Hurricane Protection Plan Offered; Director Named

RALEIGH (AP) — The creation of special districts to plan and execute protective measures against hurricanes was recommended to Gov. Hodges today. The idea was one of a long list of general recommendations contained in an initial report on a Long-Range Hurricane Rehabilitation Project. The 64-page report, submitted by State Civil Defense Director Edward F. Griffin, stated: "The best combination of local participation and responsibility financial resources, and adequate area for the comprehensive planning and execution of hurricane protective measures is probably some type of special development district."

quires the construction of protective works. These in turn require money. "Ditches must be built, groins must be constructed, drainage ditches must be dug, sewage treatment systems must be designed and rebuilt," the report pointed out. It said each locality should do all it can within the limits of its own financial resources. It said any state financial assistance program should establish procedures to "insure that aid be confined to those localities which meet certain standards of need and local participation. Three possibilities for giving supplementary aid were suggested. These were: Direct state contributions; a revolving fund; and the state guaranteeing local bond issues. The report stated, "It is essential that some form of comprehensive disaster insurance be made available at reasonable rates to property owners in areas subject to hurricanes, river flooding or other types of disaster insurance program will be required to meet the needs of property owners," the report said. Pointing to areas like the Gulf states, Florida and Connecticut, the report asserted, "A sturdy economy can absorb heavy hurricane losses with no more than a temporary setback to expansion. A strong economy can best afford to finance the action program necessary to minimize hurricane destruction. The report went into exhaustive detail on the results of hurricanes on: agriculture, forests, fisheries, beach resorts, towns and cities, and general economic progress. It also had suggestions for meeting each situation. Most, if not all, of these have been publicized previously. The great damage wrought the state's coastal areas by Hurricane Hazel in 1954 and Hurricanes Connie and Edith in 1955 was gone into in detail.

"The major damage from these recent hurricanes was caused by wave action, flooding, wind and rain," declared the report. "Wave and wind actions were particularly severe during Hazel and many beach communities were literally wiped out. The losses from Connie and Edith, and some were caused mainly by high storm winds and the torrential rains which accompanied the storms. "The amount of damage in North Carolina from the 1954 and 1955 hurricanes, according to recent estimates, totaled $318,993,000," the report continued. "The magnitude of these losses is apparent when they are compared with the total state tax levy for 1954 which exceeded 302 million dollars. "By way of further comparison it may be noted that 3,000 miles of first class highways might have been built in eastern North Carolina for the money lost to hurricanes."

Hodges Selects Georgian To Fill Emergency Post

RALEIGH (AP) — Col. Harry Brown of Atlanta, Ga., a veteran Civil Defense official, was named today to hold down future hurricane damage in North Carolina. Gov. Hodges announced the appointment today at the same time he released a report prepared by a group of experts on long-range planning and action to reduce hurricane damage. Hodges said Brown will receive for work April 2 and will receive a salary of $10,000 a year. The governor told his news conference that Brown already "has rendered great service to North Carolina" during summer droughts of 1953 and 1954 and in the aftermath of recent hurricanes. Hodges predicted Brown will "make back his salary many times over" in the new state post. The governor added the salary is "a whole lot lower" than what Brown is making in his federal job. He said he was "very pleased with the report of the hurricane rehabilitation project and with the appointment of Brown to follow through on recommendations made in the report. Hodges said he considers the report a "very positive step forward in taking advantage of the costly experience which we have had as the result of our recent four hurricanes."

Accreditation Commission Representative Praises Facilities Advises Plans To Enlarge Hospital

By EDWINA HAYMES Reflector Staff Writer A representative of the Joint Commission of Accreditation of Hospitals from Chicago here yesterday had nothing but praise and commendation for Pitt Memorial's medical facilities and service, its trustees, administrative staff, medical staff and other personnel. However, he warned that plans should be made now for enlarging the relatively new institution, at "it is perfectly obvious the needs of the community will require additional hospital accommodations in the very near future." Dr. Peter D. Ward met with Pitt Memorial administrator C. D. Ward and chairman of the Board of Trustees T. J. Williams to inspect the hospital. His findings will be submitted to the joint commission who will rule whether or not Pitt Memorial should be fully accredited, provisionally accredited or non-accredited. The local hospital was provisionally accredited by the commission in 1952, one year after it was opened. Dr. Ward said yesterday that patient care at the hospital has improved sufficiently since that time to meet the requirements of the commission. "I am very favorably impressed with the splendid medical care of the patients here," he declared, "and the community should take great pride in its fine medical center."

medical program is being carried on here with the trustees, the administration and the medical staff assuming their responsibilities in a most satisfactory manner." He met a large number of the hospital personnel and said, "It is apparent they are exceptionally well-qualified to carry on the work which is duly theirs." Dr. Ward said he particularly noted a number of characteristics throughout the hospital, "which is most commendable. It certainly enhances patient care." Word of Advice He offered a word of advice to the community when he suggested that "it would be well for the trustees, administration and medical staff to begin making plans for enlarging the hospital. Even though the building is relatively new there is evidence of some overcrowding." Dr. Ward represents a voluntary program carried on for the accreditation of hospitals in the United States and Canada. The commission is sponsored by the American Medical Association, American College of Surgeons, American Hospital Association, Canadian Medical Association and the College of Physicians and Surgeons. Inspection reports are reviewed by 20 commissioners of the United States and Canada who are appointed by the sponsoring bodies. Their findings concerning accreditation and recommendation for improvement are submitted to the local hospital. Fully accredited hospitals are re-surveyed every three years, while the provisionally accredited and non-accredited institutions are re-inspected annually.

College Cites Need For Financial Help

RALEIGH (AP) — One of the state's leading Negro colleges is requesting emergency financial aid because of a big decrease in enrollment. The plea was voiced yesterday by Dr. Alfonso Elder of N.C. College in Durham and his business manager, W. W. Jones. He met with Asst. Budget Director D. S. Coltrane who said he promised to make the matter over to Gov. Hodges but did not offer Dr. Elder more. Dr. Elder sought $39,253 from the state to continue the school. Coltrane said, "We raised the question as to whether there was an emergency at the college at this time. We explained that some items in the college's budget which could be changed around. This might make it possible for Dr. Elder to get along within funds available." Some of the money which Coltrane suggested could be swapped around was in the college's equipment account, under supplies and materials, and in repairs and alterations. Coltrane said general economic conditions on the farm, plus damage caused by hurricanes, are responsible for the decreased enrollment. He said enrollment at the college is down 120 from expectations. Out-of-state enrollments have fallen 40 from last year since the Legislature jacked up the tuition fee for out-of-staters to $500. At Elizabeth City Teachers College, which has seen out-of-state fees almost doubled to $275 in the past three years, and at Fayetteville State Teachers College, a similar decrease in enrollments has occurred. "Fayetteville really has a tight situation," said Coltrane. "We have discussed the situation with them. Their enrollment has fallen from 450 to 370 in the past year. They are going to try and work it out."

Gunmen Fatally Shoot Victim In Morning Holdup

WALLACE, N.C. (AP) — Two gunmen fatally wounded a filling station attendant in a holdup here early today. The pair escaped with about $150 after the 3 a. m. robbery. The attendant, James Thomas Brown, 45, was pulled to a white station wagon, where he died about four hours after the holdup. Wallace Police Chief E. W. Whitaker said Brown was shot five times, with two different pistols. Whitaker said the pair could piece the story together from the mortally wounded attendant, two young white men entered the filling station and both started shooting at him.

ECC Begins Spring Term With Record Enrollment

East Carolina College opened Wednesday for the spring quarter with an enrollment which according to estimates, tops all previous records for the third quarter of the school year. Registrar Orval L. Phillips states that applications for admission by new students, including a number of veterans, and requests for readmission place the spring enrollment well in excess of that in past years. Final enrollment figures are not yet available, since the deadline for registration for work this spring is March 31 except for graduate students who may enroll at the first

Some 170,000 In N.C. Covered By New Wage Rule

RALEIGH (AP) — At least 170,000 Tar Heels covered by the federal wage and hour law can look for more money in their next paychecks. The $1 an hour minimum wage went into effect one minute after midnight this morning for all workers engaged in interstate commerce or producing goods for interstate commerce. It will affect at least 170,000 of the 900,000 workers in North Carolina covered by the law. The new law does not affect workers in local retail and service industry jobs, who are not covered by the federal law. The percentage of covered workers benefiting will be about twice as high in eastern North Carolina as in the state as a whole.

Pay Boost Today For Two Million

WASHINGTON (AP) — More than two million lower-paid workers will receive a pay increase today, courtesy of the U.S. government. The pay hikes come through a boost in the federal minimum wage from 75 cents to $1 an hour. It was voted by Congress last year to become effective today. An estimated 24 million workers, including those employed in Fair Labor Standards Act—generally those engaged or whose work is connected with interstate commerce—but only about 2,000,000 have been making less than the new $1 minimum. Although the maximum required pay boost could be 25 cents an hour, the Labor Department figured the average increase would be 13 cents an hour or an estimated 560 million dollars a year. Most of those benefiting have been taking more than the old 75-cent minimum, which had been in effect for six years. More than half the increases were in Southern states, from Maryland to Texas. This means Dixie's annual payroll will be boosted for more than a million workers by a sum of more than 250 million dollars. Some of the industries most widely affected are lumbering, textiles, candy-making, furniture and clothing manufacturing. President Eisenhower had recommended that Congress boost 75-cent minimum to 90 cents. He said that anything higher might cause some sudden unemployment. However, Congress voted for an even $1. George Meany, AFL-CIO president, said his agency is stepping up its enforcement staff and activities to see that the new law is observed.

Russian Arrested As Spy In Iran

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Iranian special agents arrested the Soviet Union's assistant military attache in Tehran last night. Officials said he was carrying top-secret Iranian military documents and had been "spying for a long time." Brig. Gen. Teimour Bakhtiar, military governor of Tehran, announced the arrest of the Soviet Foreign Ministry official. Koznetsov was held overnight at the Iranian Foreign Ministry, where he refused to speak or eat. He was turned over to the Soviet Embassy today after his diplomatic status was established. Foreign Minister Ali Gholi Ardiclan said the Russian would not have been arrested if he had been carrying his diplomatic credentials. The Soviet Embassy refused comment. Bakhtiar said documents found in Koznetsov's pockets included drawings of air force gasoline and ammunition stores, repair and technical units and other secret documents. "It is now revealed that the Soviet major has been spying for a long time," Bakhtiar said, "making use of Iranian Warrant Officer Hussein Rajaei Tehrani as his agent." An army source said Tehrani faces a speedy trial and the death penalty will be asked.

