THE BLONDE DIED DANCING

by KELLEY ROOS

CHAPTER 21
The next morning Steve and I left our apartment together. He was on his way to the office for an important one of giving his boss the impression that he was still working for his newspaper; B: to dig into the back number files to see if he could learn anything about the apparently accidental death of a man named Walter in the month of August.

I was on my way to the Crescent School of Dancing for a number of reasons. Perhaps Leone Webb, having lived with Anita, might know of a man called Stubby. And there were some questions which Steve had thought up for me to ask Jack Walston and Dottie Harris.

I reached the fourteenth floor and saw that Leone was busy at her reception desk with some people, but she had time to spot me. She gave me a message. Mr. Bell wanted to see me now, at once, before my first lesson. I thanked Leone, but I didn't mean it. The message had re-set my nerves to jumping.

I opened the door of my employer's office just an inch. The sight of him alone, without the company of any policeman, made me feel—well, not completely. My position on Mr. Bell's faculty was too delicate a hypocrisy to stand any interest in me from him. He smiled at me and, as a royalty does, bade me sit.

"Well, Hester!" I smiled back at him, hoping to build up some good labor-capital relations. Our grins seemed to make the very walls of the elegant office shiver in delight.

"Well, Hester! This is your second day with us!" "Yes, Mr. Bell. This is my second day!" "And how are things going? Was yesterday difficult for you?" "Difficult? Mrs. Bell," I said fervently, "I shall always consider yesterday one of the most thrilling days of my life."

I didn't add that I hoped I would never have another like it, I just sat nodding and beaming at my master. "Ah," Mr. Bell said. He actually said, "Ah."

"Yes," I said. "Oh, yes!" "Then you find teaching gratifying, do you?" "Gratifying? Mr. Bell, I said thrilling. To take those poor stumbling, awkward men and help them achieve grace, poise and social well-being through dancing is thrilling. Thrilling!"

"I take it then, Hester, that you will be with us for a good long while?" I turned pale inside. What a glib, monstrous liar! Connie Barton, was becoming. If this was habit-forming, I would hardly be a fit mother for the small group of children Steve and I were planning. But then I remembered the reason for all this chicanery. After all, it would hardly be a boon to our little ones to have their daddy tried for murder, unfortunately for my morale, Mr. Bell broke up my dire thinking.

"Well, Hester, I just wanted to make sure you were happy with us." "Very happy, Mr. Bell." "If you ever have any difficulties or problems, don't hesitate to come to me." Hastily, he added, "I mean problems involving your work here."

"I understand, and thank you, Oh, Mr. Bell..." I had just noticed an ugly blotch on his immaculate white shirt collar. I was sure he would want to know about such an unfortunate untidiness.

"Yes, Hester?" "I'm sure you'd want to know of there's something on your collar. You must have cut your self shaving." He was perplexed. "No... no. I use an electric razor." I got up and leaned across the desk toward him. "Oh, sorry," I said. "It's nothing, just some lipstick."

"Lipstick!" Mr. Bell was mortified. "No, it must be blood. I mean..." "No, it's lipstick, all right. Don't worry." He strode across the room, examined himself in a wall mirror... and my brain buzzed. While his back was still to me, I opened my purse. My yesterday's gloves were still in it. The orange stain from the mouth of my assailant outside Anita's apartment sparkled up at me. It was similar enough to the stain on Mr. Bell's collar to almost convince me they were identical. Unless Mr. Bell was unfaithful in his devotion to Leone Webb, I knew who my assailant was. But I wanted to make sure.

I closed in on my man. "Mr. Bell," I said. He turned back to me, his face flushed like a trapped schoolboy. "Hester," he said. "I can't imagine how..." "Mr. Bell, don't be embarrassed. I understand completely." "You... understand?" "I knew it the moment I saw you together. You were being so distant to each other, so business-like. But I could see it."

"She what?" "Between you... you and Leone Webb. Congratulation, Mr. Bell." "Good Lord... you're sharp!" "About love... yes. When will you be married? Soon, I hope, for both your sakes."

"Look here, Hester..." "Yes?" "Before I change my shirt I'm going to confide in you. I feel I must explain." "Is it necessary to explain, Mr. Bell? I'm not investigating you, sir."

"No, no... you see, I've made such a point of keeping the relationships here in my school completely business-like. You can imagine how conscience tortured me as I found myself attracted by, then drawn inevitably, toward Miss Webb."

"You may call her Leone." "Then to my horror, Leone reciprocated my affection and..." "Put it bluntly, Mr. Bell. You developed a terrific yen for each other. You fought against it. You lost. I don't blame either of you. So you're going to be married, when?"

A BOY'S PRAYER
Dear God... there's so much I'd like to say to You. It's that way lots of times. I want to talk to You, and then somehow I get stuck for words. I guess I do some stupid things, sometimes... like that fight with Butch Hendley yesterday. He said something I didn't like and then I said something, and that was it. I guess I won, but afterwards I was kind of ashamed. I told Dad about it last night and he went for a walk with me and we looked up at the sky and the stars. Everything looked so big, all of a sudden, that it scared me. It seemed too big to understand. Then Dad told me that there are lots of things like the sky and the stars, too big for people to ever understand. And he said that that's where Faith comes in, and that it is good to have the Church to put our trust in. I got to thinking about that, and I told Dad that I'd kind of like to ask Butch to come to Church with us next Sunday morning, but that I was afraid he wouldn't come. Dad grinned at me and said, "Why not ask him and see?" Dear God... I did ask Butch, and he's coming. Butch hasn't been to Church regularly like I have, so maybe when it comes to praying he'll get stuck for words even worse than I do. But You'll listen to him anyway, won't You? Because he needs You very much... just like I do... just like all of us do. Thank You, God.

Banquet Honoring Ladies Is Given By Kiwanis Club

The Greenville Kiwanis Club was host to about 200 guests at its annual "ladies' night" banquet at the Moose Temple last night. The concluding number on the program was the "Battle of the Sexes" in which Elbert Bennett for the men and Mrs. Dink James for the women used songs in their criticisms of each group. Mrs. Lena Tyson, who provided the flowers for the banquet, was accompanist for the singers. Special guests were the heads of civic groups and their wives: Lt.-Gov. Henry Bullock and Mrs. Bullock of Kinston; Mr. and Mrs. Barney Blair, Farmville; Mr. and Mrs. David J. Whichard III, Mr. and Mrs. Bancroft Moseley, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Wallace, Dr. and Mrs. Howard H. Gradis, Dr. and Mrs. M. W. Aldridge and Mr. J. B. Nichols, president of the Circle K Club. Special invited guests, widows of Kiwanians, were Mrs. J. Bryan Brown, Mrs. Roy Coburn, Mrs. J. B. Galloway, Mrs. S. M. Crisp, Mrs. Edith B. Harrington, Mrs. H. Dall Laughinghouse, Mrs. V. A. Merritt, Mrs. B. W. Moseley, Mrs. C. L. Russ, Mrs. Hugh T. Smith, Mrs. Robert R. Taylor, Mrs. Guy V. Smith and Mrs. A. C. Tadlock. Chairman Gradis extended the club's thanks to the women of the Moose Lodge for providing the supper and the various committees for their cooperation.

Couple Feted At Reception

BETHEL—Mr. and Mrs. L. L. Harrell Jr. of Oak City were honored with a reception Tuesday night from 8 to 9:30 p.m. at Bethel Baptist Church.

Hosts for the occasion were the Young Matrons Sunday School Class, the B. W. C. and the Y. W. A., assisted by Mrs. J. H. Andrews. The reception was held in the recreation room. The decorated table, covered with an embroidered linen cloth, was centered with an arrangement of white gladioli and mums. Candelabra holding white tapers were placed at each end of the table. Mrs. Harrell was presented a bouquet of white flowers.

Guests were greeted by Mrs. Alton Carson and Mrs. Ernest Alexander, who directed them to the receiving line. Those receiving were Mrs. J. P. Harris Sr., Mr. and Mrs. Kelly Abeyounis and Mr. and Mrs. Harrell. Guests were served bridal cakes, punch, mints, candy and nuts by Miss Patsy Harris and Mrs. George Abeyounis of Bethel and Mr. and Mrs. Troy Warren of Robersonville. Also assisting were Mesdames R. L. Martin, W. E. Andrews, Archie Coburn, J. N. Andrews, Reba Harris and Miss Alice Coburn. After being served, guests were directed to an adjoining room where bridal gifts were on display. Goodbyes were said to Mrs. Ruth Thomas, who presided at the register.

Final Plans Made For Visit Of Great Pocahontas Oct. 23

Plans were made for a visit by the Great Pocahontas when Withlia Council members of the Degree of Pocahontas held their semi-monthly meeting Tuesday night at the Woman's Club. Miss Jean Bright presided over the ritual which included the presentation of the American flag and the pledge of allegiance by the 36 members present. Invitations were read from Farmville, Ayden and Washington councils, inviting the local council to be present when the Great Pocahontas, Mrs. Louise Lane of Gastonia, makes her official visit Oct. 17, 19 and 26 respectively. Final plans were made for the banquet, and approaching visit of the Great Pocahontas Oct. 23 at 6:30 P.M. at the Woman's Club. Miss Jean Bright requested her officers to be present for a practice Thursday night Oct. 18 at 7:30 p.m. at the Woman's Club. The Council welcomed Mrs. Besie Worthington of Ayden Council and now a resident of Greenville. A letter was read explaining that this was physical handicap week and urging members to respond to those when possible. The Council contributed $15.00 to the Community Chest, $10.00 to Band Booster's Club and a long gift of $35.25 to a member. Members who had birthdays and contributed to the birthday fund included Mrs. Lula McLawhorn, Mrs. Malissa Davenport and Mrs. Lucy Ross. Past Pocahontas were honored. As their names were called, they formed a semi-circle. Officers in pairs with parts of a ladder assembled in front of Pocahontas station and extended greeting until the ladder was completed. Then officers escorted them to Pocahontas Miss Jean Bright, who presented each one with a Hawaiian Lei and a white note-book with Pocahontas emblem, name and number of the council engraved in gold letters. "Good of Order" was given by Mrs. Lucy Ross. Mrs. Lillie Randolph won the jackpot. The mantle of the club room was banked with pyrotechnics and dried arrangements were placed elsewhere. Mrs. L. O. Hemby and her committee invited members into the dining room for refreshments. The table held an arrangement of orchid dahlias.

