

LANDSLIDE VOTE FOR EISENHOWER

Pitt Cast Record 14,387 Votes Tuesday Control Of Both Houses Remains In Demo Hands

As In '52 It Was Stevenson All The Way, Over Pitt

By JIMMY ELIAS, Reflector Staff Writer. Dwight D. Eisenhower won an overwhelming re-election to the Presidency yesterday but he didn't get much help from Pitt County.

In 1952, when the previous record vote was cast, 13,903 voters went to the polls. Stevenson drew 11,271 of those votes and Eisenhower got the other 2,632.

Although unofficial returns from the precincts show some evidence of straight Republican voting, the personal appeal of Eisenhower put him far ahead of any other single Republican candidate in the county.

In races other than the Presidential and gubernatorial, unofficial results were as follows (all winners are Democrats): Lieutenant-Governor: Luther Barnhardt, 13,062; Joe A. Dunn, 846.

Secretary of State: Thad Eure, 13,034; Grover C. Robbins, 823. State Auditor: Henry L. Bridges, 12,947; William White, 830. State Treasurer: Edwin Gill, 12,870; Calvin M. Adams, 822. Attorney General: George B. Patton, 12,933; C. E. Hyde, 826. Superintendent of Public Instruction: Charles P. Carroll, 13,030; T. E. Story, 820. Commissioner of Agriculture: L. Y. Ballentine, 12,993; Fred R. Keith, 819. Commissioner of Insurance: Charles F. Gold, 12,866; David W. Lee, 815. Commissioner of Labor: Frank Crane, 12,944; J. M. Sianell, 814. Unopposed Democratic candidates who piled up big vote totals included: J. Wallace Winborne (Chief Justice of the Supreme Court), William B. Rodman, Jr. (Associate Justice of the Supreme Court), Malcolm C. Paul (Second District Superior Court Judge), William J. Bundy (Third District Superior Court Judge), Hamilton C. Hobbs.

H. L. Andrews Agrees To Pay $8,850 Settlement

Former Assistant Tax Collector Henry L. Andrews has agreed to pay Pitt County $8,850 in settlement of tax office shortages charged Andrews in civil action taken by the county last week. The settlement came last night during a special three-hour meeting of the Pitt Board of Commissioners. Andrews conferred with the board during the special session.

There may be errors and mistakes in the records of my office, but any such discrepancies are nothing more than honest mistakes and errors. The annual audits of the records of my office for the past 25 years have in each instance shown my records in good order and such reports have been accepted by the county. Small Items: A spokesman for the auditors and tax officials in charge of the investigation of Andrews' records said this morning the alleged shortages came "from smaller items of collections like penalties, interest and costs." He added, "We are satisfied that the tax principal is there." County officials said the alleged shortages in Andrews' office came over a "period of years" but the exact number of years was not specified. Andrews has been alternately tax collector and assistant tax collector in Pitt County for 25 years. He assumed his duties with the county on October 25, 1931.

Adlai Smiles In Crushing Defeat

CHICAGO (AP)—Adlai E. Stevenson took his second crushing defeat at the hands of Dwight D. Eisenhower today with a smile on his face and a quip on his lips. "It wasn't that it didn't hurt—he frankly confessed his disappointment before a nationwide TV audience—but you could tell he had known for days how it would all turn out."

But, he told hundreds of disheartened Stevenson volunteers jammed into the big Hotel Conrad Hilton ballroom—and millions who watched on their television sets—"our cause will ultimately prevail." "Would he try for the presidency again?" "I'm a candidate for bed," he responded lightly to the reporter's query.

His more formal note was sounded shortly after midnight when he left his suite at the Sheraton-Blackstone Hotel and walked across the street to the Conrad Hilton to tell hundreds of mournful followers: "To you who are disappointed tonight, let me confess that I am too. But we must not be disheartened, for there is radiance and glory in the darkness, could we but see, and to see, we have only to look."

A burst of applause welled up over the ballroom. Women wept openly. Men got out their handkerchiefs and blew their noses furiously. "This was a moment such as could only come at the hour of defeat for a presidential candidate whose followers hold him in esteem."

Stevenson, it may be said now, had known for days that he couldn't whip Eisenhower this year. Just as he had known in advance the popular general of World War II would overwhelm him in 1952.

Shaky Cease-Fire In Middle East; Israeli Balks At Outside Forces

LONDON (AP)—Reports of continuing shooting shadowed a shaky cease-fire in the Middle East today. Prime Minister Eden told the House of Commons there had been "some shooting" during the day at Port Said in the Suez Canal area. He said Britain had no official confirmation that Egypt accepted a U.N. cease-fire order.

The Cairo radio, in a broadcast reported from Beirut, charged that British-French forces were continuing attacks "in defiance of the U.N. call for a cease-fire."

Threats of Communist intervention, and a declaration by Premier David Ben-Gurion of Israel indicating he will refuse to pull back troops from the Gaza Strip and Sinai Peninsula further threatened the hair-triggered peace, only hours old.

Soviet Defense Minister Marshal Georgi Zhukov, in a Bolshevik revolution anniversary speech in Moscow, declared Russia was ready to send military forces to throw British, French and Israeli troops out of Egypt—if the United Nations approves.

Two of Russia's satellites, Rumania and Czechoslovakia, offered in New York to contribute troops to the United Nations as part of an international police force in the Middle East.

An Egyptian diplomat in Hong Kong said 250,000 Red Chinese have volunteered for "Egypt's struggle against aggression." Soviet reserve officers were reported by another Egyptian diplomat in Moscow to be volunteering.

Eden said he did not wish to emphasize the shooting at Port Said. He declared Britain and France had not the "slightest intention" of moving ahead of their present positions, or pushing in additional forces aside from administrative and security elements.

In Jerusalem, Premier David Ben-Gurion declared the 1949 armistice with Egypt is a dead letter. He said Israel will not agree to any foreign forces "no matter under what name" being stationed on Israeli soil or territory she occupies. The occupied territory includes Sinai and the Gaza Strip.

The Ben-Gurion statement appeared to rule out any Israeli withdrawal, even for a U.N. police force to move in. The crux of the situation facing the U.N. General Assembly was what to do about these forces already in Egypt. The Security Council already has refused to take up a Soviet plan for United States and Russian intervention.

The Egyptian Embassy in Moscow said Soviet reserve officers had volunteered for service in Egypt. The Egyptian ambassador to Red China reported in Hong Kong that 250,000 Chinese Communists had volunteered to join "Egypt's struggle against aggression."

British and French forces which seized the northern end of the Suez Canal zone in an invasion launched Monday were under orders to hold their fire unless attacked.

The government-controlled Cairo radio told Egyptians there was a cease-fire, but ordered them to resume fighting "if the enemy shoots or advances one inch."

Military headquarters on both sides were silent.

actions of the counterrevolutionary force aimed at liquidation of the popular democratic regime and the restoration of fascism in that country."

The U. N. Security Council on Monday refused to take up a Soviet proposal that the council order Russian and U.S. forces to go into Egypt. The United States termed the proposal "unthinkable."

