

Efird Chain Consolidated Into Belk Organization As Part Of Capital Stock Sold

CHARLOTTE (AP)—Part of the capital stock of all the Efird chain of stores is being sold to the Belk Department Stores. This joint announcement came today from John M. Belk, president of the Belk Stores, and J. B. Efird, chairman of the board of Efird Stores. Both chains operate extensively in the Carolinas.

The Belk chain was developed under the leadership of the late William Henry Belk Sr., from a small store established in 1888 at Monroe. A few years the firm moved headquarters to Charlotte. The Efird chain was developed largely under the leadership of J. B. Efird. After attending school at Virginia, he came to Charlotte in 1906 and joined his brother, High Martin Efird, in operating a small retail store.

The organization has opened five new stores this year, and company officials said several more are on the drawing boards. The Efird chain includes, in addition to a unit at Danville, Va., stores in these North Carolina cities: Albemarle, Asheville, Burlington, Charlotte, Concord, Durham, Gastonia, Goldsboro, Henderson, Hendersonville, High Point, Kannapolis, Kinston, Lenoir, Lexington, Lumberton, Monroe, Mount Airy, Raleigh, Rockingham, Rocky Mount, Salisbury, Sanford, Shelby, Smithfield, Statesville, Thomasville, Wilmington, Wilson, Winston-Salem, Manufacturers Outlet Store in Winston-Salem, Charlotte Mercantile Co., and Martin's Department store in Charlotte.

Suez Users Adopt Approach To U N

LONDON (AP)—Experts of 17 of the world's shipping powers agreed today on the form and timing of an approach to the United Nations to solve the Suez Canal crisis. They hammered out the accord after the final touches to a plan setting up the "Cooperative Assn. of Suez Canal Users" (CASCU) to protect the rights of the maritime nations in the canal. Egypt took over July 26.

Only Pakistan, of the 18 nations in conference here since Wednesday, stayed away from the experts' meeting. The Pakistani delegation, which regards the majority approach as too much like an ultimatum to Egypt, said it could not attend without instructions from Karachi. However, Japan also came out against the users project as it stands and three other conference nations—Sweden, Denmark and the Iran—called instead for an immediate approach to the U. N. Ethiopia's position remained to be announced. Indications were that all the rest of the conference nations, an even dozen, could be counted on to join as soon as their governments at home gave formal approval. U. S. Secretary of State Dulles, described a highly pleased, planned to fly back to Washington tonight. "He didn't expect so much agreement," an authoritative American source said. "Most of the 18 will join the users' association. We never expected all 18 would sign on the dotted line."

Community Chest Drive Set Oct. 2

Greenville's Community Chest will kick off an intensive two-week fund raising campaign October 2 which will determine whether the Chest continues activities in Greenville or dissolves. A goal of $14,875 is being sought this year to meet the 1957 operational budgets of the eight participating agencies. Last Spring the Board of Directors of the Community Chest passed a resolution which in effect said that if the 1956 fund campaign did not reach its goal the Chest would be dissolved and participating agencies would be advised to make their own arrangements for raising funds for 1958.

of Greenville will be organized into fund-raising chapters for the Chest. Rouse announced today that Milton Williamson, local attorney, will head this division of the campaign. O. E. Dowd, principal of Greenville High School, will be in charge of the division for city school faculty and employees and Dr. John D. Messick, president of East Carolina College, will be in charge of the division which will seek contributions for the Chest from the faculty and staff of ECC.

BEN L. ROUSE ... Co-Chairman

W. H. WATSON ... Co-Chairman

Ben L. Rouse and W. H. Watson will serve as co-chairmen of this year's fund-raising campaign which will include at least five separate divisions. In addition to serving as co-chairman of the general campaign, Watson will serve as chairman of the special gifts section of the drive which will be carried out by approximately 60 solicitors.

For the Community Chest and for its participating agencies, this is probably the most important fund-raising campaign in the history of the Chest. Rouse commented today, "Because of the action of the Board of Directors the success of this campaign will determine whether the Community Chest continues in Greenville. The people of the city, through their support of the Chest agencies and their contributions to the Chest during the first two weeks in October will decide whether the Chest is to continue or be disbanded."

Judge Says Only Fringe Touched

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Federal Judge Harold R. Medina, who presided at the 1949 trial of top U.S. Communists in New York, says the nation's drive on Communists has cleaned out "only the fellows on the fringe." "The really dangerous ones in the hard-core center have simply changed their strategy," Medina said. "It would be a very grave mistake for America to become less vigilant."

Stevenson Says President Told But 'Half The Facts'

WASHINGTON (AP)—Adlai E. Stevenson contends President Eisenhower related "only half the facts" about the global peace picture and "indicted churches and political leaders the world over" in dismissing Stevenson's proposal for ending H-bomb tests. In a speedy reply to his GOP opponent, the Democratic presidential nominee last night told a cheering campaign audience at nearby Silver Spring, Md., that in discussing the international situation Eisenhower "left out any mention of the ominous tensions which today mark Africa and the Middle East."

Stevenson's talk was piped over a public address system to another crowd, about equaling that in the auditorium, seated outside in a football stadium. Perhaps the greatest applause came when, after dealing with the global situation, he accused the Eisenhower administration of not pushing hard enough for enactment of a program of federal aid to education. He spoke of a shortage of school classrooms amounting to "a national crisis" and said, "Our schoolchildren are being let down because our government in Washington is too indifferent to human values and too absorbed in advancing the interests of a few."

The Board of Directors of the Pitt County Tuberculosis Association last night said that they could "expect more cases of tuberculosis to be found in Pitt County in the next few years, but don't get discouraged." Dr. Walter C. Humbert, Director of the Pitt County Health Department, made the comment in reviewing the tuberculosis program in 1955 and 1956 and making predictions for the next few years. He was one of three speakers to address the Board members at their annual meeting.

Dr. Humbert explained the rise in the number of tuberculosis cases to increased activity in the disease finding program. He pointed out that last year, in addition to the high school x-ray program to the weekly clinics, 5,165 persons were x-rayed at the clinics and in the schools. In addition, the State Board of Health set up a mobile x-ray unit in the county and x-rayed 4,852 East W. H. Davonops of Mrs. America Carolina College students and residents of Grimesland who participated in a special township survey. "X-raying that many people, and with the big population increase in the county, it isn't surprising that we should find more tuberculosis," Dr. Humbert stated.

Scholastic Lag In Washington Schools Reported By Educator

WASHINGTON (AP)—A Washington high school principal told House investigators today that Negro students in his school on the average lagged scholastically behind whites, even when their home backgrounds were comparable. Cedric Reynolds said his views made up predominantly of Southern Negro students, which is conducting hearings on the effects of racial integration and other problems of the Washington school system.

Reynolds said he was speaking on the basis of individual cases he observed at Calvin Coolidge High School. The school is in a predominantly white neighborhood, but had about 20 Negro students last year and about 60 or 65 at the school opening this fall. Reynolds said that of the 20 Negroes who attended the school last year, 12 failed in two or more subjects. He said the median intelligence quotient, a measure of learning ability based on psychological tests, for the whole school affected. The principal said some of the Negro students were the children of professional people, but that in general he found Negro children, even if coming from homes of high social and economic status, did not do as well in school as white children of comparable backgrounds. Reynolds said it is "highly questionable" that all Negro students were properly passed in the lower than whites, even when their home backgrounds were comparable. He said that while records, he continued, immediate-ly dropped to lower marks and in some cases even failed. However, in contrast with testimony given earlier in the hearings by faculty members of some other schools, Reynolds said there had been no increase in disciplinary problems, sex or stealing episodes since integration two years ago. He said also that the social activities of the school had not been in-

"X-raying that many people, and with the big population increase in the county, it isn't surprising that we should find more tuberculosis," Dr. Humbert stated.

Stepped Up Program Is Slated Find More T B

The Board of Directors of the Pitt County Tuberculosis Association last night said that they could "expect more cases of tuberculosis to be found in Pitt County in the next few years, but don't get discouraged." Dr. Walter C. Humbert, Director of the Pitt County Health Department, made the comment in reviewing the tuberculosis program in 1955 and 1956 and making predictions for the next few years. He was one of three speakers to address the Board members at their annual meeting.

Dr. Humbert explained the rise in the number of tuberculosis cases to increased activity in the disease finding program. He pointed out that last year, in addition to the high school x-ray program to the weekly clinics, 5,165 persons were x-rayed at the clinics and in the schools. Catch Attributed To Beginners Luck

By ANNETTE JACKSON
Reflector Woman's Editor

A young Forest Hills housewife who claims "definitely not to be a fisherman" has a fish story that would do a professional proud.

It happened back in the early spring but the tale has been revived recently with the arrival of the animal all mounted and ready to furnish concrete proof to the more skeptical.

Upon entering the James E. Sutton home, 1808 Forest Hill Drive, you can't miss it. The 7 ft. 9 in. sail fish is the most prominent thing in the den.

It's mounted now against a paneled wall over the den sofa—a seemingly perfect place for it, to the disinterested observer, anyhow. The intense blue of its sail and other striking colors make a perfect contrast against the brown background.

But its anxious owner thinks perhaps it would look better on THAT wall. And as the disgruntled husband points out THAT wall is of solid brick construction and, needless to say, he's not too anxious to begin the moving operation!

When questioned about the actual mechanics of the catch, Mrs. Sutton is quick to confess, "Oh, I don't know anything about fishing . . . it was just luck!"

Seems it was her first try at deep sea fishing and she came back with what may be the largest fish caught off the coast of Stuart, Fla. during the entire season!

The Suttons were down in Florida with a Winston-Salem couple for a General Tires Convention. Business over, they decided to get in a little recreation on the way home.

They boarded the "Spray" captained by Roy Young and headed for the Gulf Stream for the day. Catches were generally good for everyone that day. Mrs. Sutton recalls a lot of King Mackerel, Spanish Mackerel and Dolphin were caught. Mr. Sutton got several good-sized animals, one of which he also had mounted—a Bull Dolphin—which is some three feet long.