Fall Meet Of Baptist Women

The fall meeting of the South Roanoke Federation of Baptist Business Women convenes October 23 with Ayden Baptist Church as host. The program will feature eight simultaneous workshops to aid members and officers in preparing for a year of significant leadership. Leaders of these workshops are: Circle Chairman: Miss Gloria Banton of Greenville; Program Chairman: Miss Katherine Taylor of Williamston and Mrs. E. W. Holmes of Farmville; Members and Enrollment: Mrs. M. T. Speir of Winterville and Miss Hilda Mayo of Rocky Mount. MISS BILLIE GRAY MORRIS of Tarboro and Greenville is the daughter of the Rev. and Mrs. W. Harvey Morris of Tarboro. Her engagement to Ronald Clark Butler of Raleigh and Tarboro, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. P. Butler of Tarboro, is announced by her parents. The wedding will take place December 23.

Third Street School PTA Hears Dr. L'Abate Speak

Dr. Luciano L'Abate, clinical psychologist at the local mental health clinic, was guest speaker when the Third Street School Parent-Teachers Association met Thursday night. Dr. L'Abate talked on the clinic's work with the emotional problems and the mental adjustments of children. He stated the number of applicants for their services far exceeded the quota the clinic was able to care for. Dr. L'Abate was introduced by Mrs. Milton Clark. Mrs. David Hollowell, Greenville PTA Council president, thanked the school for its help in making the PTA district meeting a success. A brief resume of the district meeting was given by Mrs. Kenneth Brown, who emphasized the benefits derived from group discussions on various facets of PTA work. Plans were made for the Halloween Carnival to be held October 26 and members urged to contribute their services toward making this project a success. Attending the meeting were 115 parents. Following a brief business session Mrs. Mosier adjourned the meeting.

30 Years Ago Today

The Daily Reflector October 13, 1926 The Wesley Philaetha Class of Jarvis Memorial Sunday School met Thursday evening at the home of Miss Martha Lee Cowell. At the close of business the meeting was turned over to the hostesses, Mrs. K. W. Cobb and Miss Cowell. The home was appropriately decorated, carrying out the Halloween idea. The traditional Halloween characters were much in evidence, with Jack O' Lanterns and cat prizes creating loads of fun. Mrs. K. T. Futrell and Miss Pearl Dawson put on a "spooky" ghost stunt. A delicious ice course was served.

ECC Alumni Could Tip The Scales

Homecoming at East Carolina College is not only an event looked forward to by the college, it is an event looked forward to by Greenville as well.

Each year it brings back "home" people who were here for at least four important years of their lives. It affords the opportunity for renewing old acquaintance and friendships, an occasion for talking old times, and an opportunity for discussing in serious terms of the future. Particularly the future of East Carolina College.

The Reflector joins Greenville in welcoming East No Truly 'Republican' Farm Program Exists

In spite of a great deal of campaign propaganda about a Republican farm program from GOP leaders, we haven't been able to find any such thing as a truly "Republican farm program."

There is not in existence today any farm program which has not been effected either under a Democratic administration or written into law by a Congress controlled by the Democratic party.

In an appearance here yesterday Assistant Secretary of Agriculture M. L. McLain said the farm program of the federal government is now and for years has been a bi-partisan program. It strikes us that this outlook from a Republican member of the top echelon of the Department of Agriculture is in sharp contrast to assertions by President Eisenhower, Vice President Nixon and other GOP leaders.

Notwithstanding the fact that the new Soil Bank program was passed by Democratic Congress, President Eisenhower and his administration have made every effort to put the Republican label on the program. While that is perfectly all right with a good many Democrats, it remains a fact that Democrats has almost as much to do with writing into law the Soil Bank program as the Republican administration did.

GOP leaders are likewise seeking to make political hay out of the fact that the last couple of months have seen farm prices stop their long decline and assume, instead, a rather level line. As a matter of fact, however, the Soil Bank program has not yet been in effect long enough to make any appreciable impression on farm income, and the remainder of the farm program, as it is today is purely a product of the Democratic Party—distorted perhaps under Republican administration.

In short, the Republican administration has in its three years in office offered no real agricultural program to American farmers. On the contrary, they have administered a program which was designed or passed by the Democrats.

It should be quite apparent to the farmers of this section as well as to those of the Mid-West and other areas that in spite of current GOP assertions there is not nor has there been any real Republican farm program.

The Republican administration just hasn't had a farm program of its own and it shows, in our estimation, little promise of coming forth with a program to meet the needs of the nation's agriculture if it remains in office another four years.

Proof Postive That Pitt Is Very Interested

From the contribution Pitt County has made to the campaign funds of the National Democratic Party, leaders in the party will be well aware that Pitt County Democrats are interested in a victory this fall.

The county's net contribution of $7,201.67 from tickets sold for the Rayburn rally here last month is probably the most this or any other Eastern Carolina county has ever contributed to a national political campaign. It represents more than half of the net proceeds of $13,000 turned over to the Democratic National headquarters from the Rayburn rally in which 28 counties participated.

As the host county for Speaker Rayburn's appearance, Pitt was naturally to exhibit more interest in ticket sales than the other counties. It cannot be said, however, that it was Pitt's responsibility to contribute more than half the total sum raised for the party through the rally. The enthusiastic response given the rally by people of Pitt County indicate in no uncertain terms their interest in a Democratic victory on the national level.

Opinions In Brief

SYCAMORE, O. LEADER: "Nothing indicates approval of a newspaper like a subscription check."
ABILENE, KAN. DAILY REFLECTOR-CHRONICLE: "Neil McElroy, president of Proctor and Gable, who was chairman of the education conference... would have big corporations and private business provided more funds to help students through school and do away with as many government subsidies as possible. This is no complete solution, but it appears to be a better answer to the problem seldom gets going."... San Francisco sorting to public funds."

Carolina alumni on this homecoming occasion. Before they leave Greenville and the campus—perhaps for another year—we would have a serious word with them.

Alumni of East Carolina College are scattered throughout North Carolina. Each, in his own community or neighborhood, is a person of some degree of influence who could become an effective good will ambassador for this state institution.

Within a few months legislators from the 100 counties will gather in Raleigh to weigh in their own minds the needs of East Carolina College for the next biennium. By their decisions these legislators will determine how much money will be provided for operations of the college during the next two fiscal years and how much money may be spent for permanent improvements. In so doing, they will in a large measure determine the extent of East Carolina's service to the state and particularly this section for the next biennium.

Most East Carolina Alumni are aware of the many needs of the college. The need for more funds with which to operate each year in order that adequate faculty and staff may be maintained to educate more students. The need for more classroom space in order that more students can attend the college. The need for more dormitory rooms so East Carolina will not have to say to prospective students, you can come only if you can find your own place to live.

If each of the alumni of East Carolina College would put in a good word for the institution in their own community, it could mean a great deal to the college when the General Assembly meets. The influence of the alumni can be a major factor in obtaining for East Carolina College the additional facilities it needs to better serve the young people of this area and of North Carolina.

Research Is Now An Industry In Itself

By LYNN NISBET
RESEARCH — As Ed Rankin, secretary to Governor Hodges, said sometime ago "research" is much more than an auxiliary aid to industry and agriculture. Research has become itself a major industry. In the nation and in North Carolina.

That was made quite evident in discussions at the C&D board meeting early this week. Formation of the Research Triangle Corporation a few days ago and distribution of a leaflet by the advertising division showing the triangle of Chapel Hill, Durham and Raleigh (N.C. University, Duke University and State College) as the focal point of a statewide group of research laboratories for industry, further prove that research is a vital industry in itself.

Attention presently is directed mainly to industrial projects, perhaps because the people are accustomed to agricultural research. The Central Experiment Station at Raleigh and some two dozen branches throughout the state are being supplemented by numerous private enterprise "test farms" for field and forest crops.

The fact is that there is little difference now between the needs of agriculture—including field crops, forest products and livestock—and the needs of industry, which is nothing more than the processing of raw materials derived from fields, forests, mines and streams. It is impossible to distinguish between the level of first growth and final product as to value of research.

LABOR — Criticism of the state Democratic organization for failure to adequately recognize organized labor in its official campaign family were a bit premature.

Chairman John D. Larkins Jr. announced today the completion of personnel on a 15-man committee representing AFL-CIO and the railroad brotherhoods for a united labor front in support of the Democratic ticket all the way. Membership is distributed all over the state and comes from many different trades and crafts. The objective is to see that workers are registered and gotten to the polls. It is conceded that preponderant majority among organized labor will vote Democratic.

ROADS — Federal, State and municipal governments are not the only big roadbuilders in North Carolina. Latest issue of the Woodland News Letter, house organ of West Virginia Pulp and Paper Company tells of a big road project in its vast timberlands in Dare, Hyde and Tyrrell counties. The plan contemplates 215 miles of roads at a total cost $1,737,000.

The newsletter comments that this road program, never equalled by private enterprise in this section, is evidenced of the faith the company has in North Carolina. The roads are being built in territory which many thought was destined to be an everlasting wilderness.

The roads serve the double purpose of making the pulp wood accessible and for aiding in fire control. The importance of the paper industry is emphasized by the fact, according to Charles H. Jenkins of the C&D board, that every person in the United States uses about 420 pounds of paper a year.

AROUND-WAY MAPS — Why do the cartographers who make the resort and trade area maps insist upon urging business to go away instead of come in? Nearly all these maps have little arrows or other direction indicators around the edges pointing outward, with figures indicating the distance to some place not shown on the map.

Why not turn the little arrows around and note the distance "from" the place mentioned? The extra cost would be only the ink required to print two extra letters. The psychological effect would be to encourage the folks to come for a visit rather than to get the heck out to somewhere else.

Another instance of wrong ways Corrians is the one-way traffic pattern around the Robert E. Lee Hotel in Winston-Salem. The hotel is surrounded by one-way streets, all routed so that passengers from buses must load in mid-street right in line of traffic, and automobile passengers must slide under the steering wheel or take a chance in traffic lanes. When the expressway through the city is completed sometime next year, it is expected that the traffic pattern will be re-arranged to avoid the inconvenience now experienced.

It is not necessary to wait for a road to be built in order to revise maps so that people will be invited in instead of out.

Other Editors Are Saying... Shortsighted? Not In N. C.

(Charlotte News)
Barely 40 years ago an East Coast gentleman bravely predicted that the day would come when there would be "several hundred" horseless carriages in the big cities.

But the history of the world is replete with the short-sightedness of man. Nobody realized the value of the first wheel. Fire was under-rated by cavemen for centuries. We can be grateful—eternally grateful—that North Carolinians in positions of leadership are not underestimating the importance of the atom.

Nuclear energy is the greatest force ever unleashed by man. It has brought many problems—technical, social, moral. Those problems will be solved some day because the future is alive with promise.

How do we know? Close on the heels of reports that major powers now have the area are launching a joint pioneering venture in the field of atomic power. Gov. Hodges has announced that the state itself will explore nuclear opportunities.

Said Mr. Hodges in remarks before the State Board of Conservation and Development in Winston-Salem this week: "We are all aware of the atom. This is the atomic era. We are all proud of the pioneer project at North Carolina State College with the construction of the atomic reactor there, but have we kept step with the unbelievable progress in this field? And have we used and protected our reactor as we should? We were years ahead of others but we falter today. The atomic era is here now. We must be ready to meet it.

