FOUR PROBES OF SEA DISASTER

Ship's Bow Smashed In Collision

The Swedish liner Stockholm is shown with her bow badly smashed in collision with the Italian liner Andrea Doria in a heavy fog off the Massachusetts coast Wednesday night. The Stockholm reported that one of her holds was flooded. The Andrea Doria listed badly and all of her 1,132 passengers were rescued by other vessels within five hours after the collision 45 miles south of Nantucket Island. Despite her own damage, the Stockholm took aboard about 425 people from Andrea Doria. (AP Wirephoto).

Where Ocean Liners Collided

The black cross on this map locates the approximate position where the Italian liner Andrea Doria and the Swedish liner Stockholm collided in a fog 45 miles south of Nantucket Island off the Massachusetts coast Wednesday night. All of the 1,134 passengers were rescued from the listing Andrea Doria within five hours. The Stockholm also was damaged badly but she took aboard about 425 people from the Italian liner. Rules Waived For Disaster Survivors

NEW YORK (AP)—There were 760 of them. Most were half clad. Some were still dazed and many were numbed.

Passport requirements were waived for their arrival and public health inspection was suspended. There was no need for customs; they had no baggage.

Throngs cheered or wept as they arrived last night aboard the French liner Ile de France. They had left Europe amidst comfort and splendor of the luxury liner Andrea Doria. They arrived haggard and worn out, survivors of the collision that sent the Andrea Doria to the bottom of the Atlantic and damaged the Swedish ship Stockholm.

Nearly all of the Andrea Doria's 1,600 passengers and crew members were saved in a dramatic rescue operation by the Ile de France and other vessels.

Their stories were different. Some told of nerves of steel, of heroism, of sacrifice. Others recalled screams and chaos.

There were stories of death too. Dr. T. S. Peterson of Upper Montclair, N.J., told how his wife was crushed to death in the collision and he was unable to free her.

In the next cabin, he said, he discovered the bodies of Camille M. Cianfarra, Madrid correspondent of the New York Times, and

NEW YORK (AP)—Four investigations were mapped today in quest of the answer to this question—what caused the disastrous collision which sank the Italian luxury liner Andrea Doria and severely damaged the Swedish liner Stockholm?

That question echoed around the world as the last 533 survivors from the sunken vessel arrived in New York aboard the Stockholm. Her bow was shredded by the crash.

Planning probes were the Swedish and Italian consulates of New York. In addition, the House Merchant Marine Committee announced it would ask the Coast Guard to make its own study.

Without a request from Congress, the Coast Guard could not act because the collision occurred outside U.S. territorial waters and did not involve an American ship.

Rep. Herbert C. Bonner (D-N.C.), chairman of the House committee, said the Coast Guard probe was appropriate because so many Americans were passengers on the vessels.

Dr. Giuseppe Ali, general manager of the Italian line in New York, cut short a vacation in Italy and flew back today to begin a personal investigation.

Perhaps the foremost point in the mystery was:

How could two such ships—each equipped with the finest navigational equipment, including radar—fail to detect each other's presence in time?

But there were other puzzles, too:

Was the Andrea Doria or the Stockholm, off course?

Responsible officers of the two ships and their companies shed no immediate light on any of these matters.

There were some unofficial theories on the accident.

Dr. David Atlas, director of the Blue Hills Air Force radar station at Milton, Mass., put forward one of them.

It was that the heavy fog in which the ships collided off Massachusetts late Wednesday night may have played tricks with the two vessels' radar.

He said, "If there is a blanket of cold, moist air below warm dry air, like the reported fog bank, the radar beams would bounce off it as though it were a mirror."

Radar devices are contrived in such a way that radio waves sent out will reflect back whenever they strike an object.

The Andrea Doria's skipper, Capt. Piero Calamai, who arrived last night with many other survivors, remained silent on all of the questions.

Haggard and worn, he read a brief statement largely confined to a commendation of the sweeping rescue efforts by other ships.

The only other comment from the ship's crewmen was a statement by one that he saw the vessels radar screen in operation after the collision.

Earlier, 1,137 of the Andrea Doria's passengers had been brought into New York by other ships. Of these, 49 were in hospitals. Thirty-one others had left after treatment.

The death toll remained at seven.

The Coast Guard said it had determined that the exact number of passengers and crewmen aboard the Andrea Doria was 1,706—1,134 passengers and 572 crew members. Earlier figures were slightly higher.

The Coast Guard said approximately 26 of those aboard still were unaccounted for. It added, however, that there always was the possibility of errors in the confusion surrounding the mishap and the figure did not necessarily mean that many were actually missing.

Salvage experts voiced great doubt that a vessel of the 30,000-ton Andrea Doria's size could be raised. It sank in water 222 feet deep.

No ship of its dimensions ever has been raised in water of that depth, it was said. The cost of such an undertaking, if it could be done, would be staggering.

Survivors of the collision, which occurred when the Andrea Doria met the 26,000-ton Stockholm at a point about 45 miles south of Nantucket Island, gave gripping accounts of the nightmarish episode as they debarked from the first rescue ships here.

The Andrea Doria went down with a 40-foot slash in her starboard (right) forward side. The Italian liner was steaming back to New York from the Mediterranean, while the Stockholm was outbound headed for Copenhagen.

British, French Relations With Egypt Strained

LONDON (AP)—Diplomatic relations between Egypt and the British and French governments reached a crisis today over Egypt's seizure of the Suez Canal Co. under a nationalization decree.

The company was French-controlled and the British government held 44 per cent of its stock. This dropped 21 per cent on the Paris market and the French franc—already staggering under the impact of inflation—lost more of its value in relation to gold.

Egypt's President Gamal Abdel Nasser announced last night Egypt was expropriating the 101-mile canal and would use its revenues to finance the Aswan Dam.

French Foreign Minister Christian Pineau called in Egyptian Ambassador Kamel Eddine Abdel al and protested the action in what informed sources called "energetic language."

After the conference diplomatic relations between France and Egypt were described as almost at the breaking point. The Egyptian ambassador called Pineau's words "inadmissible and unacceptable" and said he thought his government would have to reconsider its relations with France.

British Prime Minister Eden told a tense House of Commons that nationalization of the waterway had created a serious situation which would have to be handled with "firmness and care."

Reacting with fiery language to withdrawal of British and United States offers to help finance the $1,300,000,000 Aswan Dam of the Nile, Nasser declared in Alexandria:

"We don't have to seek American and British aid for building our dam. We'll build the dam ourselves and with our own money."

Nasser said Egypt would realize 100 million dollars a year from the canal to build the dam. Figures from the canal company indicated he might have to double tolls to do so.

The canal is the major channel for Middle East oil. This was reflected on the Paris market, with a $6.50 drop in Esso Standard stock to $189 a share.

Eden remained silent on suggestions from some members of Parliament that Britain might have to use force against Egypt. But he said his government was considering stopping shipment of all British arms to Egypt.

The British aircraft carrier Eagle, major unit of the British navy closest to Egypt, remained at Naples, Italy.

Eden said his government was consulting with other interested governments, including the United States and France, Australia and Italy also were in contact with other interested governments, saying the Egyptian action might restrict free use of the canal by world shipping.

Egypt recently recognized Red China and its action was condemned by the official spokesman of the Chinese Nationalist Foreign Ministry in Formosa.

Relations between Cairo and Paris over the Suez Canal affair were complicated by French resentment at what the French consider a broken promise by Nasser to avoid intervention in Algeria, where Arab nationalists are in revolt.

Foreign Minister Pineau claimed after visiting Cairo earlier this year that Nasser gave his word "as a soldier" not to train troops in Egypt for the Algerian nationalists, or otherwise intervene in the revolt.

The French Foreign Ministry said Pineau strongly protested to-day against recent statements by Nasser regarding the conflict in Algeria. He was said to have told the Egyptian ambassador that Algeria was in no way concerned with the Egyptian government.

Pineau called the canal seizure "an act of plunder."

Pineau said he had informed the Egyptian ambassador of the French views without prejudice to formal protest notes the British and French governments were sending to Cairo.

"I had occasion to indicate to him that we regretted Col. Nasser had failed in the word he had given on his attitude regarding Algeria," Pineau said. "But I emphasized that the act of plunder he committed today was of an infinitely more grave character."

Emerging from an hour-long meeting with a group of Cabinet ministers, including those responsible for the armed services, Pineau told reporters:

"The Cabinet agreed with me that we absolutely cannot accept the unilateral action decided by Col. Nasser. It considered too that nationalization of an international company is not at all the same from the legal point of view as the seizure of a nationalized public service. And, finally, it considered that the action taken considerably harms French rights and interests."

"We have decided to act in full agreement with our allies and I have been instructed accordingly in view of the journey I am making to London on Monday."

Legislative Action Ends On Pearsall Amendments

RALEIGH (AP)—Legislative action on constitutional amendments embodying the Pearsall plan for dealing with the school segregation crisis was completed today as the Senate approved the measure 48 to 0. The amendments will be submitted to the people in an election Sept. 8.

The Senate, sitting as a committee of the whole, approved them yesterday afternoon. This made action by the full Senate today a foregone conclusion.

Adjournment of the special session of the Legislature before the end of the day seemed a virtual certainty.

The plan, which makes some integration possible if the people of a local school district are willing, is designed to prevent any child from having to attend an integrated school against the will of his parents by providing grants to pay tuition in private schools. It also provides that the people of a local school district can vote to abolish their schools to avoid integration.

Under the plan, two constitutional amendments to allow the local option elections and the tuition grants will be submitted to the voters of the state on Sept. 8.

Machinery legislation to make the tuition grants and local option elections effective would not become law if the constitutional amendments are not approved by the people.

The Lake plan, the idea of former Asst. Atty. Gen. I. Beverly Lake, also would have had the people vote on a change in the constitution.

In effect, it would have abolished the constitutional mandate that a public school system be maintained and given to the Legislature the authority to create or abolish public schools in any particular district.

In the House the vote last night was 106-2 for the constitutional amendments provision of the Pearsall plan, voting against were Reps. Dan K. Edwards of Durham and T. E. Story of Wilkes, a Republican.

Edwards said he wanted a provision assuring adequate private schools before the closing of public schools in an area. Story did not explain his vote.

Rep. B. I. Satterfield of Person, who introduced the Lake plan in the House, commented, "We that led the fight are convinced that the Pearsall plan will wreck the schools."

Gov. Hodges, a strong backer of the Pearsall plan, called the Legislature into its first special session in 18 years last Monday.

The target date for adjournment was tomorrow.

The Pearsall plan was the brain child of the governor's Advisory Committee on Education, whose chairman was Thomas Pearsall of Rocky Mount.

The committee was created by the 1955 Legislature but Hodges appointed its members.

Seven-Year-Old Farmville Boy Dies Of Paralytic Polio; Not Immunized

By EDWINA HAYMES
Reflector Staff Writer

A seven-year-old Farmville boy died last night of paralytic polio. He was the third victim of the disease in Pitt County this year and the second from Farmville. All three cases were reported within the past week. None of the victims had been immunized.

Little Lewis Edward Moye, son of Mr. and Mrs. Howard D. Moye of 211 E. Horne Avenue in Farmville, died between 9 and 9:30 last night at Woodard-Herring Hospital in Wilson, enroute to Duke Hospital where he was being taken by a local pediatrician. His death came within 24 hours after the symptoms of polio became prominent and within six hours after developing respiratory difficulty late yesterday afternoon.

The other two polio victims, an 11-month-old white girl of Ayden and a five-year-old Negro boy of Farmville, are undergoing hospital treatment.

