Nuclear Ass'n Sets Next Meet

N. C. Charter Received; Richmond Conference Scheduled October 17

CHARLOTTE (AP)—Directors of the Carolinas-Virginia Nuclear Associates, Inc., will meet in Richmond, Va., Oct. 17 to map their first plans for atomic powered electricity plants. The corporation received a North Carolina charter yesterday at the same time heads of four power companies announced its formation here. The four companies are Duke Power Co., Norman A. Coker, president; Carolina Power & Light Co., Raleigh, Louis V. Sutton, president; South Carolina Electric & Gas Co. of Columbia, S.C. McMeekin, president; and Virginia Electric & Power Co., J. Justin Moore, chairman of the executive committee and general counsel.

Named president of the new corporation was Coker. McMeekin, Moore and Sutton were elected vice presidents. J. N. Costello, executive vice president of the South Carolina Electric & Gas Co., was elected secretary-treasurer. Directors are H. B. Robinson, vice president and general manager of CP&L; F. R. McMeekin, vice president of South Carolina Electric & Gas; Erwin H. Hill, VEPCO president; and O. J. Miller, vice-president of Duke Power.

In Washington, Lewis E. Strauss, chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission, said such details as plant location, capacity in installed kilowatts, type of reactor and others will be worked out at the Richmond meeting.

A corporation spokesman said the next step is to get "the best consulting engineers available to push the project," adding that the plans are to build developmental-atomic-powered electricity plants as quickly as possible.

Plans call for the four companies to be equal partners. Sutton said until consulting engineers get to work, the new corporation cannot say where the sites for the plants will be, or what size or type reactors will be built. This, he said, makes a cost estimate impossible.

"The only way operating costs may be determined with any degree of accuracy is by building and operating reactors. That, simply, is what we propose to do," Sutton said.

Soil Bank Funds Allocated In N. C. See Big Increase

RALEIGH (AP)—Soil bank funds allocated to North Carolina for farmers who reduced their 1957 wheat crop acreage have been raised by $800,000.

Administrative Officer H. D. Godfrey of the State Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Committee said today the increase brings to $2,393,000 the total allocation.

Contracts signed through Sept. 28 or participation in the wheat acreage reserve program called for payments to farmers of $1,326,121. This represented contracts with 6,513 farmers to remove 55,660 acres of wheat from production for 1957.

Godfrey said the $800,000 increase was allowed to supplement the original allocation of about 1 1/2 million dollars. The increase should be sufficient to cover all contracts signed through today, the deadline for participation, he added.

Tobacco Market Has $52.37 Day

GREENVILLE (AP)—The Greenville Tobacco Market's average yesterday was $52.37 per hundred pounds. Sales Supervisor W. L. Whedbee reported this morning.

Whedbee said 1,870,880 pounds of tobacco were sold on yesterday's sales for $979,863.52.

He said a full sale is expected today.

STURLEANS SOLD NEW ORLEANS (AP)—The Commodity Credit Corp. announced today it had sold 351,383 bales of surplus cotton for export only.

Miller wanted to kill Watson and Mrs. Chandler and then burn all three bodies in Watson's car. Commenting on the crowds attending the trial, Judge Crissman remarked: "It's beyond the court to understand why people are so curious that they crowd a courtroom to see this. I'm afraid it's a reflection on the morals of the state and country—and it's not a good reflection."

"There was a time when no decent woman would have wanted to be in the courtroom for something like this. I see they are in the majority here. I know these are changing times. I hope for the better—but I'm afraid not."

Ike Regards Ban On Third Term Not Entirely Wise

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Eisenhower said today he does not regard as entirely wise the constitutional amendment that bars a third presidential term.

Eisenhower, making no attempt to apply his remarks to his own case, said he believes that by and large the people should be able to choose as president anybody they want, regardless of the number of terms.

He told a news conference that there have been objections that this might concentrate power in one individual. But he said he has the utmost confidence in the long-range judgment of the American people.

Most of his meeting with reporters was devoted, as can be expected these days, to politics. There were a few questions on domestic and foreign policy sprinkled in.

Eisenhower, under questioning said he likes campaigning—that he likes to get out and see the people instead of just getting reports.

And, he said, he is on the road of truth and facts—not on the high road or low road.

This was an obvious jab at Democratic opponents who have been accusing the GOF of taking the low road at times during the 1956 political war.

Eisenhower also batted back at the Democratic presidential nominee, Adlai E. Stevenson, on the civil rights issue.

He said that in the armed forces, his administration ended desegregation by taking the bull by the horns. He did concede that the Democrats had done something in that direction. But he also said that there had been talk about the problem for all the 45 years he was in service.

The President said that Vice President Nixon, when discussing the campaign with him yesterday, didn't specify the Republican strong and weak points. He said Nixon told him the whole picture was most encouraging.

Eisenhower added that the vice president, who has just returned from a 32-state tour, reported the most enthusiastic and largest crowds of his career, with the people happy except in spots where there were questions about farm problems or depressed areas.

As for his own campaigning, Eisenhower said it hadn't gone along at the level he had hoped—that he had hoped he could use a completely expository approach rather than engage in debate.

On the third term question, Eisenhower was asked whether he would consider dropping the constitutional provision that limits a president to two terms, after he has served out his own second term.

It was then that Eisenhower said he believed by and large that the country should be able to choose anybody it wants for president, although he indicated he was willing to stick by the requirements of a 35-year age limit.

Among the items that came up during the question and answer session:

Among the items that came up during the question and answer session:

TAXES—Told that he had indicated in a speech in Lexington, Ky., this week that he had suggested the possibility of a tax cut in the next year or so, Eisenhower said that he wouldn't classify the chances as bright or right around the corner.

H-BOMB—It would be foolish, laterally the testing of hydrogen bombs. He said there should be some definite international agreement before anything along that line is attempted, as otherwise Russia could go ahead with tremendous advances while the United States stood still.

Stevenson has proposed stopping tests, but with assurances from Russia that the Soviets also would do this.

MINIMUM WAGE — Asked whether he thought the $1-an-hour minimum wage should be raised, Eisenhower said that first he wants to see minimum wage coverage for people who haven't got it.

And cheer him in Harlem, where the population is chiefly Negro and Puerto Rican.

There, Stevenson said the Republicans had made what he called a "brazen" effort to "seize partisan credit for progress in civil rights."

Stevenson said he didn't mind "the President's trying to make off in broad daylight with the Democratic platform . . . but he better stop trying to run on the Democratic record."

On the school desegregation issue, Stevenson said that when Eisenhower "was presented with an opportunity for great national leadership in this field, he was virtually silent." Stevenson reiterated his support of the Supreme Court decision banning segregation in public schools.

Earlier, the Democratic standard bearer told a sidewalk rally in the East Side, where the inhabitants largely are Jewish, that it was time Eisenhower "moved in and took command" of American policy toward the Middle East.

In Washington, the White House announced yesterday that Eisenhower will spend an extra day in the Pacific Northwest, and that he may widen his electioneering activity in the Pittsburgh area next week.

This, coupled with the news last week that Eisenhower plans several more major speeches than first contemplated, presented the picture of gradually increasing participation by the President in the campaign.

Eisenhower is scheduled to make a major talk in Pittsburgh next Tuesday and Hagerly said he may start from Washington earlier than had been planned. This would give the President more time for motorcade-type campaigning in the Pittsburgh area.

Stevenson Combines World Series Game, Speech-Making Campaign

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Democrat Adlai Stevenson mixed vote-seeking with recreation today as he arranged to take in a World Series game between campaign speeches in Brooklyn, N.Y., and New Haven, Conn.

Weather permitting, Stevenson expected to be at Ebbets Field in Brooklyn for the second series game between the Brooklyn Dodgers and the New York Yankees.

Like Eisenhower, who was at the series opener Wednesday, Stevenson was the invited guest of Dodgers President Walter O'Malley.

Stevenson ran into weather troubles yesterday in West Virginia, but he made it to New York for sidewalk rallies in Harlem and the lower East Side.

The Democratic presidential candidate was heartened by the big crowds that turned out to hear careless."

He said, "Many textile companies have gone out of business and many more will go out of business if they do not get the proper attention on this problem."

Jonas, somewhat nettled at remarks made by Hodges and Ervin, defended the GOP action on the national level in the Japanese problem.

Jonas said the Democrats won't admit that the recent Japanese agreement to curtail textile imports to the U.S. will help the textile industry "because they would rather have an issue to talk about than see the Republicans get something done to help."

A general round of wage increases announced by many textile firms throughout the South, Jonas said, is evidence that textile manufacturers have confidence in the ability of the Eisenhower administration to meet the situation.

He also read a statement by Robert T. Stevens, president of J. P. Stevens & Co., large textile manufacturer. The statement quoted Stevens as saying the 10 cents an hour wage hike his company announced Monday was made only after the recent Japanese agreement indicated promise of better conditions in the textile industry.

Mrs. Priest said the Democrats have not been able to counter President Eisenhower's "Peace and Prosperity" campaign theme.

Scrap Paper Will Be Collected By Jaycees Sunday

Greenville Junior Chamber of Commerce members will begin National Fire Prevention Week by collecting scrap paper from local homes Sunday afternoon.

Chairman of the Driver Charles Hudson today urged local citizens to gather up all newspapers, corrugated board, old magazines and other scrap paper for the Sunday afternoon collection.

Hudson said eight teams of Jaycees will begin the collections at 1:30 p.m. Sunday and it is hoped the drive will be completed by 4:30.

The drive chairman said it would be helpful if local citizens bundled the papers and separated newspapers, magazines and other type paper into separate piles. However, he said, that is not a requirement.

The paper collected by the Jaycees will be sold to a dealer. Hudson pointed out that by removing the old paper from their homes, Greenville citizens will be removing a fire hazard.

Team captains have been assigned for each of the eight sections of town which Jaycees will cover Sunday. Four men will be assigned to each of the eight teams and they will canvass their assigned areas.

Team captains appointed by Hudson are: Donk Sowerby, Bob Ross, Pete West, Ben Hodges, Craven Hughes, Charlie Lewis, Clark Stokes and Jim Sutton.

Paper collected in the drive will be bundled and weighed Sunday afternoon by the Jaycees after the drive is completed.

Hudson also noted that arrangements can be made to pick up paper at any time other than Sunday afternoon. Those wishing to have paper collected at another time may call Hudson, Clarke Stokes, Jimmy Sutton or Ben Hodges.

Anyone who is missed Sunday may call 2547 and a truck will be sent to pick up the paper.

Solicitor Decides Seek True Bill

By JIMMY ELLIS

Reflector Staff Writer

The Pitt County Grand Jury will be asked to return true bills against two former Highway Department employees fired this week after investigation of alleged payroll irregularities.

District Solicitor Robert D. Rouse, Jr., said this morning he will go before the Grand Jury October 22 to ask for true bills against Philip A. Sasser, 43, and Cyrus Shepard, 24. The two were fired by the Highway Department Tuesday after being under a temporary suspension since August 10.

