Stocks-Mills Vows Are Spoken

Mrs. James Ray Stocks

Miss Myrtle Jean Mills became the bride of James Ray Stocks in a double ring ceremony Tuesday at 2 p.m. solemnized in the home of the Rev. Henry Melvin, pastor of the Reedy Branch Free Will Baptist Church.

Officiating minister was the Rev. Mr. Melvin, pastor of the bridegroom.

Vows were spoken before a mantle decorated with Christmas greenery and candles. Throughout the house were Christmas decorations.

The bride wore a street length dress of light blue velvet, fashioned with pointed bodice and full gathered skirt. The high neckline was accented with a pearl collar and small covered buttons were arranged down the bodice front.

She wore light blue gloves and hat and a white orchid corsage. Mrs. Sterl Dixon Paramore was her sister's matron of honor. She wore a brown printed dress of taffeta with matching short fitted coat of beige linen. Her accessories were also brown and beige and she wore a corsage of white carnations.

Sterl Dixon Paramore served as best man. For her daughter's wedding, Mrs. Mills chose blue lace over taffeta with which she wore brown accessories and a corsage of white carnations.

Mrs. Stocks, mother of the bridegroom, wore a dusty pink dress of dacron and cotton, black accessories and a corsage of white carnations.

The bride, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Toley Floyd Mills of Greenville, is a junior at Greenville High School.

The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Lee Stocks of near Winterville. He is a graduate of Winterville High School and is employed at Garris-Evans Lumber Company, Inc. in Greenville.

The couple will make their home near Greenville upon their return. Present for the wedding were members of the bridal pair's families.

178-Year-Old Named One of 'Ten Young Women of the Year'

Mademoiselle's 1956 Merit Award winners, honored for signal achievement during the past year. Top row: The seal of the surprise winner, the city of Louisville, cited as a symbol of gumption for her "recognition and practice of basic human rights"; Jacqueline Hawkins, teacher; Shirley Fry, tennis ace; Barbara Lekberg, sculptress; Julie Andrews, stage star. Bottom row: Diana Chang, writer; Blanche Lemco, architect; Doris Day, film star; Najmeh Najafi, social worker; Mary M. Douglass, fashion designer.

New York, N.Y.—Louisville, Kentucky, which quietly and positively directed its energies toward integration, recognizing basic human rights with law and order, is today the surprise winner of a 1956 Merit Award from Mademoiselle magazine.

For the fourteenth successive year awards were presented to ten young women who—with one exception—range in age from twenty-one to thirty-two and "who have already distinguished themselves in their fields and are expected to achieve even greater honors," according to Betsy Talbot Blackwell, Mademoiselle's editor-in-chief.

In making the award to the exception, 178-year-old Louisville, Mrs. Blackwell cited her as a city in which the South and the nation can take pride. "The smoothness of her opening day of school," she pointed out, "was preceded by years of careful and intelligent planning, beginning long before the Supreme Court decision with meetings of white and Negro teachers, parents, students. As a result, energy that a few miles away manned tanks and guns here was directed constructively toward a fine achievement."

The fields represented in this year's Merit Awards (as featured in January Mademoiselle) are teaching, sports, sculpture, theatre, writing, city planning, movies, social service and fashion.

Here are the other winners: JACQUELINE HAWKINS of Tucson, teacher. In 1956 this 23-year-old infatigable and supervised a study of juvenile delinquency with students in her English classes, who then presented their findings to the Arizona State legislature. One of their recommendations, a teen-age jury, has already been adopted. In a field where rewards are not measured in dollars but in personal satisfactions, she puts in forty-five extra hours a week to do an imaginative, constructive job.

DIANA CHANG, writer. Though born in New York, she spent most of her life in China, lived under Japanese occupation until the end of the war, returned here to enter Barnard. Graduating Phi Beta Kappa in 1949, she attended the Sorbonne on a Fulbright, came back to the U.S. to do editorial work, publish poetry and, this past year, write The Frontiers of Love, which was hailed as "a remarkable first novel."

SHIRLEY FRY of Akron, Ohio, tennis ace. For years a runner-up, seldom a winner, she refused to become discouraged and in 1956 her pluck paid off. When Doris Hart turned professional, Shirley became the ranking U.S. woman player, announced: "Some people thought I hadn't earned the title, so I decided to go out and win this year. That's what I'm doing." And that's what she did, finally coming into her own as the U.S. women's singles champion, following her July triumph at Wimbledon.