Closing Pool

Health Director Walter C. Humbert, who reported the Moye child's death this morning, said the Farmville swimming pool is being closed as a precautionary measure, and additional polio vaccination clinics will be held at the Health Department.

Tuesday night the Polio Committee of the Pitt County Medical and Dental Society recommended that no emergency clinics be held throughout the county as a result of the two previously reported polio cases.

Dr. G. E. Trevathan Jr., chairman of the committee, said this morning the group will apparently not change that decision, as he feel the additional Health Department clinics will satisfactorily meet the need at this time.

The committee, in making its earlier decision, said it felt emergency clinics at this time "would be ineffective in view of the exhaustive amount of publicity over the past several months stressing the need for the vaccinations, and the mediocre response to the vaccine available." Instead, it endorsed a plan for a concentrated immunization program in the schools this fall.

Only about 40 per cent of the eligible children have received one or two Salk injections and only about 500 have gotten the complete series of three shots.

Severe Virus

Dr. Humbert said today, "It is evident to the doctors here that a very severe strain of paralytic polio virus is in this community. We are thankful that at least 40 per cent of the children have received one or two of the immunizations."

He explained that the virus which has invaded Pitt County is the very severe paralytic, or Bulbar, type of polio. Most polio cases in the past have been the mild or non-paralytic type.

The health director emphasized the importance of vaccinating every child between six months and 10 years of age "immediately" and that the age group affected by the virus so far.

He also offered the following precautionary measures to parents:

1. Keep children away from gatherings.

2. Prevent them from getting overtly fatigued.

3. Do not traveling.

4. If a child begins to lose his appetite, develop a stomach disorder, fever, headache, sore throat, keep him quiet and call the family physician.

Plenty of Vaccine

He pointed out there is plenty of Salk vaccine available in the county, in the private physicians' offices, at the Health Department and its various clinics.

The polio vaccine clinic at the Greenville health office will remain open until 4 p.m. tomorrow and additional clinics will be held Wednesday afternoon.

In Farmville the polio clinics will be held as regularly scheduled, on Saturday morning and Thursday afternoon.

Parents must accompany their children or send a written request for the vaccine to the Health Department clinics.

Funeral Services

The Moye child reportedly became ill July 16 but developed no prominent symptoms of polio until yesterday afternoon.

The family has been making its summer home, as is its custom, on Route 1 Farmville.

Funeral services will be held at the home in Farmville tomorrow morning at 11 o'clock. Services will be conducted by the Rev. Z.

Two Beauties Take Edge For N.C. Title

MOREHEAD CITY, N. C. (AP)—Miss Wake County and Miss Dunn were a step closer to the Miss North Carolina crown today than the 39 other beauties vying for the honor of representing the state in the Miss America pageant in September.

Miss Wake County, Sonja Marie Averette, won in her group in the evening gown competition last night. Miss Dunn, Becky Lee, won in her group in the bathing suit division.

They will enter the preliminary finals tomorrow night at which winners in the evening gown, bathing suit and talent divisions will be announced.

Miss Averette is an 18-year-old brunette from Puquay. Varina Lejeune, Before the parade the girls rehearsed for the pageant under the direction of Mrs. Hannah Block of Wilmington.

be happier if I were chosen Miss North Carolina."

Miss Lee, a 21-year-old brunette with hazel eyes is 5-7, weighs 125 and measures 37-24-37 in the right places.

The board of judges who will select Miss North Carolina of 1957 tomorrow night includes Miss America, Sharon Kay Ritchie, and Miss North Carolina, Faye Arnold of Raleigh.

They and the other judges will watch the girls go through their paces tonight in more preliminaries in the three divisions.

The pageant, sponsored by the Morehead City Chamber of Commerce, opened yesterday with a parade down Arendell Street headed by a Marine band from Camp Lejeune. Before the parade the girls rehearsed for the pageant under the direction of Mrs. Hannah Block of Wilmington.

McKeon Defense Asks 'Chesty' Puller Testify

PARRIS ISLAND, S.C. (AP)—A crusty, old-time Marine hero, Lt. Gen. Lewis B. "Chesty" Puller, was asked today to appear as a witness in the trial of S. Sgt. Matthew C. McKeon.

Puller, now retired, is the only Marine ever to hold five Navy Crosses and a Distinguished Service Cross.

Defense attorney Emilie Zola Berman of New York City asked the Marines to order Puller to active duty and bring him here as a defense witness.

"I think he is an authority on training methods," Berman said.

How Marines are trained has become an issue in the McKeon trial, especially whether night disciplinary marches are a common practice.

McKeon is facing a seven-man court-martial on charges growing out of a march he led into tide-swept Ribbon Creek last April 8, on which six recruits drowned.

As a result, McKeon is charged with involuntary manslaughter, oppression of recruits and drinking on duty.

Puller is a veteran of Korea, four campaigns in World War II, China, Nicaragua and Haiti. He holds 14 personal decorations for combat.

In making his request for Puller's appearance, Berman said he knew the general "only by reputation" and hoped he will be able to testify "about the middle of the week."

Puller now lives at Saluda, Va. Puller probably is the most outspoken general the Marine Corps can boast.

Shortly after he returned from Korea, Puller made headlines by court-martial on charges growing

Egypt Takes Over Control Of Suez

CAIRO, Egypt (AP)—Egypt has served notice she is taking over full control of the Suez Canal and will use the revenue from the vital waterway to finance her billion-dollar Aswan dam project.

The United States and Britain last week withdrew offers to help build the giant dam.

"We don't have to seek American and British aid for building our dam," President Gamal Abdel Nasser declared last night in a speech in Alexandria's Liberal Square. "We'll build the dam ourselves and with our own money."

Minutes after Nasser announced nationalization of the internationally controlled canal, officials seized offices of the Suez Canal Co. in Cairo, Ismailia, Port Said and Suez.

An announcement in Port Said said the Canal Zone had been declared an Egyptian military area immediately following Nasser's nationalization statement.

The announcement, issued by Col. Abdel Hamid Bahgat, a member of the Egyptian committee formed by civilians and military men for controlling the canal company's offices in Port Said, read:

"The Suez Canal Zone is now an Egyptian military zone. Any action aimed at harming the interests or properties of the newly nationalized company and preventing the smooth functioning of traffic will be a military crime and be subject of the maximum penalty of the law."

Nasser accused the United States and Britain of trying to use the Aswan project as a lever to gain domination over Egypt.

He said the two Western nations—prior to withdrawal—had offered 70 million dollars toward construction of the project to harness the Nile River at Aswan.

This, he declared, was an attempt at "economic domination as a prelude to political domination."

He predicted that by taking over the great Suez waterway linking the Mediterranean to the Red Sea, Egypt could derive 100 million dollars in annual revenue.

who said he had never heard of a night march by recruits here, and he has been here since Sept. 21, 1953.

A document produced by the defense which indicated that the House Armed Services Committee in May had given the Marine Corps 90 days to clean house.

The court is concerned with a night disciplinary march ordered by McKeon in which six recruits drowned.

At the time of the March, April 8, Silvey was operations and training officer. His section had charge of preparing plans for recruit training. He was the highest ranking Marine officer to take the stand for the prosecution.

Silvey also told the court that he had never conducted a night inspection of the marshy areas back of the 3rd Recruit Battalion, or behind the rifle range.

Books & Stuff

By DR. ED HIRSHBERG

Yesterday—July 26—marked the 100th anniversary of the birth of George Bernard Shaw, acknowledged by most people who should know as the greatest dramatist of the 20th century. . . . Preferring to be known in his later years as Bernard, because he thought George sounded too British, Shaw is the only playwright who began writing in the 1890's whose plays are still presented successfully.

"My Fair Lady," the musicalized version of "Pygmalion," is just settling down to what will probably be the longest running musical comedy in decades. . . . "Major Barbara" will be staged on Broadway next season, and versions of "Man and Superman," "St. Joan," "The Doctor's Dilemma," and many more have been delighting audiences consistently since they first were produced. . . .

Shavian Shenanigans are going on all over the place to celebrate his 100th birthday—which he missed by only six years. In Chicago, for example, the mayor proclaimed yesterday as "Bernard Shaw Day" and the event was attended by suitable festivities, including a morning symposium on Shaw as playwright, prophet, philosopher, politician and personality; and a luncheon of vegetables only—Shaw became a confirmed vegetarian at 25—with the dishes named after some of his plays: "Misalliance of Combination Salad," "Raspberry Sauce," etc. . . .

In London, the Old Vic will present "Major Barbara" and "Caesar and Cleopatra" for two week runs, and there will be various TV shows and the like to commemorate the great event. Shall we have "Bernard Shaw Week" in Greenville, and just forget all about what's going on in Raleigh these days? . . .

New Issues

"The Fallen Angel and Other Stories" is a new book of short stories just put out by the UNC Press, and is by William T. Polk, former associate editor of the Greensboro Daily News, and author of "Southern Accent," which many of you will remember as one of the better offerings of the 1953 publishing season. Mr. Polk, who died last year, spoke at our Community Arts Festival Luncheon in 1955, and is known by many Greenvilleans as a true southern gentleman and scholar. His daughter now teaches in our school system, and we hope to have a review of his latest book for her—and you all—to read soon. . . .

"Report on Blacklisting," by John Cogley, is a controversial story on the policies and problems involving employment in the entertainment industry. Sponsored by the Fund for the Republic, it's an account—based, from what we can gather—of the effect of the Communist witch-hunts on people's prospects for getting and holding their jobs in the movies, radio and TV. . . .

Today's Review

Mrs. Sydney Marshall contributes her opinions about "Damn Yankees," the "book" of a musical comedy now running very successfully in New York. It's a recent choice of the Fireside Theatre, which puts out popular plays on a monthly subscription basis, and provides one way to keep up with what's happening on Broadway these days. . . . The Address is Garden City, N. Y., in case you want to find out more about the Fireside deal. . . .

Damn Yankees. By Douglas Wallop and George Abbott. New York: The Fireside Theatre, 1956. "Damn Yankees!" is a fantasy about the Washington Senators. Douglas Wallop, author of the parent book, "The Year the Yankees Lost the Pennant," and his musical co-author and director, George Abbott, no doubt theorized that it's easier to sell the Yankees, damned or defeated, than it is to sell the Nats on the best day of Griffith Stadium ever knew. . . . One middle-aged, die-hard Washington fan gets so exercised that he offers to sell his soul just to change things once. The Devil (alias Applegate) snaps up the bargain, and before you can say "Jackie Robinson," our hero has been transformed into 22-year-old "Shoelace Joe from Hannibal, Mo.," batting average .524. Joe not only hits the longest ball on record, but fields like crazy, he gives the team heart, "miles and miles and miles" of it. And they DO beat the Yankees. . . .

Of course, there are complications. Number one, a lady reporter, who gets the bright idea of checking Joe's background in Hannibal, Mo. And, number two—Lola! She's no lady. She's a witch, 172 years old by her own admission. She is the Devil's device for keeping Joe's mind off his wife. She naturally winds up rooting for Joe when it develops that all the Devil really wants is Joe's soul and he's been a Yankee fan all the time. (Wouldn't ya know?) But Joe goes back to his wife like the All-American he is. . . .