It appeared unlikely that the Russians could muster a two-thirds backing in the Assembly for the proposal. There has been widespread speculation, however, that the Soviet might send "volunteer" forces to Egypt, just as Communist China poured "volunteers" into the Korean War.

Morse Leading In Oregon Election. PORTLAND, Ore. (AP)—Sen. Wayne Morse, Democratic arch-enemy of the Eisenhower administration, built up a steadily increasing lead today in his fight for a third term.

While President Eisenhower was well ahead in the contest for Oregon's six electoral votes, Morse had a narrow lead over Doug McKay, Republican ex-governor who resigned as secretary of the Interior to oppose Morse.

ers for "defeating fascism." Zhukov said: "The Soviet Union calls upon the United Nations resolutely to stop the armed aggression of Britain, France and Israel against Egypt and actively to support the Arab peoples in their struggle for freedom and independence."

"As regards the Soviet Union, she is prepared, in accordance with a U. N. decision, to take a real part with her armed forces in the liquidation of this aggression."

Zhukov also defended Russia's military intervention in the Hungarian rebellion and declared "reaction and fascism" had been put down in that country. He described the revolt in Hungary as Several hundred thousand civilians shouted "Glory to the Soviet Union" as they marched almost endlessly through Red Square.

The usual flypast of jet bombers and fighters was omitted, presumably because of a low over-cast. The 21-minute procession of Soviet army units through the square showed no new military equipment. There was the usual display of motorized guns, troop carriers, armored cars, rocket launchers and heavy anti-aircraft cannon.

Civilian marchers carried banners demanding "Hands off Egypt" and "Out of Egypt, imperialist aggressors." Other banners praised the Hungarian work-

Concern over the foreign situation and an apparent big swing in the Negro vote from the Democratic to the Republican column brought a big reduction in the 94,000 margin by which Stevenson carried North Carolina in 1952.

Eisenhower rolled up heavy votes and carried most of the state's larger counties in the Piedmont and western sections while Stevenson was sweeping most of the eastern counties.

In 1952, Stevenson carried the state by winning 54 per cent of the 1,210,910 votes cast in the state. The total vote yesterday was substantially smaller and Stevenson received only 51 per cent of the vote which has been tabulated.

President Eisenhower carried 31 counties, just as he did in 1952, and was leading in eight other counties.

Stevenson carried 54 counties and was leading in seven others. In 1952, he carried 69 counties. Among the state's major cities, predominantly Negro precincts showing, Eisenhower stepped to a microphone in the early morning hours to say he will continue his efforts for peace.

WASHINGTON (AP)—Democrats clinched control of both branches of Congress today despite the avalanche of votes that swept President Eisenhower back into office in yesterday's election.

Breaking into a broad grin he expressed his "most grateful thanks" to those he said had voted for "principles and ideals" and not "merely for an individual."

Then, with Vice President Nixon standing nearby, he told cheering Republicans: "With whatever talents the good God has given me, with whatever strength there is within me, I will continue, and so will my associates, to do just one thing—to work for 168 million Americans here at home, and for peace in the world."

Stevenson seemed sure of carrying only six states in the Deep South, and was leading in Mississippi. As returns mounted, Eisenhower was getting 58 per cent of the two-party vote, compared with 55 per cent four years ago.

A little red-eyed, Stevenson formally conceded his defeat at 1:20 a.m. From Chicago, he sent Eisenhower a telegram which said: "You have won not only the election, but also an expression of the great confidence of the American people. I send you my warm congratulations."

"Tonight we are not Republicans and Democrats, but Americans. We appreciate the grave difficulties your administration faces, and, as Americans, join in wishing you success in the years that lie ahead."

In a talk to Democratic workers, some of whom were openly crying, Stevenson said: "As for me, let there be no tears, for if I have lost an election, I have won a grandchild."

In Washington his running mate, Sen. Estes Kefauver of Tennessee, issued a statement pledging Eisenhower and Nixon his support "in all that is good for America."

The trend at the halfway mark in tabulation indicated the total presidential vote might top the 415,918 record of 1952, despite what was generally regarded as a less heated campaign.

labor party is the party of labor' Mitchell said the President's huge vote was "proof of the endorsement of his policies by the working men and women of America."

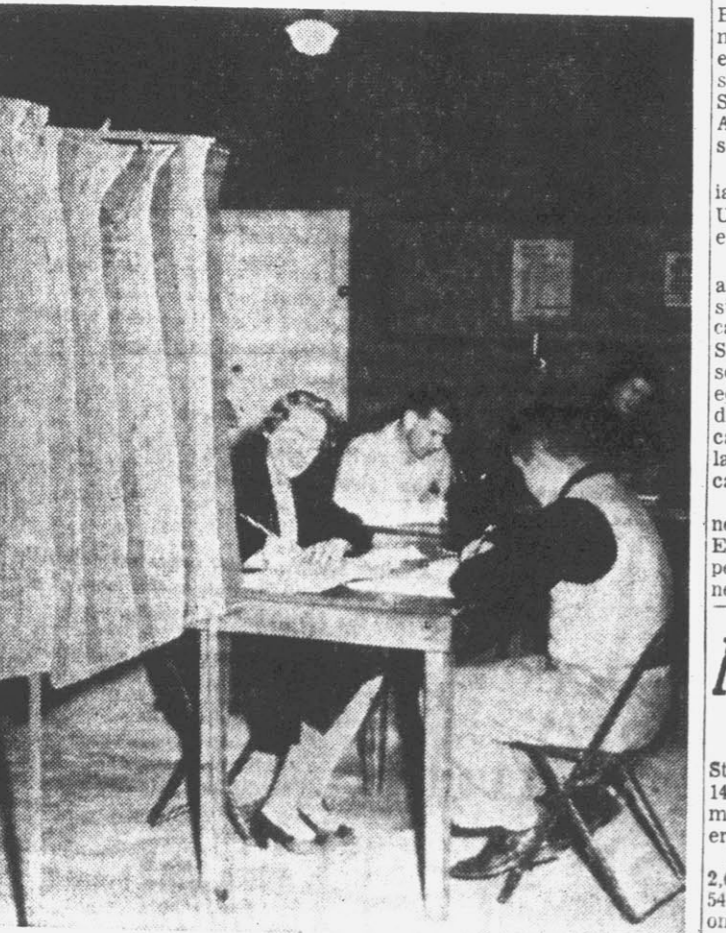

Mitchell said in an interview early today he felt it was about time for union leaders to re-examine their political endorsement policies.

Eisenhower's re-election is likely to be followed by two major legislative proposals in the labor field. One would seek to carry out the Republican party's platform pledge for a "complete overhaul" of the Taft-Hartley labor relations law. The other expected move would seek to broaden coverage of the dollar-an-hour minimum wage and overtime pay requirements of the fair labor standard law.

Both can be expected to meet with stiff opposition in Congress. Changes in either law are actually doubtful, especially since union leaders helped fill the Taft-Hartley law amendments previously proposed by Eisenhower.