He declared that he would name a representative committee on atomic energy which will be made up of leaders from agriculture, industry, business, education, medical science, and other fields to keep in touch with "atomic developments." They will help guide state planning for the great opportunities of the present and future," he said.

Besides, preferring a rustic life at his beautiful Mount Vernon, Washington suffered from ill health, and he was shocked at the opposition's abuse of him. Some historians believe that the ambitious Hamilton, who yearned for the Presidency himself, had a great influence on Washington's anti-third term viewpoint. Knowing that he is on his way out, the members of Congress, both Republicans and Democrats, will be under no compulsion to accede to a President's legislative proposals.

PRECIPITATES' FACTIONAL SQUABBLES Moreover, this knowledge will precipitate personal and factional squabbles within Congress and within both parties. In fact, the struggle for the Republican Presidential nomination four years hence has begun already. The partisans of Vice President Nixon, Senator Knowland and other possibilities are pressing their favorites' claims. GOP liberals and conservatives, too, are struggling for supremacy.

The Hard Way To See Series

Yesterday morning a week ago I was put to sleep on one of the operating tables at Pitt Memorial Hospital and a very good local bone specialist cut a growth out of my knee.

Jim Boykin, one of the Pitt County Highway Patrolmen, came out to see me Friday afternoon and the first thing he said was: "Some people'll do anything for a column." Jim uttered an untruth, because I didn't go out there and let them work me over just to write a column. I'd never do that just to have something to write about. I had a lot better reason.

It was World Series time and I'd be able to stay in bed and look at it. I thought the operation was well timed. Right before I was put to sleep I asked one of the nurses to be sure and get me awake in time to see the second game of the series and the lady in green said okay. She was as good as her word, too. My roommate told me it took the both of 'em about 20 minutes to wake me. Between the nurse slapping me, pulling my nose and bathing my face in cold water and him calling me they finally got the job done.

I came out of it about 10 minutes before the game started and you talk about somebody punchy? It was a funny sorta punchiness, though. I could talk plainly and think clearly (Boykin will probably have something cute to say about me being able to think clearly — just thought I'd beat him to the punch), but I was seeing two and three of everything. I looked at. Matter of fact, there in the second inning I saw Yogi Berra hit two home runs with just one swing and I saw eight people score, but the Yanks only realized four runs, of course.

By the way, the fellow I shared the room with had a TV set. He had been operated on for a slipped disc about a week previously and told me that he was "tired of just staying in the sack with nothing to do." So he ordered the set and we were fixed for entertainment — of a sorts, anyway.

But here's the clincher. There wasn't really anything wrong with my knee. I just told my employers that so I could see the series. Of course they don't know it, but let me tell you this: I REALLY pulled one over on them.

Notebook On Life

Belafonte Prefers Theater

Harry Belafonte can best be compared to a deft sculptor. He can take an audience—night club, theatre or TV—and mold them into whatever mood he desires.

In New York's swank Empire Room of the Waldorf Astoria he transformed ermine and mink wrapped dowagers into cheering, willing community sing groups. He delighted them with a variety of melodic fare ranging from calypso to jazz and from folk to pop tunes.

But, he admits, night clubs are not his "cup of tea." It seemed strange that with tributes still shimmering in the air, Harry could ever consider ever singing anywhere but a night club.

"Certainly it's exciting and it's great to get that kind of response when you work a theater like the Greek Theater in Los Angeles and then go into a night club, it's an enormous letdown," he said. Belafonte, who has hit the top in the night club circuit, starred in a successful movie, "Carmen Jones," and had the distinction of having three record albums listed among the top ten all at the same time, has received all most as much critical acclaim for a dramatic flair as he has as a vocal artist.

His most recent sorties into performance styled to the legitimate theater rather than night clubs included a two-week one-man show at the Greek Theater, where he drew a capacity 5,000 at every performance; a concert at Lewisish Stadium in New York, where he attracted a record 25,000 and a touring musical show—or show with music—called "Sing, Man, Sing."

Belafonte's next commitment is the shooting of a movie in Jamaica. Following that will be another film, "Emperor Jones." "Emperor Jones" also will present the opportunity for the enormously gifted 29-year-old artist to display other wares from his grab-bag of talent. He will write at least three of the songs to be used in a new version of Eugene O'Neill's 1921 play. "This will be a drama with music," Belafonte said.

During moments in which he is not occupied with making records, singing in night clubs or working in movies, Belafonte pecks away at a typewriter, working on a book titled "Streets I Have Walked."

Discussing his plans, the serious and searching thought he has given to the matter seeps through as if he were making the decision all over again. In a point-by-point explanation, he said: "In the coldest mechanical terms I'd rather perform in a theater than in a night club because (1) It is more difficult to do two shows in a night club than one in an evening in a theater; (2) There is a large, appreciative teen-age audience, but they can't stand the tariff of a night club; (3) A night club has physical limits which reduce the size of audience and I don't want to be that hard to get to; (4) A night club is restrictive in the sense of an artist not being able to do any real costuming or using a wide range of material, and this can be harmful artistically; and finally, in a cold financial sense, there is a limit

Strength for the Day

By EARL L. DOUGLASS
VICTORY OVER SELF AND PAIN

Robert Louis Stevenson was at one and the same time a great man and a great literary figure. He wrote in many different moods and forms. His poems are a delight to children even to this day. His prose has about it a vigor and cheer which elevates the mind of the reader and causes him to close the book and put it down finally with contentment and good cheer.

Yet Robert Louis Stevenson was a life-long invalid. In his diary we read these words: "For fourteen years I have not had a day of health. I have wakened sick and gone to bed weary; but I have done my work unflinchingly. I have written in bed, and written out of it, written in hemorrhages, written in sickness, written torn by coughing, written when my head swam from weakness. And still the battle goes on—ill or well is a trifle, so long as the work goes on. I was made for a contest, and the Powers have so willed that my battle field should be this dingy, malarious bed, and the medicine bottle."

In such a statement we behold valour at its highest. Here was a man who was never on a battle field yet his whole life was a battle—and one that eventuated in cheerful, glorious victory.

Retailers And Their Thieves

By ELMER ROESSNER

A store owner had a curious, enclosed balcony of plywood built against a rear wall of the main floor. Over each main aisle there was an eye-high slot in the plywood.

"I see you're ready for the tide of Christmas shoppers," a visiting salesman remarked one day. "You sure can spot them through those peepholes."

"Right and wrong," said the merchant. "I'm ready for the shoppers. But I couldn't spot them through those peepholes. The only way I could get a store detective into that balcony would be with a derrick and one person might bring it crashing down."

"What's it good for?" the salesman asked.

"Oh, I'll hang Christmas decorations on it next month. But it's best use is to make shoplifters think like you thought: that the balcony was erected to spot them. Some won't be sure whether that is the real purpose, and those that do will doubt whether anyone is looking at them at any given moment. But most of them won't take a chance. Let them do their Christmas shoplifting some place else."

LOSSES IN HUNDREDS OF MILLIONS

Retailers' losses to shoplifters are high. Various estimates have been made; estimates by companies selling protective services run the highest. But even after self-interest is discounted, the total is frighteningly large; perhaps it is $300,000,000 a year. Added to this must be another $100,000,000 or so that retailers spent for store detectives and other security services. As a nonshoplifter, you might look at the figures. But even if you are a shoplifter's toll, your next suit might be a little cheaper.

Most large stores maintain large security forces, which cost merchants of several millions to operate with local and state police and Federal officers. The means are of several kinds, from nothing should be said about it; at this moment a few are writing as they read this; they think the subject should never be mentioned. They fear weak persons, reading about shoplifting, may try it. Perhaps, but most statistics indicate that losses to shoplifters who act on impulse are tiny compared with the take of professionals.

Some merchants think arrests should be avoided because of the "bad publicity" to the store. Others believe that arrests and convictions, widely publicized, are the best methods of discouraging pilferers.

TV AS A STORE DETECTIVE

Closed circuit television is being used by the Bamberger department store in Newark, N. J., to trap shoplifters. Automatic television cameras scan aisles, and show what they see in a central control room. This has frightened away many shoplifters and has trapped others who didn't believe the newspaper stories about it. Apprehensions have increased 2 per cent since the store reports it is now working on a method whereby the television monitors can alert store detectives with short-wave walkie-talkie sets.

The national publicity gained by Bamberger's open attack on the problem has caused many other stores to consider closed-circuit TV. It also helps the effectiveness of such devices as the slotted balcony described in the first paragraph.

That idea, incidentally, is not copyrighted; any merchant can use it. He can also construct a stronger balcony and put spotters in it. Or he may hang up mirrors at strategic points in the store. Shoplifters will not know whether the mirrors are angled so that a detective can watch; whether they are one-way mirrors behind which a spotter lurks, or whether they are just a threat. That's two-to-one that the shoplifter will work elsewhere.

Another gimmick: mount a few movie cameras on posts and walls, aimed along busy aisles. No one will know whether they are blinds or whether they are automatically recording pilferage. Best: raise the price of such temporary employees as fast as time and facilities permit. Nothing pays professional shoplifting gangs more than a Christmas rush plus two or three members of the gang on the inside to tip off security procedure and to push valuable goods to other members of the mob.

Students Took Part In 2 Local Events

MARTHA JANE PIERCE Greenville High School Reporter Four Greenville High students were guests entertainers for the annual Livestock Banquet last Wednesday night. Ann Peaden, junior, sang and played a ukulele. Judy Corbett, senior, played the piano and accompanied Ronnie Dail, sophomore, as he sang "Autumn Leaves." Memrie Mosier, senior, danced for the group.

Greenville High School also had students participating in the annual Greenville Horse Show. The horse show was put on to raise money for the Mental Health Association. Judy Jolly, JoAnne Parks, Barbara Davis and Martha Pierce were ribbon girls. Susan Willis, Millie Overton, and Goldis Starling, freshmen, rode horses in the show.

Plotted by Edwin Wilkerson, the traffic committee members can be seen at their various posts throughout the building. The traffic committee members assist with the traffic problems caused by the crowded conditions at Greenville High School.

Seniors of this committee are Edwin Wilkerson, Mickie Sumrell, Nancy Brown, Frances Smith, Grayson Waldrop, Dennis Harris, and Willis Stancil. The junior class is represented by Bob Bilbro, Bunny Overton, Royd E. Manning, Douglas Allen, Elizabeth White, and Godfrey Oakley. Members representing the sophomores are Cath-

First Presbyterian Announcements

The morning worship at First Presbyterian Church will have the minister, the Rev. Leonard Topping, speaking on a subject of interest to all members and visitors. "Sons and Daughters of Encouragement." All who have not yet found a Church home in Greenville will be welcome to the services, both at 11 o'clock and also at the 9:45 Sunday School hour. There are classes for all age groups.

