Mules' Day In Benson, But—

Ignored . . . for GOP elephant.

Sen. Scott Scores Soil Bank Project

BENSON, N.C. (AP)—Operation of the soil bank program under the Republican administration came under scathing attack by Sen. W. Kerr Scott here yesterday. The Tar Heel Democrat charged that the Eisenhower administration is making a political slush fund out of the soil bank, and it is making every effort to buy votes with soil bank funds in the November elections. Scott spoke at a "Mule Day" celebration, but he fast turned his attention to another animal, "the symbol of the Republican party, the elephant."

France Agrees Join Blunted Suez Ass'n

LONDON (AP)—The French Cabinet decided today to participate in the blunted Suez Canal Users' Assn. but with the reservation that it must not weaken insistence on the principle of international administration of the waterway. British Foreign Secretary Selwyn Lloyd issued formal invitations fixing Oct. 1 as the date for a third London Suez conference to settle the mechanical details of putting SCUA into action. The conference will be on the ambassadorial level and invitations went to the 17 other nations which attended the just-adjourned meeting that founded the association. Counting France, at least 12 of the 18 attending nations have lined up to join the new international agency which will seek a solution to Egypt's nationalization of the canal nearly two months ago.

Dulles Returns Home For 'Next Stage' Of Suez Plans

WASHINGTON (AP)—Secretary of State Dulles returns to Washington today to begin work on the next stage of his strategy for seeking a "peaceful and just" solution of the Suez Canal crisis. Dulles is expected to report promptly to President Eisenhower on the initial agreement in London yesterday to organize major shipping countries into the Suez Canal Users Assn. The project won wide support among foreign ministers who attended an 18-nation conference in London last week, although France is withholding support for the time being apparently because it feels the organization should have more power over shipping. Dulles left London late yesterday. His plane was due here at 3:30 p.m. Tomorrow night he will appear on a television program.

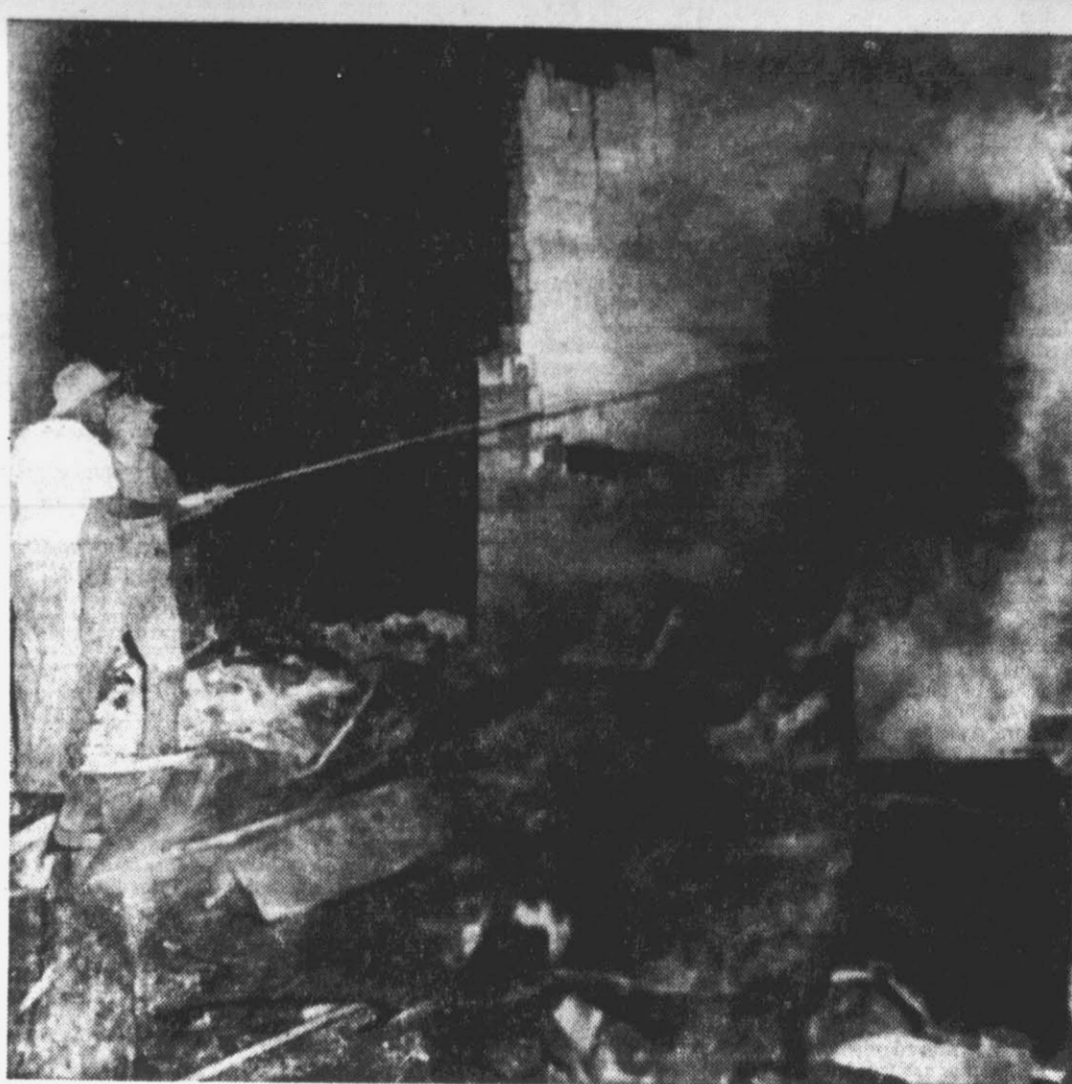

On His Way To Atomic Career

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP)—Fred Saifer of Berkeley, Calif., is off toward his goal of nuclear physicist today. He's a freshman at Harvard College. And he's only 12. Fred met his classmates last night at a class of '60 gathering and they accepted him with only a few raised eyebrows. The youngster was allowed to enter Harvard only on condition that he live with his family and not at a Harvard house. His father, Dr. Fred Saifer, obligingly moved the family to Cambridge for the school term. Young Fred has wanted to be a nuclear physicist ever since he read a biography of Madame Curie, co-discoverer of radium. He prepped at Drew School in California, where he showed his aptitude for science. As a student he was invited to teach two chemistry classes. Fred plans eventually to do graduate work in nuclear physics at UCLA but right now he has a stiff four years at Harvard ahead—including physics, mathematics, social sciences and general education.

Judge Warns Primary Aim: 'Keep The Peace'

CHARLOTTE (AP)—Some 100 Davidson and Cornelius residents, concerned about a potentially explosive racial situation in their town, attended a "keep the peace" meeting here last night called by Judge Willard Gatling of Mecklenburg County Juvenile Court. The jurist called the parents and teenagers together after several incidents were chronicled Sept. 13 when 25 white boys from the two towns gathered outside a Negro recreation building and exchanged inflammatory remarks with Negro boys and adults. Gatling told the gathering that children were influenced by what they heard in their homes, and advised the parents not to voice inflammatory opinions in front of their children. "Integration is coming in North Carolina," he said. "Under the Supreme Court ruling it must come eventually. "The Pearsall plan, if I understand it, will let you send your child to a private school if you don't like one where other races attend. "Our primary purpose is to keep the peace." Gatling said the segregation problem in schools was a "terrible" one. "I don't know the answer," he declared, "but the answer is not violence." Gatling, who had been asked to help out by the Davidson Town Council, warned that he would lower the legal boom if there was any trouble in the future. "I'm going to immediately remove you from your community," he said. "That's not a threat—but we're going to keep the peace." "We haven't had any violence in

Pactolus Firm Damaged By Fire

AND THE WALLS COME TUMBLING DOWN—A steady stream of water pours on the fire of the R. E. Davenport Lumber Company in Pactolus. One truck each from Greenville and Washington was dispatched to the scene. The blaze was fought for around three hours last night before it was extinguished. The origin of the fire is unknown. Property damage has not been totaled. (Reflector Photo by Neil King).

Bulletin

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (AP)—The Nicaraguan Embassy here said today President Anastasio Somoza was recovering from wounds suffered at the hands of an assassin in Managua last night. Efforts to reach Managua by telephone from here and from Central American capitals were unsuccessful, communications companies saying calls were not being accepted. President Eisenhower was informed of the shooting by U. S. Ambassador Thomas Whelan at Managua, capital of Nicaragua. No details were available immediately on the shooting, the White House said. Eisenhower ordered a medical team of U. S. Army and civilian personnel from the Panama Canal Zone to fly to Managua to aid. White House Press Secretary James C. Hagerty said the medical team, already in the air, includes abdominal and bone surgeons, X-ray and transfusion experts and equipment.