BARBARA LEKBERG, sculptress. Born in Portland, Ore., she specializes in aesthetics and art history at the State U. of Iowa, then on to New York, where she became the first woman sculptor to use welded steel techniques professionally. In 1956 she had fifteen pieces exhibited at the Sculpture Center, was commissioned to do four more for the Socony Mobil building and was awarded a $1,000 grant by the National Institute of Arts and Letters.

JULIE ANDREWS, actress. Brought here from London two years ago, she was well received as the girl friend in The Boy Friend. But it wasn't until 1956 that she became at twenty the toast of Broadway (starred opposite Rex Harrison in My Fair Lady) and of the country (through the Columbia album of the show that is making record history). She has been described as "all the glamour of the theatre summed up in an instant."

MARY M. DOUGLASS, fashion designer. She learned her craft from the ground up working for a large Kansas City dress manufacturing firm, did everything from sewing in a factory to pattern-grading to—finally—designing. This past year she combined her creative and executive talents as designer and vice-president of L'Aiglon in New York, has shown a remarkable talent for translating new trends into the volume market.

BLANCHE LEMCO of Philadelphia, city planner. After an M.A. from Harvard in 1950, she worked in Canada, England and in France with Le Corbusier, is now on the faculty of the U. of Pennsylvania. A film she produced on housing won the Grand Prize at the Congress of the International Federation for Housing and Town Planning last summer. As one authority says: "In terms of her contribution and her age, nobody in this country can come close to her."

DORIS DAY, movie star. Cincinnati-born, she was "the girl with a band" before becoming a success in Hollywood musicals and the country's best-selling pop singer. In 1956 she suddenly switched to serious roles, winning rave notices in The Man Who Knew Too Much and Julie, Signs are that in Stage Door, Pajama Game and Love Story, all due this year, she will prove herself one of our most exciting actresses.

NAJMEH NAJAFI, social worker. After three years in the U.S. studying and working in factories, this 26-year-old Iranian returned to the village of Sarbandan in 1956, used all the royalties from her book Persia Is My Heart to establish a school and a clinic, form a women's council to deal with women's affairs, start a cooperative. She plans to expand her program to "help my country build a middle class who can learn to become citizens in a democracy."

Groom Gives Bride Grandmother's Ring

Mrs. William Baxter Waddill, Jr.

ROBERSONVILLE—The marriage of Miss Mary Glyn Norman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Glenn Norman of Robersonville, and William Baxter Waddill Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Waddill of Wilson, was solemnized Saturday at 4 p.m. at the home of the bride's parents.

The Rev. Ralph E. Ferguson, assisted by the Rev. John A. Gray of Wilson, performed the double ring ceremony. The ring which the bridegroom gave his bride was the wedding ring of his grandmother.

Vows were spoken before an improvised altar. Palms, banking the fireplace, formed a background for the kneeling bench. The mantel was centered with an arrangement of pink carnations and roses with silver filler. Pink tapers in silver candelabra were on either end.

The bride entered with her father, by whom she was given in marriage, wearing an ice blue fur trimmed, sheer woolen suit with matching jeweled satin hat and muff, centered with a purple-throated white orchid.

She wore pearls which were her grandmother's. Miss Genevieve Waddill, sister of the bridegroom, was maid of honor.

She wore a gray woolen dress with black accessories and an orchid corsage. Mr. Waddill was his son's best man. Henry Carson Norman, brother of the bride, served as usher.

For the wedding Mrs. Norman wore a dress of pink brown satin and a cluster of green orchids. The bridegroom's mother wore a Dior blue costume suit with matching blue hat and a purple orchid.

Immediately after the ceremony the bride's parents entertained at a reception. The bride's table was covered with a cloth of pink net over taffeta. The net was gathered at the corners and held with carnations tied with bows of net and ribbon.

The centerpiece was of pink roses and carnations interspersed with silver beads arranged in a tall compote.

Mrs. Hilton Carson served the wedding cake and Mrs. William S. Reddick of Elizabeth City poured punch.

The bride is a member of the junior class at Woman's College, Greensboro. The bridegroom is a pre-medical student at the University of North Carolina. He attended Episcopal High School at Alexandria, Va.

Following a short wedding trip the couple will live in Chapel Hill.

