Small Venom by WILLIAM MOLE. A snake bit the leg of a young boy...

SYNOPSIS Casson Duker, a well-to-do amateur detective, is intrigued when Henry Lockyer, a stolid banker, tells him he had been blackmailed...

CHAPTER 9 Bagot was in the Shepley Arms. As Casson entered he was just finishing a pint. He wiped his mouth...

"Do you know that chap who's just gone out?" he asked. "I'm sure I've met him but I can't remember his name."

"That's the name of the barman who was sitting over there in the corner. He went out just now, just as I came in."

"Oh yes. Yes. One of our regulars. Very quiet customer. Mr. Perry is regular in his habits. Orders a pint of mild, drinks it, and goes off. Never says anything else."

"Perry?" he queried slowly, as if racking his memory. "Umm. What's his Christian name?"

"Blessed if I know," he confessed. Then his face lit up. "Jock," he said. "That's it. Jock Perry. He's a member of our Christmas Fund. The Gov'nor got 'im into it."

"You live in these parts, sir?" he inquired. "No," Casson replied. "I'm a writer. I'm doing a book about this part of London."

"A writer, eh, sir?" He regarded Casson doubtfully. "Well, sir," he added, "if you want to know all about the neighborhood you want to be in 'ere on Friday evenings. Old George Stevens comes in and if you give 'im a pint and a chaser 'e'll tell you everything that's happened 'ere for the last seventy years. Regular old soak he is. I don't believe 'alf his stories. But 'it'll be all right for you, sir."

Despite Weight, Premature Baby Thrives

By ANNE SINGLETON
Reflector Staff Writer

"I can easily say that she would have fitted into a cigar box with the lid down . . . if her knees had been pressed up a little," stated Mrs. Harold Bowers, mother of the smallest baby on record to be born and live in Pitt County.

Marsha Ann weighed 22 ounces when she was born at Pitt Memorial Hospital, June 16, to Mr. and Mrs. Harold Bowers of Greenville.

She was a little more than three months premature, but perfectly formed—even to tiny toe nails! Now, at the age of five months, "she is a perfectly normal, healthy child," according to her doctor. Her mother mentioned that she was also "quite active and strong."

Marsha Ann has two sisters who weighed five pounds and six pounds seven ounces at birth. Her brother weighed seven pounds four ounces.

Harrowing Ride
Two days after Marsha Ann arrived she was moved to Rex Hospital in Raleigh where she could be kept under constant surveillance in the premature nursery there. Her father, uncle, and a nurse from the Pitt Memorial Hospital, Mrs. McGlohon of Ayden, placed the tiny infant in a portable incubator in their car.

They had two tanks of oxygen with them, each supposed to last two hours. When they reached Wilson, they discovered that the first tank was exhausted because of a leak. Immediately they connected the second supply.

Bowers then located a state patrolman who gave them escort to Raleigh's city limits. The Raleigh city police had been notified of their fight against time and met them at the city limits and escorted them directly to the hospital. When they reached the hospital they had about five minutes of oxygen supply left.

"She is the smallest premature baby to be admitted to Rex Hospital since the premature nursery was adopted five years ago," noted a local pediatrician. This is a state supported program and aided only by those parents who have the means.

Mrs. E. M. Styres, formerly of Greenville, who is the Assistant Supervisor of the premature nursery, wrote Mrs. Bowers weekly concerning the baby's progress.

Weight Increase
When admitted to Rex Hospital, Marsha Ann weighed one pound six ounces. She dropped to one pound four ounces shortly after birth. She was immediately placed in an isolator in the premature nursery and fed one-fifth of an ounce of milk each feeding—equivalent to one-third of a teaspoonful.

At four pounds, Marsha Ann was removed to the incubator. After a few weeks she "grew big enough" for the nursery bassinets and when she tipped the scales at five pounds she was allowed to go home.

"I never had my hands on her until I brought her home," said Mrs. Bowers. The only way her mother saw her was "through the nursery window!"

Marsha Ann was three months old when she left Rex Hospital on September 23.

Little Cold
This past week she has had a little cold and spent a few days at Pitt Memorial Hospital, returning home yesterday. Her mother points out that she has had to be extremely careful about "keeping her warm and away from cold germs."

WEIGHED 22 OUNCES—Mrs. Harold Bowers is shown above holding Marsha Ann, the smallest baby to be born and live on record in Pitt County, according to a local pediatrician. She weighed 22 ounces when born, and now at five months she weighs seven pounds 12 ounces. Her sister Kay, age six, looks on.

This tow-headed wee bundle is now eating cereal and fruit just as any other baby her age would. In fact, Dr. Bug, Rex Hospital, remarked "she is the first premature baby I have had to feed solids to before she left the hospital."

She has been gaining a half pound per week since she left Rex Hospital and her doctor is quite pleased with her current weight—seven pounds thirteen ounces.

"Her clothes are beginning to fit a little better now," laughed her mother. As for the diapers, "they had to be folded and folded to fit."

One of Smallest in U. S.
According to the American Medical Association, Marsha Ann is one of the smallest babies to be born and live reported in the United States. There are very few babies born under a pound and a half who live.

A baby was recently born who weighed thirteen ounces at birth and has now been living a little over 12 weeks. The doctors still aren't sure whether this child will live.

Window Curtains Can Set Pace

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures Writer

New window treatment can perk up an entire room. Nowadays there is such a variety of window treatments that it takes real ingenuity to come up with something different. Here are some suggestions made by John Abbate, New York decorator, to help you carry out window decorating schemes.

He adores vertical blinds, particularly for bay windows or picture windows that front on a street. "They are so easily adjusted," he explains "to provide complete privacy or let in lots of sunlight without direct glare. You have color variety and you can combine colors for decorative effects, perhaps using turquoise and black alternating with white stripes for a family room, or tobacco brown and beige shantung for a man's den."

Sometimes Abbate uses simple sheer draperies above and to the sides of the vertical blinds to cover an entire window wall for spacious effect, or hangs the blinds to the floor rather than stopping them at the sill, to give a room the feeling of greater height.

If the window wall is papered, draperies should be kept simple, Abbate advises. Fancy patterns and strong colors may clash with wallpaper designs and colors. Sheer glass curtains are an alternative. They may be gathered full, permitting an airy look and letting in light, yet permitting privacy for the room's occupants day or night.

An imaginative idea for a child's room is a window with a "big top" circus theme. The curtains are made sort-of canopied fashion, resembling the entrance to a circus tent. Abbate suggests gold corduroy curtains with scalloped edges with fringe, and corduroy panels hung straight at the sides of the window to complete the tent-entrance idea. The rest of the room should follow the circus theme too, with a wild-animal print wallpaper, circus posters and what have you.

When in doubt about curtain color or treatment, Abbate suggests simplicity. He explains: "You always should beware of clashing patterns and hues in a room," he points out "and by keeping window treatment simple, you allow yourself opportunity to use bold patterns and colors elsewhere, perhaps in wallpaper and in upholstery fabrics."

Another idea before making a fabric purchase is to consider whether you want windows to seem more important or to make them a less obvious feature of the room. If frames or panes are unusually attractive or different, plan a window treatment so they may be seen.

The family room or kitchen may take to cafe curtains in panels of different colors that tie in with the room's over-all scheme. Or you might use matchstick blinds above a single tier of fabric hung on a brass rod.

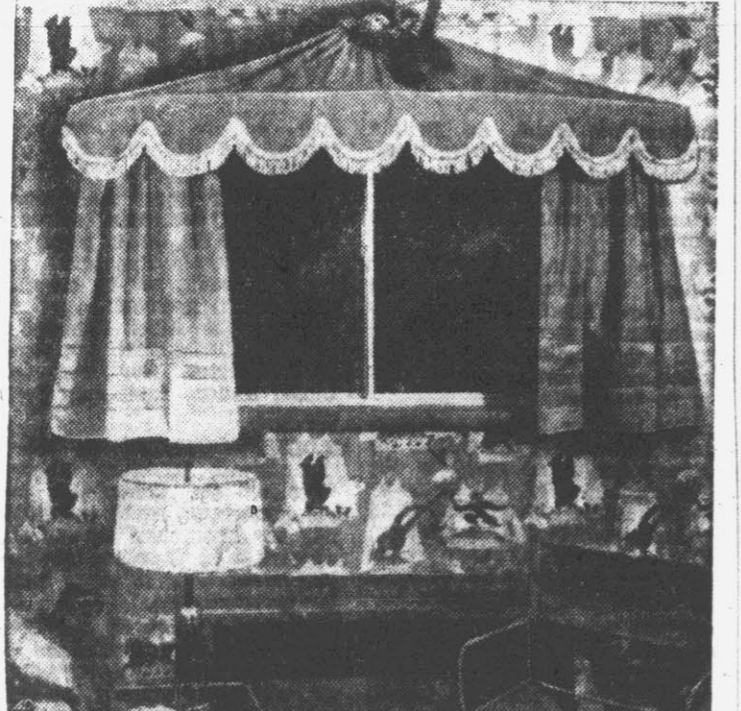

A modified cafe treatment—one tier covering the lower half of the window, and a narrow valance of a matching or complementary fabric at the top is a possibility for bedroom windows.