Virginia Assembly OK's School Plan

RICHMOND, Va. (AP)—The Virginia General Assembly passed Gov. Thomas B. Stanley's entire package of legislation to block mixing of the races in an integrated school of the state and wearily wound up its special session at 2:10 a.m. today. Pegged to the governor's watchword of "unyielding resistance" to the Supreme Court school desegregation order, the program sets up a legal maze to be traveled before any Negro child may be admitted to a white school. And even then, an integrated school would be automatically divorced from the public school system and closed for a period of persuasion and negotiation to try to bring about voluntary segregation. Another barrier behind that would be the shutoff of state funds for local school support. The final part of the package is a provision to reopen schools ultimately closed by loss of funds. These school districts would be taken over by the Assembly, at the request of the locality, and operated by the governor under the police powers of the state. What all this legislative package will mean to six Virginia counties and cities under federal court orders to desegregate schools or how long it will stand up under federal court test was not suggested by the governor or his legislative pilots. But Stanley told the worn-out final session grind he was confident their work would "serve the best interests of our citizens throughout Virginia." Fund withholding was the key measure in the governor's original package of 13 bills handed the Assembly when it met to tackle the problem four weeks ago. All that, including a private tuition grant plan as a pupil by pupil escape from enforced integration, amendment of the compulsory attendance law to prevent forced attendance at an integrated school, as well as bills protecting pay and retirement rights of teachers in area where public schools might be abandoned.

Seat Filled On Farmville Board

FARMVILLE—G. A. Newton yesterday was elected by the Board of Commissioners to fill the unexpired term of L. B. Johnson Jr. as a commissioner. Johnson recently resigned because he is leaving the country for a six-month period. Johnson is going to Cuba to study vegetable growing and processing in that country. Newton has lived in Farmville since the end of World War II. He operates the PCX and the Red and White Store in Farmville. He is married and the Newtons have two children. He is a native of the Fountain community. "We are very glad that Newton accepted," Mayor Charles S. Edwards said this morning. Edwards said Newton was the only person nominated for the position at yesterday's special election meeting of the Board of Commissioners. He was elected unanimously to fill the unexpired term. At Edwards' request the board also voted to block off one street from 5:30 to 5:30 each afternoon for "kating."

Butler of the college has announced this annual event is expected to bring to the campus a large number of former students at the college and other guests. Plans for the day are now shaping up under the direction of Butler, J. B. Nichols of Greenville, Homecoming Day chairman for the Student Government Association and representatives of the East Carolina Alumni Association. Highlight of the celebration will be the East Carolina - Western Carolina football game at the campus stadium here Saturday night. The Homecoming week will open Friday night, October 12, with the annual dance for students, alumni, and their guests. Nichols, who is planning the social affair, has announced that arrangements to bring a brass band to the campus for the dance are now being made. Saturday's program will include a special attraction a page in

Stevenson Follows Eisenhower Into Iowa Territory

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS: Adlai Stevenson makes a major Democratic bid for the Iowa vote today at Newton, Iowa—one day after an appearance there by President Eisenhower. Stevenson's flight to Iowa to address the National Field Days and plowing matches turned the affair into a shuttle operation of presidential candidates, since Eisenhower returned to Washington only last night. Stevenson reportedly has drafted a detailed outline of his farm program for delivery this afternoon to the farm-belt audience. He was said to be ready to hit hard at Eisenhower administration agricultural policies. Eisenhower, in informal remarks to some 75,000 persons there yesterday, asked them to withhold judgment on his own farm program until his Tuesday night speech at Peoria, Ill. This is billed as the major farm speech of the Eisenhower program. "Many of you will not agree with me," Eisenhower said. "Some of you, frankly, will probably think I am a little bit crazy. But I am sure that none of you will think I am not honest." On the return trip to De Moines for the flight to Washington, President and Mrs. Eisenhower were greeted by a crowd estimated at 100,000 persons. In a brief statement at the airport he praised Iowa GOP nominees and urged Republicans to get every possible voter to the polls on election day. In Washington yesterday, Stevenson talked labor matters with George Meany, head of the 15-million-member AFL-CIO. Meany told newsmen later that Stevenson "looks very confident." The union has endorsed the Stevenson-Eisenhower presidential ticket. Stevenson's flight to Iowa today starts an eight-day campaign trip through 11 farm and southern states. He scheduled another air stop at address in Denver tonight, subject not disclosed. Vice President Nixon, well into a 22-state barnstorming tour of his own, told a Sioux City, Iowa, audience today in regard to remarks that what he called "extremist politicians" should not be given control of the country. Without mentioning Stevenson by name, Nixon said the United States "should not settle for a second-best leadership" or "expedient politicians who offer false hopes of ending the draft." Stevenson readily expressed his hope the military draft could be ended "within the foreseeable future." He said such action should come "at the earliest possible moment consistent with the national safety." Nixon said Eisenhower has country if Nixon succeeded, to the proved his ability to lead the nation in peace and war and how "offers our best hope of remaining out of future conflicts." Nixon's opposite number, Sen. Estes Kefauver, had harsh words for Nixon in Pendleton, Ore., yesterday and renewed a charge against Eisenhower that had drawn Nixon's fire. Kefauver repeated a charge that Eisenhower has worked against the interests of the "little people," which either brought from Nixon the hope the military draft could be ended "within the foreseeable future." He said such action should come "at the earliest possible moment consistent with the national safety." Nixon said Eisenhower has country if Nixon succeeded, to the proved his ability to lead the na-

THE BLONDE DIED DANCING

By KELLEY ROOS

SYNOPSIS

Connie Barton's husband of almost five happy years has made her suspicious lately by his Wednesday night absences; his alibi for going out these evenings have worn thin. So Connie concludes Steve must be having blonde trouble. She resolves to fight fire with fire. She has her jet hair dyed the blondest blonde and seeks to allure him into staying home. But Steve laughs at her new hair-do and goes out again. Furious, Connie follows him covertly. The trail leads to the fourteenth floor of an office building.

CHAPTER 3

The first thing I saw when my feet hit the soft, luxurious carpeting of the fourteenth floor was an incredibly beautiful blonde talking to an incredibly avelite brunette with glamorous eye-glasses. The first thing I heard was muted, dreamy music. It was more than I could stand. I turned back toward the elevator bank and, out of the corner of my eye, I saw Steve bouncing jubilantly down a corridor. He opened a door and disappeared. A down car stopped beside me and I stepped into it. Then I stepped back out again.

Criticism of my teeth, I walked through the room, on into the corridor, on toward the door. I put my hand gently on its knob to ease it open just an inch, and I found myself staring through a square glassed peephole into the room beyond.

Standing in the center of the room was Steve. His back was to me and he was facing a tall, willowy, ravishing female. Her wide blue eyes were flustering Steve with a heated welcome. Her luscious bright red mouth was not only generous, it was inviting. Her figure couldn't have been real, but I was afraid it was. . . and she was blonde! Very blonde, very very. But not as blonde as I, my woman's intuition had led me to victory on that point. Otherwise, I could see, I was not doing well at all.

Steve moved closer to her, put his arms around her. She shook her flamboyant head at him and he held her tighter. She freed herself and stepped back; she spoke to him with her lips and with her eyes. He held out his arms and she moved expertly into them. They swayed together and Steve stepped on her foot.

I almost cried aloud. I shut my eyes and leaned my forehead against the door. Steve Barton was taking dancing lessons.

He was doing this for me. He was learning to dance for me. When he took me to the Rosewood Room for our anniversary party we wouldn't sit out the evening like a pair of bumps on a log. We would dance!

I opened my eyes and looked again. Steve and the sensational young lady were gliding around the room. His arm was set with a fierce determination. His forehead was wrinkled in a scowl. He wasn't having fun; he wasn't even enjoying being in the arms of a female like that. He was having a lousy time. He was having a dancing lesson . . . because of me.

I watched the two figures whirl across the floor, and then my heart sank. Steve was waltzing, he was learning to waltz . . . and perhaps that was all he was learning. Perhaps he has insisted on that, not realizing that the number of waltzes a dance band played was next to nil. As a favor to him I would stick around and speak to his teacher after school. I wanted his surprise for me to be perfect.

And then, it wouldn't hurt to let this blonde know that Steve had a wife, also blonde. Just in case she was getting any ideas about him, I'd let her see what long fingernails I had.