Mrs. Moore Is Guest Speaker For Greenville Branch AAUW

Mrs. J. H. B. Moore was guest speaker when the Greenville Branch of A. A. U. W. met for its regular monthly meeting in the Mamie E. Jenkins Alumni House Monday. The president, Mrs. Hugh T. Patterson, presided.

Hostesses were Mrs. Elsie Eagan, Mrs. Robert Fennell, Mrs. Estella Striplin, Mrs. C. A. Bowen, Miss Mildred Pate, and from Tarboro, Mrs. James B. Ficklen.

The program for the evening was in charge of the Status of Women Committee and Dr. Lucile Turner, chairman, presented Mrs. J. H. B. Moore who spoke on "Observations of Status of Women in Countries I Have Visited."

For many years Mrs. Moore has been distinguished for her outstanding Woman's Club work and her work in promoting the arts in North Carolina. In recent years she has become a world traveler, generously sharing her many experiences through her talks to various groups. Recent talks number 22.

In her opening remarks Mrs.

Moore stated, "Women throughout the world are on the march." In 1945 there were 36 countries which gave political freedom to women while today there are 65.

Interesting enough Switzerland is one of the countries where women cannot vote she pointed out. In many countries more opportunities are being offered to women and women are breaking away from many old customs.

Mrs. Moore brought out the advances made by the women of Japan and the part General McArthur played. The minister of health in India is a woman. The cottage industries of Asia mean much to people as well as to tourist she said. Work is being done in Japan, Pakistan and Arabia to educate the women to take advantage of new opportunities.

In closing Mrs. Moore stated that revised laws do not solve the problems of the women in the countries of the world. Most important is educating the women to take advantage of these new opportunities.

Following the program Dr. Turner passed out sheets containing news on the status of women she had collected for the past few months.

During the business session routine matters were taken care of. Dr. Bessie McNeil announced that tentative dates for the annual children's plays are April 8, 9, 10, and 11.

Visitors for the evening were Mrs. Bertha Jones from Tarboro, sister of Miss Mildred Pate, and Miss Gussie Kuykendall. The chapter also welcomed its two Tarboro members, Mrs. Cameron Weeks and Mrs. Ficklen.

Red Oak News

In a report given by Willie Pate, treasurer of the Red Oak building fund, it was disclosed that the gross income from the Harvest Sale was $1836.90. The expenses were $323, leaving a net profit of $1513.90.

Nearly one thousand people ate two barbecued pigs, 15 extra pounds of barbecue, four turkeys with dressing and gravy, 70 barbecued and friend chickens, 135 pounds of ham, 2600 rolls, four bushels of Irish potatoes, four bushels sweet potatoes, about 1000 servings of home-made cake and pies, 1000 servings of salads, two bushels of slaw, several bushels of collards and snapbeans and all the tea and coffee they wanted. Yet, the sponsors did not quite have enough food for the crowd that came.

While waiting for the Auction Sale to start several people enjoyed a musical program in the church.

At the auction a coconut cake brought $100, a fruit cake $65. The people of Red Oak have expressed their appreciation to all for their co-operation in what they term the "best Harvest Sale in nine years."

Area Service Is The Logical Answer

If local financial support alone could assure construction of a joint air facility to serve this section of North Carolina, we could just sit back now and wait for adequate air service to come our way.

Unfortunately local financial support is not the only thing needed to bring the airport to reality. There must also be federal funds through the Civil Aeronautics Administration to help defray high construction costs.

After the air facility is completed there must be cooperation from airlines in providing service which will be adequate to meet needs of the area.

The Mid-East Carolina Airport Authority has been assured of sufficient funds from local government units involved in the joint project to push forward its plans. Cities and counties committed to the project have already pledged some $650,000 in local funds to be matched by CAA for construction of the facility. This is far more in the way of local money than has been pledged to the proposed municipal airport at Rocky Mount. It is likewise evident from action of cities and counties in this area that they prefer the joint facility proposed by the Mid-East Airport Authority to the municipal facility which Rocky Mount proposed to construct as an "area" airport.

The Mid-East Carolina Airport also meets the requirements for an area airport in much more realistic terms than the airport proposed by Rocky Mount. Federal officials who will determine which of these proposed airport receives first priority on CAA funds should not overlook this fact.

Neither should the people of Greenville, Wilson, Goldsboro, Kinston, Farmville and other cities in the Mid-East project overlook the fact that the CAA is not likely to provide matching funds for two airports so close together. Individually and collectively these counties and municipalities interested in the joint airport project should spare no effort to impress the CAA with the obvious advantages the joint airport offers this area.

There is another fact which neither the Mid-East Carolina Airport Authority nor the people of Rocky Mount can afford to disregard. That is the matter of air service once a facility is constructed. Areas of the Piedmont section of the state where municipal airports have been established too close together have actually suffered for lack of adequate air service. In this area for years we have been unable to get adequate air service not only because a central facility was not available but because heretofore each community has fought the other for air service and none really have won.

The only answer to adequate air service for Eastern North Carolina is a central area airport such as that proposed by the Mid-East Carolina Airport Authority. From the standpoint of geography, economics, financing and service to the people, it is quite apparent that the proposal of the Mid-East Carolina Authority offers the only logical answer.

More Attention For Older Workers

(Lynn Nisbet, regular contributor of this column, is recuperating nicely from injuries received in an automobile accident near Statesville Oct. 20. He will be removed by ambulance today from a Statesville hospital to Rex Hospital in Raleigh. His work is being carried on by C. A. Upchurch, Jr., and various guest columnists.)

RALEIGH — More and more attention is being focused on employment problems of the so-called "older worker." This is a problem that has been growing in recent years as the proportion of older workers in the total population has been increasing.

Approximately one-third of the job-seekers on file in the local offices of the Employment Security Commission of North Carolina are in the "over 45" age group.

The ESC has begun a program, under the direction of Ernest C. McCracken, chief of staff services, to help find jobs for this ever-growing work force. One older-worker project already has been carried out at Salisbury, with encouraging results, and others are under way at Greensboro and Hickory.

McCracken says the program will be extended to all of the ESC's local offices in the State "as rapidly as possible."

In the Salisbury project, the ESC sought, among other things, to find what significance the age factor had in the older workers' employment problem and what could be done to overcome the problem. The work was carried out in the normal course of the office routine, with no special personnel assigned to the job.

The placement program began on December 1, 1955 with a group of 50 older-worker applicants. At the end of March, nearly one-half of the group had been placed in jobs. With the office running from 45 to 70, types of jobs included: Salesman, clerk, sewing machine operator, practical nurse, cook, porter, maid, and others.

In a second group of applicants, 27 out of 50 older workers were placed during a two-month period.

Salisbury reported that placements were made with all kinds of firms. It was found that employers are not receptive to the idea of hiring the older worker as a group — but that the employer does respond to the older worker as an individual. And one placement of an older worker serves as an entering wedge and makes the next placement easier with that firm.

Salisbury said employers acceptance of the older workers have been encouraged by the job performance of this older worker group.

According to McCracken, little difficulty is encountered in placing the skilled older worker, but there are relatively few skilled workers unemployed.