Much of the life of the Church for this week is centering about the emphasis on Church Extension, and the part each person has in promoting the extension of the programs. All Junior High and Senior High young people will find a place of a happy association in the youth groups.

The Women of the Church will have their regular meeting at 8 on Monday for a Church Extension film, and on Tuesday at 8 will be a part of a meeting open to the public at which time the Rev. Virgil Pao of our Church Extension work in Ybor City, Tampa Fla. will speak. All the Church of this area will be included in this program. Wednesday there will be a covered dish luncheon at the home of Mrs. S.M. Crisp, 1201 E. Fifth St. and a study of the Church Extension book.

Wednesday night at 6:45 the men of the Church will hold their regular monthly meeting with the privilege of hearing the Rev. Robert Bluford, minister of the Western Boulevard Presbyterian Church Raleigh.

Recital Artist Launch Drive

Elizabeth Drake (above), pianist and faculty member at East Carolina, will be presented in recital Sunday afternoon by the department of music at the college. The program will take place at 3:30 in the Austin auditorium and will be open to the public.

Miss Drake has won the approval of Greenville audiences through a number of recitals given in the past few years and has been given praise by critics because of her fine technique and her artistic and sympathetic interpretation of works for the piano.

Her program Sunday afternoon will include Mozart's Sonata in G, K. 576, six of the Liebeslieder waltzes of Brahms, Chopin's Fantasia, op. 49, and other works.

The recital will be the first in a series of programs by faculty members at the college to be sponsored during the school year by the East Carolina department of music.

Movies Please Nobody, Says Hollywood Rebel

By CYNTHIA LOWRY
NEW YORK (AP)—"Motion picture companies," said producer-director Robert Aldrich, "are still looking for the mass market. They are trying to satisfy everybody—so they are pleasing nobody."
Aldrich, who in the past 10 years has worked in just about every behind-the-camera job in the studios, wants to make movies suitable fare only for mature, thoughtful audiences.
But, a realist at 37, Aldrich also concedes little chance for controversial films at the present time.
"It's not so much the producers as it is the financial interests which prevent them," he said. "The are really the ones superimposing their attitudes on your taste; they just won't give you the money to make such films."
The husky director is not only a Hollywood rebel. In pot-shooting at "financial interests," Aldrich is also flying in the face of his family connections. He is the son of Edward B. Aldrich, president of the Pawtucket, R.I. Times, a nephew of Winthrop Aldrich, former board chairman of the Chase National Bank and now ambassador to the Court of St. James, and his Aunt Abby Aldrich married John D. Rockefeller, Jr., which makes the Rockefeller brothers his first cousins.
These and eminent family connections, however, had nothing to do with Aldrich's rise in show business.
He started as messenger boy in one of the Hollywood studios. After the war, he began climbing the directorial ladder and, on the side, wrote screen plays. In 1951 he was an associate producer on "Ten Tall Men," and later directed "Apache" and "Vera Cruz." Four years ago he made a number of television series. Last year he made his first independent picture, Clifford Odet's "The Big Knife," which won the Venice Film Festival award. "Autumn Leaves," which he directed, won the Berlin film festival award. "Attack," is his latest picture. His films have been doing well at the box-office, but he's not satisfied.

"For the most part, we don't make new stuff," Aldrich grumbled. "Once we brought out a Model T, and we've just been repainting it every year since. We just aren't making new models."

Disabilities Aren't Always An Insurmountable Work Barrier

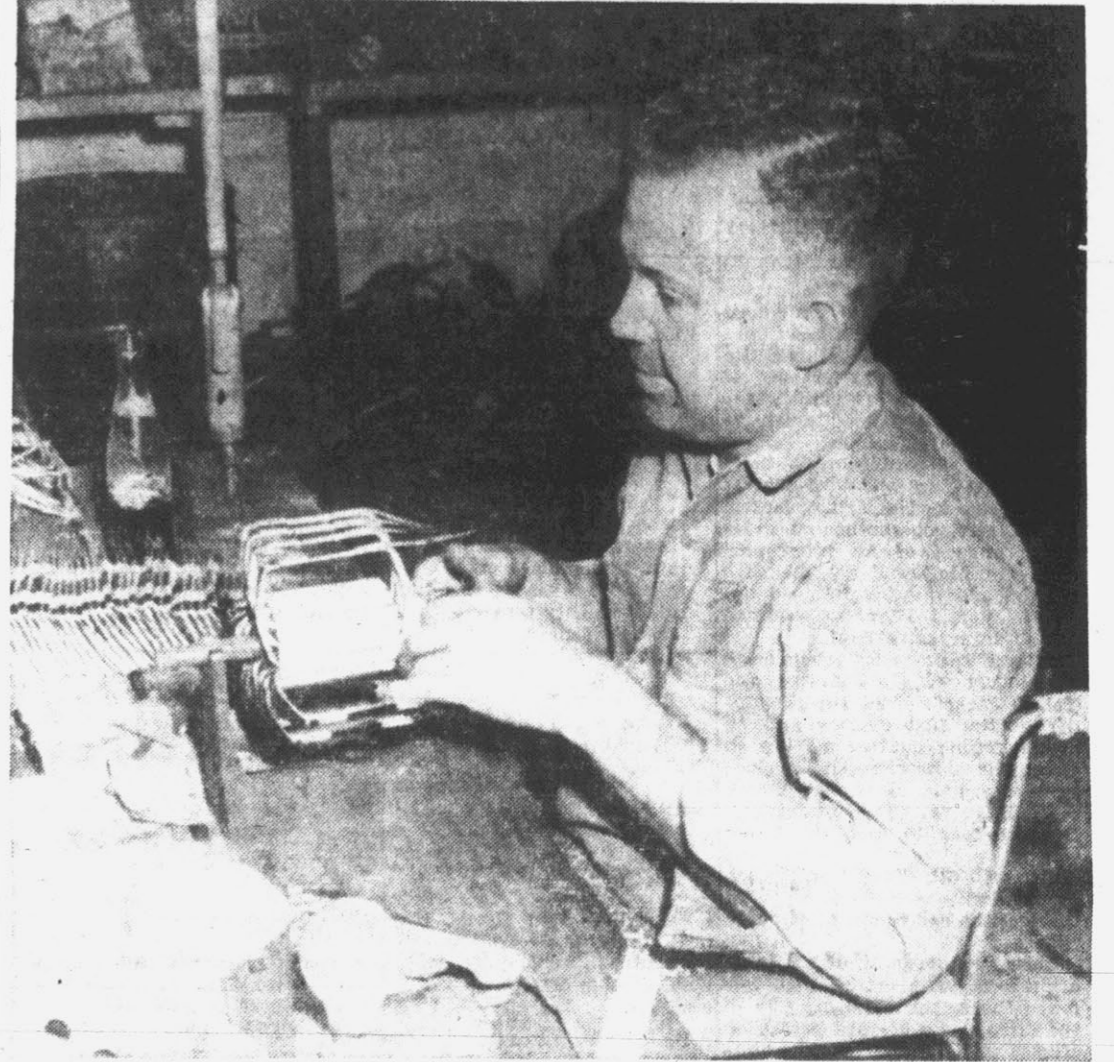

By ANNE SINGLETON
Reflector Staff Writer
"I guess I get as tired sitting as someone would standing all the time," laughed Job Parker.
Parker is a paraplegic and confined to a wheelchair. According to "Stedman's Medical Dictionary," paraplegia is a "paralysis of both lower extremities and also of more or less of the trunk."
"I'm better satisfied working than I would be staying at home all the time," he said. Parker has been employed with the Cox Armature Works for the past two and a half years. His job is rewinding armatures, a part of a car generator.
Percy Cox, his employer, stated that for the particular job he was employed for, "Job has done a lot better than any other man could. I tried at least a dozen before him."
"He hasn't been absent as much as the other boys, either," Cox continued.
Automobile Accident
In 1952 Parker was in an automobile accident which resulted in his paralysis. He was at Duke Hospital for several months before going to McGuire's Army Hospital, Richmond, Virginia.
At McGuire's he met many other paraplegics. There he underwent a thorough exercise and rehabilitation program. In April 1954 Parker was released.
William H. Brown, Vocational Rehabilitation Counselor, Greenville, was notified that Parker was interested in finding a job. He contacted Cox who "played a tremendously important part," according to Brown, in this human story.

Drives Own Car
Every morning Job drives the eight or nine miles from his home on the Tarboro highway where he lives with his mother and father. He has a 1956 car equipped with all hand control features.
Both the gas and brake control levers are on the left side of the steering wheel. The dimmer switch is located on the dash board. When Parker bought his new car recently, the men at the Armature Works transferred the hand control mechanism for him.
Parker has a collapsible wheelchair which he carries in his car. This spunky young man easily manipulates himself from the car into the car without any assistance.
Car Races
One of his "favorites" is the midget and stock car races. Often he goes to Wilson and Raleigh to see them. Parker also enjoys the micro racing here in Greenville.
"I've thought about driving one of the cars myself," he commented with a smile. "But I can't get into one of them."
"I never catch much, but I like to go fishing," he noted. During his vacation in July he drove up to McGuire's and went on a fishing trip with several other paraplegics and "Walking" friends from there. As for the biggest catch it usually "just two or three pounds."
He isn't too happy with the Serles results... he is a strong Dodger fan! At McGuire's he participated in wheelchair basketball.

Hard Worker
"I know many other paraplegics from McGuire's who have found jobs rewinding electric motors working in lawyers offices, studying radio, and doing many other jobs that don't require moving around," Parker concluded.
According to Carlton Cates, a fellow worker, "Job is a nice, hard working boy... really done a good job."
Woodrow Boyd also works at Cox Armature Works. He receives 90 per cent disability from the Government. His legs were injured during World War II when he stepped on a land mine.
Boyd rewinds armatures and has been working with the Company for five years.
NEPH Week
National Employ the Physically Handicapped Week's purpose is to "get employers to realize and understand that properly placed handicapped persons are as good, if not better, than normal workers," explained Brown.

This vast service for the handicapped is not performed, though, in just one week's time. This week is a time when the workers mark the beginning of a new full year of organized effort.
It is also the time of the year when the committees pause to consider accomplishments, evaluate progress made during the past year, and plan for the forthcoming 57 weeks.
The Veterans Administration, Division of Vocational Rehabilitation, State Agency for the Blind, State Employment Service, and the Veterans Employment Service all coordinate their facilities and services effectively so that the handicapped person's total problem of vocational adjustment will be served.
"Whatever it is that anyone can do best, the needs of society require that we discover and develop them to the utmost in order that that individual can render a service to society of which he or she is capable," stated President Eisenhower.