I went back to the reception room and sat quietly in a corner. I didn't want the receptionist to notice me and make it necessary for me to explain why I was here. She had enough to do without listening to a lengthy, embarrassed explanation from a suspicious wife. I lit a cigarette and watched this smoothie go about her business. She assigned studios to teachers and pupils, directed new students to the head of the school, answered the phone and made entries in the ap-

Farm Livestock Inventory Value Suffered Drop

RALEIGH — The value of U.S. livestock inventories took a drop in the current year from $11.2 billion, despite a larger number of animals, says Dewey Hennessie, State College extension dairy marketing specialist.

He reports that crop inventories declined less than 3 per cent in quantity, but fell off about 14 per cent in value from $9.6 billion to $8.3 billion. Machinery and motor vehicles were valued at $16.6 billion on January 1, compared with $16 billion on the same date last year.

As for debts, the farm mortgage figure rose 10 per cent during the year to nearly $9 billion, Hennessie explained. New mortgages increased 26 per cent to $2.4 billion.

Outstanding price support loans stood at $1.9 billion, reports Hennessie.

The worm snake looks like an earth worm, also likes to eat them.

FRIENDLY TABERNACLES

The author of the 84th Psalm was a great lover of the earthly habitations of God. The temples, shrines and holy places of Israel were his chief delight. He found them friendly, inviting and comforting to his soul.

In one of his moments of spiritual ecstasy he broke forth in song: "How amiable are thy tabernacles, O Lord of hosts!" he sang. "My soul longeth, even fainteth for the courts of the Lord."

There are millions today who look upon God's earthly houses—the churches of the land—in much the same way. They are glad when the church hour comes and they can mingle with others in worship and spiritual fellowship.

The church around the corner or over in the next block is not a cold and formal place, once you come to know it. It breathes friendliness and sympathy. It comforts and inspires and points the way to a kind and loving God.

Come to Church on Sunday and enjoy the fellowship of God's people.

THE CHURCH FOR ALL . . . ALL FOR THE CHURCH

The Church is the greatest factor on earth for the building of a storehouse of spiritual values. Without a strong Church, neither democracy nor civilization can survive. There are four sound reasons why every person should attend services regularly and support the Church: They are: (1) For his own sake. (2) For his children's sake. (3) For the sake of his community and nation. (4) For the sake of the Church itself, which needs his moral and material support. Plan to go to church regularly and read your Bible daily.

Speaker Stresses Importance Of UN Specialized Agencies

The specialized agencies of the United Nations have done more toward promoting international peace than any of the other agencies including the General Assembly and the Security Council, Dr. W. E. Marshall, social studies professor of East Carolina College, told members of the Junior Woman's Club and their guests at the monthly program meeting Wednesday night.
Through these specialized agencies, the standard of living of all the people of the world is being raised. People are becoming more interested in culture and understanding their neighbors and the result is more harmonious living for all.
To illustrate his point, Dr. Marshall pointed out that in 1945, 45% of the world's population had less than 200 calories of food a day and now the same group has 1000 calories a day, because of the work of the Food and Agricultural Organization, the first of the specialized agencies to be organized.
UNESCO, another specialized agency, serves by improving education and spreading knowledge of inventions and culture. The system of exchange students, farmers, teachers and scientist operates through this agency.
The International Health Organization has done much to raise the health standard of the world. Only an international organization could so effectively prevent epidemics which threaten to spread from country to country.
The fact that the people of India have added beef to their diet is because the International Health Organization has vaccinated 2 1/2 million head of cattle for hoof and mouth disease in India. The budget of this organization is only 5 1/2 million dollars a year, but much has been accomplished because so many doctors and other individuals have donated their services, the speaker said.
Dr. Marshall spoke briefly on other agencies, such as International Trade, Labor, Civil Aeronautics, Meteorological, Monetary Fund, and Bank and Rehabilitation Organizations, all of which do their particular part in promoting mutual aid and understanding.
The agencies are to be approved by submitting a constitution to the Assembly and if they are approved, they are allotted a budget with which to operate.
The United States carries the main share of supporting them, because of its vast wealth. The money has been well invested to serve the cause of brotherhood and peace, Dr. Marshall said.
Following the address, Mrs. Doris Harrington, president of the Junior Woman's Club, introduced and welcomed the guests for the evening. She announced that the Greensboro Club would be hostess to an Open House at the Children's Home Society in Greensboro on Sept. 27 and that Tag Day would be on October 6. On that day the Junior Woman's Club will tag for donations to the Watson Memorial Fund for underprivileged children.
Next Wednesday evening, starting at 7 o'clock, members of the Junior Woman's Club will tour the town to collect old clothing for the clothing closet at the Welfare Department. Families with clothes to give will be asked to leave on their porch lights.
Welcomed guests for the meeting were Jackie Bond, Eleanor Bunting, Ruth Clifton, France Lawhorn, Margaret Whitehurst, Joyce Crisp, Violet Jones, Kitty Smith Joyner, Jean Hudson, Lorna Bradshaw, Peggy Lewis, Hilda Halland, and Joyce Goodman.
Hostesses for the social hour, Teeny Andersen and June Carson, served punch and cookies.

Eastern Carolina Has Uphill Fight

The Board of Higher Education does not have the final say in how much East Carolina College will receive for permanent improvements for the next biennium; but its recommendation that two million dollars be slashed from ECC's request means an uphill battle for the college if it is to get additional funds from the General Assembly.

A number of necessary permanent improvements for East Carolina were passed over by the Board of Higher Education in trimming the request from $3,659,000 to $1,500,000. Unless these are provided by the 1957 session of the legislature, East Carolina will continue to find itself severely handicapped in serving the eastern part of the state.

It is quite clear that the college must have additional land if it is to continue to grow to meet the demands of this section. The $250,000 for land purchases, lopped off by the Board of Higher Education in its recommendations, should by all means be restored to the permanent improvement budget of East Carolina. Unless it is, the college might well have acquired all the continuous property it will ever get. Before the 1959 General Assembly meets, it is quite likely that the only undeveloped property now adjacent to that which the college owns will be developed and no longer available.

Should such a situation come about, East Carolina would be completely hemmed in and its growth potential impaired.

If the college is to be able to use the dormitories it will build on the new area across Tenth Street, walks and drives must be installed in that area. The $15,000 requested for this project must be included in appropriations for the next biennium.

One by one we could review the list of requests made by East Carolina College which the Board of Higher Education saw fit to delete in its recommendations to the Advisory Budget Commission. It suffices to say, however, that East Carolina in its requests has not asked for anything that the college does not urgently need. Any items which are eliminated from the appropriations will handicap the college to some degree and limit the service it can offer this state and more particularly the eastern section it serves.

In what has now become an uphill struggle for sufficient funds for permanent improvements during the next biennium, East Carolina must have the help and support of the people of this area. The Board of Higher Education has indicated by its drastic cuts in ECC's requests where it stands and what treatment East Carolina can expect from it. At the same time it must be realized that the Board carries a great deal of weight with the Advisory Budget Commission and perhaps with the legislative appropriation committees.

If East Carolina is to receive the funds it needs for permanent improvements, citizens in large numbers must go to bat for the college. Otherwise there now appears little hope for East Carolina getting funds to meet its needs.

No Gov't Economy In All That Paper Work

"We decided all the paper work needed to explain that $1 donation to the federal government would cost about $100,000."

Maybe it wouldn't have cost that much for New Mexico to add one dollar to the $663,999 in federal funds for hospital construction; but chances are it would have cost several thousand dollars for both the state and federal government before the matter were ever resolved.

Someone in the New Mexico State Health Department suggested a $1 donation be accepted to make the federal appropriation an even $664,000 and ease the problem of dividing the funds. But after consideration the Department came to the conclusion red tape would have made it financially impractical to explain the donation to Bureaucrats in Washington.

It is unfortunate that federal red tape is so entwined in almost every act of state and local government, not to mention the mass of red tape that federal offices have to wade through every day in an effort to carry out their duties.

Some day, perhaps, the unnecessary forms, copies and correspondence will be eliminated from the federal government. When that happens, taxpayers across the country can begin looking for a refund because of the reduction in the cost of federal operations. They can also look for unemployment to rise because the elimination of red tape in the federal government would put literally thousands of federal employes out of their jobs.

If Congress or the administration ever gets serious about joint efforts to bring about economy in government operations, they might well begin by taking the shears to the red tape.

Let's Not Stop Now In Meeting Blood Quotas

It's a good feeling to know that after more than a year Pitt County has finally met its quota for a bloodmobile visit. Not just once, but on two successive days.

People of the Greenville community came through with 124 pints of blood Wednesday oversubscribing the 110-pint quota. On Thursday the bloodmobile visit to the DuPont plant under sponsorship of the Pitt County Red Cross chapter likewise received more than its 110-pint quota.

For the past couple of years citizens of Pitt County have been rather reluctant to give blood to the program of which Pitt County is a member. As a result the county's membership in the program has been in a rather questionable status. During the past fiscal year the county withdrew from the regional blood bank some over 200 more pints of blood than its citizens put into the program.