NO FISHERWOMAN—Mrs. James E. Sutton is shown above with the 7 ft.-9 in. sail fish which she caught off the Florida Coast. The fish is believed to be the largest caught off Stuart, Fla. during the season. Mrs. Sutton, who claims "definitely not to be a fisherman," attributes her catch to pure luck. (Reflector Staff Photo).

But apparently the day was all Mrs. Sutton's for nobody caught anything to compare with the size of hers!

How did it feel to hook such a catch? His bite felt much the same as the others she caught, Mrs. Sutton reports. It was not until his sail came to the surface that she realized she had something really exciting.

"I don't even remember when the captain strapped me in," Mrs. Sutton says. "I was so nervous I would gladly have let someone else reel him in, but the captain wouldn't let me give him over to anyone. Before I finally got him out of the water, a shark almost captured him and that almost scared the life out of me."

When she finally got the brilliantly colored fish aboard all safely, Mrs. Sutton reports she had to rest about half an hour. Fishing for her the rest of the day was a sort of anti-climax, she recalls.

Has she any success tips for would-be fishermen?

"I really don't know anything about fishing," she says candidly. "I didn't know how to bait my line—don't know what kind of bait I've always been afraid of water! Luck or not, the fishing trip proved to be a decorative blessing for the Sutton house. The handsome creature in his brilliant outfit of color is the kind of accessory any housewife prays for to do that 'certain something' for her room."

Woman Med Student Works Small Farm For Tuition

SCARBOROUGH, Maine (AP)—Lots of people work their ways through college in these days of high tuition and living costs but few do it as Patricia A. Adams, 25, does.

Pat, who has three years to go to finish the University of Vermont School of Medicine course, runs a truck garden every summer.

Medical school expenses are higher than just college. And tuition is higher at Vermont where she is an out-of-state student than it was at the University of Maine where she took her undergraduate work. So, Pat had to expand an already large summer undertaking.

A quarter acre of strawberries saw her through Maine but snap beans and pickling cucumbers made up the difference between schools. This time there was an acre and a half of beans, an equal amount of space for the cucumbers and a half acre of berries.

Her father, a Scarborough policeman, and her brother, Harry, 17, a high school senior, help with the garden which produces for several Maine packing firms.

Pat's other money making ventures have included a year as a nutritional researcher at the University of Maine after her graduation there and 10 to 15 hours weekly as a receptionist and other part-time jobs while an undergraduate.

"Those who want a college education can get it if they really want it," the fledgling physician said. "In this country of ours, nothing is impossible."

EARNING TUITION, 24-year-old Patricia A. Adams works on her truck farm to earn enough to meet expenses at the University of Vermont Medical School where she has three more years of study.

Fall Cleaning Time Coming Drudgery Can Be Eliminated

Fall cleaning may be a fun project—a time to size up the old and plan some new accessories for the home. It doesn't need to be drudgery.

Find a good routine for chores, the right equipment and proper dress, and you can learn to enjoy the job. Schedule cleaning chores, room by room. Plan your work so that you find time for an afternoon nap.

Some homemakers like to clean a room thoroughly each day, preferring the rotation plan to any other system, giving other rooms a once-over lightly each day.

Other homemakers prefer doing heavy cleaning all in one day; routine chores like bed-making, dusting and kitchen mopping every day.

A bride has a good opportunity to start out from scratch. She doesn't need to use Mom's methods unless she finds them to her liking. Her routine will depend on the equipment—washing machine, freezer; whether she shops for groceries or gets them delivered. It makes a difference in planning.

TESTED SHORTCUTS
Here are some ideas other young homemakers have established. Perhaps they will help you plan your schedule:

List all supplies and equipment you need to do the job. Take advantage of new products, especially created to make the job easier. Get one of the creamy pastes that cover hands and fingernails and apply it before cleaning. It'll help the dirt to be more easily removed after your cleaning project. Consider these cleaning aids: Bottled detergents to make suds for washing dishes, nylons, woollens, water softeners, window cleaners with spray applicators. Liquid starch for a bright new look to window curtains. . . new oven cleaner with its own applicator. . . A bottle of liquid furniture wax goes a long way. . . bleach for cleaning and sanitizing bathroom fixtures, kitchen tile, sink, refrigerator and range. . . sudsy ammonia for grease stained areas. . . insecticides.

SPEEDING CHORES
Most housewives moving into new establishments will find more conveniences than there were a few years ago, enabling home chores to take on a dual role. Here are a few ideas:

Clothes may be washed and spun dry while you clean up the kitchen (put out milk bottles, wash dishes, wipe off appliances, shine pots, mop floor).

Dinner might be cooked with the new stove timers while you shop. Dishes might be washed in a dishwasher while you clean an entire room.

Cook your dinner — casserole, stew or ragout — hours in advance. Have it set to pop in the oven anytime.

Spend the last few hours in relaxation awaiting your man's return home. Take a bath, put on something attractive. It's a good time to knit, darn, sew on buttons. It's a good idea to have the table set, the dinner in the oven and the kitchen spanking clean when your husband returns from work. Even if you do not have all the modern appliances you can accomplish that much, and still look relaxed when he gets home.

Post a schedule in the kitchen where you can see it. Put under "once-a-week" heading such chores as defrosting the refrigerator, cleaning out the pantry of what- ever, and under "twice-a-month" turning mattresses, shampooing area rugs, washing windows.

Books & Stuff

By DR. ED HIRSHBERG

If you want to get a realistic and unbiased picture of what happened in Clinton, Tenn. during the tense weeks of the school integration crisis there, look at this week's New York Times Magazine. Its lead article is entitled "Study in De Segregation: The Clinton Story," and the point is not about the right or wrong of the Supreme Court decision, but about keeping law and order. . . . Here is his advice to communities that might some day face the same problem Clinton did:

"Keep a microscopic eye and strong arm on the professional agitator, and mobilize the responsible elements of the community . . . to stand up firmly to the race haters. Communities like Clinton have shown that a few resolute civic leaders can have much more combined strength than they may suspect. . . ."

Writing Preachers
Preachers often are too busy to write books, but here are two of them, coming out with something to read. One of them is retired—which might explain his productivity. He's Joseph T. O'Callahan, S. J., the only chaplain in the history of the U. S. Navy to win the Congressional Medal of Honor for conspicuous gallantry in action. His "I Was Chaplain on the Franklin" is about his personal experiences on the aircraft carrier "Franklin," on which 1102 men were killed or wounded during one day of combat. The book will be out in October. . . . And the Rev. Ernest Gordon, Dean of the Chapel at Princeton, offers "A Living Faith for Today," which certainly sounds timely, and will be issued later on this month. It is an attempt to interpret the basic doctrines of Christianity in a way that will be understood by people today—quite a big order, we would say. . . .

New Southerners

As always, people from the South are continuing to write books, and some of them will get national recognition. . . . Another first novel has been announced for October publication, coming from Harris Downey of Baton Rouge, La., called "Thunder in the Room," about a single day in the lives of members of a southern community who are linked together by the impending execution of a murderer. . . . And we've just received two books from Jonathan Williams, who owns a publishing house in Highlands, N. C., called "Will West," by Paul C. Metcalf, and "Anecdotes of the Last War," by Charles Olsen. The latter is a long poem, which Your Columnist had difficulty in understanding. . . .

It's being submitted for the poetry prize awarded every year by the N. C. State Literary and Historical Society, and if it wins, maybe the judges can explain what it means. Anyway, there certainly is plenty of literary activity around.

Enter the Duchess

Next Friday will see the publication of "The Heart Has Its Reasons," by the Duchess of Windsor, which has been running serially in a popular woman's magazine. On the same day a reprint will come out of "A King's Story," by the Duke, which originally was released here in 1951 and was a best seller. So now you can compare notes on what the Duke and Duchess of Windsor think about the same things—sounds fascinating, in a way. . . .

TEEN-AGE CLUB—On Saturday evening, the Elm Street Recreation Center is filled to overflowing with Greenville's teenage citizens. After football season, the Teen Age Club will meet both on Friday and Saturday evenings from 8 until 11 p.m. There are at present 268 members, with new members joining every week. Supervision is supplied by the Recreation Department, with parents of the teenagers supplying the man-power needed in the drink stand. The Teen Age Club has grown and developed into an inspiring group under the leadership of its officers and committeemen. (Reflector Staff Photo).

College teaching their conclusions are likely to be interesting even if dulled a bit in reduction to a Lowest Common Denominator.

This book describes goals for colleges which few will contest: physical and mental health, ethical quality, intellectual independence, enlightened citizenship, and economic competence. Some techniques for helping students on the way to these goals are described and the few college teachers who may not know these things already should take a couple of hours out of this book. . . .

The most timely section of this study, "the teacher as citizen," is unapparently the weakest section. The hard way of the egghead is not eased by praising him as "society's moral conscience" and at the same time warning him to clothe himself in a colorless identity with his fellow citizens. Means for the effective support of teachers who disagree substantively with the community still need devising. Means for realizing in concrete the intellectual's vision even more desperately need devising. . . .

Good Highways & More Patrolmen

Sharp increases in traffic on North Carolina's highways point emphatically to the need for two things in the state.

1. More patrolmen are needed to keep the highways under surveillance and prevent as many accidents as possible as highway congestion becomes more acute.

2. More limited access and four-lane primary highways are needed throughout North Carolina to take care of the increased traffic load.

At present North Carolina is pushing forward its program for primary highways. In addition to state funds which have been made available, the state's share of the federal highway building program will help alleviate the situation. These construction efforts notwithstanding, it remains a fact that the traffic rate on North Carolina's highways is increasing more rapidly than highway work is progressing.