Requests Are Not For Us Alone

Some legislators who like to look at budget requests from the geographical standpoint rather than from the standpoint of need may be reluctant to give approval to several items which are in a real sense requests to better all of Eastern North Carolina.

Before the 1957 General Assembly will be more requests for capital outlays in Pitt County than in many years. In each instance, however, the requests are not for facilities which will help Greenville or Pitt County alone. They are requests for facilities which are needed in this part of the state and Greenville is obviously the most logical place for them.

First of all there is the budget request from East Carolina College for expansion of the physical plant of the institution. There can be no question about the regional character of the service rendered by East Carolina. Its enrollment includes students from more than 80 of the 100 counties in the state, and its graduates are scattered throughout North Carolina in teaching jobs and other positions.

Secondly there is a request for state funds to establish a school of nursing in conjunction with East Carolina College to fill the crying need for more nurses throughout the Eastern counties. East Carolina College was chosen as the home base for the school of nursing because its existing facilities would reduce the cost of establishing such a school. Already on its faculty are people who could be used to provide some of the instruction student nurses will need, and the student recruitment program at the college could be used to recruit future nurses as well as future teachers without any major revision.

Here again the nature of the request is regional rather than local. The school of nursing is needed in the East where there is not one state supported school of nursing. The area now has to depend on schools of the Piedmont and Western parts of the state to supply it with new nurses. And the supply of nurses is falling far behind the demand. Without a state supported school of nursing in the East, the area cannot hope to alleviate the current shortage of nurses and certainly the future shortage of nurses which will be even more critical than the present.

Support for the proposed school of nursing already has come from a number of counties of this area who recognize the area need for such a school.

Thirdly is the request from the Pitt County Commissioners that the state provide $35,000 to construct a wing on the Pitt health department building to house the Pitt County Mental Health Clinic. Though only 10 months old, the clinic is serving the broad area of Eastern North Carolina. Residents from 19 counties besides Pitt have already been served by the clinic and the demand for its services is increasing rapidly. Although the clinic's name would denote only local interest in it, it is in fact a mental health clinic for all of this section of the state. And there is no similar facility in all Eastern North Carolina and little prospect of others becoming realities in the near future.

These three budget requests may appear that Greenville and Pitt County are a little selfish in asking the state for funds. It is readily seen, however, that the funds requested are not alone for Greenville or Pitt County, but for greater service in three important fields for all the people in Eastern North Carolina.

When the General Assembly considers these requests they should not be considered as requests from Pitt County alone. They are requests from the entire Eastern area of the state to fill real needs of the people of this entire area.

Factory Earnings In N.C. Shows Rise

(Today's guest columnist, Almon Barbour, information officer, State Department of Labor for Lynn Nisbet)

RALEIGH — Average hourly earnings of North Carolina factory workers have increased eight cents, from $1.28 to $1.36, in the year that has elapsed since the $1.00-an-hour Federal Minimum Wage was signed into law.

Although the dollar minimum was not slated to become effective until March 1, 1956, many industries revised their wage structures in advance of the date on which they became legally required to pay at least $1 an hour. By last February, average factory earnings in the state had climbed to $1.33.

After last-minute wage revisions were made by covered establishments to meet the $1 deadline on March 1, the average figure climbed in March to $1.37 for a four cent increase over the previous month. That average held firm through June.

In July it dropped to $1.36, where it has remained up to the present. Principal reason for the penny drop appears to have been slightly less work in covered employment at the premium rate of time and a half the employee's regular rate of pay.

Predictions of serious employment curtailment as a result of the Federal Minimum Wage hike from 75 cents to $1 an hour have failed to materialize in North Carolina. Non-agricultural employment totaled 1,057,000 in the state in September — a gain of 25,000 over the 1,032,000 employed in September, 1955.

The Tar Heel manufacturing labor force, which is virtually 100 per cent covered by the Federal law, totaled 467,300 in September, 1956, showing a net increase of 2,500 over the total of September, 1955. In the same month, 589,700 North Carolina workers were employed in various other non-manufacturing and non-agricultural activities, for an increase of 22,200 in this group during the same twelve-month period.

In only a few small industries which were strongly affected by the $1 minimum is any significant employment decrease in evidence. September employment in the highly seasonal tobacco stemmery and redrying industry, for example, totaled 26,000 which was 2,700 below the 28,700 month last year. In the lumber industry, jobs totaled 38,000, or about 500 below a year ago.

Other strongly affected industries, however, showed definite employment gains over the year. Employment was up by better than two per cent in the apparel and footwear industries, both of which were affected very substantially by the $1 minimum wage. These increases are a part of a long-term trend of job expansion in the whole industrial structure of the State.

Non-agricultural employment has gone steadily upward in the State for the last six years and is still rising. During the entire period from 1950 through 1955, employment registered an average annual increase of 21,000, rising from 911,400 during 1950 to 1,036,900 in 1955.

Dictate Slower, Can'tcha?

By JIMMY ELLIS

A Long Wait For Majority

A heart-rending truth was exposed Tuesday.

That was the day I found out the Democrats are going to have to wait 21 years before they can claim a majority in our three-member family.

The innocent child who lives in our house has a mother who voted for a Republican presidential candidate. To make matters worse, he has a grandmother and grandfather (maternal) who did the same thing.

I am fraught with grief over the whole affair.

Now, far be it from me to try to tell somebody how to vote. I was allowed to vote just as I pleased and I reckon it's my duty to let others do the same thing. But it still hurts.

What hurts so badly is that a two-hour education course on politics I conducted for the Fair Gwendolyn Monday evening went for naught. I explained to her, in elementary terms, why I was, am and expect to be a Democrat. She listened patiently, asked only two questions I couldn't answer and told me I was "sweet" when I had to end the lesson.

The lesson included certain portions of eloquence borrowed from Sam Rayburn, John Clark, Dr. W. E. Marshall, Adlai Stevenson and other persons interested in the welfare of our country. I thought I had the young lady in the bag for the Democratic Party.

I was wrong.

When she marched into Dr. Howard McGinnis' precinct headquarters Tuesday morning she gave me the baby, went into the voting booth, ruined a ballot and smiled sweetly while depositing her vote in the prescribed box. There was not even a hint of what she had done when she took the baby so I could mark my ballot.

The truth didn't come out until late in the day when she innocently asked "Who did you vote for, Honey?"

I immediately replied that so far as I was concerned there was only one name on the ballot. I had no sooner gotten the words out of my mouth when a little light began to shine and curiosity got the best of me.

"Who did you vote for, young lady?" I demanded.

"Well, I got to thinking about the world situation, the danger in changing horses in the middle of the stream and all that sort of thing. I had to vote for Eisenhower. But I voted for all the other Democratic candidates."

I was strongly tempted to take forceful action to make sure she would never do such a thing again. But all I could see in that split-second were gas chambers, prison walls and a wrathful mother-in-law. I thought about a long-range education program for that boy of ours, but action at the moment was out of the question.

So I just cried.

Forecasts Of Boom Will Come

By ELMER ROESSNER
Here is a forecast about forecasts:

In the next few weeks you'll be under a barrage of forecasts to the effect that business will boom like never before to the end of this year, and that the boom will carry on through the first quarter of 1957.

In fact, quite a few predictions in that tenor have already been made. Three big reasons:

1. The election ended remaining doubts about the government's domestic program, signaling a go-ahead for many projects that were held in abeyance until after the results came in.

2. Signed contracts and orders on books almost guarantee a high volume of sales for the next four months or more. In steel, chemical and others industries, many plants are booked solid through March.