Some Democrats Challenge Eisenhower Health Report

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Eisenhower's assertion that there isn't the slightest doubt he can now perform his duties as well as he ever did drew challenges from some Democrats today. They said that since his Sept. 24 heart attack he has been a "part-time president" operating through "agency" which would be ousted by the voters in November. Reacting to a talk in which Eisenhower told the nation last night he would accept the GOP nomination but would not engage in "whistle-stop" speaking, Democrats spoke of a contrastingly vigorous campaign of personal appearances by their nominee. Speaking to the nation by television and radio, Eisenhower said he is a "recovered heart patient" who doctors say is "as well as before the attack occurred." "I may possibly be a greater risk than is the normal person of my age (65)," he said with something of a grimace, "but my doctors assure me that this increased percentage of risk is not great." "As of this moment," he said, "there is not the slightest doubt that I can now perform, as well as I ever have all of the important duties of the presidency. This I say because I am actually doing so and have been doing so for many years." Asserting he is personally confident he can carry the duties of the presidency "indefinitely," he said medical men have told him that "adverse effects on my health will be less in the presidency than in any other position I might hold." He said he would be glad to follow-up to Eisenhower's announcement at a news conference yesterday that he is available for another White House term. "Almost to a man, Republicans greeted that announcement jubilantly. Democrats generally voiced pleasure that Eisenhower's health had recovered to such a degree. Many of them added they are confident of victory in a campaign waged on the record of Eisenhower's administration—the record on which the President said he will run. Abroad, there was some gratitude voiced in official quarters, although many withheld comment lest they give an impression of interfering in U. S. politics. In Moscow, Deputy Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko said, "This is news we have expected for some time." Moscow radio carried the news briefly. The Voice of America relayed Eisenhower's broadcast around the world, using all 78 of its transmitters. Eisenhower said that if he is nominated at the GOP convention in San Francisco in August—a foregone conclusion in the absence of any health setback before then—he will "wage no political campaign in the customary pattern." In the first place, he said, he will have to follow "a regime of ordered work a certain number of hours, recreation and rest." He said he must keep down his weight, take a midday rest, retire early and pass up social engagements. Beyond this, he declared, he made up his mind long before his heart attack that if he ran again, adding that he hadn't decided before he was stricken—he wouldn't conduct a campaign in which he was "personally a candidate." "On the record are the aims, the efforts, the accomplishments and the plans for the future of the administration," he said. "Those facts constitute my personal program."

Expelled

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — Autherine Lucy, Negro coed, today was expelled from the University of Alabama for unprovoked charges that school authorities conspired in mob action against her. There was no official announcement from the board of trustees, but members confirmed that the action was agreed upon at a meeting last night. They asked that their names not be used in the action. The action came within hours after U.S. Dist. Judge H. Hobart Grooms yesterday ordered the board to vacate an order expelling the 26-year-old Birmingham woman from the campus for safety reasons. He gave the university until Monday to take the action reading order. Attorney Andrew Thomas called the conspiracy charges "scurrilous." He objected heatedly when Judge Grooms eliminated them from the action, saying that the university should have an opportunity to answer them.

Peron Receives Panama Permit

PANAMA (AP) — Argentina's former dictator-president Juan D. Peron has received a special residence permit from Panama. He was warned it can be lifted if he mixes in politics. Authorities said Peron, who was evicted from the U.S.-owned Hotel Washington at Colon last week, has been taking a political refugee under Panama's recognition of the right of asylum.

Ike's Decision Draws Local Comment

By ALVIN TAYLOR Reflector City Editor Like a chorus all over the nation Pitt Countyans have their opinions on President Eisenhower's announcement that he is available for another White House term. "I don't think he can win with Nixon," he declared. "Whether he can without Nixon remains to be seen." Clifton Everette of Bethel, vice chairman of the County Democratic Executive Committee, said, "I wasn't at all surprised that he announced. I had been expecting it ever since the examination at Walter Reed Hospital showed him to be in good health." Of the Democrats chances he stated: "With him running it's going to call for the best effort the Democrats can put forth. The Democrats are going to have to fight." As to whether Ike made a wise decision Everett declared: "I feel like he is taking a calculated risk to undertake the office for another four years considering his heart attack. I think the people of the country ought to take in consideration the state of his health before they vote because I think it will be a serious campaign." J. H. Harrell, local attorney and for 16 years chairman of the County Board of Elections said he "wasn't surprised at all" at the decision. "I expected that his supporters would pressure him into it." Harrell predicted that Eisenhower's nomination provided he doesn't have a setback between now and time for the convention. "Opinion of the man in the street is divided on the announcement," W. B. Phillips, a Republican from

Olla Ray Boyd Runs Afoul Of The Law In Winterville

Boyd, who had been selling shrubbery, decided to move and subsequently ran through a stop sign. Police stopped him and handed out a citation for failing to stop with instructions that the citation be taken to Mayor Bernie Tucker. Boyd apparently failed to do so and, when the discovery was made that Boyd had no peddler's license that offense was added to the warrant. Tried and convicted before Tucker, Boyd appealed to Superior Court.

ACE Holds Panel Discussion On Problems Of Growing Child

The Association for Childhood Education held a meeting Wednesday at Third Street School with the president, Mrs. Sally Klingschmitt, presiding.

Invitations had been extended to parents and friends of children to join the members of the organization in hearing several pertinent questions discussed in the form of a panel and open forum.

Mr. J. H. Rose, superintendent of Greenville City Schools, acted as moderator for the panel which consisted of the following: Dr. Malet Irons, local physician, Miss Agnes Fullilove, principal of West Greenville School; Mr. W. L. Whedbee, mayor of the city of Greenville; Mr. Warren Carroll, director of recreation for Greenville; and Rev. Robert McKenzie, associate pastor at Jarvis Memorial Methodist Church.

The problems presented by television and a proper hour for teenagers to return home were discussed. The panel members suggested that the television problem can best be dealt with by setting a standard bedtime hour which has been agreed upon by the family. Too often children are allowed to stay up too late to view programs that overstimulate them. The parents of teenagers were advised to agree among themselves, if possible, as to what the proper time for returning home might be. The alternative to this is to agree with the teen-age son or daughter as to the proper time-keeping in mind the desire of boys and girls of this age group for conformity with the group as a whole.

The problem of providing recreation without overemphasizing competition was discussed. Mr. Carroll pointed out that competition is basic to our way of life and there seemed to be no way to avoid it. However, more and more of an effort is being made to teach skills in sports that can be carried over and used in later life.

Helping the church, school, community and home realize that children have different potentialities it was pointed out that the child's limitations as well as his capabilities should be known. Parents were warned against trying to fit their children into some preconceived mold. The child needs to be helped to grow with what he has, considering his interests and talents.

Parents were advised to guide their children in making a wise choice in the selection of out-of-school activities to avoid the over-

Pitt Farm and Home Agents Address HD Club Of St. Johns

ST. JOHNS—How Do We Stand on Our Farms in Pitt County? was the topic of a discussion by Farm agent Sam Winchester and assistant home agent Lois Jones at a meeting of St. Johns Home Demonstration Club members and their families last week at the community building.

Mrs. Simon Burney gave a talk on "How to Lead a Happy Family Life in 1936," and Mrs. George Taylor gave a poultry report. Mrs. Alton Chapman presented a book report.

Mrs. W. L. Johnson presided at the meeting and the devotion was given by Mrs. Sam McLawhorne. Mrs. W. L. Johnson led in recreation.

Refreshments were served by the hostesses, Mrs. Zeb Manning, Mrs. H. D. Harris and Mrs. McLawhorne.

Sans Souci Club Members Entertained At Luncheon

Madames C. S. and F. J. Forbes entertained the Sans Souci Book Club with a luncheon Tuesday noon at the Woman's Club.

Guests were greeted at the door by the hostesses and after a short period of conversation were invited into the dining room where places were laid for twenty guests at small tables, gay with early jonquils. Here a most palatable lunch was enjoyed.

After this most satisfying meal the members repaired to another room where a short business session was held after which the program was in order.

Mrs. J. B. Spilman gave the program for the afternoon. Hers was a most unique and unusual subject, "The Nightmares of Dean Acheson and Stalin." It was taken from an article by Leo Cherne based on a book of short stories and fables by Bertram Russell. She began her talk by saying that in the earliest days of our world's history there had been people who predicted things to come and cited the Bible as being a book filled with prophecies, some of which have been fulfilled.

The nightmares of Acheson and Stalin were dreams, each man in his dream seeing things to come, some good, some dire, discoveries and inventions that would change the way of life of the entire world. Some of their predictions have come true and it remains for us to sit tight and await what the future brings forth.

Mrs. Spilman's talk being out of the beaten path of current events was most refreshing and enjoyable. Guests at this delightful meeting were Mrs. Clara Moyer Shackell, Miss Elizabeth Copeland and Mrs. Spilman.

COLLISION OF TRAINS KILLS 13:—At least 13 persons were killed and scores were injured in this wreckage of two Boston & Maine Railway passenger trains which collided in a blinding snow storm at Swampscott, Mass., Tuesday. City Attorney Wylie Caldwell told the court he doubted that Mitchell could be convicted. Mitchell is director of the Washington bureau of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. With him in the waiting room are E. E. Giles (left), NAACP leader in Florence, and W. W. Bennett (right), one of Mitchell's attorneys. Mitchell was charged with resisting an officer who barred him from entering the white waiting room. (AP Wirephoto).

Charges Actress Neglecting Son

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Barbara Payton's ex-husband wants custody of their 9-year-old son, charging the actress is raising the boy with "no moral education." Air Force Capt. John Payton, 33, filed in Superior Court an affidavit seeking a new custody hearing. He contends that the boy, John Lee, "has been exposed to profane language, immoral conduct, notoriety and unwholesome conduct." Miss Payton, 28, married and divorced actor Franchois Tone after her divorce in 1930 from Payton.

J. H. Rose, Superintendent of Greenville City Schools, will address Kiwanians Friday evening on local education accomplishments, past and present. The program will be directed by H. R. Billica, chairman of Boys and Girls work.