During the month of August surveys showed traffic on North Carolina highways 14 per cent higher than the same month a year ago. While hurricanes in August of '55 may have kept some traffic off the roads, weather conditions last year and this year cannot be used to refute the eight per cent traffic load increase which has been noted on the state's highways since the first of the year.

Unless positive steps are taken to provide better highways; and sufficient strength is given the highway to patrol these highways, North Carolina's staggering traffic death toll is going even higher.

For the next biennium the Department of Motor Vehicles has requested a substantial increase in the number of highway patrolmen. As it is now, there are not enough patrolmen in North Carolina to adequately patrol the highways even when each troop is at full authorized strength. At many times during the year the actual strength of the patrol is considerably below authorized strength because of resignations and other causes.

To do the job which is expected of it, and the job which is necessary if the highway death toll is not to reach staggering new heights, North Carolina must furnish more men for highway patrol duty.

Good major highways and adequately supervised highways are initial steps to highway safety. With the growing traffic load, it is essential that North Carolina give attention to these factors.

A Grass Roots Political Go For Intangibles

John G. Clark, chairman of the Rayburn Rally here next week has adopted his own slogan for the fund-raising dinner which will feature Mr. Democrat himself.

Says Chairman Clark, "The money we raise at this rally is going to be used to send Secretary Benson back to Utah!"

Frankly we can't think of a fund-raising purpose which would gain more response from agricultural Eastern North Carolina which has seen its sagging farm prices sag even farther under the Republican Administration and Secretary of Agriculture Benson.

Whether Mr. Clark's personal slogan has anything to do with it or not, the response for $15 tickets to the dinner and rally has been good. Some 20 counties so far have indicated they will be represented at the rally and the number of tickets which are being sold increases daily.

Throughout Pitt County so far there has been a good response for the tickets, but it is evident that more must be taken in the county if, as host for the meeting, Pitt is to outshine other counties in purchasing tickets.

Of the 1,200 tickets available for the meeting, Pitt should account for some 400 or 500. Along with the Democratic Party which will benefit from the fund-raising dinner, Pitt as host to the affair stands to gain most if it is a tremendous success and lose most if the event is only moderately successful.

Speaker Rayburn's appearance here is for the purpose of raising money with which to help finance the National Democratic Campaign this year. Proceeds from the rally, after expenses are paid will go to the Democratic National Committee. Aside from hearing Speaker Rayburn, one of the leading figures in American politics today and certainly one of the great government leaders, purchasers of the tickets will be making a direct financial contribution to the Democratic campaign this fall.

The Lady Leaves No Doubt, Summer Is Over

Well, boys, there's no doubt about it: Winter is upon us.

The fact that the calendar still reads September, and leaves haven't turned, the ducks aren't flying, and Milwaukee and Brooklyn are still trying to figure out who's to collect the World Series checks has nothing to do with it. A greater judge than all these has made her move.

The household's chief lord and monarch has packed up the summer clothes.

She started thinking about it last week. A couple or three days of cool weather touched it off and when the furnace had to be used on a particularly chilly morning . . . well, that was it. She started planning what should go where.

A string of warm days over the weekend slowed her down a wee bit but just as soon as the temperature dipped this week she was off again. Tuesday was her day.

It was such a nice Tuesday, too: Cool, invigorating, the kind of day you like to just sit and enjoy not sweating. But who could sit with that human dynamo swishing around, packing cottons and other light dry goods . . . with a baseball broadcast to keep her company?

Arguments that there would be plenty of warm days yet have gone the way of most men's arguments with their real masters. There was no real argument, at all.

So, we're wearing flannels and long-sleeved shirts and wool socks. It isn't really so bad, though, because the imagination gets a good, needed workout.

Most Of Tax Funds

Go For Intangibles

By LYNN NISBET

INTANGIBLES — As the Advisory Budget Commission comes to the end of public hearings in requests of agencies, departments and institutions for money to operate during the next biennium, one fact stands out like a mountain on the plain.

More than 90 per cent of the general fund tax dollars collected from North Carolinians is spent for intangibles—education, health and public welfare. Most of the other 10 per cent goes for intangibles, too, in the field of general government administration, maintenance of the courts and such. That part which goes into buildings and equipment might be credited with obtaining tangible property—but the spending for property is to aid in performing the intangible services.

When the budget folks get around to considering sources of revenue to finance the service programs it will be found that all the general fund comes from intangible sources, chiefly income and sales taxes. Actually the only tax on tangible property levied by the State is the one-fifth of the receipts on the item of cash on hand—which, strangely enough, is included under the bracket of "intangible taxes." Last year that item accounted for less than $10,000 revenue to the State.

Since 1932 the State has looked almost entirely to intangible sources for support of its service programs. Demand for service has grown faster than yield from the taxes. Because of the precarious nature of the tax source, budget makers through the years have been conservative in estimates of revenue. This has resulted sometimes in almost weird imbalance. The estimate for last year was about $35 million less than actual receipts.

BUSINESS — Business men clamor for more business-like evidence that money being spent is producing dividends. It is inherent in the situation that when the money comes from intangible sources and is spent almost wholly for intangible services, the dividends are bound to be intangible, too.

It is fairly easy to determine whether a building or a mile of road or an acre of land is worth what it cost. There is no yardstick by which to measure the value of an education, or the difference between a well man and a sick man. If everybody was educated there would be no demand for teachers, and if everybody was completely healthy the doctors would have to close their offices. Lost income from illiteracy and physical incapacity is to some extent made up by earnings of teachers and doctors. And it must be remembered that the teachers and doctors and welfare workers contribute out of their earnings to the intangible general fund to keep the whole project of government going.

This situation was illustrated by a bit of by-play at the hearing on the University budget. For the University at Chapel Hill the Board of Higher Education had recommended $8,930,960 for the 1957-58 year. This is 42.3 per cent more than the $6,234,600 spent during the 1955-56 budget year. (For the while University system the proposed increase was 43.2 per cent and for all institutions of higher education it was 38.66 per cent.)

Leroy Martin, the banker member of the budget group, commented that 42 per cent in three years was a mighty big increase. "To which a UNC spokesman replied it was almost as much as the Wachovia Bank system had grown in the same period. Dividends from University expansion cannot be compared with profits from banking, because they are in completely different fields.

HOLDING — Another fact that has been clearly demonstrated by the budget hearings is that holding the line on dollars spent often means losing position in comparison with other states. It has also been quite evident that in some instances heads of institutions were as much concerned about maintaining a place of equality or distinction among the states as to really serving the students of North Carolina. One spokesman said that bidding for distinction has become highly competitive and maintaining distinction is expensive.

In that connection it was pointed out that libraries at most of the colleges, especially at Chapel Hill, are falling behind. Not so many years ago the University library ranked tops in the South, near the top in the nation. Now it is several places down the list.

The budgeters asked questions indicating they wanted comparison with other states on points where North Carolina leads, but on points where we are behind the standard should be attempted to serve our own folks without regard to what others are doing.

Another favorite device of the agency and institution spokesmen is to point out that in relation to the whole amount of money spent in their particular project is not getting as large percentage as it did a few years ago. Of course, if all spending were kept to a rigid ratio there would never be a chance for new programs or projects.

While it is true that some particular services are getting a smaller percentage of the total dollar, the overall spending for education, health and welfare takes a bigger whack out of the general fund revenue than they did a few years ago, because costs in these areas have advanced more rapidly than in administrative jobs.

Other Editors Are Saying... An Example That Took

(Lexington Dispatch)

Ten years ago a 37-year-old man possessing millions read about a man who had become one of the world's leading theologians, an author of distinction and an authority on religious music, who gave it all up to undertake the study of medicine at about the same age and virtually buried himself in the heart of Africa to serve some of the world's people most in need of help.

This American millionaire, grand nephew of the richest man ever to serve as a U.S. secretary of the treasury, had quit college in his freshman year, had married, built a lavish estate on a ranch in Arizona, had several children and might well have reasoned with himself that all he needed was to build larger barns, warehouses and banks to hold his wealth.

But when William Laramie Mellon read about Dr. Albert Schweitzer, who was then visiting the United States and being acclaimed as one of the world's most eminent citizens because of his great and unselfish service to humanity, he decided it was about time he did more with his life than to just live it in ease and luxury.

Now, nine years later, Dr. William L. Mellon is operating a hospital in a thickly settled and very poor section of Haiti which he erected at a cost of two million dollars. He visited the place to secure data for his doctor's dissertation and found such desperate need that he decided to invest his money and his life there. It is named the Albert Schweitzer Memorial Hospital. Under construction now is a Schweitzer Memorial Hospital. Under construction now is a monument to the great sage of Lambers, who furnished the inspiration for the hospital and its builder, out front of the building.

Dr. Schweitzer was inspired by the declaration that "he who loses his life for My sake" will be the gainer. Not only has he furnished proof and is still furnishing it, but he has inspired many others like the wealthy Mellon to go and do likewise.

There are today increasing examples of men of wealth who are impressed by their responsibility to their fellowmen. The latest example of those who administer the great Ford Foundation in giving $500,000 each to a group of privately supported medical schools is one. Our own Davidson County hospitals are benefiting from previous gifts by the Foundation. Now Bowman Gray and Duke medical schools each receive a half million to be used in expansion of services.

The former is now embarking on a campaign to expand its facilities by a million dollars and there seems a firm hope that the same fund will help friends of the medical school raise the necessary money. And the great new plant of Wake Forest College of which Bowman Gray is a part is made possible by those who gathered wealth and were moved by the desire to make it serve humanity in perpetuity. And that also goes for the medical school itself. The great University and its medical school stand also as monuments to the generous impulses of a man who had prospered greatly.

Progress In The Urchin Dept.

For the benefit of those who don't know, I have a son.

Mention of the wee urchin has been mighty scant in these columns—very deliberately so. It isn't that I'm not proud of him but it's rather difficult to convince some people that you have the Eighth Wonder of The World in your family . . . particularly if those people have a small child of their own.