Rouse's decision to go to the Grand Jury was made after a detailed study of a report by the State Bureau of Investigation. The SBI report was referred to him by State Highway Commissioner A. H. Graham, who did not use it in the decision to permanently suspend Sasser and Shepard. Graham fired the men after a separate investigation by the Highway Department showed they had not complied with Department regulations in handling records.

The solicitor also said, "At the present time, nobody else is involved and the sums of money involved are less than $1,000." He would not elaborate further, however, on either the SBI report or the charges he plans to present.

Sasser and Shepard were originally suspended by Graham after

Pitt Fair To Have New Midway Shows

The Pitt County Agricultural Fair—"Pitt County on Parade"—will open Monday at 4 p.m. and continue through the week.

The attendance goal for this year is 50,000 or more at "Eastern Carolina's Greatest Livestock Show."

The Oscar C. Buck Exposition shows will present a Midway that has never appeared at the local fair. The shows are owned and operated by Oscar C. Buck of Troy, N. Y., and have played some of the largest fairs in the country.

The Midway represents 20 modern rides, featuring the "Scrambler," one of the latest rides and said to have cost $40,000. The Midway has two Ferris wheels and the "Scooter" popular rides.

Manager Norman Y. Chamblis said, "I have known Oscar Buck since 1929, and I consider he has one of the best Midways in the country. I believe the people of Pitt County will be pleased with this new Midway and the clean and legitimate concessions operated by the show."

The Buck shows will arrive in Greenville Sunday night and will be up and ready for Monday night's opening. The shows were at the Rocky Mount Fair last week and the fair was postponed because of rainy weather. The new date for the Rocky Mount Fair is October 29 and the Buck Exposition Shows will return there.

At the Pitt County Fair in Greenville next week the Buck Shows will charge children only a dime for the shows and all rides except "Scooter" and pony rides up to 6 p.m. Tuesday, Wednesday and Friday.

Prison For Three In Woman's Knife Death

ROCKINGHAM, N. C. (AP)—Three men convicted of the murder of a tattooed young blonde stabbed to death in the nude during a sex orgy were headed for prison today after the last of the trio pleaded guilty to first-degree murder here yesterday.

The trial ended suddenly yesterday after Joe Miller, 27, of Rockingham pleaded guilty to the first-degree murder of Mrs. Ida May Treadaway, 19, of East Rockingham, a soldier's good-looking wife, whose nude, knife-slashed body was pulled from a lake near here Aug. 6.

Judge Walter Crissman sentenced Miller to a mandatory life sentence. Johnny Quick, 21, of Rockingham, and Hubert Stewart, 25, of Baltimore, pleaded guilty to second-degree murder shortly after the trial started Tuesday.

Judge Crissman sentenced Stewart to 20 to 30 years in prison and Quick from 18 to 25 years.

Mrs. Bernice Quick Chandler, 28, had testified that she and Kenny Watson, 61-year-old Sand hills farmer, and Mrs. Treadaway were joined by the three men the afternoon of Aug. 3.

The group drove to a patch of woods where a sex and liquor party took place, Mrs. Chandler testified. She said Stewart knocked her out and when she woke up, she saw the others fighting. She testified she saw Mrs. Treadaway beaten and kicked. She and Watson, a part-time preacher, left then, reporting the incident to police.

Stewart testified that there were several drinking stops on the way to the woods and that at one, Mrs. Treadaway disrobed and displayed a lewd tattoo on each hip.

After the orgy in the woods, Stewart testified, Miller struck Mrs. Treadaway and chased her screaming along a dirt road. Later, he testified Miller returned with a knife in his hand and said he had killed Mrs. Treadaway. He said Miller wanted to kill Watson and Mrs. Chandler and then burn all three bodies in Watson's car. Commenting on the crowds attending the trial, Judge Crissman remarked: "It's beyond the court to understand why people are so curious that they crowd a courtroom to see this. World-Wide Communion Observance Here Sunday

Greenville and Pitt County Churches will join with Christians of most denominations in over fifty countries this Sunday in observing "World-Wide Communion Sunday."

Beginning as the sun rises in the mid-Pacific and continuing until it has circled the globe and risen on the other side of the dateline, the day will see men of many nations bowed in prayer. The universal symbols of bread and wine will remind them that God the Son, Jesus Christ of Nazareth, laid down His life as a sacrifice for their sins.

In addition to serving its primary purpose, the observance this year will constitute an international demonstration of Christian faith and unity. In the face of Communism's world-wide threat, by his demonstration believers will, in the words of the Apostle Paul, "show His death till His come." In some countries where Communism holds sway, Christians may have to meet in secret or not at all. Throughout the world, however, the day will call attention that faith in God as revealed in Christ is still very much alive.

Unless special revival services or the absence of the Minister interfere, virtually all Churches in the county's communities will serve Holy Communion this Sunday.

According to the custom of the various denominations, some will kneel before an altar rail and others will be served in their pews. Some worshippers will read centuries-old prayers and ritual throughout the entire service, while others will simply hear the Scripture read and receive the elements as part of a regular preaching service. But for all Christians the custom stems from the command of Christ to His disciples, to do this "in remembrance of me."

Miss Cox Returns To China

By ANNETTE JACKSON
 Reflector Woman's Editor
 Greenville and Pitt County will lose one of their most distinguished church women when Miss Venetia Cox leaves tomorrow for her return to the foreign mission field.

In China from 1917 to 1956—with eight month-leaves of absence periodically—Miss Cox says of her return "China is a part of my life. I have always wanted to go back." She was forced to leave in 1950 by the Communists.

Serving in the Chinese interior before this time Miss Cox will be located in Hong Kong, the British Colony. She will teach in Mark's High School which is sponsored by the Episcopal Church.

Miss Cox points out the school while for Chinese students, is under the English school system. The textbooks, therefore, will be mostly English which is something new for the local woman who is used to teaching from Chinese texts.

Another thrill for Miss Cox will be having one of her former Chinese students as her principal at St. Mark's. She will be among many friends—both Chinese and English—in Hong Kong.

The school has just moved into new quarters outside the city limits. She will have many conveniences this time never enjoyed in China before.

Living in the Church Guest House, Miss Cox will have her meals there and commute to school each day. She says Hong Kong is very crowded with refugees and that everything possible is being moved outside the city when feasible.

Miss Cox will leave by plane tomorrow from New Bern. She has always gone to China by boat before so this is an entirely new experience. She expects to arrive in Hong Kong on Thursday morning, making only two stops between here and there. In Los Angeles she will have a two-day wait.

With trunks and bulky items sent on approximately one month ago, Miss Cox will carry only a small bag with her. To add to her library, she has recently become the recipient of a gift earmarked for a set of interpreters' Bibles presented by the people of St. Paul's. She points out that these will be a great deal of help to her and that they are being shipped by book express.

For the kind lady who grew up with the desire to be a missionary, the 10,000 mile trip ahead is in a sense "going home." "I'm always glad to come home on furlough and glad when the time is up to return to China," she says.

 God's healing and redemptive power will be emphasized in Christian Science services Sunday. The Lesson-Sermon entitled "Are Sin, Disease, and Death Real?" will include the following passage from "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy (472:24-30): "All reality is in God and His creation, harmonious and eternal. That which He creates is good, and He makes all that is made. Therefore the only reality of sin, sickness, or death is the awful fact that unrealities seem real to human, erring belief, until God strips off their disguise. They are not true, because they are not of God."

The Golden Text is from Psalms (67:12): "God be merciful unto us; and bless us; and cause his face to shine upon us; that thy way may be known upon earth, thy saving health among all nations."

Buttons Needed? She's Got 'Em
 STANTON, Ky. (AP)—Mrs. Guy Crowe never has trouble finding buttons for her husband's shirts. She has more than 13,000—all different.

Mrs. Crowe's hobby started on a Sunday morning 10 years ago when she couldn't go to church. She explains:

"Snow was on the ground and Guy was sick, so I got my button box down and looked through it and found I had several interesting odd buttons."

She's been saving them ever since.

The collection includes a Casey Jones overall button worn by the trainman of the famous wreck; buttons from uniforms worn during the Civil War, World Wars I and II; and "hair-pulling buttons." They show two children sitting facing each other in high-chairs and pulling each other's hair.

At first the buttons were strung on string, but they collected dust. Mrs. Crowe then bought frames, usually from second-hand stores, and put her collection in them.

One of her more unusual buttons came from a friend, who won $750 first prize in a national contest sponsored by the Democratic National Committee.

The button shows a safe with William Jennings Bryan's picture in the center and "Commoner" written on it.

Red Oak Club Sets Goals. Chatham Book Club Meets

At a meeting of the Red Oak Home Demonstration Club last Wednesday afternoon at the club house, the members voted unanimously to accept the twelve goals outlined for them by the Progress Committee. These goals were as follows: to make a survey of the whole community; have 100 families participating in the Progress Program to some degree; to sponsor "Plant-a-Tree Month"; to contact every colored family in the community and get them to participate in the program by having all children take the polo shots; clean-up their premises, have good gardens so as to improve their health; help them to can and preserve foods; and plant at least one tree.

To sponsor two organized county and community wide recreational programs during the year; to sponsor a "Home-Tour" in the community in early spring ending with a tea at some member's home; to sponsor 12 community recreation programs during the year.

To help sponsor a Boy Scout Troop; to continue mail-box improvements; to sponsor a "model mile" on a new paved road; to report all activities to local newspaper; to have every family in the community represented at the picnic to be held in connection with Progress Program.

After the minutes were read and approved Home Agent Lillie Little gave a demonstration on "See Your Home In A New Light." She also distributed little booklets on "Easy To Make Gifts For Christmas."

The club voted to designate the dogwood tree as the one for each person to plant this fall.

There will be a bake sale sponsored by the club women on October 13 at Cozart's Super Market. The proceeds will be used to help pay for the floor covering in the community building.

Mrs. Little announced that Achievement Day would be held on Nov. 1 at a place selected later.

The fair booth committee reported that their exhibit on "Social Security for Farm Families" was ready to place. The space has been freshly painted and the color

City Library Features Currency On Display

By ANNETTE JACKSON
On display now at Sheppard Memorial Library is a currency collection owned by Bill Pergerson.

From Reidsville, Pergerson is a senior at East Carolina. He estimates that he has $600 to $700 invested in his pet hobby, value estimate of which he places at $2,500.

Featured in his display is a sheet of 18 one dollar bills which he purchased for $60 and now believes to be worth $125.

As he points out, placing a value on coins is a tricky matter. Their value varies from time to time and person to person.

Frequently he gets telephone calls from collectors just getting started who want his opinion of the value of their prizes. That is an impossible inquiry, according to the coin-enthusiast. Value of a coin depends on its condition among other things—whether it is scratched, tarnished or damaged on the edges.