Now that another quota has been met, efforts of the people of the county should be pointed toward meeting the quota for each visit of the bloodmobile this year. If Pitt is to participate in the program and obtain benefits from it, people of the county must accept the responsibility of supplying at least as much blood to the bank as they withdraw from it.

The response to this most recent visit of the bloodmobile is, we hope, an indication that the people of Pitt County have overcome their lethargy and will in the future give adequate support to the program.

Budgetary Requests Just Keep Growing

By LYNN NISBET

SCHOOLS — The State Board of Education told the Advisory Budget Commission that the public schools of North Carolina would require almost $332 million dollars for the next two years. Actual figures are $163,713,444 for 1957-58 and $168,002,802 for 1958-59 terms. That is about $68 million more than was appropriated for the two years of the current biennium and almost $71 million more than was actually spent.

These figures are almost staggering in the aggregate. As the members of the board presented the details of proposed spending, one newsman was reminded of several familiar quotations. One is the Latin motto of the United States of America, "E Pluribus Unum"—"Out of many, one." Another is the nursery rhyme about "Little drops of water, little grains of sand, make the might ocean and the pleasant land."

A third of a billion dollars is a lot of money. A million school kids are a lot of folks. Dr. Charles Carroll, state superintendent, said the budget presented was designed to make State contribution to the education of children about $165 a year instead of the present $135.

Further broken down the approximate $35 million a year total increase in the school budget means an increase of about 16 cents a day for each pupil. That increase will come about by paying school bus drivers $27 a month instead of $22, providing transportation for city children as well as farm kids, somewhat better janitorial service for protection of buildings, as well as increase in teacher salaries.

Stated still another way it would mean State spending of about 91 cent a day instead of 75 cent a day for the teaching of each pupil enrolled.

EQUITY — Budget folks of necessity think in terms of total dollars. School folks think in terms of individual pupils. There is evidence that both groups are thinking in terms of equality of opportunity and service for all the people.

In the areas of general instruction in elementary and high schools a fair degree of equality has been achieved as between rural and urban schools. In transportation and vocational education there are gross inequities, mostly carry-overs from the time when North Carolina was overwhelmingly a rural farm state, but is rapidly becoming industrial rather than agricultural.

Questions are being asked why so much money should be spent, even in city schools, for vocational agriculture classes and no courses provided for training industrial workers.

An even more glaring inequity, which grew out of the rural school consolidation program that began 40 years ago, is the policy of bus transportation for rural pupils, none provided for children who live inside the corporate limits of towns or cities in which their school also is located. Present regulations and statutes require that children living more than a mile and a half from their school, both in the country, must be transported free. But children living three miles or more from their school, in the same city or town, must walk or pay their own transportation costs.

Education board members presenting these facts indicated that whatever the budget folks might recommend or the General Assembly enact, as to vocational training and transportation, simple justice required that existing discrimination against pupils in city schools should be discontinued and all students treated alike. Education board members Oscar Richardson, presenting this item, said the present system is a "sitting duck" if anybody ever challenged it in the courts.

FAITH — John Pritchett, education board member presenting a substantial part of the public school budget, captured the interest of the commission members when he challenged them to have the same faith in North Carolina that big business had demonstrated in the future of the nation. With a bit of good natured chiding of past legislators for lack of faith, resulting in embarrassing surpluses, Pritchett said he could not conceive that hardboiled and able business men would make contracts such as the steel negotiated with labor, unless they had full confidence that the national economy would support the program. "Why can't we as a State manifest the same faith?" he said.

Similar profession of faith was expressed at previous hearings by advocates of larger appropriations for higher education, mental health and various types of social service to citizens.

Which brings us once again to the fallacy of comparing revenue collections this month or this year with the previous comparable period. More people are making and spending more money and paying more taxes every month in North Carolina. As revenue increases needs for the money also increase, sometimes faster than the revenue.

Other Editors Are Saying... Is History Repeating?

(Henderson Dispatch) A more or less commonly accepted axiom is that history repeats itself. Often that seems to be borne out in event. And here is one wherein we wonder if the theory is again true.

Citing a sharp increase in shipments from State ports to foreign destinations, Ports Authority officials say that scrap metal exports are among the chief items involved. Two shiploads are due to leave during September. Destinations are not indicated. In 1955, a total of 150,000 tons of this metal was sent abroad, and that full-year quantity will have been equalled this year by the end of this month.

Well, go back in memory to the late 1930s. Remember how carload after carload of scrap metal was shipped from North Carolina, including Henderson, with destination Japan? Even then, before World War II, some facetious remarks were that it would come back to us in the form of bullets and bombs. And that's exactly what happened. The Jap war potential would have been greatly handicapped without that enormous source of supply from this country. As it turned out, the United States helped arm Japan to fight against us.

Not only that, but when the war did come there was an acute shortage of scrap metal for use in smelters and foundries in this country in speeding up the all-out war effort.

We don't know where this scrap is going right now. But we wonder if history is repeating itself, and are much afraid it is, not only in helping arm some one else but in creating a shortage in this country against the day when scrap metal may be at a premium. Actually, why is it that the United States as the greatest industrial nation on earth cannot utilize its own waste in this field as effectively as others can?

Again, as in the late 1930s, we may as well know ostrich, be hiding our head in the sand to avoid sensing the danger potentials on the horizon, now is the time to give serious thought to these trends, rather than wait until some great emergency is upon us.

Nixon Just Took Off—

by NEIL KING

'I Want Him To Remember'

The Police Court Prosecuting Attorney called the three Negro men from their seats in the Courtroom.

"You've been charged with public drunkenness. How do you plead?"

"Guilty," they answered in unison. They stood beside the prosecutor's table and faced the judge. The tallest of the men stood in the center, flanked by the medium-sized man on his left and the shortest of the three on his right.

The arresting officer was sworn in by the clerk of court. He took the stand and testified that it was just a routine arrest of drunks and they offered no resistance. At certain points in the testimony, the medium-sized man lightly smiled, remembering the night of his escapade.

The judge asked if they had a police record of any kind or if they had been in court before. The prosecutor said they had not. They continued to stand before the judge, faces expressionless, as he reprimanded them briefly.

Then came the jolt. The judge turned to the clerk of court and said: "Mr. Clerk, enter in your book, 30 DAYS in the common JAIL of Pitt County to be assigned to work on the roads under the supervision of the State Highway Department and the Public Works Commission. (There was a slight pause as the judge let the unfinished sentence sink in. Their bodies immediately stiffened. "Thirty days," they thought. "It's unbelievable. Why, you usually get just a warning and a small fine, but THIS?" They were instantly relieved when the judge continued, "... to be suspended upon the following conditions: that they remain of good behavior for 6 months and pay a fine of $10."

One of the men practically jumped to the clerk of court's table to pay the fine, fearful that the judge would change his mind. Said the judge: "If I think a person can be helped, I deliberately pause before saying 'suspended.' The next time he thinks about getting drunk I want him to remember that queer feeling he had in the pit of his stomach when I said, '30 days.'"

He's A Believer In Sun Spots

By BOB HUNT

ST. LOUIS (AP)—Sunspots probably don't mean much to you but a university professor uses them as a guide to long-range weather forecasting.

So far, at least, the theory has worked.

Edward M. Brooks, a 40-year-old "weather conscious" six-footer, has made almost a lifetime study of the weather but says he came on the sunspot theory almost by accident.

"There's more than that doesn't know about sunspots," Brooks says, "than we do know but it is receiving more attention now. The bespectacled professor of geophysics at St. Louis university first popped into the St. Louis weather picture in the spring of 1952 when he called for and got a scorching summer. The next summer was another hot one and Brooks predicted it in advance, too.

His one close call, so far, came in 1954 when he said at the outset the odds were about 3-2 for another blistering three months. He changed this early in June. The '54 average equalled 1952 but it was 1-10 degree cooler than the previous year.

He then called for cooler weather in 1955. It came along. In fact, he predicted cooler temperatures through 1958. This year is right in line.

His theory doesn't get much house from Harry F. Wahlgren, government weatherman here who once replied to Brooks prediction with the simple statement: "Balderdash."

Brooks, who learned meteorology from his dad and started keeping tabs on the weather at six, says he noticed that in 1947—a year of unusual weather—the maximum sunspot activity was recorded.

"I went back and studied all weather records as far back as 1838," he recalls. "I found that over a period of 117 years the records showed that when we had least sunspots we had hot, dry summers; when we had most sunspots we had cooler and stormier summers."

The sunspots—believed by some to be areas of rotating electrical current on the sun—have an 11-year cycle ranging from a minimum to maximum.