A bunch of fan clubs put on a real hoe-down in the first act, but this is pretty well lost on the reader. In fact, much of the spirit of this musical must lie in the music, the dancing, and the staging. The dialogue is not rib-tickling, though some of the situations must be wonderfully funny to see. . . . Perhaps Fireside Theatre publishes musicals on the premise that "well, if you're not going to see it at all, this is better than nothing." But is it? Why not read Wallop's original book (it was book-of-the-month!), buy the records, and wait for the movie? It won't be long. . . .

First Life Membership Award Presented To Goddard's Widow

By JANE EADS

WASHINGTON — The newly formed Auxiliary of the American Rocket Society has awarded its first life membership to the widow of Dr. Robert H. Goddard, who pioneered in the field of guided missiles. . . .

Mrs. Goddard told the auxiliary's meeting here how she worked with her husband for 10 years at Roswell, N. M., where he was experimenting with high altitude rockets on a Guggenheim grant in the '30s. . . .

"I helped him in the way a wife would have helped," she said. "I took notes, ordered scientific supplies, kept the accounts—even sewed the special parachutes for the rockets because these couldn't be bought at that time." . . .

"Goddard's rocket, developed during World War I, was the model for the bazooka of World War II," Mrs. Goddard pointed out. During War II her husband was director of jet propulsion research for the Navy's Bureau of Aeronautics. After her husband's death . . .

The value and importance of right motives in daily living will be emphasized at Christian Science services Sunday. Readings from "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy in the Lesson-Sermon entitled "Love" will include the following (454:17-21): "Love for God and man is the true incentive in both healing and teaching. Love inspires, illumines, designates, and leads the way. Right motives give pinpoints to thought, and strength and freedom to speech and action." The freedom-giving power of divine Love will also be brought out in the Scriptural readings which include the following (1 John 4:18): "There is no fear in love; but perfect love casteth out fear; because fear hath torment. He that feareth is not made perfect in love."

Miss Anne Wilkerson of 120 Longmeadow Road will have her brother Edwin Jr. as one of her marshals when she makes her debut at the Terschorean Club's 1956 Debutante Ball.

He, a rising senior at Greenville High School, and Anne share many mutual interests, among which are the ball excitement, of course, and a secondary one—a Hi-Fi set.

Together they have amassed quite a record collection of all kinds. Favorites are those of Jackie Gleason and Otto Cesani's Orchestra.

Miss Wilkerson's other marshals are UNC senior Richard Armstrong of La Grange, her cousin who will be head, and Charles White Jr. of the hometown, a student at East Carolina College.

Miss Wilkerson reports she was so excited when her invitation to the Debutante Ball came that she could "hardly believe it."

One of the things she's most thrilled about is seeing old friends at the ball, many of whom are former St. Mary's friends of hers.

Upon graduation from Greenville High School, Miss Wilkerson attended St. Mary's for one year. At the close of that year she entered East Carolina College where she will complete her course in business administration next spring. She's also following up her interest in French and will lack only a few credits for a degree in it by spring. She hopes to combine the two fields in some branch of governmental work when she completes her education.

At St. Mary's, Miss Wilkerson was a cheerleader, proctor, member of Stage Coach staff, the college yearbook, and Altar Guild. She will serve as secretary of the Student Government Association at ECC for 1956-57.

Miss Wilkerson is "just wild" about bridge, likes to try her hand at the piano, is fond of knitting BETHEL—The Couples Club met with Mr. and Mrs. A. M. McWhorter when they entertained members and invited guests. The home was decorated with vases of gladioli.

Soon after the last guest arrived, the hostess served iced drinks and later during the evening a sweet course was enjoyed.

When the scores were totaled, Mrs. Alton Carson and Mrs. William Andrews were winners of the high score prizes.

Others who attended were Mr. and Mrs. Irvin Taylor, Mr. and Mrs. F. L. Andrews Jr., Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Mizelle, Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Gurganus Sr. and Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Smith.

Mr. and Mrs. Wadie Ward were hosts to the Couples Club in their country home on Monday night. Arrangements of summer flowers were used throughout the house.

Between the second and third progressions, seven-up float and cup cakes were served.

At the end of play, Mr. and Mrs. Alvah Jackson were the recipients of the high score prizes.

and also likes to read. She lists Pearl S. Buck as one of her favorite authors.

A brunette with blue eyes, fair complexion and soft waves framing her face, Miss Wilkerson is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Wilkerson. She's made some preparations for the ball but will do most of her shopping with the help of her aunt from High Point who knows a lot about what she will need since she's had two daughters to "come out" recently.

Miss Wilkerson talks about the ball with eyes beaming and excitement evident in her voice. She has her engraved invitation from the Raleigh Terschorean Club displayed in a prominent place in her room. It will eventually find a more permanent place of abode for itself along with other souvenirs of that memorable weekend in September.

They Live And Work With Danger

Few people look upon the average law enforcement officer as a man whose daily business requires that he be ready at any moment to brush with death and let the chips fall where they may.

In the eyes of many, the sheriff or his deputy is a man with a soft job riding in an automobile, serving papers and enjoying delightful hours sitting around a store between trips.

The patrolman they view as a guy who likes nothing better than to stomp down on a siren, chew out an innocent driver and disappears into thin air when a really careless driver takes to the road.

School District Faces A Continuing Demand

It will be a welcome day when construction begins on the new gymnasium for C. M. Epps High School in Greenville. It will be an even happier day when the new facility is ready for use approximately a year from now.

Like a number of facilities which are now being added to the city school system, the gym has long been needed. The combination gym-auditorium at the school has long ceased to be adequate for the school's activities. The new gym will provide adequate space for sports and other activities of the school and will pave the way for other use of the space which has been devoted to gymnasium use.

Next Thursday the State Board of Education is slated to consider bids already received for construction of the gym, and unless there are unforeseen developments the green light will be given for work to begin.

Within the past few years Greenville has undertaken an extensive expansion program for both its white and Negro schools. Classrooms and other school facilities have been added to meet the needs of a rapidly increasing enrollment. For the most part, Greenville has met its school needs better than many other communities. It has not, however, reached the point where existing facilities and those under construction will be adequate to meet the needs of future years.

With the rate of growth the city has enjoyed for the past decade, and the rapid increase in enrollment in its public schools, Greenville must continue the expansion of its school facilities. If the pace of expansion which has taken place in the past six years is slackened, it will be only a short time before serious shortages of classroom space and other facilities will again confront the local school administration.

All of which means that in spite of the large amount of state and local funds which have been spent in school construction in the Greenville school district in the past few years, more funds must be forthcoming year by year to keep pace with increased enrollment.

The prospect may be discouraging to taxpayers, but if the city is to provide for its future growth and progress, it must provide adequate facilities for educating its young people.

An Applied Lesson In Community Spirit

Farmville and its civic-minded citizens are to be congratulated for the interest in the well-being of their community that is evidenced in the construction of a new fire station.

Farmville's fire department has outgrown its present quarters in the town hall as have several other departments housed there. Under the direction of Fire Chief Haywood Smith $8,000 in individual contributions toward the new fire station were made by the people of Farmville. The town's Commissioners appropriated $6,000 and the building is now under construction.

In this day of bond issues and other methods of financing municipal needs, it is indeed a tribute to the people of a community when they collectively contribute funds for a needed facility without sitting back and waiting for the government to collect the money in taxes or raise it through a bond issue. Besides digging into their pockets for more than half the money for the fire station, volunteer firemen and other citizens of Farmville are giving their time in actually constructing the new building in order to hold down the cost.

Had the people of Farmville followed the pattern of people in many other communities, they would have done without a new fire station until such time as the amount necessary was available from the municipal government and the governing board saw fit to appropriate it. In the normal course of things this would have been several years.

But not the citizens of Farmville. They recognized the need and evidenced their willingness to help provide the new fire station by contributions of money and labor. The governing board appropriated what it could from municipal funds for the project.

This applied lesson in community cooperation is evidence of the pride the people of Farmville have in their town and its facilities. It is a spirit which makes the difference between a community which forges ahead by the collective efforts of its citizenry and communities which sit back and wait for progress be handed to them without effort on their own part.

The policeman? Well in a lot of eyes he's the guy in a blue uniform who leisurely strolls the streets, drinks at least a dozen free cups of coffee during his eight hour shift, and spends his time talking with the town loafers.

The ABC officer is seen as a sort of nature boy, roaming the woods when the urge strikes him, and occasionally stumbling upon a still which he wrecks.

For the dedicated men in all branches of law enforcement work, it is altogether a different story. These men, and only a few citizens who know them best, fully appreciate the hazards which daily accompany them on their jobs. Only their families are conscious of the constant risk involved in preserving the public peace and tracking down those who have violated the law.

Few think of sheriff's as men who might catch a load of buckshot in the stomach while serving a warrant as did a deputy in Roanoke Rapids this week. Few people think of a policeman's lonely night vigil in dark alleys where petty thieves may become trigger happy. Few consider the danger facing a patrolman when he has to give chase at 100 miles an hour to stop a driver before he kills himself or others on the road. Not many appreciate the job of the ABC officer who gives chase to bootleggers or sits in the dark woods through the night waiting for an operator—armed perhaps—to come to a still.

Look at a veteran law enforcement officer, and you look at a dedicated man who discounts the risk of his daily task to make his community a decent place for his own family and his fellow citizens.

Legislators Owed Thanks Of Tarheels

By LYNN NISBET

EXTRAORDINARY — The members of the General Assembly are entitled to sympathetic appreciation on part of all the people for their patient attention to multiplied hours of oratory, most of it completely unrelated to the subject matter of the pending bills.

The atmosphere was much like that surrounding past session hearings on liquor control legislation. On those occasions the speakers paid little attention to the subject matter of the bills, but repeated heart rending stories about the evil of excessive use of alcohol.

Only three or four of the speakers appearing before the special session, other than State officials and members of the advisory committee, directed their remarks to the school bills. For most part the speakers reiterated caustic denunciations of the Supreme Court for its unwarranted usurpation of power, or lauded the court as an all-wise infallible arbiter of human destiny whose pronouncements should not be criticized; or ranted into recitation of racial history and ethnology.

In the North Carolina tradition every group or individual who requested to be heard was given a chance to say his piece. Legislators agreed that they got some new thoughts on the serious problem with which they are wrestling. Alternate proposals to the advisory committee program, which were offered by Rep. E.K. Powe of Durham and B.L. Satterfield of Person, occasioned serious thinking. Sponsors of these plans were as concise in presenting their bills as were sponsors of the Pearson bills. All of this logical presentation consumed less than three hours of the two days and nights devoted to the public hearing. Rest of the time was occupied by speakers who could not resist the opportunity to get on radio and television with their personal opinions.

How To Solve Segregation Issue

By HARRY GOLDEN

(The Carolina Israelite)

Those who love North Carolina will jump at the chance to share in the great responsibility now confronting our Governor and the State Legislature. The Special Session of the Legislature, scheduled to open in a few days, will be asked to pass a series of amendments to the State Constitution. These proposals submitted by the Governor and his Advisory Education Committee, include the following: (A) The elimination of the compulsory attendance law, "to prevent any child from being forced to attend a school with a child of another race." (B) The establishment of "Education Expense Grants" for education in a private school, "in the case of a child assigned to a public school attended by a child of another race." (C) A "uniform system of local option" whereby a majority of the folks in a school district may suspend or close a school if the situation becomes "intolerable."

But suppose a Negro child applies for this "Education Expense Grant" and says he wants to go to the private school too? There are fourteen Supreme Court decisions involving the use of public funds; there are only two "decisions" involving the elimination of racial discrimination in the public schools.