Investor Evil
Investors, too, have a pet way of tampering with coin prices. These are the guys who "play the market", so to speak. They are not interested in collecting themselves but try to capture currency to control prices and are therefore cardinal enemies of numismatists.

Pergerson suggests the only real way of learning the value of a coin is to compare many catalogue prices.

Pergerson's major interest is in an American general collection although he has some foreign coins. His most prized possessions are a 1895-0 Dime and 1916 Liberty Standing Quarter. He recalls the latter was purchased in Tampa, Fla. for $11.

Convention Bound
He is now planning a convention trip to Richmond where fellow numismatists from all the Middle Atlantic States will gather October 26-28. This will provide him with an ideal opportunity to buy and trade coins.

He hopes to pick up some commemorative half-dollars on the trip and would like to find a 1914-D penny. It will be the first convention for him and he is looking forward to it with a great deal of enthusiasm.

enthusiasm. There will be a number of displays on the convention floor and an auction by French's will be one of the highlights.

Leads are obtained from numismatist's publication of various sorts in addition to simply "finding out" by comparing notes with other enthusiasts, he points out.

Characteristically Pergerson delights to hear of unusual coins. He says he's always glad to look over anyone's collection and venture a guess at classification.

Coin Club
What he'd really like to do is get a coin club started in town. Says he, "I'm sure there are enough interested people here and it would be a lot of fun."

Charles G. Risher and John R. Newell are two of the outstanding collectors in Greenville who share Pergerson's enthusiasm. As he points out, they know a great deal about currency and much could be gained of educational value from a local coin club.

The East Carolina senior first began his collection early in 1951. He recalls an interest in coins since he was quite young, spurred on by G. I.'s returning from foreign lands with strange coins.

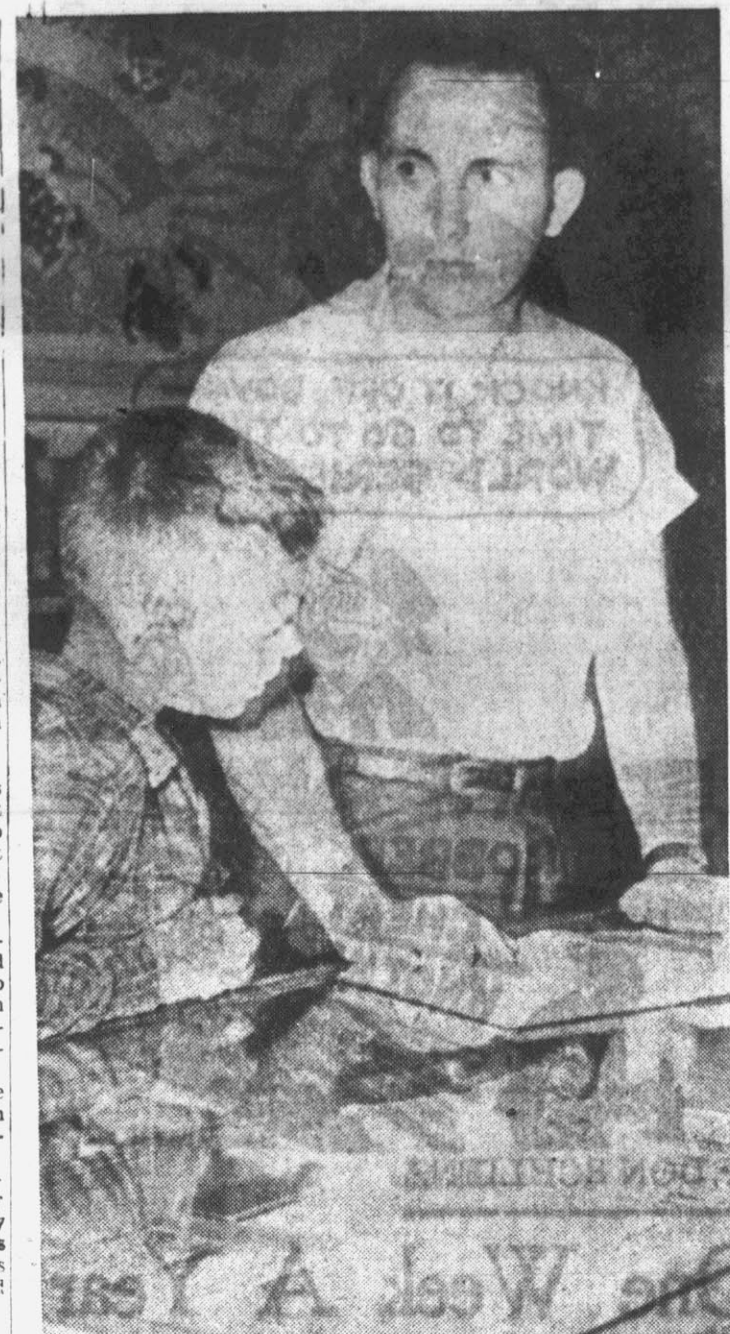

Advice To Beginners
He has this to say to collectors just getting started: "don't invest too much money in a collection to begin with. That way you're apt to become discouraged and conclude this hobby is too expensive for me."

The way to start is with pennies, probably the Lincoln Head Penny. And after you start, keep building. There are very few in the country who have ever completed an American coin collection.

Pergerson is a member of the American Numismatic Association and the Middle Atlantic Numismatic Association, Inc.

His collection is housed in Raleigh but he has a sizable number of coins and currency on display now at the local library. He is ready and eager to talk about his collection and always interested in hearing of other leads.

Aluminum ingot exports from Taiwan in China to the U.S. in the first six months of 1956 were 650 tons.

COLLECTOR—East Carolina Senior Bill Pergerson, coin collector, looks up a point for young Freddie Gray as they look over Pergerson's display now at Sheppard Memorial Library. Pergerson has been collecting currency since early in 1951. He has between $600 and $700 invested in this hobby and estimates the value of his collection at $2,500. Featured in the display is a sheet of 18 one dollar bills which were purchased for $60. Pergerson estimates their value now to be $125. One of the collector's pet ideas is to get a coin club started in Greenville. (Reflector Photo by Annette Jackson).

Books & Stuff

By DR. ED HIRSHBERG
For those of you who didn't get around to see and hear Sam Rayburn speak at the Democratic rally last Friday, there's a good opportunity to take a long look at his arguments in this week's Saturday Evening Post, where he has an article called "The Case for the Democrats."

He repeats many of the things he said in Wright Auditorium, and adds quite a bit more, so if you're an interested Democrat—and who isn't, these days?—a perusal would be worthwhile.

We certainly enjoyed Sam's speech, incidentally which we heard from the balcony, without the chicken and ham—and were right proud of the illustrious Pitt Countians and East Carolinians who engineered the affair with rare efficiency and in the best possible taste.

In the same issue—and we haven't been hired by the SEP to sell subscriptions, believe it or not—a fifth grade teacher who is a man tells why he is in a field dominated by women.

"Don't Call Me a Sissy" is by Robert Haley, whose article we feel is worth the thoughtful consideration of anyone who is in the teaching profession or planning to enter. It's also something for local and state school authorities to think about too, simply because it describes how one school system is managing to attract good men into the profession—with decent salaries and prestige.

And also in this week's SEP, lest you forget: the fourth in a series of six articles on the life of ex-boxing champ Rocky Marciano, as told to Milt Gross and Al Hirschberg, no less.

Two for the Money
We have word from his publishers that young Arthur Steuer, who is a graduate of Duke, will have not one but two first novels published on the same day, November 1. Both of them have southern backgrounds. "The Terrible Swift Sword" has its setting in a military academy in Georgia and deals with the effect of the theft of a loaded pistol on seven people—who, we hope, aren't all shot. The other first novel that is being published on the same day will be a paperback, "Rebel Gun," about a young southerner who rode with Jesse James right after the Civil War. . . . Good luck to Mr. Steuer, and we personally will settle for one first novel at a time. . . .

Two books, one already published, are in the news about Alexandre Dumas, both pere et fils. Just out is "King of Paris," the Book-of-the-Month Club's offering for October, a biographical novel by Guy Endore. Papa Dumas you remember.

Three Musketeers," "The Count of Monte Cristo," and about 500 more novels and plays. Besides these, he is supposed to have had about 600 mistresses, but on this figure we cannot check. Anyway, one of his sons was Dumas fils, who wrote "Camille" and many other famous plays and books, and became nearly as well known as pappy. Then there is a grandfather, who was a general, and he enters the other book about the fascinating Dumas boys, which will come out early in 1957 and is now being written by Andre Maurois, biographer also of George Sand, Chateaubriand, Victor Hugo and others. . . .

Today's Review
Mrs. Dora Fountain, versatile secretary of the Music Department at E.C.C., contributes today's comments on the October selection of The Literary Guild. . . . Part of it is appearing in the Woman's Home Companion, the movie rights were sold at a record price to RKO and the publishers think it's going to be a big best-seller. Here's what our reviewer thinks. . . .

RACHEL CADE. By Charles Mercer. New York: G. P. Putnam's Sons, 1956.

"Rachel Cade," a novel by Charles Mercer, is filled with excitement. It is good 'escape' reading and the reader will find it difficult to lay this book aside. The story is essentially a study of the behavior and misbehavior of human beings. The stage is set in Africa, the most mysterious of all continents. The characters are Africans, of course, and their white saviours, the missionaries.

The heroine, Rachel Cade, is believable in her role as "Madam" to a host of Africans lost to the faith. If her self-doubt, and the tortuous path she trends to reach self-knowledge, becomes at times too involved to follow, the golden rule continues to prevail. This study of life reaches no conclusions and does not point to a moral. It rather prompts the reader to pause and ponder our mode of living and the standards we set for ourselves.

This book just escapes being a profound one. The author seems sincere in his efforts and if we become a little weary of "that old black magic" the wealth of folklore and descriptive scenery make it worth your reading time. However, the reader may have the sensation at the close of this novel of having consumed the meringue but in the process missed the pie itself.

Young Moderns

Nail biters would be better off mending their ways instead of their nails says one high school senior. She wasn't getting very many dates so she decided her nails looked too chewed up to intrigue a boy to hand holding.

She tried various methods to improve her nails, and finally hit on the false kind. She liked them so well she decided to wear them long, a big departure from the regular appearance of her nails. Everything was fine until a dinner date and then that moment of moments, the embarrassing one: She scooped up a spoonful of soup and there was one of her nails floating in it.

Now she's made the pledge: Nail biting isn't worth it. Youthful hairdos will be a hodge-podge this year, say hair-dressers. Pony tail, bun-back, page boy are three styles that may be adopted to the scheme of the moment. The point is you can do all three hairstyles with the same length hair, and it makes no difference whether your hair is straight or not. The pony tail may be worn to classes, page boy for informal dates, chignon hair style for more sophisticated dates.

It Helps When People Care Enough

When people don't care enough about the things they have, they are going to lose them.

In a nutshell that seems to be the story of the move of a chicken processing plant from Wendell to Robersonville next year, bringing to the Martin County town a potential payroll of $300,000. According to the boss of the chicken business, it is being moved to Robersonville because the people in Wendell don't care enough about the business to keep it where it is.