"When we see them we usually have magnetic storms on the earth," Brooks says. "I don't say they cause them, but there is some connection."

Since 1947 was the year of maximum sunspots, Brooks figured it out mathematically and based his '54 forecast on the minimum period to produce hot, dry weather. It happened.

Brooks says the next maximum is expected in January, 1957. With that in view, he predicts cooler and turbulent weather including more tornado activity and a "major flood on the Mississippi River between now and 1960."

Strength for the Day

By EARL L. DOUGLASS

LIFE WORTH LIVING

A man who should never be forgotten is the late George Washington Carver. This negro showed himself to be one of the outstanding scientists of his day. He gave his life to the study of the peanut and evolved commercial uses for its products which had been undreamed of up to that time. It is said that Henry Ford offered him one hundred thousand dollars a year salary and the best laboratory money could buy. These he turned down and chose to live on his fifteen hundred dollars a year salary at Tuskegee Institute. Here was really the dedication of a great life to great ends, and the complete disregard to a great man for material rewards. This marvelous little scientist went about in threadbare garments. He was so deeply religious that he kept a Bible on his desk and read it a number of times every day. He believed he was a chosen instrument of God's hand for the carrying out of great purposes.

Lives like this shame so many of us who find it hard to forget ourselves and our own selfish interests. Yet the greatest joy of living comes from being able to lose oneself in a great cause. Blessed are the meek for they shall inherit the earth—and heaven too, in all probability.

Early Prediction On November Results

By RAY TUCKER

WASHINGTON — "Is it too early to ask how you think the national elections will result on November 6?" inquires Mrs. T. M. of Altoona, Pa. "I am interested in your answer because of the Democratic victories in Maine."

Answer: Although I base my answer only on conditions as they appear today, and in the face of the Maine results, I think that President Eisenhower will be re-elected without too much difficulty. And I cite the reason which Al Smith gave when it was suggested that there was a chance of defeating F.D.R. in 1936 and 1940: "You don't shoot Santa Claus, do you?"

more good things than ever before, despite high prices. The outcome in Maine would seem to discredit this argument, for I think that economic conditions were largely responsible for the upset. The price of their main crop, potatoes, has been lower than usual, the fishing conditions have been poor because of the weather, and the income from that source has fallen off. Another industry—tourism and the resorts—suffered because of the weather.

But generally, the country is prosperous, and should remain so, not only through the election, but well into next year. Together with Ike's personal popularity, I believe that overall prosperity and the maintenance of peace, if it survives the Suez crisis, will pull him through. PREDICTS DEMOCRATIC CONGRESS However, I think that the next Congress will be Democratic with large majorities in the House and Senate than the opposition enjoys now. Despite the President's strength, the Republican Party has not yet won back the confidence and the support of the vast majority of Americans. There will be more ticket-splitting next November than we have seen in many years.

Moreover, contrary to the orthodox viewpoint, I think that a Congress nominally in opposition to the President will be beneficial. It guarantees a close watch and scrutiny of the conduct of the Executive arm of the government. And, if the administration's legislative proposals are good, the Democrats will have to enact them into law.

Finally, House Speaker Rayburn and Senate Majority Leader Johnson, as well as the Democratic chairmen of Congressional committees, have shown no disposition to harass or stultify Ike's program for selfish, partisan purposes. There is no guarantee that they will not put up a stiffer fight at the next session, though. With Ike due to quit the political

Local Tax Bills Are Going Up

By ELMER ROESSNER

State and local tax bills high this year? You don't say so! But, brethren, you haven't seen anything yet.

State and local governments spent $36,607,000,000 in 1954. They got $22,067,000,000 in taxes; the rest came from liquor stores, utilities, retirement and other welfare fund payments, Federal government hand-outs and borrowing.

Figures for 1955 have not yet been compiled but totals are undoubtedly higher. They will be higher for this year and probably every year for a generation or more to come.

So your state and local tax bills will go up, up, up.

DEMANDS HEAVY The growth of the population, technical advances and rising demands for governmental services guarantee higher taxes. States and lesser units need more money for these major items:

Schools. The rise in the birth rate since mid-war days has already compelled the construction of large numbers of new schools, but the end is nowhere in sight. The number of births keeps on rising, and those children we have been building kindergartens and primary schools for will soon require grammar and high schools and, not too far away, colleges.

Roads. The Federal highway program will tend to increase, rather than lessen, state and local spending for road construction. Federal money has a string to it: states must match it in part. Furthermore, new major highways will create demands for more connecting roads and better secondary roads.

Streets and parking. New highways, despite cut-offs around cities, will pour more traffic into business districts—and the number of autos in use keeps on rising. Cities face the necessity of improving internal traffic conditions and providing more parking space, or risk losing trade to other trading areas. Note that land acquired for parking facilities is often removed from tax rolls, increasing the tax burden on other property owners.

MARCH OF SCIENCE COSTS

Slum clearance. There's strong public sentiment (and no construction influence) for ridding out slums and, often, very fine buildings that happen to be in the way. Cities and other taxing units must help pay, even when Federal funds are contributed, and clearance operations often remove taxable property from rolls, thrusting burdens elsewhere.

Care of aged. New drugs are lengthening life and minimal care for those unable to work is no longer the fashion. Already heavy taxation makes it difficult for the average person to save enough for old age, and for descendants to support him. Cities, counties and states have a heavier burden.

Hospitals. New drugs and techniques have revolutionized hospital care. Total bed requirements are lessening. But all but newest hospitals are inadequate for modern medicine.

Airports. The jet plane is making almost every nonmilitary in the country obsolete. Bigger airports are needed and, unless ways are found to hush the jets, ports will have to be further away from inhabited places. This will require new, close-in ports for helicopter ferry services.

PAY — OR SURRENDER

States and local governments will have to meet rising demands for services or surrender their functions to the Federal government. Walter W. Heller, University of Minnesota economist, told the University of Wisconsin School of Banking recently:

Mr. Heller complained that there is a "national psychosis that we are at or near the limits of our taxing capacity." There he added these words, which you may want to cut out and read any time you feel unduly cheerful:

"What we lack is not the economic capacity but the WILL to tax. If and when we become convinced that in allocating our national income we should give a higher priority to public education, public health, public welfare, public recreational facilities and so on, even at the expense of private outlays for an extra suit, color TV, steak dinners and so on—at that point our collective will to tax will be restored."

scene in 1961, if re-elected, the Democrats may feel that they will have a real chance to take over the White House in the 1960 election.

BOOKS BY DICTATORS Many readers have asked if two books on revolutions recently mentioned in this column are available in the United States. One is Hitler's "Mein Kampf," and the other is Colonel Gamal Abdel Nasser's "The Philosophy of the Revolution."

"Answer: Hitler's volume was published in the U.S. and should be obtainable at most libraries. I recommend Francis Hackett's "What Mein Kampf Means to America," published by Reynal and Hitchcock in 1941.

Nasser's book will soon be published here, I understand. Meanwhile, the Egyptian Embassy here has a limited supply, and it will probably obtain more, if there is any great demand. The Embassy's address is 2310 Decatur Place, Northwest, Washington, D. C.

Court House Tower Really Shakes When Bell Is Rung

By NEIL KING
Reflector Staff Writer

humorous, like the time he fell and had to be hospitalized. Rodgers has a brother-in-law, 18 years his senior, who helped him to do the paint job. His name is Daniel A. Geib, a resident of Hershey, Pennsylvania. Geib is not a painter by vocation, but rather by avocation. He's been painting off and on, here and there, for 20 years. Most of his time is spent in the operation of a water-filler plant for Hershey-Estates in his home town. Hershey-Estates owns the controlling stock in Hershey Chocolate Company. He's been with them for 41 years. When asked why he had come down here, Geib grinned and said, "I came down here on my vacation . . . to help Bert paint this tower." Actually though, Geib filled in for the regular man who is sick. The two painters left Thursday morning for the Quaker State, but returned yesterday. They made the trip up to Rodgers, age 40, is owner and field engineer of the Rodgers Clock Service, Harrisburg, Pennsylvania. His business specializes in the maintenance, electrification and general repairs of tower clocks; also, any pointing anything needed in or around tower clocks. He follows his business from Maine to Florida.

"Matter of fact," he said, "it was in Maine one winter that I was on a clock tower painting and it was so cold that the paint drippings froze on my glove and I couldn't get it off until it thawed out." He related many such stories—some humorous—some not so get the regular worker and pick up some pigeon repellent for the tower. Rodgers said the repellent contains a chemical that sticks to the pigeon's feet, but doesn't harm them!"