Resistance on the part of employers is found when jobs are sought for older workers in the high-speed production jobs, he said, such as in textiles and hosiery. There, competition is so keen in industry, firms must have maximum production. When the older worker is turned down in the high-speed jobs, placements are made in service and trade fields and in other industries not so demanding. There were problems concerned with the job-seekers themselves, Salisbury reported. Encountered were such problems as defeatism, indecision as to types of work they might be able to do and unrealistic attitudes as to their own abilities.

In many cases, something was needed to help the older worker build his morale. ESC personnel in Salisbury say, in fact, that morale building of the older worker is of "primary importance."

Many of the older workers need to be coached in how to apply for a job, Salisbury found, since so many have had little experience along that line. It also was found that training or re-training is often helpful to the successful placement of the older worker.

Even with the success realized in placing the older workers on a job, ESC personnel at Salisbury said they felt that the intangible results "far outweigh" the tangible results. "The returns self-confidence of these workers and their feeling of accomplishment and their pride in still being able to turn in a fine job is more important," they reported.

LITTERBUGS — Travelers report North Carolina highways looking cleaner in recent months.

The public apparently is responding to a campaign by the Garden Club of North Carolina and a national organization called Keep America Beautiful, which have stepped up the drive on littering. Similar reports come from other states where the campaign is being actively pushed.

No little credit is given to highway signs scattered throughout the State which warn that a litterbug can be fined up to $50 for flinging trash on the roads. The signs began to appear after Robert A. Burch, traffic engineer for the State highway commission, sent out a letter in August to officials of the various highway divisions. Since then, the signs have been appearing in black and white, 54 by 20 inches on primary highways and 28 by 12 inches on secondary roads.

It has been costing the Commission up to $300,000 annually to clean up debris left on the highways. Thus, any decline in littering means not only better-looking highways but a real monetary saving.

To combat littering, Florida is installing drive-in trash containers. All the motorist has to do is pause briefly and drop his rubbish into a special container set back from the road. Oregon has erected signs along its highways indicating "Litterbug barrel ahead—100 yards. Littering is against the law." Wisconsin is briskenly enforcing its law against littering, and many other states are taking steps to combat the nuisance.

Cities are getting into the act, too. Louisville has sworn in nine special police officers to enforce anti-littering regulations. In the first 10 months of this year they cited nearly 2,000 violators.

Nashville, Tenn., police have been handing out pink slips to offenders reading: "This is not a ticket. Next time you will get one. You are a litterbug. Keep our city clean."

Blunt, but effective. Maybe that's what it takes to reform litterbugs.

Other Editors Are Saying... Arrogant Ambition...

(Wall Street Journal) President William Pollock of the Textile Workers Union complained just the other day that his union "can't organize the South without Government help. Under the Wagner Act we got it. Now we don't." This sentiment was expressed in Washington shortly after Mr. Pollock and other union officials conferred with the Secretary of Labor and the general counsel of the National Labor Relations Board on an announcement by the Darlington Manufacturing Company that it proposed to liquidate its mill at Darlington, South Carolina.

Mr. Pollock charges that his union won a representation election at the plant last month and that the next day the company said it was going to sell the mill and get out of the business. This, Mr. Pollock says, is an outrageous attitude. It is also, he says, "unfair labor practice." And he wants the Government to stop any such nonsense on the part of the company because it will put some 500 people out of work. If the mill is sold, it will, of course, put the mill out of business, too.

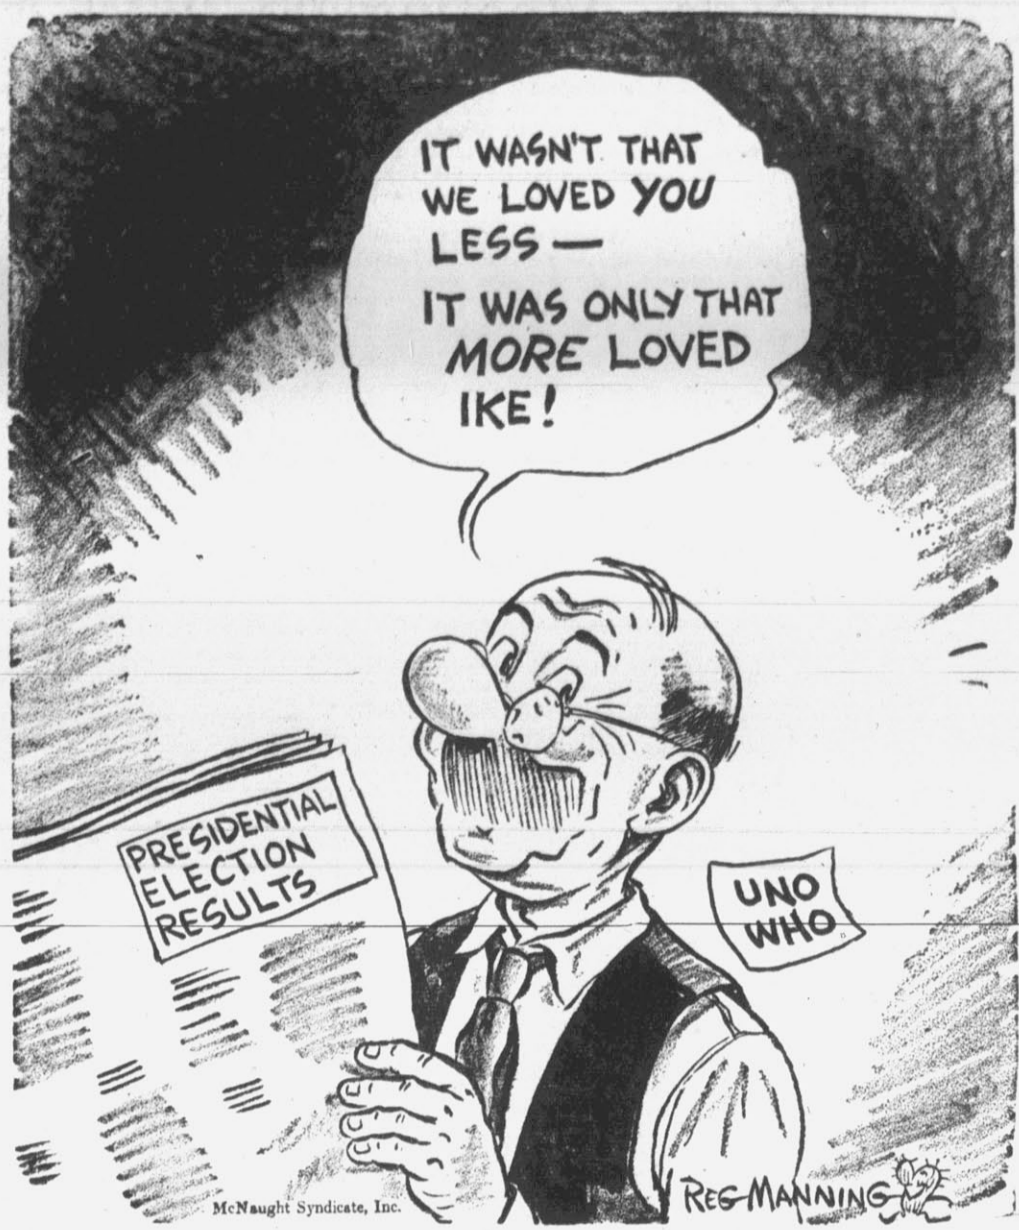

So Mr. Pollock wants the Government to help the union organize the South by issuing an unfair labor practice complaint against the mill owners. This will prevent their selling the mill until the board has ruled on the complaint. In other words, the union isn't content with having the Government act as umpire in labor bargaining to see that the negotiations are conducted by some reasonable rules. The union wants the Government to back up its demands by giving the company no choice but to accept. It makes no difference if the demands are so that they will bankrupt the company. It must stay in business willy-nilly until the Government decides whether it is "fair" to go out of business. This would add a new dimension to the law. Henceforth a man would have to have a labor union's permission to sell what he owns.

