincere Desire," by James Montgomery. The club then joined her in singing.

Mrs. Vance Roberson prepared a very informative program on Folk Music. She spoke of the different types and then had two songs representative of each group. Mrs. Claude T. Smith, accompanied at the piano by Mrs. Adkins, sang "I Wonder As I Wander."

Mrs. Irving Smith played the accordion and sang several selections. This was followed by Miss Jeanine Taylor who led in the singing of a group of folk songs.

Heart-shaped sandwiches, crackers, macarons, motto candy and hot chocolate were then served to thirteen ladies. Each plate contained a Valentine favor.

To avoid conflicting with the World Day of Prayer, the next meeting of the club will be at 4 o'clock. All members are urged to be present to hear the guest artist at the home of Mrs. I. L. Smith.

Lectures Set On Dead Sea Scrolls

Dr. Wallace I. Wolverton, rector of St. Paul's Episcopal Church in Greenville, will discuss "The Dead Sea Scrolls" in two lectures given before members of the East Carolina College Chapter of the American Association of University Professors.

The Dead Sea Scrolls belong to the library of a Jewish sect, or brotherhood existing from the Second Century B.C. to the Second Century A.D. Materials from the library, recently found in caves in the Dead Sea region, are judged to be of great value as contributing to an understanding of the New Testament and of the Jewish thought of the time.

Dr. Wolverton's topic on Wednesday will be "The Library of Monday, "The Life and Thought of the Essenes."

Remember, Only Handful Involved

Vandalism which resulted in an estimated $500 damage to Eppes High School is a sad commentary on the respect a very small minority of youngsters have for efforts to afford them an education.

School officials have advanced the theory that 11 and 12 year old youngsters were responsible for the destruction of school property. If that is the case, it is quite unlikely that more than half dozen youngsters took part in the vandalism. It shouldn't be difficult for school officials and police to learn the identity of the youngsters who participated in the destruction.

Editor Suggests Steps To Profit By 'Failure'

Henry Belk, veteran editor of the Goldsboro News-Argus, has come up with a proposal which is worthy of consideration not only by the citizens of Goldsboro and Wayne County, but likewise by the people of the 11 other communities which have been eliminated from the Presbyterian College competition.

Briefly the News-Argus suggests editorially there are three courses which are immediately open to those communities which sought the new four-year Presbyterian College and failed in their efforts:

1. The community can, with the funds already pledged or raised, establish a college of its own.
2. The community might turn its attention to a small near-by college which could be developed with funds similar to those which were offered to the Presbyterian College. In the case of Goldsboro, the object of such a move would be Mount Olive College, a Free Will Baptist institution located in Wayne County.
3. The community could establish its own college center which would turn to East Carolina College, N. C. State, or UNC for extension classes to be conducted in the afternoons or evening.

Those alternatives are sound propositions which any city or town formerly in the Presbyterian College competition might well consider.

As editor Belk points out, Goldsboro and other communities which were eliminated from the competition for the initial prize are now in a position to move ahead on their own. His proposal should receive consideration by leaders of all 11 of the communities which have been eliminated as possible sites for the new Presbyterian school.

Censorship Aimed At Old Childhood Friends

Maybe we grew up in the wrong generation, but we must say our youth was made brighter by reading such books as the Bobsey Twins, Tom Swift adventures, the Hardy Boys and of the adventures of Tarzan, Jack Armstrong, Don Winslow and many other heroes of children's books.

We may be backward, but it seems that Horatio Alger series which afforded many a delightful hour some years ago should still be fit for youngsters of today to read.

A rigid censorship on these and many other children's books has been instituted in South Carolina public libraries by the executive secretary of the South Carolina Library Board in Columbia.

Libraries affected by the censorship have been told explicitly they may be ineligible for state library funds if they purchase, process or circulate several thousand children's books, many of which ranked near classics for youngsters not many years ago.

The issue is for South Carolina, not North Carolina to resolve, but we would certainly be reluctant to see the practice which has started in our sister state spread to public libraries in our own state.

A library cannot possibly purchase all books supposedly written for children. Indeed, no conscientious librarian would want to buy all the books, for some of them no doubt are not in keeping with the standards of literature we'd like for our kids. Yet to deny a youngster access to the adventures of Tom Swift, the Bobsey Twins, Horatio Alger and many other well known books seems to be carrying this thing of censorship of children's books too far.

Such incidents of vandalism points up the fact that some youngsters—like some adults who set examples for them—lack proper regard for property of others.

Considered a step further, however, the situation emphasizes the fact that the vast majority of youngsters do have respect for other's property and are not inclined to engage in destructive pastimes just for kicks.

By and large school kids are inclined to take good care of public school property. We would go so far as to say that most youngsters go out of their way to try to preserve and prevent damage to school property. Most of them take pride in the appearance of not only their classrooms and equipment, but in the general appearance of the school they attend.

The unfortunate display of vandalism at Eppes High School shouldn't give a black eye to the school or its student body. A few individuals were responsible and it's our guess that the student body at the school is as anxious that the guilty parties be apprehended as are police and school officials.

Some promoters make good money organizing and conducting world cruises and shorter tours of scenic points. The North Carolina area in Mississippi, the Tidewater part of Virginia, and the Garden Clubs of North Carolina schedule special trips for interested parties.

Comes now suggestion that the newly formed Travel Council of North Carolina might co-operate with the Departments of Archives & History, Conservation & Development and others in series of planned tours of historic sites in North Carolina.

These tours could be arranged for one week or more, with provision for drop-ins and drop-outs along the route for those who could not spend the full time and who were interested in particular places. Roughly the itinerary might be something like this:

Beginning at Roanoke Island, site of the first English colony; thence to Kill Devil Hills, where the first airplane flew; to the point in Pasquotank county where the first North Carolina general assembly met; to Edenton and its environs; to Bath, first incorporated town in the state; to New Bern and Tryon's Palace at Fort Macon and Fort Fisher; to Fayetteville, and thence by Raleigh, the Bennett place at Durham, Alamance Battleground, Guilford Courthouse; Charlotte, with its number of historic places; Kings Mountain and Rutherford's mint, and on to Cherokee and points west where DeSoto and his Spaniards passed almost half a century before Sir Walter Raleigh's ships landed on Roanoke.

These are just a few of the places that might be visited and the tours could be reversed, running from west to east.

SOUND—The Southeastern Baptist Theological Seminary at Wake Forest is focusing on financial worries later, but right now it is in very happy situation.

State law requires privately operated educational institutions to be licensed by the State Board of Education before they can confer scholastic degrees. The seminary had applied for permission to grant degrees of Bachelor of Divinity and Master of Theology. A committee, headed by A. S. Brower of Durham, investigated and recommended that the privilege be extended. In his report to the full board Brower advised of these findings:

Speaking a few night ago, T. Coleman Andrews, of Richmond, Va., declared the nation's income tax rates have been raised so high that they are now "confiscatory." Andrews is a former U.S. commissioner of Internal Revenue, whose department handles all income tax payments for the Federal government. He resigned last fall to return to Richmond as board chairman of the American Fidelity and Casualty Company.

He asserted the Federal income tax was "conceived in vengeance rather than as a revenue measure," and added that the rates are applied with "shameful discrimination." Those are his words, not ours. He was several years the collector, and ought to know. Andrews said that when a man gets into the $8,000 to $10,000 tax bracket his income tax is 34 per cent and at $16,000 is 45 per cent. "The minimum is 20 percent, the maximum 91 percent, and I'd call that confiscation with a capital 'C'." He protested.

The testimony is true enough, but that affords no relief to any one. Nor is very much in sight. Only if Russia were blotted out of the picture and all war spending stopped would there be sufficient reduction to be felt appreciably, especially by those who pay the most. It is neither fair nor just to take 91 per cent of any individual's income in taxes no matter how much he may earn.

The seminary is owned and controlled by the Southern Baptist Convention with headquarters at Nashville, Tenn. It derives its whole financial support from the convention. For the fiscal year 1954 the seminary got $286,000 and spent a little more than $200,000 of which $170,000 was for instruction. The ratio of faculty members to students is unusually high.

Present enrollment is 460, with prospects of increase to 750 within a few years—after Wake Forest College vacates the premises and moves to Winston-Salem in June. The seminary is handicapped now by joint college use of facilities, but has plans for expanding when it has full use of the campus. The library is a vital part of the seminary's working tools. Brower says his committee found "they have all the money they can wisely use to buy books as needed."

Although owned by all the Baptists in the South and controlled by a board of 80 trustees from 21 states, the seminary is a North Carolina institution in which the State may take pride.

DUKE—Anybody got a good picture of the late J. B. (Buck) Duke? That item seems about as hard to find as an authentic signature of Buxton Gimmet, Georgia signer of the Declaration of Independence.

Lewis P. Watson, Raleigh commercial photographer, was commissioned to do a job for Duke University. The job requires a good portrait photo of the benefactor industrialist who built tobacco and electric power empires, and endowed the university. Watson thought that would be the easiest part of the assignment and when he got ready for it he went to the Duke University library. No good picture. He checked the " morgues " at the hall of history and newspaper offices at Charlotte, Durham and Raleigh. No good pictures.

Then he called on the public relations section of Duke Power Company. Same result. Maybe they can get one from New York, but he doesn't like to do it. He is coming. There are good pictures of old man Washington Duke, dozens of Ben and Angier, and a whole rack full of Doris, and other members of the tribe. Not one of the big chief of the tribe, except a negative and a photo which obviously is a retouched reproduction of an original. Watson will not do justice to the subject or to his reputation as a photographer.

Has anybody got a good picture of Buck Duke?

Other Editors Are Saying ... A Collector Testifies

(Henderson Dispatch)
At this time of the year when so many minds are focusing upon taxes—Federal, State and local—it isn't out of place to take a brief look at the tax structure. And the witness to be put on the stand is one who knows both the inside and outside of the process.

Speaking a few night ago, T. Coleman Andrews, of Richmond, Va., declared the nation's income tax rates have been raised so high that they are now "confiscatory." Andrews is a former U.S. commissioner of Internal Revenue, whose department handles all income tax payments for the Federal government. He resigned last fall to return to Richmond as board chairman of the American Fidelity and Casualty Company.

The heavy burden is siphoning off investment and venture capital to such an extent that little is left for expansion of business activity, thus forcing industry, both large and small to sell stock or go into heavy debt if it is to grow. But so long as the government spends in the manner it is doing at the present time just so long will high taxes be inescapable. To argue that it is all necessary is beside the point. The evidence is to the contrary. Waste and pyramiding of appropriations provide the answer. The mystery is that Congress is willing to assume an attitude of impotency in the face of arrogant bureaucracy and to permit these conditions to persist.

The former collector's testimony about the tax structure is both authoritative and convincing. But his is as a voice crying in the wilderness, with only an echo in reply. There is an element of stupidity in the American people in tolerating conditions as they exist.

Calendar For The Idle Rich

On January 31 I thought, "It's a good thing this month has passed away."
It's not that I like to grow older, but all during January, ever since we got a new 1956 calendar for the news room, and placed it above my desk, my eyes and mind have been wandering to a beautiful picture imprinted there.

Florida calls the winter vacation. How I envy those fortunate winter vacationers. And how I dislike all those gay sunbathers rolling in the luxury of that warm tropical climate while I have to run around way up here in North Carolina with my nose and toes freezing all the time.

Notebook On Life

Mencken's Place In The Sun

By HAL BOYLE
NEW YORK (AP)—Curbstone comments of a Fawcett Platow: "I do not believe in immortality and have no desire for it," once wrote H. L. Mencken, who died last week. "The belief in it issues from the puerile egos of inferior men."
At another time he expressed himself thus: "Life is pleasant and I have enjoyed it, but I have no yearning to climb up the universe after it is over."
There are many alive today who do not share Mencken's views on immortality, but who are perhaps glad he no longer is here to "clutter up the universe."

The tendency to write Mencken off as a faded showman began many years before his death. Those who prize orthodox ways like to low-rate the unorthodox man by calling him a showoff. They do this because they fear him. He disturbs the pattern of their snug world.