The Pennsylvania man has been in the painting and clock repair business for about 10 years. He started right after he came out of the Navy's SeaBees after World War II. He's the same man who, a few months back, placed glass covers over the tour tower clocks and substituted luminous hands for the old, metal ones. Rodgers said that heights don't bother him as long as he has something substantial to stand on. "But the rigging gets shaky, I get shaky, too," he declared. The highest place he worked on was the Court House at Petersburg, Virginia. "In Salem, Virginia, some TV station cameraman shot pictures of me working to show the local news shows that night at six and ten o'clock. He got on long enough to get my footing close ups and everything." Rodgers was asked if he saw himself that night. "Yea," he said, "both times!"

Rodgers tells of the time he had been working on a clock in a high steeple. It was day outside, but dark inside the spiral, except for an electric light. "When I went up," he said, "the light was burning. I finished the repair job and started down, holding my tool box in my hand, but the light had gone out. I thought I remembered how the steps were and I started down the ladders. I got to the bottom of the first ladder and thought I was on one of the main scaffolds, but actually, I was only on a plank. I took one more step and there was nothing between me and main deck except 40 feet of air. I plunged over head first, but luckily, my tool box wedged in the planking and I held back. He also may mention of the fact that he once spilled black paint all over the front of a women's dormitory at Maryland State Teachers College. "Gasoline and elbow grease fixed that up, though," he said.

But about the not so humorous accident that hospitalized Rodgers for three months: It happened in the Saint Anne's Church, Annapolis, Maryland.

Related Rodgers: "I had finished servicing a clock and had started down a steep flight of small and narrow steps, which were about two stories high, when I slipped and fell. I had a bucket of paint in one hand and my tool box in the other and I didn't let go, either. I really struck that floor a lick, I landed right smack on my first, but luckily, my tool box wedged in the planking and I held

This is a painter's view of the wooded area of North Greenville. Note water tank and highway 11 in background.

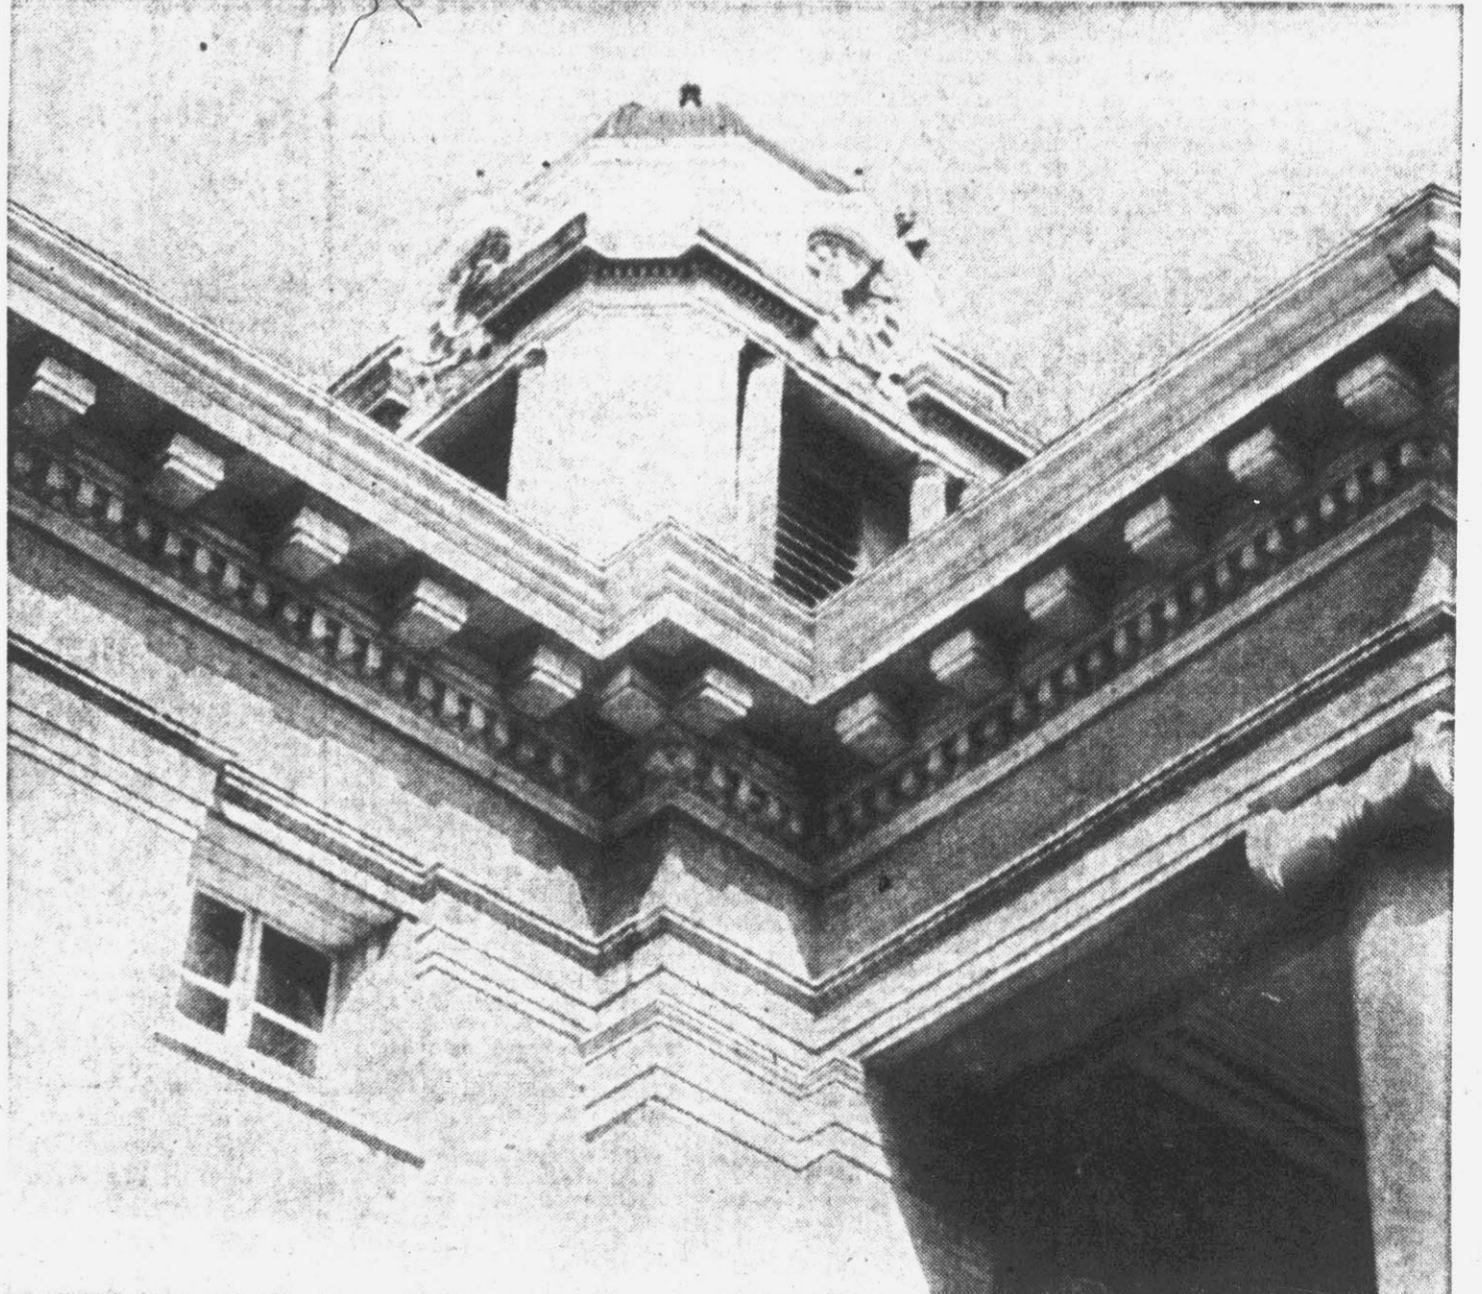

Rodgers, pictured at right, stops for a moment to chat with cohort Dan Geib, who continues to paint. North Greenville is in background.

Painter and clock repairman Bert Rodgers paints around the face of the West Clock atop the Court House.

Buccaneers Are Host To Stetson University Tonight

ECC Hampered By Injuries To Key Personnel

For the second time in their three-year series of play, Stetson and East Carolina will tangle on the Pirate field, tonight beginning at 8:00 at College Stadium.

The Green and White Hatters from Florida have been a Buccaneer foe since 1952. In the first of the series, the Pirates and the Florida team tied at 19-19. In the second game, East Carolina crushed Coach Herb McQuillan's eleven 40-6. In 1954, the locals won again, making it by a 26-7 score. Last season, the two teams did not meet.