It is sometimes shocking but nevertheless true that communities, like individuals, take for granted things which they have had and enjoyed. The people of Wendell apparently have taken the Austin Farms, Inc. chicken business for granted, thinking the business would be there indefinitely.

Good Public Relations Needn't Cost So Much

Like most any other government agency, North Carolina's Highway Commission probably could profit by better public relations.

We couldn't say, however, that the Highway Commission's public relations program has been any better or any worse than the Wildlife Commission's, the Paroles Commission's, the schools or any other of the Capitol Square offices.

After Gov. Hodges called the Commission on the carpet suggesting it get a better public relations program, it didn't take Chairman A. H. Graham long to come up with a whopping budgetary request, $20,000 for a public relations office!

Seems to us that the Highway Commission or any other state agency could buy a whole lot of public relations for $20,000 bucks. As a matter of fact if the state has $20,000 to put into bolstering public relations, it would seem a sufficient fund for a well rounded public relations program for all the state agencies rather than just one.

Maybe the Highway Commission does need to do a better job of selling the people on its highway program. But does it have to do it on a scale that might be used for a division of General Motors or Marshall Fields?

In the words of the Charlotte Observer: "Isn't that paving it a bit thick, Mr. Graham?"

Goldsboro Invokes Curb On 'Scratching Off'

Goldsboro hot-rodgers are going to do their "scratching off" outside the corporate limits of the city or answer to local police and the courts for their actions.

According to a new ordinance passed by Goldsboro's Board of Aldermen "scratching off" on the city's streets will become illegal as of October 15. The unique law adopted by the Goldsboro governing board should make that city's streets safer for pedestrians and motorists alike. It will also make the town a little quieter.

According to the ordinance passed by the board it will be unlawful "to operate a motor vehicle within the city of Goldsboro in such a manner as to cause the wheels thereof to lose traction with the surface on which they are driven, or so to cause the tires to squeal."

In legal terms that's scratching off.

Armed with the new ordinance, Goldsboro police should be able to deal more effectively with their hot rod addicts of which every community seems to have more than its share. The new Goldsboro ordinance might afford a pattern by which other cities in this section can cope with those who would convert city streets into drag race tracks.

ness would be there indefinitely. According to the present owner, when the business needed money to expand it wasn't available in sufficient quantity from people in Wendell. As a result the owner looked to other communities for needed capital.

The people of Robersonville came up with almost $100,000 in stock for the business if it would locate there. Since then another $125,000 has been obtained from the Small Business Development Corporation, Robersonville, as a result, is getting a new industry which will tie in directly with the agricultural economy of its immediate area. Wendell is losing not only an industry but also a market for chickens raised by farmers of its area.

Wendell is losing the 50 jobs in the processing plant and the payroll which this year will be about $78,000. It is likewise losing the growth potential of the industry.

For Robersonville, the story is exactly opposite. Martin County is gaining an industry which potentially may employ 125 people, have a payroll of $300,000 annually, and will require 150,000 hens weekly which farmers of the area can produce. Lump it together and it comes to about a $6 million annual business Robersonville is gaining.

How many times is that story repeated in North Carolina every year? How many times does a business or industry move outside the state instead of selecting another site within North Carolina?

While cities and towns of the state are increasingly interested in attracting new enterprises which mean new jobs, they must not overlook the needs of those industries they already have.

How long has it been since Pitt County's communities checked with individual industries they have to see if things are going smoothly, if more capital is needed or any other aid would be helpful? Are there any industries here that are contemplating moves simply because they have too long been taken for granted by the people in the community?

The current Wendell-Robersonville saga should prompt the people of Pitt's communities to seek the answers to those questions.

Not So Much 'For' But Dissatisfied

By LYNN NISBET

TRENDS — Governor Luther Hodges has several times said he has discerned a definite trend throughout the country toward the Democratic philosophy. That states in a positive way what your reporter has interpreted on the negative side. The trend as your reporter sees it, is not so much toward the Democratic ideology as it is away from the Republican.

The people are confused and bemused. They are not sure in their own minds what they want. From brief visits to the several major sections of the state and based on conversations with visitors from all over to Raleigh, conclusion is inescapable that the people are not satisfied with existing conditions in national government and with overall economic situations.

Since there is nowhere to go from the present national Republican regime except to a Democratic administration, it naturally follows that the trend is that way. It is still true that emphasis is on from what we have rather than toward any specific goal.

That attitude was clearly manifested at the big Greenville rally the other night, from talks with economic and political leaders in the area around Wilmington, the Albemarle section, northwestern counties including the areas around Boone, Wilkesboro and Winston-Salem, and the country around and west of Asheville.

In most respects the conditions now are comparable to 1932 and 1952. People generally were just "fed up" in 1932 and were determined to vote for a change. What they might get in the change was not nearly so important as what they were getting rid of.

It was almost the same way in 1952. The Eisenhower boom was as much expression of desire and demand for change from what we had as it was for what we might get in a change of party control of the White House.

TIME — The 1932 presidential election came after 12 years of Republican rule. The 1952 election came after 20 years of Democratic control of national government. The element of time played into the hands of those seeking change and helped to bring about transfer of authority from one party to the other.

Republicans have been in charge now only four years and the time element is less important. Other factors contribute to making the comparison more accurate.

Eisenhower was elected President of the United States on the Republican ticket, and he has been and is a Republican President. Even the most ardent Republican partisans will not deny, in fact they boast about it, that Eisenhower got more votes because of his name and his personal reputation than because of his party affiliation.

Many of these who voted for Eisenhower with the hope and expectation he would put his personal leadership above party lines now admit that they got stuck with just another Republican chief executive. He wasn't able to do what many of those who voted for him in 1952 expected—and it seems a reasonable conclusion, that he was not able to do a great many things he wanted to do and had tentatively promised.

A lot of Tarheels who voted for Eisenhower four years ago now realize they really voted for a Republican administration. Admittedly some of them like it and will vote the same way next month. There is definite indication that most of them will vote for return of the Democratic party to control the Congress and the White House.

PERSONS — There is an element of retributive justice in the developing situation. Main reason given by many of those who voted for Eisenhower four years ago was that they did not like the personal influence of Roosevelt and Truman in national government.

Main reason many of the same people are switching back to the Democratic party this time is that Dwight Eisenhower was not able to exercise personal control over his administration to the degree most of his supporters had hoped and expected.

Inescapable fact is that Eisenhower, who four years ago was the great general and the great crusader, is now just another politician seeking re-election to high office. And Adlai Stevenson, the scholar and idealist who four years ago challenged the great crusader on the high road is also just a candidate seeking election.

There is this difference between now and 1952. Eisenhower is running that most of them will vote for a nominated candidate instead of an individual crusader, and Stevenson is running as a party candidate with less impediment of previous administrations than he did four years ago.

One Week A Year For Press

We're in the midst of National Newspaper Week, despite the fact there hasn't been much said about it to date on The Reflector's pages.

Reason for NNW, of course, is to remind the reading public that newspapers play an important role in their everyday lives. The press helps insure that people will govern, not be governed, and if good government depends on an informed electorate (which is generally accepted as being true), then the press must be kept free to report contemporary history without the smothering effects of censorship.

Newspapers become involved in all sorts of campaigns, promoting one cause after another; but for one week a year they take time to spread the word on their own role in the community's life.

It isn't altogether easy. Not a lot of people enjoy blowing their own horn. But in that respect one point should be made:

Newspapers have a peculiar role in that they possess some of the qualities of a private business and a public business. I can think of no other enterprise in which a business is so closely entwined with what we'd call a public service. It is an "estate" which completely relies on the people who are served; counterbalanced by reliance on the paper by its people. So National Newspaper Week is not observed on a purely selfish basis by the newspapermen of the country.

To strike a personal note, this is my eleventh year behind a Reflector typewriter. . . a home away from home, so to speak, because most of my daytime hours are spent here in the Ivory Tower.

Needless to say, there are "good days" and "bad days". On those latter occasions, when I drag myself home . . . and mutter "it would be easier to dig ditches" . . . my soliloquy writes itself so strenuously.

For the life of me, I can't answer that one. There is more actual physical exertion involved in an afternoon of trimming our lawn than in two days of whatever it is I do at the office. But golly, the effects are different!

Anyway, there's no getting away from the fact that though I entered the newspaper field by accident, the experience has imbued me with the certainty it was my lucky day.

I really wouldn't rather dig ditches.

France Fights Overworking

By CARL HARTMAN

PARIS (AP) — Doctors think too many Frenchmen are working too hard, and France is going to do something about it.

The average Frenchman is not a fellow who takes two hours for lunch and spends the afternoon winking at girls on the Camps Elysees.

He really works. This goes too far for school kids cramming for examinations and for elderly ladies bogged down in the complexity of pension forms. The French take it all harder than you might think.

The man in charge of remedying the situation—at the bequest of the French Academy of Medicine—is Dr. Hugo Biancani.

In addition to being a prosperous medical practice, Dr. Biancani is an enthusiastic amateur or semiprofessional at painting, writing, philosophizing, wine making, gardening and social service. He also likes to take long country walks and he maintains he isn't overworked himself.

"The reason," he says, "is that I'm doing work I like. I have it well organized, and I get plenty of recreation." He has been named director of a new organization, the Institute for the Study and Prevention of Overwork. It plans to set up a clinic and research laboratory in Paris.

"Overwork," Dr. Biancani told this reporter, "is the disease of our century. It's worse than cancer, because by the very nature of things it hits the leaders of our society. Look at your President Eisenhower. What do you think was at the bottom of his heart attack? Or President Roosevelt. When things happen to men like that, it causes a disturbance to our whole society."

Dr. Biancani says it's not just too much work that causes the kind of exhaustion he is trying to cure. Also involved are the kind of work, the individual's attitude toward it, and the whole environment in which he lives.

It's quite possible, he says, to get up at 5 a.m., work hard, and go to bed at midnight without doing yourself any harm—if you have the temperament, know how to handle yourself and how to relax when necessary.

Lots of city dwellers these days, even in relatively tranquil France, wake up in an apartment house with paper-thin walls. Surrounded morning and night with radios and TV sets, they have to struggle with traffic, shop in crowded stores and markets, wait long a d nervous minutes to see minor officials on routine errands. All this, Dr. Biancani acknowledges, is more acute in Paris than in provincial towns where the older, more leisurely existence still persists.

Treatment, he says, has to be adapted to each case. You can't just turn a nervous businessman

LEARNING TO PRAY

Prayer is an acquired art. There are people who pray more easily than others, but the fact still remains that taken by and large, people have to learn to pray. And the learning process is not easy.

Jesus was a great healer but his disciples did not say, "Lord, teach us to heal." He was a great preacher, and his apostles would be called upon to preach throughout the world, yet they did not say to him, "Lord, teach us to preach." What they did say was, "Lord, teach us to pray."