Mencken truly belonged in the company of "the great questioners" such as Jonathan Swift, Voltaire, Samuel Butler, Thomas Hardy, Mark Twain and George Bernard Shaw. These are men who looked behind the easy bespectacled mask of the hard answers.

Strength for the Day

By EARL L. DOUGLASS
TO READ some religious books today, one would get the idea that the chief aim of Christian faith is to give people peace of mind. This is not true, and the quicker we learn it, the deeper and more significant peace of mind we shall have.

Let us try to put ourselves into the line of God's will, and the matter of our peace of mind will take care of itself. But if what we are doing is to get peace of mind, the chances are that we will encounter disappointment and come home with empty hands and empty hearts.

What other writer of the 20th Century did more to put the stamp of the world acceptability on an emerging new language—the American language?

Pre-Convention Struggle Grows Bitter

By RAY TUCKER
WASHINGTON—The fight for the Democratic Presidential nomination has suddenly become such a fratricidal affair that it stuns even the participants. Whereas it had been expected that Adlai E. Stevenson would be nominated harmoniously on the first roll-call, the is now no assurance of such a result. And the factor behind this uncertainty is the state of President Eisenhower's health.

When Stevenson announced his candidacy only a few days after Ike was stricken, he appeared to have a clear field. He had the implied support of many prominent Democrats. These included Governor Averell Harriman of New York, Governor G. Mennen Stevenson of Michigan, Harry S. Truman and the New Deal faction, headed by Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, Senator Herbert H. Lehman, Mayor Robert F. Wagner, etc.

POSSUM STRATEGY As yet, Harriman and Williams have no plans to enter primaries, although each will probably go to Chicago as "favor" sons of New York and Michigan's large delegations. Their possum strategy is to lie back at Albany and Lansing in the hope that Kefauver may wound Stevenson mortally in upcoming primaries. Meanwhile, in messages and speeches, the Governors pitch their appeals to liberals, labor, racial elements and independents generally.

Business Mergers Unabated

By ELMER ROESSNER
Mergers of American companies continue unabated. There have been so many since the first of the year that some Congressmen are renewing efforts for legislation to discourage them.
A proposal getting serious consideration is to require corporations to notify the Attorney General 30 days in advance of merger.

This would put corporate weddings on a basis similar to boy-girl weddings. Just as most states require a waiting period before a marriage license is issued, so would the Federal government require a waiting period. During this time the Attorney General could test the red ink in the corporate blood streams.

MERGERS ALMOST MANDA TORY
Important reasons for mergers are the high rate of corporate profits and the tax laws.
Because corporations' profits are at record rates, most executives are seeking ways to conserve them. And, Federal tax laws provide a neat method of merging with a corporation that has a record of losses. Then as much of the current profits as can be charged against past losses are tax free.

The February issue of Mill & Factory reports on a survey of 204 corporations. Of these, 15 per cent participated in mergers in the last year. Another 10 per cent of these mergers was prompted by desire to cut taxes and administration costs, and one in 12 was prompted by hope for capital gains.
Under certain circumstances, executives who do not take steps to merge can lose money for their companies, lose their own jobs and even risk suits for damages by stockholders.

JUST FOR EXAMPLE
The hypothetical Widget Corp. isn't doing well and his run up losses of a million dollars in the last few years. But Nonsuch Widgets, Inc. is doing well and expects to make a million this year.
If things continue as they are, Hypothetical will go broke and the stockholders will get nothing. Nonsuch will make a million and pay about half of it in corporate income taxes. But they merge. The tax laws do not say "You gotta merge but they do" (translated from the legalese). "If you don't merge you lose half a million dollars!"

SOME NEWSY CLUES TO BUSINESS TRENDS
Production of "prepared" frozen foods increased 37 per cent from 1954 to 1955, the Department of Agriculture says. "Prepared" foods have had at least one more minute executed in the kitchen, ranging from blending to cooking. If the American Can Co. has its figures right, U.S. manufacturers turned out their 50 billion beer cans in one week last year. The office of tomorrow will consist of a fleet of machines attended by three or four persons doing all the paperwork projects of Hugh Coughlin, head of the Office Employees International Union. He expects there will be jobs waiting for those displaced by screws and cams.

QUIET MOVEMENT FOR DARK HORSE As a result of these maneuvers, the Democratic dark horse appears to have been thrown wide open. It has sparked a quiet movement in behalf of Senator Stuart Symington of Missouri as a possible dark horse. It has led some Stevenson strategists to propose a tie-up with Kefauver in which the latter would run for V.P. on a ticket headed by Stevenson.
The Southern delegations will not accept Harriman or Williams because of their views on racial, economic and social questions. They are far too New Dealish for conservative Democrats. So, if the two can block Stevenson, it will be to the advantage of some late-comer like Symington rather than to them. Both major Parties will middle-of-the-road this year.

Sen. Case Set Off Time Bomb In Gas Bill Fight

By JAMES MARLOW
Associated Press News Analyst
WASHINGTON (AP)—That was a time bomb Sen. Francis Case (R-SD) set off. It was only a matter of time before there was an explosion if the Senate battle over the gas bill lasted long enough. It lasted three weeks.

A handful of Democrats and Republicans had complained the oil and gas industry was using enormous pressure to get senators to vote for this bill—as a majority did last night—to take direct federal controls off natural gas producers' prices. On the other hand, backers said there was heavy pressure from distributing utilities.

None of them said he had been offered money—until Case got up. Sen. Hennings (D-Mo) a week ago demanded a Senate investigation of the "giant oil companies." The rest of the Senate showed little interest.

Then Case, a South Dakota Republican told the Senate Friday that a lawyer he had never met—but who he believed wanted the gas bill passed—gave a friend $2,500 for Case's re-election campaign. Case said he ordered it returned.

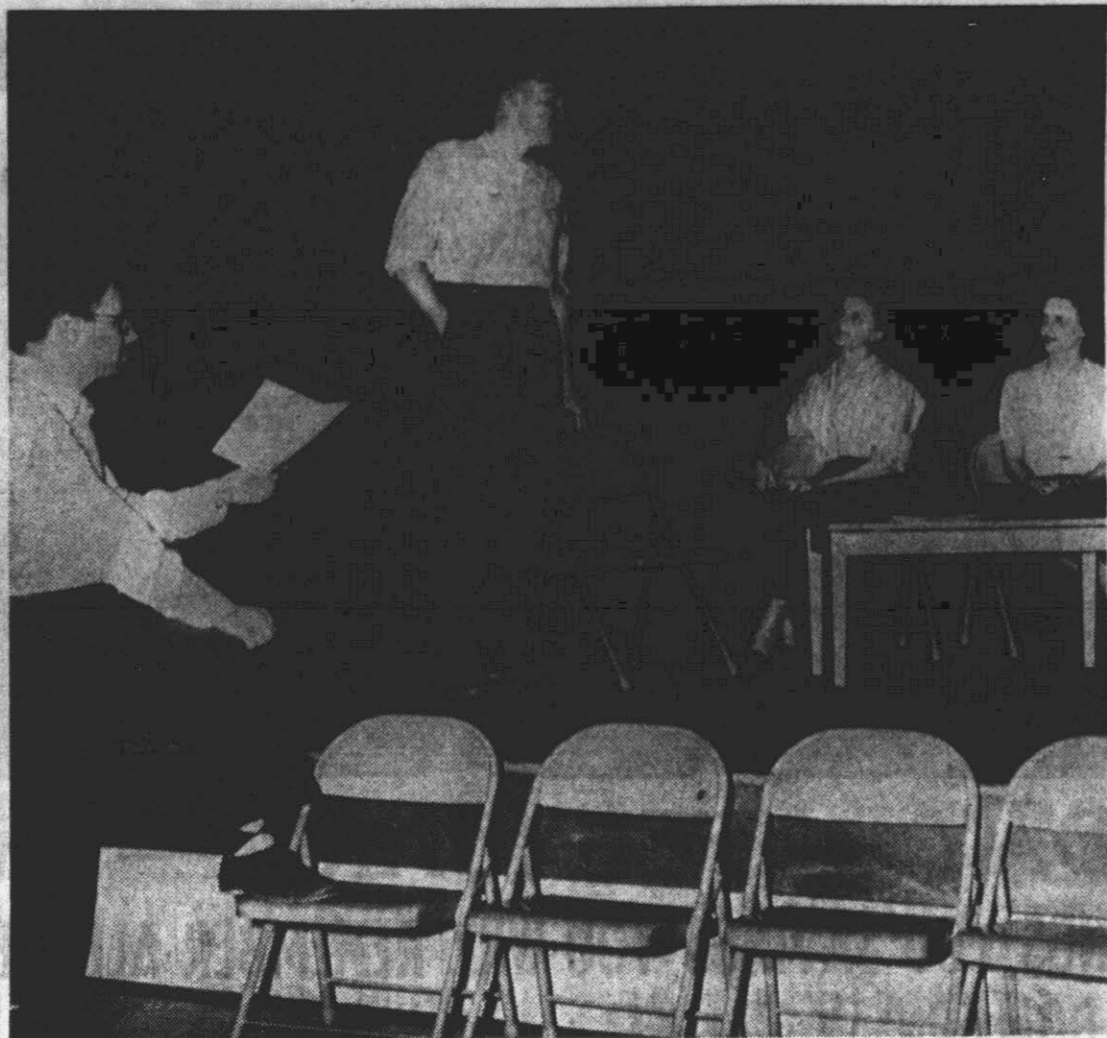

Yesterday John M. Neff, a Nebraska lawyer who registered in his state last year as a lobbyist for the Superior Oil Co. of Austin, Tex., identified himself as the giver of the $2,500. He said it was for Case's campaign, but no strings attached.

It seems certain there will be a Senate investigation. It isn't clear whether the investigation will be limited to the Case matter or make a broader sweep.

During the three weeks' debate: Sen. Douglas (D-Ill), leader of the bill's opponents, said the "big producers" had put such pressure on the Federal Power Commission (which was supposed to regulate producers' prices) that a "majority of the commission has chosen to play it safe."

Sen. McNamara (D-Mich) said the "million dollar lobby of the oil industry" had pressured all his

Parents Will Give Play For PTA Program

PARENTS GIVE PLAY—Not students, but parents will present a play at the regular Parent-Teacher Association meeting at Elmhurst School Thursday night. The play, "Random Target" by Nora Stirling, concerns the problem "How strict should parents be with children?" A discussion period will follow. friends and "they use money . . . and techniques fair and foul . . . They . . . besmirch individuals . . . who oppose this bill."

Sen. Potter (R-Mich) said in his eight years in Congress he had never seen such pressure to vote for a bill. He told this writer: "Practically every personal and political friend I ever had was contacted to get me to vote for the bill. It's amazing."

Sen. Fulbright (D-Ark), author of the bill, said this wasn't a one-way street, that the utility companies—whose profits might suffer if the producers could charge more for their gas—had set up a well-financed lobby to defeat the bill.

Hennings made this charge: "The larger American oil companies . . . act in the field of American politics with the hidden power of their vast wealth through both the Democratic and Republican parties. I believe an investigation of these giant oil companies is long overdue."

Yesterday Hennings said a Senate subcommittee he had set up to look into the "Case matter and every other damn matter in connection with it and get at the big boys if we can." The Senate may also set up a special committee to investigate what Case said.

Local Farmers Plant Wildlife Border Strips

Pitt County Negro Farm Agent J. M. Goode reported today that the following farmers have planted Wildlife Border Strips on their farms in support of the North Carolina Wildlife Resources Commission's game conservation program:

Charlie Mills of the Haddock community; Edison Cannon, Gardenersville community; Fred Midgette, Warren Chapel; Matthew Gardner, St. John community; Arthur Council, Sallie Branch section, and Nelson Hopkins of the Greenville community.

In addition to establishing wildlife border strips, Hopkins, Midgette and Cannon made several Multiflora Rose plantings along their homesteads. They planned this with a view to developing a fence for livestock and a shelter for wildlife. Goode said each of the farmers planted 1,000 Bicolor seedling in five rows, 300 feet long, and three feet apart. A strip five feet wide extending the length of the Bicolor strip will be planted to Sericea Lespedeza. The farm agent explained that the Bicolor seedlings give many advantages to farmers, "but this year our farmers appear to be more interested in providing reliable sources of food for rabbits, quail and other birds that are beneficial to landowners," he stated.