The Governor has said that critics of these proposals have not offered any constructive advice or alternatives. Permit me therefore to offer an idea for the consideration of the members of the Special Session. A careful study of my plan, I believe, will show that it will save millions of dollars in tax funds and eliminate forever the danger to our public education system. Before I outline my plan, I would like to give you a little background.

One of the factors involved in our tremendous industrial growth and economic prosperity has been due to the fact that the South voluntarily, has all but eliminated VERTICAL SEGREGATION. The tremendous buying power of the twelve million Negroes in the South has been based wholly on the absence of racial segregation. The white and Negro stand at the same grocery and super-market counters; deposit money at the same bank-teller's window; pay phone and light bills to the same clerk; walk through the same dime and department stores, and stand at the same drug-store counters. It is only when the Negro "sets" that the fun begins to fly. Now since we are not even thinking about restoring VERTICAL SEGREGATION, I think my plan would not only comply with the Supreme Court decisions, but would maintain "sitting down" segregation. Now here is the GOLDEN VERTICAL NEGRO PLAN. Instead of all those complicated proposals, all the Special Session need to do is pass one small amendment which would provide ONLY desks in all the public schools of our State; NO SEATS. The desks should be those standing-up jobs, like the old-fashioned bookkeeping desk. Since no one in the South pays the slightest attention to a VERTICAL NEGRO this will completely solve our problem. And it is not such a terrible inconvenience for young people to stand up during their class-room studies. In fact this may be a blessing in disguise. They are not learning to read sitting down, anyway; maybe "standing up" will help. This will save more MILLIONS of dollars in the cost of our "Remedial English course when the kids enter college. In whatever direction you look with the GOLDEN VERTICAL NEGRO PLAN, you save MILLIONS of dollars, to say nothing of eliminating forever any danger of our public education system upon which rests the destiny, hopes, and happiness of this society.

What Is A 'Neutral'?

by ALVIN TAYLOR

'The Thing' Is Laid To Rest

There it stood. Taunting me day-after-day. It was solemn yielding and silent and it made my life miserable by its very silence.

I wouldn't have been so unbearable if it had been normal, but it wasn't. It was horribly disfigured and that added to the discomfort it caused me. It seemed it was with me day and night—always a problem. I tell you it was enough to drive a man crazy.

Oh, you say there must have been some way to ignore such a thing. But there wasn't. It was always there.

I first realized it was there a little over two years ago. It was then I noticed the disfigured creature. First I decided to ignore the thing. It would go away, I said, like a bad dream. But it didn't. It followed me around like a shadow. It tormented me night and day.

Finally I decided it must be done away with. There was no other answer and, after all, who would know?

Such a thing had to be planned carefully, however. I knew its end could be brought about quite painlessly. And who would mourn the passing of such a thing from this world?

If its end was to come I would need an accomplice. I contacted a friend of mine who I'll identify only as Henry.

Henry, a steel nervous individual, agreed to do the job.

On the appointed day we met at our agreed upon rendezvous. "Are you ready?" Henry asked.

"I am," I replied.

"Do you want to watch?" he asked.

"Why not," I said, coolly.

A sharp instrument glinted in Henry's hand. The job was quick. There was no outcry and very little blood. We disposed of the body and I felt free... free for the first time in two years.

Yes sir, there's nothing like getting rid of an old decayed wisdom tooth.

Brides' Biggest Complaint

By HALL BOYLE

NEW YORK (AP)—What do brides complain about most on a honeymoon?

"Surprisingly, the problem girls mention most often is that they miss their mothers—they miss their mothers—they miss their mothers," said psychologist Harold Greenwald. "But usually a phone call home makes them happy again."

"I've never met a bridegroom who admitted he felt lonesome for his father. Women are more willing to tell their honeymoon troubles than men. Most men feel they have to keep a stiff upper lip—like Gary Cooper."

Dr. Greenwald, a midtown psychoanalyst, is something of a specialist in the woes of honeymooners. As staff consultant for the Hotel Concord, a Catskill Mountain resort at Kiamas Lake, he has acted as adviser to hundreds of newlywed couples.

"After homesickness," he remarked, "the most common problem brides mention is their husband's lack of orderliness. They are completely dismayed by the way he throws his clothes around."

Brides have a neater nesting instinct. They can't understand how a man can be so untidy, and may be they worry a bit that they'll have to spend the rest of their lives picking up after him."

The problem of sexual adjustment, Dr. Greenwald has found, often arises from feminine ignorance.

Here are other complaints he hears most often from brides:

"My husband isn't attentive enough. I thought he would have eyes only for me on my honeymoon. But he wants to golf, swim and play cards. I don't understand him. How can he really love me if he is so interested in all those other things?"

"Why do I always have to tell my husband the things I want to do? If he were absolutely in love with me, would I have to put everything in words?"

Dr. Greenwald, admitted that this feminine trait often was found in wives married 30 years, said it was undeniably difficult for any man to learn to read a woman's mind or anticipate her whims, but added:

"It does show the desperate importance of communication between newly married people—the need to find a language of their own."

Some men make the same complaint about their brides—that they don't instinctively understand them, he said.

Prominent Figures In Airline Struggle

By RAY TUCKER

WASHINGTON Two of the nation's financiers—Floyd Odlum and Howard Hughes—are involved in Northeast Airlines current effort to operate a third New York-Miami air route in competition with Eddie Rickenbacker's Eastern Airlines and Ted Baker's National Airlines.

Two other prominent figures are involved in the controversy before the Civil Aeronautics Board, which may be carried to the White House because of its politico-financial implications. George E. Allen, President Eisenhower's crony and Gettysburg neighbor, is a director of Atlas, Odlum's huge investment corporation, which controls Northeast Airlines.

Jacqueline Cochran, Odlum's wife and the nation's foremost aviatrix, is a director and partial owner of Atlas. She is also a Republican candidate for Congress from California. Hughes, multimillionaire plane builder and motion picture producer, and largest stockholder in Trans World Airlines, recently merged his Hollywood enterprise, RKO, with Atlas. NEW ENGLAND SUPPORT Northeast is one of eight airlines which has asked CAB to permit it to share the New York-Miami run, an extremely profitable and congested route, with Eddie Rickenbacker's Eastern Airlines and Ted Baker's National Airlines.

If granted the license, Northeast would probably hook up with Pan American's South American extension at Miami. However, Pan American also seeks a New York-Miami grant on its own behalf.

Tripp has drummed up strong support throughout New England for this deal. With a display of propaganda which violates CAB regulations, he has enlisted in his campaign such contrasting and opposing figures, as Senator Styles Bridges of New Hampshire, Senator John F. Kennedy of Massachusetts, and Representative John W. McCormack of Massachusetts. In fact, every New England delegation in Capitol Hill backs the Northeast-Pan American venture.

None of these men, it seems, know the inside story of the proposal, as CAB experts see it. It is regarded in aviation circles as an operation in high finance. NORTHEAST AIRLINES' FIANCE Odlum has picked up northeast airlines at an average price of $5 over a period of years, according to CAB files. It has been listed as high as $12 during the past year, presumably because of its current expansion effort and prospects.

He owns 379,918 shares of common in Atlas, which has a total of 8,890,000 shares under the recent reorganization, and he has 968,172 under option warrants. His wife also has a considerable interest. Hughes' Atlas holdings total 961,616 shares. Allen's Atlas holdings are not known. It has been charged at CAB hearings that Hughes has agreed to permit Odlum to vote his shares.

Northeast Airlines itself is a losing proposition. It is worth about $6,000,000, and under the Government's guarantee of an 8 per cent return, it nets about $300,000 a year at profits, but— and this is the catch, says the Little bird flew in the window today and told us how the steel strike is going to end. The little bird isn't psychic. It just reads the newspapers and puts two and two together and gets a million.

Well, this is what is going to happen: The strike will be settled, with the workers getting a substantial raise, and by substantial, our little bird means SUBSTANTIAL. Production will be resumed and the mills will increase the price of steel right across the board.

Manufacturers of products that require steel as a component or as a tool—and that's just everything except hen's eggs—will announce that they will try to absorb the higher costs, then promptly hike their prices.

Correction: Hen pens require chicken mesh made of steel, so the price of eggs will go up too.

YOU HAVEN'T SEEN ANYTHING

That's only the start. Then the auto workers and other industrial craftsmen will demand pay increases commensurate with the gains of the steel workers. So will stevedores, coffee roasters, shoe salesmen and television repairmen.

The idea will be more contagious than a summer cold. Practically everybody who is working for somebody else will be insisting on more money. Your secretary will be telling you that unless she gets a raise she's going to quit and go to work for Bethlehem as a puddler. Little bird told me.

By that time, the price of everything will be up, with the possible exception of farm products. However, the cost of these farmers' but will have risen, shoving up the parity level, and the government will be obliged to increase farm price supports again.

Then while everybody (except pensioners and bond holders) get more money, everybody (including pensioners and bond holders) will have to pay higher prices. Everybody will be asking where they are today except, of course, pensioners and bondholders.

AN UNMERRY-GO-ROUND

Then some union will unwork a fresh demand for pay raises. The idea will spread through organized groups, most of whom have contracts that can be reopened, then through the unorganized. There will be another rise in prices and we'll be set for new rounds of strikes, pay raises, price hikes and so on.

One reason for these rounds of strikes, pay raises and price hikes is the fact that our money has elastic values.

Look at a $5 bill. Time was when such bills were worth a certain amount of gold. Now it is worth only another paper bill, or what your grocer will give you for it.

The value fluctuates, usually down. The value depends, to a slight extent, on the amount of gold in Fort Knox; to a lesser extent on the value of the paper it is printed on and, to a greater extent, on confidence in the government.

This adds up to the fact that the value depends on what the bill will buy, and that has been going down, year after year. And as long as it goes down, wage demands and prices will go up—and the value will go down again. The value of the dollar has gone down so much in the last quarter century that government and private economists have had to create an imaginary "constant value" dollar to rectify their statistical series, and sometimes you hear them talking about "1939 dollars," "1947-48 dollars" and "prewar dollars." They are not referring to dates of issue, but to the buying power.

Politicians have always thought they could "manage" currency. The Germans thought so and the between-wars marks are about as close to zero as a scrap of paper can get. The French thought so and their franc, once with the buying power of a prewar American quarter, is now held at less than a third of its postwar cost. The Romans thought so and their denarius, once a silver coin worth 10 asses, is now the English penny, worth about a cent.

heavily burdened taxpayers—it must drag down $1,800,000 each year in Federal subsidies to pay this $500,000 in profits.

CLAIM ROUTE OVERCROWDED National Airlines has offered $5.58 a share for the stock which Odlum bought for an average of $5. National, which has been off the subsidy rolls for several years, unlike Northeast and Pan American, also promised to absorb Northeast's annual subsidy of $1,900,000, saving that amount for the taxpayers. Odlum, however, would not even discuss the transaction.

Rickenbacker and Baker deny that there is need for a third line between New York and Miami. They argue that the air space down the Atlantic Coast is overcrowded now, and they envision possibility of another grand Canyon catastrophe. National and Eastern, both subsidy-free, have ordered more than $300,000,000 worth of new turbo-prop and jet planes. A CAB examiner has reported that a third competitor might throw them back on Federal relief.

Scripture—Acts 12:1-5; Peter 1: 4:12-5:14.

After the crucifixion of Jesus, Herod planned to keep Peter in prison until after the days of unleavened bread, then turn him over to the Jews who hated him. His friends prayed continuously for him.

Herod planned to keep Peter in prison until after the days of unleavened bread, then turn him over to the Jews who hated him. His friends prayed continuously for him.