And he taught them in what we have come to call The Lord's Prayer. The first petitions deal with spiritual matters, particularly with things having to do with the glory of God. The last three petitions deal with daily bread, forgiveness, and protection against temptation.

The so-called Lord's Prayer is not so much a prayer in itself as an outline of what every prayer should be. It calls our attention to the fact that all our praying should begin with ascriptions of praise to God and the voicing of our desire that his name be glorified. After that—and only after that—some petitions having to do with our needs and our relationships to others.

Daily bread — physical. Forgiveness — social. Deliverance from temptation — spiritual.

Supreme Court Liberal Ranks Stronger

By RAY TUCKER

WASHINGTON — President Eisenhower's appointment of Justice William J. Brennan, Jr., to the Supreme Court has given that body a liberal majority and cast, especially in the politically charged realm of civil liberties and human rights.

The selection of the 50-year-old Democratic jurist from New Jersey will undoubtedly disturb Republican and Democratic conservatives. They have already grumbled over the naming of Chief Justice Earl Warren and Associate Justice John M. Harlan, whom they regard as too "New Dealish." But Brennan's elevation will probably appeal to liberals and independents, as well as to the influential Irish-Catholic vote in the Northeast and Middle Atlantic States.

Although Senate confirmation is expected, that question may precipitate another sharp showdown between the White House and the McCarthy-Jenne bloc assuming that Ike is re-elected.

not recall the nomination, he would have to engage in a similar brawl. Brennan and McCarthy stand at opposite poles on many issues.

BRENNAN ATTACKED 'HEARINGS' — Although Justice Brennan did not mention McCarthy by name, he inferentially denounced the Wisconsin Senator's 1954 investigation of alleged subversives as "witch hunts." Indeed, he criticized the general conduct of certain Congressional inquiries.

He said: "Abuse of individual rights today takes on modern dress—the sack and screw, but the distorted press release with the distorted version of what happens at secret sessions."

"There are hopeful signs that we, as a civilized and decent people, have, I think, the neck of time become ashamed of our toleration of the barbarism which has marked proceedings at some hearings."

Capitol Hill.

JUSTICE MINTON AND CIVIL LIBERTIES CAJES Justice Sherman Minton, whom Judge Brennan replaces, had one of the worst records in the Supreme Court's handling of civil liberties cases, according to a compilation by the St. Louis Post-Dispatch, an independent but liberal newspaper.

The Supreme Court's general average during the Vinson regime was listed as only 35 per cent. Those counted as upholding civil rights, with averages ranging from 61 to 100, were Justices Frankfurter (61); Black (87); Douglas (89); Rutledge (96); Murphy (100).

The other members scored as follows: Jackson (31); Clark (24); Burton (22); Vinson (14); Minton (4); Reed (13). It is interesting that two former Attorneys General and three former members of Congress were more zealous in holding for the Government than for the defendants.

Recruiting Campaign By Chains

By ELMER ROESSNER

Food chains, facing critical shortages of executive talent, are stepping up programs to recruit and train young people of ability.

Ways of attracting youths with ability, and of training them for top positions in food distribution will be important topics at the annual meeting of the National Association of Food Chains in Chicago next week. A large part of the discussion next Wednesday will be concerned with the problem.

Chains have not been neglecting the problem. Their association has been co-operating with Michigan State University's courses in food distribution that lead to degrees of bachelor of arts and master in that subject. A total of 160 are currently registered in this subject, which has been co-operating with Michigan State University's courses in food distribution that lead to degrees of bachelor of arts and master in that subject. A total of 160 are currently registered in the subject, which has been part of the University's curriculum for six years. Other universities are being urged to set up similar courses.

One chain supports almost 300 scholarships for youngsters interested in food distribution. In addition, it offers summer employment to give students practical experience and to earn money to supplement the scholarships.

OPPORTUNITIES HELD ATTRACTIVE

The food industry faces the difficulty of overcoming an unfavorable impression many young people have. They see only the employees and often-overworked managers in local markets and conclude there is not much opportunity for well-paid futures.

"Opportunities in food distribution compare favorably with those in most other industries," countered John A. Logan, president of the N.A.F.C., in a prevention discussion of the problem.

"Our association recently completed a survey that shows that, in broad areas, the salaries of branch-store managers compares favorably with that of bank presidents. Of course, in big cities bankers far exceed food store managers in earnings, but in many small towns the chain store manager is paid more than the local bank president and in areas that include both large cities and small towns, the store managers do as well as bankers.

"Many chain store managers are paid from $10,000 to $12,000 a year, plus a share of profits, plus fringe benefits equal to 17 per cent of their salaries.

FAST PROMOTION

"The field offers young men and women opportunities to get ahead as fast as their abilities allow. I know many branch managers who are under thirty. Some became managers within two years, after entering the field and young men five years out of college is now manager of the second largest division of one of the biggest chains."

Mr. Logan said another survey showed that one-third of all chain supermarket employees were under 20. This includes many part timers.

"We have a gold mine of talent," he said, "but we must find more ways of encouraging the best youths to train for top jobs in the field. We must encourage an atmosphere of opportunity."

The chains, it seems, have a considerable advantage over independent supermarkets and service stores. An independent store can have only a limited number of top-bracket jobs.

N.A.F.C. figures show there are 240 categories of employment in chain operation. In addition to employees the public normally sees there are engineers of various kinds, architects, mechanics, real estate specialists, traffic analysts, advertising specialists, buyers, color specialists, etc.

---But Don't Talk About It

(The Charlotte News)

What part that played in Ford sales trailing Chevrolet's is not apparent, but the end result is the same. Appeals to the survival instincts of auto buyers will be played down, and power will be reemphasized. The public must be satisfied.

Inability to sell safety in no way diminishes, however, the necessity for auto makers to continue heavy emphasis on safety engineering. Because of safety devices on Fords and those advertised on other makes many accident victims doubtless are alive today. The $400,000 Ford and Chrysler contributed to the Cornell University crash research program last year will continue to pay dividends if lessons learned are applied to new models as Ford applied them to '56 models.

The experiment proved only that auto makers cannot profit by talking about safety devices. There is profit in saving lives even if the saved would rather talk about surging power and scratching off in a cloud of wasted gasoline fumes.

At Dearborn, Mich., a year ago Ford Motor Co. launched a novel and noble experiment. After years of expensive research and engineering it had equipped its 1956 cars and trucks with safety devices. Laboratory tests indicated would substantially reduce accident deaths and injuries.

Having built the safety devices, the experiment was to try to sell safety as, during years of ever increasing injuries and deaths, the auto firms had sold power, styling, and luxury features. Accordingly, massive Ford advertising efforts focused on the safety features, subordinating and appeal of increased power and new styling.

The experiment is over. It failed.

Safety, a Ford advertising executive said, "is not an action theme and it does not appear to create an emotional urge to buy." That was the General Motors' thought all along, and GM stuck with conventional advertising on-horsepower and style.

ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Scripture—Genesis 1:1-2:3.

On the fourth day of creation God made the sun and the moon and the stars, and set them in the firmament of heaven.

Then God made the great whale and every living creature that moveth which the waters brought forth abundantly after his kind.

And God made all the beasts of the earth after his kind, the cattle and every creeping thing, and this was on the sixth day.

Last God created man and woman, and He blessed them and gave them dominion over all things.

Chocowinity Church Plans Observe Its 182nd Anniversary This Sunday

Trinity Episcopal Church in Chocowinity—fourth oldest church building still standing in North Carolina—will observe its 182nd anniversary with a Homecoming Service this Sunday at 11 a.m. The minister invited to preach this year's sermon is no stranger to residents of eastern North Carolina, for the Rev. Alex C. D. Noe, retired rector of Trinity Church, has spent more than 20 years of his ministry in or near Bath.

The loose offering again this year will be placed in the Memorial Parish House Building Fund which will one day supply a much-needed Parish House for the ever expanding program of Christian Education. Also in this building will be a room to house all of the records of this parish dating back more than 100 years, the old communion service of 1865, the stool upon which the first rector stood to preach in 1774 and other priceless objects pointing to the past of this historic Church.

State's Atty. Abraham S. Ullman, who is heading the investigation into the 6-week-old baby's death, said he understood 33-year-old Eleanor Ruotolo had asked to be admitted to the Connecticut State Hospital. He said he did not know why.

A spokesman at the hospital said all questions about Mrs. Ruotolo, wife of a paint salesman, would have to await arrival of hospital officials sometime today.

Cynthia disappeared from her carriage left by Mrs. Ruotolo in a Sears Roebuck department store in Hamden on Sept. 1.

The infant's body was found five days later in a lake, about a mile from the store. It was stuffed in an air tight plastic bag and weighed with a stone.

Mrs. Ruotolo collapsed in her husband's arms during graveside services for the baby. Cynthia was the third infant Mrs. Ruotolo and her husband, Stephen, lost to death. One child died of pneumonia and a second died in an accident.

An autopsy report showed that the baby had died of suffocation—either from drowning or some other cause.

Nixon Swings At Stevenson Again On Draft Stand

WASHINGTON (AP) — Vice President Nixon has again swung hard at Adlai Stevenson's expressed hopes for ending the draft, saying the Republicans will not "hold out any false hopes" of such action.

Nixon said he thinks Stevenson is "a well intentioned man," but contended the Democratic candidate lacks the background and judgment of President Eisenhower in matters involving threats to peace and freedom.

Stevenson has said the draft should be ended "at the earliest possible moment consistent with the national safety."

On a nationwide television interview last night, Nixon said Republicans would like to be able to promise that compulsory military service could soon be abolished without impairing national safety. But he said they would "not kid the American people in an election year . . . when we know there is no chance at this particular time for it to happen."

It would be completely irresponsible, Nixon said, to tell allies the United States is reducing its strength and still expect them to keep up their own full efforts.

Nixon promised that never, under Eisenhower, would "thousands of American boys" go into a war unprepared, as he said happened in Korea. "Some of them died because they did not have the training they needed," Nixon said.

Tree-Planters Have Deadline

RALEIGH — Eligible farmers who wish to plant trees under the Conservation Reserve phase of the Soil Bank Program have until October 15 to sign up, according to John Gray, in charge of Forestry Extension at North Carolina State College.

Those who will be eligible and wish to put land in trees in 1957, have until March 15, 1957, to sign up, explains Gray.

Gray points out that if a landowner is eligible to enter land in the Conservation phase of the Soil Bank in 1956, he can go ahead and sign up a contract for putting land in tree cover and, if through no fault of his own, he cannot get planting stock, he will draw a rental check for 1956. In this case, his contract period will be 11 years under tree planting instead of 10.

The county committee may require the landowner to put the land in a winter cover crop until the trees are planted. Of course, adds Gray, the landowner gets cost-sharing assistance on this.

Landowners can now sign conservation reserve contracts for 1957, and if they should get their trees planted before January 1, they will receive established cost just as if they had been planted after January 1, according to Gray.