Both Have Lost

Both the Bucs and Stetson have had rather dismal beginnings for the 1956 season. East Carolina has dropped games to Norfolk Navy, by a 20-19 score, and VPI, by a 37-2 margin. Stetson, last week, was routed by Virginia Military Institute 47-6.

Despite the loss of several veterans in these two early games, Coach Jack Boone is expecting his boys to be in "pretty good" shape for tonight's encounter. On the injured list are starters Ed Emory, Jerry Brooks, Waverly Chesson and Buddy Dennis. Bobby Lilley, reserve fullback, who has seen heavy duty against both Pirate opponents thus far, is also suffering from a hand injury.

Another ailment in the Buc camp this week has been the absence of Little All-America quarterback Dick Cherry. Due to illness in his family, Cherry was absent from several drill sessions and may not see full-time duty tonight. Slated to work the team at quarterback, along with Cherry, will be Gary Mattocks and Ralph "Squirrel" Zehring. Both Mattocks and Zehring are good passers and can direct the running game as well.

Line Is Set

With three of the starting linemen on the bench with injuries, Boone is expected to use the following: Bill Helms and Ray Pennington will hold down the end positions; Ray Overton and Charlie Smith will work the tackle posts; guards will be Ken Burgess and Paul Popov or Dick Mondis; Algy Faircloth will work out at center.

Chesson, who was injured in drills, was a first stringer on the defense eleven as a linebacker. As yet, no replacement has been announced for the Washington senior.

Ayden Crushes Rams By 20-0

In the Coastal Conference clash between two undefeated, untied and un-scored upon teams, last night, Ayden remained intact, downing Robersonville 20-0, at Robersonville.

Coach Stuart Tripp's crew lashed out with a strong aerial attack to down the defending conference champs. Quarterback Lindy Dunn's trusty arm was a big factor in the victory.

In the first quarter, Dunn hit end Lester Stocks for a 25-yard pass play that scored. Tommy Edwards passed to Stocks again for the extra point.

In the second quarter, Dunn repeated the play, passing to Stocks again, this time for a 20 yard touchdown play. Long runs by R. L. Collins and Edwards set up both touchdowns.

The score was 13-0 at the half. A pass from Dunn to end Horton Jolly in the third quarter, carried to the Robersonville two. Dunn then sneaked across for the score. An Edwards-to-Collins pass added the extra point. The 20-0 score remained.

KELLY RUNNING—Jimmy Kelly, 145 pound halfback on the G-Man eleven, is shown scampering down the sidelines for yardage against Grainger at College Stadium. The Green ground attack was held in check last night by a tough Kinston line and that ultimately won the game for the visitors 32-13.

ROEBUCK CUT DOWN—Greenville quarterback Mack Roebuck is cut down by Kinston end Bobby Stanley in last night's Northeastern Conference affair at College Stadium, without a blocker in sight. Coming up in the rear, to close in on the Green runner are Kinston tacklers Fitzgerald (25), Medley (11), and Pollock (35).

STANLEY ALL ALONE—Kinston's Bobby Stanley is shown standing all alone as he received a long toss from quarterback Len Smith, on a play that gave the Red Devils their first touchdown of the game last night. The play covered 50 yards and Stanley wasn't touched. The Big boy also turned in an outstanding performance on defense for the visiting Northeastern foes. (Reflector Photos by Neil King).

SERMONS SCORES—Phantom halfback Billy Sermons is shown skirting his left end for two yards and Greenville's first touchdown last night. The big red head and teammate Robert Howell set up the score with long runs of 13 yards each on a 64-yard sustained march by the Greens.

Grainger high school, rated the number four team in the Northeastern Conference, lived up to that rating in fine style last night, thrashing the Greenville Phantoms 32-13, at College Stadium, before a crowd of some 2,000 spectators.

The Red Devils racked up their first score of the contest after only 12 minutes had elapsed in the first quarter. Greenville received the toss and the kick off Lut lost the ball on downs and punted out on the Kinston 26 yard line. The Devils took over from there and began a 74 yard march to pay dirt, picking up four first downs in the process. Charles Lewis went through right tackle for nine yards and the touchdown. Bobby Stanley kicked the extra point and the score was 7-0.

Greenville received the kickoff and fought down to within the Kinston 10 yard line only to lose the ball on downs. The visitors once again turned on the ground power and pushed back to the Green 12, where they surrendered possessions on downs. The Phantom line played its best at that point, spearheaded by guards Barney Barrett and Billy Brown. Unable to gain, Greenville's Mack Roebuck punted out on the Kinston 39 yard stripe, a kick that traveled 50 yards. Five plays later, quarterback Len Smith pitched a pass to Stanley that carried for another 50 yards and a second Devil touchdown. The extra point attempt was blocked by Angus Duff and Billy Brown. It ended 13-0 at the half.

Another Long Pass In the third quarter, Smith unleashed another long pass for a Kinston score. On the Green 45 yard line, hit hit end Kenny Fitzgerald on the 30 and the latter scampered the distance. Stanley's conversion attempt was wide and the score was 19-0.

Sermmons returned the Kinston kickoff for 17 yards to his own 32. Robert Howell, substitute halfback, took a handoff from Roebuck and reeled off a 26-yard gallop into Kinston territory. After Sermmons had lost seven on an end play, Howell again set sail and racked up a 15-yard gain through left tackle. Sermmons picked up another first down on a 20-yard jaunt, but the Phantoms' attack then sputtered and Kinston took cover on downs. The ball see-sawed across the field in the remaining minutes of the third quarter and it wasn't until the early moments of the final period that another score was recorded. Kinston took possession on their own 32 and began another sustained march to a touchdown. David Adkins climaxed the drive with a 16 yard spurt through right tackle for Kinston's fourth tally of the night. Stanley converted to make it 26-0.

Greenville's first touchdown came on a series of plays that began on their own 36. They picked up three first downs and large chunks of yardage on runs by Sermons, Howell, Kelly and quarterback Roebuck. Sermmons blasted over from the two. The extra point attempt was thwarted. Kinston took the kickoff and on six plays had racked up another score, picking up two first downs along the way. A 20-yard pass from Charles Lewis to Dave Adkins scored. Stanley's attempt for the conversion was blocked by guard Billy Brown.

After the following kickoff, Roebuck leveled two passes that carried to the Kinston 15 and Robert Howell went over on an option play. The touchdown was nullified by a 15 yard penalty, but a Roebuck-to-Howell pass, covering 25 yards, scored again. The junior quarterback again passed, this time to Robert Conway, for the extra point. The scored stood at 32-13. The game ended one play later.

Next week, Greenville visits Washington for another Northeastern Conference battle.

Milwaukee Tops Sox 6-4; Dodgers Take 2-1 Licking

By ED WILKS
Is Milwaukee finally going to make the breaks pay off? Is Pittsburgh about to knock Brooklyn out of the race, just as in 1954? Can Cincinnati still make it?

That's today's baseball quiz with the Braves within two percentage points of first place Brooklyn again and the Redlegs only three lengths back in the National League's battle for survival.

Pittsburgh, the club that sprung a September trap to catch Brooklyn and open the pennant door to New York's giants in '54, was at it again, meanwhile, tripping the Dodgers 2-1 and roughing up Sal Maglie to boot.

And the Redlegs, refusing to quit, made it three in a row with a 9-1 breeze over St. Louis, leaving the race like this:

In the other NL game, the New York Giants, with Johnny Antonelli winning his 18th, defeated Philadelphia 7-3, scoring seven in the fifth against Dick Farrell in his major league debut. Willie Mays stole his 37th and 38th bases, tops in the NL since Kiki Cuyler stole 43 in 1929.

In the American, Mickey Mantle's 51st home run gave New York a league record with 183 for the season, but the pennant-winning Yankees also set a major league record by leaving 20 men on base to lose to Boston 13-7.

Cleveland took a two-game hold on second place over Chicago, defeating Detroit 5-1 while the White Sox lost to Kansas City 3-2 in a 10-inning lightcap after winning the two-night opener 4-2. Baltimore, with Gus Triandos hitting his 20th and 21st home runs, whacked Washington 7-3.

The Braves, out hit 11 to 8, made the most of three Chicago errors, scoring the clinchers in a three-run sixth on a passed ball and a two-run misplay by shortstop Ernie Banks. That provided a 6-0 lead, but it proved just enough as the Cubs got to Warren Spahn for Monte Irvin's 15th home run in the seventh and chased the veteran lefty with three in the eighth. Gene Conley relieved to nail Spahn's 19th victory.