Brown elaborated further on this point by explaining the main aim of the Vocational Rehabilitation office. It is to "emphasize the handicapped person's abilities, instead of their disabilities," he pointed out. If a handicapped person is suitably placed he will be a steady, conscientious worker because he will appreciate his job he concluded.
Greenville Vocational Rehabilitation office is now working actively with over one thousand handicapped persons in the surrounding 25 counties. These persons have varied handicaps ranging from scarred faces resulting from burns or cuts to victims of hemophilia (people who bleed profusely from the slightest cut).

HAPPY WORKING—Pictured above is Job Parker rewinding armatures. Although he is confined to a wheelchair, he has been working at the Cox Armature Works for the past two and a half years.

Colonial Tradesmen Relied On Symbols For Non-Readers

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. (AP)—Time was when a shopkeeper didn't depend on words to convey what he had to sell. Instead, he used signs and symbols.
The time was the 18th century, a period when many could not read.
Samples of colonial tradesmen's ingenuity in identifying their shops with distinctive signs are preserved in this restored colonial capital.
Among the most colorful salesmen in the 18th century were the apothecaries or colonial druggists. Some used the familiar mortar and pestle symbol to identify their shops, but others displayed the horn of the mythical unicorn or a rhinoceros.

If these symbols seem odd emblems for a druggist, historians point out that the horn of the legendary unicorn was once thought to possess medicinal or magical properties, particularly as an antidote or preventive for poison.
Some apothecaries used the horn for drinking cups. Others ground horns into powder and used it as a drug. Although alleged to be from unicorns, the horns actually were obtained from the male narwhal found in arctic waters, the rhinoceros or other animals.

Tailors used the golden fleece, a lamb, or an article of clothing as the central object in their signs.
There were fairly standard signs which are still used in this modern era of neon and bright lights. A striped pole indicated a barber and blood-letters, a horse's head signified a blacksmith or farrier, a golden ball meant a gold and silversmith, and a woman's head frequently marked a milliner's shop.
Colonial grocers used three sugar loaves to designate their stores,

Moslem Charity Dates Back Hundreds Of Years

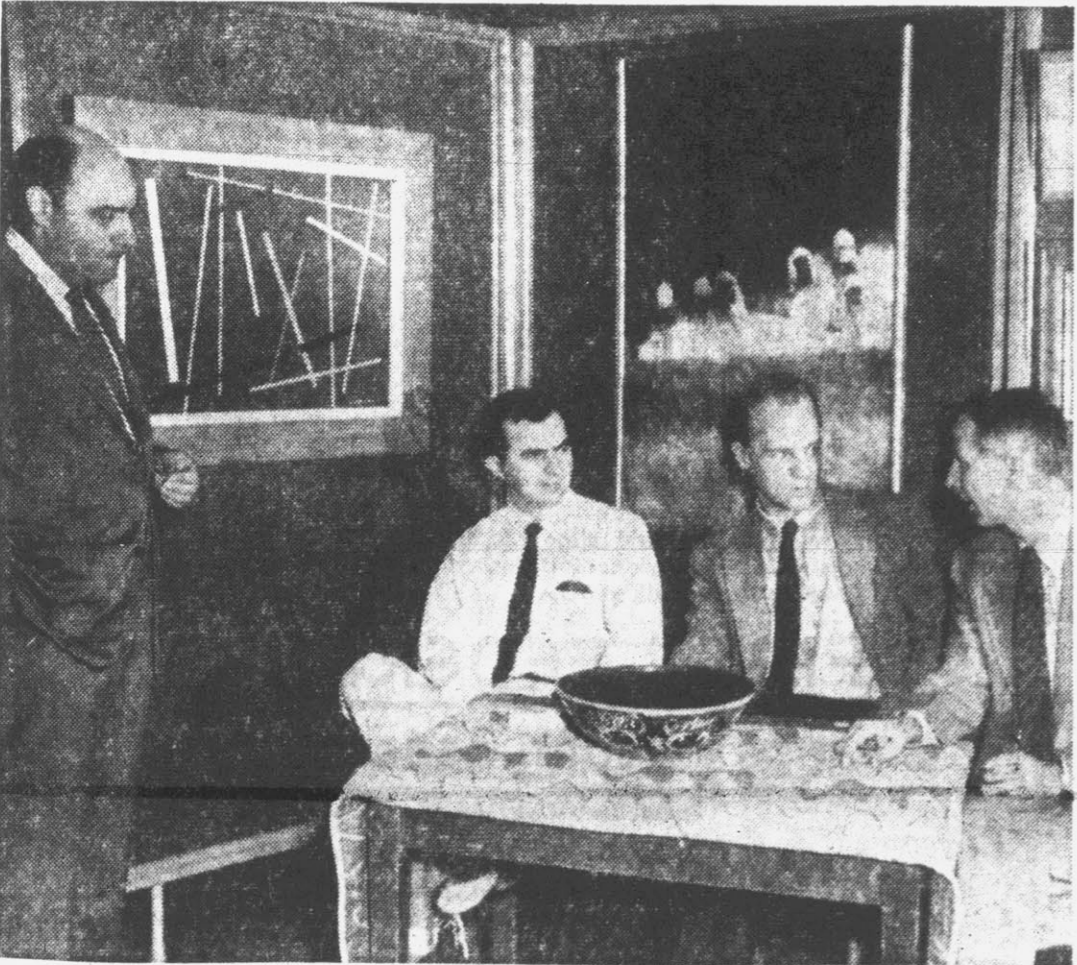

By WILTON WYNN
JERUSALEM, (AP)—Hundreds of street waifs and widows receive their daily bread in Jerusalem today because charity ranks with holy war among Moslem virtues.
A free soup-kitchen set up over 400 years ago as an act of atonement by a Turkish conqueror following a bloody invasion of Palestine still does food to the city's poor.
The Ottoman Turkish Conqueror Sultan Selim engaged in a terrible slaughter when he marched into Israel in the 15th century. But after his conquest, he sought to atone for the bloodshed by acts of charity in Jerusalem. His wife Sultana Khasgich joined him in his project.
They endowed the "tekia Khasgich", as the kitchen is called, using funds from a tax on several Turkish villages which the Sultan controlled.
Now the "tekia" is one of several charities supported by religious endowments.

The "tekia" opens its doors regularly at 11 a.m. The long line of the poor file into a room where Sheikh Jamil Younes Hussein does out nutritious wheat soup which is the "tekia's" regular fare.
Moslem sheikhs in charge of the "tekia" say the daily act of charity has been carried out continuously since the time of Sultan Selim except for a few weeks during World War I.
Grain was so scarce then that none was left for the poor. After a time, however, the general of the Turkish army in Jerusalem diverted enough supplies from his troops to allow the kitchen to resume its work.
Although little known to the Western world, the "tekia" is a common institution in Islamic countries and has been ever since the Prophet Mohamed listed almsgiving as one of the pillars of the Moslem faith.