3. New models will step up auto production through spring at least, increasing employment and demand for steel, rubber, plastics and other component materials.

LEMON YELLOW, IVY LEAGUE
Here are some more predictions, based on advance information and analyses of developing trends.

Lemon yellow may be the housewares color for 1957. Grey and pink, which dominated everything in 1955, and turquoise, which was this year's leader, are still in demand, but store buyers think that lemon yellow is the next popular color and are placing orders accordingly.

"Ivory League" styles will dominate men's sportswear and cap styles next spring and summer. Polls of retailers and manufacturers show they think the American male wants more of this fashion so popular this year.

The blue suit is coming back. Time was when almost every male had a blue suit on which he could fall back to look drowsy on almost any occasion. In recent years, sales pressure behind other styles caused the custom of lapse. Now merchants, under the leadership of the National Retail Dry Goods Association, are about to revive motions for that useful garment.

STRAWBERRIES AND SQUARE LOOKS
There will be plenty of frozen strawberries this winter. The season's pack, now nearing completion, may be 300,000,000 pounds, a new record and 27,000,000 more than the old record set last year.

The square look in major kitchen appliances may spread. Squared instead of rounded corners have been introduced by one of the largest manufacturers. Other makers are watching public reactions and if that is what Mrs. America wants, that's what she'll get — from everybody!

Synthetic detergents in toilet bars are coming. As a result of chemical convention, it was disclosed that all big cleaning companies are working on the development of bars of synthetic detergents with which to challenge toilet soap sales. Some are almost ready for market testing.

More price rises are coming. Among the things likely to go up further are steel (again), automobiles (yes, again), heating oils (blame trouble in the Middle East), gasoline (but perhaps not until rising demand and reduced supplies meet head-on next summer), traffic fines (many cities and towns are desperate), transportation (by BOTH railroads and airlines, both facing higher labor rates), glass fiber curtains, nylon apparel (fiber prices have already been boosted), borax and boric acid (several producers have scheduled price rises for February), and quite a few important chemicals.

OLD PROMOTER REVEALS NEW DISCOUNT SCHEME
The Old Promoter was chucking when he dropped in today. "I thought I knew all the cute tricks," he said, "but I ran into a fellow who has me topped. He discounts all his own bills.

"If you mail an insufficient payment for a bill, it costs the creditor company something to write you a letter calling your attention to the shortage, mailing it, and opening the books again when you correct the error.

"Many big companies have figured this out, so they overlook minor shortages. Most of them have a limit on the amount ever, we are asking them to rearm, and financing their rearmament.

Russia may scrap the Warsaw Pact, the Communists' counter-part to NATO, as a result of the Polish and Hungarian revolts. It would not be surprising if NATO itself fell apart because of the Allied differences over the Middle East. And some at Washington fear that the United Nations itself may be a casualty.

Alas, They Will Never Know The Old Ordeal

Progress can be so demoralizing.

We have been trying for years to convince youngsters what the "old days" were actually like. The idea hasn't met with much success, and it's a never-ending battle to try new ways of telling the story.

We had thought this week that the old folks were getting some help from an enterprising group of press agents—and, as luck would have it, the weather.

The press agents have launched a plan for a "National Long Underwear Week". The formal observance starts Monday, just in time to take advantage of the snow reported yesterday in the Western part of the state. Whether the snow will last through the week is questionable but it might last just long enough to start this younger generation on a long underwear jag. The press agents might just come up with a whopping success.

The old folks' idea might back-fire, though. From what we can gather, long handles just aren't what they used to be.

We remember long handles as a bulky undergarment more famous for sagging, bulging and itching at critical times than for keeping the wearer warm. Modern manufacturers say that's all a thing of the past. The new models are designed to eliminate slipping below pants cuffs, bunching at the waist and rubbing the wearer raw when he gets backed up close to the stove at an afternoon party.

We remember long handles as a hateful garment that we climbed into when the first frost fell and took off only when the ice broke in the creek or when poppa found out we had tried to skip the Saturday night bath. Who can forget the school teachers checking their children to see that they were adequately protected against winter winds? And the notes that went home to momma when efforts to get out of wearing the things were discovered?

If the modern long johns are all the press agents say they are, young folks just won't know a thing about the old-fashioned type. That could completely ruin the old folks' hopes of education in that particular field.

Perhaps it's better that way. Young folks have enough to worry them now with aggravating sagging, bulging and itching beneath Ivy League clothes.

Progress can be so demoralizing at times.

Other Editors Are Saying.. Security Once Began At Home

(The Charlotte Observer)

The distraught mother of a spoiled four-year-old writes to a child psychologist to find out what to do when the kid will not obey anything his mother says. The psychological service replies with complicated advice about sending the little stinker to a day nursery and if that does not work, do so and so and so and so.

Apparently neither the psychological service nor the distraught mother thought about the hair brush treatment, which has been known to fall when it is judiciously applied to spoiled brats and little stinkers. Back in the days before books were written about how to rear children without breaking their little devilish spirits, juvenile delinquency was not a national problem.

We did not psychoanalyze our parents, and they did not psychoanalyze us. We did not have television panels to tell the world what was wrong with our parents and how dreadfully they misunderstood us. In that respect, the problem was simple: Our parents understood us too well.

Opinions In Brief

OUR NATIVE TONGUE
(Charleston (S.C.) News and Courier)

Being an old fogey, we have numerous clichés and set phrases. Among them is the invention of new verbs. For years we have fought (in vain) against the use of contact as a transitive verb. We took up cudgels against saying that some writer had "authored a novel." Our printers made it "authorized," possibly an improvement. Now we shudder anew at a clipping sent us by a local grammarian from an otherwise respectable South Carolina newspaper. Our contemporary reported that "the meeting will be chaired by Mrs. ..."

Well that just about floors us.

ABSOLUTES

Is there anything in the moral life really established? There are a lot of people who think so. They are dead set against what are generally referred to as ethical absolutes. Everything in the moral realm, they contend is relative. It depends on the individual, on the age, on the country, on the culture. Try out everything and see for yourself. If an ethical concept works it's true; if it doesn't, it's false.

But there are some things established in the physical world, and we every day accommodate ourselves to these established realities. The force of gravitation is established, the multiplication

Meet Anderson Of The Met

By W. G. ROGERS
NEW YORK — (AP) — "We have known how to bear suffering which other peoples don't have to bear," Marian Anderson said to me.

"We also know that whenever we are in competition with whites, in the arts or in any other fields, we have to be twice as good as you are or people won't think we're any good at all. To do as well as you, we have to do better."

The great Negro contralto has a quiet, velvety speaking voice. Perhaps because she is more used to the concert than the operatic stage, she hasn't the florid gestures that usually emphasize the remarks made by the stars from the opera houses.

She had been telling about some of the exciting things which had happened to her, like her rise from poverty, and her appearance at the Metropolitan Opera and the recent publication (Viking) of her autobiography, when I interrupted with a question:

"Some of us whites are quick to claim white superiority," I said, but I sometimes wonder whether there aren't some respects in which there is a Negro superiority.

There is nothing established in the world around us. So why say that there is nothing established in the world of good and evil? Wouldn't you say that the commandments against killing and stealing are pretty well established? A lot of people would like to believe that the law against adultery is not established, but just ask yourself if you would like to go on living in a world in which the commandment against adultery had been repealed and as a result your home had started to break up the things you value most had begun to crumble.

The Bible sets forth absolute moral values, and we had better heed its teachings.

Nobody Knows How The U. S. Will Fare

By RAY TUCKER
WASHINGTON — "What will be the result of the present international 'middle'?" asks Mrs. G. K. of Eridport, Conn. "I refer to the fact that Russia seems to be abandoning her brand of imperialism in Central Europe, while Britain and France embark on an aggressive colonial program in the Middle East. Where will the United States wind up?"

Answer: Nobody at Washington can answer these questions, not even President Eisenhower or Secretary Dulles. They hope, of course, that when and if the Egypt-Israel-Audio-French crisis is resolved, there will be a return to the old order of a re-peached Western Alliance against Russia. They, of course, do not yet trust Moscow's intentions with respect to full freedom for the satellites.

However, there is an opposing viewpoint held by prominent officials within the Administration and students of foreign affairs. They foresee a breakup of all postwar alignments under which the so-called free nations accepted United States leadership, while the captive states remained under the Kremlin's control.