"The Wildlife Border Strips should reach maturity in two years. The Multiflora Rose plantings should provide a living fence in about four years for cattle and safety areas for birds and other wildlife," Goode stated.

LOS ANGELES (AP)—The bazooka-blowing Bob Burns left his $500,000 estate to his widow Mrs. Harriet Burns. His will drawn in 1950, was filed for probate yesterday. The 65-year-old comedian died last Thursday after a three-year illness.

Chimborazo, the volcanic mountain in the Andes of Ecuador, is only 100 miles south of the equator yet is permanently snow-covered because of its great height (20,702 feet) above sea level.

 "EASTERN CAROLINA'S SHOPPING CENTER"

Dukes In Homestretch, Way Fraught With Danger

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
The Duke Blue Devils can do their cause in the Atlantic Coast Conference basketball chase a lot of good tonight if they can get by Maryland at College Park.

The Dukes, holding down first place in the ACC and eighth place in the national rankings, are entering the home stretch, but it's fraught with dangers.

Duke plays host to Virginia, the seventh-place ACC team, Thursday night and then the Blue Devils start knocking heads with the class of the conference.

They run into Wake Forest, N. C. State and the University of North Carolina in the last three league games on their schedule. N. C. State is the No. 4 team in the nation Carolina is in 12th spot now and Wake Forest is the ACC's giant killer.

Wins tonight and Thursday would run the Blue Devils to 9-1 in conference play, about as comfortable a lead as anybody has amassed in the rugged loop competition this year. Second-place North Carolina is 8-2 now, but the classy Tar Heels don't see action until Saturday night.

Blue Devil Coach Harold Bradley apparently has found the man to fill the big gap left by the departure of Jack Kalbfous, who fell prey to scholastic troubles.

Bradley says he'll start Bobby Joe Harris tonight against Maryland on the stretch of the sophomore guard's brilliant showing against North Carolina this week.

Harris led a second-half Duke rally that pulled the Blue Devils from a six-point deficit to a 64-59 win. Harris potted six field goals in the second half drive that jumped Duke to the top of the ACC heap.

The Blue Devils, as always will feature the two-pronged scoring attack of Ronnie Mayer (with a 20.7 average) and Joe Belmont (18.4).

The Dukes conquered Maryland 76-62 in their first meeting this year, but Bradley isn't writing off the Tarps as easy victims. Maryland has a 5-4 record in conference play this year, which is a respectable set of figures for this power-laden loop.

The Tarps' deliberate, slow and easy attack may pose a problem for the Dukes, who like their cage action fast.

N. C. State, the fourth place team in the ACC, gets a chance to tie Wake Forest for third place tonight when the Wolfpack takes on Virginia at Charlottesville.

The Pack rapped the Cavaliers 99-54 in their last meeting.

North Carolina steps outside the conference to meet William and Mary at Chapel Hill tonight.

Clemson's high-scoring Tigers set a new school record for points scored in one game last night when they trounced The Citadel 114-69. Clemson's star senior guard Bill Yarborough showed the way with 28 points.

Wake Forest, downed Richmond's Spiders 81-73 in a game played at Portsmouth, Va. The five Deacon starters hit in double figures, topped by center Jim Gile's 19 points.

In North State Conference action last night Atlantic Christian College gained an early lead and downed Appalachian State 95-75. Kim Buchanan and Bill Widgeon, who scored 50 points between them, led the ACC assault.

Wofford of South Carolina's Little Four whipped North State's Catawba 93-59.

Stranglehold For Dons In Cage Poll

By NICK ELLENA
The Associated Press
The San Francisco Dons go after their 43rd straight victory tonight with a solid vote of confidence from the nation's sports writers and broadcasters as the No. 1 college basketball team in the land.

For the ninth straight week, the Dons topped the Associated Press poll and their stranglehold on the No. 1 spot at least until the end of the regular season seems secure. Lightly regarded College of the Pacific hardly figures to extend the defending NCAA champs tonight.

Victories over two Loyolas, California and Illinois in the past week solidified Dayton's runner-up spot. The Flyers hold a sizable lead over the third-place Vanderbilt.

The only changes in the select 10 saw Kentucky move up a notch from eighth place by virtue of victories over Auburn and Duke. Temple dropped from seventh to ninth after suffering its first defeat of the season, 67-66, at the hands of Muhlenberg. Duke vaulted from 10th to eighth after turning back North Carolina, and Alabama moved into 10th after downing Georgia Tech. North Carolina dropped out of the top 10.

San Francisco amassed 1,166 points, on the basis of 10 for a first-place vote, 9 for second, etc. The Dons received 74 votes for first.

The only other undefeated major college team, St. Francis of Brooklyn got only 16th place in the voting.

The leaders, with first-place votes in parentheses:

1. San Francisco (74) 1,166
2. Dayton (5) 856
3. Vanderbilt (5) 755
4. N. C. State (4) 745
5. Louisville (12) 709
6. Illinois (3) 567
7. Kentucky 370
8. Duke (1) 255

Bucs Warm Up For Big Week On Hardwood

By BRUCE PHILLIPS
East Carolina's cagers are hard at work for a big week of hardwood warfare. Two North State Conference games, whose outcomes could mean a lot in the standings, are on tap.

Wednesday night Coach Howard Porter's league leaders tangle with Catawba's pesky Indians in Salisbury and Saturday night the Bucs are in Burlington for the all-important Elon game.

Catawba gave East Carolina one of its toughest games in Greenville. Some even say the Pirates were lucky to win. Which they did on a last second tip-in by Nick Nichols.

The score of that one was 69-68.

Except for the final seconds, East Carolina was always behind and it looked like the Bucs first home game would go down the drain.

Improved Club
Catawba has improved a great deal since that game back in December. Just last week Coach Earl Ruth's Tribe toppled Davidson and Appalachian.

The Elon game is the one on which all eyes will be focused, however. For this is the battle between the powers in the league. Should ECC win, it will have the regular season championship tucked away. But if the Christians upset the locals, they still have to get past Lenoir Rhyne in Hickory to gain a tie.

Lenoir Rhyne whipped the Christians on the latter's own court a few weeks ago and will be heavily favored to repeat in Hickory. East Carolina has already turned the tide on the Bears there.

Porter and assistant coach Earl Smith had the Pirates engaged in a lengthy scrimmage yesterday. Porter knows his team will have to be an excellent shape for the road games and is preparing accordingly.

Harris, Thomas Lead
Don Harris and J. C. Thomas continue to be the big men in the Bucs' scoring parade. Harris, the league's No. 4 scorer, has dumped 348 points in 19 games for an 18.3 average.

Belvoir Takes 2 Against Grifton

Grifton's second-ranked girls' team suffered a 55-42 defeat last night to the third-place Belvoir cagers in a battle that saw Dawn Smith cop scoring honors for the losers. She had 25 markers.

In the boys contest, Belvoir won again, this time racking up a 56-36 margin. Harris for the winners was high man with 14 tallies.

Winterville Bows Twice To Maury

Maury high school dropped the Winterville boys' and girls' teams last night in a clean sweep non-conference affair.

F. Wade led the Maury girls to a 16-30 win in the first contest.

Roger Mazing and Bobby Nethercutt combined to smash down the Winterville boys by a slight 73-70 score in a tight second game. Mazing collected 23 and Nethercutt got 21, but both honors for the night went to Winterville's Jack Sawyer, who dumped in 26.

Eppes Host To Kinston Visitors

Eppes' high school's Bulldog cagers play host to Kinston tonight in the Eppes' gymnasium, as the two teams meet for the first time this season.

Coach A. E. Murrell's 1955 edition of the Bulldogs has racked up a total of four wins in league play, while dropping three. The rugged Kinston quintet, boasting height, speed and a high-scoring forward, will invade the Eppes' gym with the odds in their favor by several points.

Throughout the season, Coach Murrell's crew has been a dangerous threat to every opponent. The accurate jump shooting of Richard Armfield has kept the Bulldogs in conference contention for the title, and has added total strength to the team.

Another of the Eppes' hoopsters, Freddy Outerbridge, has been recognized as one of the top defensive men in the league and is also a frequent high-scorer. Other starters for tonight's match are James Brewington, Rudy Streeter and John Edwards.

Coach J. W. Grimes will send his Junior varsity charges against the Kinston Jayvees at 7:30 to get the night's action underway and the varsity contest will follow.

Virginia Lining Up 'All Navy' Coaching Staff

ANNAPOLIS, Md.—The University of Virginia appeared to be in line today for almost an all-Navy football coaching staff, at the expense of Eddie Erdelatz. Navy head coach who last week signed a new 5-year contract.

A reliable report going around this Naval Academy town today was that two of Erdelatz's veteran assistants, Len Eschmont and Dick Duden, are about to join Ben Martin, a former Erdelatz assistant who last Saturday was named head football coach at Virginia.

Virginia officials would neither confirm nor deny the reports although it's known that both have been sought by Martin.

If they go, Erdelatz will be left with only two varsity assistants, Ernie Jorge and Wayne Hardin, both of whom came to Navy last season.

They were brought in after Martin quit coaching — temporarily it turned out — after the 1954 season, and Homer Hobbs went to Furman as head coach.

Sime In Special Exhibition Run

DURHAM—Dave Sime, Duke University's new-found track whiz, will run in a special exhibition during halftime of the Duke-Virginia basketball game here Thursday night.

It will be Sime's first appearance here since he flashed into national prominence by setting one record and equalling another in dash events in the Evening Star games in Washington.

Sime's competition in a 50-yard dash will be Bobby Honeycutt of Durham, a teammate of Sime's on last year's freshman track team.

Mansure Resigning As General Services Chief

By FRED S. HOFFMAN
WASHINGTON (AP)—Edmund F. Mansure has quit as general services chief in the midst of congressional and administration investigations of his official conduct.

Mansure's resignation—effective on or about next Friday—was announced by the White House late yesterday.

To replace Mansure, President Eisenhower appointed Franklin G. Floete as acting general services administrator pending Floete's formal nomination to head the government's vast housekeeping operations.

The 66-year-old Floete, a resident of Des Moines, Iowa, now is assistant secretary of defense in charge of properties and installations.

An exchange of Mansure and Eisenhower letters made public by the White House, made no mention of charges that Mansure had recommended a Chicago Republican leader for insurance brokerage business in connection with a 43-million-dollar government nickel plant expansion project in Cuba.

Mansure has denied these charges in testimony before a House Government Operations subcommittee. After the House investigation started, Eisenhower asked for a special report on Mansure's role in the case.

In his resignation letter—signed "Ed"—Mansure told Eisenhower he was impelled by "personal obligations" to return to private life. Before becoming GSA chief 33 months ago, Mansure, 54, was a manufacturing executive in Chicago.

The President's reply—addressed to "Mr. Mansure"—said Eisenhower respects "the reasons you have given" for wanting to leave government service. Eisenhower thanked Mansure for the 400 million dollars in savings and for improvements the outgoing GSA head claimed to have made during his tenure.

James C. Hagerly, White House press secretary, said in response to questions that Eisenhower did not ask for Mansure's resignation. A GSA spokesman described Mansure's departure as "voluntary."

Hagerly also said, when asked that the administration's check on Mansure and the nickel project allegations still is in progress, Hagerly said a report has not yet been drafted.

Rep. Jack Brooks (D-Tex.), chairman of the investigating subcommittee, said Mansure's resignation came "as no surprise to me." He added a hope that "this will result in a more efficient and economical administration at GSA."

The Brooks subcommittee has announced plans to reopen hearings on what its chairman said were "basic conflicts" in testimony about whether Mansure did, or did not, steer insurance brokerage business to William J. Balmer, Mansure's Chicago friend.

In previous hearings, Randall Cremer, supervising engineer of the nickel expansion project at Nicaro, testified that Mansure had suggested Balmer for the brokerage. But Balmer backed up Mansure's denial, telling the subcommittee he landed the account on his own.