Peter wrote to the Christians in various scattered churches to be courageous under persecution, and to rejoice, "inasmuch as ye are partners of Christ's sufferings," and would share His glory.

Ending his epistle, Paul writes: "Greet ye one another with a kiss of charity. Peace be with you all that are in Christ Jesus. Amen."

Witnessing Through Suffering

WHEN PERSECUTED, REJOICE, REMEMBERING JESUS' AGONY

Scripture—Acts 12:1-5; 1 Peter 1: 4:12-5:14.

By NEWMAN CAMPBELL

WE THINK of martyrs as persons who were thrown into the arena at Rome and slain by wild animals. However, religious persecution exists even in our time.

Our editor, Dr. Wilbur M. Smith, tells of a child of 12 in North Africa who accepted the Gospel of Christ and her very life was threatened by her family. In the Far East there is frequent contention between people of different forms of belief, and during Adolf Hitler's regime in Germany many perished for their faith and also in Communist-ruled countries this is true.

After Jesus' death, Herod began to persecute the Christians. He killed John's brother with a sword, then seeing that this pleased the orthodox Jews, he seized Peter and threw him into prison, closely guarded by soldiers. "Those were the days of unleavened bread," so Herod

St. Peter speaks of a living hope. This living hope relates to Christ and will last forever. Christ rose from the dead. He conquered death, and, believing, we will too.

Peter also told the people of the scattered churches to whom he was writing, to "greatly rejoice, though now for a season if need be, ye are in heaviness through manifold temptations. That the trial of your faith, being much more precious than gold that perisheth, though it be tried with fire, might be found unto praise and honor and glory at the appearing of Jesus Christ."

Then Peter speaks of these disciples' love of Christ, "whom having not seen, ye love." Peter the Apostle, who was called by Christ and was with Him all through His life on earth unto the end thereof, could appreciate the love which those who had never seen the Lord had for Him.

MEMORY VERSE

waited before he freed Peter to his enemies. We know from a previous lesson that Peter was freed by an angel of God while his friends prayed continuously for him.

For the older classes we quote from the portion of the lesson used in the printed text:

"Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, which according to His abundant mercy hath begotten us again unto a lively hope by the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead. To an inheritance incorruptible, and undefiled, and that fadeth not away, reserved in Heaven for you. Who are kept by the power of God through faith unto salvation ready to be revealed in the last time."

In hours of trial we are given hope and with it faith, that if we bear our sufferings with courage, we will conquer them and become wiser and better because of them.

Undertones Of Tension On Korea's Long Buffer Zone

By JIM CARY

DEMILITARIZED ZONE, Korea—Across the fertile green waist of Korea a strange and deadly twilight zone of suspended war stretches from coast to coast.

Beneath its tangled stands of rice, growing wild on abandoned farms, the rusted debris of war lies scattered. The undersgrowth hides jagged foundations of villages and a vicious maze of uncharted mine fields, booby traps and unexploded shells.

Three years ago today, this 2 1/2-mile-wide demilitarized zone was created by the Korean armistice as a buffer against friction between Communist and United Nations armies.

Superficially it is a peaceful never-never land that crackles with undertones of tension. In theory, it belongs to no one, but in a sense it is the property of both the Communist and Western nations who fought in the Korean War because it is under their jurisdiction.

Troops of both sides still eye each other suspiciously across the buffer zone and move their patrols along its 200-mile length. And from its high points, every foot of ground is under continuous surveillance.

"It's always been a ticklish situation," admits Capt. Jack A. Youngblood of Unadilla, Ga., "but it is particularly so now that true inspection teams have been pulled out of both the North and South."

The commander of the 24th Police Company says the Communists never miss a chance to remind him more than 100 volunteer troopers that they are near.

"This is North Korea calling," says a strange voice, breaking in on the 24th's communications net. "We're going to play a record for you. It's called, 'GI, Why Don't You Go Home?'"

Or a note written in Oriental characters is found pinned to a bush. Translated it reads, "Go home, Yankee. You're the reason we're in Korea."

And sometimes Communist and United Nations patrols make contact, particularly at one point where they use different sides of the same road.

The Communies yell and try to attract attention if they are quite a distance away. If close, their usual line is, "Come on over to our side," or, "Let me see that map you have." Frequently they read a GI's name off his blouse nameplate and speak to him by name.

The Americans are under strict orders never to answer. Sometimes the days drop off into a dull routine, but the dull season lasts.

Last February fire broke out in the nearby Samchun River Valley. Winds of a rising blizzard whipped the flames into the demilitarized zone. Mines began to explode. The ground shook with repeated, thunderous explosions.

Small arms ammunition scattered through the brush crackled like firecrackers. Tracer bullets arched across the sky in weird trails of fire. Old dug mortar shells erupted and the sharp crack of discarded hand grenades and booby traps added to the din.

Soon it sounded like a full-fledged battle was under way as geysers of flame spewed upward. Soldiers of both sides watched in amazement as the fire swept 10 miles up the neutral zone.

"It didn't look like we were ever going to get it stopped," Youngblood said. "But finally heavy snow began to fall and put it out."

More recently a strange nighttime mystery has arisen to occupy the soldiers' attention. A series of flashing lights have been seen on several occasions near the center demarcation line. When a patrol comes racing to the scene, they are always gone.

Are the Communists up to something? No one knows. The most acceptable theory is the lights are pure Communist harassment.

During the more uneventful periods you can follow a patrol leisurely up the slopes of Outpost Ohio and look across the broad flat valley to the towering wall of mountains where the Communists are watching from their intricate array of dug-in gun positions and observation posts.

The constant flow of patrols in and out of the neutral zone leaves the men little time to worry about their own problems.

Almost all are lean, hard field soldiers who catch two four-hour patrols daily. It is a company truism that "only the mess sergeant is allowed to be overweight."

In their spare time the GIs of these special police units train for the more specialized jobs of war, pause to see a movie at their outdoor "CinemaScope" theater or try their hand at a game of softball or volleyball.

George Gobel Isn't 'Lonesome' Anymore

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD's Lonesome George Gobel just doesn't have time to get lonesome. Any more.

The "Lonesome" tag is a hold-over from George's days as a hill-billy singer on radio. He still hangs onto it for sentimental reasons, but it hasn't applied to his own life for the past two years.

Right now, when most TV stars are in other parts of the world getting refreshed for the fall channel wars, George is working over a hot movie stage. He is making for RKO "I Married a Woman." He also sacrificed his summer vacation last year to make "The Birds and the Bees."

George had a whole week between the end of his TV season and the start of the movie. So how did he spend it? By playing a night club date at Lake Tahoe. Reservations for the entire engagement were sold out before he even arrived there.

An aide told George he would have all of three weeks between the end of the picture and the start of the new TV season. "Don't you believe it," the comedian replied skeptically. "Something will come up. Of that you be sure."

Strangely enough, he didn't seem too upset by it all. Usually he is moaning and groaning about the time he has lost off the golf course, but he confessed, "I like making pictures. I get a big kick out of it."

He added that he was enjoying his work with his costar, England's most famous body since the Rolls Royce—Diana Dors. And not for the reason you wisecrack think, either.

"This girl is a really fine performer," George enthused. "She's going to fool a lot of people by proving she is a good comedienne."

There are over 917 million head of cattle in the world.

The Sports Reflector

By BILLY ARNOLD

When Archie Moore clubbed James J. Parker into submission Wednesday night in Toronto, he was following a carefully-laid pattern—according to at least one boxing writer.

Lester Bromberg, long one of the top notch fight reporters in the business, offered the idea in a recent article, that practically the whole professional heavy-weight boxing scene in America today is merely a puppet show, conducted by the whims and fancies of promoter Al Weill. Though Bromberg didn't actually put his thoughts in those terms, that is the interpretation we got from his recent contribution to the Police Gazette.

Concerning Marciano's Retirement

The article was concerning the retirement by undefeated Rocky Marciano from the heavyweight ranks, leaving the field open. Bromberg suggested that Marciano's break from the sport was merely a calculated plan to gain both Rocky and Weill a pile of money and to rebuild a dying spectator interest in the sport itself.

As the writer pointed out, the heavyweight ranks are terribly devoid of fighters even good enough to carry the Rock's shoes—which means simply that there is no decent competition. A championship battle between Rocky and any one of the third-rate pugs now in operation wouldn't draw peanuts at the gate, no matter how much ballyhoo it received.

Therefore, Bromberg offered, it is quite possible that the following is what the crafty Mr. Weill has up his sleeve: Have Marciano retire, the unchallenged champion of the world. Then, trump up interest in a crop of newcomers, let them battle among themselves for the vacant title, then, have the Rock to come back out of retirement to face the new Champion. That, of course, would stimulate the box office about a million dollars worth. That would mean money for Weill, money for Marciano, and the added honor of being the only heavyweight champion ever to "come back."

Weill Pulls The Strings

Taking a swift look at the current boxing picture, it would seem to indicate that there might be something to Mr. Bromberg's observations.

Moore, who was Rocky's toughest opponent throughout the Brockton boy's career, has been grabbing sports headlines in all directions with his claim to the heavyweight crown—and he backed up that claim Wednesday night at Parkre's expense. Also, following Weill's supposed pattern right down the line, is the recent noise being made about the up-and-coming Floyd Patterson. Weill has been shoveling the praise and publicity on the 21 year old like mad since the Rock's retirement.

Also, the wealthy promoter has been doing his best to create interest in the rest of the heavyweights, Hurricane Jackson, Bob Baker, Johnny Holman—even Eddie Machen.

Can The Rock Come Back?

One question that is bound to appear at this stage is whether or not the Rock can come back once he has left the ring. Charlie Goldman, who was Marciano's trainer, thinks he can. "He's the kind of guy stays in shape whether he's fighting or not."

Still, it must be remembered that even though the retired champ has only been fighting eight years, he is much past the physical prime by fighting standards. Should he wait a year for the new champion to be crowned, he will be 35 years old if and when he comes back to fight.

Should Lester Bromberg's turn out to be the real thing, should Marciano come out of retirement to meet one of the new crop of heavies, it doesn't seem likely that they could stand up to him, even a year from now—or even 10 years from now.

Softball Sees Graniteer Win, Rhubarb And Forfeit

Graniteer softballers turned on the steam last night at the Industrial Softball League play at Guy Smith Stadium, roaring over the hapless Service Battery 15-5. The battle was the first game of the night and the second, a match between the Southern Bread and Carolina Dairy, was awarded to the Dairy on forfeit.

Gordon hurried for the Graniteers and did a fine job on the mound, allowing only four hits, however, it was the terrific hitting of the Big Green club that was impressive in the win.

Hard-hitting catcher Bobby Nunn led the winners at the plate, punching out three singles, accounting for three runs, for four trips at bat. Third baseman Bobby Conway turned in two for three, accounting for one un and stole one base.

McClanahan came through with a long triple to score two more runs, and Hobgood, Manning, Hendrix, Hardee, John Conway and Wallace Conway added enough runs to the pile to run the score to 15.

On the other side of the ledger, the Service Battery runs were scored by Sawyer, Jones, Smith and Strickland. Smith pitched the full five innings and was credited with the loss. Allen blasted a triple to pace his crew at bat.

Second game forfeited. The second ball game went a

Last Week Was Adcock's, Now Thompson Hits

NEW YORK (AP)—Last week Joe Adcock was spraying home runs. This week it's Bobby Thompson.

And the Milwaukee Braves roll on, adding to their first-place hold in the National League.