MANIFESTATION OF NEW STATUSES That was admittedly an unnatural arrangement. Although they needed our postwar aid desperately, Britain and France resented their role as charity recipients. Now that the Russian menace has disappeared, as they believe, they intend to resume and declare their independence of us. Their joint and secret decision to invade Egypt was only the first manifestation of their new status.

Regardless of Russia's plans, the rebellions in Poland and Hungary point toward the end of Moscow's domination in Central Europe and the Balkans. Each country will gradually veer away from the Kremlin kind of communism, and develop its own nationalistic brand. As Britain and Paris may still have sentimental and historical ties with us, so they will probably maintain similar connections with the Soviet.

HISTORICAL PRECEDENT There is no historical precedent for these attachments and detachments, these associations and disassociations. International relationships never remain static or frozen.

For instance, Russia and England were chiefly responsible for Napoleon's defeat early in the 19th century. But, not so many years later, the British and French combined to overwhelm Russia in the Crimean War. European history is full of these shufflings and reshufflings.

ASKING FORMER ENEMIES TO REARM We are now engaged in such an awkward experiment. Only 11 years after we helped to crush Hitler and the Japanese war lords, and to end militarism in those countries forever, we are asking them to rearm, and financing their rearmament.

Russia may scrap the Warsaw Pact, the Communists' counter-part to NATO, as a result of the Polish and Hungarian revolts. It would not be surprising if NATO itself fell apart because of the Allied differences over the Middle East. And some at Washington fear that the United Nations itself may be a casualty.

GLOOMY OUTLOOK In short, the postwar structure of two "worlds," the Communist and the democratic, which was actually an emergency contraption, appears to be vanishing into history along with so many similar arrangements.

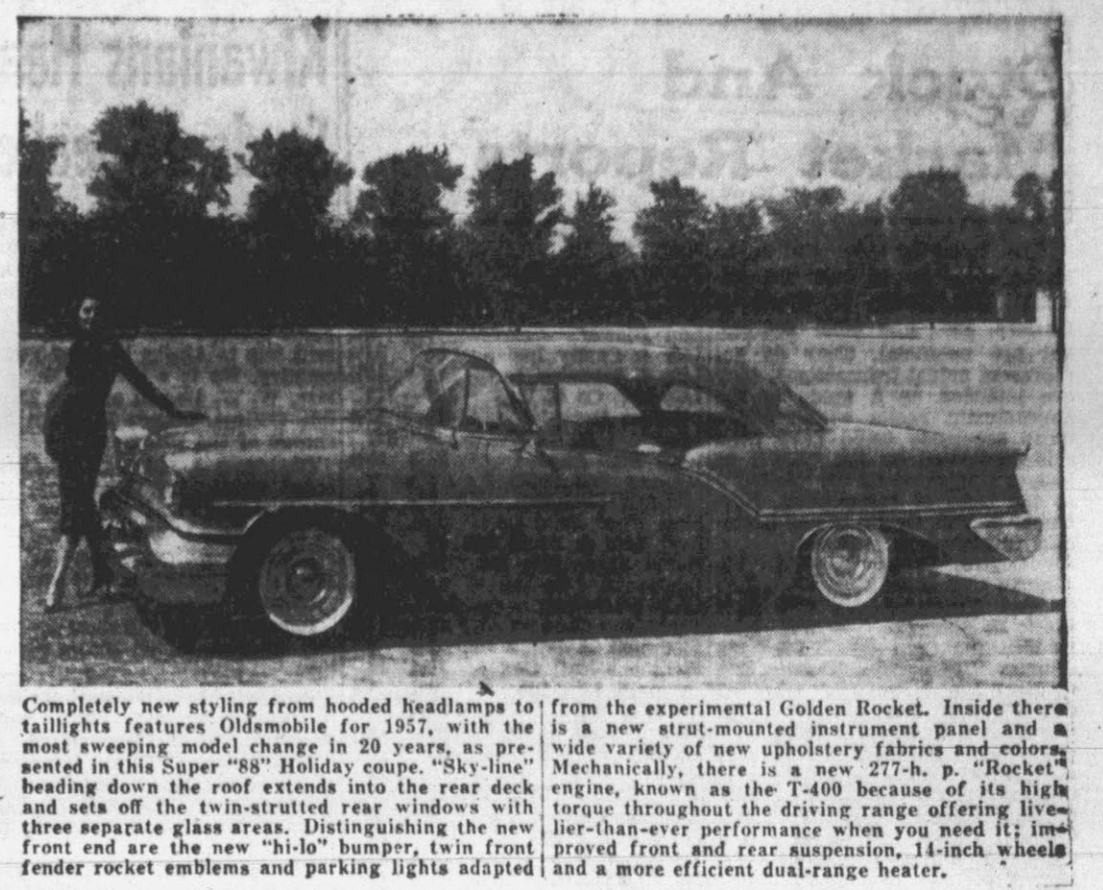

Whether or not, Congress may take cognizance of such a development by curtailing or terminating entirely the vast sums which the American taxpayers have contributed to support this shaky system.

Increasing debt is but one sign of increasing prosperity and improving living standards. In many cases the new bond issues are the result of the great growth in population in general and of certain areas in particular that has marked the era of good times and industrial expansion.

Picked Crop Of $25,000 In Bills

WEATHERFORD, Tex. (AP)—Dairy farmer Oscar Womack picked a crop of $25,000 green bills yesterday and then stopped his harvest because he "just got tired of picking it up."

Womack, 27, said he found the money—more than $25,000—scattered in weeds along the bank of Willow Creek which runs through his farm.

His mother, Mrs. Annie Womack, about 50, brought the dirty bills into the First National Bank here wrapped in a yellow scarf. Amazed bank officials immediately got in touch with the Secret Service in Dallas.

Vice President Fred Measures said he was certain some or all of the money may be good.

Womack, 27, arrived at the bank sometime after his mother. Told it might be good money, he left saying, "Guess I'll go back and pick up some more."

Measures said, "I've straightened out about $25,000 of it, and there's still more."

"There has been an attempt to burn it and it had been rained on and was muddy. The face of the bills looked good, but the backs looked pale, and it may be counterfeit," he said.

The money is being sent to the Secret Service in Dallas.

It was just a season ago that Miss Anderson became the first of her race to sing a major role at the Metropolitan Opera, and she is still so full of that stirring experience that she can give a blow-by-blow, minute-by-minute account of general manager Rudolf Bing saying this, her own manager Sol Hurok saying that and maestro Dimitri Mitropoulos saying the other, all adding up to her engagement.

"Did she feel nervous?" "I certainly did. I shall always think it is bad not to have butterflies, it shows a loss of some of the necessary excitement. But the whole affair was terrifically thrilling."

From One Exciting Career To Another, Equally Spectacular
Onetime Airline Stewardess Will Make Her Home In Korea

By ANNETTE ... Reflector Woman's Editor
Miss Cora Boyd Redditt has retired from one exciting career to cash in on what appears to be one equally as spectacular.