ST. LOUIS (AP)—Former President Truman says he won't be a delegate to the Democratic National Convention this year because he feels someone else should have the honor.

Postpone Action On Evangelistic Effort

Greenville ministers have postponed until March final action on plans for a united evangelistic campaign here this spring.

Dr. James T. Johnson who has been invited to conduct the campaign, met yesterday with the Greenville Ministerial Association to discuss the date for the services but action was postponed since only seven ministers were present for the session. Absences were attributed to the inclement weather.

Dr. Johnson expressed the desire for a unanimous confirmation of dates by the local ministers.

Plans had originally called for sponsoring the campaign in early May, but it was found that Wright auditorium at the college, which was selected as a suitable place to hold the services, would not be available until May 20.

The services must now be postponed until that date or possibly until later in the year.

The ministers held their meeting at the Sycamore Hill Baptist Church, and later had a joint meeting with the Greenville Ministerial Alliance.

Theme for the luncheon session was "What Is Most Needed in the Christian Church Today?"

Speakers were the Rev. P.H. Munford of York Memorial A.M.E. Zion Church and Professor W.C. Chance of Parale.

He invited all Birmingham citizens during National Nothing Week "to participate in nothing but full and complete enjoyment" of a week free of discord.

New Walks And Drives For ECC

Sidewalks and driveways connecting recently completed buildings at East Carolina College with other buildings, walks, and drives are now under construction. The cost of the new projects will be approximately $18,000, according to Vice President F.D. Duncan.

Plans for the improvements to campus facilities were prepared by Rivers and Rivers, Engineers, of Greenville. Contracts for the work were awarded to the White Construction Company of Greenville.

A paved walk and service drive is now being constructed between Umstead and Slay Halls, dormitories for men students. A new walk will extend from Slay Hall through the woods to the north of the building, passing near the Y Hu, and extending to the Joyner Library and the college cafeterias.

A new drive, including parking areas will extend back of Wilson and Garrett Halls, dormitories for women. Walks will be constructed on all four sides of Garrett Hall, newest dormitory on the campus.

SNUG AND SECURE inside the Army Chemical Corp's model of the "Infant Protector" is six-month-old Chris Schimmel, son of Mr. and Mrs. Clyde B. Schimmel of Battle Creek, Mich. The "Protector," which takes only two minutes to set up or disassemble, folds into a flat package 38 x 24 x 6 inches. The heavy-duty experimental model shown here weighs 16 pounds, but the Chemical Corps, with FCDA funds, hopes to design a lighter moderately priced version. (FCDA Photo)

In addition, a large living room, three bedrooms and two bathrooms are arranged for excellent circulation. A broad white roof with wide over-hanging eaves stretches from a fenced-in patio on one side over carport on the other side. This is plan H-4-AP by Charles E. Armstrong, 1013 1/2 University Dr., Fort Worth, Texas. The house covers 1,455 square feet. Carport adds 519 square feet and porch, patio and terrace 636 square feet.

Merger Appears To Be Holding Up

By NORMAN WALKER
MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP)—The AFL-CIO merger, although only two months old, is taking a good bet to weather certain storms ahead.

A pile of differences faced the AFL-CIO Executive Council at winter sessions here, but nobody seemed too worried they would torpedo the recent merger.

George Meany, AFL-CIO president, is riding hard on the scabbles among union leaders. He apparently is determined to avoid letting conflicts develop into issues that could divide the new 15-million-member union group.

Walter Reuther, who heads the big auto workers union, and was former chief of the CIO, is bearing in the Florida sunshine with one-time rival AFL chiefs without, so far at least, pressing several quarrels in which he is involved.

One concern is the federal aid to education plan being supported by the Eisenhower administration, calling for an outlay of 25 million dollars in each of the next five years to help build new school buildings.

Both Meany and Reuther want such federal aid—in fact both want considerably more money—but have split over an amendment proposed by Rep. Powell (D-N.Y.) to ban such aid to segregated school districts.

Here again both are against racial segregation in schools but Meany thinks the Powell rider would wreck chances of the education aid plan clearing Congress and Reuther insists upon advance safeguards that no money could be spent on segregated schools.

Reuther and his Detroit labor leader rival, James E. Hoffa, vice president of the teamsters union, also are at odds over work jurisdiction in nonproduction phases of the auto industry.

Six Certified Distributors Of Eggs In County

RALEIGH—More than 420 persons or firms in North Carolina have been issued certificates authorizing them to sell or distribute eggs under the North Carolina Egg Law enacted in 1955.

Included in this number are the following in Pitt County: C. E. Carrawan of Greenville; Pitt POC Service, Greenville; Collins Grocery Co., Greenville; Pitt Poultry Company, Greenville; Ross Sausage Company, Ayden, and Swift and Company of Greenville.

The Egg Law is aimed at protecting North Carolina producers against unfair competition, and consumers against mislabeling as to quality and size of eggs.

Ralph Kelly, poultry marketing specialist with the State Department of Agriculture, advises all persons except producers and retailers, who are distributing eggs within the state and who have not applied for a certificate, to do so at once. They are issued free of charge.

Claims Her Land Taken For Road

DURHAM (AP)—A Norfolk Va. woman has accused the governor of North Carolina and the N.C. Democratic national committee of using their high political standing to relocate a private road near the Howard Johnson restaurant here.

A suit brought by Mrs. Eva Perry asks Durham Superior Court to declare that part of a driveway to the restaurant is on her land. Named as defendants in the suit are Jorges, Inc., and B. Everett Jordan and Luther H. Hodges, identified as officers, directors and stockholders of the corporation.

Hodges is the governor of the state and Jordan is Democratic national committeeman.

The complaint alleges that Jordan and Hodges "by virtue of their high political standing" had equipment belonging to the State Highway and Public Works Commission relocate a private road between Mrs. Perry's land and the restaurant.

The suit also says that the equipment devastated several thousand feet of standing timber. Mrs. Perry said that she never gave permission for the commissions to go upon her lands.

The suit said that the defendants took for use as a road in establishing the restaurant a strip of Mrs. Perry's land 30 by 153 feet.

The action says that the defendants' claim to the land in question "is a cloud upon the plaintiff's title."

enjoyed it more. Personally, Mencken was one of the kindest of souls. He held out a cheerful helping hand to hundreds of young writers, and didn't expect or look for gratitude. I know this; I was one of them.

But he loved human liberty and he could sympathize with every form of human frailty except pretense and stuffed-shirtism. In his death freedom lost one of its most ardent swordsmen and pomposity its bitterest foe.

Mencken be forgotten? Even though the 25 volumes he wrote should sink into oblivion with his ashes, one sentence alone should guarantee his immortality.

As long as men love kindness, understanding and a sense of humor, they cannot forget the man who penned this as his whimsical epitaph:

"If, after I depart this vale, you ever remember me and have thoughts to please my ghost, forgive some sinner and wink your eye at some homely girl."

What critic of Mencken has ever written a line that shows so warm a feeling for humanity—not as it should be but as it is?

Sermon Had A Startling Start

BOSTON (AP)—An oil burner explosion filled the All Saints Episcopal Church with soot and smoke just as the Rev. G. Paul Musselman of New York was preparing to deliver a sermon on the devil.

There was no panic and no injuries. After a 15-minute delay, while the church was cleared of smoke the service resumed. Commented the Rev. Mr. Musselman:

"This is a very startling start for the service tonight. Maybe the Devil had heard about the topic for the sermon."

Britain May Have Executed Last Murderer At Gallows

By EDWIN SHANKE
LONDON (AP)—Britain may have executed her last murderer. For almost six months Albert Pierrepoint, public hangman and mild-mannered keeper of a Lancashire pub, has been on an unscheduled vacation. Not once during that period has he sprung the trap on a condemned man. And in that period the home secretary, who makes the final decision on appeals for clemency, has reviewed nine convicted murderers. Now there is public agitation to make the "hangman's holiday" permanent. "Ban hanging" rallies are being held up and down the country. Newspapers are demanding a quick decision by Parliament to settle the controversy before the next murderer faces the gallows. The government is expected to schedule a House of Commons debate on abolition—or at least a test suspension—of capital punishment soon after Prime Minister Eden returns from Washington Thursday. Political observers give an antihanging bill a "fair chance" of passing. The latest drive against capital punishment was sparked by the hanging of Ruth Ellis for the shooting of her lover last year. There was a general outcry. Many people felt there were so many extenuating circumstances that the blonde night club hostess should have been spared the hangman's noose. More recently, the case of "the three falsely imprisoned men" has added fuel to the antideath campaign. This case shocked the nation. The men were convicted of beating up a policeman. They served two years in prison before two others, doing time confessed the crime. But what if the policeman had

Adlai Clarifies Stand On Rights
LOS ANGELES (AP)—Adlai Stevenson, winding up a whirlwind week of early campaigning in California, clarified his stand on civil rights and prepared to meet today with southern California labor leaders. "There are no half-caste Americans in my lexicon," Stevenson told a Democratic party group last night. Earlier, during an eight-appearance swing through Los Angeles County, the candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination emphasized that he supports desegregation in Southern schools—because "it is the law of the land—so enunciated by the Supreme Court." Stevenson also pointed to his sponsorship of fair employment practices acts and desegregation of the Illinois National Guard while he was governor. Stevenson's remarks on civil rights undoubtedly were prompted by published reports hinting his views on the Powell amendment to the proposed federal school aid bill might cost him votes in his primary contest battles with Sen. Estes Kefauver of Tennessee in California and Minnesota, although not in Florida. In a news conference, Stevenson said he opposed the amendment, which seeks to make desegregation essential before a school district can receive federal aid, mainly because "the administration of schools is a local matter." While the amendment's objective "seems entirely plausible and proper," Stevenson said, he felt it endangered the program. "The important thing is education," he said. "Obsolete heritages like discrimination and segregation will yield quickest of all to the spread of education."

Mollet Attempts Soothe Algerians

By PRESTON GROVER
ALGIERS (AP)—French Premier Guy Mollet made new bids for peace in Algeria today after suffering a stinging defeat at the hands of indignant French colonists. Within two hours after Mollet's arrival from Paris yesterday, an angry mob had forced him to accept the resignation of Gen. Georges Catroux from the Cabinet post the Premier created a week ago as a step toward ending 15 months of bloody terrorism in this North African area. The Premier scheduled daylong conferences today in his effort to reconcile Algerian nationalists' demands for freedom with French residents' opposition to any self-government for the Moslem natives. One of Mollet's first meetings was with representatives of war veterans' groups. They have spearheaded the opposition to easing French control, forming a militant "Committee to Protect the Public" to push their campaign. Thousands of angry colonists hurled rotten fruit and stones in a wild demonstration when Mollet appeared more than a score of persons were injured. The Premier was booed and hissed as he drove through the streets. A wreath he placed on the monument to the country's war dead was trampled and torn to bits. Troops and police wielded clubs and carbines and fired tear gas in an attempt to maintain order. The crowds shouted "Guy Mollet stay away" and "Catroux to the firing squad." Mollet accepted the resignation of Catroux—who was to have come to Algiers Friday to take up his post—in a telephone exchange with Paris. The Premier said the general offered to quit as soon as he learned of the demonstrations because he was convinced "his name should not become an issue of discord among his former war comrades." French residents opposed the selection of the 79-year-old Catroux for a number of reasons. Aside from his age, he is associated too closely for them with French government factions pledged to at least partial support for the Algerian independence movement. Expressing determination to continue his mission despite the public outbursts, Mollet said: "I will continue, myself, the conversations here as I announced on my arrival." He told a news conference he will "return again and again" if necessary to bring peace to Algeria. The Premier plans to remain for the rest of this week and said he will visit other cities besides Algiers. Last night a crowd of about 1,500 demonstrators, mostly students, attempted to enter the summer palace where Mollet is staying. Police used tear gas to force the rioters back.