Folks just don't believe you any more when you start talking about The Boy. If you brag, they shrug it off with, "Oh, anybody and everybody will brag about his own child." If you say something that isn't quite in the bragging category the same folks raise their eye brows and spit out, "Oh isn't he cruel? Imagine talking about a helpless child like that!"

Notebook On Life

Story Of Carpet Sweepers

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK AP — Guess what common household article, invented 80 years ago this week, is enjoying its greatest boom ever?

Well, sure, it's the old-fashioned carpet sweeper, now thoroughly glorified.

"This should be the best year in history," said Melville R. Bissell III, 35, dominant manufacturer in the field. "World output may reach 3 million units this year and that figure may double by 1961."

An attack of hay fever led to the invention of the carpet sweeper, the biggest improvement in home cleaning since the first cavalry improvised a broom by gripping together a handful of twigs to brush the debris from their den.

The first few victims was Bissell's grandfather, Melville R. Bissell, 32-year-old owner of a crockery store in Grand Rapids, Mich.

"The crockery came packed in straw," recalled Bissell, "and the dust raised when they swept out the straw made Grandpa sneeze something awful. He decided he had to do something about it."

The result was the first practical carpet sweeper, patented by the original Bissell Sept. 19, 1876, who soon began to manufacture it.

He died a few years later, with life's red and yellow warning lights, and so eager for the green light, that we pay more attention to going fast than to where we are going.

Even when the light is green, a little caution on life's highways is not misplaced. It is all too easy to speed into marriage with the wrong partner; into too fast and reckless a social set; into debt—to name just a few of the smash-ups that are common today.

We all know that life is fleeting, but there is still time to take thought on important matters. Foresight is much harder to develop than hindsight, but it is much more valuable.

Gov. Warren Believed In States Rights

By RAY TUCKER

WASHINGTON — When Chief Justice Earl Warren was seeking the Republican Presidential nomination in 1948, he expressed the written opinion that racial problems, including school desegregation, "should be dealt with by local government," and not by the authorities at Washington.

"We cannot hope or expect to have a vigorous democracy in America," continued the Californian, who subsequently delivered the Supreme Court's unanimous opinion against school segregation, "unless this is our firm policy."

NEW LIGHT CONCERNING RULING? Despite charges by Warren's Southern opponents that Warren has played politics with this issue, first as Governor and then as an Eisenhower appointee to the Supreme Court, many lawyers believe that the 1948 Warren statement throws a new light on the tribunal's future attitude and policy on carrying out its desegregation ruling.

In their opinion, it means that the Supreme Court will accept and approve implementation of its decision on an extremely slow and local basis. According to this reasoning, Warren actually declared in favor of the states' rights position of the Southern commonwealths, although he retreated from that stand on the segregation issue.

The provocative Warren declaration in favor of a "local" solution was contained in a letter, dated June 5, 1948, to Herman H. Ross, who was then living in Anchorage, Alaska. Ross, who now lives in Huntsville, Ala., ran for the Democratic Senatorial nomination from Tennessee in 1948. At that time, the Californian was seeking delegates for his Presidential candidacy.

WARREN'S 1948 LETTER — The Warren letter was published in the July edition of "South, the News Magazine of Dixie," together with the following interview with Ross.

"Why did Warren change his stripes (after becoming Chief Justice), and team up against the Southern states . . . in an unconstitutional fiat that has brought the Court to the lowest ebb in history?"

Ross also said that, as a result of what he thought was "Warren's firm states' rights commitment," he got in touch with a number of Southern governors, and arranged a conference at which the Californian, then Governor, elaborated his views on this problem.

"Now," added Ross, "as a result of the double-cross, I am eating crow!"

DESEGREGATION WILL TAKE LONG TIME Regardless of Warren's and the Court's present attitude toward the controversies precipitated by their decision, it is obvious that the desegregation ruling will not become effective for a long time, perhaps years. Most Southern states have passed or are preparing legislation to nullify the Supreme Court's edict that integration must be accomplished with "decompletely captivates all the women he meets—something his father never was able to manage. He also holds his own with the men he meets, a talent I am sure he acquired from his mother . . . which is all right since she doesn't need it anymore.

He has not learned to crawl, cannot climb into cabinets, is not the least bit interested in rattling pots and pans, ignores his teddy bears, and throws his other toys out of his play pen. He loves to tear paper, chew anything he can cram into his mouth, and spit on clean shirts.

He is not bothered with the truth that he was born in an Army hospital and gets yelled at when he wakes up at three o'clock in the morning to talk.

But I'm worried about. He ain't got a tooth in his head.

In the same time, a total of $38,266,000,000 was spent in auto establishments and $12,412,000,000 at service stations. At first glance, it looks as if the average family spent almost as much for riding around in a car as it did for eating. But auto retailers sell trucks and salesmen's cars to business, and kow stations sell to truckers. So how much the average family spends on its car can only be determined by guessing. The accuracy of the guessing can be improved by interviewing several thousand typical families and by other techniques, but it will still be guessing.

In fields where families, not business, are almost the exclusive buyers, the Census figures throw light on the family budget. Sales by categories indicate the average family spent $234 in department stores last year, $69 in variety stores and $96 in other general merchandise stores. In addition, it spent $77 in women's ready-to-wear stores, $42 in shoe stores and $106 in other apparel stores.

The average spending per family in drugstores came to $109, and in furniture and appliance stores, $210. Average spending in retail lumberyards, building supply establishments and hardware stores was $287, but here again considerable business buying is included.

The figures indicate the average household spent a bit in carousing. Averages were $74 in liquor stores and $99 in drinking places, but nobody knows how much of this was business entertainment. In any event, the average per family was no more than $3.32 per week, barely enough for a bottle of gin.

ENDLESS AMOUNT OF LITIGATION In view of the Warren states' rights letter and President Eisenhower's refusal to use Federal force, an endless amount of litigation on behalf of individual pupils, school districts and noncomplying state and local officials appears to be inevitable. Eventually, Chief Justice Warren and his eight colleagues must say what they mean—and what they mean to do about their decision of May 17, 1954.

Average Family Picture

By ELMER ROESSNER

New figures compiled by the Department of Commerce help to round out the picture of the average American family's finances and spending last year.

There were 47,788,000 households on April 15, 1955, according to Census Bureau estimates. That would make the average of the year about 48,000,000, which is a handy figure to work with.

A household, by government definition, consists of all persons occupying the same dwelling unit, whether a house, apartment or rented room. Since this conforms to the popular idea of a family, we will refer to government "households" as "families."

Total personal income last year, according to Commerce, was $306.1 billion. That figures to $6,377 per family. Total personal taxes and other government levies were $35.5 billion, or $740 per family, leaving $5,637. Of this, savings averaged $354.

A LOT IN STORES

Therefore, after taxes and savings, the average family had $5,283. All this was spent—otherwise it would have been included in savings, eh?

Figures on how it was spent are not as sharp as, say, the digits on your next tax statement.

However, a new Census report on retail trade in 1955 offers some clues as to how much was spent in stores, which, by government definition, includes auto showrooms and saloons.

The report shows that a total of $185,484,000,000 was spent in retail establishments during the year.

If we were a conclusion jumper, we'd divide that total by 48,000,000 and conclude the average family spent $3,864 in stores in 1955.

The average family spent a lot. However, those retail sales include sales to business, such as fill-in supplies for contractors, office equipment, gifts to prospects and many odds and ends.

WHO BUYS TRUCKS?

The figures on sales are broken down into categories by Census. Some categories indicate average family spending; others do not.

The data show that Americans spent $43,638,000,000 in food stores and $8,917,000,000 in eating places. Some of this may represent spending by business, but that share is probably small and it is safe to conclude that the average family spent $1,095 for food.

In the same time, a total of $38,266,000,000 was spent in auto establishments and $12,412,000,000 at service stations. At first glance, it looks as if the average family spent almost as much for riding around in a car as it did for eating. The Kingdom Triumphant

ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By Alfred J. Buescher

Scripture—Matthew 6:4-13; Revelation 7:9-17; 11:15-19a.

When you pray, Jesus said in His sermon on the mount, do not pray as the hypocrites do, standing in the synagogue or on a street corner that all may notice how devout they are.

When you pray go into your closet, shut the door and pray in secret, so that only God the Father will hear and answer your prayer. God sees in the secret place and will reward you.

Jesus gave us a model prayer: "After this manner therefore pray ye: Our Father, which art in heaven, Hallowed be Thy name. Thy kingdom come, Thy will be done, in earth as it is in heaven."

We should pray that God will forgive us our sins, as we forgive them that sin against us; that we may not be led into temptation, and are delivered from evil. MEMORY VERSE—Matthew 6:9-10.

The Kingdom Triumphant

JESUS TEACHES US HOW TO PRAY, AND JOHN WRITES OF THE SONGS OF PRAISE OF THE REDEEMED IN HEAVEN

Scripture—Matthew 6:4-13; Revelation 7:9-17; 11:15-19a.

By NEWMAN CAMPBELL

JESUS had a good deal to say about prayer. He prayed many times in his short life on earth, and God is our Father, too, and every child who has a good father knows that if he wants something he asks his father for it.

An earthly father cannot always give his child what he asks for either because it may not be wise or because he cannot afford the price, or for other good reasons.

Jesus says God will answer our prayers if we go to Him in the right spirit, but sometimes we pray for the wrong things and we can see later that we should not have asked for them, or that we are the better for not getting them.

In the first part of our lesson Jesus tells us how to pray. There are some, He says, who want to be heard and praised by many for their supposed piety. They stand on street corners or in the synagogue or church and pray loud and long, not to beg mercy on their souls, or for forgiveness of their sins, but to be heard.

Christ tells us that when we pray we should enter into our closet (or bedroom), close the door and pray in secret, and God will answer us, for He knows what we need as well as we do.