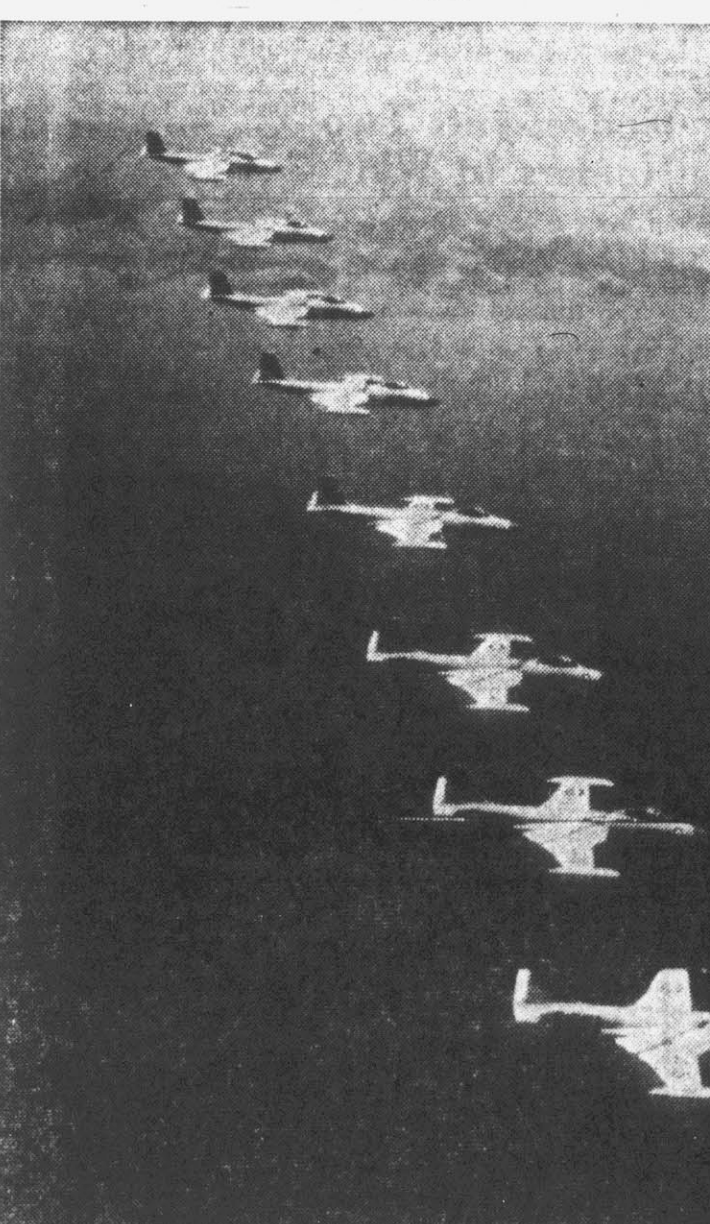

Possessing that magical something which Pan American World Airways calls a "flying personality" Miss Redditt admits candidly that nothing short of "Jeep" Streper would have forced her into retirement after eight years of flying high.

Hired October 4, 1948 as a stewardess for Pan American, she terminated her employment with them October 12, 1956 to become the wife of Cmdr. Harold Preston Streper.

Among the valuable trade secrets she learned as a member of the Pan American family is a quality called adaptability. She treasures it even more highly now since her plans for a formal military wedding have been frustrated indefinitely by "things military."

Plans Uncertain
Original wedding plans called for the ceremony to take place October 19 at the Alameda Navy Air Station Base Chapel in Alameda, Calif.

POSE TOGETHER—Miss Redditt and her husband-to-be pose for a formal portrait in uniform. He's wearing the United States Navy blues and she the uniform of Pan American World Airways. She decided to cash in her flying career of eight years to become the wife of Commander Streper.

FLYING HIGH—Flying in the above formation are Cmdr. Harold Preston Streper, foreground, and his jet palats who will be his groomsmen. The bridegroom-to-be was commanding officer of Jet Fighter Squadron One Ninety-Four (pictured) which has recently completed an extensive tour of duty in the Far East aboard the Attack Carrier USS Oriskany before his new assignment as United States Naval Attache to the Republic of Korea. Wedding bells will ring for Miss Redditt and Commander Streper in California as soon as his current briefing is completed. The Oriskany's Captain will give Miss Redditt away. Her attendants will be fellow-stewardesses.

Calif. Being a military man, Commander Streper, too, has learned that adaptability is no luxury in his trade. He is now in Washington undergoing intensive briefing for his new assignment as US Naval Attache and US Naval Attache for the Republic of Korea and that briefing has put wedding plans in the background right at the moment.

When that briefing is over and wedding bells have rung, the two will be off immediately to Seoul and a whole new way of life for Miss Redditt. Although she has traveled quite a bit as a stewardess, this will be her first trip to Korea. The two will live in a two-story house and will be a part of the American Colony there.

Bride's Activities
With what does a young American bride occupy her time in Korea? First of all, there will be the language to master. With Korean servants to manage and Korean guests to entertain this will be the attractive young housewife's number 1 problem.

As the wife of an embassy staff member, Miss Redditt will be expected to entertain official guests of the embassy. With this in mind the Navy Department has furnished her with a handbook on protocol and invited her to come to Washington for a briefing session of her own. She left Tuesday for this session.

Miss Redditt also will be doing a certain amount of social work among the orphaned children of Korea. With few American women there, she will have little chance for gossiping over the back fence. Miss Redditt and Commander Streper have plans for golf and horseback riding in their new home as they are enthusiasts of both.

Among her other activities the young housewife hopes to find time to get down to work on her first love, writing. She recalls creative writing was her major interest in college and upon leaving Virginia Intermont in Bristol, Va., she set out like many another budding genius to New York and a life in the literary world.

There she discovered her knowledge of people was merely academic. She began to look for opportunities to learn more about actual people and their reactions. And so Miss Redditt decided to abandon her writing career for the moment and giving up her modeling job—which she held also during this time in New York—she applied for a job with Pan American World Airways and was hired.

Because of her proficiency in Spanish, she was assigned the Central and South American Route. In the meantime she was being taught Portuguese and Japanese by Pan American and four years later was based in San Francisco with the Pacific Division flying the Central and South Pacific route.

Flying Good School
Miss Redditt considered her experiences in flying to have been a very good school of human nature. She found she got to know people pretty well on flights. With airplane travel becoming so common, Miss Redditt found familiar faces turning up all over the globe.

She recalls on at least one occasion she had seven passengers aboard who had flown with her before and some of them a number of times before. In addition to meeting and observing a number of people, this job permitted her to know peoples from many countries and cultures. She found her intellectual horizons constantly expanding and her tolerance broadening.

Debt To Pan American
She owes, then, to Pan American a good deal of her education. She now feels adequately equipped to write with authority about people—in her short stories. In Korea she hopes to find time to resume her writing.

She owes to Pan American, also, her schedule, putting her on the right spot of the globe when "Jeep" Streper's ship came in. They met in Manila Jan. 2, 1955, Miss Redditt on a flight with only eight hours there. The next time their paths crossed was in Japan some four months later, with the future bride again having only eight hours for courting purposes. This early pattern of courtship appears to have continued right up to their formal engagement announcement on August 7 of this year. The announcement party took place in Honolulu and on borrowed times. From this time on, Miss Redditt began to look forward eagerly to her hours off, finding in them opportunities to shop on her various stops.

Five Fabulous Days
She recalls "five fabulous days" in Hong Kong where she sandwiched dinner with her future husband's Captain in on a series of trousseau shopping sprees.

It was there that she bought most of the beautiful oriental silks, now made up by a Chinese dressmaker into authentic oriental high styles, she will pack one of these days for her life in Korea. All of her trousseau dresses are of typical oriental fabrics with their elaborate brocaded effects and fine detail work. They are styled with high mandarin collars and feature slits up the skirt which facilitate movement. As Miss Redditt points out, those narrow sheath skirts have to have slits in order to climb in and out of the low cars. In addition to her oriental-styled wardrobe, Miss Redditt had her wedding dress made in Hong Kong and bought the material for her bridesmaids' dresses in Japan. She will give the attendants pearls bought in Japan and will wear a string of pearls herself that her husband-elect collected and had strung in 1948 for the bride that he had not then met.

Other Purchases
The young bride-to-be's silver was purchased some time ago in Japan and is now packed and ready to be shipped to Korea, along with a host of other personal and household items that she has picked up on her flights. Being able to shop on a world-wide scale has been one of the things the recently-retired stewardess liked most about her job.

Her husband-to-be is a graduate of the College of Wooster, Wooster, Ohio. He entered the Navy in 1942 and received his wings in Jacksonville, Fla. in 1943. Until his recent assignment as U.S. Naval Attache to the Republic of Korea, he was Commanding Officer of Jet Fighter Squadron One Ninety-Four which completed an extensive tour of duty in the Far East Aboard the Attack Carrier USS Oriskany.

Good Words
Miss Redditt has nothing but good words for her past career as an airline stewardess. She feels that it has been good preparation for her life as Commander Streper's wife and their new career together.

During these eight years she has averaged 90 hours per month in the air and has never missed a flight assignment. She resigned her job in October to become a wife. Greenville High School's Phantoms came to life in the fourth quarter last night in College Stadium to close their season on a winning note.

The Phantoms went 82 yards in five plays for a touchdown that gave them a 7-3 victory over Roanoke Rapids. The win left the Phantoms with a 3-6-1 record for the year.

Billy Sermons gave the Phantoms their victory with a 31-yard run off-tackle. The touchdown came only about a minute after Roanoke Rapids had taken a 3-0 lead on a five-yard field goal by Rex Harris.