Concert By ECC Band Proved Musical Apex

By GEORGE E. PERRY
Why import bands for concerts when the East Carolina College Concert Band can play a program such as they did last Friday evening in McGinnis Auditorium? Of all their concerts in the past eight years, this was undisputedly the apex. They played some very heavy music and performed it in an outstanding manner. One would expect the band to improve from year to year, but to see it make such tremendous strides forward since last year is worthy of much more than just a mere complimentary remark. The most obvious improvement in the group as a whole is their tone, which is truly mellow, rich and full-bodied. Their rhythmic precision is practically professional, and their attacks and releases which, even in the trickiest of spots, were unusually intact. Specifically, however, the clarinet choir rose to a standard which may be difficult to maintain in the future. They really played as one, with rarely an exception. The brass choir, too, has made tremendous improvements since its last concert. But words fail me when it comes to the percussion section in a band concert. One expects to hear a drum-beat, but to find a group of percussionists who add so considerably to the total effect is worthy of special mention. Glen Briley, the tympanist, did excellent piece of work as did August Laub, the cymbalist, who really takes his job seriously. Both of these players would be a credit to any major musical aggregation. What would this band be like without their inspired conductor, Herbert Carter? From the first bar until the last, he was in absolute command, and the nice thing is that he achieved some terrific effects with apparently no effort. All this is certainly due to his conducting which is authoritative without being ostentatious. The program began with the March from "The Love of Three Oranges" by Prokofiev. Here the first attack was right on the head, the dynamics were excellent, and the climax tingling. Following this was the reverent "Jesu, Joy of Man's Desiring" by Bach. Played in a beautiful legato manner, it was a tonic for the ears. Hearing a gigantic organ, rising gradually to a flood of tone, then sliding back into the peaceful mood of the opening of the piece. The brass choir should receive special praise for their work in this number. Another Bach selection, this time the Little Fugue in G Minor, was heard next, and while it lacked the authoritative quality of the "Jesu, Joy," it was nonetheless convincingly played. Jumping from Bach to Rossini, the band performed the Overture to his opera "The Italian in Algiers," which showed some outstanding production of detached chords, and an ad lib performance very musically by Denise Jo James. The High spot of the first half of the concert, and perhaps of the entire program, was the Finale from the New World Symphony by Dvorak. I was very interested to see how a band could effectively perform this work, originally for orchestra, but I must add quickly that thanks to a good transcription, and to the clarinet section, one scarcely missed the strings, and the number packed all the drive and solidarity of most orchestral performances. The staccato work by the clarinets was unusually good, the percussion section helped build the climaxes most effectively, and the overall dynamic range was good. Space does not permit lengthy comment on each number of the second half, which began with the triumphal March from "Quo Vadis" by Rozsa, and followed by the Chorale and Alleluia by Hanson in which the legato achieved was excellent. The "Ballata" by Patrick McCarty of the Music Faculty was then given its second performance, and a more inspired would be hard to equal. Conducted by the composer, it showed a masterful job of a gradual building to a crashing climax and the subtle tapering off to its conclusion. While somewhat dissonant in spots, it never became difficult to listen to. An excellent bandstrat of excerpts from Gershwin's "Porgy and Bess," with special praise going to Jerry Peterson, trumpeter, and an Italian March closed the program. This concert should certainly clear up any misconception which sometimes comes up—that wind-players aren't really artists, and that only keyboard artists, string players, and vocalists have the right to that title. Every member of this band is a musician; if it weren't so, a concert of this calibre would have been impossible.

Admits Slaying Couple Because Of 'Nagging'

NEW ORLEANS (AP)—A 22-year-old North Dakota odd jobs worker admitted to FBI agents today he killed a Seattle, Wash., couple Sunday because he "got tired of the guy nagging me about my driving." Donald Wyciskala of Bismarck, N.D., was arrested as he stepped off a bus shortly before midnight. He made no attempt, FBI agents said, to conceal his identity or his connection with the double murder near McFarland, Calif. They said he still had the bloody hatchet with which he said he killed James B. Askew and his wife. Coroner Stanley Newman said earlier at Bakersfield, Calif., the couple had been struck several times on the head with the blunt end of a hatchet and their throats had been cut. They also had been run over by an automobile, he said. Wyciskala told agents he took $250 from Askew's body and bought his plane and bus tickets. Agents said he had only a few dollars with him when arrested. M. P. Chiles, agent in charge of the New Orleans FBI field office, said Wyciskala told this story: He was working in Seattle when he decided to go to Griffin, Ga., to see his wife and 18-month-old daughter. He answered the newspaper advertisement of two people who wanted someone to drive them to Los Angeles. He said they were in the vicinity of McFarland when Askew, sitting in the front seat with him, began nagging him about his driving. He said he picked up a hatchet on the floor of the car and hit Askew in the head. He then drove off the road and hit Mrs. Askew because she was screaming. He did not mention cutting their throats nor driving the car over them after removing the bodies. Wyciskala said he then hitched a ride to Bakersfield, took a cab to Los Angeles, a plane to Fort Worth, Tex., and a bus to New Orleans. Wyciskala was being held on a fugitive charge and would appear before the U. S. Commissioner later today.

WEST LOS ANGELES (AP)—The disappearance of a necktie, stage costumes and a trick violin from comedian Ed Wynn's home has been explained. He notified police Sunday that the items had been taken from a house the Wynns had vacated. A frantic mother, hearing the news, telephoned Wynn she knew where the things were and who had taken them. The culprit proved to be friends of Wynn's stepson Jay. Wynn told officers that rather than identify them he had urged proper parental attention.

Pet Set Garage, Doghouse Afire

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP)—Browne a black and tan beagle owned by Mr. and Mrs. Don Smith, is in the doghouse again — a slightly burned doghouse. Firemen said the pet set fire to his doghouse and the blaze spread to the Smiths' garage. They estimated damage to the garage, the car inside, and the doghouse at $1,085. Smith had placed a light bulb in the doghouse to keep it warm. Firemen said the pet apparently chewed the wires starting the fire. Mrs. Smith discovered the blaze and pulled a fire extinguisher from the dog house.

Group Works On Summer Camp In Onslow County

A delegation of farmers and Pitt County Negro Farm Agent J. M. Goode assisted the North Carolina 4-H Club Foundation one day last week in making improvements on the summer camp grounds in Onslow county.

Goode said numerous improvements have been made on the waterfront and recreational grounds and the surrounding forest was thinned of surplus trees.

Delegations of farmers from other counties are also participating in the cleanup project to reduce the expenses of getting the Negro 4-H statewide camp ready for opening next summer.

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP)—Passage of the natural gas bill upped prices moderately among natural gas and pipe lines issues on the stock market in early afternoon today.

But the market as a whole was mixed in fairly active trading. Most gains and losses ranged from fractions to around a point.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks was down 40 cents at noon to 417 but this was largely due to a number of stocks in the average selling ex-dividend. The industrial component was down 81, the rails up 10 cents and the utilities down 10 cents.

Trading volume for the day was estimated at around 2 1/2 million shares compared with 2,230,000 yesterday.

In the over-the-counter market, Ford Motor stock was quoted at a new low of 63 bid. The original offering price on the stock was 64 1/2.

Among stocks affected by the natural gas bill, Panhandle Eastern Pipe Line leaped almost 4 points in early trading but later the gain was trimmed to under 2. El Paso Natural Gas was up around a point but the gain subsided later to a fraction. Northern Natural Gas and El Paso Natural Gas held fractional gains while American Natural Gas was unchanged after an earlier fractional gain. Phillips Petroleum was up a minor fraction.

Merritt-Chapman & Scott and Kennecott Copper were 1 point losers.

Steels were generally lower except for Youngstown Sheet & Tube which moved up slightly. Rails were mostly unchanged although Union Pacific rose around a point while Seaboard Railroad and Southern Railway gained fractionally.

Utilities were mostly firm. Westinghouse, after a small gain, was unchanged. General Motors, American Telephone, Allied Chemical and U. S. Gypsum were off.

Friday Night TV Admittedly Weak; No Real Explanation

By CHARLES MERCER
 NEW YORK (AP)—There comes a letter from James L. Fickel of Columbus, Ohio, who writes: "Why is Friday night television so very poor? Why isn't some effort being made by one of the networks to break the half-hour monotony with a good 60-minute show? Every critic I've discussed the Friday subject with has almost trembled with fear when pressed for an opinion! Why?"

Well, Mr. Fickel, I never knew a critic to tremble with fear. But you raise a good question, one that I and many others have wondered about.

First of all, I think there are three generally good regular half-hour programs on the principal networks Friday evenings. Quite apart from the Friday night fights, which draw big audiences, I personally like Ethel and Albert (ABC-TV), Line-up (CBS-TV) and Ed Murrow's Person to Person (CBS-TV).

Before those shows I agree it's pretty monotonous fare. After checking around with some responsible people on the networks I'd say that practically no one denies the general fact. You also can be assured that there is no "plot" to deprive us of a generally higher level of Friday night programs.

Life Topsy, it seems that the situation just grew. Almost since the inception of television the networks never have had any trouble in finding sponsors for Friday nights. People who sell the things we might buy on Saturday are happy to advertise them on Friday evening. So, in the minds of planners, there grew the idea, "Well, we don't have to worry about Friday night."

Many Friday night programs that started with verve seem to have grown tired. In the words of one network official, "They're showing battle fatigue." "They're tired."

The cause could be a general lack of attention by the public, by critics, by the networks themselves.

Although there are no signs at present, it's possible that eventual ly someone will open up the Friday night front. Don't forget that Saturday night, now just about the hottest night of the week on the screen, was the dearest night of the week until NBC-TV opened it up with "Show of Shows."

Sufficient prodding by a sufficient number of viewers can greatly affect what we see on television.

Small Town CD Unit Proves Younger Life For Aged Great Asset In Emergency In Villages Of Israel

BATTLE CREEK, Mich.—A speeding train rammied a school bus at a crossing in Spring City, Tenn., on August 22, left 18 dead, many injured.

Mrs. Bonnie Zimmerman, Civil Defense Director of nearby Rockwood, Tenn., was just finishing supper when she got news of the tragedy. She swung quickly into action and gave a graphic demonstration of what an asset a well-organized small town civil defense group can be in time of disaster.

Here, in her own words, taken from her report to the Tennessee Civil Defense headquarters, is Mrs. Zimmerman's story of CD in action. As soon as she got word that the injured were being brought to the hospital at Rockwood, Mrs. Zimmerman "began thinking of what was to be done."

"This," she wrote, "was a natural disaster and CD could help out so

I called the Commander of the Civil Air Patrol, Mr. Pete Burnes, over in Harriman. He asked me what I wanted him to do. I told him to alert anyone who might be able to help in flying in supplies if the hospital should need them. He then called one of his Cadets and told the Cadet to pick me up and take me to the hospital.

"For the first time since I started out in CD, five years ago, I saw a respect I'd never seen paid to CD. The people made way for me to go through. They all looked at me with a reverent respect I'd never seen before.

"On entering the hospital the corridors were crowded and in spite of the crowds, there was little confusion. There was no loud talking—no one getting in the way of anyone and I'll admit I've never seen so many men cry before: big robust men, middle-sized men; all types standing around silently crying, unashamed who saw them. Upstairs and downstairs were cots with children on them so bloody you couldn't see them! There was the pitiful sight of parents who were trying to find their children. How easy it would have been if these children had had their identification tags.

"At the scene of the tragedy, it took hours to identify four bodies and if they had been wearing identification tags all this suspense and notification to the parents would have been much quicker.

"I asked the hospital supervisor when he thought they'd be calling for blood and he said as soon as they had picked out the ones who were in the most critical condition and typed the blood. Then I called on the Commander of the VFW, who is in charge of the blood donors and keeps a record. He immediately brought me this record.

"I then began sorting the blood types as well as helping the undertakers, nurses and everyone else who made urgent calls for personnel and materials. Two hundred people came giving me their blood types.

"I also answered newspaper reporters who wanted questions answered quickly. We made arrangements for the parents to stay in different homes and motels, but none of them wanted to leave the children's bedside. I visited with each parent, introduced myself and made it known to them whatever their needs were where I could be located in the hospital. I also called in coffee, cake and sandwiches and around midnight I gathered up as many of these parents as could leave their children and took them to the kitchen and served them.