High Praise For Cattle Shows

SALISBURY — "I believe that it is almost impossible to overestimate the value of the Junior Dairy Shows," says W. Glenn Hardesty, assistant county agent in Rowan County.

He says, "These shows do much to bring boys and girls closer to their dairy animals." He believes this relationship has a tempering influence on the individual's personality and character.

"It aids greatly in developing a better sense of values that will be drawn on during adult life," concludes Hardesty.

Early Plowing Beats Nematodes

ROBBINSVILLE — The root knot nematode can be kept to a minimum by following a very simple practice of plowing up the stalks as soon as the tobacco is harvested, according to Graham County Agent Denver Robinson.

He points out that if a turning plow is used, most of the root system can be exposed to the sun in the fall and subjected to the freezing weather in the winter. Thus, many of the small worms that cause root knot can be killed through two processes, that of drying out in the hot sun and freezing weather.

The Sports Reflector

By BILLY ARNOLD

(The Sports Reflector is devoting its space this week to Coach Jack Boone, of East Carolina College, who has some very pertinent things to say concerning Dick Cherry's resignation from school).

It is difficult to write finis to the football career of one of the greatest athletes I have had the privilege to know or coach.

My memory takes me back to a beautiful Saturday afternoon some five years ago when my manager said that Dick Cherry wanted to see me and wondered if he could get a uniform. Of course, a uniform was found at once! At that time, Dick had two broken ribs, suffered in the East-West All Star game, which gave him trouble all year. However, he broke in around the second game and became a fixture in our backfield.

The next year he had a bad knee which bothered him, but he never complained. He led us to our first championship by beating Appalachian on a crisp, cool night in October of 1953. In about the last two minutes of that game, he hurt his knee. The next week in Tampa we lost a heartbreaker and a chance to go to the Tangerine Bowl by the score of 18-13.

I mention this because Dick hobbled in and started our team on a drive that night that would have put us ahead late in the ball game. He had crossed the mid-field strip after taking the ball on our five yard line and had driven 45 yards before losing the ball on interception, which stopped our drive. Dick was taken from the game after being hit very hard. That ended his play for that season, until we met Morris Harvey in the Elks Bowl—a game he played with a very bad knee.

A Broken Foot

During the following summer, he worked hard getting his legs in shape and reported in fine physical condition. With him were a group of boys who, we thought, would give us our best season yet. With all the experienced boys returning, we were high in spirits and knew we would have a great team. Three days before playing Norfolk Navy, Dick was hit on a pass play and broke his foot. This ended his play for the 1954 season. His loss was a great blow to the boys who looked to him as a fine football player and a great leader.

The year of 1955, we had lost many of our seasoned boys but Dick again returned. I remember how nervous he was early in the season, but he overcame his first-game jitters, settled down and became a team player again—not as much in the role of offensive player as defensive player. Game after game, he tackled hard and was one of the best defensive men on our squad. This defensive play took a lot out of him, and he never had the chance to show his true form on offense.

At the beginning of this year, Dick was confronted by a problem much greater than anything he had ever encountered before—the illness of his father. When he thought everything was going to work out just fine, he learned that his father would have to have an operation. About the same time, one of his father's employees quit. Unable to get help, Dick tried to carry on his father's business, go to school, and play football.

It was at the V. P. I. game that I noticed the snap was gone from Dick, although he threw his passes with precision and accuracy, only missing two of them, and those being right in the receiver's hands. That night we ended up with a net of 241 yards rushing and passing. Despite the score, our effort was good, and Dick had a pretty good night.

The next week he only practiced two days before the Stetson game, and the results were evident in his play. I could see the heavy load was too much for him to carry, and I know Dick was the first to realize this. We talked about it privately the next week and came to the conclusion that it would be better for him to forget football until he could get things straightened out at home. This he could not do. In the meantime, he had missed too many classes to make up his work; therefore, he withdrew from school.

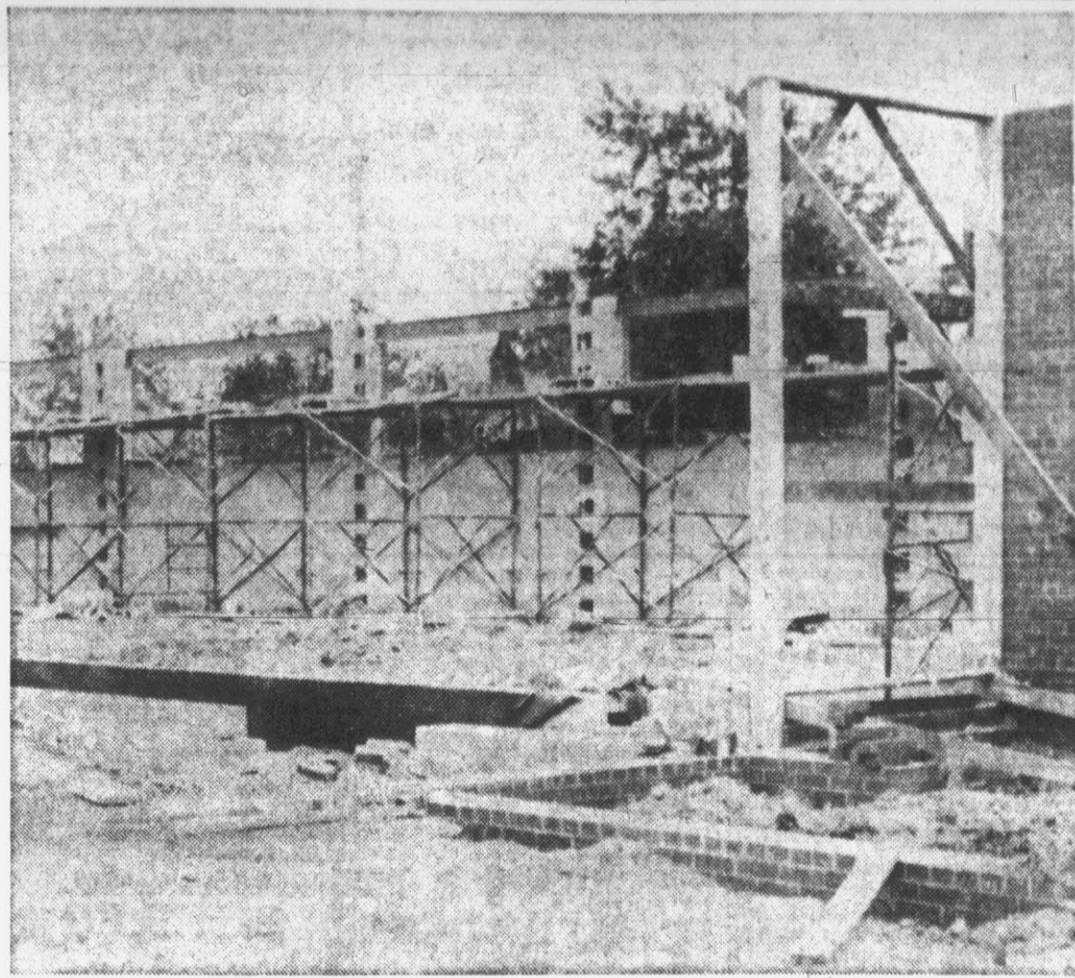

Fine Competitor, Gentleman

Dick was one of the finest competitors, football players and gentlemen that I have had my pleasure to coach. He was easy to coach and always worked hard to improve himself. Things never did come easy for Dick in the way of football and all the breaks did not come his way. Despite this, he was named All-Conference for three years, All-State for one year and on some Little All-American teams.

I am sure that Dick will always be respected by all of our players who have worked with him in the past few years and that he will be a shining example to all future football players. East Carolina College and the people of eastern North Carolina should be proud of this boy and of the recognition he has brought us.

It has been a pleasure to coach Dick Cherry, a boy who never knew what the words quit and lose meant. Coach Jack Boone

Bums Are Afraid Of Berra, Says Jackie Robinson

BROOKLYN (AP)—The Yankee most feared by the Dodgers is not Mickey Mantle—it's Yogi Berra, says Brooklyn's Jackie Robinson.

"That's the man who hurts us most," said the veteran infielder of the hustling New York catcher. "We'd a lot rather have Mantle up there in a tight spot than Berra."

Although Mantle is the American League's triple offense champion—batting leader at .353, home run king with 52 and tops in runs-batted-in with 130—the Dodgers, says Jackie, are more afraid of Yogi's ability to come through in a clutch.

"We figure that if we can stop Berra, we can stop the Yankees. If Berra is hot, we figure we're in bad trouble. This is a fighter—he'll try to whip you with a toothpick."

Robinson said the Dodgers get a particular kick out of beating the Yankees because of the "aura of invincibility that has been built up around them."

"We don't look on them as a bunch of prima donnas," added the Brooklyn third baseman. "We respect them as tough ball players. We know they're good and we just try to prove we're better."

Robinson said if the Dodgers had to vote on the second most feared man on the Yankee club it would be Whitey Ford, the pitcher who lost the opening game 6-3. "Whitey didn't have it against us in that first game," Jackie said "but he's a great pitcher."

"If he's right he can beat anybody in any park. It's not going to be a pleasant meeting him again."

Then Jackie's fierce team pride came to the fore. "But if it's Ford against Maglie (Sal Maglie, winner of the opening game) I'll have to go with the Old Master. The Old Master (the Dodgers' name for Maglie); in my book, is the greatest fighter I ever saw in baseball."

A writer interrupted: "That's not what you said when he was a New York Giant, Jackie."

"Oh, yes, it was," Jackie retorted. "When he was a Giant I called him every name I could think of. But I wasn't sore because he wasn't a Dodger."

GHS Favored To Win Contest By One Touchdown

Greenville's Phantoms play host tonight to a Class A Selma outfit and will go into the contest a one-touchdown favorite over the visitors, at College Stadium.

Coach Guy Lewis, whose Phantoms have flashed away only one victory in four games, will have the G-Men shooting for a second win to improve their record. The contest will be a non-conference affair, of course.

Selma, according to reports, resembles Greenville in its record and team weights and play. The Class A squad is supposed to bring a line averaging around 175-180 pounds, backed up by a fast and heavy backfield.

Sermons, Roebuck

Expected to spark an improved Green attack, will be All-Northeastern Conference fullback Billy Sermons. The Big Red Head has been by far the most prolific ground gainer on the Phantom aggregation and has been a sixty-minute man for Coach Lewis. Mack Roebuck, who broke into the first unit last season as a sophomore has been having a fairly good year as the team's quarterback, passer and kicker. He is expected to carry the Green passing attack further than at any point this season against the Selma crew. With two good ends in Edwin Wilkerson and Billy Cox, and Robert Conway as another receiver, Roebuck will probably throw quite a bit tonight.

The GHS line, which has been an up and down situation throughout the year, is in good shape for the first time since the Jacksonville tilt, three weeks ago. Barney Barrett, a hefty 175 pound tackle, who has been held back as a reserve most of the season, is expected to see plenty of action on defense. Barrett, a veteran, has turned in rugged defensive performances in drill this week.