Waistlines Are Headlines Of Paris Showing

By NADEANE WALKER
PARIS (AP)—Waistlines made headlines in the recent Paris spring fashion opening. They're high and handsome. Nothing really revolutionary enough to wipe out entire wardrobe has come out of the current style season. Dior's "F" or "Arrow" silhouette was top-attention getter, but this has become a habit with Dior. Good news for the ladies was the reappearance of the fitted, small waist, which has too often been swaddled loosely of late. No doubt about it, the new 1936 fashions are more flattering than they have been for several seasons. Off-white emerged as "the color" for spring, with popular support for the coral, pink and red range, watery and intense blues, navy, and green, with multicolor flower prints on white. Smooth woollens almost crowded out tweeds, and chiffon-type gauzy materials were leaders for late day and formal wear. Pin and chalk stripes, small pinstripes and polka dots were all very a la mode. So were pleats, buttons and a new short loose jacket something like a bolero and called a "canzou" or "caraco." (These are the obsolete French words for the combing jacket grandma used to wear while she pinned up her hair.) Hemline held the status quo (A decent few inches below the knee) and necklines, while generous enough in certain cases, were nothing to knock your eye out. Jackets got shorter (some are just waist-length) and flat panels fluttered from many models. The cone-shaped flaring skirt was highly popular, but not to the exclusion of the sheath. Big bells blossomed out for cocktails, dinner and dancing. Embroideries were largely of multicolored delicate pastel flowers or white grounds. Several designers played around with the empire or infanta waistline, pushed up to just under the bust. Dior did it with a belt or horizontal pleat well above a small natural waist. Lanvin curves the waistline up in front and puts a bow trailing draperies under the curve of the breast. Dessas gave the waistline a lifted effect by curving belts down behind and putting detail just under the bust. Griffe went in for harem hemlines, gathered in like baggy Turkish trousers, and Maggy Rouff, practically alone of all the designers, put in a few shapeless 1930ish sheaths. Patou, opening the season, correctly forecast what was to follow with his normal silhouette, and a line that was curvy, neat and discreet. Hard on his heels, Heim showed more small waistlines, sometimes with flat panels falling from just below the bust in front or shoulders behind. Balmain's collection, another in the series he aptly calls "pretty lady," were as wearable and as unsensational as usual. The cowl neckline, puffed out just in front, was his new obsession. Like a great many others, he liked wide

Church Speaker

Miss Janet Robinson, Bible teacher in Central High School of Charlotte, will speak at two services in St. James Methodist Church here Friday. Services will be held at 3:45 p. m. and 7:45 p. m. "Although this is the District Retreat for Methodist women, we are urging that men of the Churches hear this most exceptional teacher," church leaders declared, adding that special invitations are issued youth groups to attend.

corset belts of draped or pleated fabric to underline the high bust and emphasize a small, natural waist. A Spanish, Goyaesque influence dominated Lanvin's show, but he also stitched up some hooded capes and coats borrowed directly from the Arab's burnoose. Dior's "F" profile was a bit hard to follow, but the "Arrow" described it better, with slanting width in the cut of the sleeves and bust. His dressy dresses were so full they looked like animated clouds. Cloche hats coming down to the eyebrows and Queen Mary toques heaped with flowers went with all the new clothes. Most mannequins wore long or growing-out hair in neat French twists, or vertical chignons—a style the new hats accommodate, as they sit squarely forward. Many houses gave their mannequins beauty spots for a touch of coquetry. American-spun orlon and English silk and wool mixtures made big inroads in the textile field. French silk prints were of a blurry, more variety, largely depicting flowers.

Street Plan Idea Must Be Kept Alive

Greenville desperately needs a local ordinance which in effect would provide the essentials for proper future growth contained in the major street plan which has been hanging fire for months now.

Unless City officials get together and work out a method to provide such regulations as a part of the city code, the much needed plan will literally die of old age before it is born. If that happens Greenville can resign itself to being a city with narrow, congested streets and a constantly increasing traffic problem for decades to come.

Those consequences will through the years become a greater handicap to the city's growth and progress. But without such regulations such as those presented in the major street plan, the city will be helpless to cope with the situation in future years.

Because some objections have raised to the offered plan, shall the city be forced to sit on its hands henceforth and watch its present and future business sections become one continuous traffic jam? Because objections to the plan have been raised, shall Greenville discard its long range planning program? With the future need for major traffic arteries through town and cross-town already apparent shall we quietly acquiesce to opposing views and doom the city to a future with streets grossly more inadequate than those of today?

Certainly we hope city officials will answer each to these questions in the negative.

There are always objections to long range plans which of necessity must entail change.

Look back for a moment. There were objections to the installation of traffic lights in the city many years ago. There were objections to the city's subdivision ordinance which has proved such a benefit to orderly growth. There were objections to the zoning ordinance which designated residential, commercial and industrial sections of the city. There were objections to the establishment of building codes and fire zones many years ago. In the same category we can put one-way streets and parking meters.

Objections notwithstanding these reforms were adopted ed one by one for one specific reason: to assure adequate and orderly growth of the city long after their adoption.

Where, indeed, would Greenville be today were it not for these regulations?

Will our courage and determination for progress now melt as we prepare to take another far-reaching step to assure adequate facilities to cope with future needs of the city?

Overly Harmonious Democratic Session

By LYNN NISBET REVERBERATION— The folks who attended the Jefferson-Jackson dinner Saturday night were a little bit too close to the source of rumors and information to evaluate properly what they heard. The brief perspective afforded by the three or four days since has afforded better appraisal.

On the surface it was one of the most harmonious gatherings of Democrats in recent state history. For that reason it was one of the least satisfactory. Tarheel Democrats prate a lot about harmony, but actually they don't like it. They want a scrap every election year. Even those who are all-out for Luther Hodges and Sam Ervin this year covet the chance to show their support, and deep down they resent the lack of opposition.

One very practical politician expressed the general feeling when he said: "Hodges and Ervin have no opposition, if everybody can claim equal support, what chance have I got to get my friends appointed to jobs without the candidate on the ballot that he believes firmly in the Andrew Jackson philosophy that to the victors belong the spoils. And then he plaintively added that if everybody is on the winning side there won't be jobs enough to go around.

The man, like a good many others, anticipates considerable head chopping next year among appointive state officials. Almost certainly some changes will be made. It is doubtful there will be as many, probably less, than usual when a new administration comes in. Predictions that abnormal numbers of heads will roll would seem to be inspired by outsiders who want in.

CO-OPERATIVE — Fact is that for the past year or so Governor Hodges has had from other officials, and has offered to them, fuller cooperation than usual in that government.

During the first months of his tenure there was a bit of sparring for advantages and some signs of friction between the chief executive and high officials who had been appointed by Governor Umstead. Minor instances were blown up out of proportion to their real importance by certain people who obviously hoped to benefit by upsets.

At that stage Governor Hodges was as suspicious of the loyalty of subordinate officials as they were of his objectives. That was particularly true of the highway commission. During the months they have worked together all of them have acquired respect for the good intentions of the others. That doesn't mean everybody in responsible State office loves everybody else like twin brothers. Nor does it mean that appointive and elective officers are dummy yes men for the top guy. Divergent opinions are held and sometimes vigorously expressed.

Although the Legislature has had less to say about dragging feet than did Governor Scott, it is no secret in capitol square circles that it is displeased with the apathetic attitude of some officials and employees. At the same time he has been almost effusive in praise of services performed by others who were appointed before he came into the highest office.

It would be very unusual if some appointive officials now on the job were not shelved next year. The record Governor Hodges has made of reappointing those he thinks have done good work does not justify prediction that he will inaugurate a "fruit basket turnover" policy just for the sake of changing names in the state PBX telephone directory.

After The Eisenhower Decision, Reflection

Now that the "will he" question has been resolved, politically-minded observers seem to be left only with the question of whether President Eisenhower can win the November election, and against whom.

No one has broached the subject of a possible alternate candidate being thrust upon the Republican scene. Democrats as well as GOP'ers seem to have conceded Ike will be the man to carry the Republican standard in November.

It follows, too, that party conventionites (on both sides) are going to be forced to pay more than passing attention to the choice of running mates for presidential candidates. Thus, by chance rather than by choice, a long-urged reform in this field seems assured.

The best, and certainly most logical expression of reaction to yesterday's announcement came from Adlai Stevenson, who said "it is fitting that Eisenhower be the GOP candidate again. The main issue will be the policies and record of the Eisenhower administration".

Basically, we think the Eisenhower decision was good news and that it could not have been reached without every medical assurance of reasonable physical capacity and capability of fulfilling obligations entailed, as well as personal conviction of adequate stamina. Add to that the fact that it must be monumental encouragement to past, present and future victims of heart attack . . . and whether one's convictions are Democratic or Republican, that is good news.

Politically speaking, Mr. Eisenhower's announcement that he's back in business was a godsend to Republicans. In the three years of the present administration there has emerged no one man in that party who could match the stature of a Stevenson or Kefauver in terms of vote-getting appeal. Whereas Republicans formerly had a number of political standouts, they have fallen victim to time and the overshadowing aura of the man in the White House. There is no "heir apparent", and if the vice presidency had been intended to groom one, it failed for lack of a more experienced political figure.

Democrats similarly suffered during the administrations of Roosevelt and Truman. Indications are that the "outs" develop party leadership while the "ins" relax.

A suggested factor in President Eisenhower's second-term announcement may well have been his unwillingness to step down from what he probably regards as an unfinished assignment to steer American policies (foreign and domestic) back into the "middle way". His sense of duty and convictions would be a powerful influence in this direction.

The task for Democrats in the months ahead has been made immeasurably more difficult. For in addition to matching campaign platforms with the incumbent GOP, they must show how and in what way the Republican policies and record have failed, and they are faced by a foe whose personal magnetism can sweep across party lines.

Former President Harry Truman says it will mean no change in party plans. "We can beat anybody", he says.

It takes just that kind of stubborn confidence to win, too.

Public Forum

To the Editor: I would like to take the opportunity through the media of the Public Forum in replying to the article appearing in the February 27th issue relative to fluoridation of water in the prevention of dental caries.

During the past ten years there has been a great deal of material published on this controversial subject. Prior to the releases that have come out this year of the ten year studies that were conducted in Newburg, New York; Grand Rapids, Michigan; and Brantford, Ontario, the subject could be called controversial. In the February, 1956, issue of the magazine, the points that were brought out by the critics during the last few years have been proven to be groundless.

As I write this letter, I am basing my replies to the article that appeared on the 27th on twenty years of being a Health Officer and a dentist. I have recommended anything to community that would be detrimental or would have any reasonable doubt of being detrimental. What I have recommended is that I have had practiced on my own children.

There are in Pitt County forty-five practicing dentists, all of whom are intelligent and sincere and whose integrity cannot be denied. Many of these physicians are dentists of young children. All of the members of the Pitt County Medical and Dental Society are enthusiastic about the process of fluoridation. He also failed to state that Grand Rapids in the years 1944-49 almost doubled its population by new residents and bringing in to the city unincorporated sub-divisions.

The National Institutes of Health at Washington, D.C., Cancer Research and Cardiac Research personnel have made exhaustive studies on fluoridation and cannot attach any significance to the incidence of heart disease or cancer from fluoridation of water.

Doctor A.F. Black, Head of the Department of Chemistry, University of Florida, in February of this year, made the state-wide fluoridation has now reached a full state of a recognized health procedure, and another great landmark in man's long fight against disease."

Doctor Leonard A. Scheele, Surgeon General of the United States Public Health Service, in a release of the programs in Newburg, New York, Grand Rapids, Michigan, and Brantford, Ontario, stated that all tests that had been conducted by several major schools working these programs learned there were absolutely no ill effects from the fluoride. Detailed x-ray studies in their water and cardiogram examinations showed that these people had had no ill effects whatsoever in the organs in the bodies from having had fluorides in their water for ten years.