Thompson hit his 16th homer yesterday as the Braves mauled the last-place New York Giants 11-0.

It was Milwaukee's fifth straight victory and 14th in 16 starts. With Cincinnati losing its third straight to Brooklyn 5-3, Milwaukee stretched out to a 5½-game lead over the Redlegs and six over the third-place Dodgers.

At one stage last week, first baseman Adcock had smashed out nine homers in 11 games.

Then Thompson came off the bench at Milwaukee, where he had been parked for weak hitting. He earned the permanent left field position by belting a homer and a double that scored four runs against the Giants, his former teammates.

Sunday he closed out the home-stand at Milwaukee with two homers as the Braves swept a pair from Philadelphia.

His biggest smash of the year came Wednesday in the Polo Grounds, a grand-slam homer that pulled the Braves from behind and put them on the way to a 7-4 victory.

"Believe it or not," he said, "I wasn't going for the long ball. I was just trying to get that base hit and knock home the guy on third."

"When I went up to hit I was thinking I'd had a funny year against the Giants. Earlier this season I'd gone lousy the first two or three times up, then had come through with some key hits later in the ball game. The same thing happened this time and I told myself I was overdue and it was about time I did something."

Saxton Will Be Able To Defend His Title Now

NEW YORK (AP)—The New York State Boxing Commission has given World Welterweight Champion Johnny Saxton the go-ahead and so he'll give Carmen Basilio a chance to reclaim the crown in Syracuse, Sept. 12 or 19.

Saxton, who lifted the title from Carmen in Chicago by decision last March 14, previously had been banned in New York State since the commission headed by Julius Helfand had refused to license his manager, Frank (Blinky) Palermo. The ban was lifted when Helfand decided it was preventing Basilio from trying to regain the title.

Saxton, 26, was allowed to set up the fight by himself, although Helfand in the past has criticized such arrangements.

Saxton also did some backtracking in the arrangements. He previously had stated he would fight Basilio anywhere but Syracuse, Carmen's home area. It was a combination of Saxton's veto and the commission ban that sent their first bout to Chicago.

Norman Rothschild, Syracuse boxing promoter, got Saxton to agree to the site, however, with an estimate that the bout would draw about $150,000 in the Syracuse War Memorial Auditorium. The Syracuse record of $120,400 was set when Basilio won the crown from Tony DeMarco of Boston, June 10, 1955.

Rothschild said tickets probably would be scaled from a $30 top, with Saxton getting 40 per cent and Basilio 20. The War Memorial seats about 9,000. The fight will be nationally televised, with the Syracuse area blacked out. The exact date depends on the

Boston Tops Kansas City In 10 Innings

By ED WILKS
The Associated Press
The Milwaukee Braves never had it so good.

Since shifting their franchise from Boston in 1953, they've never enjoyed as much as a 5½-game lead in the National League. But that's what they have today, joining the Brooklyn Dodgers in a pair of five-game winning streaks that have reduced the pennant race to what seems a two-team scrap.

There may be some dissenters among Cincinnati fans, but the Redlegs looked anything but healthy after losing three straight to the Dodgers. Brooklyn completed the sweep 5-3 yesterday, crumbling Cincinnati's hold on second place to a scant four percentage points and half a game.

That gave the Braves, who again laid the wood to the last-place New York Giants 11-0, a six-game edge over Brooklyn—with a four-game series ahead in Ebbets Field beginning Monday. In the meantime, Milwaukee goes to Philadelphia and the Dodgers are at home to the Chicago Cubs for weekend series.

The sixth-place Phillies were thumped 14-9 by St. Louis last night. The seventh-place Cubs lost to Pittsburgh 4-0.

In the American League, the New York Yankees must surely have convinced the Chicago White Sox this was another bomber year, defeating the Pale Hose 8-5 with 11 singles. In fact, about the only nonbeliever in the AL is Hank ("I expect the 1956 World Series to be played in Cleveland") Greenberg, whose second-place Indians made it six straight with a seven-inning 1-0 victory over Washington but still trail by 8½ games.

A 10th-inning home run by Ted Williams gave Boston a 5-3 decision over Kansas City. And Baltimore grabbed back a full share of fifth place from Detroit, beating the Tigers 11-6.

The Braves battered ex-bonus boy Johnny Antonelli for a 6-0 lead in two frames. Hank Aaron drove in four runs with a home run and two singles that put him in the NL batting lead again at .340. Bobby Thomson socked his 16th homer. The Braves swung for 16 hits in support of Gene Conley's fifth victory.

Roy Campanella awaited a three-run homer to trigger the Dodgers. It was his first in three weeks. The Brooks had nine hits, but Carl Furillo's hit streak was ended at 18 games. Tom Acker, making only his second major league start as a replacement for ailing Joe Nuxhall, was the loser.

Roger Craig six-hit the Redlegs for his 10th victory. Frank Robinson tagged him for his 23rd home run and Ted Kluszewski poled his 25th, breaking a tie with Duke Snider for the NL lead.

The Cardinals routed Robin Roberts with a four-run sixth to take a 7-6 lead, then scored six in the seventh with winning reliever Herm Wehner hitting a home run and two-run single in the big frame. Bob Miller lost it.

Rookie Fred Waters won his first major league start, giving the Cubs just four hits before Howie Pollet came on for a hitless two-inning relief job. Roberto Clemente's double and a single by Frank Thomas got the Pirates going in the fourth against Sad Sam Jones.

The Yankees bunched five singles and a walk for five runs and a 6-3 lead in the third against Chicago's Jack Harshman. Mickey Mantle had three of the Yank hits. Don Larsen won in relief.

Gene Woodling's two-out home run in the sixth beat Chuck Stobbs and gave Bob Lemon his 13th victory. The Indians had only two hits until the sixth.

George Kell, Gus Triandos and Tito Francona homered for the Orioles, who tagged Billy Hoefft for seven runs in four innings and his ninth defeat. Bill Wright won it. Ray Boone and Harvey Kuenn hit Tiger homers.

Jim Piersall's two-run double gave Boston a tie in the eighth off reliever Bobby Shantz. Then Williams won it with his ninth homer, following a walk. Ike DeLoock got the decision with three innings of one-hit relief.

A Real Hot Time When Gun Was Fired In Town

MEXICALI, Mexico (AP)—There really was a hot time in this old town—all night—when a Chinese resident fired his gun. Here is what happened:

Two other Chinese were wounded. Sam Woo Mashoa in the head, Lucky Ky Yun in the shoulder and foot.

One bullet ignited a box of powder used in making firecrackers. The resulting fire gutted a maze of 150 rooms in a Chinese residential section, in the ruins of which an unidentified body was found a few hours later yesterday.

The fire spread to a warehouse, consuming five tons of lard and a large quantity of liquor. Then flames ignited a grocery store. When the blaze threatened a saloon, 50 men rushed in and carried out all the bottles in sight. Fire engines roared up, but firemen discovered a repair crew had cut off the water supply.

Officers said the pistol shooter who started it all was Lou Son Lon. He got away.

Today, the once mighty grizzly bear of Alaska is nearly extinct.

Your Pictures Have Many Uses
"Picture taking is wonderful," someone said to us recently, "but what do you do with the pictures after you've taken them and looked at them once?"

The obvious answer is that each picture is a record of something that can never happen exactly the same way again . . . a memory that you can see and touch. In an album, you can turn the pages and re-live all those moments. You can enjoy the same experience with color slides. Millions do. And so can you.

However, there are some special uses for snapshots. Many people use them to make personalized greeting cards, not only for Christmas but for all sorts of occasions, such as thank-you notes, birthday greetings, etc.

A family we know never sets out on a vacation trip without an extra supply of snapshots. They expect to interest to friends and relatives they expect to visit along the way. It's a good way, too, to "take along" any member of the family who cannot make the trip.

A lot of people always enclose a snapshot with every note they write to friends and relatives. One of the nicest ways we know to say "hello."

We can show you many ways of keeping pictures and give you more tips on how to use them. Drop in any time.

Wealth Of Detail In TV Character-Actor Casting

By CHARLES MERCER

NEW YORK (AP)—Have you ever noticed how well cast television dramas are? Brothers so often seem to bear resemblances. Aristocratic old dames seem to have come straight to the studio from Park Avenue. Drunks surely came up from the Bowery.

Quite apart from the great acting talent involved, there is a lesser known but most important talent in the business of casting. The major dramatic shows and all the networks have casting directors, gentlemen who combine phenomenal memory and prodigious patience with a flair for negotiating.

Take Martin Begley, casting director for NBC, a veteran of 33 years in show business. Here's a pleasant fellow who has spent so many hours munching peanuts while watching all the TV dramas on the air that he's had to go on a diet. He also attends all Broadway shows.

When a show's script is set there's a huddle of producer, director and casting director. Each may have different ideas on who should be cast. They iron out their differences, then the casting director obtains the actors and actresses. While Begley's memory for names and talent is enormous, he reinforces it with a careful index filing system.

Among other memory aids Begley possesses a big looseleaf book containing the names of and important statistics concerning 10,000 actors and actresses. They are indexed under fascinating categories. Here are only a few: tall men, tall women, artist-poet types, old blowers, aristocratic old dames, animal imitators, gossip women, fast talkers, drunks, girls for

DON'T TELL ANYBODY BUT WE'RE 25 YEARS OLD

It's not that we are ashamed of our age—or of our youth either, for that matter. It's just that we are planning a little birthday celebration which we can't hold until the carpenters, masons, plasterers, electricians and furniture folks complete the renovation of our home. So we decided we wouldn't say anything about the birthday until we are able to receive our friends properly. Then our silver anniversary will become "official."

In the meantime, if you don't mind stumbling over a few ladders and brickbats, we will be happy to see you and to serve you in spite of the construction job going on right in the middle of the bank.

CHAPTER 26

Peggy's eyes were turned out toward the sheets of gray rain. Pete saying he would clear out had really startled her. She had lived all the years of her life up until the last two without Dick Devereaux. But Pete—how would it be not to have Pete running in and out at any hour of the day? All at once she had the loneliest feeling she had ever experienced. She knew just what it would mean to her if Pete should suddenly go out of her life.

Suddenly she said in a small voice, not looking at him, "Are you in love with me, Pete?"

Pete's head jerked up. "Jumpin' Jehoshaphat! You aren't that dumb, Peggy. Don't you know I've been in love with you all your life?"

"For heaven's sake! Why didn't you tell me?"

"Tell you! Well, I'll be darned." Pete looked baffled. "You've always known it. I've just been hanging around waiting for you to get tired of the others. And now I'm through waiting."

"If you're in love with me, why don't you ask me to marry you?"

Pete looked at her blankly, then he folded his arms and said, "Give up."

"Now what do you mean by that?"

"What in the Sam Hill do you think I'm doing but asking you to marry me? Want me to send you an engraved proposal?"

"You chillun stop dat fussin'. Allus arguin' 'bout somethin'." Fanny was passing the door. "Evah time you gets together lately dey's an argument. Now jes' quit it and act sensible. Bet tah come on in de house, any ways."

Pete looked down into Peggy's upturned face. "That's a good idea," he said gently, "to act sensible, I mean. Do you like me that much, Peggy? Enough to marry me? It's Pete talking to you, Pete, the old reliable. And it's a lifetime sentence."

"I'm mad at you," Peggy said, an unaccustomed tremble in her voice. She put her head on his shoulder. "But I suppose—I suppose I do love you because I get much madder with you than I do with Dick when you go out with other girls. That's love, isn't it?"