"At 2:30 a.m., I saw everything was going OK as I went home to get some sleep. I returned to the hospital at 7:30 and found the hospital had given the folks their breakfast, so I got busy and called the Baptist church and asked them to fix lunch and they were glad to help. They sent enough food for lunch and supper.

"By that time folks from all over town were calling me asking what they could do. By that time the children were slowly improving and getting a little restless so I told them to bring funny books and magazines. Almost immediately some books were brought down to me which I distributed among the children.

"After this was over, many people talked to me. They have a much deeper respect for CD in this area now."

CONTENTMENT—Sewing and a loom give these oldsters useful work in one of Israel's old age villages.

By ERIC GOITG TREU
JERUSALEM, Israel (AP)—"You Are Younger Than You Think" therapy is being applied in Israel.

How well it works was demonstrated at the "Congress of the Golden Age" in Givath Hashloshah, Israel's leaders believe it was the first convention of its kind ever held anywhere.

The delegates were 50 Jewish elderly men and women who are now living with 5,000 others—hailing from 22 different countries—in 16 old age villages or homes in Israel. They came together to exchange views on how to extend their various cultural activities.

The congress was held under the auspices of Malben, an Israel foundation of the American-Jewish Joint Distribution Committee.

The Malben old age scheme is still expanding. There is a long waiting list. In principle, applicants are eligible at 65, but chances are, better for anyone already in his 70's. The average age of the 2,000 men and 3,000 women in these homesteads is 73.

An old age exhibition displayed work done by the elderly people. Silver-embroidered traditional tunics of shiny blue silk with wide Oriental trousers to match—the national dress of Yememite-Jewish women on specially festive occasions may have been the highlight. They were made by eight women from Yemen, all of them in their 80s.

Some of the oldsters are able to continue their former trade, at least for a few hours a day and they can even learn a new one if they want to.

Intellectual work finds its place too. Julius Thoroock, 74, formerly an engineer and factory owner in Czechoslovakia, exhibited a technical manuscript with reference tables and formulae for calculations. A 78-year-old painter showed some of his pictures.

In their villages, the oldsters attend all sorts of lectures. Listen to radio, records or live concerts and watch amateur theatricals. There are libraries in many languages and they also publish their own little magazines and newspapers, likewise in various tongues.

The many languages are a handicap but, in spite of their advanced age many try to overcome it by studying Hebrew. They don't usually learn as quickly as the youngsters do, but they learn.

HOPPING PROBLEM
SEATTLE (AP)—Getting a couple of rare sun frogs from Panama brought food complications for Seattle's zoo. They feed on fruit flies. To keep a couple of hops ahead of the critters, the zoo now has to breed flies in a banana culture.

Many sailors believe that a cat aboard a vessel will bring a lucky trip.

Links Behaviour To Emotions

DETROIT (AP)—A University of Michigan psychiatrist says lawyers and judges should work closer with psychiatrists because the latter have "a better understanding of the emotional behavior of the people involved in the cases judges see."

Dr. Roscoe W. Vavell says: "Human behavior is essentially emotional, not intellectual."

The GOLDEN WITCH

By ZOLA ROSS

CHAPTER ONE

The Willamette was to sail at noon on this August 9, 1897. She had arrived from San Francisco three days ago, her California passengers eager to continue the journey to Alaska. Originally scheduled to sail on the day after arrival, she had been delayed time after time and now all over Seattle people were aware of her coming departure, of the 700 passengers and 300 horses aboard, of the far from luxurious accommodations that were so jealously sought.

Early that morning Tim O'Beirn shared in the pleasurable ferment, but now, an hour before sailing, he had other things on his mind. "You seen Michael Dark?" He asked the question a dozen times as he elbowed his way through the crowds that were a twenty-four-hour affair in Seattle. He got answers but never the one he wanted. Michael had been here, he had been there. Tim's bright blue eyes blazed with urgency and despair. His red hair, flying wild his tie, riding askew, and pointing to his left ear, the trot of his short bony legs all punctuated his evident need.

"Maybe he's up on Profanity Hill," one man told him. Profanity Hill, the site of the county courthouse, must be reached either by the nearly perpendicular James Street cable car or on foot, and Tim had no stomach for climbing a series of Seattle hills at this point. He reminded himself, there wasn't time. "Michael went to the docks," a bystander stated with conviction. "Saw him myself. Say d'ye know the Willamette had only ten state rooms on her and a pig would laugh at them! Why, the docks are crammed with bunks so close together a man can't sneeze without jarring a dozen if his shipmates." Tim's eyes flared with new fear. "Michael isn't heading for Alaska himself, is he?"

"Not him!" His informant spat into the street. "He's turned down a dozen offers. Best company in Seattle, Dark is. Plenty would take him along for no more stake than what he's got under his hat. But he claims he's a lawyer and not a miner. He won't budge."

Tim shook his head politely but knew a sneaking sympathy with Michael. While most folks who could beg, borrow or put a stake on the cuff would be off to Alaska at the flip of a card Tim himself did not hanker for snow, ice or trail hazards.

He jerked himself back to his own necessity. "How long ago did you see Michael?" "Couple hours, maybe. But you know him. Always starts early for appointments and gets to 'em late."

Tim nodded. Michael claimed folks who heaved to a line missed a lot. "The day I pass up a de-bour for punctuality will be a notice to my undertaker." Tim had heard him say it often. Where could Michael be? Anywhere from the fancy Denny hotel on Denny Hill, to the courthouse, to a saloon below the Deadline, Tim knew. He shoved through another knot of people, dodged a leaning tower of mining supplies, circled two dog sleds, leaped nimbly from a snarling mongrel. Seattle was a madhouse these days. California claimed it was only a way stop to the fabulous Klondike gold, but Tim figured envy bred fancy words. Seattle was booming. Mortgages were being burned daily; men who'd scraped the bottom of the barrel before the February news of the Alaskan strike now jingled gold pieces in the pockets of new suits. Not that Tim was one of them. Still, Eastern suckers, waiting for a ship north, meant fat poker pots. Tim clucked. He'd met many who thought they played poker and had righteously assessed their ignorance. Tim stumbled over a packing case, regained his balance and reminded himself he must find Michael Dark.

"Want to buy a horse Tim?" Tim halted within the sloping triangle just south of the intersection of Yesler Way and Second Avenue. The "Horse Market," born of the need of miners for pack animals to carry supplies over Alaskan passes, was a going concern from dawn until midnight. Limey, the man who hauled Tim, sold horses he acquired cheaply, touted the sales for others practically lived in the Horse Market. "You seen Michael Dark?" "Hour ago," Limey answered "Heading for the dock." Tim backed away and set his pace at a jog trot. He certainly mustn't waste time when every minute could be brewing trouble! Yet he could not resist stopping when he approached the peninsula between the extensions of Washington and Main streets, south of the Columbia and Puget Sound railway tracks. Good gosh, the horn of the peninsula was a regular gypsy camp. Tim peered hopefully at the tents, the open fires, the card game around a campfire. Michael Dark might linger here. But he wasn't in sight.

Only a week ago Michael and Tim had stopped here. "Look at them, Tim," Michael said. "They've come to Seattle on frayed shoestrings and how many of them will even reach Alaska, let alone make their fortunes?" Tim frowned. Only Michael could get away with belittling Alaska's promise. Some claimed Michael staked miners to go north for him, but Tim didn't believe it. For some reason, Michael just didn't take to gold strikes. "You come back with gold-lined pockets," Michael said, "twenty will break their backs and hearts for no return." Again Tim quickened his steps. He had to get a move on! As he neared the docks, progress was hindered, the sidewalks in front of grocery hardware and outfitting stores were piled high with goods waiting for shipment. Where was Michael? Almost everybody Tim questioned had seen him but no one knew where he was now.

"You want to borrow money, Tim?" one man warned. "I hear Michael was cleaned out last night. Len, his roll to some grifter with twins. Soft touch for kids, Michael is."

"I don't need money," Tim wasn't offended. It was a natural assumption. Men who hunted Michael Dark usually wanted a quick loan or the services of a lawyer who wasn't too fussy about a client's finances. Michael seldom disappointed them. Within sight of the Willamette now, Tim stopped to gape at the spectacle. From its lower decks came the bleats of sheep, the lowering of cows, the thumping of horses. Passengers leaning over the rail shouted toward the dock. Tim's immediate responsibility winking and searched the crowd. There, at last! Michael Dark was talking to Ines Smith within feet of the gangplank. So he'd got her out of jail! Tim shoved ruthlessly toward his long-hunted quarry. Michael would fix things. He always did. Most men as big and as husky as Michael were fighters, but Michael never brawled. He didn't have to, Tim conceded enviously. Tim, who was five feet three and slight, had to stand up for himself or be a doorman; Michael over six feet and squarely built gave off assurance without need of bolstering. "Tim caught another view of Michael's blond head and wondered if he tired of the quips about not matching his name. His hair was silver, Tim, so that you looked twice to see if it was white. I guess he doesn't mind, Tim thought. He doesn't like being called "Mike" and he never is. He has a way of getting what he wants, at that. Funny he didn't have more women. He couldn't be far into his thirties and women liked him though he never seemed to do much about it. Wasn't there some yarn about his once being engaged to Banker Linden's wife?

Vegas Hostelrys 'Buy' Customers

LAS VEGAS, Nev., Feb. 7 (AP)—We don't buy entertainers; we buy audiences.

That remark from an old Vegas hand summed up the attitude of the hard-bitten men who book entertainment into the night clubs of Las Vegas' strip. His point: You not only have to fill the club; you have to bring in people who gamble.

He pointed out that one of the great successes in town was Lauritz Melchior, but his draw did his employers little good—"because after the show the crowds drifted out of the casinos like a sieve."

Among others who draw good crowds but little action at the gambling tables: Spike Jones and songbirds like Jeanette MacDonald, Jane Powell, Kathryn Grayson.

Who are the stars who draw the gambling crowd?

Experts more or less agree on these names: Joe E. Lewis, Frank ie Laine, Martin and Lewis, Sophie Tucker, Tony Martin, Ray Bolger, Donald O'Connor, Frank Sinatra, Kay Starr, Lena Horne, Jimmy Durante, Betty Hutton and Danny Thomas.

"If there is any common denominator," says Gene Murphy of the Desert Inn, "it is that most of these names come from a cabaret background. The well-off people—the ones who gamble—have seen them all over the country and want to see them again."

Why is it necessary to attract the gambling audience? because the night clubs themselves can never show a profit.

"Aside from the entertainment cost," says Beldon Kattelman, head man of El Rancho Vegas, "food and labor costs are enormous. Nevada grows no produce; it must come from California, Arizona and Utah. It's hard enough to get and keep good restaurant help in a normal town. But when they're ex-

Predicts Shift Of Gleason TV Shows

By CHARLES MERCER

NEW YORK (AP)—Almost any day now we'll probably hear officially that Jackie Gleason's Honey-mooners is moving back from 8:30 p.m. to 8 p.m. (Eastern time) Saturday evenings on CBS-TV opposite Perry Como on NBC-TV. Como, as widely publicized, has moved ahead of Gleason in the viewer ratings.

Stage Show the Gleason-owned program which has been in the 8 p.m. spot on CBS-TV, will come on at 8:30 p.m. Two for the Money, the Herb Shriner quiz show currently appearing on CBS-TV at 9 p.m. Saturday probably will move into another week-night spot. Into that Saturday evening slot will come a new filmed comedy series, Joe and Mabel, a program that went back to the shop for further tinkering last summer.

If pressed for official confirmation of this, all parties involved probably would deny it. But that's what I see in the crystal ball as happening.