Colorado Springs, Colorado, had a high concentration of natural fluorides in their water. In 1908 Doctor Frederick S. McKay began studying the reason why the school children there were called the "brown stain" on their teeth. This was later found out to be fluoride mottling which is caused by a certain fluoride concentration (over three parts per million in their drinking water.)

In 1916 Doctor McKay and Doctor G.V. Black, at that time the foremost dental authority in the United States, made the statement that the fluoride in the water was directly responsible for the mottling of the children's teeth. Striking enough was this mottling, the children in Colorado Springs had practically no dental caries.

For the past twenty-five years the Medical School of the University of Colorado has been studying the residents of Colorado Springs to see if there was any ill effects in the people from drinking this natural fluoridated water. In 1954 they released a report that the people of Colorado Springs had no higher incidence of dental disease, kidney disease and bone disease than the people who had no fluorides in the water.

The National Institutes of Health at Washington, D.C., Cancer Research and Cardiac Research personnel have made exhaustive studies on fluoridation and cannot attach any significance to the incidence of heart disease or cancer from fluoridation of water.

Doctor John C. Brainer, Dean of the School of Dentistry, University of North Carolina, was one of the principal speakers of the National Rural Health Conferences held in the Coastal Plain, March 17, 1955, here in Greenville. This Rural Health Conference was sponsored by the Rural Health Committee of the North Carolina Medical Society and the Pitt County Medical and Dental Society. At that momentous meeting, Doctor Brainer's talk stated, "Every municipality that has a municipal water supply that is large enough to have the fluoridated process was denying its citizens a great preventive measure if that municipality did not so provide fluoridation."

Near - Mishap . . . And Spring!

Highway Patrolman stopped a car the other night which had a suspicious sounding muffler.

He approached said vehicle and asked the driver for his license. Driver got out and handed over license.

Patrolman opened car door and stuck one foot inside.

With one foot in car and one foot out of car patrolman prepared to smash down accelerator to see if muffler made undue noise.

Mash down he did with surprising results. Seems driver had left car in "drive." Car started down road with surprised patrolman skipping along, trying to maintain his balance and yelling "whoa, whoa, whoa, whoa."

All ended well, however, and, visibly shaken, patrolman let driver off without a ticket.

The girls prefer to study the racing form, the green sheet, the horseman's journal. They don't gossip about clothes, men or babies. They swap tips on horses.

It seems the idea for the beauty parlor originated with Vincent Pellegi, of the Philadelphia firm of Vincent and Joseph. He figured that such a shop might provide a refuge for wives bored with watching their husbands bet the family budget on the ponies. The beauty parlor caught on at once. Vincent has a staff of four now.

But he quickly learned one thing. The little woman who accompanies hubby to the race track isn't bothered by boredom. She wants some action, too.

The girls prefer to study the racing form, the green sheet, the horseman's journal. They don't gossip about clothes, men or babies. They swap tips on horses.

It's a mark of being secondhand. We can be sure that secondhand religion will never save anybody's soul. Over and over again throughout the ages, each individual has to make the religion of his forebears his own. He has to translate hearsay into experience.

The Book of Job deals with this problem. Job's religion was hearsay religion. God put him through a terrific ordeal and, at last, Job was able to say, "I have heard of them with the hearing of the ear, but now hath mine eyes seen thee."

Strength for the Day

By EARL L. DOUGLASS SECONDHAND RELIGION

The present generation is showing more interest in religion than any generation in recent years. The churches are full. Religious books and articles are eagerly sought and read. Radio and television abound in religious programs.

Yet is the nation really religious? There is grave doubt about this. On some occasions we have reminded ourselves of some of the causes for the lack of spiritual potency in modern life. These would certainly be that much of our present-day religion is hearsay religion. It is a set of practices and beliefs which have come down from the past. It very decidedly bears upon

Women (and men, too) eyeing spring styles in windows of downtown stores. . . . Easter eggs cropping up at candy counters. The home tax returns cluttering up both desks and minds—an occasional convertible top being lowered to let in some sun.

Hopeful talk among farmers as tobacco firms start off again. A bright bit of color in the sky as a youngster's kite climbs upward. Spring? Yep, looks like it's here again.

The beauty parlor staff is fascinated by the betting habits of the women. Some are inveterate students who wouldn't think of laying their money on a horse unless they know his ancestry for three generations—and what he ate for breakfast. Others depend on feminine intuition, dreams, or merely close their eyes and stick a hairpin through the racing program. The systems work out about the same.

The ladies, especially the hunch players, are addicted to daily doubles. Vincent recalls one who won a $1,000 double after finding a 1955 penny on the way into the track. She bet on the No. 5 horses in the first two races. The "dream" players don't depend merely on their own dreams. They'll be on anybody's dreams, including those of their chambermaids.

Woman may like tall, dark and handsome men, but they don't feel that way about horses. They prefer to bet on grey rather than dark horses. No telling what they'd do if there were bald horses.

Vincent is an outspoken foe of the pony tail hair-do. He thinks it's only for the ponies.

The track hair style he is trying to popularize is something he calls "Flamingo cut." It is based on the wing arrangement of the big pink birds that live on Hialeah's inside lake.

One lady liked her new coiffure so well she insisted on carrying the realism even further by having her hair tinted pink.

Vincent's unusual salon has succeeded so well he now plans to open another beauty parlor soon at one of the northern tracks. It seems he's been getting a lot of good tips himself.

majorities at the ballot-box instead of on the battlefield. But this take-charge strategy will embitter neutrals like Nehru, Nasser, Tito, and possibly Mao.

The Kremlin's top figures also admit that their industrial and agricultural programs have fallen far behind schedules. At the present rate of progress, it will require three or four five year plans to catch up with our lead. And that assumes that the United States and our industrialized European Allies will stand still in the meantime. For instance, George Malenkov, for instance, was deposed as Premier because he had fallen down on these assignments, although Khrushchev himself was at fault for the farm and land failures. Now, Khrushchev admits that there has been no improvement under his rule. And Malenkov is under fire for another failure in his new field—development of such an industrial and wartime resource as electric power. No nation, no matter how mighty, militarily, can win a war

Round-Up Of Gripes In Business

By ELMER ROESSNER

Every week day, fifty-two weeks a year, this department reports on business and usually reports on business and usually day and, since it does not fall so the regular pattern of the calendar, it is fitting that it be used for a work outside the regular pattern of the column. So here is a round-up of gripes about business:

On television: Compatible color telecasts aren't compatible. On the set of the best black-and-white sets made, the color programs come in fuzzy and wozzie. How did the Federal Communications Commission get hooedkink?

Commercials, after repeated uses, become even more times almost all black. Why do smart companies spend thousands of dollars for a show and then save a few dollars by repeating worn-out films?

Dubbed-in singing is almost always noticeable and often downright silly. Few singers can keep their mouth working in time with a song they're singing. Recording earlier. Do giant advertisers think their prospects are too stupid to notice the difference?

Radio: Booming commercials defeat themselves and the station. When sound is increased, most people turn the set down. After this happens a few times, the set is so quiet that nothing can be heard. And why must "a word from the sponsor" always be twenty 150 words? Why do programs from waters that call themselves "the station for music" consist almost entirely of commercials, newscasts and sports results?

And while using a pop song for a singing commercial seems solid, perverting the classics for such uses should call for boycotts by music lovers.

Advertising: The High-Pressure Writers Guild ought to look up the definition of "fabulous." The primary meaning is "feigned, as a fable; exaggerated." In general, a fabulist is "one who invents or writes fables; also an inventor of falsehoods; a liar."

The use of the words "magic" and "miracle" should be strictly rationed. Your correspondent has collected 300 advertisements for "magic" or "miracle" products, none of which employed any supernatural forces.

The dangling comparative is still with us, although not as much as it used to be. There are still hundreds of things advertised as "better" with no clue as to what they are better than. I always add, mentally, "than they seem."

COOKING: As one who has used both natural and manufactured gas, I know the latter stinks, but it gives hotter heat and doesn't tickle the nose. And despite claims on the part of I've never seen an electric stove cook a steak like a charcoal grill does.

Repairmen: Having the average number of appliances and other conveniences, our family sees the usual parade of repairmen. Each one of us as if he were doing us the favor of nobility by having come at all. That we can take. But our agony is stirred by the fellows who look at an inoperative apparatus and say, "I can't figure out what's wrong with it. It then charge $3.50 for the service call."

Wrestling: On television or alive, there is a strange glorification—or, at least, low approval—of the wrestler who fouls his opponent. Hair-pulling, gouging, trunks-pulling and illegal blows are part of almost every card. We might develop an interesting statistic: delinquent pound-in up: "Do you watch wrestling?"

On the other hand, maybe watching wrestling helps all of the no sublimating aggressions resulting from the by-product of advertisers and manufacturers.

Opinions In Brief

BELLINGHAM, Wash. Herald: "Historically, a liberal was one who resisted excessive central government and encroachment of government on the rights of the people. Today's 'liberal' is for an expansion of federal authority."

without food and hydroelectricity in plentiful supply. EXACTLY THE SAME ON SOVIET Nor do diplomats believe that Moscow can expand at home, and also fulfill handsome pledges to satellite neutral nations. It will be too exacting a strain, with resulting disillusionment among the Muscovites, the satellites and on-the-fence populations. In even more, Washington believes that the puppet peoples would break away from Moscow, as the Ukrainians would have done had they been treated decently by Hitler. Russia's fighting forces, or a large part of them, will be needed to prevent sabotage of industrial, transportation and other facilities. Khrushchev's indignation over our balloon and other forms of propaganda reflects his fears of defection.

FREE WORLD LEAD It is this well authenticated roundup which, despite boasts of atomic and ballistic supremacy, leads Dulles and President Eisenhower to feel confident that the Free World is stronger vis-a-vis Russia than it was a year ago. They do not intend to lose that lead

Recreation Projects Continue To Grow

By REESE HART
RALEIGH (AP)—No plans for any new recreation projects in North Carolina have been abandoned as a result of the U. S. Supreme Court decision last October outlawing segregation in public-owned parks and recreation facilities.

This was asserted today by Ralph J. Andrews, director of the North Carolina Recreation Commission. If anything, the construction of new recreational facilities is moving along at an increasing pace, Andrews said.

There was a brief "slow down" in new recreation building following the court's decision, he stated, but communities decided to go ahead with their projects.

Andrews said a survey shows that more than four million dollars in capital improvement in the recreation field is under way in North Carolina.

He pointed out that a number of projects have been developed or plans mapped for them since the Supreme Court decision was handed down.

After the Supreme Court decision several municipalities sought the advice of the recreation commission, Andrews said, on whether the commission thought they should proceed with plans for new recreation projects.

"We advised them to go ahead with their plans," he stated. "We emphasized to them that we had faced troubles before and had weathered them. North Carolina, we told them, has confidence in its ability to handle the problem."