The touchdown drive was Greenville's most determined push of the night. Charlie Smith gave some indication that the Phants were putting all their marbles in the game when he slammed the Yellow Jackets' kick-off from the 18 back to the 38.

On the first play from scrimmage, quarterback Mack Roebuck set sail around his own right end and picked up five yards before an attempted pitch-out to Sermons rolled out of bounds. Robert Howell then went wide around left end to the Roanoke Rapids 37, breaking away from two men in the process and stopping only when piled out of bounds after a 20-yard gain.

Sermons then set up the scoring play with a hard six-yard gain over right tackle to the 31. The next play was exactly the same except that Sermons side-stepped a line backer, cut to his right and went all the way. Arthur Andrews kicked the point.

Greenville had another touchdown taken away from them on a penalty and lost a second on a fumble on the one-yard line.

The first TD the Phants lost was a 64-yard punt return by Sermons with seconds remaining in the first quarter. He caught the ball on the dead run on his own 36, pulled away from two men and took off down the left side lines. He got some good blocking on the run but officials ruled one of the blocks was clipping on the Roanoke Rapids line and the Phants were put back on the 24.

On the next series of plays run by Greenville, Roebuck's passing and Sermons' running put the Phantoms on the Roanoke Rapids one with a third down and goal. The drive ended right there, however, when Roebuck and the other backs got their signals crossed and a pitch-out rolled around only long enough to be recovered by Rex Harris of the Jackets.

Harris' field goal looked mighty big when he booted it from a slight right angle late in the third quarter. Roanoke Rapids had gotten possession of the ball on the Greenville 17 after a punt had been partially blocked but had a hard time moving from that point. They wound up the series with a fourth down, five-to-go situation on the five. Time was called and Harris warmed up during the time out. His kick, from the 15, just did make it over the cross bar but it was good enough for three points.

After the Phantoms scored their touchdown they had to call on every single bit of their defensive strength to stop a Roanoke Rapids drive. The Yellow Jackets switched to a single wing and powered their way to the Greenville 26 before Edwin Wilkerson and Angus Duff led the defense in stopping the attack.

Wilkerson, Duff, and Wade Jordan were outstanding in the line for the Phantoms with Billy Cox also doing a good job. Howell ran well on offense and picked up most of the Phantoms' big-yardage gains. Sermons, of course, played an outstanding game on both offense and defense.

Halfback Bobby Gray and fullback Butch Barrow both ran well for the Yellow Jackets. Rex Harris led the line play with top assistance from tackle Jody Hollingsworth.

FARMVILLE — Ayden's Tornadoes, led by hard-running fullback Tommy Edwards, pounded out a 20-0 victory over Wake County Champion Wendell here last night in the Eastern Class A play-offs.

Wendell, completely out-classed by Ayden's hard-charging line and fleet backs, never was in the game. They could muster only one sustained drive and that fell 20 yards short of the Tornado goal as the game ended.

Ayden received the opening kickoff and immediately started a drive for White Ram paydirt, only to be stopped on a pass interception by halfback Rupert May on the invaders' 23 yard line. Wendell took over and in three plays fell one yard short of a first. Halfback R. L. Collins gathered in Wendell's punt and returned it to the Ram 43 before the Blues could put the damper on him.

Collins For TD
Fullback Edwards, a replica of pro football's Dall Atkinson, only smaller, skirted right end for 14 yards to the Ram 29. With third down and seven to go on the 26, Earl Carmichael punched his way to the 20, one yard shy. Quarterback Lindy Dunn called on Edwards for the needed yard. Evidently, though, he must have misunderstood signals. He didn't get one yard, but 7, down to the 13 of Wendell. Edwards then passed to Dunn for a first on the two. Collins rammed off the left side of his line for the big six points. After being set back 5 yards on the extra point try on an offside penalty, Dunn faded back and dropped the seventh point in right end Leslie Stocks' hands.

Minutes later, Coach Stuart Tripp's Tornadoes, running from a split-T, unbalanced line formation were knocking at the door again, only to fumble away their chance. On the hand-off Wendell skirted from Collins' hands like a bar of soap and a Wendell halfback fell on it in the end zone for a touchdown.

The Tornadoes fumbled six times and lost three. Wendell backs held on to the ball nicely, fumbling only once. Most of Ayden's bobbles came in the first half.

Rams Fumble
Quarterback Brodie Baker took the second half kickoff on his five and scampered to the 47 before being stopped. With second down and nine to go, fullback J. B. Wood cracked over tackle for 17 yards. Ayden's 35 for the Rams second first down on the game. For the first time in the game, the visiting Wake County team was on the move, but disaster struck on the next play. Halfback D. V. Smith couldn't hold the hand-off and an alert Tornado lineman covered the ball. Ayden took over on their own 33.

Edwards Runs
From this point it took the Macons only three plays to score. Collins fought his way for eight yards through the center. Edwards, for the first and only time, was stopped dead in his tracks. With a third down and two situation, signal-caller Dunn pitched out to Edwards. The big fullback wasn't to be denied this time. He swung around his own right end and chugged 59 yards for a touchdown. He was by the end and past the secondary before they could do any more than aim at him. He outran the safety man and went over standing up. Dunn flipped a pass to end Horton Jolly for the 14th point.

Another TD
On the first play of the last quarter, diet halfback Clarence Mills passed to running-mate Sheridan Rutledge for 12 yards and a first down on Wendell's 35 yard line. Edwards got two through the middle. Halfback Harold Worthington moved out around end and scampered 23 yards for a first down on the Wendell 10 yard line. Edwards smacked the middle for five yards to the Wendell five. Dunn dropped back and threw a perfect strike to end Leslie Stocks, but the rangy pass receiver couldn't hold it. On the next play, Mills moved to the one yard marker. With fourth and one, Dunn followed behind center Joe Dunn for the needed yard and a touchdown. Another quarterback sneak for the extra point fell six inches short.

Big 'Loot' Awaits Football Winner In Today's Games

By ED WILKS
The Associated Press

College football went a-bowling today in a half dozen games that should set up an early line on the New Year's Day classics.

Expense-paid winter tours to the Rose, Orange, Sugar and Cotton Bowls were among the loot as Georgia Tech and Tennessee tangled in a battle of unbeaten, Minnesota made its pitch against Iowa, Stanford played Oregon State, Colorado met Missouri, Maryland confronted Clemson and Texas A&M had it out with Southern Methodist.

Oklahoma, Michigan State and Ohio State, barred from bowl play, had nothing more of an incentive than national rankings and conference titles. The top-ranked Sooners, of course, also had that elastic winning record ready to be stretched to 37 games in a meeting with Iowa State. Michigan State met Purdue and Ohio State played Indiana.

The other three members of the top 10 in this week's Associated Press poll have a mixed diet. Syracuse, No. 9, carried hopes of bowl bid against Holy Cross. Michigan, played Illinois and hoped to stay in position for the Big Ten's Rose Bowl assignment, should Iowa or Minnesota falter. Miami (Fla.), No. 8, was idle.

George Washington got the week end started with a 32-6 victory over Richmond. The Colonial, knocked out of the top 20 by West Virginia last week, led 13-0 at the half on touchdowns by fullback Bo Austin.

The Sugar Bowl — That New Orleans' extravaganza which finds itself virtually limited to Southern teams by Louisiana's segregation law — had a scout at Atlanta for the Tech-Tennessee tussle. Both winner and loser, however, probably can feel safe about a bowl date, with the Cotton Bowl beckoning along with the Sugar.

Also at stake in the battle between Tech's second ranked Wrecks and the third-ranked Vols was the Southeastern Conference crown. A great day might even put the winner within easy hailing distance of Oklahoma atop the national rankings.

Minnesota, No. 6, and Iowa, No. 15, belted each other in the TV game of the day as each tried to nail an initial trip to the Rose Bowl. The Gophers were unbeaten but once tied; Iowa 3-1. Their records likely will leave the Big Ten title to Ohio State — trying for an unprecedented "triple" — but the Buckeyes are banned from the bowl by probation. Michigan State can't repeat because of a league ban.

Oregon State, No. 14, and unranked Stanford went at it to gain a foothold as the leading candidate for the Pacific Coast Conference's berth in the Rose Bowl.

Colorado could wrap up second place in the Big Seven and gain the Orange Bowl berth — left vacant by Oklahoma which can't repeat — by beating Missouri. Clemson, No. 11, could bag the Atlantic Coast Conference reservation in the Orange Bowl by defeating Maryland, thus remaining unbeaten.