Pete said a little huskily, "Probably will pass for it." He looked at her a moment, then his face sobered and he said gently, "I do love you, Peggy. I always have and always will. If you'll marry me, I'll try very hard to make you happy all the days of your life. We like being together, we like the same things, we both have our roots in Apalachicola. You wouldn't be happy anywhere else in the world. Neither would I. I think we can make a pretty good life together."

Peggy's world was shaking a little. In that moment she grew up. She closed her eyes as Pete kissed her.

"Lan sakes!" Fanny's outraged voice came again. "Come offen dat poach if you goin' to act that a-way. Sech goin' on—an' it stawmin' lak it is."

Peggy raised her head from Pete's shoulder. "Come here, Fanny." When Fanny came out, looking from one to the other, she said, "Pete and I are going to get married."

Fanny wiped her face with her apron. "Ah knows dat. Ah 's bin onderin' how long 'fo 'ot know it yo'selves. Lan sakes, let me tell yo maw."

"Better let Peggy do that," Pete suggested.

But Peggy said, "Let her do it, Pete. Since she says she's known it a long time, she has the right."

"Co'se Ah has the right. And Ah'm sho happy 'bout it, too. Silly chillun jes' fussin' an' fussin' and wastin' time. Shouda made up yo minds long time ago. Ah've been waitin' for this since I pinned three-carnahed pants on you."

Peggy's mother came out a few moments later. "What is this story Fanny is telling me? Is it true?"

"I hope so," Pete said. "You never can tell with Peggy."

"This time you can," Peggy said contentedly. "You're pleased, aren't you, Mother?"

Peggy's mother looked from one to the other and smiled. "Naturally. You father and I have both had our fingers crossed hoping it would be Pete. Of course we were sure it would be, but at times we grew a little uneasy."

"Seems everyone knew it but us," Peggy said, "and I suppose deep down in my heart, I knew it, too."

"Guess that leaves me the only one who was in doubt," Pete said on a deep note of contentment, and to Peggy's mother, "Recon we'd better set the date to keep her from changing her mind?"

"I'm not going to change it," Peggy said, laughing, "but it's sort of funny!"

"I always imagined a romantic proposal, moonlight, oleanders, hibiscus, in a fragrant flower garden, not a hurricane day on a damp front porch in the middle of the morning. I sort of like it, though—makes it more real."

"I think I'll call your father," said Peggy's mother. "I know he'll be glad to hear the news. Listen!" She laughed. "I'm too late. I hear Fanny phoning him about it now."

Bill cornered Priscilla and handed her a cup of coffee.

"May I talk to you a few minutes, Priscilla?"

They, with many others, were in the Court House. When the barometer had kept on falling and it was certain that they were in the path of the hurricane, many who lived too near the water for comfort had taken refuge here. They had been at the Court House since eight and now it was after eleven. Many had brought blankets. There were coffee, cakes and sandwiches. Reports were that it would not be a severe hurricane, and the people were not frightened. They were only taking precautionary measures.

Bill had gone by the little cottage before dark. Priscilla had come to the door, but she had not asked him in. It was pouring rain and he had stood there on the little porch in slicker and helmet, a flashlight bobbing in the windy blackness. Trees and shrubs were bending furiously and the rain came in slanting sheets. Bill told her the little house might not be safe. There were many tall trees around it and the water was pretty close. He said quite a few were taking refuge in the Court House, and he would be glad to take them there.

Priscilla thanked him and told him that Pete had already been by. He was coming back for them right away, and they would join the others at the Court House.

"Be sure to take a coat along," advised Bill. "And a blanket wouldn't be a bad idea. Wear comfortable clothes and shoes. You'll probably be there until morning."

She was impressed by the seriousness of his manner. "You talk like an old-timer."

"I know something about these things. And I'm really carrying out what some of the old-timers, as you call them, have told me."

"I wonder what else will happen. A hurricane on top of everything else." Priscilla's voice shook a little although she tried to make it matter-of-fact.

Lyndon Johnson Working Like Strong-Hearted Man

By JOE HALL

WASHINGTON (AP) — No one watching Lyndon B. Johnson perform in the whirlwind of this congressional session would suspect that a heart ailment struck him down a year ago.

The "moderately severe" attack which hit the Senate Democratic leader July 2, 1955, caused Johnson's friends to fear that his active career in the Senate and in politics had ended.

Instead, slowly at first, he has returned to the demanding chores of his position and in the final month of Congress has been carrying them out with full vigor.

The majority leader always has been the pivot on whom senate business turns. Johnson, ac-

Girl Never Forgot Kindness Of Italians

NEW YORK (AP) — This is the story of a girl who remembers a kindness by Italians and of an immigrant farmer who landed from the Andrea Doria frightened and friendless and lost.

The farmer is Nicandro Caranci, a short, tanned man of 45, from Campobasso, who came here to live with a brother he has never seen.

He planned to find him amid the throng on a New York dock by the simple expedient of shouting the family name at the top of his lungs.

But he came down the gangplank of the Ile de France to a wild, noisy scene of shipwrecked survivors instead of homecoming passengers, and his simple plan failed.

Italian-speaking officials turned him over to the Traveler's Aid Society and at the moment Miss Eileen Sweeney stepped into the picture.

Miss Sweeney, 26-year-old daughter of State Sen. James Sweeney, wanted to do something for Italian friends in distress as a small "thank you" for help she had received in Italy once.

claimed by many of his colleagues as one of the greatest technicians to occupy the post in modern times, has added some extra touches of his own.

The 47-year-old Texan eased into his old role in the early weeks of the 1956 session after getting clearance from his doctors in December to continue as majority leader.

He has taken a few breaks at his Texas ranch. One trip home involved a short but intense battle with Gov. Allan Shivers in which Johnson overwhelmingly won control of the Texas delegation to the Democratic National Convention.

Since his last respite at the ranch early this month, Johnson has worked at the same pace he maintained before his illness.

He has scheduled many Senate sessions running 11, 12, or 13 hours and has restlessly prodded the floor throughout. He becomes impatient at delays that he will leap ahead of a page boy to rush a senator's amendment to the clerk's desk if it will expedite business.

The moment one amendment is disposed of, he is on his feet reminding a colleague who has another to offer.

If the sponsor of a bill is not on hand when an opportunity offers to bring it up, Johnson often will handle it himself, reading the committee report, answering questions, and sometimes getting the measure passed before its author can get to the floor.

He has a complete set of hand signals to direct the work of Senate clerks.

If things are going well and the votes are at hand, he twirls his finger rapidly in a circular motion and the roll call proceeds at a fast clip.

If his aides are out looking for a Democratic senator needed in an important vote, Johnson pushes the palm of his hand gently downward, and the senators' names are called at a slow pace.

He also has resumed in this session a tradition he started in 1955 — winning the close votes from his opposition, even though he is operating with only a two-vote majority.

Caranci was turned over to her, and Miss Sweeney installed him in one of the rooms being held for survivors at the Hotel Roosevelt.

She spoke almost no Italian, but Caranci scrawled the name of his brother Antonio and an address of sorts on a scrap of paper.

The address read, "Sant Barr, Mass. B155."

Miss Sweeney picked up a telephone and began a long-distance call which took her into three states before she was through.

"Sant Barr" was finally unraveled as "South Barre" and Tony Caranci had a telephone listing. He was in New York meeting his brother, she was told, and might be staying with married daughters in Stamford, Conn., or Bloomfield, N.J.

Armed with more telephone numbers, she called the Stamford number but it was busy. She called the Bloomfield number and Caranci's niece Mrs. Evelyn Neri answered.

After that, Caranci was not lost any more and he certainly wasn't friendless. Miss Sweeney picked up her bag, softly said "Arrivederci" goodbye and went home.

C-of-C Opens Membership Drive In City Next Week

Payroll Down

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government ended the 1956 fiscal year last month with fewer civilian employees than a year earlier. But the federal work force has been growing steadily for the past six months.

Sen. Byrd (D-Va) reported this today as chairman of the Senate-House Committee on Reduction of Non essential Federal Expenditures.

Byrd said that at the end of fiscal 1956, on June 30, there were 2,382,276 civilians working for the government. This was 2,012 fewer than the previous year.

Byrd said the June total represented an increase of 14,887 over May and was the sixth monthly rise in a row.

A campaign for new members created its budget a little more than $4,000, with this additional sum earmarked for an expanded program to attract industry to Greenville. This is four times as much as was allocated for industrial projects in 1955 and represents an industrial budget increase of 20 per cent of this year's total budget.

Primary purpose of the campaign is to raise additional operating funds through the dues of new members for the organization's industrial development program. Plans also call for increasing all membership dues by 20 per cent.

This year the Chamber has increased its budget a little more than $4,000, with this additional sum earmarked for an expanded program to attract industry to Greenville. This is four times as much as was allocated for industrial projects in 1955 and represents an industrial budget increase of 20 per cent of this year's total budget.

Membership Committee Chairman Ben L. Rouse stated the campaign is being conducted primarily to put the Chamber of Commerce in a position to intensify its program of industrial development.

Chamber President Dan Saled pointed out that "We are one of many towns in North Carolina trying to encourage industry to locate in our locality. Many of these towns are going all out with expanded programs and we in Greenville are trying to keep pace."

Groundwork for the campaign has already been laid, as the Chamber members have appeared before civic, business and fraternal organizations in the city to outline their plan.

The campaign officially gets underway Thursday with a kickoff breakfast at 7:45 a.m. at Rouse Brothers. At that time Co-Chairmen Charles Horne and Dr. M. W. Aldridge, Chamber vice presidents, will give the 40 solicitors final instructions and furnish them with information kits and membership cards.

Each solicitor will be furnished with the names of five prospective members, and it is hoped that after the three-day drive the goal of at least 50 new members will have been reached.

Presently there are 322 Chamber of Commerce members representing 236 different firms.

Cross Burned On Rayburn's Lawn

BONHAM, Tex. (AP) — A flaming night on the front lawn of the home of House Speaker Sam Rayburn (D-Tex.), who was in Washington at the time.

Rayburn's sister, Mrs. Edward Bartley, the congressman's brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Dick Rayburn, and Mrs. Oscar Scott of Cooper, Tex., were at the country home two miles west of here. A neighbor called Mrs. Bartley to tell her the cross was burning on the lawn.

"I can't imagine why anybody would want to do a thing like that," Mrs. Bartley said. There had been no threats nor any incident like it, she said.

Police said no arrests had been made but they were working on several leads.

Patrolman Thurman Renfro said the neighbor who called the Rayburn home, Lloyd Green, told him he saw a pickup truck drive up between 8:45 and 9 p.m. Green said the truck stopped in front of the Rayburn home and a man and a woman got out.

Green said he thought the truck had a flat tire. A few minutes later he saw the couple get back into the truck and as it was being driven away he saw the burning cross.

Child Actress In Real Life Role

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Two years ago Sandra Gayle Kilton starred in a film showing the medical fight against cancer. She's in a real life role now.

In that film produced by the American Cancer Society, Sandra played the role of a cured cancer patient. The object was to show that early examination and detection of cancer could cut down on deaths from cancer.

Sandra, 14, had been cured of cancer before that movie role. Then she contracted it again after five years. A second operation and she appeared to be the winner again.

Now for the third time she's undergoing treatment. She's being treated at the Oak Ridge (Tenn.) Institute of Nuclear Studies.

This is Sandra's biggest role.

Genoans Mourn Loss O Liner

GENOA, Italy (AP) — "When a ship like this sinks, all the city weeps." Those words from a gray-bearded sea veteran today expressed the feeling of this port city at the loss of the Italian luxury liner Andrea Doria off Nantucket.