The communities also were told, Andrews said, that the decision had not changed the "legal aspect because there is no state law regulating segregation in parks." "Segregation in recreational facilities is not a statewide issue in North Carolina," Andrews declared. "If it does become an issue, we believe our citizens can take care of the problem. For one thing, North Carolina Negroes have their pride in race to a sufficient degree that they can gain more social satisfaction in their own groups."

Five cities now permit Negroes to play on municipal golf courses: Wilmington, Gastonia, Asheville, High Point and Asheville, Wilmington desegregated its course, Andrews said, before the segregation decision and "there has been no problem."

When the North Carolina Recreation Commission was set up in 1945, there were only 11 cities and towns with organized recreation programs. There now are 42.

Andrews avers that North Carolina has made greater strides since 1945 than any other state in recreational development.

Seven municipalities were in somewhat the same situation as Roanoke Rapids when the segregation decision was announced. Roanoke Rapids had plans for a $150,000 new recreation building. The structure had been approved and the bond issue money was available. The Roanoke Rapids Recreation Commission undertook a spot study which showed that at least 24 other communities had the same problem, but had decided to proceed with projects.

Roanoke Rapids plans to begin its new recreation building in mid-April.

Land acquisition is the biggest problem, in Andrews' opinion, facing North Carolina municipalities in community recreation needs.

"With the steady and rapid growth of population on the fringes of our communities, they are faced with the need to select and to purchase land for recreation use before housing developments eliminate logical and well-located recreation areas for community use," Andrews said. "This is true in the small communities as well as the large cities. There is great need for additional governmental guides and patterns of acquisition."

He said securing trained personnel has been and continues to be a major problem in recreation.

"The success of program development, organization and provision of a well-rounded recreation program are major problems which are currently facing North Carolina people in both rural and urban areas."

Communities which have recreation projects under way or have just completed them include: Winston-Salem, Greensboro, Hamilton Lake, Statesville, Salisbury, Durham, Winston-Salem, Henderson, Greensboro, Jacksonville, Burlington, Thomasville, Gastonia, Lexington, Cherryville, Newton-Conover, Weaverville, Windsor, Lumberton and Charlotte.

Segregation questions have not slowed down spending for recreation in North Carolina. In Greenville City Councilmen are now considering a bond issue to provide more recreation facilities. Among items being considered is a recreation building for the Negro South Greenville park. Shown above is a similar building at Elm Street park which was built largely with donated materials and labor. (Reflector Photo by Bob Hilldrup).

Eisenhower Had Carefree Air After Decision

By MARVIN L. ARROWSMITH
WASHINGTON (AP)—Somebody remarked that President Eisenhower looked as happy and relieved as a fellow going fishing after shedding the cares of the world.

Actually, only a few hours earlier he had announced his willingness to hang on to the cares of the presidency for a second term. Just the same, he did look relieved that the big decision was behind him as he waited there in his White House office last night.

He was about to go on television and radio to tell the American people why he decided as he did.

Grouped off to his right were members of his family—his wife, their son and daughter-in-law, the First Lady's mother and the President's youngest brother Dr. Milton S. Eisenhower. The President had a cheery greeting for all of them as they arrived from the White House living quarters.

Eisenhower himself showed up 20 minutes before time to go on the air, and he was in a jaunty mood. He sized up the big battery of television, newsreel and still cameras lined up in front of his big desk, then remarked with a grin:

"I'm ready. Let's get started."

The newspaper photographers crowded around for pictures of him going over the pen-edited text of his talk. Meanwhile, his coach, TV producer Robert Montgomery, asked the President to put on his glasses so the other cameramen could make sure there was a minimum of glare reflected from the big lights.

The President wore a gray suit, light blue shirt and a navy blue tie. He wanted to roam around the office and Montgomery had to call him back to the desk for further camera adjustments.

"What did we do with Gen. Grant's clock?" Eisenhower asked his press secretary, James C. Hagerty, after noticing that the old time piece which President Grant brought to the White House had been removed from the table behind his desk. Hagerty pointed out the clock in a temporary position across the room.

Eisenhower also wondered aloud whether his son and daughter-in-law Army Maj. John Eisenhower Service agent notified him the day his wife Barbara, were going to get there in time for the broadcast. A moment later a Secret couple had just arrived from their home at Ft. Belvoir, Va.

Eisenhower picked up the phone on his desk and called John in the living quarters to say he and Barbara had better hurry, that he was going on the air in just eight minutes.

When he went on the air, Eisenhower's mood turned solemn as he told the nation that despite his heart attack, "as of this moment, there is not the slightest doubt that I can perform as well as I ever have, all of the important duties of the presidency."

Mrs. Eisenhower cupped her chin in her left hand and watched her husband intently when he said of his decision:

"Even the closest members of my family have declined to urge me to any specific course, merely saying they would cheerfully abide by whatever I decided was best to do."

John leaned over and whispered something to his mother and she nodded without taking her eyes from the President.

When Eisenhower concluded his talk, the First Lady joined him at his desk. TV watchers got a brief glimpse of her. She wore a black silk dress and a double strand of pearls.

When the photographers moved in for another picture after the broadcast, Mrs. Eisenhower was standing and the President was seated at his desk.

"I'm old fashioned," the First Lady said with a laugh. "You're the one who should be standing."

Here's what happened. Last May 3, in the first election in Kill Devil Hills—site of man's first powered airplane flight—had been in doubt since last May 3.

Following a round of legal action, Superior Court Judge Chester Morris ruled last September the town's young charter was legal. The Supreme Court agreed with him yesterday.

James C. Tillett brought action to have the town declared nonexistent and to prevent the officials from performing their duties because, he contended, they didn't exist.

The officials fought Tillett and won their point—that the referendum for repealing the new charter failed to comply with a statute outlining the methods for abolishing a town.

In other action, the court ruled that the Tide Water Power Co. and the Carolina Power & Light Co. should be added to the list of defendants in suits brought following a gas explosion at Wilmington in 1951.

The explosion killed two persons and injured a third. During the history of the long suit, the court had previously upheld a ruling that the power companies should not be brought into the case as defendants.

The home of W. J. Hayes was destroyed by the explosion Dec. 31, 1951. Hayes' son and wife were killed and his daughter was injured. The explosion took place shortly after a motor car struck a gas pipe leading into the

Shaky Weights In High Winds

BLUEWATER, N.M. (AP)—The wind blusters so hard and long across the flats in this area that special arrangements had to be made by Anaconda Copper Mining Co. to weigh railroad ore cars and trucks hauling uranium to the firm's big mill here.

The company had to build wind-breaks around the scales. "We've about seven months of heavy wind," said mill manager Jack Knobel. "If we didn't have wind-breaks, we wouldn't get the scales settled down so we could take a true reading."

Outer Banks Town Ruled Still Existing

RALEIGH (AP)—There's no doubt about it, says the State Supreme Court. The historic Outer Bank town of Kill Devil Hills legally exists.

The corporate existence of Kill Devil Hills—site of man's first powered airplane flight—had been in doubt since last May 3.

The high court held that Superior Court Judge Zeb V. Nettles had excluded evidence and committed prejudicial errors in his charge to the jury.

Ayden Boys Turn Back Farmville In Coastal Championship

Farmville Wins Jayvee Crown In Preliminary

AYDEN—Ayden high school, pouring on the steam, routed Farmville last night in the final rounds of the Coastal Conference tourney, 47-25, to claim the league crown.

In the Jayvee playoffs, Farmville edged by a persistent Robersonville crew 53-50 in an overtime, to add another championship to the Farmville collection. The Farmville girls posted a brilliant 31-0 undefeated record this season to take the girls' title, and also ran away with the Pitt County Tournament. The Red Devils practically made a clean sweep of basketball in this area for 1955-56, as the Ayden and Bethel boys were the only other championship crews.

A Real Rout
Last night's varsity title bout turned into a real rout in favor of the Tornados, as they swept off to a quick 9-4 lead in the first period, and were commanding a lopsided 17-6 advantage at the half.

The rebounding and fine defensive work of the entire Ayden quintet was one of the startling features of the contest. Farmville couldn't buy a rebound, and Bert Tripp, Mac Holmes and Leslie Stocks had an octopus-like control over both boards. Most of the Red Devils points came on driving lay-up shots and an occasional wild tip-in.

Fighting back harder than at any other time in the tilt, Farmville opened the third quarter with a 10 point effort that still fell short of squalling the Tornados. While Farmville was struggling to rack up their 10, Coach Stuart Tripp's boys were dumping in 14 tallies. Substitutes began to trickle into play during the third period, as the Ayden win seemed assured.

The Ayden club made a final, powerful effort in the last quarter, pouring on 16 points and holding the losers to a mere nine. The battle ended 47-25 and Ayden was proclaimed the Coastal Conference Champion.

The Jayvee championship scrap was a thrilling one, staying nip-and-tuck after the third quarter, and finally ending in an overtime. Farmville pushed across eight tallies in the first period, to eke out a narrow 8-6 lead by the end of the quarter. Robersonville, sparked by Perry and Anderson, rolled back with a punch that totaled 20 big points in the next stanza of play, but Farmville's 15 kept them still ahead by a narrow margin.

Perry and crew came back after the half with a 19-point effort that roared them finally to the lead, with a 40-37 score. Mall, Flake and Dickson, of Farmville, tied things up in the dying moments of the game with a spree of buckets that ended it at 49-49.

Overtime
The three-minute overtime spelled defeat for Robersonville and championship for the Baby Red Devils. Farmville slipped in four markers and held their foes to one, to take the tilt, 53-50.

Shavlik, Rosie Make AP Second Team All-America

By TED MEIER
NEW YORK (AP)—Dominated by big Bill Russell and little Robin Freeman, five seniors from San Francisco, Ohio State, Duquesne, Furman and Holy Cross were named today to the 1956 Associated Press Collegiate All American basketball team.

Selected with Russell and Freeman by a vote of 329 sportswriters and broadcasters were Sihugo (Si) Green of Duquesne, Darrell Floyd of Furman and Tom Heinsohn of Holy Cross. Russell, Freeman and Floyd are repeaters from the 1955 All America while Green moves up from the 1955 second team and Heinsohn from the 1955 third team.

The 6:10 Russell, who averted fans all over the country during the Dons' early season cross-country trek en route to their string of 48 straight victories, received 308 first team votes and seven 2nd team marks for a total of 1,554 points. Five points were given for a first team vote, two for the second team. Freeman, only 5-11 but one of the nation's best shooters, polled 233 firsts and 46 seconds for 1,257 points.

Green was third in the voting with 861 points on 153 firsts and 48 seconds, followed by Floyd with 813 on 125-94 and Heinsohn with 624 on 98-82.

George Washington's 6-8 star, Joe Holup; Julius McCoy of Michigan State; little 5-09 Bill Ridley of Illinois; Bob Burrow of Kentucky and Willie Naulls of UCLA make up a third team.

Charley Tyra of Louisville; Paul Judson of Illinois; Hal Lear of Temple; Morris Taft of UCLA and Vic Molodet of North Carolina State head an honorable mention list of 21. The 15 on the first three teams will receive certificates from the Associated Press.