Texas A&M could take a good grip on the Southwest Conference title by beating SMU, but the Aggies need a pardon from the NCAA next week to make it as the host team in the Cotton Bowl. An SMU victory would open the title race to the Mustangs, Rice and defending champ Texas Christian as well as A&M.

Winners Named In ECC Tourney

Charles Russell of Carthage and Sylvia Britt of Rowland have won championship honors in East Carolina College's fall quarter table tennis tournament.

The tournament closed this week when Russell defeated Dock Smith of Princeton, 3-0, and Miss Britt defeated Dorothy Fagan of Rocky Mount, 3-1. The winners will receive trophies from the games committee of the College Student Union Board, sponsors of the tournament.

The divisional tournaments began three weeks ago with 25 entrants in the men's play and eight in the women's tournament. Semifinals, played Monday, matched Russell against Bobby Nunn of Greenville, and Dick Little of Delaware Water Gap, Pa., against Smith in the men's play and Mary Lou Wyrick of Gibsonville against Miss Fagan and Miss Britt against former women's champion Nancy Rogers of Wilson in the women's division.

Semi-final results included Russell's 3-0 win over Nunn Smith's 3-1 victory over Little, Miss Fagan's 2-1 win over Miss Wyrick and Miss Britt's 2-1 win over Miss Rogers.

Ike Tells Newcombe Luck Unexplainable

TOKYO (AP) — President Eisenhower told Dodger pitcher Tom Newcombe that "I for one was pulling for you" in the World Series but "hard luck is something that no one in the world can explain."

In a personal letter to the big pitcher, who was pounded out of the box twice in the series with the New York Yankee, President Eisenhower said:

"Every athlete in every sport in the world knows that some days things just don't break right."

The President, in his letter delivered yesterday through the American Embassy in Tokyo, added:

"I think I know how much you wanted to win a World Series game; I, for one, was pulling for you."

But I suggest when you think over this past season, you think of the 27 games you won that were so important in bringing Brooklyn into the World Series. "Good luck in Japan."

Newcombe has had bad luck in Japan. He was batted out of the box in

Olympic Entries From Hungary Reach Melbourne

MELBOURNE (AP)—Sixty members and officials of the Hungarian Olympic team arrived at Esplanade airport today and received a tumultuous welcome.

More than 500 persons were on hand, most of them immigrant Hungarians carrying bouquets of flowers and wearing the Hungarian colors of red, white and green with a mourning stripe of black, crowded the huge reception room to give the team boisterous cheers.

They waved and yelled the Hungarian war cry of "Hooy, Hooy, Hoorah" to the chant of American version of "We Want a Touchdown."

The athletes, some of them also wearing mourning stripes because of the recent rebellion, in Hungary, waved and smiled as they disembarked.

Wins National Billiard Crown

BROOKLYN (AP) — Irving Crane, Rochester, N.Y., defeated Jimmy Moore, Albuquerque, N.M., 150-32, in nine innings last night in the national pocket billiard championship tournament.

Crane had a high run of 57 in winning his sixth match out of seven. He will meet the tournament leader, Luther Lassiter, Elizabeth City, N.C., tonight. Lassiter has a 7-1 record.

In other matches, Danny Gardner, Newark, N.J., defeated Frank McGown of Brooklyn, 150-145 in 17 innings and Mike Eufemia, Ridgewood, N.Y., bested Al Coslosky of Philadelphia, 150-128, in 12 innings.

25 Cars Entered In Micro Race

Approximately 25 cars are expected to enter tomorrow's Micro Midget races at the Pitt County Fair Grounds track. Starting time will be 2 p.m.

Last Sunday's 40-lap main event, a benefit race for the Pitt County Mental Health Association, resulted in a couple of accidents, neither serious. Ralph Evans of Greenville turned over and Charlie Wells, also of Greenville, ran through the fence on the second turn and flipped over but neither man was hurt.

Olympic Cagers Have No Trouble

LONG BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Although big Bill Russell contributed only five points, the United States Olympic basketball team had little trouble downing a strong AAU team last night, 88-59.

Chuck Darling, the 6 foot 9 hook shot artist from Iowa took up the slack left by Russell's low-scoring effort to lead the Olympians to their 10th straight win over Kirby Shoes.

Darling scored 20 points, 16 of them in the first half when the Olympians piled up a 49-31 lead over Kirby's, composed largely of former USC and UCLA players.

The Olympic team, which leaves tomorrow for Melbourne and the games, also received a strong performance from guard K. D. Jones, Russell's USF teammate. Jones scored 14 points, including his team's first six.

The Giants have won four in a row, capped by a hard-earned 17-14 win over Pittsburgh last week.

It doesn't seem that Washington can turn on a league leader for the second time and upset the hope, but Detroit had a busy time last Sunday before downing San Francisco 17-13. The 49ers made a touchdown in the final two minutes, but it was nullified on an offside penalty.

This will be the second meeting between the Bears and Green-

Bay, Chicago having taken the earlier game 37-21.

Four other opponents will be paired for the second time, Philadelphia having defeated Pittsburgh 35-21 last month, while San Francisco edged Los Angeles 33-30 a month ago.

Baltimore, only team to defeat the Bears (28-21 in the season opener) will try to keep in the running in the Western race, by winning at Cleveland.

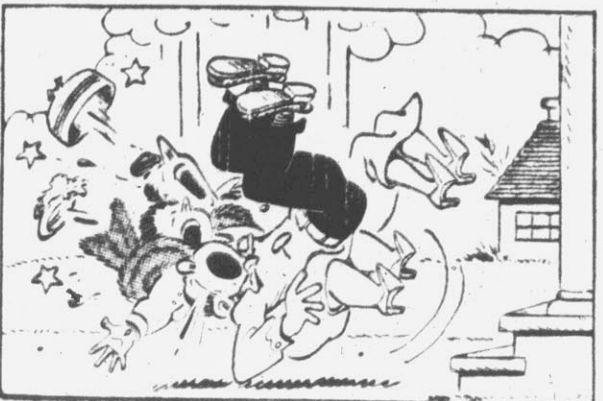

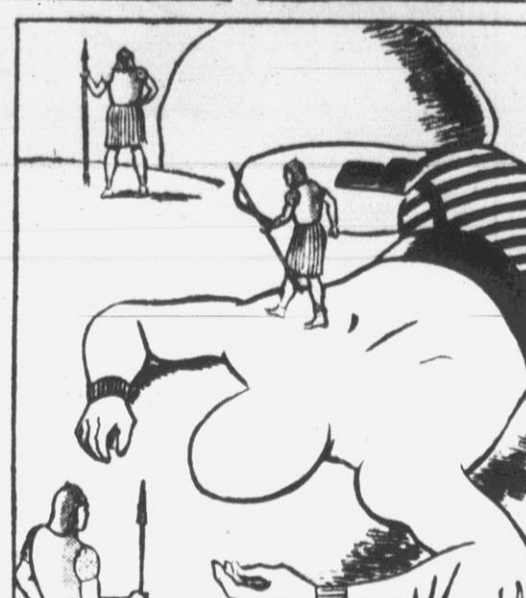

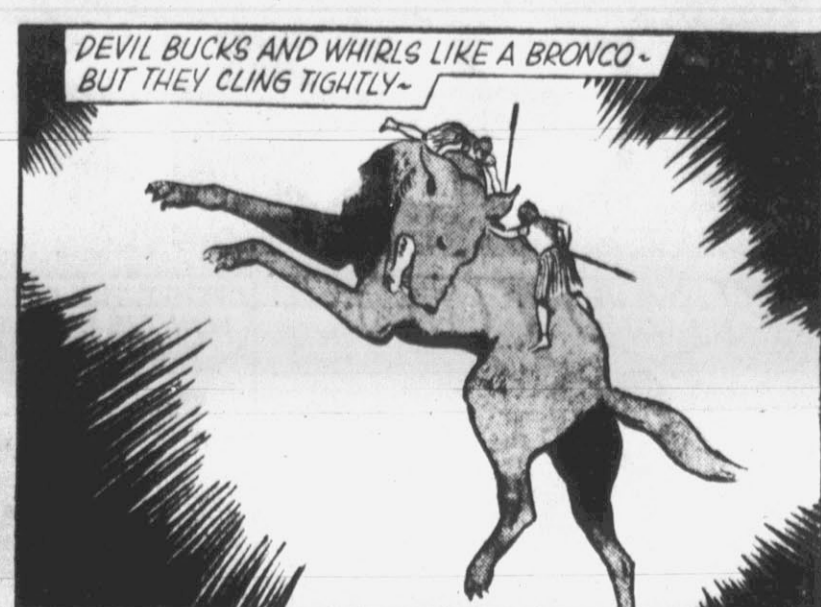

Last week Baltimore and Washington were idle. Baltimore is in third place with a 2-3 record, while Cleveland has a 2-4 mark, tied with Philadelphia and Pittsburgh for last place.