We can pray on our knees when we are ready for bed, or after we are in our beds, or when we are sitting quietly in church or Sunday school and He will hear us. We need not always ask Him for things. We can thank Him for the many blessings we have been given.

Christ gave us the model prayer which we all know so well, "Our Father, who art in heaven, Hallowed be Thy name; Thy kingdom come, Thy will be done, in earth as it is in heaven."

Nixon Needled Into Verbal Rap At Kefauver

RAPID CITY, S.D. — A fighting-mad Vice President Nixon flew into the grain belt today after demonstrating his willingness to get rough with the opposition.

Irked by barbs shot at President Eisenhower by Sen. Kefauver, Nixon let loose a verbal blast at the Democratic vice-presidential nominee last night before a capacity indoor audience in Spokane, Wash.

He not only accused the Tennessee senator of "below the belt, low-road tactics" but called on Adlai Stevenson to "disassociate himself" from Kefauver unless the senator apologized to the President and the American people.

What needled Nixon into the attack was the senator's statement of last Wednesday that "President Eisenhower has personally been working just as hard against the little people of this nation as those who surrounded him."

That, Nixon said, was a "condescending and contemptuous reference to the so-called little people in America."

The crowd roared approval of Nixon as he accused Kefauver of a "thinly veiled attempt to give the impression that the President of the United States is deliberately working against a large segment of our population."

The Kefauver statement, Nixon said, was an "attempt to divide Americans into classes and to set the interest of one class against another," an idea "alien to everything in which we believe."

It was the first time Nixon had lashed out bitterly at either of the Democratic nominees. In previous speeches he had even lightly lauded them on occasion to such an extent that Kefauver had commented on the "sweetness and light" of the "new Nixon."

Nixon left Spokane for speeches today here and at Fargo, N.D., and Minneapolis after admitting that Republicans faced tough Senate contests this year in California, Nevada, Oregon and Washington.

Nixon told his Spokane news conference the Republicans would amend the Taft-Hartley law if they win control of the Senate and the House.

Frogs Move In On Cat's Meal

TAMPA, Fla. — Several months ago Robert, a generous cat, allowed Oscar, a hungry frog, to share a plate of hamburger.

Robert didn't know what he was getting in for. Oscar continued to come around to the home of William Harrell to take pot luck with Robert.

Now grown fat and sassy on cat food, the frog has brought a crop of young ones.

At mealtime the frogs line up on the back steps until the food appears. And Oscar isn't above dealing Robert a thumping kick with his strong legs if the cat gets in the way.

Soaring Prices Blossom Into Political Headache

By STERLING F. GREEN
WASHINGTON — Climbing prices have blossomed into an economic headache and a political embarrassment to the Eisenhower administration.

There is general agreement that the consumer price index, after a spurt this summer, will proceed at a more sober gait.

But Democrats already have seized on the rise in living costs as a refutation of the administration's "sound dollar" claims. Republicans retort: "Look who's talking about inflation."

Even before the political campaign started, official Washington had reacted to the march of prices to a record high.

President Eisenhower voiced concern, and his administration lined up behind Federal Reserve Board efforts to hold the new, higher price line.

There is speculation that, unless the unprecedented boom in industrial expansion slackens off soon, the board may move again this fall to make credit tighter and borrowing more costly.

In August the Federal Reserve board boosted the discount rate from 2 1/2 to 3 per cent. This means that it raised the interest rate on money borrowed by its member banks for lending. The effect is to raise private interest rates and discourage borrowing.

There remain signs that the administration is not wholly certain that inflation can be stopped cold. One high White House adviser said in an interview that the administration's policy is one of economic growth "while containing" inflation." He added that "containing" doesn't mean "preventing."

Apparently it means exercising such restraint as is thought necessary to keep prices within reasonable bounds, without choking off the expansion of production and employment. It does not mean that prices will not rise; it seems to mean they won't run away.

The same official conceded that the rise already recorded may be "damaging, to some extent," politically.

But he added that the stabilization record of the Eisenhower administration—a 3 per cent rise in living costs in 3 1/2 years—is a "remarkable achievement," particularly in view of the "very high use" to which the economy is being put.

Secretary Mitchell has reduced the argument to simpler terms. The Republican rise, he told reporters, "compares with 34 per cent increase under Truman."

When reminded that two wars and congressional insistence on the removal of price controls had complicated President Truman's problems, Mitchell cut off the discussion with: "All I'm quoting is the statistics."

The Democrats are unimpressed. They have contended that stability began in the last year of the Truman administration. A "fact sheet" from the Democratic National Committee declared:

"The only reason the overall cost of living remains fairly steady is the severe drop in farm prices which has brought about somewhat lower food prices."

So the arguments go 'round and ket and bring on a damaging recession.

Such appeals are not wholly in vain. But most officials rest their faith chiefly in the indirect, and not fully tested, powers of the Federal Reserve Board to expand and contract the supply of money and credit.

Phants Host To Kinston In Conference Tilt Tonight

Visitors Rated To Win By 12 Points

Tonight's contest with Grainger high school, of Kinston, should decide the Northeastern conference fate of the Greenville Phantoms.

In their second conference tilt of the season, the G-Men will be facing one of their toughest foes tonight at College Stadium.

The contest is a crucial one for both teams. Against Jacksonville, last week, the Phantoms rolled up a 25-13 score, and stepped into the conference race on a startling upset.

The Phants were the only Northeastern team to secure a conference victory and are now resting comfortably in first place.

Actually, only two games were on schedule in the loop. The Washington-New Bern affair, boomed as the battle between the number one and two teams, was played to a 0-0 tie.

Greenville's win gives the locals a tentative but surprising lead in the league.

According to a pre-season coaches' poll, the G-Men are as close to the top spot now as they will come this season.

Kinston's Opener: Tonight's match will be Kinston's first in Conference play and is an important one to the Red Devils.

The strength of Coach Frank Mock's crew is as yet unknown. In their season's opener, they downed Class A Conover, 29-0, but later lost to AAA Raleigh by a 34-0 score.

Due to the fact that Grainger is always a tough club, and that they are the defending champions of the conference, the Red Devils have been picked favorites by two touchdowns.

Greenville mentor Guy Lewis is expected to use the same double-edged offense that topped Jacksonville last week in tonight's game.

The passing of junior quarterback Mack Ruebuck, who hit on four of seven passes for a total of 81 yards, is a major factor. Also, Billy Sermons will lead the runners.

Sermons, an All-Conference back last year, racked up 250 of Greenville's 294 rushing yards last week.

Jimmy Kelly will go at the other halfback slot and Robin Wilfong, a freshman, will occupy the fullback position.

The Green backfield offers both a fast and powerful group of performers and Lewis has stated that Greenville will need both to defeat the visitors.

Line Is Ready: The Phantom line, sparked by center Wade Jordan and Jack Angus Duff, seems to be in top shape for tonight's tilt.

Coach Lewis has expressed his enthusiasm for the hustle and determination his forward wall has shown at times in the first two contests.

Ed Wilkerson and Billy Cox, Green ends, are expected to play a large part in both the Phantom offense and defense.

Both boys are hard tacklers and both have worked well in offensive pass receiving. Duff and Roy Martin, a 187-pounder, will man the tackle slots on offense and defense.

Kelly Barnhill and Billy Brown are the probable starters at guards, and Wade Jordan will handle center duties.

Leaders: NATIONAL LEAGUE: Batting (based on 350 at bats)—Aaron, Milwaukee, .327.

Runs—Robinson, Cincinnati, 118. Runs batted in—Musial, St. Louis, 45.

Hits—Aaron, Milwaukee, 129. Doubles—Lopala, Philadelphia, 22.

Triples—Aaron and Bruton, Milwaukee, 14. Home runs—Sunder, Brooklyn, 29.

Stolen bases—Mays, New York, 30. Pitching (based on 15 decisions)—Newcombe, Brooklyn, 25-6, 306.

Booster Tickets

Principal O. E. Dowd, of Greenville high school, announced that any Booster Club members who have not received their season tickets due to late mailing, or who are "in doubt" about their tickets, should be present at tonight's Greenville-Kinston game at College Stadium.

Deacons Taking Slim Squad Into Season's Opener

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS: Bill Barnes, Wake Forest's All-Atlantic Coast Conference halfback last season, will get his baptism under fire as a fullback tomorrow when the Deacons, invade William and Mary in the season's opener.

The game should answer some questions for new Coach Paul Amen, including: Can the Deacons hold up with their slim 38-man squad?

As the small squad and lack of fullback material that prompted Amen to switch his prize halfback to fullback, Amen thinks Barnes ran the ball 116 times, post.

"We believe Bill will have as good a season as he did a year ago. He certainly will carry the ball as much, if not more, and he will be used in our pass patterns."

Last season Barnes established a new ACC pass catching record, grabbing 31 passes for 349 yards. Barnes on the ball 116 times, gaining 401 yards for a 3.5 average.

Amen, a former aide at West Point, believes Barnes at 186 is heavy enough to do the job. "A lot of people think a fullback should be big enough to run over a man if he gets in the way, but we don't have that type of boy on our ball club. In the Army T style of offense we rely on quick-hitting and Barnes possesses the speed to handle the job in grand style," he says.

Wake Forest, as did the other ACC schools, held only light work yesterday. Amen said the team was "in good spirits and looking forward to the William and Mary game."

The big shocker came at Maryland yesterday with the announcement that ace quarterback Frank Tamburello must report for the draft Oct. 1. Tamburello will not see action tomorrow against Syracuse. Coach Tommy Mont moved up John Fritsch into Tamburello's spot.

Duke, which meets South Carolina tomorrow night in its first ACC game, worked without pads as did the Gamecocks. South Carolina Coach Warren Giese said his injury list was smaller and that he hoped the team would be at full strength for the game.

It was the same story at North Carolina and North Carolina State which meet at Chapel Hill in the other conference game. Both squads held light drills with passing coming in for attention from both coaches.