The feats of Russell, known as "The Stuffer," are so well-known they hardly need any repeating. Virtually unknown a year ago, he leaped into the limelight with his uncanny ability on the court to lead the Dons to the NCAA championship and their victory string of 48 straight. This year he has done even better.

The repeat selections of Freeman and Floyd, who have battled for the major college individual scoring lead all season, vindicates those who voted for them in 1955. They were regarded in some quarters as only "shooters." This year, as marked men, they did well under pressure. Freeman, in particular, threw the Big Ten race into a lull last Saturday with a spectacular 43 points against Illinois as he led Ohio State to an unblemished victory over the Illini.

As Joe Jares, sports editor of the Culver City, Calif., Star-News, Venice Vanguard put it: "I think it will be a crime if either Freeman or Floyd is left off the first team. Scoring still remains the most important phase of this country's real national pastime. Green, who missed making the first team a year ago because of his teammate, Dick Ricketts, was virtually the entire Duquesne team last year and constantly demonstrated his all-around ability. Heinsohn, a 6-07 husky 220-pounder, was a marked man, but led Holy Cross to a successfully season and into the NCAA playoffs.

Shavlik, a 6-8 senior from Denham, missed by only 43 points in his bid for the first team.

If Both Erskine And Presbyterian Win Tonight

ECC May Compete In NAIA

By BRUCE PHILLIPS
Reflector Sports Editor
East Carolina College's basketballers may be through for the year, and they may not.

Chances are good that Howard Porter's Bucs will compete in the National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics (NAIA) next week.

The situation is this: Should either Erskine or Presbyterian, the favorites, cop the Little Four Conference tournament which gets underway tonight in South Carolina, then East Carolina will be in.

Better Marks
But should Wofford or Newberry, the other two clubs competing, upset the leaders, then East Carolina would be out. Because Erskine and Presbyterian would still boast better marks than the locals against member schools.

ACC Champ Will Be Crowned At Last In Tourney

Boy's Clubhouse Began Business

GLoucester Va. (AP)—Billy Weaver, 10 wanted a clubhouse, as do most boys. The folks let him build one from scraps and salvage. That was five years ago. Billy converted it into a brooder. He now produces 75,000 baby chicks a year, in addition to many eggs. He won a place on the Virginia 4-H poultry judging team. He raises the family garden, his cow furnished the family with milk, and he also is raising the pork. He has also planted 1,000 trees and has learned to estimate accurately the number of board feet in one tree or an acre of forest. "Keeping Billy on the farm is no problem at all," says his father, William Weaver.

Just 13 Years Ago, Gen. Eisenhower Said 'Baloney' To Being A Candidate

WASHINGTON (AP)—It was just 13 years ago that Dwight D. Eisenhower first heard his name suggested as a possible presidential candidate. The suggestion came from an American Legion post after Eisenhower's successful North African campaign in World War II.

"Baloney!" was Eisenhower's reaction then.

Thirteen years later the entire world awaited Eisenhower's reaction to a second term as Republican President of the United States. Probably never before was a human being subjected to such varying pressure while arriving at a decision.

Eisenhower was the third of seven sons in a family that traces its American ancestry back to the 18th century. Five of them survive.

Born Oct. 14, 1890, in Denison, Tex., he grew up in Abilene, Kan. There he gained the nickname Ike—although no one knows why.

Finishing high school at 18, he took competitive examinations and finished first on the U. S. Naval Academy list and second on the U. S. Military Academy list.

A few months too old to enter Annapolis, he got into West Point when the man ahead of him was unable to accept appointment. Chance had set him upon a brilliant career.

At West Point, he was a promising football back until he broke a leg. In 1915, he was graduated 61st in a class of 164.

His first assignment as a second lieutenant was with the 19th Infantry at Ft. Sam Houston, Tex. At a party there, he met Mamie Geneva Doud, a Denver girl visiting Texas with her parents. They were married July 1, 1916, in Denver.

Their first son, born in 1917, died of scarlet fever at the age of 3. A second boy, John, was born in 1922. He followed his father into West Point, is now an Army major and the father of four children.

President Eisenhower never got overseas in World War I. But in the 1930s, as a major, he accompanied Gen. Douglas MacArthur to the Philippines when the latter became military adviser there. He returned in 1939.

In 1941, Eisenhower's tactical skill in big-scale Army maneuvers in Louisiana came to Washington's attention. The flames of war crackled across Europe. America's entry was but months away.

Shortly after Pearl Harbor, Gen. George C. Marshall, Army chief of staff, dispatched Eisenhower to London to draw up plans for the influx of American troops there.

Upon his return, Eisenhower's complete surprise, he was named to execute his own plans as commander of the European theater of operations.

For the first time, Eisenhower was a national—and international—figure.

He headed the Allied forces in the North African campaign of 1942 and made a stand-out reputation by placating and fusing into unity American, British and Free French forces.

Successes followed in Sicily and Italy. And in December 1943, President Roosevelt chose Eisenhower to command the all-out invasion of Nazi Europe.

The military climax of Eisenhower's career began June 6, 1944, when he sent the Allied forces onto the Normandy beaches after telling them: "You are about to embark on a great crusade."

It was his first public use of the phrase, but not his last.

Germany surrendered May 7, 1945, and the first of Eisenhower's great crusades was at a triumphant end.

In Moscow, in London, in Paris and finally back in New York, Eisenhower received the tumultuous plaudits of a conquering hero. He became Army chief of staff Nov. 19, 1945, and held the Army's top post until Feb. 7, 1949.

Meanwhile, he related in his memoirs later, President Truman at the Potsdam conference in 1945 offered to help him get the presidency if he wanted it. Eisenhower wasn't interested.

Eisenhower retired from the Army and took over the presidency of Columbia University in 1948. But shortly thereafter he took leave to answer Truman's call to serve as chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

In 1951, he left Columbia a second time to command forces under the North Atlantic Treaty Alliance. It was his second great crusade, and he never returned to the university.

As the 1948 political conventions neared, there had been strong movements by both Democrats and Republicans to draft him for the nomination. He declined then, but four years later the Republicans renewed their pressure on him.

On Jan. 7, 1952, Eisenhower made himself available for the GOP nomination. At the end of May he returned home from NATO to push his candidacy. The late Sen. Robert E. Taft battled him right down to the convention. But it was Eisenhower on the first ballot.

At the age of 61, Eisenhower retired from the Army he had served for 41 years and hit the presidential campaign trail.

That November of 1952, Eisenhower defeated the Democratic candidate, Adlai E. Stevenson, 33,936,252 votes to 27,314,992 to become the 34th President of the United States.

With a prayer for guidance, he was inaugurated Jan. 20, 1953.

Dwight D. Eisenhower was embarked that day on the third of his great crusades.

Methodists Launch Good Approach To TV Outlet

By CHARLES MERCER
NEW YORK (AP)—The Methodist Church has launched a series of dramatic television programs that should have a wider appeal than any TV dramas yet produced under the leadership of any church.

In both concept and execution the series of 13 films entitled "The Way" represents a significant step in organized religion's growing consciousness of the TV medium. The series shuns preaching, is nondenominational in its appeal, and is solely concerned with dramatizing various aspects of Christian principles of living.

The series is offered free to any TV station anywhere with only these provisions: They will be shown in specified sequence at any desired regular weekly time except an hour that might interfere with church attendance. There shall be no commercial in connection with them—not even a "Go to church."

The first drama, "An Eye for an Eye," was shown here last Saturday afternoon on the ABC network's local station. Distinguished by superior acting, it told this story:

A gang of boys wreck a church recreation room. The minister, a calm, strong man, loses an eye when the boys gang up on him as he tries to restore order. The police regard the boys as "wild animals" who cannot be tamed, to fall to prosecute them, the police maintain is to turn their viciousness loose on society. But the minister opposes prosecution. At his request the boys are released in probation in his custody. The failures and the success are delineated in down-to-earth fashion.

A viewer is left with the conviction that the answer to delinquency is no simple matter. One sees the power of the program over its members. But the strong influence of people who care is shown in a most convincing manner.

It's not a subtle story. But it gives a feeling of reality—in sharp contrast to many TV "religious" dramas which leave one with a reaction of unreality and sentimentality. In no formal sense is it preaching. But it is the best kind of preaching in the sense that what one is and does speaks more clearly than any words. Through the excellent characterizations of the minister and his wife there flows a strong practical idealism.

OKNARD, Calif. (AP)—Six electronic color-sorting machines capable of separating as many as 1,128,000 lemons daily into five color classifications, have replaced 40 human fruit graders here.

The machines are the first to be tested under packing plant conditions, the Sornis Lemon Assn. said.

Incorporated in the machines are photo tubes and memory units which register the five degrees of color in marketable lemons. Fruit passes through beams from the tubes, then drops onto separate conveyor belts according to its degree of ripeness, denoted by color.

There were 34,000 traffic accidents in New York City in 1955.

Many Guests For Basketball Tourney

By ROSEMARY EAGLES
GREENVILLE HIGH SCHOOL
The weekend and the Northeastern Conference Tournament brought old and new friends to Greenville. The younger set was busy entertaining guests and attending get-togethers and pajama parties.

ROSEMARY

One of the most popular weekend visitors was Bill W. Smiley, who had a Washington Pam Pack fan, Diane Dixon, to spend Friday and Saturday nights with her. Jane Tucker of Danville, Va. spent the weekend with Lou Ficklen. Around sixty boys and girls attended a party given by Lou at the Greenville Country Club Saturday morning in honor of Jane. Judge Stanchell entertained a crowd at a party Friday night. About twenty people enjoyed dancing, having refreshments, and watching television. A few who came over were Mike Riddick, Charles Smith, Robert Honeycutt, Lewis Phelps, Fick Arthur, Billy Boyd Cox, Mack Roebuck, Ray Hardee, Buck Flye, and Albert Crawford. Several of the girls, Frances Clark, Lois Tunnell, Frances Mosley, Lou Ficklen, and Jane Tucker, stayed over for a slumber party. "We made popcorn and cocoa before finally going to bed," stated Madge. Margaret Moyer, Sarah Ewell, Sylvia Bonner, Sally Beard, and Sylvia Saffertzwaite cruised over to Olive Morrill's home Friday night after the game. Olive, who was 18 last Tuesday, had a birthday pajama party. The girls stayed up until the wee hours gabbing and eating. Saturday morning found Susie Pope at the Medical College of Virginia in Richmond. Susie and Olive Morrill, who went up several weeks ago, are planning careers in pharmacy.

"First I had an interview with the assistant dean, Mr. Frank Pitts. I'm definitely going to school there next year," revealed Susie.

She saw the school of pharmacy and visited the Putney House. There she had a chance to talk with the student who was living in the room she will have next year. Susie and Olive plan to be roommates.

Susie and her aunt did some shopping in Richmond and were home late that afternoon.