ECC Faculty Members Staging Art Exhibition

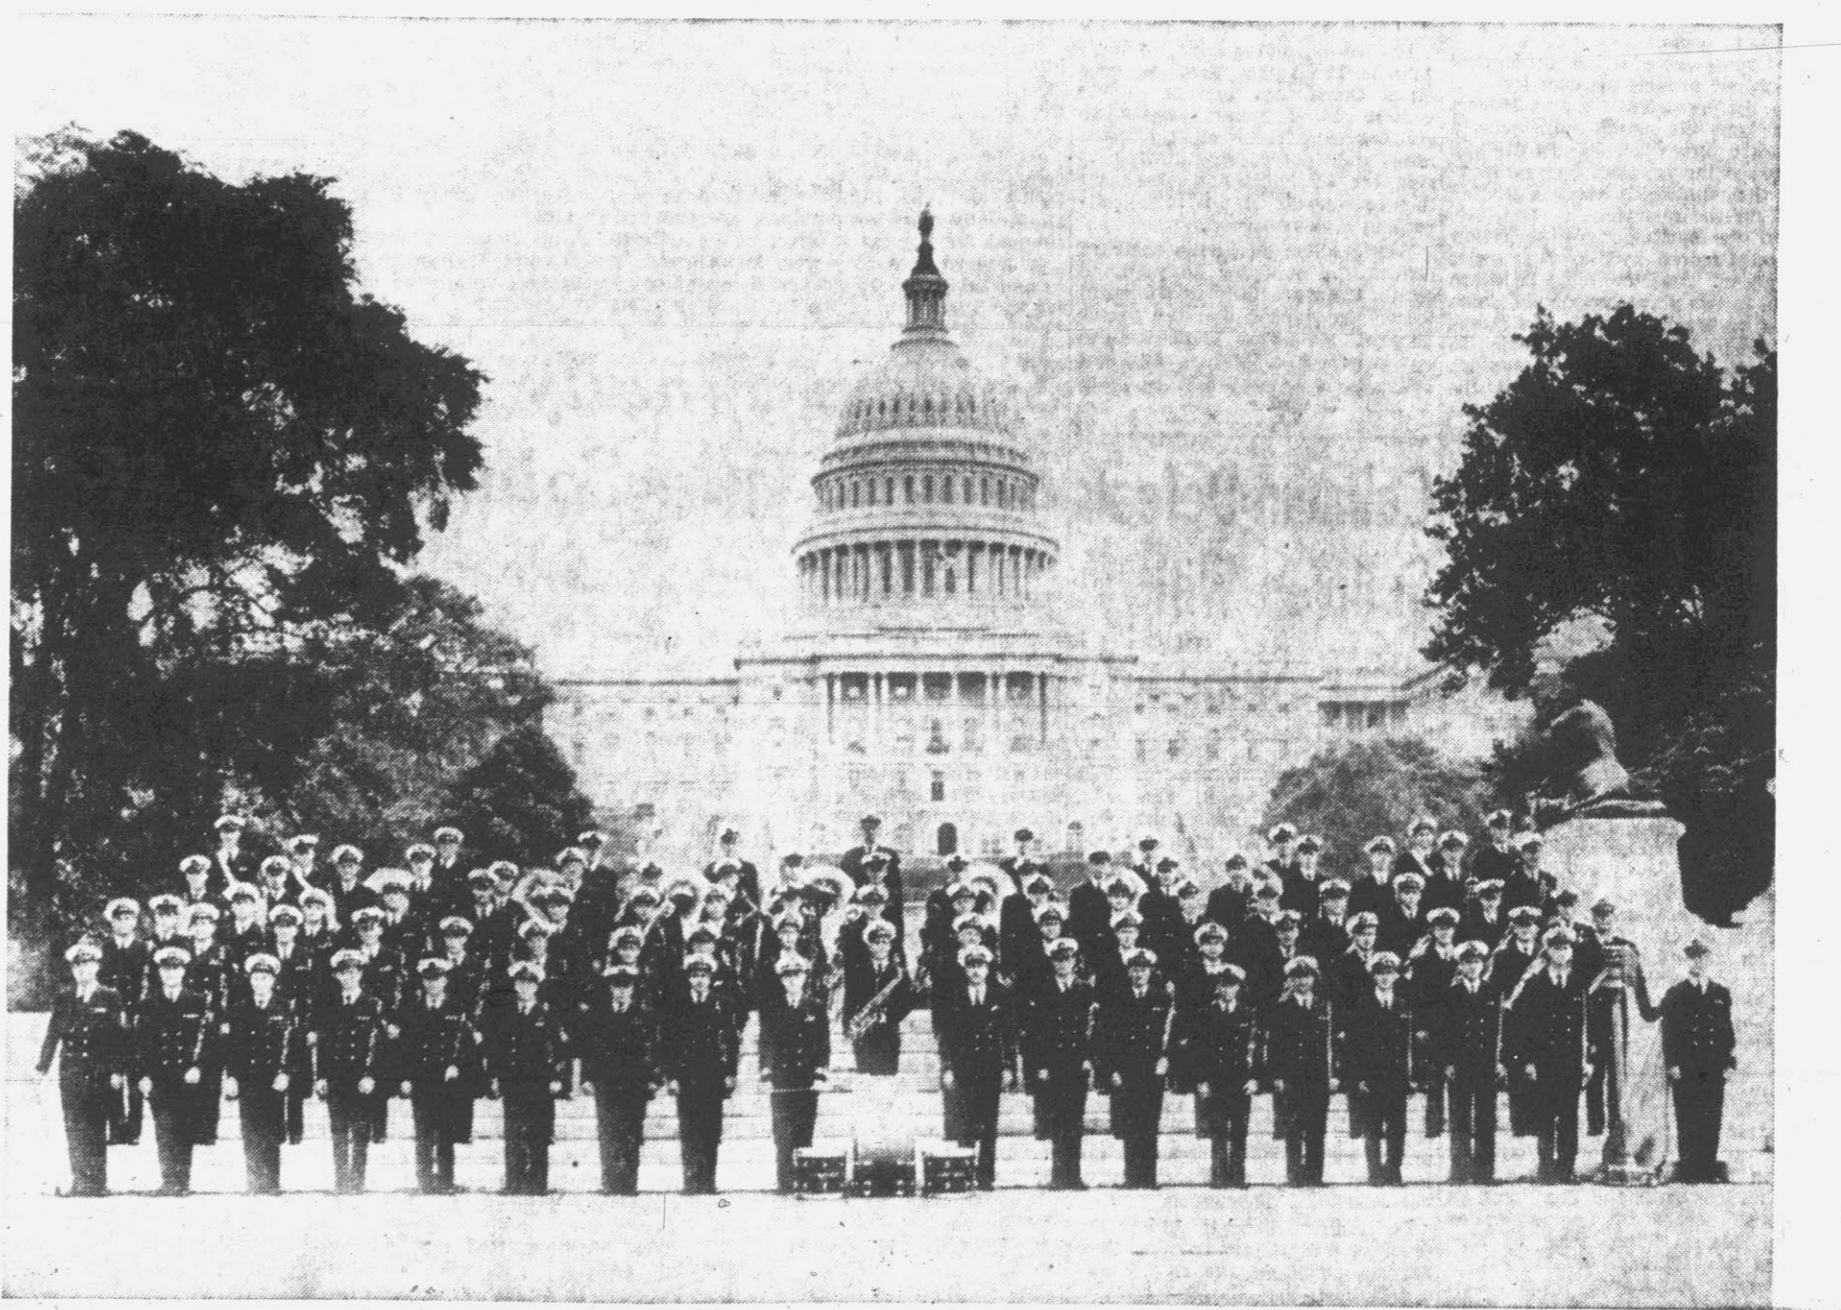

Works by four faculty members of the department of art at East Carolina College are now being exhibited in the foyer of the Joyner Memorial Library on the campus. Paintings by Dr. Wellington B. Gray, John Gordon, and Francis Lee Neel and paintings and ceramics by William Persick are on view.
The art show opens an Exhibition Series to be sponsored by the department of art during the 1956-1957 term at the college.
Dr. Gray, who joined the East Carolina faculty this fall as director of the department of art, is represented in the current exhibition by paintings which illustrate the diversity of his style as a painter and his experiments in new ways of painting and new media.

"Smoke in the City," an interpretation of Chicago's Loop at night, is a large painting in enamels and an example of the dribble style made famous by the late Jackson Pollock. Outstanding for its brilliant colors, "Transversals" has a mathematical basis for its subject matter.
Mr. Neel is exhibiting abstractions and realism in oil and one watercolor, including "Spring" a yellow and grey abstraction, and "Power," an abstraction in warm and cool colors.
Ceramics by Mr. Persick contribute to the variety of the show. The modeling of the pieces and

U. S. Navy Band In College Concert Monday

The United States Navy Band will appear at East Carolina College Monday, October 15, in a concert opening the 1956-57 Entertainment Series on the campus. Patrons of the series from various localities in Eastern North Carolina and members of the college community will make up the audience at the program by the "World's Finest."
The concert by the band is scheduled for 8 p.m. in the Wright auditorium.
The United States Navy Band is composed of approximately one hundred individual artists, each of whom could take his place with the world's greatest instrumental organizations. The band contains within itself a complete symphony orchestra, which presents the works of the great masters. Its ultra modern "Swingphonette" section gives sparkling personality to light operas and the latest "hit tunes."
In addition to appearances in outstanding band in America and one which would go down in Naval annals as the foremost musical organization ever to wear the Navy Blue.
Tickets will be on sale in the lobby of the Wright auditorium Monday night, according to Chairman James W. Butler of the East Carolina Entertainment Committee. Mail orders should be addressed to him, in care of the Alumni Office at East Carolina College.

Elizabeth City scored its first play from scrimmage and then kept the pressure on Greenville last night to win a 33-0 victory from the Homecoming Phantoms in College Stadium.

A 26-yard scoring pass from Nicky Hilgert to Bobby King on the fifth play of the game gave Elizabeth City a winning margin in the Northeastern Conference game. The victory was Elizabeth City's second in three conference games and the Phantoms' third loss in four league contests.

Hilgert turned out to be the Yellow Jackets' big man. He got plenty of capable assistance, however, from halfbacks Bill Burgess and Jay Aydlett and a line led by center Pete Fearing.

Billy Sermons, Greenville captain who is apparently headed for a repeat of his 1955 All-Conference honors, was Greenville's fair-haired boy again last night. He personally accounted for 39 of Greenville's net of 44 yards rushing and played a good defensive game for the Phantoms.

Burgess, a hard-running halfback, picked up two third-quarter touchdowns for the Yellow Jackets and Hilgert got another on a 24-yard runback of an intercepted pass. Pat McDowell got the fifth EC touchdown on a fumbled option play and Burgess accounted for all three extra points.

After Elizabeth City got its quick first touchdown, the Phantoms and Yellow Jackets spent the remainder of the first quarter and all of the second quarter playing on Greenville territory. The Jackets made a couple of threats but it took Hilgert's pass intercepted and run-back to cash in on the scoring.

Elizabeth City started fast in the second half, scoring both times they got the ball in the third quarter.

Their first second-half TD came after a 56-yard march that followed the kickoff. The big play in the drive was a 36-yard pass from Hilgert and Burgess that the halfback carried to the two before he was bull-dogged from behind by Charles Roberts. The payoff was a one-yard drive play by Burgess over his left guard.

After Greenville failed to gain in three plays after the kick-off, the Phantoms gambled on a fourth-down-and-six but Sermons made only four yards and the Yellow Jackets took over on the Greenville 48. It took them nine plays to score.

Burgess scored on a three-yard pitch out around his own left end but, before that, he and Hilgert had kept the march going with a 17-yard pass which moved the ball into scoring position. Burgess kicked the point with about a minute left in the quarter.

In the fourth period, the Yellow Jackets scored on their first series of plays. The Phantoms failed to gain in two plays and a third down pass by Mack Roebuck was intercepted by Fearing and returned to the 40. Elizabeth City picked up a first down on the 29 but the Yellow Jackets were stalled momentarily by a rash of incomplete passes.

Fourth down pass that fell incomplete was nullified, however, by a personal foul against Greenville that moved the ball to the ten. Aydlett went to the six from that point and McDowell put all his marbles on a keep play over right tackle on the next down. McDowell was hit hard at the line of scrimmage and fumbled but in the wild scramble that followed Elizabeth City recovered in the end zone for the touchdown. McDowell was credited with the score and Burgess kicked the point to complete the scoring.

Neither team was very consistent in its ground game but the Yellow Jackets unveiled a hot passing attack that got them out of trouble time and time again. All told the Jackets completed six of 15 passes for 122 yards and intercepted three Greenville passes.

The Phantoms completed only one of 14 passes and actually got beyond the 50-yard line for only one play. That was when Robert Conway recovered a fumble on the Elizabeth City 44 in the fourth quarter and the Phantoms lost the ball on their first play after that when Moowel intercepted a pass.

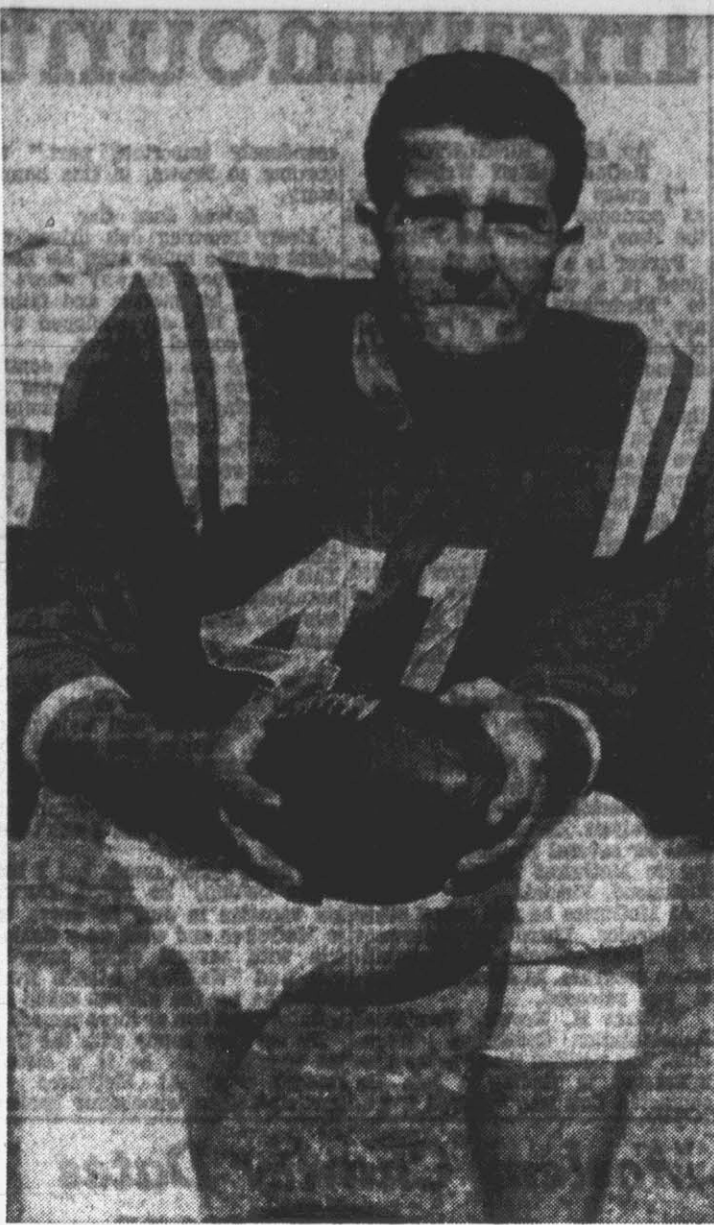

The loss gives the Phantoms an overall record of two wins and four losses. They play in New Bern next Friday.