Furthermore, it's not enough for the law to give people the right to join unions if they want to. If the union is not successful in organizing labor by means of persuasion or its own organizing ability, then the Government must throw its weight behind the unorganized. Mr. Pollock confesses that without Government help his union hasn't been very successful in one part of the country.

That explains pretty clearly why the unions don't like the Taft-Hartley law or the labor policies of the present Administration. They don't want a neutral Government. They are satisfied with nothing but having the full power of Government to compel people to do what the unions want them to do. Well, some people have suspected all this for a long time. But this is as frank a statement as we have seen of that arrogant ambition.

The 'Scoop' Of 40 Years Ago

All the election talk and betting yesterday brought to mind a stunt I pulled in the wee small hours of the morning just 40 years ago today.

It might have turned out disastrously for me and The Reflector had not the fates been kind. It was my last election gamble, for since that time I have refrained from betting my money or getting out on the limb with seemingly impossible predictions.

During the campaign there had been all kinds of polls and straw votes and being a first-voicer I had given careful study to each and every result and from them had tried to draw my own conclusions. My father, then owner of The Reflector, was likewise postmaster under the Democratic administration and therefore the outcome of the election meant much to the family financially.

On that night of November 6, 1916 there were no radios or televisions, and we had to depend on our telegraph wires for all our outside information. Our usual election party began shortly after the closing of the polls, but it was well on toward midnight before many outside returns were in. First reports naturally came from the large eastern states where Charles Evans Hughes, the Republican candidate, carried away the honors. Before one o'clock many of the northern city newspapers had conceded the election to Hughes and with a sad look on his face my father decided to go home and leave the job of getting out the election Extra to me.

Based on this study I predicted a Wilson victory in the final count and announced that would be the content of The Reflector Election Extra that would appear on the streets before breakfast time. It sounded foolish, and such a rash prediction in the face of the returns was indeed foolish, but never-the-less I was stubborn enough not to give up. Someone offered four to one that I was wrong and I was even foolish enough to put up my last $2.50 against his $10 bill.

When the paper was printed and the carrier boys had begun their deliveries I slipped quietly home and to bed. It seems that I had been asleep but a few minutes when I heard footfalls on the stairs and I pulled the cover over my head for I knew my father had seen the paper and was coming up to find out what kind of brain storm I had suffered. When he shook the paper in my face and asked me why I made the newspaper a laughingstock by carrying Wilson's picture as the occupant of the White House for the next four years, I had no answer. For I too had begun to wonder why I had let my enthusiasm run away with my better judgement. Little was said on the subject at breakfast.

I said at the beginning the fates were good to me. By misfortune when additional returns from the midwest and west began to come in, Wilson was taking the lead in the count in those states that I had credited to his column, and although I began to feel a little better I was still afraid that I had committed the blunder with which my father had charged me.

To make a long story short returns by that night had continued the trend to Wilson and although it was close, he was leading in California. By midnight it was almost definite that Wilson had won although I was three more days before it was generally agreed that he had won and it was still several more days before it was made official.

All this explains how it happened that The Reflector was one of the very few newspapers in the country that announced Wilson's re-election before breakfast on the morning of the 7th of November 1916, several days before it was made official.

I had scored a newspaper scoop of magnitude and had won a four-to-one ten dollar bet. Even so, I have never felt that the embarrassment I could have caused on that occasion was worth the gamble.

Notebook On Life

From One Crisis To Another

By HAL BOYLE
NEW YORK (AP) — Monologue of a middle-aged man in the street:

Well, the election is over, and if these were normal times the country would be safe for another four years. . . . But today nothing really seems safe from change for even the next four minutes.

The world used to operate on a sensible basis. . . . It would have a big depression every 10 years, and a big war every 20 to 25 years. . . . This gave people time in-between to make love or look up at the stars for comfort. . . . A man doesn't mind so much getting an ulcer from earning a living, paying off his mortgage, and keeping his kids in school and out of jail. . . . It's the extra ulcer he gets that bothers him, the one caused by his monotonous mental diet, a diet of crises. . . . You get a warmed-over old crisis for breakfast, a half-baked later crisis for lunch, and a brand new, completely new crisis for dinner. The mind simply can't stomach them all.

If it isn't a crisis over maybe the hydrogen bomb will fall, it's a crisis over maybe the cost of living will go up. . . . Even the weather is crisis. . . . The climate is getting warmer and in another 10,000 years, just when I finally finish paying off my house, the country may be one vast desert, and what'll that do to property values? . . . Then there's always the crisis over peace. . . . World peace seems to be pretty much like property in America — it isn't a fixed thing, but is based on the installment plan. . . . Russia moves tanks into Hungary to preserve freedom and soon the only free Hungarians in the country are those too dead to realize the wonder of it. . . . Then Russia threatens to put the muscle on Britain, France, and Israel in order to preserve peace in Egypt. But Britain, France and Israel don't see the logic of that at all. What are they already busy fighting for in Egypt. . . .

Allies' Ire With U. S. Is Nothing New

By RAY TUCKER
WASHINGTON — Anglo-French wrath against American policy in the Middle East, which has culminated in their joint attack on Egypt and defiance of the United States, has been piling up for a decade. As the late James V. Forrestal wrote in his diaries, they believe that it has been motivated on "valid political purposes," and usually, in years of a Presidential election.

Former President Truman, in their opinion, labored to create the new State of Israel in 1947-48 to round up the so-called "Jewish vote" and contributions for the 1948 election. President Eisenhower, they think, refused to join them in their present warfare for fear that it would have destroyed the Republicans' "peace" issue in yesterday's contest.

Knowing the inside story of the American-inspired but again off-again plan to finance the Aswan Dam, London and Paris blame President Eisenhower and Secretary Dulles for driving Nasser into seizing the Suez Canal, and thereby precipitating the crisis in that area.

Forrestal's writings are cited by Whitehall and the Quai d'Orsay as proof that Truman's partiality toward Palestine was political in purpose. It was opposed, according to the late Secretary of the Defense, by the State, Navy and Defense Departments, as well as by the British and French. They warned that it would eventually promote war, as it has, and jeopardize our supply of oil from the Middle East.

ISRAELI ENTHUSIASTS In his memoirs, Truman says that the pressure brought on him by prominent Zionists was "scandalous." Forrestal lists a few of the Israeli propagandists.