Bright and early Saturday morning as the clock struck 6:00, Betsy Karsnak, her mother, and several friends headed for Richmond to do some shopping. During lunch at the Tea Room at Miller and Rhodes Betsy enjoyed a fashion show previewing summer styles.

"Most of the models were wearing black patent leather shoes with cotton dresses," noted Betsy.

The Karsnaks were hometown by 8:30 in time for the championship basketball game, naturally.

Nancy Ann Hoot had five girls over for a ball of a slumber party Saturday night. After the ball game Jeanne Moyer, Memrie Mosier, Nancy Harris, Joanna Rooke, Alice Lee Edwards and "Hoot" rushed into the recreation room, cut on the record player which played all night long, and were up to their usual crazy antics, especially "Operation Secret."

The girls spent the night taking pictures and eating everything from sandwiches to apples.

Finally as day dawned the sleepy girls donned pajamas and went to bed still hearing Nancy Ann's Roy Hamilton's record, "Take Me With You" and Memrie's "Hard Hearted Hannah."

Friday night, Mildred Coleman, Bryce Cummings, and Mildred's mother, father, and sister left Greenville listing their destination as Richmond, Va. to visit a great uncle. Saturday they spent shopping. "Bryce dragged me through the men's shops so I made him go with me in ladies' shops," stated Mildred. "We also stopped by the Richmond Chamber of Commerce to get information for a Civics project," she added.

Saturday night they double-dated with two of Mildred's old friends when she lived in Richmond. Sunday they spent visiting.

Lois Simmons entertained several of her friends with dinner Sunday. Susie Pope, Margaret Moyer, Lella Davenport, Sylvia Bonner, Ike Riddick, Don Conley, Bob Thompson, and Mike Riddick were on hand to enjoy the delicious barbecued chicken.

"After dinner we took some pictures, played records, and talked about source themes," stated Lois.

Paye Taylor and Patricia Evans spent Sunday in Raleigh. The girls visited relatives and took in a movie.

Lois Simmons and Lella Davenport evidently wished on the right star because they were right back at the Naval Academy for another glorious weekend Feb. 18 and 19.

They arrived at Annapolis Saturday at 1:30. They were the house guests of Clara McKeldin, the daughter of Maryland's Governor Theodore McKeldin, at the Governor's Mansion.

That afternoon they toured the campus and enjoyed a basketball game and a swimming meet.

Saturday night, Lois and Lella, in billowing aqua cocktail dresses, and their dates, Rufus Griffith of Jacksonville, Fla. and Joe Hutchinson of Charleston, S. C. attended the Hop.

Bill Simmons, a former Greenville High student of the academy and Lois' cousin, dated Clara McKeldin.

Sunday morning, Lois and Lella attended the Naval Academy Chapel and once more said goodbye to Annapolis and Maryland.

Kefauver Against Popularity Test

MILWAUKEE (AP)—Sen. Estes Kefauver (D-Tenn), the only Democratic candidate in Wisconsin's presidential primary, said that race could be "considered a popularity contest" with President Eisenhower.

Kefauver left here today for Washington. During a 30-hour campaign visit he made five speeches, filed his slate of national convention delegates with the secretary of state and learned that Adlai Stevenson will not enter the Wisconsin primary.

Stevenson, also seeking the Democratic presidential nomination, announced his decision yesterday. In a letter to Elliott Waldstead—former Democratic state chairman and head of the Wisconsin for Stevenson Club—he said his schedule would not permit time "for genuine opportunities to express my views on public policy."

The decision assured Kefauver of the support of the state's 28 delegates to the national Democratic convention.

Kefauver evaluated the Wisconsin race as "a popularity contest" with Eisenhower as he filed his slate of delegates, but added: "I am not trying to compete with the President in charm and personality and I don't think the American people want me to compete with him on that basis."

"I am thinking about what the American people want in the way of government. Those are the only issues I will take to the people."

In answer to a question, Kefauver said he would "not bring up the question of the President's health" during the campaign. The President announced yesterday that despite his heart attack last September he would seek re-election.

Whichard, home economics student, served coffee along with the cake. Those attending the meeting were Mesdames Lloyd B. Mills, Elijah Heath, William W. Alligood, Jasper A. Godley, Mattie Ham, Jamie Dall, Elino Heath, Clara R. Carr, and Sophia Clark, Esie Carawan, Betsy McRoy, Mrs. Hudson, Miss Katie Earle Owen, Omis B. Bliss, Jo Ann Elks, Roe Ann Elks, and Mrs. Ross.

The junior class at Grimesland is sponsoring a dance to be given March 3 starting at 7:30 in the high school auditorium. Candy and chances on cakes and also tickets for a cake walk.

Many parents around Grimesland have probably heard of the "Recess Club" in the past. It is made up of students who fail to get their homework and of students who have been naughty on class. This club is being reactivated. For more information on this subject be sure to read Grimesland News. The officers of this non-profit club will be announced at a later date.

The typing 2 class, under the supervision of the teacher, Mrs. Clara E. Carr, is starting a project on mimeographing and duplicating this week. They will learn the complete instruction for setting up and operating both machines.

This week's menu:
Monday—Barbecue, apple salad, hushpuppies, buttered potatoes, milk.
Tuesday—Meat loaf, rice and gravy, snaps, biscuits and butter, tossed salad, grapefruit, milk.
Wednesday—Hotdogs, french fries, pork and beans, chili and onions, finger rolls, milk.
Thursday—Ham, cream potatoes, peas, apple and raisin salad, rolls and butter, jelly, milk.
Friday—Vegetable soup, peanut butter and honey sandwiches, plimento cheese sandwiches, oatmeal cookies, apples, crackers, milk.

Money Burns In Collection Box
COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP)—Someone dropped a lighted cigaret in the collection box of St. Peter's Roman Catholic Church here.

Firemen were too late to save the contents. Fire Capt. Ray Eddings said he had no idea how much money may have been burned because "the only thing we found was a half-burned dollar bill in a half-burned envelope."

Dale Roberston Tallies Up His Past Mistakes

By BOB THOMAS
HOLLYWOOD, March 1 (AP)—Dale Robertson, newly embarked on a free-lance acting career, could write a book titled "Mistakes I Have Made."

The drawing actor is getting his career off the ground after a sensational beginning and then a dull period. Despite a generous fan following, Robertson failed to fulfill his promise. Now he can look back on the experience and profit from what went wrong.

He admits that he was too frank and too trusting.

"I got some of the press mad at me," he remarked. "In October two years ago, I counted up 188 layouts that had been done on me that year. That was entirely too much. Even if you're very fond of chicken, you're going to get tired of it if I feed it to you every day."

"So I said I wasn't going to do any more publicity for the last two months of that year. But people didn't like that. The press started potshooting at me, and some of them haven't let up since."

His big mistake, he concluded, was allowing those 188 layouts to be made in the first place.

Concerning his acting career, he said that he erred in signing with 20th Century-Fox.

"I had a good role in 'Fighting Man of the Plains,'" he explained. "The studios started courting me, and my agents urged me to sign with Fox. I thought it would be better to play the independent field; I had offers for four pictures. But my agents argued that I needed a big studio behind me."

"So I signed. And I never did get a role as good as the one I had in 'Fighting Man of the Plains.'"

The Oklahoman did some films on the lot, then became the loan-out king. He figures the studio made around $800,000 profit on his services to other producers.

The low point was his loan to Howard Hughes for the gaudy, girly "Son of Sinbad."

The start of Robertson's rebellion came when the studio planned to lend him for "White Feather"—"playing fourth lead to Robert Wagner." That's when he drew the line—and his first suspension. Thereafter he underwent a period of siege with the studio, finally getting his release last December. Since then he has made "Dakota Incident" for Republic, a Ford Theater TV show and plans to go to London next month for another film.

Editor's Note—Lois Mitchison, British newspaper writer, took a two-month tour of Red China as a British journalist. This story, written for The Associated Press, was forwarded through Hong Kong.

No Starvation Inside Red China

SHANGHAI (AP)—The people of Red China may go hungry sometimes, but they certainly do not appear to be starving.

People can be seen sitting by the doors of their houses at lunchtime, eating from large full rice bowls. Children's bellies are not swollen as they are in famine times; adults do not look unaturally thin.

The government rations several important foodstuffs, including rice and other grains, flour, cooking oil and sugar. Pork has just been taken off the ration.

Cotton cloth, the staple clothing material in China, also is rationed. The rations vary according to the individual's work—the biggest for the heaviest labor.

Chy Yu-chun of the Shanghai Municipal People's Council said Shanghai rations vary from 13 to 50 pounds a month. An office worker for instance, gets 24 pounds of rice a month. A driver of a bicycle cab 41.

The Shanghai cooking oil ration is now 10 to 14 ounces a month. The sugar ration is six ounces for people in the city, four for country people.

The cotton cloth ration for this year is 48 feet for adults in all Chinese cities and 32 feet for children. In the country it's 38 feet for adults, 30 for children.

Some unrationed food are in short supply. But vegetables and fish are plentiful. So are relatively expensive canned goods.

Five important modern kings have ruled more than 50 years—Eskander of Norway, Louis XIV of France, Franz Josef of Austria-Hungary, Victoria of England and Louis XV of France, says the National Geographic Society.

Stock Market Is Quick To Reflect Political Impact

By SAM DAWSON
NEW YORK (AP)—Elections—and election uncertainties—always give business a certain amount of the jitters. And this year the stock market has been particularly quick to respond to political predictions.

But the old belief that business—as distinct from stock trading—slows down in an election year to await results may have to be revised. In several of the more recent election years the opposite has happened.

And while many businessmen this year are particularly nervous lest something happen politically that would rock the boat and upset the current neat balance of good news, probably as many others believe that business activity will continue at a high clip despite all the political hullabaloo in coming months.

The President's decision should clear the air—as far as stock trading is concerned. But its effect on business should be very slight for awhile, many businessmen hold. Their argument is that business activity is already so high that it couldn't go much higher right away no matter how "good" the news seems. Nor could "bad" news have immediate effect.

Some businessmen point out that increasingly of recent years the presidential election has given little evidence of being the important factor in which way business activity went.

They note that stock prices rose after the elections of Coolidge and Hoover and after the first, second and fourth elections of Roosevelt. Stock prices turned down after the election of Truman but rose again by the end of that year. Stock prices were rising with the Eisenhower election but later started a long slide downward, only to begin climbing again a year later.

Business activity rose during the campaigns preceding the elections of Coolidge and Hoover and the second and third elections of Roosevelt. It rose before the Truman election sliding off afterwards, and rose before the Eisenhower election, starting down the following summer.

About all you can conclude from these examples is that political ups and downs can have quick reflection in the stock market, but that other factors—like peace or long-term economic adjustments—have much more weight with business activity.

One reason perhaps is that business planning can't be as emotional as stock trading and that consumer buying—a major factor just now—isn't affected very much by political harangues.