Clemson, which faces Presbyterian College at home, saw two chances made in the Tigers' first game. Coach Frank Howard moved Dick DeSimone from center to guard and shifted Donnie Bunton to center.

Eppes Is Host To Kinston Tonight

Eppes high school's Bulldogs, after suffering a 32-12 defeat at the hands of Rocky Mount last week, take on the Kinston gridders at Guy Smith Stadium tonight in a conference game.

Coach Percy Daniels expects his boys to be "a bit settled" and ready to get to work against the visitors tonight. The game will begin at 8 p.m.

Expected to pace the Bulldogs attack will be James Breauxington, a 260-pound All-State tackle and quarterback Bennie Wilson.

Milwaukee Drops One To Give Bums A Full Game Lead In Chase

By ED WILKS: The Associated Press: Are the Braves breathin'? Like a man with asthma.

They have to roll a seven to hold any real hope for the National League pennant. And after losing 2-1 to Pittsburgh in 10 innings yesterday, even winning all their seven remaining games won't guarantee a thing for the Braves—who have been able to win as many as three in a row only once in the last two weeks.

Even by winning all seven, Milwaukee can't gain as much as a tie for the pennant unless Brooklyn's world champion Dodgers lose two of their remaining nine.

The Braves, beginning to hear the jingle of another world series payoff, have won nine of their last 11 and took a full-game lead while idle yesterday.

The Braves had to battle from behind yesterday against Bob Friend, who gave just four hits but almost missed his 16th victory when two errors on one play by first baseman Dale Long gave Milwaukee the tying run in the ninth.

Then Roberto Clemente tagged reliever Ray Crone for a two-out single. Billy Bruton just couldn't get to in center field and Bill Mazeroski scrambled home with the q.c.v. 3. The only hit since his first since Aug. 26 and defeating the Braves a third time this season, were fifth and 10th inning singles by Johnny Logan, Hank Aaron's single and Bobby Thomson's double, both in the seventh. Logan's first single came with two out in the fifth—after Friend had retired the first 14 men in order.

Bob Buhl of the Braves gave three hits — one Jack Sheppard's seventh home run in the seventh inning—before being lifted for a pinch-hitter in the 9th.

Going into a four-game series at Pittsburgh tonight, the Dodgers now are 3-1 favorites to win the pennant. It's 8-1 the race.

Pennant Races Being Crowded By Grid Games

Whether or not the nerve-numbing National League pennant race is over, college football bounces into the sports scene tomorrow with its first major program of the season.

No less than six teams listed among the top 10 in preseason estimates will be in action, among them Notre Dame and Georgia Tech, third and fourth, in the A-10 series.

Notre Dame, with few veterans but a number of eager sophomores, meets southern Methodist in a night game at the Cotton Bowl in Dallas. Georgia Tech's experienced squad plays an afternoon game against Kentucky at Lexington in the television Game of the Day.

Notre Dame is rated a 13-point favorite over SMU; Tech 7 1/2 over Kentucky.

Others of the anticipated elite making their season's debuts will be sixth-ranked Maryland against Syracuse at College Park, Md., Texas Christian, No. 7, against Kansas at Lawrence, Kan., Paul Bryant's ninth-ranked Texas Aggies, entertaining Villanova at College Station, and Pittsburgh, No. 10 and rated tops in the East, against West Virginia, a coal country rival the Panthers spilled from bowl consideration late in the 1955 season.

Stanford and Southern California, left with the most after the Pacific Coast Conference shake-up, play the fourth round of the Western conferences. Stanford at Washington State and the Trojans at Texas in night games.

Jim Tatum's return to North Carolina is launched against rival North Carolina State and Vanderbilt meets Georgia at Nashville in important Southern games.

Most of the Midwest powers await another week before joining the fun.

Davidson And Catawba Put On Aerial Circus

The Southern Conference's greatest traveling air show gets revved up tonight when passenger Dick Belton leads Davidson into its 1956 football opener against Catawba College.

The contest between the two old rivals at Charlotte ushers in a weekend of Danger—and opportunity—for conference clubs. Five games are on tap tomorrow afternoon, two more tomorrow night.

Coach Bill Dole's Davidson team never has lost to Catawba in five meetings since 1919 and though Dole talks anxiously of superior weight in the Indian lineup, the perfect record probably won't be spoiled tonight.

The big reason is Belton. The 160-pound senior pitched for 839 yards and five touchdowns in 1955 to lead all conference passers. His 60 completions beat his nearest rival in the league by 13.

Belton and his stand-in, capable Dyke Little, gave the '55 Wildcats 1,946 yards via passing, biggest total in the league and 197 more yards than the team gained rushing.

Tonight's skirmish may develop into a torrid duel between Belton and Little and Catawba's Lou Biacchi, former All-Marine Corps star at Parris Island. It was a pass from Biacchi that brought Catawba a 7-7 tie with Newberry in its opener last week.

The weekend's most significant games for conference teams find West Virginia's league champion meeting powerful Pitt at Morgantown, W.Va., and Virginia Tech's 1955 runners-up playing Tulane at New Orleans. A victory by either, or both, would considerably enhance conference prestige. Both are underdogs.

Other Saturday afternoon games—none counting in the conference standings—find VMI at Virginia, Wake Forest at William and Mary, and George Washington at Miami of Ohio. Tomorrow night, The Citadel entertains Newberry and Richmond is host to Randolph-Macon.

Except at Furman and Washington and Lee, which don't have games this week, the tempo of practice slowed down yesterday as all hands tried to avoid injuries.

SPLASHING SOCCER — The spray goes up as Chelsea's Ron Tindall goes down while Joe Dunn of Preston tries to keep his balance in match on rain-soaked Chelsea, Eng., field.

Stetson Here Saturday

East Carolina College is host to ankle injury for at least two weeks, while Emory may be out for Deland, Florida, this Saturday night in the official home game opener for the Pirates.

The Pirates will make this Parents' Night in honor of the parents of players and students. The Bucs hope to rebound from their 37-2 licking at the hands of Virginia Tech last Saturday night in Bluefield, W.Va. ECC also lost a practice scrimmage to Norfolk Navy a week earlier.

Coach Jack Boore, confronted by many problems in getting his squad ready for the Stetson tilt, now has a worry about injured players. Missing this week's game, in all probability, will be Jerry Brooks, Waverly Chesson, Bucky Dennis, and Ed Emory.

Emory and Brooks, starting guard and tackle, respectively, received injuries in the Virginia Tech game. Brooks is out with an

by KELLEY ROOS

SYNOPSIS

Connie Barton's husband of almost five years has made her suspicious lately by his Wednesday night absences; his alibi for going out these evenings have worn thin. So Connie concludes Steve must be having blonde trouble. She resolves to fight fire with fire. She begins by going to Paul's beauty parlor and having her jet black hair dyed the blondest blond. Then—

CHAPTER 2

I would have to hurry. Steve would already be home, wanting his dinner, impatient to get all dolled up and be on his Wednesday night way. But I took time to stop at the corner of Lexington and Fifty-ninth and do a little testing. Perhaps I had been deceiving myself. Maybe Paul hadn't been so overcome by me; maybe it was just pride in his own work.

I leaned one shoulder up against the fruit juice stand window and loitered. Two young intellectuals, male, approached. They were arguing violently. They saw me. They stopped solving the world's problems, they slowed down. After they passed me and got faced front again I heard one of them ask, "What were we saying?" I was gratified. An elderly delivery boy came along on a bicycle-cart. He was nearly maimed by a taxi. I was further gratified, but not yet satisfied. A little man, carrying his big wife's bundles, turned the corner. He almost stopped. She grasped his arm, marched him off. I heard what she said. She called me a hussy.

I was deeply gratified, completely satisfied. I went home. It was only two rooms, bath and kitchenette over a Lexington Avenue dilapidated tenement. But to me it was the home I was trying to save, and I went there as fast as I could.

I went into the kitchen. Steve had already got himself something to eat. I went into the bedroom. His clothes were all laid out, including the tie I had given him last Christmas. Steve was in the shower.

I got out the negligee he had given me last Christmas. I put it on, spent a few minutes at my dressing table. I draped myself on the chaise longue, practicing slow smiles and eyelid lowering in a hand mirror. I tried a throaty laugh or two.

Then the bathroom door opened and Steve was standing there, almost naked. He saw me. He jumped back into the bathroom and slammed the door. He did a double-take with the door. It opened slightly once, slammed shut again. It opened once more, stayed open. He was looking at me.

He ventured a step toward me. "Connie..."

"Darling, what in God's name happened to you?"

"I've been to the beauty parlor..."

"Did it explode with you in it?"

"Darling, no! Oh, no!"

He came closer and peered into my face. I slowly lowered him. I slipped him the lowered lid business. I put a cigarette between my half-parted lips. It fell out.

"Connie, why?" His voice rose. "Why in hell did you do this to yourself?"

I opened my mouth to speak, but I was trying for something too throaty, too husky. Nothing came out.

"No!" Steve shouted. "We won't discuss it now. I'm late for my appointment."

I got up and went into the living room. I heard him scrambling into his clothes. I fixed the lights, low but not too low. When he came in, I was leaning provocatively against the fireplace, one foot extended a little, my knee bent in the Dietrich manner. He stopped, and stared at me.

I said, "Must you do that... must you really?"

He wavered. I was making time. I threw back my shoulders, lazily though, and tilted back my head. I lowered my lids another notch. I could hardly see him.

He said, "Yes, I really do have to go. I... I promised Al Finch." "Promised him what?"

"His aunt's coming to town, his only aunt, and he's tied up. I have to meet her at Pennsylvania Station."

"Darling, I swayed toward him. "Darling..."

"Connie, for God's sake..."

Then he was laughing so hard he couldn't speak. He choked, he doubled up. Then he staggered to the door and was gone.