A two-run, seventh-inning home run by Frank Thomas, his 23rd, got the job done for the Pirates, who had jolted the Braves by a similar 2-1 score Thursday. Pittsburgh, with six more games remaining against the Brooks, had beaten Maglie only four times previously in 25 decisions and the 39-year-old righthander had a personal six-game winning streak on the fire. Ron Kline, 0-3 against Brooklyn for the season and 2-9 lifetime, scattered eight hits and struck out six to win his 14th, giving up a double and Junior Gilliam's single for a run in the seventh.

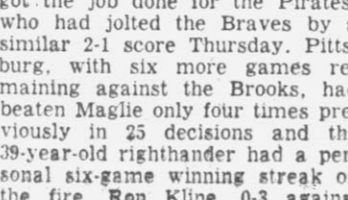

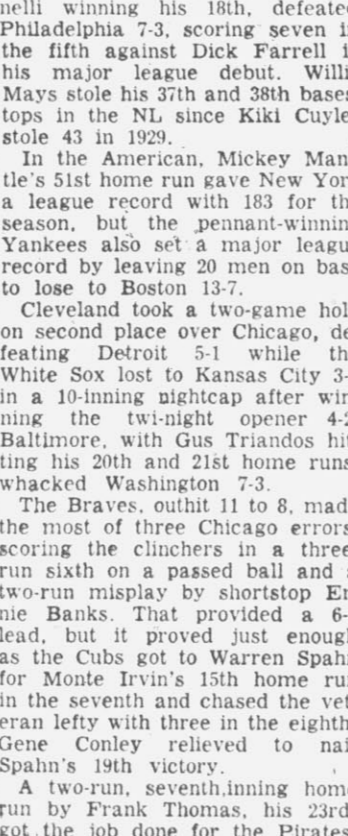

Wally Post, trumping five home runs in five games socked his 33rd and 34th for four Redleg runs while Joe Nuxhall held the Cardinals to five hits. Post homered and Nuxhall hit a two-run triple in a three-run first inning against Vinegar Bend Mizell. The Redlegs, with six games to go, are seven shy of the record 221 homers hit by the 1947 Giants.

The Yankees cracked the 182

AL record hung up by the 1937 fifth. Bob Turley lost it, with removers as Mantle's near-500-foot wallop helped build a 4-0 lead. But the Red Sox then scored six in the third and iced it with three in the fourth and three in the

May Offer Courses In Executive Techniques

Courses in executive techniques may be offered to North Carolina executives and firms under the auspices of the American Institute of Management and its affiliate, the Southern Institute of Management. Groundwork for the courses was laid in recent conferences held here and in Tarboro.

Participating in these discussions were H. C. Bowles, executive vice president of the Southern Institute of Management; L. W. Hill, president of the Carolina Telephone and Telegraph Company; and Dr. E. R. Browning, director of the department of business education at East Carolina College.

Membership of the two sponsoring organizations is composed of outstanding and capable executives and other accomplished persons having a vital interest in management.

The American Institute of Management is the originator of a scientific methodology of management appraisal involving the making of management audits which enables both the American and the Southern Institute of Management to rate the comparative excellence of management of business organizations.

Mr. Hill is a member of the President's council of the American Institute of Management and the Southern Institute of Management.

Few Wills Among Tenth Televised College Course To Begin Oct. 1

RALEIGH — Only one out of four farmers in North Carolina has made a will of any kind, in the estimation of Clyde R. Weathers, extension farm management specialist at North Carolina State College.

"Many farmers without wills think their property will be inherited outright by their wives," Weathers says. "but this is not the case, according to state laws."

Commenting on the law, Weathers says, "If a married man without children dies leaving no will, his wife receives a life estate of one-third, in value, of his land for life and will receive the first $10,000 of his personal property after all debts have been paid. She will also receive one-half of the remainder of his personal property. The remainder of his estate will go to his heirs and next of kin as if he were single."

Similar laws govern the distribution of the estates of married men with children, according to Weathers. Children receive the property not awarded to the deceased man's wife, but it has to be held by a guardian until the children become 21 years of age.

Weathers points out that many farms in North Carolina are small. One-third of the income from these small farms will not support the widow of the farm owner.

A simple will leaving all of the estate to the owner's wife would leave her in a much better position to maintain her normal level of living while remaining independent of her living children, comments Weathers.

Wills must be written according to the requirements of law to be legal. For this reason, a lawyer should be employed to draw up the will, advises Weathers.

Sea Lion Didn't Belong On Boat

SEATTLE (AP) — Postmaster George Morry was a surprised landlubber when he spotted a sea lion dozing atop the canvas cover of his small motorboat near the Morry home on a Puget Sound island.

When Morry's 13-year-old son rowed out to scare the critter landed, the critter scared the boy away first. Then a neighbor dispatched the sea lion with a rifle shot and qualified for a $13 bounty. "It weighed 200 pounds," said Morry. "I know. I had to dump auditors but will receive no credit out of the boat to get rid of it."

Jack Benny Kept Schedule Busy

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Jack Benny, who is 39 in his scripts but 62 in real life, begins another strenuous TV season tomorrow night over CBS.

He'll account for 20 half-hour shows in the Sunday night spot, alternating with Ann Sothern, plus five hour-long shows of Stars shows. In addition, he'll probably drop in on other shows. And he plans to make charity appearances with symphony orchestras, the first being at New York's Carnegie Hall Oct. 1.

Over lunch at Romanoff's, Benny explained his decision on the season's activities.

"Mary was right. I had been thinking about leveling off this season—maybe doing only four or five big shows, playing Las Vegas and generally calling my own shots. But Mary argued against this."

"She pointed out that I would miss having the deadlines. If I did just a few shows this year, each one would grow so important to me that I would worry about making them successes. In between the shows, I wouldn't know what to do with myself."

"But if I had a deadline for my shows, I'd keep working, always striving for good shows, but not worrying like crazy if one isn't a smash hit."

Mary, of course, is Mary Livingstone, his ever-loving spouse. She'll appear on most of the filmed shows this year, especially those Benny shot in Europe this summer.

The comedian looks forward to the new season with none of the panic that grips most funny-men.

"I'm not going to worry," said Jack. "If I had to start from scratch and devise comedy situations, it would be a rough job. But I've got characters and situations just about write themselves."

Steady Flow Of Livestock Helps

RALEIGH — North Carolina farmers can do much to help the consumer, themselves, and the meat packing industry by bringing a steady flow of uniformly high-quality livestock to market, according to Guy Cassell, State College Extension livestock marketing specialist and J. C. Williamson, associate professor of Agricultural Economics.

These marketing specialists say this helps the packer cut processing costs, provides him with a high-quality product to sell, and makes it possible to pay higher prices for livestock.

Meat production, processing, and consumption in North Carolina have undergone rapid growth during the past few years. The live weight of hogs, cattle, and calves marketed in the state increased 72 per cent from 1950 to 1955. Volume of livestock slaughtered locally increased 61 per cent in the same period.

Cassell and Williamson say the rate of expansion in production and processing in North Carolina is expected to be slower during the next few years.

They say that higher incomes and larger population should cause the demand for meats to continue to increase.

They also point out that rapid industrial development in North Carolina is bringing about a higher per capita income. As the level of incomes moves up this not only increases demand for meats but increases the demand for higher-quality meats.

This growing demand provides an additional opportunity for increasing livestock production and processing in the state, add Cassell and Williamson.

Individual 4-H Prizes Offered

RALEIGH — Something new has been added to the 4-H Clubs Department of the State Fair this year. Individual 4-Hers for the first time will be able to compete for a total of $675 in cash premiums.

This is in addition to the $2,575 in premiums set up for 12 county exhibits in which elements of 4-H work are presented by county organizations.

The State Fair, to be held October 16 through 20, annually presents a different picture story of 4-H Club work in action. More than 100,000 white farm boys and girls are active in 4-H Club work in this state. L. R. Harrill, state 4-H Club leader, and his staff, direct the State Fair 4-H Department as superintendent and associate superintendents.

The awards for individuals this year range from $150 in cash for first place to $100 each for the last four places. The exhibits, three of which will be contained in a single State Fair booth, are "to show project accomplishment, etc., of individual members; they must represent the work of the individual competing, and must be shown by pictures, life models, posters, color slides, etc.," according to the official State Fair premium list.

The county 4-H exhibits, an even dozen in all, will claim prizes from $300 for first place to $200 each for the last nine. Among the most outstanding exhibits on the fairgrounds year after year, the 4-H displays attract considerable attention and have remained consistently near the top in over-all quality. The exhibits will be seen in the Educational Exhibits Building, along with the three women's departments, bees and honey, vocational education and the Negro Home Demonstration and 4-H Club exhibits.