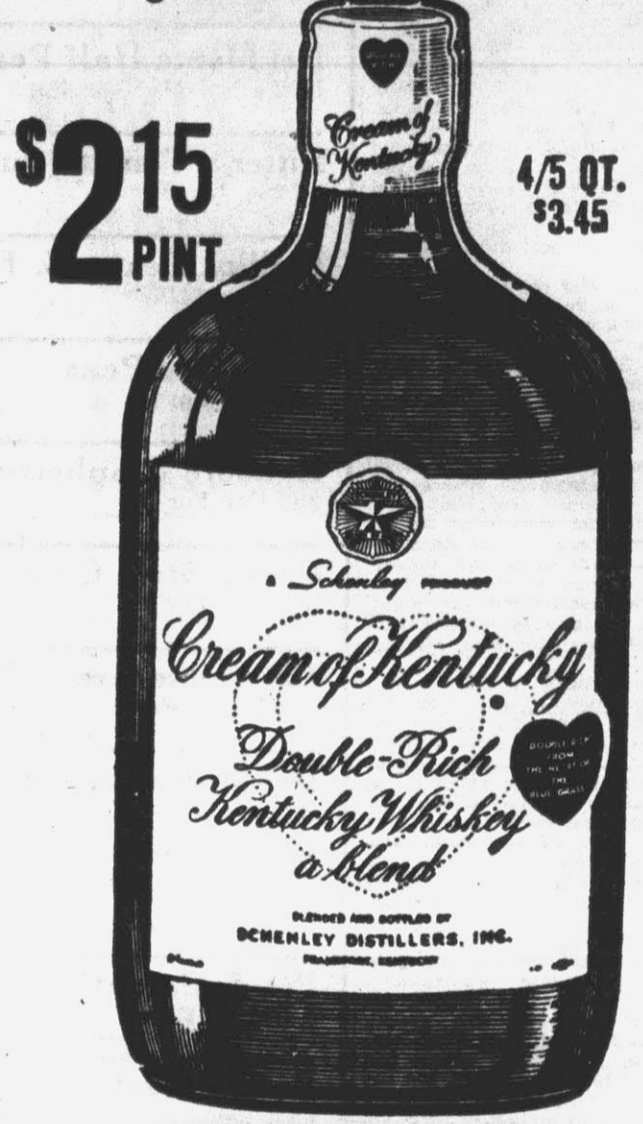

As long ago as last April when Gleason was riding near the top of the viewer ratings he was asking CBS for the 8 p.m. slot this season. But it didn't turn out that way. For one thing, the sponsor of Two for the Money had an agreement that the program was to follow Gleason. Now Shrier has signed a five-year contract with CBS for a weekly hour variety show to begin late next fall. That means that Two for the Money, which incidentally has good ratings, is in for a change. Sponsor and network must be approaching some sort of understanding.

Gleason has been doing a lot of yelling—and incidentally garnering several million dollars worth of publicity in the newspapers. Yelling is always confusing and rather meaningless. The crux of the matter is Perry Como. Both Gleason and CBS feel they have to do something about him. Whatever their family differences they're united under the banner of "Beat Como."

Let's always view television rat-

I continue to watch The Honey-mooners. It's a cast of superb actors paced by a great comedian, almost always working from excellent scripts. Then what troubles me—and possibly many like me? I'm simply tired of the formula of Ralph, the bus driver, and Alice, his long-suffering wife, fitting it out on that same bleak apartment set. I long for the old free-wheeling days of Regie van Gleason and the wonderful variety of characters and situations this man Gleason can play.

posed to temptations 24 hours a day, it's murder."

Hotel operators have different modes of buying talent. Kattelman favors "100 per cent acts"—tried and true performers like Lewis, Tucker, Eartha Kitt, etc.

On the other hand, Milton Prell of the Sahara has introduced stars like Marlene Dietrich, Ann Blyth, Mae West, etc. to night clubs and paid them big prices. "Sure, I can never show a profit in the room, but I charge that off to publicity," he says.

Stan Irwin, Sahara entertainment director and a state assemblyman, adds: "Movie names are important for the draw. But they have to be names who can entertain. Jeff Chandler was a classic example of a Hollywood star who could bring in a crowd opening night but fell off later because he wasn't an experienced entertainer."

The Greatest Expansion Program In Our 55 Years In Eastern North Carolina Continues . . .

BUILDING FOR EASTERN NORTH CAROLINA'S FUTURE

LAST YEAR: An expansion program resulting in an expenditure of some $6 MILLION was successfully undertaken during 1955 by your telephone company.

RESULTS: A net gain of over 11 THOUSAND TELEPHONES, the second largest yearly gain in the Company history. Of these, approximately 7,500 were urban telephones while the remaining 3,500 were provided in rural areas. To show a net of 11,000 telephones, your telephone company installed a total of more than 38,500 telephones during the year.

In addition to this huge gain in telephones, hundreds of projects to expand cable and central office facilities were undertaken in the various exchanges of the Company. In addition, long distance facilities were increased to provide even faster service. Still another facet of the telephone business provided for the establishment of network facilities for Eastern North Carolina's second television station.

FOR 1956: In dollars, the scheduled expansion is twice as big for 1956. ($12,000,000) In every section of our Eastern Carolina territory, telephone expansion projects will be underway this year. Our goal is the finest possible communications system for our Eastern North Carolina.

Ayden High School

Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday were initiation days for the new members of the Ayden High School Hi-Y. The boys wore patched old pants and shirts, funny hats, and two signs hanging over their shoulders—"Hi-Y" and "Are you a litter-bug?" They also carried a large bucket containing shoe shine equipment. During these three days the new members obeyed orders given by the old members. Herb Little washed Delano Wilson's school bus; Ronnie Tripp and R. L. Collins were seen shining shoes; Gwynn Merritt and Melvin Byrd carried books for their masters; and Glenn Bowen and Sonny Harrington also obeyed all kinds of commands, even to polishing some of the girls' white shoes. Wednesday night final initiations were held in Mr. Craft, the adviser's, home room. What happened then is a deep dark secret! On Thursday morning the new members looked normal again and some of them said, "We are waiting anxiously for the initiations next year when we'll be giving the orders." The junior play, "Room No. 13," has been selected. The play books have arrived and members of the junior class will try out for parts one day the first of this week. Watch for a list of the characters in this column next week.

The FFA held a contest last week to choose a FFA Sweetheart. Carol Lynn Caviller, Nancy Jackson, and Jo Anne Williams were sponsored for this honor. The FFA members selected Jo Anne Williams as their Sweetheart for 1956.

Officers of the FFA are: president, Bobby Burney; vice president, George Stancil; secretary, Edward Greene; reporter, Nelson Thomas; treasurer, Nelson Cannon; sentinel, Billy Vandiford; representative, Carlton Wiggins; and adviser, Mr. S. F. Peterson.

The FBLA met in regular session Friday. Good and bad ways of selling were discussed. Faye Bowen and Nelson Thomas explained the good way. Cassie Lee Buck and Nancy Worthington discussed the bad way. The purpose of this discussion was to prepare for the club's big selling campaign to raise money to place a trophy case in the upstairs hall during February 1-15.

At a call meeting of the NFL final plans were made to attend the Student Congress in Kinston at Granger High School on February 3-4. Fattie McCay, Dan Bateman, Betty Lou Williams, Suzanne Taylor, Joanne Edwards, Nancy Wingate, Jeannette Worthington, Tommy Manning, Brownie Harrington, George Stancil, Barbara Gagnon, and Edith Faye Hardee attended the Congress on Friday. Barbara Gagnon, Jeannette Worthington, and Betty Lou Williams went back to Kinston on Saturday for the final session. They were accompanied by Mrs. Wilbur Worthington.

Bibby Norris, a sophomore, was chosen Citizen of the Week last week.

Mrs. LaRue Evans' eighth grade gave a three act play in chapel on Wednesday entitled "Rabbit Hop Mountaineers" to complete their study of minerals.

Feldspar, an important mineral, was discovered on Rabbit Hop Mountain. The family who lived on the mountain refused to sell to two prospectors who tried to get a claim to the ore. As a result of the discovery many families moved into the section and work in the mines was begun. The play was written by the students and grew out of their study on minerals. The following students made up the list of characters: Rosa, Frances Booth, introduced the characters; John Stuart Craft, owner of the mountain; Kenneth Nelson and William Earl Manning, prospectors; Carol Lou Braxton, mother; Winston Woolen, truck driver; Clinton Hart, foreman for the processing plant; Bryan Little, in charge of finding homes for the miners; Sandra Carter, secretary; Faye Highsmith, Delores Smith, Thomas Anderson, and other members of the class, children. Solos, square dancing, and group singing, added to the interest and enjoyment of this program.

After chapel the eighth grade invited their parents to their room for refreshments. The parents also enjoyed the exhibits made by the students. Later in the afternoon the students entertained the faculty at a social hour.

The eighth grade has organized a Junior Historian Club. Its purpose is to utilize more fully the local materials. It can benefit the student by stimulating his interest in history. It can also benefit the state if enough schools in different localities organize this club and send their material to the State Department of Archives and History. They will have more material on hand about North Carolina than ever before. The officers of the club are: president, Frances Booth; vice president, Carol Lou Braxton; secretary, Faye Highsmith; custodian, Elizabeth Bennett, reporter, Brian Little, and adviser, Mrs. LaRue Evans. The class has already begun collecting old Bibles, dishes, dresses, diaries, and old letters.

To celebrate Youth Week—January 29-February 5—the youth had charge of the prayer services at the Methodist Church on Wednesday night. Joanne Edwards sang "One Little Candle." Brownie Harrington, Fattie McCay, Annette Dall, and Tucker Allen were also on the program.

Sidney Britt of Davidson, Fred Allen of State College, and Dianne Moseley of Mary Washington, Fredericksburg, Va., were home for a few days last week.

HELENA, Mont. (AP)—Montana's male land commissioner, Lou Bretzke, has been honored by having a river island named after him despite Montana custom which provides that all such lands in Montana Rivers be given a feminine name. The island was called "Lou Island."

Called Police, Omitted Address
BATESBURG, S.C. (AP)—Fillins station operator Chevis McGee had a long wait while he held two men at bay with a pistol when they attempted a robbery of his station. "Tell Joe to come as quickly as possible," McGee told Police Chief Joe Rankin's house in a quick telephone call while he kept the men covered.

Thirty minutes later, the chief and other officers showed up. They had had quite a hunt — McGee forgot to say where he was.

Cadillac

His Favorite Investment!

"It is the wisest motor car investment I ever made!"
"I've owned a great many makes through the years, but Cadillac wins my vote as the finest investment of them all."
"In my book, it is the best dollar investment on the highway today!"

We can't tell you how many times we've heard it. In fact, Cadillac's value and economy have become favorite topics of conversation among Cadillac owners everywhere.

And their sentiments are based on some very substantial facts about the "car of cars."

First of all, there's the economy of buying a Cadillac. Many models are actually priced competitively with the "medium-priced" makes.

Then there is the economy of operating a Cadillac. Cadillac's gasoline mileage is simply phenomenal for a car of its size and stature ... and its dependability is truly extraordinary.

And, finally, there is the economy that comes from Cadillac's great value. In resale markets all across the land, the Cadillac car traditionally returns a higher percentage of its original cost than any other automobile built in America.

And consider what generous dividends Cadillac owners receive from their investments.

... Cadillac's superlative beauty and luxury ... Cadillac's magnificent performance and comfort ... and Cadillac's wonderful reputation among the world's motorists.

We suggest that you pay us a visit soon and investigate the latest and finest Cadillac investment of them all.

We have the car ... and the keys ... and the facts—and we'll be happy to give you all three at any time. Why not make it today?

Title Search Is Basis For Book

CHARLESTON W.V.A. (AP)—State Auditor Edgar B. Sims is the author of a new book exploring the historical background and basis for all land titles in West Virginia. Since 50 of his state's 55 counties were created before West Virginia broke off from Virginia, most of the research goes back to early acts of the Virginia Assembly. Sims looked up some laws as old as 1734. The book includes plates of grants made by Virginia to George Washington and his officers and soldiers of the French and Indian War.

Film Industry Relying More On Foreign Market

By BOB THOMAS
 HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Did you know that—
 About 45 per cent of the film industry's take now comes from abroad.
 This figure is expected to increase constantly.

Most movies are now made with an eye to the foreign market. The enlightening facts come from Alfred E. Daff, executive vice president of Universal-International and head of its foreign division. He points up the revolution in film economy.
 "The movie business was supported by American moviegoers. The foreign receipts were gravy. But now the film industry could not continue on its present basis without the foreign business."
 "The movie business would survive—it always has," said Daff. "But the whole setup would have to be changed."