Along with Barrett, ends Cox and Wilkerson are expected to bolster the forward wall. Tackles will be Angus Duff and Roy Martin. Guards will be Kelly Barnhill and Billy Brown. Wade Jordan, a senior, will carry out center assignments.

Running Attack

Joining with Sermons and Roebuck in the Phantom backfield, will be three very fast boys. Jimmy Kelly and Robin Wilfong will probably battle throughout the night for fullback honors, though Wilfong is slated to start. Kelly is much the faster of the two but the rugged Wilfong weighs 175 and is a big asset as a power runner. Robert Howell, a good broken-field runner, will tie down the halfback berth opposite Sermons. The contest will get underway tonight at 8:00.

Second Game Rained Out Same Pitchers Scheduled

By JOE REICHLER

BROOKLYN (AP)—Their chance to win their first World Series game delayed 24 hours by rain, Don Newcombe, Brooklyn's biggest winner in 32 years and Don Larsen, New York's hottest pitcher in September, tried it again at Ebbets Field today. Pleasant weather was forecast.

The postponement, first since 1951, failed to dim the enthusiasm of the baseball hungry fans, who were expected to jam the ancient park just as they did in Wednesday's opening game when 34,479, including President Eisenhower, saw Sal Maglie pitch the Dodgers to a 6-3 triumph.

Scheduled to be among the spectators was Adlai Stevenson, Democratic candidate for president. Latest odds made today's game as well as the series an even money, pick 'em affair. Had the game been played yesterday, the Yankees would have gone off a 6 to 5 favorite.

ECC Vs. Elon

BURLINGTON — East Carolina's Pirates, still seeking the win column for 1956, will tangle with a heavily-favored Elon team here tomorrow night, in a North State Conference match.

Elon is favored to take the tilt by three touchdowns, due to the recent loss of Pirate quarterback Dick Cherry and the strength of the Christian team.

Probable Lineups

BROOKLYN (AP)—Probable lineups for today's second World Series game at Ebbets Field (first game batting averages in parentheses):

- NEW YORK (257)
 - Bauer, rf (.400)
 - Slaughter, lf (.600)
 - Mantle, cf (.333)
 - Berra, c (.000)
 - Collins, 1b (.000)
 - McDougal, ss (.000)
 - Martin, 3b (.333)
 - G.Coleman, 2b (.000)
 - Larsen, p (11-5)

- BROOKLYN (281)
 - Gilliam, 2b (.000)
 - Reese, ss (.500)
 - Sneider, cf (.333)
 - Robinson, 3b (.250)
 - Hodges, 1b (.500)
 - Amoros, lf (.333)
 - Furillo, rf (.250)
 - Campanella, c (.250)
 - Newcombe, p (27-7)

Umpires—Soar (A) plate, Boggs (N) first base, Napp (A) second base, Pinelli (N) third base, Runge (A) left field line, Gorman (N) right field line. Game time, 12 noon (EST).

"No World Series game ever has been stopped short of nine innings," he said. "It is my responsibility to the players and fans that no game has to be called because of adverse weather conditions."

Commissioner Ford Frick called the game off yesterday after examining the field and learning that a long, heavy rain was forecast.

"I don't particularly like the postponement," said the Dodgers' 27 game winner. "I've been pitching all year with only three days' rest and I'm much better that way. The extra day affects my control."

Despite the washout, Newcombe worked out in uniform. He did not throw but ran for 25 minutes in the outfield.

Larsen, an 11 game winner this year, was Stengel's choice over Tom Sturdivant because of his last four September performances, all of them low hit affairs. The big right-hander in his lone series start, last year, lasted only four innings. Newcombe has started three World Series games against the Yankees and lost them all.

Stengel juggled his lineup for today's game, shifting Billy Martin to third base in place of Andy Carey and playing Jerry Coleman at second. The old man also replaced first baseman Bill Skowron with Joe Collins.

Alston went with his same lineup but elevated the southpaw hitting Sandy Amoros from eighth to sixth, dropping Carl Furillo to seventh and Roy Campanella to eighth in the batting order.

Rumors persisted that Mickey Mantle, Yankee slugger, is far from recovered from his groin injury. Mickey himself insisted he was all right but observers noted that Maglie didn't get the proper jump on two fly balls which fell in front of him for base hits in Wednesday's opener.

WASHINGTON (AP)—Clarence Hinant, a home town boy and a knockout specialist, bids for national light-heavyweight recognition tonight in a 10-round meeting with Tony Anthony of New York at Capitol Arena.

Hinant, 23 and a professional for six years, is credited with 16 knockouts while winning 21 of his 29 starts. He floored his last three opponents—Al Andrews, Willie Troy and Julio Carreras, the Cuban light-heavyweight champion.

Anthony, ranked by Ring magazine as the No. 7 light-heavyweight contender, also is expert at the hard punch. He has won 27 of 31 pro starts, 21 by knockouts.

The fight will be televised over the usual Friday night hookup (NBC, 9 p.m. EST).

Anthony, once a top amateur in two weight divisions, was the pre-fight favorite. A member of the 1952 U.S. Olympic team, he is a former national AAU welterweight champion.

As a lightweight, he won the Ray Robinson trophy as 1951's outstanding amateur boxer.

Greenville's Junior Varsity footballers traveled to Goldsboro last night, only to return with a narrow 6-0 defeat.

The junior Quakers scored on a sixty-yard drive in the second quarter, then staved off repeated threats by the Phants during the remainder of the game.

In the final minutes of the first half, a long pass from Duff to Bass resulted in a touchdown for the Junior G-Men, but was nullified when the referee detected an ineligible receiver down field.

Greenville made several other serious threats during the last half, but was unable to score. The loss was their first of the season. Earlier, they tied Jacksonville 6-6 in the only other contest played.

Outstanding for the Junior G-Men were Erskine Duff, Norfolk Feltton, Shelton Conway in the backfield, and Ashley Harrison, Larry Roberts, Bob Aycock and Skip Wright.

CHAPTER 14

Dottie Harris smiled a welcome at me and it was a pleasure to see. She was a lovely, pretty girl... and as refreshing as a white violet in a flasket of fat red roses.

"Hello, there!" she said brightly. "Hello, Hester Frost."

"Oh, you know me."

"You're my new neighbor. I've meant to drop in to see you, but it's been one of those days. Here," she said, "sit down. Get off those feet. Have a cigarette?"

"Why, thanks."

She gave me a cigarette, lit it for me, then did the same for herself. She was regarding me seriously, curiously. I knew what she was thinking.

"No," I said. "Taking Anita Farrell's place hasn't bothered me too much."

She looked startled, then smiled. "I guess everybody has asked you that. But didn't you keep wondering if each one of your pupils mightn't be the Waltzer?"

"No, they all seemed pretty normal to me."

"You're so right. Most of them are so normal they're dull. Oh, some of the duds I've had! Deliver me!"

"Well, now, I can name you an exception, Dottie. How about that five o'clock scholar of yours? There's a virtual dream boy."

Her laughter filled the studio. "Dream boy is right! I don't even have a five o'clock scholar."

"But you did today, didn't you?"

"Not today or any other day. That's my dinner break... five till seven. What made you think I had a lesson then, anyway?"

"Well, I passed by and the door was open. The music was playing and I saw this man. I just took for granted you were giving a lesson."

"Uh-uh, not me." She took a small engagement book from her purse, flipped it open, found a certain page. "Here," she said, "see for yourself."

I saw for myself. The five and six o'clock spaces were empty.

I said, "Does some other teacher use this studio when you're not here?"

"Not that I know of... why, Hester? Why does it matter, why's it important?"

"Oh, it isn't, not at all! But as you said, there are so few interesting men around here. I just wondered who this one was."

"What did he look like?"

"Young, but probably not as young as he looks. Dark, attractive in a kind of rough, tough way."

"Hester, if a fellow like that ever walked into this studio, he'd still be here. I'd see to that. But you're wrong. You must have got the wrong studio."

"I guess so," I said.

"She stood up. 'Listen, if you see him again, introduce me. Hester, it's nice knowing you. We'll be seeing a lot of each other, I hope.' 'Let's make a point of it, Dottie.'"

"I've got to run now. So long." I stood for a moment in the hallway, trying to figure it out. I still would have bet—that conversation about Rhinebeck Place had gone on in the studio next to mine. But there was an outside chance that I had become confused in the maze of catwalks about the false ceiling, that the young man and the troubled girl had been in some other room. There was only one way I could find out.

The conference room was empty and I quickly climbed the ladder to the closet. In just a few minutes I had wormed my way to the spot where I thought I had heard the two voices. I looked down through the grill. It was Dottie's studio. I could see our two red-tipped cigarette stubs still smoldering in the ash tray. There was no other grill close enough to me to make it possible for the voice to have come from some other studio.

SLITHERY SITUATION

ADA Okla. (AP) — "Snakes alive," Mrs. Walter Goynne gasped. She had just pulled up her small minnow trap at a farm lake and found it loaded with snakes. She counted 12 cottonmouth water moccasins who got in but couldn't squeeze back out.

There was no doubt that the young man had been in Dottie Harris' room. But Dottie Harris had not been the teacher to whom he was talking, and I knew no way of finding out who it might have been.

I was discouraged and, crawling back along the catwalk on all fours, I felt more than a little foolish. There must be a more dignified, more comfortable way of discovering who had murdered Anita Farrell.

I had climbed down the ladder in the conference room closet. I had my hand on the door knob when I heard the voice. I withdrew my hand, stood very still behind the door. Murder or no murder, Detective Lieutenant Bolling was spending entirely too much time hanging around the Crescent School of Dancing.

... as far as I can gather, Bolling was saying, "you knew Anita Farrell better than anybody else around here."

"I wouldn't say that." The cool, efficient voice of Miss Leone Webb was hitting a new high in cool efficiency. "What makes you think that?"

"You lived with her. You must've been buddies."

"Yes, I did live with her. But we were hardly buddies."

"You mean the reverse? You didn't get along?"

"I didn't mean that at all," Leone said emphatically. "I simply mean we never became very good friends. Our sharing an apartment was strictly a matter of convenience. As soon as I could manage an apartment of my own, I moved out of Rhinebeck Place."

"When was that?"

"Last winter, the beginning of February."

"So you were there... how long?"

"A little more than five months."

I heard a door open and close. Mr. Oliver Bell was using his well-oiled voice. "Oh, I'm not intruding, I trust?"

"No, no," Bolling said. Alongside Bell's, his voice sounded like gravel in a tin chute. "I'm just trying to get some facts about Anita Farrell from Miss Webb."

"Oh, I see."

"But I'm afraid," Leone said, "that I'm not being of much help."

Bolling said, "In all that time you lived with her you must have learned something about her. You got some impressions didn't you?"

"Very few," Leone said.