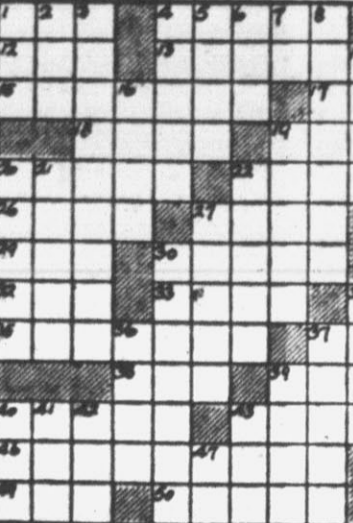

I sat down... another Wednesday night and I was alone. I started for the phone to call Paul, demanded my money back. But I bypassed the phone. There was still something I could do. I could follow Steve and learn the truth. I could find out what gorgeous, fascinating creature's eyes needed scratching out.

I gambled on the direction Steve might have taken, and I won. He was crossing Lexington at Bloomfield's, headed for the downtown station of the IRT subway, when I caught sight of him. There were enough people on the platform to screen me from him until a train came in. I got in the car just behind him. I watched him sit down. He was smiling, occasionally his lips would quiver in a chuckle.

At Fifty-first Street an overdone, outlandish blonde of an uncertain age boarded the train and sat opposite Steve. He started laughing out loud, uncontrollably. Everybody in the car looked at him, then looked around to find the joke. Thwarted, they shook their heads and shrugged at one another. One man drew circles on his temple and pointed to Steve. His diagnosis received consideration.

Prowling Vandal Was A Monkey

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—Alertness of a Telegraph Hill apartment dweller last night resulted in the capture of San Francisco's most mysterious prowler, a vandal who had wrecked two apartments and was well into his third job. Police said Mal Thomas, awakened by the crashing of dishes in his kitchen, softly called police. They found the vandal calmly eating biscuits in the kitchen—and promptly called the Humane Society. The prowler was a pet gibbon monkey, who periodically gets loose from his quarters in an apartment house courtyard and goes on a wrecking spree, police reported.

able approval. Steve got off the train at Grand Central. I followed him up through the teeming depot, across Vanderbilt Avenue, west along Forty-fourth Street. It was quite a chore. Steve was in a hurry, anxious to get where he was going. Bitterly I thought of the times when he came hurrying home to me, even on Wednesday nights.

He turned north on Madison and he was practically galloping. I was about ready to cave in when he ducked into a large office building on a corner. I reached the lobby just in time to see him board an elevator. He was its only passenger. Its doors closed. It started up. I watched the indicator; it was at the fourteenth floor that Steve got out.

I took a step toward another elevator, then hesitated. I had a moment of shattering misgivings. Why was I here? Just what did I intend to do? Confront the home-wrecker, plead with her to return what was lawfully mine? No, I could never bring myself to do that. Then I remembered a thing or two... like the first time I met Steve Barton.

After college there was enough of Uncle Willie's money left for me to study journalism for a year at Columbia. That spring, growing a little worried about my finances, I started looking for a job. I ventured down to one of New York's largest if not most literate newspapers. But I never did get to see anyone important there. Because this fellow named Steve Barton was trying to make some time with the switchboard girl when I got there. He thought I should let him tell me about this newspaper dodge over a drink, maybe two.

Two weeks later he was still telling me, nightly. He said it would take years for me to forget my education and become a passable reporter. It was different with him. He was only a high school man and the New York City high school had been so overcrowded that he hadn't learned anything, really. He had a chance in this newspaper dodge. He was unswayed by any high ideals of journalism... I didn't really listen to him much. I sat there nightly in that smoky bar and looked at him. I found myself enjoying that.

In June I was graduated with honors from my school of journalism. Steve got a raise and a promotion from police reporting to the sports department. We got married.

The elevator operator was asking me impatiently, "Going up or not?"

I stepped into the car. I had something to fight for.

"What floor?" the operator asked.

"Fourteenth," I said emphatically.

"Boy, you really mean it, don't you, lady?"

Connie comes face to face with death tomorrow in Chapter 3 of "The Blonde Died Dancing."

In Greenville, the "people of Union Carbide" include the men and women of National Carbon Company.

Unlocking the secrets of the universe

AMAZING TEXTILE FIBERS spun out of natural gas... wonder drugs squeezed from a lump of coal... shining stainless steel forged from drab, brownish earth.

These man-made marvels—and nearly everything else that is vital to modern living—were born in the minds and hands of research scientists in their search for a better understanding of our world.

Never satisfied with things as they are, the research scientist takes apart the raw materials of nature to capture the basic "building blocks" of the universe. Then he rearranges and combines the pieces into new and better things that help improve our lives.

Hundreds of useful products have been created from such basic substances as oil, natural gas, ores, air, and water. And the wonders yet to come, the exciting things of tomorrow, are being sought and found in the research laboratories of today.

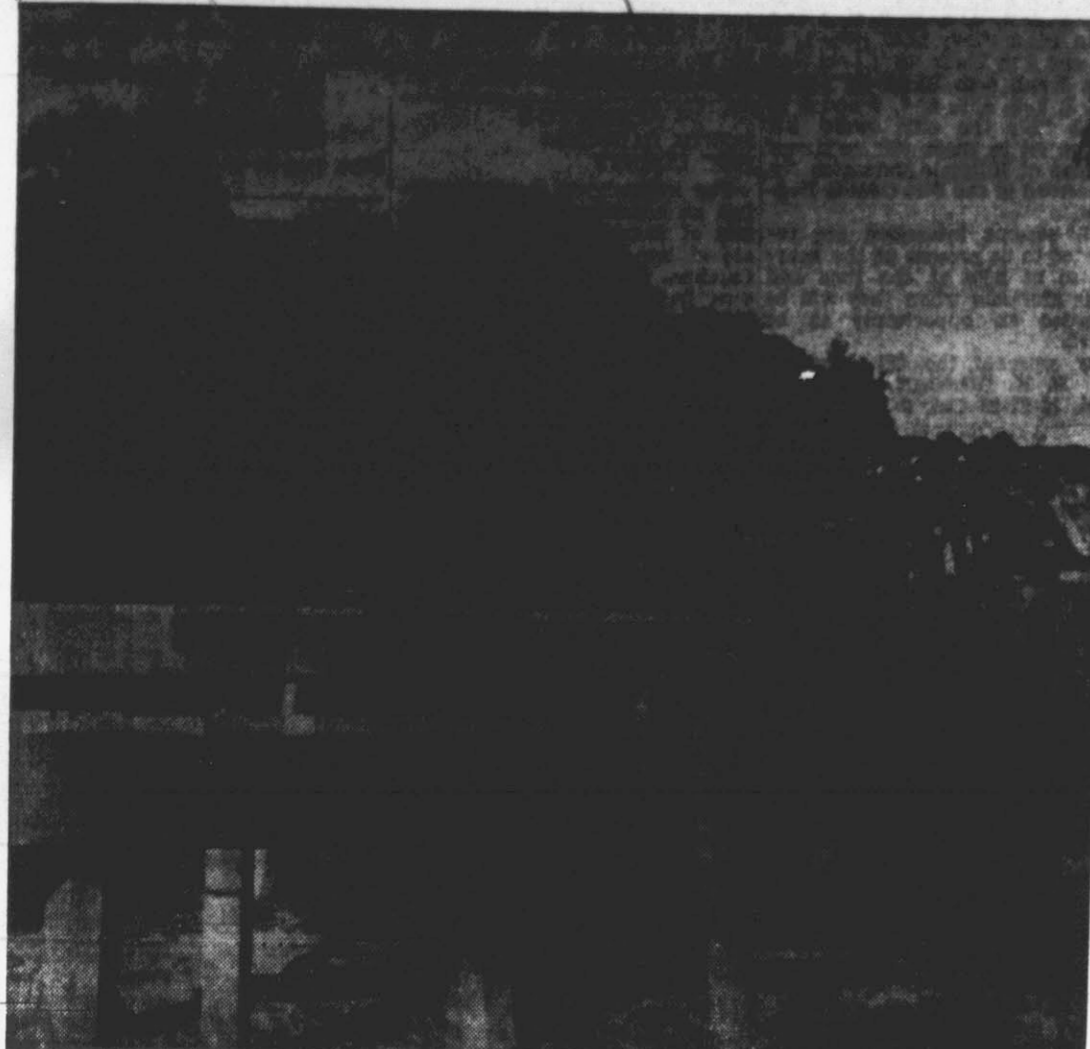

Research is a living thing to the people of Union Carbide—for it is the foundation upon which their work is built. The elements of the earth are a constant challenge to their insatiable curiosity and technical skills.

Screaming Eagle Outfit In Show

FT. CAMPBELL, Ky. (AP) — The Army shows off today its new atomic-age fighting outfit, the 101st Airborne Division, brought back into existence from its famous days of World War II.

It arranged elaborate ceremonies and demonstrations by its paratroopers and their missile and atomic era weapons to mark formal reactivation of the Screaming Eagle Division — the name coming from the shoulder patch worn by the 101st.

Not only are many of the weapons and techniques of battle new to the division, but its size and organization differ drastically from the outfit which drifted down into battle in Normandy, in Holland and at Bastogne.

Against the 17,500-man strength of standard infantry divisions, and the 13,000 or 14,000 men of other airborne divisions, the 101st has 11,500 men. Instead of the traditional three-regiment core of combat strength, the 101st is made up of five "combat groups" — smaller, more flexible, but with heavy firepower and high mobility in the air and on the ground.

The 101st will fight atomic war, if war comes, with its own atomic weapons. Included in the basic weapons will be the Honest John rocket, which has a range of about 20 miles and can be fitted with an atomic warhead.

Despite its size, the rocket can be transported by air to frontline positions of "airheads" established by invading paratroopers behind enemy lines.

The division also may have, at a later date, conventional caliber artillery pieces which can be moved by air and which can fire nuclear shells.