Scoring summary:
Elizabeth City 7-6 13-7-33
Greenville 0-0 0-0 0-0
Elizabeth City scoring: Touchdowns: King, Burgess 2, Hilgert, and McDowell. Points after touchdown: Burgess 3.

FRIDAY'S FIGHTS
By The Associated Press
CLEVELAND — Rory Calhoun, 160½, White Plains, N.Y., stopped John L. Sullivan, 162, England, 8.
SAO PAULO, Brazil — Paulo De Jesus, Brazil, outpointed Oscar Pitta, Argentina, 10, (welterweights).

BUCKY DENNIS—This 6-4, 225 pound Portsmouth, Va. lad, who played freshman ball for the University of Virginia, worked his way into a starting guard berth for East Carolina this season and is making a good bid for All-North State honors as a lineman. He is slated to handle a tackle position for the Buc tonight as they tangle with Western Carolina in the Pirate Homecoming contest.

BILLY Helms—Standing 6-2 and weighing 195 pounds, this husky fellow from Monroe has been a first unit end for East Carolina for the past two seasons. A senior, Helms has been a top defensive and offensive flanker for Coach Jack Boone's outfit during his career at ECC. He is expected to be a prime target for quarterback Gary Mattocks' passes against WCC tonight.

DICK MONDS—After playing outstanding high school ball at Dunn, this 6-foot, 200 pound griddler worked three years of service ball and is now a starting guard for ECC. Monds is a junior and a key defensive man in the Pirate setup. An excellent tackler, he will be the big man in the middle of the Buccaneer line tonight when Western Carolina visits College Stadium. (ECC Photos by Henry).

By BILLY ARNOLD
Reflector Sports Editor

Word came from the East Carolina football camp this morning that three previously injured first unit linemen, Ed Emory, Charlie Smith and Herry Brooks, will be back in the lineup when Western Carolina invades College Stadium tonight.

Coach Jack Boone verified the reports that the three husky boys "will see limited action and will definitely strengthen out first unit."

Both Emory and Brooks, starting guard and tackle at the season's opening, suffered leg injuries in the first tilt of the year and have been out of action since that time. Smith was injured three weeks ago.

"Team Looks Good"

Boone said that the team has looked good in drills this week. The boys have shown plenty of hustle and enthusiasm. The Coach commended especially on the outstanding work of Emory and quarterback Gary Mattocks.

"The only other egular who will definitely not play because of injuries," Boone commented further, "is Waverly Chesson. He's expected to be back in there as a center by next week and we should be at full strength."

About tonight's contest, the Pirates' Homecoming fracas, Boone called WCC's outfit a "fast, scrappy ball club that plays with plenty of enthusiasm." Under a new coach this season, the Catamounts have made several good showings, but have failed to win either of their two North State trials. The lost 7-0 last week to powerful Catawba and dropped a 19-7 contest earlier to Appalachian.

East Carolina, at the present, holds a 1-1 loop slate, having been stopped by the same Catawba team and having beaten Elon last weekend.

Crowded Backfield
The Pirate backfield is likely to seem quite crowded to spectators tonight, for Coach Boone has stated that he intends to substitute freely with some of his fastest and best newcomers, as well as running his regulars.

"James Speight and Bobby Perry, both from Greenville, will probably carry much of the load in the running department," Boone said. Perry, a junior, was an outstanding high school griddler with Greenville's Phantoms three years ago and is now making a strong bid for All-Conference honors as a starting halfback. Speight also a standout for GHS, is coming into his own as a freshman.

At fullback, Boone stated that he would probably alternate Bobby Maynard, Kemp Wickizer and Bobby Lilley. At the other halfback position, Boone expects to use Jim Henderson, Tommy Nash, Bobby Bay and Charlie Bishop throughout the game.

In the line, no shifts have been planned to accommodate the return of the three first unit linemen. "We'll probably just run them with the first unit during the time they're in there," the Coach said. Expected to start tonight are Bill Helms and Ray Pennington at ends; Bucky Dennis and Larry Howell at tackles; Dick Monds and Ken Burgess at guards and Aigey Faircloth at center. In the backfield, Mattocks, Henderson, Perry and Maynard will open.

The contest is slated to begin at 8:00 and Homecoming festivities will be carried on during halftime and before the kickoff.

Farmville's Red Devils, playing host to Coastal Conference foe Contentnea, were quite inhospitable as they clobbered the visitors 18-7.

In non-loop contests, Ayden turned back Pamlico 27-7, to give them a 5-1 overall season's record, and Robertsonville dropped a 13-7 encounter with Plymouth.

Farmville's Sonny Mall, quarterback, opened up play in the conference tilt by plunging over from the three yard line in the final minutes of the first quarter. The touchdown came after a short drive. The extra point attempt failed.

In the second period, Johnny Thorne, Devil left guard pounced on a Contentnea fumble on the visitors' 13 yard line, setting up another score. Dunn pushed to the nine and Autry Vandiford carried the rest of the distance for the touchdown. Again, the conversion was not good.

Irving Allen, Farmville halfback returned a punt for 50 yards to set up the third tally in the third period. He danced his way to the 15 yard line before being stopped and a pass from Mall to halfback Billy Eason covered the 15 yards to make it 18-0.

Contentnea made its only score of the battle in the last four minutes of play on a 72-yard sustained drive. Halfback Phillip Tripp went over for the tally and the extra point made it 18-7.

Ayden Wins Again
Ayden scored in all four periods to blast Pamlico 27-7 in their second non-loop game of the season. The victory gives the Tornadoes a 5-1 overall mark and a 4-0 Coastal Conference slate.

Tommy Edwards scored first for the powerful Ayden club, rambling over on a 20-yard end sweep pitchout. A pass from quarterback Lindy Dunn to end Horton Jolly racked up the extra point.

Halfback R. L. Collins crashed into the end zone from the two yard line in the second period for the second touchdown. The conversion attempt was not good.

In the third period, Harold Worthington broke away for a 25 yard gallop and the third score. The Dunn-Jolly pass combination accounted for the extra point.

A 30-yard pass play from Dunn to end Leslie Stocks wrapped it up for the Tornadoes in the final period. Clarence Mills plunged over from the two for the extra point, making it 27-0.

Pamlico made a desperation drive in the dying minute of the game and finally scored just as the game ended.

Outstanding for the winners on offense were Edwards, Dunn, Worthington and Collins. On defense, it was Burt Tripp, Ikey Baldeire, Melvin Byrd and Leslie Stocks.

Rams Lose 13-7
Playing at Plymouth, Robertsonville succumbed to a strong Plymouth ground attack 13-7.

Plymouth scored in the first and third quarters on drives of 50 and 60 yards. Robertsonville tallied late in the final period, on a 63-yard drive sparked by wingback Cliff Leggett. Leggett reeled off a 49-yard jaunt on a reverse play, the longest of the game to get the Ram attack moving. Tailback Elton Roberson ran eight yards for the score. End Ed Perry kicked the extra point.

For the Rams, it was Mike Roberson, guard, and Richard Alexander, linebacker, who were outstanding in line play.

Intersectional Games Grab Grid Headlines

College football teams which have been enriching the railroads and airlines, as well as their own coffers, by playing games in distant regions, get their last fling at seeing the country this week before settling down to more serious matters.

Today's far-flung games just about wind up the intersectional part of the season and provide the final line of comparison for the experts who try to rate teams on a national basis. From here on, major conference teams will devote their attention mainly to settling their own sectional championships. Only a few ambitious independent teams, such as Notre Dame, Navy, Pittsburg, Miami of Florida and Villanova will indulge in any great amount of intersectional play during the rest of the season.

Army and Navy and a trio of Southwest Conference teams lead the way in travel today. The unbeaten Army team, after a tough hassle with Penn State last week, visits Michigan's 101,000 seat stadium at Ann Arbor to take on Bennie Oosterbaan's lads, who beat Michigan State in everything but the score. With the development of Bob Kysasky at quarterback and the return of Loren Reid at tackle, Army coach Earl Blak is hopeful of making it a close game.

Navy's alternating "first teams" are expected to see a lot of action against Tulane at New Orleans. Although Navy has a 2-0 record and Tulane 2-1 against stronger opposition, the status of the Midshipmen is uncertain. Coach Eddie Erdelatz apparently hasn't been able to settle on a definite lineup.

From the Southwest, Texas Christian, Rice and Southern Methodist all go into the southern area to play Alabama, Florida and Duke, respectively. All three visitors should have the edge. Meanwhile, Baylor and Arkansas tangle in the only Southwest Conference game and Texas takes on Oklahoma, No. 1 team in the nation in The Associated Press ranking poll, in a contest with a slightly intersectional flavor.

Oklahoma, the dominant team of the Big Seven conference, has just learned its 32 game winning streak isn't a modern record. Statisticians dug up the fact that Pittsburg won 33 in a row from 1914 to 1919. So today's game gives Oklahoma a chance to tie the record and when they return to their whumping of conference rivals, they'll be going for a new mark.

Calhoun Defeats Sullivan With Body Slugging

CLEVELAND (AP) — Rory Calhoun, who now wants to fight Philadelphia's Joey Giardello, gives hard body punches the credit for setting up his technical knockout victory over Birtain's John L. Sullivan here last night.

The 22-year-old White Plains slugger, currently No. 6 among the middleweight contenders, had Sullivan a dazed and helpless target when Referee Jackie Davis halted the fight nine seconds into the eighth round.

It was a straight right to the jaw that floored Sullivan for a three-count which the bell interrupted at the end of the seventh, and it was a trio of rights to the jaw that preceded the stopping of the scheduled 10-rounder.

But Sullivan himself said in the dressing room afterward that "the hardest punch of the fight" was a left hook that "thudded squarely" into his stomach early in the seventh round. After that "one landed it was just a matter of how much time Calhoun would need to finish up his game opponent."