Forrestal quotes J. Howard McGrath, then Attorney General, as telling him that the Democrats needed Jewish contributions because the political treasury was empty. According to Forrestal, the late Robert E. Hannegan, then Democratic National Chairman, warned that Truman would lose New York, Pennsylvania and California, if the Administration did not back up the Zionists.

Eden and Mollet, of course, are aware of this background, and current events have borne out their own and the Forrestal warnings, in their belief.

Franchise System In Operation

By ELMER ROESSNER
"Franchise" means many things in business.

It may be a bus company's right to operate over certain city streets. It may be a wholesaler's or a retailer's right to sell a manufacturer's product in a given area. It may be a manufacturer's right to use a well-known name for his own products. It may be a state's authorization to operate a corporation.

Or it may identify the fast-growing system whereby local or small enterprisers become a link in a large organization.

In this last instance, the mother company may grant an enterpriser the right to use its name, trademarks, designs, and know-how in a designated area in return for fee, royalty or other design and same name — and you'll see a lot more of them this summer — are an example.

IN COUNTLESS LINES Many restaurants, dry-cleaning drops, automatic laundries, gas stations, auto accessory stores, reducing parlors, drugstores, grocery stores and other enterprises are not segments of a giant corporation but largely independent business operating under a franchised name.

Some of these franchise systems grew from a single retail establishment. A restaurant, for instance, became famous for the quality of its food. Another businessman inquired about leasing the right to use the name in another city. The owner agreed provided the new restaurant would keep the same standards. Soon he was making deals with other enterprisers and automatically had a franchise system.

A chain organization was distinguished by its branches. It hit on the idea of selling them to the managers or others, and thus it had a franchise system. AK Manufacturer couldn't find satisfactory wholesalers or retailers and set up a franchise system. And sometimes groups of investors, looking over a field, have decided they can move in with a franchise operation.

THE UNEMPLOYED BROTHER Sometimes they start in other ways. Joseph Weiss, employed in the Paterson, N.J., post office, used his spare time selling textbooks. When his brother got out of the Army and needed a job, Mr. Weiss hit upon the idea of setting him up in an auto seat-cover shop. The store prospered, so Mr. Weiss started setting other people up in business. Today he has 150 franchised stores. His organization employs more than 1,000 persons.

Successful franchise operations seem to have one thing in common: they sound a "management package."

Many of them offer local investors a steady supply of materials and national advertising, but the vital ingredient is usually know-how. A successful franchise-granter will make a traffic study to make sure the proposed location has enough trade to draw on. It will provide building plans and check contracts to make sure the local operator gets the best deal possible; it will insist he have enough money for operating expenses and emergencies; it will make sure insurance is adequate; it will insist on standards of quality and will make checks to be sure they are maintained; it will oversee all leases and contracts, including labor agreements, and it will give each investor the benefits of all the mistakes of others.

NOT PERFECT Franchise operations are not magic. If you look about you, you'll probably see a few franchised stores that are shuttered. Furthermore, some franchising companies have gone broke. Franchise deals are not the dish for some enterprisers. The franchise holder is often a captive. He must buy supplies from the main company or other designated suppliers; he must conduct his business exactly as directed; he can't change menus, prices or procedures; he may not be able to advertise the way he sees fit.

SYNOPSIS
 Casson Duker, a well-to-do amateur detective, is intrigued by Henry Lockyer, a stolid banker getting drunk before dinner at their club. Casson's curiosity compels him to find out why the normally light-drinker, Lockyer is acting in such a manner. Lockyer tells Casson he had been black-mailed by an ordinary looking little man named Bagot who threatened to ruin his reputation. Bagot promises not to bother him again. Lockyer tells Casson he will not testify against Bagot if he is arrested. One thing distinguishes the insignificant Bagot: He paused to admire a piece of Roman sculpture in Lockyer's house. Casson thinks this interest may trap him. Casson goes to his friend George Strutt, a police superintendent, for help. Strutt becomes interested in the case. Later, Casson meets another friend, Nigel Willington, an antique dealer, and asks him to check his sales records of Roman sculpture for possible leads. Meanwhile, Strutt has dug up a similar case from the police files.

CHAPTER 6
 The next morning there arrived from Nigel Willington's office a large, flat envelope full of catalogues of approaching auctions. Rapidly Casson skimmed through them, searching for any offer of Roman antiquities. But there was little. Casson threw them into a bottom drawer of his desk. They were quite useless.
 On Monday morning he drove straight to Willington's. When he got there he found Nigel standing in the middle of the showroom, contemplating with a vacant stare a magnificent cabinet.

 "I want you to buy me a bust," said Casson. "First century Roman."
 "For the malefactor?" Nigel queried, his fingertips searching along the sides of the cabinet. Casson nodded.
 "It'll cost you a bit."
 "I won't lose. I want you to sell it for me. At Christie's. With enough publicity."
 Nigel frowned at the cabinet. "Why?"
 "To attract a criminal."
 "It's nice to know when one's barmy," Nigel observed, mildly. "I suppose you do, eh?"
 "Not in the slightest. I'm entirely logical. The only thing I can lose is a gamble on a guess. It wouldn't be the first time."
 "No. Nor me. I'm not going to buy this piece. I guess it's a copy. But I'll get you your bust. Come and dine next Saturday. We've got a cook, and Sally would love to see you."
 In the course of the week, Casson received his book back from Strutt. Inside the parcel was a note which said:
 "Dear Casson, thanks very much. We both enjoyed it. Adeline sends her regards. Sincerely, G.S. P.S. Have you found him yet?"
 Casson grinned as he tore up the note. Strutt delighted to needle him.
 Nigel produced a bust for Casson's inspection when he dined in Stafford Terrace that Saturday.
 "Is it genuine?" Casson asked.
 "I think so," Nigel replied. "At least Heskett says so and he should know. I haven't the faintest idea." Casson could not bear to leave the statue with Nigel over the expensive hat.

 The bidding showed again.
 "Do you want your bust?" Nigel asked.
 "Yes," Casson whispered back. "I do."
 Nigel flicked his programme. The bidding rose ten pounds. The woman followed the price up. Then she stopped. The hammer fell. The bust went to Willington's.
 Two bronze statues were up on the table. Seventeenth century. One of the possible Bagots was bidding.
 He must be in his late forties, an ordinary man with mouse-colored hair and a cheap brown suit. He wore gold-rimmed spectacles. His gaze was fixed on the auctioneer.
 The bidding went up in fives and his programme flicked to keep it rising. Casson stared at him, fascinated.
 "Ever seen him?" he whispered to Nigel.
 "No."
 At last the bidding slowed and stopped. The last gesture had been from the flickered programme. "Sold!" announced the auctioneer. He pointed to the man in the brown suit and asked his name. The man muttered something which Casson could not hear, wrote on a slip of paper and passed it up to the clerk.
 Casson drew up his programme a heavy arrow pointing to the cross which marked the man's position, handed the card to Nigel and whispered:
 "Watch him. Hear him speak if you can. Come out when he leaves and tell me. I'll be in the car. In St. James's Place."
 He was half-an-hour before they appeared. The inconspicuous little man came first, carrying a parcel in brown paper. He looked round, then walked towards St. James's Street.
 Nigel strolled over to the car, lighting his pipe.
 "He paid for it in notes," he remarked to Casson. "Wanted to take it away at once."
 "Did you hear his voice?"
 "Yes."
 "Was it common?"
 "A trace of accent."
 Casson started the engine and drove towards St. James's. At the end of the street a slim figure in a brown suit was signalling for a taxi.
 Casson discovers Bagot's lair in Chapter 7 of "Small Venom." Read it here tomorrow.