The Andrea Doria was built in Genoa and this was her home port.

Throughout yesterday and last night hundreds of wives, children and other relatives of crew members crowded around the office of the Italian liner for news of the ship and rescue operations.

"It's as though a piece of Genoa had been lost," said one newspaper, "as though an entire quarter had been uprooted."

Expressions of sorrow came from the Italian government and Clare Boothe Luce, now on a Mediterranean cruise, cabled her "deepest sympathies."

Over 200 years ago, a London club called the "Sublime Society of Steaks" was formed solely for the purpose of consuming grilled beef-steaks.

Will Discontinue 'Berry Schools'

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Changing times finally caught up with Hillsborough County's strawberry schools.

These are the schools where children do farm work in the peak winter months and go to school in the summer.

Hillsborough County school board members voted last night to discontinue the schools. The cost of operation was too great, they said.

Spokesmen for parents said that making the children go to school at regular terms will wreck the economy of eastern Hillsborough County which brags it is the largest winter strawberry producing area in the world.

Report President Irked By Stassen

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Eisenhower was described by several congressional Republicans today as irritated by Harold E. Stassen's continuing efforts to dump Vice President Nixon.

However, GOP lawmakers who professed to know something about the President's attitude toward his disarmament aide's anti-Nixon campaign said they do not expect Stassen to be fired.

One senator said the President was determined not to make a political "martyr" out of Stassen by dismissing him. This legislator said he expects Stassen to retain his White House job until after the election but not much longer.

A second GOP senator said he understands the President has said he did not sanction in advance Stassen's proposal that Nixon be supplanted by Gov. Christian Herter of Massachusetts.

Two other Republicans said they do not think Eisenhower will speak out on the matter until an expected White House news conference next week.

If Eisenhower follows his usual course then, they said they expect him to reaffirm his confidence in Nixon with little more than an implied rebuke to Stassen.

Nixon smilingly declined comment on Stassen's announced move to take a new professional poll of public sentiment on potential vice presidential nominees.

Until the new poll is completed about a week hence, Stassen said, he will "make no adverse comment about any Republican."

Renamed Adolph Toigo, president of Lennen and Newell of New York, as one of five Republicans he said are helping to finance the newest poll. He said Toigo will supervise the work, to be done by professional pollsters.

The other four he named, all delegates to the Republican National Convention in San Francisco, are H. F. Johnson of Racine, Wis., president of the Johnson Wax Co.; Baille Vinson, Tulsa businessman and Oklahoma Republican national committeeman; Elroy W. Bromwich, Missouri committeeman; and Carl Stifel, a St. Louis businessman.

In St. Louis, Stifel said he had contributed $1,000 to the new poll to see how Nixon "stands with the voters." Johnson declined to comment.

The others Stassen named were not reached for comment.

Stassen has contended that an Eisenhower-Nixon ticket would run 6 per cent behind an Eisenhower-Herter team. He has said that a previous private poll showed Nixon at the bottom of the list in popularity among eight potential vice presidential candidates.

It Took Too Long To Locate Cows

HARRODSBURG, Ky. (AP)—It may not have been as difficult as finding a needle in a haystack but it took Owen Terhune too long to find his two cows in a straw stack.

The animals disappeared Sunday. They apparently pushed their way into the center of the stack and were unable to free themselves.

By the time Terhune found them yesterday, one had suffocated.

Group Of Survivors Claim Negligence On Sunk Liner

NEW YORK (AP)—A group of survivors of the Andrea Doria have accused the ship's personnel of "complete negligence" at the time the Italian liner collided with the Swedish motorship Stockholm.

Many other passengers had different versions and words of praise for the crew.

The accusation was made in a typewritten statement last night addressed to news media. It was signed by 90 persons brought here aboard the freighter Cape Ann, and was given to a newsman by Arthur Fisher of New York City, who is in the textile business.

The statement said, "There existed a state of complete negligence on the part of the crew and officers toward its obligations and responsibilities to the safety of the passengers of the ship."

The statement further charged no proper alarm drill was held on the westbound crossing, that no alarm was sounded when the ship was struck, and that no notice was given to abandon ship.

The statement added: "There was no indication of lifeboat stations or procedure beyond wearing of lifebelts.

"No instructions were received by public address system (which was in operating condition) or by word of mouth from the crew that danger was imminent and lifebelts should be donned."

"As a result, passengers acted on their own initiative at the reversing of the motors, the impact of the collision, the immediate listing of the ship, the fumes and water which entered some cabins and passageways, and the instant panic which broke loose."

The statement continued:

"There were a small number of crew members who worked alongside of the passengers, as individuals, in aiding the abandoning of the ship. We give these men recognition as individuals, carrying a private sense of responsibility."

An Italian Line spokesman said the line would launch an investigation of the complaint.

WINSTON-SALEM (AP)—"Get out the Republican women vote" will be the theme of a special meeting of the board of directors of the North Carolina Federation of Republican Women's Clubs here tomorrow.

The meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Vance Hicman, third vice president of the federation.

Mrs. Hicman said yesterday that the emphasis in the campaign will be on the part of GOP women.

Each club will have 10 members, she said, adding that the purpose of the clubs will be to enlist "the interest and active voting support of Republican women."

Rochester's Son In Trouble Again

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP)—Comedian Eddie (Rochester) Anderson's son, Billy Anderson, is at liberty on $500 bail on a battery charge brought by a secretary, Mrs. Louise L. Lockwood, who said he attempted to harm her in her car.

Officers also charged Anderson, a garage attendant, with possessing bookmaking equipment. He was ordered to appear Aug. 20 for a hearing.

Anderson was convicted recently of possessing and selling marijuana and is at liberty on $5,000 bail in that case pending a probation-sentence hearing Aug. 6.

One - Two Punch Marks Steel Industry Peace

NEW YORK (AP)—Labor Peace in the steel industry will pack a one-two punch. The first will be a quick boost to the industrial division of the economy. The second will be a nudge to the rising cost of living.

Some view the steel strike as a bitter but corrective pill that trimmed inventories and put the industry in position for a heavy fall and winter. As the furnaces slowly return to full production, many see a scramble to get steel. It may be three or four weeks after the fires are relighted before all the steel distribution pipelines are filled again.

Others look beyond this immediate shot in the arm to the long-range inflationary promise of a wage-price hike in basic steel.

During the strike steel prices went up by $8 or $9 a ton in anticipation of the settlement. And steel scrap prices jumped $6 a ton. Steel spokesmen have long contended that each $1 of added labor costs of their own spreads through the economy so that they have to pay out another $1 to their suppliers for materials and services.

Manufacturers and builders, faced with higher steel prices, will seek to raise their own prices whenever they can, depending on how much competition they face.

If price hiking spreads, increasing the demand for credit and exciting speculation, the Washington money managers are expected to move in and tighten the money supply as a deterrent.

Price hiking at the retail level comes considerably later. Some of the recent price hikes on consumer goods trace their lineage to long past increases in material and labor costs.

Assessing the extent of the damage from the strike to the steel companies themselves is complicated by divergent views as to how much business they would have done this summer without a strike. Booming August and September sales could pretty well wipe out the loss from the July shutdown.

Steel profit prospects for the rest of the year will be influenced in one direction by the higher labor costs and in the other by the higher prices they expect to get for their products.

In Utah, church ministers and leaders have set up "geiger counter" religious schools to teach the Bible to children of parents who have left their normal homes to prospect for uranium.

Alaska still yields eight million dollars worth of gold each year—more than the price paid by America in 1867.

OUT IN TIME
UNION, S.C. (AP)—One minute John Brady was driving his new auto near here and the next he was sitting on the highway watching the vehicle crash into a railroad tank.
Officers said Brady was thrown through the windshield after losing control of the car. He suffered only slight bruises but was surprised of most of his clothing.

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK — Oils, steels, rails and motors took losses as the stock market declined early this afternoon.

Leading issues were down generally from fractions to around 3 points.

But anxiety over Egyptian seizure of the Suez Canal sent down the oil shares as much as 8 points. The oils were heavily traded, as were steels and motors, but the general list had only a moderately active turnover.

Gulf Oil, with its heavy oil reserves in the Persian Gulf, plunged downward around 8 points. Royal Dutch was off around 5, Texas Co. 2 and Shell about a point.

Action of the oils here followed initial nervousness in the London market over the Suez seizure.

The steels declined after recent gains as an agreement still was awaited on ending of the 27-day strike. Bethlehem Steel was off around 3 points. U.S. Steel about a point, Republic Steel and Youngstown Sheet & Tube fractions.

Today's stock market reversal came after six straight daily advances. Because of this, the market was in a sensitive technical position, brokers said.

General Motors and Chrysler each dipped around a point.

Among rails, a loss of 2 points by Union Pacific and 1 point by New York Central. Santa Fe was off a fraction.

Even Union Oil of California and Sinclair, whose oil resources are chiefly domestic, eased slightly. Standard Oil (New Jersey) dipped a fraction.

Rubber shares showed little reaction to the Suez news although in the rubber futures market prices were strong, stimulated by nervousness over possibly higher transportation costs.

Among aircraft, Boeing dropped a point, United was up about the same and General Dynamics dropped fractionally after yesterday's advance on its stock split news. Kennecott Copper dropped a point and international Nickel nearly 2 points.

Chemicals declined as Union Carbide and Du Pont each lost around 2 points. Utilities were fairly steady.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks at noon was down 40 cents to $199.70 with the industrials off $1.00, the rails off 30 cents and the utilities up 10 cents.

RALEIGH — (NCDA) — Hog prices were steady to 50 higher today. Tops of 17.00 to 17.50 at Bethel, Benson, New Bern, Tarboro, Enfield and Kingston; 16.50 to 17.25 at Rocky Mount; 17.00 at Castle Hayne, Farmville, Beaufort, Elizabethtown, Micro, Siler City, Mount Olive, Mount Gilead, Clinton and Fayetteville; 16.75 at Tabor City, Goldsboro, Rich-

Square and Lumberton; 16.50 at Smithfield, Dunn, Clarkton, Whiteville, Newton Grove, Bailey and Blackman's Crossroads; 16.25 at Kenly.

RALEIGH — (NCDA) — North Carolina poultry markets: Fryers and broilers steady to firm, farm price 19 to 20, mostly 20, f.o.b. plant price 21 1/4 to 21 1/2.

Raleigh eggs firm. A large 46; Asheville eggs steady. A large 45-47.

VALDOSTA, Ga. — Both price and volume dropped rather sharply in the second day of sales at Georgia-Florida flue-cured tobacco markets compared with the opening.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture today reported a turnover yesterday of 8,338,603 pounds at $47.38 a hundred for -3,950,872 gross. These figures compared with 11,332,728 at $49.02 for $5,553,276 at Wednesday's opening.

Thus it appeared that with parts of their crop reported as much as two weeks late, the farmers have been unable to get enough tobacco into the warehouses for full sales.

Reports from individual markets indicated a rising price tendency today but it was expected to be next week before enough tobacco could be hauled to the sales floors for full scale operations.

Budget Approved

City Councilmen officially approved the $700,085 1956-57 budget this morning.

It had been tentatively approved at last month's Council meeting and had been left open for public inspection in the meantime.

The budget, largest in the city's history, was approved without change from the tentatively adopted budget.

The tax rate will remain the same as last year—$1.32 per hundred dollar valuation. Of that amount 15 cents goes to debt service and $1.17 is operating tax revenue.