"Those body punches wear you down," Calhoun observed in summing up his winning technique. "Most of those European fighters have good defenses, but they keep guarding their head. I went for his body and figured he'd start slowing up from those punches."

Spiders Finally In League Win Column

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
Fullback Buddy Davis plunged over from the one-yard line in the third period last night to give Richmond a come-from-behind 7-3 victory over The Citadel and put the Spiders in the Southern Conference football victory column for the first time in three league starts.

Two other potential Richmond scores were lost, the first in the opening stanza when Davis bobbed the ball in the end zone and the second in the second period when a penalty nullified the tally.

The Citadel's guard Connie Tuza was the hero of the South Carolinians in the early game as he blocked a punt in the first quarter and then booted a 22-yard field goal on the fourth down to put the Bulldogs out in front 3-0.

Richmond's attack couldn't get moving until it was almost too late, and then it was an offside penalty against previously unbeaten, once-tied Citadel that set up the touchdown.

The winning 65-yard drive, starting on the Richmond 35, bogged down on The Citadel 39 and Davis kicked. But the Bulldogs were offside and Richmond got the ball on the 24 with only one yard needed for a first down. Davis got the ball and cracked over the middle to the 33 to keep the march alive.

After two plays carried to the 27, halfback George Riggs galloped 19 yards to The Citadel eight. Three plays later Davis hit right tackle for the deciding touchdown.

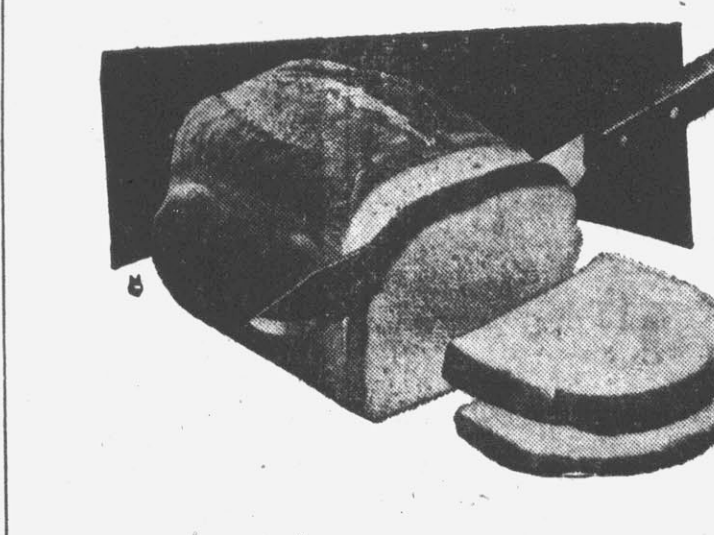

Two more family fusses were on tap this afternoon, the first league game of the season for three of the four opposing elevens. Virginia Tech, with a 3-1 overall record, was host to William and Mary, which has lost two and tied one, in the conference debut for both clubs. Washington and Lee, loser of its only start so far, entertained Davidson, 2-1 overall and 0-1 in league play—a 34-7 defeat by The Citadel.

Tech's Gobblers normally would have rated a heavy favorite's role over William and Mary, but the Indians have had a way of causing trouble for the Techmen. Until Tech won last year, W&M had licked the Gobblers 13 times in a row and tied them once—the only blot on Tech's 1954 record.

Davidson wasn't expected to have any trouble with Washington and Lee, making its only conference start under its new de-emphasis program. The Wildcats routed the Generals last year 54-0, and W&L went into today's game minus regular quarterback Jack Doughtrey, injured in practice this week.

West Virginia, tied for 20th in the national rankings, invaded Syracuse in an effort to improve its 2-2 record and enhance its national prestige. Virginia Military Institute was host to Lehigh in another nonleague scrap.

Tonight's program features 16th-ranked George Washington's invasion of Boston University, a team that tied William and Mary 18-18 last week. The Colonials will be seeking their fourth straight victory.

SURE YOU WILL, RUSTY... JUST GIT OVER ONTO THAT NEXT HUMMOCK AN' KEEP GOIN' EAST... BUT WATCH OUT FER THAT BEAR TRAP!

WHERE IS THE TRAP?

SEE THAT POLE YONDAH? JUST WALK AROUND IT... AND KEEP OUT O' THE QUICKSAND!

MEANWHILE, A GREEN SEDAN IS MAKING TIME ON THE HIGHWAY... THE DRIVER IS LISTENING TO MUSIC ON THE CAR RADIO WHEN...

WE INTERRUPT OUR PROGRAM TO REPEAT A BULLETIN... THE BANDIT, WHO ROBBED THE OCEANSIDE BANK IS BELIEVED TO BE HEADING FOR THE OKEFENOKEE SWAMP. HE HAS BLACK HAIR AND MUSTACHE AND IS DRIVING A GREEN SEDAN WITH WHITE-WALL TIRES.

THAT SETTLES IT! THAT CAR WILL GIVE ME AWAY... I'LL HAVE TO DITCH IT AND DUCK INTO THE SWAMP!

RUSTY HAS REACHED THE NEIGHBORING HUMMOCK AND IS CAREFULLY SKIRTING AROUND THE BEAR TRAP.

GOLLY I HOPE I GET OUT OF THE SWAMP BEFORE IT'S TOO DARK!... HEY! WHAT WAS THAT NOISE?

UH-OH! I THINK I HEAR SOMEBODY!

WELL, I'LL BE A MONKEY'S UNCLE! IT'S JUST A KID! WHAT'RE YOU DOING IN HERE, BUSTER? ARE YOU ALONE?

By DR. ED HIRSBERG
Literary news of the week in these parts is publication of "The Letters of Thomas Wolfe," collected and edited, with introduction and notes, by Elizabeth Nowell. It's 787 pages long, a length consistent with Wolfe's other books, and is a sort of fictional biography, since much of the materials in his novels he lifted out of some of his long and rambling letters — many of which never were sent off to anybody, but became sections of "Look Homeward Angel" or "Of Time and the River" or what-all. . . . There are also love letters to Aline Bernstein, whom he hadn't known anything about, who was the big love of his life, and with whom he finally broke up. . . . People up around Asheville might not like Tom Wolfe very much, but we still think he's the greatest novelist to come out of North Carolina — which is saying quite a lot we'll admit. . . .

Indian Pan
We can't resist telling you about Larry Snyder, head track coach at Ohio State, who's now spending some time in India trying to help the mahajara of Patiala get an Olympic track team into shape. . . . Most of his candidates are Sikh tribesmen who wear beards and are famous as crack Indian troops in the British Indian army, immortalized by Kipling. Anyway, looking around for promising material, Snyder's motto is "Sikh and ye shall find. . . ."

Past Glories
There's a good article by Joseph Wood Krutch in this week's N. Y. Times Book Review, commemorating the 60th anniversary of that August institution's beginning, in 1896. One of its features is a list of best sellers going all the way back, and it's fascinating to trace how far you can go before getting into unfamiliar titles. It'll also tell you how old you are. . . . For example, we remember Booth Tarkington's "Seventeen," which was a big best seller in 1916—not as a popular novel, but as something that had been popular for years (we won't say how many). . . . And do you remember "The Four Horsemen" (1919)? Zane Grey's "The U.P. Trail" (1918)? and "V.V.'s Eyes," by Harry Sydney Harrison (1913)? Tastes, if you will look at the current best seller list, which is led by two books by French women, one of them an Existentialist's comedy about the navy and a novel about Boston politics, certainly have changed. . . .

Future Promise
From Henry Holt, Publishers, we have news that "Rebel Boast," by Manly Wade Wellman, will be coming out later this month. . . . Wellman, you remember, was the featured speaker at the Greenville Community Art Festival's Literary Luncheon last year. We'll try to get "Rebel Boast" reviewed in these columns—it's about, and you might have guessed already, the adventures of five Confederate soldiers in what some of us down here still call the War Between the States. . . .

And from Jonathan Williams, Publisher, of Highlands, N. C., comes word that he is completing what he calls an "Herbal" (the h is silent, folks) of western N. C. It will be the first work of its kind, "an attempt to illuminate the region by means of the botany, folklore, history, etc. of the native plants." The title, "Franklinia alabamica," which means Franklin Tree, after a wild tree discovered by William Bartram in Georgia in 1778. Mr. Williams never uses capital letters, by the way. . . .

This week's review is contributed by Your Columnist. It (the book) is second on the best-seller lists—and here's how. . . .

A CERTAIN SMILE, By Francoise Sagan. New York: E. P. Dutton & Co., $2.95.

Francoise Sagan is very good at writing about what it feels like to be a young girl growing up. When she was eighteen, she wrote "Bonjour Tristesse," a very successful novel dealing with this theme. Now, at twenty, she has written another one about a young girl who has grown up a little more, Biographical or not, it has the Sagan touch. It's intimate, revealing, frank, and French as all get out.

Despite what some reviewers have said about her too-outspoken treatment of the physical aspects of love, everything Miss Sagan writes is in good taste. You are never repelled or revolted, though sometimes you might be a little surprised, at her casualness in describing her heroine's sex life.

Dominique is a typical French college girl who gets into trouble when she falls in love with her boyfriend's uncle. Actually, she is more occupied with what the affair does to her mind than with what it does to her body. Her detailed and thoughtful accounts of the various relationships existing between herself, her lover, Luc, and the other people involved—

Luc's wife and the boyfriend, Bertrand—reveal a talent for perceptive description that is truly remarkable. And the climactic two week interlude on the Riviera with Luc becomes, an almost unspoiled idyll.

Miss Sagan does not specifically state that having an affair with an older man before settling down should be part of every growing girl's education; but she doesn't deny that it helps. And if you want to know why, read "A Certain Smile."

Service Center Plans Opening

Hundreds of guests are expected to attend the gala Grand Opening celebration of Colonial Service Center, East 10th and Hamilton Streets, on Friday and Saturday, October 19 and 20.

Highlight of the two-day celebration will be a special Lucky Prize Drawing at which a 21" Bendix Console TV set—a Deep Fat Fryer and an Outdoor Charcoal Grill will be awarded to lucky winners by J. G. Clark.

Earl Hardee, who resides at 111 East 10th Street, is owner. The station is managed by J. E. Nunn and Irvin Spain. Hardee announced that during the festivities there will be music, entertainment, refreshments, and free gifts, with special gifts for children.

The Carolina Partners will be an added attraction Saturday night from 7:30 to 9 o'clock. Hardee has extended to the people of Greenville a cordial invitation to attend. Preparations have been made to handle a record turnout at what promises to be a memorable event. Gayly decorated for the occasion, the station will be open from 7 a.m. to 10 p.m. each day of the celebration.

CAN'T EXPAND
RALEIGH (AP)—North Carolina's free polio vaccine program can't be expanded under existing law to include the 20-30 age group, State Health Officer J. W. R. Norton was informed yesterday, by the U.S. surgeon general.