week-end. He took it back to his flat and set it up on the table where the lilac had been. He was vastly pleased.
 Willington had arranged for the bust to be auctioned by Christie's in three weeks' time. Casson waited patiently while the first three weeks of May went by and then, as the day of the auction approached, the excitement of the gamble took hold of him again.
 He went down to Christie's early on the Friday of the auction, securing a perch on the window-seat by which point of vantage he could see the faces of the buyers. He began selecting faces from the crowd, faces and ages to suit Bagot—if he were there. He found seven which might fit and drew a rough seating plan of the room on the back of his programme, marking in with crosses the seven possible people. He scribbled on the top of the programme: "Do you know any of these?" and passed it to Nigel.

 Nigel identified three of the men as dealers or dealers' agents. A fourth was a known collector. Casson was reasonably sure that none of these could be his man. He felt instinctively that Bagot was not a dealer. He turned over a page and wrote: "Has any of them an accent?" The reply was swift: "Yes. The collector. He is a Pole." That left three men.
 The auctioneer came to the bust. It was placed on a high table for all to see. Casson gave it the merest glance.
 The bidding opened slowly. It spurred for twenty pounds, then languished. But Casson had time to catch the flick of the programme from the new bidder and his heart sank.
 Bagot had not come to his lair. Instead it was a woman, well-dressed in black, a diamond clip in the lapel of her coat, a small,

Reports Of Continued Fighting Leak Out Of Hungary; Budapest Battered

VIENNA, Austria (AP)—Reports of continuing bitter fighting by Hungarian rebels against overwhelming Soviet forces still seeped out of Budapest today.

An Italian newspaper claimed it had succeeded in establishing brief contact with a rebel radio transmitter in the battered Hungarian capital and was informed the fighting still raged.

A diplomatic source in Vienna said he had received information that the rebellion was continuing in several sections of Budapest and other parts of Hungary. Milan's Catholic Italia said it had received a rebel radio message saying Budapest was still a scene of battle with many Soviet tanks and artillery weapons shelling parts of the town.

Russian tanks and troops launched their attack Sunday to wipe out the Hungarian bid for independence. All telephone and telegraph communications between Vienna and Budapest still were cut. A similar communications blackout covered neighboring Romania.

Radio Budapest, voice of the new Soviet-installed Hungarian government, broadcast a pledge of "eternal friendship" with the Soviet Union. The pledge came on the 39th anniversary of the Bolshevik Revolution.

Radio Budapest also turned down Western offers of relief supplies, saying "our pride forbids us to accept the imperialist aid." It said assistance was pouring in from Russia and that Romania had promised to send building materials, foods and medicines.

Radio Free Europe quoted a broadcast from Rakoczy radio, a rebel transmitter in southwest Hungary, as saying:

"The Russians demand that we lay down our arms. We won't do it and if it is necessary, we will fight to our last drop of blood."

Other information reaching Vienna said Soviet troops had fired on the Yugoslav legation in Budapest, killing a young diplomat and wounding several members of the legation staff.

Protests against the Soviet action in Hungary erupted at Luxembourg, where a group of 2,000 demonstrators stormed into the Soviet legation, tossed furniture out windows and burned it in the courtyard.

The U.N. General Assembly was to get a report on the Hungarian situation today from Secretary General Dag Hammarskjold.

Pakistan instructed its U.N. delegation to sponsor a resolution urging the Assembly to raise a U.N. police force for the maintenance of law and order in Hungary.

Air Power Topic Explored By TV

By CHARLES MERCER
 NEW YORK (AP)—For two years some creative minds at CBS-TV have been quietly grappling with a fascinating idea which finally will be visible on the home screen next Sunday.

"Air Power," the first of a 26-part weekly filmed series depicting the development of flight and its impact on the 20th century, will have its premiere on the network next Sunday — at 6 p.m. EST. The first program will be an hour in length; subsequent shows will be a half-hour.

An imagined Russian air attack on the United States will be the theme of the first program, with everyone from generals to privates of the U.S. Air Force playing the roles they actually would fulfill in such an eventuality. Sequences filmed on location will show what would happen if radar were jammed, an off-coast search were instituted, an inventory made of the Soviet air force, and the Strategic Air Force alerted throughout the world.

It's an interesting fact that Perry Wolf, the producer and spark of "Air Power," served as an infantry private in the 84th Division during World War II.

In general the series will move chronologically, with the greatest emphasis on World War II. Air activities of the Navy and Army, as well as the now separate branch of the Air Force, will be thoroughly reviewed.

Wolf and associate producer James Faichney have scoured obscure sources to obtain some of the films. Shots showing German fighter planes shooting down B-17s were obtained, for example, from a former Luftwaffe pilot, now in Italy, who stole his own sunsight camera films.

Faichney obtained some extraordinary footage of Japanese air activity from Pearl Harbor to the fall of Singapore from 19 tons of film which the U.S. Army "liberated" in Japan after the end of the war and which found its way into the archives of the Library of Congress.

CBS commentator Walter Cronkite will serve as the regular narrator of "Air Power," with numerous other prominent persons — from actor Art Carney to Gen. Jimmy Doolittle — narrating parts of some programs.

Observers from Russia, Romania and Czechoslovakia toured the polling stations.

"We saw order everywhere," said Romanian observer Constantin Parascivescu - balaceanu. "We have not seen anybody interfering with the exercise of citizens' rights to vote."

Hodges Wins By Top-Heavy Vote

RALEIGH (AP) — Gov. Hodges was elected to a full four-year term as North Carolina's chief executive by a top-heavy margin in yesterday's general election.

The governor led a full slate of Democratic state officials to victory over their Republican foes by equally-large margins.

Senate President Luther E. Barnhardt was elected lieutenant governor and eight other Democratic office holders were returned to the posts they are now holding.

These were: Secretary of State Thad Eure, State Auditor Henry L. Bridges, Treasurer Edwin Gill, Atty. Gen. George B. Patton, Superintendent of Public Instruction Charles F. Carroll, Agriculture Commissioner L. Y. Ballentine, Insurance Commissioner Charles F. Gold and Labor Commissioner Frank Crane.

With returns from 1,498 of the state's 2,055 precincts, Hodges had 521,778 votes to 260,730 for GOP candidate Kyle Hayes, North Wilkesboro lawyer.

Hodges, 59-year-old retired textile executive, was elected lieutenant governor in 1952 in his first try for an elected public office. Yesterday's victory will give him a full four-year term in the office he inherited two years ago upon the death of Gov. William B. Umstead. It will make it possible for Hodges to serve six years as governor, the longest period a Tar Heel governor has served during this century.