Rings, Photos For Chicod High Seniors

By IVA LOU BRUNSON
Chicod School Reporter

The 1956-1957 school year started with a bang here at Chicod as the Seniors received their class rings.

The same day the expressions, "Smile," "Cheese," and "Peaches" were heard from the photographers who were here to take pictures. All grades, from the first through 12th, were included in the photographing.

The Seniors are hard at work on their yearbook. They are selling ads, laying out the pages and having a good time doing it all. Hopes are high for an outstanding annual this year.

The Juniors are excited over their class play, "The Funny Brat," which they are now working on. The title seems to fit some of the people working with it.

The Seniors are also working on their play, "Who's Crazy Now." It sounds like the whole bunch is all mixed up.

Magazines are one of the main concerns of the Juniors. Subscription sales are a part of their fund-raising campaign and they've just about sold magazines to everyone in the community.

"Sock Hops" are already taking effect in the school. The Student Council is sponsoring one tonight and everyone is looking for a good time.

Money is one of the main topics of conversation and action around the school. The Seniors have been laying tobacco and picking pepper to raise funds for a trip to New York City. They have their eyes on the Big City and they mean to get there!

The Beta Club had its first meeting the first Wednesday night of the school year and decided to have a "tobacco drive." To the grade bringing in the most the Beta Club will give either an ice cream party, a Pepsi party or two dollars. The drive thus far has been very successful.

"Happy Birthday to You" was heard recently as the faculty gave Mr. Hodges, our principal, a surprise party. They served Cokes with the birthday cake.

The Student Council entertained the high school teachers and the new teachers with cool refreshments on a hot morning last week. The new teachers are Mrs. Jean Brinson, Mrs. Martha Hall, Mr. Willard Finch, Miss Mary Ann Oats, Mr. Leslie Pittman, and Mrs.

Rocky Mount Student Elected To Head ECC-Community Orchestra

Linwood Pittman of Rocky the college and a clarinetist in Mount was elected president of the ensemble.

With a roster of forty-five instrumentalists carefully chosen through tryouts, the orchestra has begun rehearsals for its annual fall program, scheduled this year for November 18. The group will also make several out-of-town appearances in the near future, according to Dr. Kenneth N. Cuthbert, director of the college department of music and conductor of the orchestra.

Membership in the group includes students and faculty members at East Carolina and musicians from several towns in the eastern part of the state.

"This year," Dr. Cuthbert stated today, "the group is well balanced, and prospects for a successful term's work are good." He said, however, that performers on stringed instruments may still become members of the orchestra.

East Carolina students, in addition to Pittman, who will act as officers of the ensemble this year are listed with their positions in the orchestra: Robert Ellwanger, Rockingham, tuba player, vice president; Frances Eubanks, Raleigh, assistant concert master, secretary-treasurer; Frances Johnson, Roanoke Rapids, violinist, historian; Fred Shehdan, Raleigh, string bass performer, public relations chairman; Henry Goodman, Dover, violinist, equipment manager; and Thomas Lewis, Rocky Mount, violinist, general manager.

Sees Segregated Housing Fading

NEWPORT, R. I. (AP) — Gov. Dennis J. Roberts (D) says that changes in the state's public housing policy "will rapidly eliminate any remaining evidence of segregation and produce total integration." He told the Newport branch of the National Assn. for the Advancement of Colored People that Negroes segregated in public housing projects will be given first choice of units in other parts of the projects as soon as they become available.

Sausage-Maker Grinds Out Suit

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — A man who says he has sausage-making know-how ground out a $250,000 breach-of-contract suit against a local meat processing firm. Klarer Provision Co. terminated his services last month after other employees learned his secret technique for making sausage. He said he entered the sausage trade 37 years ago and that the firm hired him last September. Richt claimed he was to receive $150 weekly for life plus one-fourth of a cent on all production over 50,000 pounds a week.

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK — Prices continued higher early this afternoon in active stock market trading. Leading stocks enjoyed brisk turnover as they advanced from fractions to around 2 points.

The market was higher and active from the start, improved and then softened somewhat by the first hour as trading slackened. But the market regained its vigor and by early afternoon some stocks were at their highs of the day.

When the Suez Canal crisis remained in a temporary state of suspension, investors were encouraged by the government's loosening of credit on housing, increasing store sales, rising business loans and other bullish news. International oils, which have suffered through the Suez uncertainties, advanced. Steels, motors, coppers, rails, aircrafts and other oil stocks shared in the rise.

Royal Dutch snapped back part of its 2 1/2-point loss of yesterday when its well-discounted stock split was announced, gaining a point or so. Gulf and Texaco were up around a point. Sinclair and Standard Oil (New Jersey) advanced fractions.

U.S. Steel and Bethlehem each gained around 2 points as news came the government was taking up the question of whether to give the steel industry fast tax write-offs on $1,200,000,000 of expansion. Republic and Youngstown were up around a point.

Chrysler gained a point. Other motors were steady or ahead fractions.

Picking up from their rally of late yesterday, pivotal rails presented a wide front of fractional gains. Southern Railway was up around a point, New York Central a major fraction.

Anacosta and Kennecott Copper rose around 2 points while International Nickel stepped behind that.

Allied Chemical held a gain of around 2 points. Union Carbide a point or so. Du Pont backed away from an earlier gain. U.S. Gypsum was ahead close to 3 points. Douglas Aircraft around 2, Boeing 1.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks at noon was up $1.30 to $179.50, with the industrials up $2.10, the rails up $1.10 and the utilities up 20 cents.

RALEIGH (N.C.) — Hog markets were mostly steady today. Tops of 16.50 to 17.00 at Tarboro, Enfield and Bethel; 16.25 to 17.00 at Kinston, New Bern and Benson; 16.75 at Goldsboro and Rich Square; 16.50 at Micro, Mount Olive, Elizabethtown, Lumberton, Clinton and Fayetteville; 16.25 at Farmville, Nahant, Beulaville, Mount Glead, Siler City, Newton Grove, Dunn, Whiteville, Bailey, Clarkton, Blackmons Crossroads, Wingate, Tabor City, Kenly, Castle Hayne and Smithfield.

Civil Term Of Court Adjourns Until Monday

Judge Chester R. Morris, presiding over the Superior Civil Court term in Pitt today adjourned the court until Monday.

The action was taken this morning after Judge Morris had been notified of the death of two uncles, one last night, another this morning.

During the last two days Judge Morris has passed judgment on two cases and decreed an order on a third. Clarence E. Manning, plaintiff, received $500 from the defendant Sudie L.ixon, administratrix of the estate of Claude Dixon, deceased after the jury ruled that Manning's automobile was damaged by the negligence of the defendant and the Judge had ordered it so. The two were involved in an accident in 1953.

In the case of Bernice Braxton, plaintiff, versus Albert Moore, defendant, Judge Morris ordered that the plaintiff recover nothing of Moore's after the jury had ruled that Braxton's personal property, a dump truck, was not only damaged by negligence of the defendant, but that Braxton by his own negligence, contributed to the damage of the property.

Judge Morris ordered that the case of Shirley Inez Lassiter, plaintiff, versus Fred Lassiter, defendant, be moved to Jones County in order to expedite proceedings.

Assistant Clerk of Court H. L. Lewis, Jr., said that only two cases remained on this week's calendar and "Judge Morris would have postponed them until next week had not two of his uncles died. He had already excused the jurors, except the 12 serving on the present case in court," said Lewis.

Seventeen cases are listed on next week's Civil Court calendar, not including the two cases carried over and the case in the process of being tried today. No cases will be tried on Friday or Saturday of next week, according to the calendar.

Organization of six evening classes at East Carolina College last night made a promising beginning for the adult-education program to be offered on the campus during the present school year.

Approximately 90 people were present in the Austin auditorium to enroll in classes offered during the fall quarter. Vice President Leo W. Jenkins, dean of instruction at the college, explained to them that the purpose of the college in offering evening courses is to provide opportunity for people in this part of the state to learn both for pleasure and profit.

The program, he said, had a "wonderful beginning" last night. "All evidence," he said, "points toward growth of the number and variety of adult education classes offered in future at East Carolina. As the opportunities in this type of educational program become better known and understood by the public," he explained, "the college will be able to expand its services to people in this area and those desiring to further their education will have greater opportunities to take classes meeting their needs and interests and scheduled at convenient hours."

The six classes which have been scheduled for this fall as a result of last night's meeting are, Typing, Federal Tax, Public Speaking, Architectural and Mechanical Drawing, and Beginning Swimming and Life Saving.

A second organizational meeting will be held next Thursday night, Sept. 27, at 7:30 p.m. in the Austin auditorium, Dr. Jenkins has announced.

Those who were unable to attend last night's meeting and others who are interested in adult education classes will be able at that time either to join one of the six classes already organized or to form a new class at the meeting.

The six courses which began last night will hold weekly meetings each Thursday night at 7:30.

As a further service to people of this section of the state, Dr. Jenkins stated this morning, the college will include in its regular winter quarter schedule a number of evening under graduate courses offered for credit to students working toward college degrees. Students desiring to complete or to begin a college education by taking evening classes are asked to get in touch with Dr. Jenkins at the earliest opportunity.

metals, weight about 7 pounds, can be adjusted to different rug thicknesses, have the wheels in the center so they can handle wall-to-wall carpeting, average $12.95.

Bissell dispatched one of his deluxe $19.95 models, designed as a wedding gift for brides, to Queen Elizabeth to help "neat up" Buckingham Palace.

He is proud of the varied uses to which his granddad's invention have been put.

"Indian ladies have bought them to tidy their tepees," he said. "They've kept the White House clean under both Democratic and Republican administrations, and they've even been used on the St. Andrew's golf course in Scotland to fluff up the greens."

The carpet sweeper industry has never undergone a long depression, and Bissell sees a prosperous future for it as long as people use rugs.

"Maybe even longer," he remarked. "We're working on a new model now that'll sweep bare floors."