"I'm not surprised at all," Bell said. "Miss Farrell was a very close-mouthed person. Oh, charming radiant... but close-mouthed."

"Okay," Bolling said. "Close-mouthed. Miss Webb were there any special men friends?"

"No, I'd say not. At least, not while I lived with her. She was out a great deal with men... at theaters and night clubs. Only occasionally would a man come to the apartment. And then just to pick her up or stop in for just one drink. We had an agreement about that, Anita and I."

"How long had Miss Farrell worked here?" Bolling asked.

"She came here almost a year before I did. That would make it nearly three and a half years."

"Miss Webb, I'll just ask one more question, then knock off. You still can't remember who Miss Farrell's seven o'clock pupil was?"

Leone answered wearily. "I still can't remember."

"Miss Webb," Oliver Bell said, "perhaps if you throw your mind back to the intermission after the seven o'clock lesson perhaps you might remember seeing Miss Farrell's pupil leave, go through the

Grimesland Pupils Have New Teachers

By IRENE CAYTON
Grimesland School Reporter

The drive has been completed and profits will be used for the Junior-Senior Prom and the Senior trip had the pleasure of welcoming seven new faculty members this year.

New gas burners have been installed in the chemistry lab this year and science students are finding all phases of their work more interesting.

The Senior Class has completed solicitation of ads for their year book, The Panther. The drive was completed in two days.

Our Seniors visited Washington, D. C., and New York City last week. After touring the nation's capital for a day and a night, the group moved on to New York City.

Included in the excitement of the big city were several Broadway shows such as "Mr. Wonderful" with Sammy Davis Jr., and "Damn Yankees" and an all-day tour of the city.

Visiting Washington and New York City was educational and exciting but everyone who made the trip firmly agrees, "There's no place like home."

If you should happen to see one of our students talking in "numbers," it's probably a student from the many things figured thus far great generals. The picture has all the famed DeMille ingredients—sex, bathing scenes, dancing girls, racing chariots plus his second splitting of the Red Sea.

He did it before in a silent version of "The Ten Commandments," made in 1923. That was the first picture to cost more than a million. Paramount fired DeMille when the cost soared, but had to rehire him because no one but DeMille can do a DeMille spectacle.

Charlton Heston plays Moses and does a superb job, as does Yul Brynner as Rameses II, the despotic Pharaoh of the Exodus.

They Struck Gas Without Drilling

DENVER, 10.—Without drilling an inch they've struck gas in East Denver, smack in the middle of a street intersection.

Trouble is, it's the kind of gas you burn in your automobile. Telephone service men made the discovery. They entered a manhole to inspect cables in an underground conduit and found the hole was full of gasoline. Telephone service wasn't affected.

So far the telephone men have torn up 150 feet of paving without finding a source. Firemen pumped out 600 gallons of gasoline, slightly cut with water, but the hole keeps filling about once every two days.

Gas stations on each side of the street are suspects. So far no loss has been detected from their tanks. The operators are "double checking."

Firemen have put up barricades and posted no-smoking signs.

DeMille's New Film Epic Goes On Screen

By JAMES BACON
HOLLYWOOD — Hollywood has had a preview look at the most expensive movie ever made — "The Ten Commandments" — and it'll take a bigger and better adjective than colossal to describe it.

It's 75-year-old Cecil B. DeMille's 70th picture and easily the masterpiece of the screen's master showman.

DeMille spent 12 hours a day for five years plus $13,500,000 of Paramount's money to put the life of Moses on the screen. The budget almost doubles the seven million spent on "Quo Vadis," and more than triples the cost of "Gone With The Wind."

The latter picture, which grossed 25 million dollars, is the all time boxoffice champion, but Paramount expects "The Ten Commandments" to bring in 100 million dollars over the next 20 years.

Much of the big cost was due to DeMille's insistence on shooting such scenes as the Exodus on the actual locale—Egypt's Sinai Valley.

And only DeMille, with characteristic lavishness, would build three pyramids and 16 Sphinxes less than five miles from the real ones.

But the old man knew what he was doing. The result is more a religious experience than a movie. It's an armchair pilgrimage.

Research alone cost $250,000. But historically it's money well spent. DeMille hired a team of researchers at the University of Southern California who came up with little known facts of Moses' life.

From the writings of ancient Roman historians, Josephus and Philo; from the rabbinical legends and even from the Koran of Islam, the researchers were able to bridge the 30 years omitted in the Biblical history of Moses. The research turned up proof of the traditional belief that Moses was a prince of Egypt and one of its

Christian Church Announcements

Sunday, October 7, is generally recognized throughout the land as Rally Day in the Sunday Schools and churches and it will be so observed at the Eighth Street Christian Church Sunday morning, the Sunday School beginning at 9:45 and the church service at 11 a.m. All classes are expected to have 100% attendance and the membership of the church is urged to be present for the worship service.

The first Sunday in October is also kept by the majority of Christians throughout the world of all denominations as World-Wide Communion Sunday. At no time are the Christian forces of the world more united than at the time of Holy Communion.

"The Christian Women's Fellowship will hold its October session at the church Monday night at 8 and the subject of the program will be "The United Nations." Dr. Eva Williamson will speak on that subject and Mrs. Plato Evans will preside. Circle No. 8 will have charge of the program.

The membership of the congregation are reminded of the meeting in Rocky Mount this coming Thursday when at 10 a.m. and at 7:30 p.m. they will have the opportunity of hearing Dr. Frank Laubach, distinguished missionary and literacy pioneer, an opportunity that should not be missed.

At the morning service the choir will sing "Grant Us Thy Peace" by Palestrina and the pastor will preach on the theme "Communing Worthily."

The month of October is designated "Loyalty Month" at the Eighth Street Church and the call goes out to every member to attend his teaching and worship services.

Held Responsible For Gun Death

READING, Pa. (AP)—A jury has convicted an Allentown, Pa., man of murder although a policeman fired the fatal shots.

The Berks County jury yesterday convicted James W. Redline, 32, of murder in the first degree with a recommendation of life imprisonment for the death of Ebor Worske, also of Allentown, his alleged accomplice in an attempted holdup.

Worske was killed in April by a Reading policeman during a running battle with police in which two officers were shot. The jury ruled Redline was responsible for the death.

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK — The stock market plodded along in dull trading with prices mixed early this afternoon.

Leading issues made gains or losses ranging from fractions to around a point.

The market was mixed from the start and no divisions showed any leadership during the morning. But early in the afternoon heavy trading began in rails. Some carriers made gains of major fractions to a point.

The tight money situation was emphasized further with news that the U.S. treasury was resorting to short-term financing to meet current cash needs through an offering of $1,600,000,000 in 91-day bills.

President Eisenhower's press conference, in which he declined to say that prospects of a tax cut were right around the corner, was unstimulating to traders.

Once again, unwillingness to make any definite changes in position prior to a weekend seemed to be in the air. The market's uncertainty at home and abroad.

American Telephone had a spell of heavy trading as it extended its loss of yesterday by another point.

Gulf Oil also dropped around a point. But Royal Dutch edged ahead. Standard Oil (New Jersey) eased slightly.

There was little change in pivotal steels but U.S. Steel took a fractional loss.

Among the motors, Ford and Chrysler backed away a shade while General Motors and Studebaker-Packard were steady.

Goodrich was ahead around a point in a generally improving group of rubbers. Goodyear and U.S. Rubber picked up fractions.

Long Bell Lumber made a leap of 3 points on a single small trade. Douglas and United Aircraft gained a bit while Boeing eased.

Small gainers included Anaconda, Dow Chemical and Union Carbide. Southern Railway was up around a point. Southern Pacific, Illinois Central and New York Central gained major fractions as rails showed some activity following news of the continued rise in rail freight traffic.

Letter-Writing Week At Hand

"National Letter Writing Week" will again be celebrated in Greenville during the week, October 7 to 13. Postmaster J. Knott Proctor announced today.

Commenting on the significance of "National Letter Writing Week," he pointed out that each year since 1938 this event has been observed as a reminder of the real meaning of a personal letter.

Emphasizing the traditional sanctity of letter mail, the postmaster reminded Greenville residents that one of the basic American freedoms is the uncensored transmission of their first class mail. It is the most valuable possession of the citizens of a free country.

"We all know the human importance of letter writing," Proctor stated, "the way in which it holds scattered families together, of giving comfort and love and news to all people of the land. But its value is immeasurably greater than that. Its implications are almost infinite.

"We in America have the privilege of uncensored and unlimited means of communication. With this in mind, I urge all citizens of Greenville to join me in this national celebration. Let's make 'National Letter Writing Week' for 1956 the greatest ever," the postmaster said.

Jaycees Plan Promoting Richmond U. Grid Game

Greenville's Junior Chamber of Commerce will undertake a campaign to promote the East Carolina College-University of Richmond football game to be played in Greenville Nov. 17.

The action was taken by the club last night after EOC Coach Jack Boone discussed the plight of the college football team before the Jaycees.

Boone pointed out to the club that East Carolina guaranteed Stetson $2,500 for their appearance on the local field. Gate receipts for the night were $1,700. Last week Catawba was guaranteed $1,200 to appear here.

"We took in $700," Boone told the Jaycees.

The Coach said that if gate receipts are small for the Richmond game, "I don't think you'll ever see another Southern Conference team come down here."

He indicated that this year's team is young and inexperienced.

"I will say that I have the finest material as a whole that I've ever had since I came to EOC," he declared. "I'll guarantee that I've had the finest morale I've had since I've been here. I know they are coming around—when, I don't know."

Boone lauded Dick Cherry, the Pirate's star quarterback who recently dropped out of school because of illness in the family.

He pointed out that Cherry had been injured every season that he played for the local college and he still played without complaint.

The Jaycees also approved definite plans for sponsoring the play "My Sister Eileen" Charles Hudson reported on plans for Sunday's scrap paper drive which the Jaycees will be conducting.

a report that "people who did not work were being carried on payrolls." Graham asked the SBI to make a full study of the situation and also ordered the continuation of a Departmental investigation.

The commission said Wednesday that the departmental investigation showed that some records which could have clarified the situation were not available and he fired the two men on that basis.

Report $151,750 In Building Fund

$151,750 on the Jarvis Memorial Methodist Church Building Fund Campaign was announced last night by Joe Taft, Treasurer of the Jarvis Memorial Building Fund, which amount comes from advance gifts and partial workers returns.

"It is too early to forecast the outcome of the campaign at this time," Hoover Taft, Chairman of the Building Fund Campaign, commented "but the cooperation of the workers and the enthusiasm of the congregation toward the campaign has been most encouraging."

He added the further comment that there had been many generous pledges so far though his observation was upon the partial report at hand up to this point. The first General Report Meeting of all the committees will be not until October 16th, he explained, at which time the workers will go into the intensive phase of the campaign.

Clock-like indicators showing the progress of the Campaign are being put in each entry to Jarvis Memorial to keep the congregation advised. From time to time the hands will be advanced to show the amount on hand. They are being put up today.