Here was the picture in the other state races:

Lieutenant governor: 1,357 precincts, Barnhardt 449,691; Joe A. Dunn, Clinton, 204,812.

Secretary of State: 1,231 precincts, Eure 440,831; Grover C. Robbins, Blowing Rock, 196,388.

Auditor: 1,183 precincts, Bridges 416,322; William White, Taylorsville, 187,649.

HEAD ON COLLISION
 BUTTE, Mont. (AP) — A Butte woman has added a new twist in traffic mishaps. Police said she ran into the front end of a car while chasing her dog. The motorist stopped when he saw her coming but she apparently was too engrossed in her pursuit to see him. She received slight injuries.

H. L. Andrews . . .

A formal resolution adopted unanimously by the Commissioners last night said the $8,850 settlement figure was arrived at "upon recommendation of the County Auditor, County Tax Supervisor and D. R. Hollowell, C.P.A. conducting an audit for Pitt County . . ."

The resolution went on to say that "it appears that it is to the best interest of the county to accept the sum of $8,850 in full and complete settlement of all claims against Henry L. Andrews for shortages occurring in the Tax Collector's office, and that Henry L. Andrews has stated to the Board of Commissioners that said payment is made willingly, without coercion on the part of anyone, and without any promise or threat . . ."

The board resolved that the "$8,850 be accepted in full and complete settlement of claims due from shortages and that the said Henry L. Andrews . . . pay all balances due resulting from tax levies, schedule 'B' taxes, drainage collections and all other accounts and bring said accounts currently to date and that all claims of the said Henry L. Andrews are also completely settled and that he make said payment and sign a full and complete release and that the Chairman of the Board is also hereby authorized to execute a full and complete release upon receipt of payment . . ."

In the same resolution the Commissioners accepted Andrews' resignation and asserted that "he be fully relieved of all duties with Pitt County."

The actual agreement signed last night by Andrews and Smith, although worded similarly to the resolution, said in part:

"This agreement made and entered into this the sixth day of November 1956 by and between the county of Pitt and Henry L. Andrews of Pitt County North Carolina in consideration of the payment by Henry L. Andrews the sum of $8,850, said payment to be made within three days of date, and in consideration of the cooperation of Henry L. Andrews and his willingness to make restitution and that said payment is willingly made by the said Henry L. Andrews without coercion, and the agreement by the county of Pitt through its Board of Commissioners, pursuant to resolution adopted this date, to accept such sum in full payment and settlement of all amounts due Pitt County resulting from shortages accruing in the tax collectors office of Pitt County."

City Policeman Resigns Force

Greenville Police Patrolman J. W. Jenkins submitted his resignation, effective yesterday, announced Chief S. G. Gibbs.

The reason behind the resignation was due to a "disagreement over administrative policy," said Gibbs. He refrained from elaborating on the exact cause of the disagreement.

Jenkins came with the department in April, 1955. Before coming here, he worked with the Elizabeth City Police Department for around six years.

Predicted Win For Democrats

Seventh District State Senator Robert Morgan of Lillington, alumnus of East Carolina College, was guest speaker at a supper meeting of the Young Democrats Club of East Carolina College last Monday night.

In his eve of the election political speech the Seventh District senator reviewed the last four years of the Republican Party's administration in Washington and predicted victory for the Democrats at the general election.

Young Democrats Club President Bobby Hall introduced Morgan.

Why, to preserve the peace, of course.

The Egyptians, too, are fighting to preserve peace with an army developed probably for just that purpose . . . What puzzles me is whether peace can stand much more preserving without winding up embalmed.

Somehow I can't quite get it . . . How is it possible to avoid war by fighting and preserve the peace by breaking it?

Proclamation

WHEREAS, once each year the Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States, through the sale of Buddy Poppies, makes its annual appeal to the general public for funds on behalf of the needy and disabled veterans of our community; and

WHEREAS, we have an obligation to the men who gave so much so that we might remain free men; and

WHEREAS, most of the Buddy Poppy funds collected by the Veterans of Foreign Wars will remain here in our own community to assist our friends and neighbors, and the remainder will go to the outstanding National Home for widows and orphans supported by the V.F.W. and to help maintain the outstanding national rehabilitation service for all veterans; now, therefore,

I, W. L. Whedbee, in my capacity as Mayor of the city of Greenville, do hereby recognize the V. F. W. ## Some Write-Ins On Pitt Ballots

Write-in votes in local elections were few and far between yesterday.

Except for the Ayden constable race, there was not a single planned write-in campaign between two men. Other precinct races for constable and justice of the peace had already been decided in the Democratic primary last spring.

There was some write-in voting for some of the candidates, but many voters were not even aware of the races.

Other write-in voting included one for state senator, one for Register of Deeds, two for solicitor of county court and one for third district county commissioner.

Elli Bloom and Milton Williams each got a vote in the race for solicitor of county court but James C. Lanier Jr. won easily. M. B. Hodges got a vote in the fifth district State Senator contest Dr. Paul Jones won. John Jones got a single vote in the Register of Deeds contest which didn't affect Mrs. Blair Wheelers' victory. Woodrow Wooten won the third district county commissioners' race easily but he lost a vote when a write-in was given to Tom Haigwood.

ood (Ninth District Superior Court Judge) Raymond B. Mallard (13th District Superior Court Judge), Clarence W. Hall (14th District Superior Court Judge), Malcolm B. Seawell (16th District Superior Court Judge), L. Richardson Preyer (18th District Superior Court Judge), Hubert E. Olive (22nd District Superior Court Judge), J. Frank Huskins (24th District Superior Court Judge), Hugh B. Campbell (26th District Superior Court Judge) and P. C. Fronberger (27th District Superior Court Judge).

County races that had only unopposed Democratic candidates included:

Paul E. Jones, (State Senator), Walter B. Jones and Frank M. Wooten, Jr. (members State House of Representatives), Mrs. Blair Cox Wheelers (Register of Deeds), Dink James (Judge of County Court), James C. Lanier, Jr. (Solicitor of County Court) and county commissioners R. L. Martin (second District) and Woodrow W. Wooten (third district).

The Senatorial and First Congressional District races also ran as expected. Sam J. Ervin, Jr., piled up a 12,977 to 807 victory over Republican Joel A. Johnson and Herbert C. Bomar took a 12,985 to 815 victory over Republican Zeno O. Ratcliff.

County Will Drop Action

County Attorney W. W. Speight said this morning as soon as payment is made by Andrews he will have all legal action taken by the county against Andrews ceased.

He added that the evidence and possessions impounded by the court order of October 30 will likewise be released.

Chairman Smith said of the settlement agreement, "So far as we are concerned the county is made here to the county."

Although the county's governing board has no jurisdiction over possible criminal action, spokesmen this morning intimated that the county will not press for any criminal action against Andrews. Any criminal action against Andrews in conjunction with the alleged shortages would normally be initiated by District Solicitor Robert D. Rouse Jr. of Farmville.