Dulle's Problems Entwined; Solving One Makes Another

By JAMES MARLOW
Associated Press News Analyst
WASHINGTON (AP)—Secretary of State Dulle—who says his foreign policy combines "enlightened self-interest" and "missionary spirit"—faces the endless dilemma of trying to solve one problem without making another one worse.

He has to worry not only about foreign affairs—like keeping the Russians away from the Egyptians—but also local affairs, like cotton farmers and voters in Congress, when they affected the foreign field.

These two fields can get pretty tangled, and they just did.

Tuesday, Secretary of Agriculture Benson with White House and State Department approval, announced the government will sell some of its surplus cotton abroad at cut rate prices. Whether this drive gets closer to Russia remains to be seen.

The announcement came just as the Senate was debating President Eisenhower's new farm program and some legislators were blaming the administration for "failure" to work harder to get rid of cotton and other farm surpluses.

The government, which artificially keeps up the American cotton price at home by taking cotton off the farmers' hands when it falls below a certain price, now has 12 million bales in which it has invested two billion dollars.

At once the Egyptian Embassy criticized Benson's announcement as a "very unfortunate step at this time," saying it is not only the cotton business too but has a big surplus and depends almost entirely on cotton sales for its foreign income.

If American cotton sold competitively on the world market cuts into the Egyptians' sales they may be forced to do more business with Russia, which has shown a willingness to accept Egyptian cotton in exchange for things Egypt needs.

Yet, the United States doesn't want Egypt or any other Middle Eastern country to get closer to Russia. This country just came out on the short end, diplomatically, of an Egyptian-Russian deal.

Recently, when Egypt asked the United States to halt its arms, this country, as Dulle has explained, wanted cash. Egypt is short on American dollars and couldn't pay the price. So it bartered some of its cotton with the Communists for arms.

Since the Egyptians sold their cotton to Russia, this country has been pushing hard the sale of American cotton abroad. As a result the Egyptians may be puzzled by Dulle's statements about self-interest and the "missionary spirit."

In his first broadcast to the American public in 1953 Dulle said his foreign policy would be based on "enlightened self-interest." Later and again in a broadcast last Sunday, he added these ideas:

"We need to recapture the spirit which animated our missionaries, doctors, educators, and merchants who during the last century went throughout the world carrying the benefits of a new way of life.

"For the most part these persons were not seeking to make money for themselves. What they sought and gained was the unique joy that comes from creating and sharing."

He said it would be "tragic" if Americans, by the lure of the market place, that they lost the missionary spirit.

Just Seeing Is Not Believing

BILLINGS, Mont. (AP)—Two Billings policemen thought they had a perfect case against a tavern operator on a charge of selling beer after hours after they peered through a window and saw a "clear liquid" with foam on it passed across the bar after closing time.

But a justice of the peace acquitted the operator, saying that the state had not proved the liquid in the glass was actually beer.

TRIUMPH OF THE BLENDER'S ART

I am quite sure that Doctor Brauer would never have made this statement if he had had any doubts as to the beneficial effects of fluoridation.

The writer of the article of the 27th throws a scare into the people when he states, "The fluoridation of public water supplies by the addition of one c. m. enhances the growth of cancer."

The writer of the article of the 27th refers to sodium fluoride as a poison and cautions the people about taking this poison through their systems.

There are in every profession: medicine, dentistry, law, engineering, ministerial or what have you, a few persons who must show off and assert themselves as a so-called minority.

American Medical Association, the American Dental Association, the North Carolina Dental Society, the North Carolina Medical Society and all of the State and Territorial Medical and Dental Societies enthusiastically endorse fluoridation.

Doctor Thomas L. Hagan, Chief of the Division of Dental Public Health of the United States Public Health Service on February 23, 1956, has made this statement.

It isn't a 100 per cent effective procedure but it has proved effective as high as 80 per cent in some communities.

The most noted scientists and learned men and women of the healing arts in the United States who represent organizations like the American Academy of Pediatrics, the American Association for the Advancement of Science and the National Research Council have endorsed this procedure after fifty years of research in this country.

During World War II, the State of North Carolina had one of the highest rejection rates of draftees of the forty-eight States in this country.

whether or not sodium fluoride would cause ill effects in human beings. At that time I also knew that sodium fluoride in concentrations of one to one million parts of water injected by growing children, during the years that their teeth were forming, definitely was a preventive for dental caries.

In children, adolescents and adults having badly decayed teeth means these persons so afflicted are not able to eat proper foods because of sore teeth.

The Medical Journals and Dental Journals are full of reports of the effectiveness of fluoridation of water and all of our great medical centers are unanimous in their reports that they can find no ill effects of sodium fluoride on the internal organs of the body.

Now in 1956, the years of indecision have passed. It is now the time for action for communities sincerely doing everything possible to help the people's health in general and specifically in the individual.

Clifford explained when he reported to Police Court, where he paid fines totaling $70: The car had plunged over an embankment at the bridge and overturned several times. Clifford suffered only minor injuries but the auto was called a total loss.

The GOLDEN WITCH

By ZOLA ROSS

CHAPTER TWENTY-ONE

Jason, who had thrust Michael into the Lurkins case, showed little interest when Michael reported that David would pay his own legal bills.

"Fair enough. I'm not one to part with a dollar unless I see a reasonable chance of getting ten cents extra on it."

He didn't go near David but he kept in touch with Michael in a way that told Michael he still retained his interest. Sometimes it seemed to Michael that out of all Seattle only Jason and Meg cared about David's involvement in it.

Seattle newspapermen pestered him. One suggested Judge Yankers should hold court in the armory. "I wonder how a peanut concession would do?"

Michael was amazed at Meg's departure from the pattern and had little hope of Tim's accomplishments in California. He would do the best he could here.

He concentrated on the possibility of getting a bachelor's degree. Married men would dare to give David the benefit of the doubt.

Michael's personal popularity was on the wane, as he had jeeringly predicted. Even Matilda disapproved and many women out him dead when they met him.

The public had no chance to snub David. From the day he was released on bail, he never left the gray house. Michael saw that he got groceries at regular intervals, but whether or not David cared, Michael didn't know.

Meg heard of the trial from Michael. Matilda disapproving, did not refuse to furnish the hot toddy Meg requested. Mr. Cox had leavened her to man's needs for alcoholic pick-me-ups.

"They've made up their minds, Meg. If I challenged every juror with a preconceived notion of this case, I shouldn't get a jury before next July."

"Doesn't character mean anything?" Meg cried. "My goodness, I've heard folks—Gretchen and Matilda too—call David 'one of the few good men alive.' Now all that's blotted out, forgotten."

"If he were on trial for murder, people would remember. But a crime to do with men and women is different."

It was so, Meg thought. With sex involved, everybody believed the worst. Sex was secret. Everybody liked to peek behind curtains if he thought he wouldn't be caught.

"Folks know they themselves are capable of plenty," she snapped. "Maybe we like to think other people are worse!"

"Exactly." Michael finished his toddy and rose. "David's lucky to have somebody who believes in him as you do, Meg."

"And as you do."

"Yes." His gray eyes were bleak. "I might make a better defense if I didn't."

"What?"

He nodded. "If I were defending him only for the fee I might use tricks, skulduggery. Maybe I ought to hunt for them. Maybe I'm wrong to depend upon the truth."

Hearing the compassion in his voice, Meg knew he was abashed by it. Michael believed in principles, justice! Many men—Kemp and Jason, for instance—were touched only by things affecting themselves. Meg knew she was like that too.

Perhaps her unaccustomed humility made her wakeful. She had barely dozed when she heard footsteps in the hall. Gretchen must be prowling again. Meg had a sudden impulse to keep her company. Hot milk might make her sleepy.

"Gretchen," she called softly from her open door.

The midnight stroller turned. Meg felt like a person who expected to pick up a kitten only to find her hands about a cougar.

"Anna!"

"Oh, it's you, Meg." Anna looked tired, her eyes ringed, her manner dejected. "I was going to make myself some peppermint tea. I couldn't sleep."

Finding no valid reason for re-entreat, Meg padded down the stairs in Anna's wake.

"I'd like some tea myself. My stomach's queasy." What convulsing creatures pregnant women were! Ordinary individuals had no defense against them.

"Of course." Anna could not quite conceal her reluctance. "Toast? A bit of solid food sometimes helps."

"Only tea." Meg's usually cast-iron countenance recoiled.

She sipped her tea while Anna drank two cups. They did not speak but the involuntary camaraderie of a shared table touched them. Their eyes met. Impulsively Meg spoke. "Anna, why do you believe what you do—about David?"

Anger flicked Anna's face and was gone. She answered automatically. "I was always afraid."

"Of David?" Meg was incredulous.

"No. Oh I don't know. David's two years younger than I am. He came from a rich home. My mother was—dull red stained Anna's cheeks—"she was his father's cook. When we were children, we played together. When David and his father came to our music, David left home. I went along."

Meg's imagination supplied the missing details. The little boy from upstairs had turned to the girl from the kitchen. Grown up, David had sensed that Anna knew the world into which he was suddenly thrust a better than he did.

"I was glad when we came to Seattle. I thought—away from folks who'd know our families..."

Anna paused. After a long moment, she went on. "When our child died—and we never had another—I worried. Then she came."

Meg understood. However faultily, Louise had shared David's world of music. No wonder Anna resented her.

Meg put out her hand, covered Anna's limp fingers. "It isn't true. I'm sure it isn't true!"

Anna was quiescent only a moment. Jerking free, she thrust her face forward, glaring into Meg's startled eyes.

"You could be sure because you're beautiful! No man would turn away from you! Women like Jenny and me know different! Jenny's man left her! You don't understand because no man would ever quit—quit loving after you!"

Meg shrank before her fury.

THE PHANTOM

OZARK IKE

BLONDIE

Why, Anna hated her! Any plea she made for David would only alienate his wife still more.

"David may go to prison," Meg faltered, unable to remain silent. Anna's anger vanished as swiftly as it had come. "Yes, if he does, I'll go to him there."

Meg stared. Her skin crawled. Why, prison didn't frighten Anna at all! In prison, she would own David. He would be shut away from others, be dependent upon her visits. She could possess him!

Possession! Kemp had accused her of wanting to possess him. She shivered. Any alliance with Anna, however indirect, revolted her.

"I'm going to bed." She couldn't stand the sight of Anna another minute.

Anna said nothing. When Meg glanced over her shoulder, Anna was slumped in her chair, her eyes empty.

Back in bed, Meg continued to shiver under Matilda's ample covers. She wished she knew what Uncle Tim was doing. He wasn't very lucky. Every business transaction he entered had a way of turning bad.

Still, she tried to comfort herself. Uncle Tim was a born snoop.

If San Francisco knew anything about the Fenner he would discover it. Maybe there wasn't anything to discover. Meg finally dozed off into uneasy sleep, weighted with melancholy and foreboding.