If Egyptian Conflict Has Victor, He's Not In Sight

By JAMES MARLOW
Associated Press News Analyst
WASHINGTON (AP) — If there is a winner in the Egyptian conflict he is not yet in sight.

The fighting was done by the British, French, Israelis and Egyptians. The United States and Russia are in it up to their necks, trying to stop it and trying to come out looking good.

The United Nations is mixed up in it too, trying to gain a victory for world opinion and moral force over military force.

The Israelis said they attacked Egypt to put an end to torments by their neighbor, who had been raiding over their border. They also wanted to collect some Egyptian real estate, which they did.

When the shooting stopped they held the Gaza Strip and the Sinai Peninsula and said they wouldn't give up that territory. But under pressure from President Eisenhower, Russia, Britain and the U. N. they said yesterday they'd go back into Israel to let a U. N. police force take over.

The British and French said they went into Egypt to separate the Israelis and Egyptians and to protect the Suez Canal. But the only ones they shot at were Egyptians. And the canal is now so fouled up from sunken ships it may be out of use for months.

The British and French — under pressure from Eisenhower, the Russians and the U. N. — not only agreed to stop shooting before they had taken over all of the canal area but they agreed to leave the canal.

They may have gained a point on agreeing to quit the canal because they will turn it over to a U. N. police force in the hope later an international agreement will take control of the waterway away from Egyptian President Nasser.

But they can't be sure of that now. It was primarily Nasser's seizure of the canal and fear that he might close it any time he pleased that took them into Egypt in the first place, no matter what reason they gave.

The British, French and Israelis' Premier Bulganin wrote to Britain's Prime Minister Eden. Bulganin didn't — in so many words — threaten to get into the Middle East war if the British and French didn't quit. The British and French seemed to think he might mean that. The British began to sound softer.

Meanwhile, Bulganin suggested to Eisenhower that the United States and Russia act together to stop the fighting. That was "the last thing Eisenhower wanted. It would put Russian troops into the Middle East and it would have the United States fight its allies. He turned down Bulganin's offer.

Bulganin's letter to Eisenhower was a phony. He was suggesting that the United States and Russia cooperate only if the U. N. would. But the Russians sounded so tough, even though making double-talk, that the United States and everyone else was afraid of World War III.

Whether his influence turned the trick is not known. For the Russians, seeing their chance to pose as the only friend the Arabs had and thus move into the Middle East if the West loses out there, got into the act too.

Eisenhower then had the unpleasant job of trying to bail out the British, French and Western influence in the Middle East by putting all the heat he could on the British and French to back up.

Whether his influence turned the trick is not known. For the Russians, seeing their chance to pose as the only friend the Arabs had and thus move into the Middle East if the West loses out there, got into the act too.

New 'Tracking' Job For Ex-Bookkeeper

A Williamston man who once concerned himself with keeping track of assets and liabilities for a Greenville business has recently been assigned to a new kind of tracking operation.

Nelson Leggett, once a bookkeeper at J. B. Kittrell and Company, is now an Army lieutenant and commanding officer of a Nike unit at Bristol, R. I. A Nike is a 20-foot electronics missile named for the Greek goddess of victory. It has the singular purpose of destroying enemy aircraft headed for industrial targets in America's crowded Northeast.

As commanding officer of the 110-man unit, Leggett directs the operation of three radar units which will be used in case of an enemy air attack. One of the radar units tracks incoming aircraft. If such planes are found to be a part of an enemy formation, a second radar unit is locked on the enemy aircraft. When the second unit shows that the incoming plane is within range the Nike is fired and tracked with a third radar unit.

Data from the second and third radars are sent to the Nike missile while it is in the air. The technique theoretically insures a hit on the target no matter how much it maneuvers in an effort to escape the missile.

Leggett is a long-time veteran of Army duty but the present assignment is his first with a Nike unit.

guided missile unit. He entered the service via the draft in 1943 after graduation from Williamston High School and was sent to flight school. He went to Europe after receiving his wings and flew 35 combat missions, winning the Distinguished Flying Cross in the process. Just prior to his discharge in 1945 he piloted a B-29 while stationed at El Paso, Texas.

He entered N. C. State after the war to study industrial engineering and later worked with the Virginia Electric and Power Co. He was recalled to active duty in 1951 and was sent to Korea as a pilot of an L-1, a single engine observation plane.

After eight months of duty in Korea he returned home when his father died. Leggett had decided while in Korea to stay in service and when the Army offered him a chance to take Nike training last February he started a 16-week training program.

While the Nike site is being completed and put into operation, Lt. Leggett, his wife and their three children are living in Bristol.

No Moonshiners In New England

BOSTON (AP) — Moonshiners would do well to stay out of New England.

"New Englanders never had a taste for moonshine," according to Richard N. McCarthy, enforcement chief of the Treasury's alcohol tax unit.

Out of 23,714 stills smashed last year, he said, only 15 were in New England.

Retriever Needs Some Retrieving

YAKIMA, Wash. (AP) — E. V. Putnam's dog Pud is giving him some concern.

The spaniel has been doing some retrieving without sanction.

Objects retrieved in a recent period of a few weeks included six of the neighbors' aluminum pots and pans, one copper-bottomed pot and two china dishes.

On an eight-hour hunting trip however, Pud failed to flush a single game bird.

Several members of the East Carolina faculty, staff, and student body will participate in the production of "My Sister Eileen," next Monday and Tuesday night November 12 and 13, at 8 p. m. in the McGinnis auditorium on the college campus.

The Greenville Little Theatre group is putting on the play, and the Greenville Junior Chamber of Commerce is sponsor.

they'll overlook. My friend has found out these limits, usually by starting out with a 25-cent shortage and then trying lesser shortages until he gets to the point of no complaint. Followed one company all the way down to 8 cents before he found that point. Then he makes his future payments as short as he can get away with.

"When dealing with small companies that do not have such rules, he simply takes 2 per cent discount for cash, and sends a check for the balance. Most of the time they accept it, perhaps thinking they had promised it and, of course, glad to get the money promptly."

Pitt Ranks 2nd In College-Goers

A recent study of 1955 high school graduates by the State Department of Public Instruction shows that Pitt County ranks second in the state in percentage of graduates attending college.

The study, made by Nile F. Hunt, showed that 44.6 per cent of students in city and county units in Pitt entered college. The figure includes 48.1 per cent of white graduates and 36.1 per cent of Negro graduates.

Pasquotank County, including Elizabeth City, had the state's highest percentage total, 49.1. The Pasquotank figure included 41.8 per cent of white high school graduates and 61.5 per cent of the Negro graduates.

Pitt County's record of having 48.1 per cent of its white high school graduates enter college is the highest in the state. That figure is considerably above the state average of 32.3 per cent and nearly two points higher than the state city units average of 46.4 per cent.

There was no break-down cited in the report for city units and county units within any one of the 100 counties. The report was listed in the October edition of the North Carolina Public School Bulletin.

Twin Oxen Serve For Farm Chores

FURNACE, Ky. (AP) — Farmer Floyd Willis always wanted a team of oxen. So when his Herford cow gave birth to twin male calves, Willis began carefully tending them.

Now he has that team and they do many chores on the farm, which is without truck, tractor, horses or mules. Each of the twins weighs about 600 pounds. That junior size as far as oxen go.

Nothing Sacred About His Music

OMAHA (AP) — Robert D. Kleinschmidt of the University of Buffalo (N.Y.), told newsmen before a concert here that carillon music is either "sacred" or simply a nuisance.

His concert afterwards on the electronic carillon at an Omaha shopping center was interrupted by police. Neighbors to prove Professor Kleinschmidt's point — had complained the music was annoying.

Government statistics in Mexico show that 800,000 more Mexican babies are born each year than there are deaths.