Fortunately, no such calamity as the loss of the foreign market impedes Daff foresees increased prosperity for Hollywood.
 "The reason for the increase in foreign receipts is simple," he explained. "Since the war, the standards of living in foreign lands have risen so much that the people now have extra money to spend beyond the cost of food, clothing and shelter. They have more to spend on movies, which are the most universal form of entertainment."
 "Fortunately, Americans have a knack of making films that are more popular than anyone else. With four billion people in the world and 165 million Americans, it is logical that an increasing share of our profits will come from abroad."

Hin has this changed studio thinking?
 "All of our pictures are calculated for their impact on the foreign market as well as the American. Only a few films are made without a foreign appeal. Those are pictures about American sports and films like Ma and Pa Kettle, which are great here but not as good abroad, with the exception of Australia."
 "Likewise we may make films that are not so popular here but liked by foreigners. These include what we call the 'sex-and-sand' films—the romantic adventures."

Seats Available On Rhee's Hint

SEOUL (AP)—You now can get a seat in a Korean movie theater, hitherto an almost unheard-of state of affairs. Formerly there were howling, squalling, tugging crowds, with all seats taken when you got inside.
 The trouble was theater managers: 1. Sold far more tickets than they had seats. 2. Paid their bills with free passes. 3. Issued passes to politicians and all their relatives.
 Recently, President Syngman Rhee told a newspaper he thought managers should stop 1, 2 and 3 instantly.
 Police took the hint. They showed up at all theaters to see that managers stopped item 1. And they confiscated passes as fast as they were presented.

Counts Fish To Make Estimate

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP)—How many fish are there in the ocean? A University of Michigan professor doesn't pretend to count them all. But he counts them by the hundreds in order to make an accurate estimate.
 Assistant Prof. John E. Bardach was asked by the Bermuda government to help find out how many fish there are in the waters around the island to help the fishing industry.
 So Bardach goes down, sits on the ocean floor with plastic slate and pencil and counts. He also has the aid of an aqualing and seven assistants equipped with flippers and breathing aids.
 Working conditions are nice in the tropical waters, he says, and even the sharks and baracuda don't bother him.

Willow Run Move Is Announced

DETROIT (AP)—One airline which handles about 25 per cent of the passenger business at Willow Run Airport has announced plans to move to Wayne Major Airport—the first domestic airline to make the move.
 Seven other domestic airlines have announced plans to remain at Willow Run, 10 miles farther from Detroit. Another airline has been operating European flights out of Wayne Major.

Experience Is Very Educational

SEATTLE (AP)—At least Mrs. Tina Jacobs was philosophical about it when two fire trucks responded to her attempt to put a letter in what she thought was a street corner mail box.
 "In case I ever want to turn in a fire alarm," she told the firemen after apologizing. "I'll sure know how."

ON THE HOUSE

By DAVID G. BAREUTHER, Real Estate Editor

You can always spot a homeowner down town, says an old philosopher. He's the man coming out of the hardware store.
 It's just as easy to spot a home builder in Chicago in January. He's the man wandering through the Loop with an armful of brightly colored advertising booklets about new building materials, equipment and gadgets. It's too bad that every homeowner can't take a look at all his man has under his arm. There are so many wonderful inventions. But the builder is in Chicago for a convention—strictly business aside from the usual convention life.

At this writing, more than 20,000 home builders and their associates are squeezing into Chicago hotel lobbies like rush hour subway crowds. They are there to find out how they can make their new home more irresistible this year. It's the biggest home show you could imagine—the annual convention of the National Assn. of Home Builders.

So many manufacturers are exhibiting their wares that the famous old Coliseum had to be taken over to supplement all the display space in two of the largest hotels. Trade magazines, rushed into print before the show opened, tried to list and illustrate all of the exhibits. We picked up a copy of Practical Builder containing descriptions of more than 550 more or less new products.

POWER wheelbarrows, electric push-button windows, combination home music and intercom systems, more than 50 different cooling and heating displays, 20 model kitchen and laundry setups, 54 lumber and millwork exhibits and hundreds of showings of practically every other major product for the modern American house are included in the exposition.
 The power wheelbarrows caught our eye. You can get them with either a two- or four-horsepower motor. In addition to throttle and clutch levers, they have a fingertip control for dumping the tray. Pretty fancy, though, for pouring concrete.

But if you ever tried to bond a coating of new cement to an old concrete surface, you'll be interested to know there's a new plastic admix which is a self-curing additive and simplifies concrete repairs such as cracked sidewalks, driveways and floors.
 Then there's a new material to color concrete and give it a non-slip surface at the same time. This is a mixture of abrasive aggregates, wetting agents, water repellents and your choice of seven mineral colors.

MORE BEAUTIFUL home interiors hold the enter of the stage in this show. Cork floor covering is now made in simulated pegged plank form as well as in conventional tiles. Flush doors are being laminated with vinyl in decorator colors. Fine brass doorknobs are being elbowed by bubble filled crystal knobs reminiscent of Swedish glass. Hand decorated porcelain door knobs have matching porcelain switch plates for the wall.

Folding doors and folding partitions are now made of plastic, wood, steel and vinyl, among other materials. There are so many types and styles of windows you'd wonder that enough houses will be built to keep all window makers in business. One of the newest is an awning type window that operates electrically when you press a button—just like luxury motor car windows work.

It seems that almost everything can be built into the walls of a house, especially in the kitchen. Built-in ovens have been followed by built-in refrigerators and built-in food freezers. Separate hot plates that appeared on the market with the built-in ovens now fold up into the wall to free counter space when you aren't cooking.

Ike Approaching Political D-Day

By REILMAN MORIN
WASHINGTON (AP)—President Eisenhower is rapidly approaching his personal "D-day." And for this political capital, it will end a guessing game of unparalleled magnitude.

Eisenhower's decision on whether he can and will run for a second term presumably awaits only one thing now—the findings in his next physical checkup. For a particular reason this will be an unusually important examination.

Its purpose is to determine, as accurately as possible, how Eisenhower has stood up under the massive weight of the presidency after a full month at work. Next Thursday marks the end of this month.

The President's personal physician, Maj. Gen. Howard Snyder, told reporters, "No man who is just 4½ months past a heart attack is in a position yet to determine his own physical fitness. He should have more time—all the time he needs."

Snyder said, however, that he hopes to complete preliminary tests Feb. 13 with the rest of the examination the next day.

Then the President plans to take a brief rest, probably in a secluded forest lodge near Thomasville, Ga. Eisenhower may work out his decision there—and quickly. "I hope I am not going to dilly dally too long about it," he said.

Some observers in Washington believe he already knows what he is going to do, but others who are close to him are convinced that he has made no decision. The President himself says he has not, and that he will "make the announcement as quickly as a decision is firmly reached in my mind."

Meanwhile, the atmosphere in the capital is electric with speculation.

tion and debate, gossip wishful thinking, rumor and undercurrents of anxiety and expectation. It is very much like the feeling in a courtroom when the jury is about to come in with the verdict.

If there is a majority guess, it is that Eisenhower will not run. But the people who feel that way today usually add, "Last week, I thought just the opposite." So do those who now believe he will run.

When you ask what brought the change of mind, people usually answer, "Well, when he said the other day that—"

Eisenhower has discussed the subject in many ways. "I have to guess as to the next five years. My mind is not fixed to such an extent that it can't be changed. . . . Where does the sense of duty point? . . . My future life must be regulated."

The remarkable fact is that his political friends and foes both find comfort and reassurance in these remarks.

The Republican interpretation: "In effect, he's saying to the people 'Here's my condition. Now if you want to vote for me, I'm flexible.' He's being perfectly honest about the situation."

The Democratic view: "He's made up his mind not to run, and this is paving the way for the announcement."

Never in the history of the presidency has there been a situation quite like this one. It is normal for a president to play cat-and-mouse with his decision. But in this case, the uncertainties that arise from a heart attack have added the X-factor.

From Washington the hopes and anxieties spread across the whole of America.

There are the Republicans who hope to get the nomination if Eisenhower does not run. There are the 17 GOP senators, the 16 governors, and the 208 Republican congressmen who come up for reelection this year and would hope to benefit from the President's popularity.

Toy Becomes A Deadly Weapon

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP)—When two Knoxville men went on trial for robbing a store of $271, using a toy pistol, defense attorneys argued they couldn't be guilty of armed robbery.

They contended "armed robbery" applies only to "deadly weapons." The jury disagreed. The pair was convicted.

holders, and would-be office holders, whose future may well hinge on Eisenhower's decision.

The political arena is not the only affected area. In Wall Street and in business circles generally you hear the same word repeated over and over—"uncertainty." As one analyst puts it:

"We've been running this country by cardiograph for the last four months."

The uncertainty will be dispelled after the President's checkup.

Usually, such examinations consist of the cardiograph which level are thousands of office

Oil Industry Is First To Tackle Wage Problem

By SAM DAWSON
NEW YORK (AP)—Oil is the first big industry in 1956 to tackle the wage problem. Last year it gave 10-cent raises to hourly workers. This year the major oil companies are making pay hikes averaging out around 15 cents an hour.

But the major labor battles of the year lie ahead. And they could be more heated than usual because of the uncertainties in the business picture.

Most critical is likely to be the steel industry fracas late in the spring. Negotiations in that field are expected to set the pattern for numerous other industries.

The United Steelworkers has given notice it will ask for the same kind of a 52-week partial-pay layoff program it got last summer from the car manufacturers. The union regards that settlement as superior to the one the auto workers got earlier—a supplemental lay-off plan that was the high mark of the 1955 labor negotiations.

With a three-year contract signed last year, the auto industry will play second fiddle to steel this year.

Management in many industries looks for higher demands from unions this year. Wage settlements tend to fluctuate with the business cycle. The average for pay hikes dropped in 1954, rose in 1955.

The present good times—with high employment, record sales, and in many cases record profits—offer talking points for the union leaders.

Management will doubtless argue that higher wages will mean higher prices at a time when the business boom may be balanced on a precarious peak. The companies will also contend that the relatively stable cost of living makes pay raises less urgent.

The labor battle, especially on the steel front, is expected to be shaped by their demands now, heated. The steel union leaders are expected to include, in addition to the layoff pay plan, higher wages, shorter work week and more paid holidays.

The steel contract comes up for renewal early in the summer. Most steel companies say they have orders in sight which will keep their mills going full blast at least until then.

If there is no marked change in the economic weather by that time, the steel companies will be loathe to lose production time through a work stoppage—a bargaining point the union leaders will be well aware of. On the other hand, if a business letdown is sighted by then, management may be more stubborn at the negotiating table.

OLYMPIA, Wash. (AP)—In proclaiming an "aging citizen's month" in Washington, Gov. Arthur B. Langlie expressed the belief it would have a universal appeal.

"In planning for the aging," he commented, "we are, in a sense, planning for ourselves for the fact is that whether we be 20 or 30 or 60 we are aging."

charts the heart action electrically, measurements of the pulse, blood pressure, and dimensions of the heart, and an X-ray examination of the heart. This data along with fluid analyses, is then compared with comparable data from previous examinations.

But a supremely important phase of the check may be the patient himself—what he tells his doctors of his feelings and reactions. Does he tire readily? Does he have any echoes of pain? Does he have feelings of breathlessness?

Hence, the President's doctors can only give him a report on their findings and their best judgment as to his condition.

Eisenhower is 65. If he serves a second term, he would be 70 at the end of the first man in history to reach that age in the presidency. Life insurance company statistics indicate that 47 per cent of the men in his age bracket live 10 years or more after a heart attack.

However, some cardiologists have little faith in statistics. They cite several reasons.

Among them are the mysterious effects of worry, strain and emotion on the human machine. Doctors can protect the President pretty well from fatigue and the mechanical effects of his job. But they can't keep him from worrying about the tremendous responsibilities that go with it.

Dr. Paul Dudley White, Boston specialist who has been attending Eisenhower, recently minimized this factor. "I personally don't think stress and strain is as important as diet," he said.

As to the second term, Dr. White said Eisenhower would have to make that decision himself "knowing in full what the hazards are."