A Twin Is An Individual Not Half Of Pair

By DOROTHY V. WHIPPLE, M.D. AP Newsfeatures

A twin is an individual, he is not just the other half of a pair. Like any child we want a twin to grow up to be an independent self-reliant person. In adult life a twin is likely to be separated from his mate, as any child is separated from his brothers and sisters. And while a close warm relationship between all members of a family is good during childhood, we need to be careful that twins do not become so overly dependent upon each other that neither feels himself to be a complete person alone.

Some twins, and especially identical twins, do develop an unusually close relationship between themselves. This may be due, as some people claim, to the fact that they shared the same womb before birth. But it is also true that the way they are treated after birth probably has a lot to do with it too.

I know one pair of twins who, as infants, howled when put into their separate cribs, but when allowed to get in together, they curled around each other like a pair of kittens and slept peacefully. As these boys grew older neither would sit at the table to eat a meal unless the other one was there too. They were called Jim and Tim and they were alike as two peas. They were dressed exactly alike and neither had a single possession that the other didn't have an exact duplicate. Neither had an interest that the other didn't share.

One day when the boys were about five they were playing in their back yard when Jim fell off the jungle gym and broke his leg. It was a nasty break and the leg had to be put up in traction. That meant Jim had to be in the hospital for many weeks. Poor Tim, he was a little lost soul. For days he couldn't play. Life had just lost its zest for him; he didn't eat, he just sat around and moped. Jim, too, in the hospital, was another little lost soul. The hospital finally gave in and broke its rules about not permitting children to visit. Both boys were losing weight. When they had their meals together across Tim's bed they ate with their old enthusiasm.

The best thing that ever happened to these boys was Jim's accident. It brought home to their parents as nothing else could have done that they didn't have two sons, they had two halves of a pair.

As soon as Jim was well again the parents began a steady campaign of treating those boys as individuals. New clothes, new toys were no longer identical. Dad took Jim to the zoo on Saturday morning while Mother took Tim to the airport. Slowly and little by little they weaned the boys away from each other. When it came time for first grade they were put in different classes. They still played together but each formed friendships with classmates. Parents and teachers both encouraged them to have separate interests. Each is now well on his way to being a whole boy and not a half.

December 27, 1926

The End of the Century Club held its last meeting of the year 1926 at the home of the president, Mrs. J. L. Fleming, on Tuesday.

The home was most attractive with its Christmas decorations while a symmetrical Christmas tree lent a festive air to the occasion. The real treat of the afternoon was a talk by Mr. Edward Harris, a former Greenville boy but now of New York and a dramatist of note. He talked on "The

The Proposed Highway Revisions

Proposed reorganization of the State Highway Commission would give policy making and administration of highway affairs in North Carolina a true state-wide flavor which has long been needed. The reorganization proposals would also serve at least to some degree to remove administration of highway affairs from the political sphere.

At the same time it would give local government officials greater voice in highway affairs in their own counties so far as the secondary road program is concerned.

The present organization which breaks the Highway Commission into 14 separate divisions, each with its own Commissioner, lacks the quality of state-wide planning and administration which could make for more efficient operation in the overall program. While cooperation between the several divisions and Commissioners has on the whole been good, there have been occasions in which the divisions have competed more than they have cooperated with each other. Handling of fiscal affairs of the huge highway business in North Carolina through the various divisions certainly needs the improvements and refinements proposed in the reorganization.

A new seven-man commission to replace the present 15-member commission for setting overall policies would obviously constitute a smoother working body than the state now has at the top level for its highway program. A "career" executive director of the program could bring great advantages over the present system of a politically appointed chairman of the Commission.

Administration of highway affairs has become one of the largest and most important phases of state government operations in North Carolina. If citizens of the state are to realize the greatest potential from tax revenues which annually pour in for highway purposes, the present system must be overhauled and streamlined.

There will be some objections to the proposed reorganization of highway affairs of this state, but the proposals brought forth by the special committee appointed by the 1955 General Assembly offer a much better plan of administering highway affairs than the state now has. The 1957 legislature should see that revisions recommended by the special study group are written into law for the benefit of all the people of North Carolina.

A Touch Of Winter Is A Refreshing Change

Old Man Winter returned to Eastern North Carolina this week and it was refreshing to have him back.

It isn't necessarily the most comfortable feeling in the world to have put an extra blanket on the bed or keep the furnace turned up high. It is, however, satisfying to know that the weather has finally agreed to conform with the accepted way of doing things.

Eastern North Carolina is not supposed to have snow piled deep on its landscapes but, according to the "book", it is supposed to have frost in December and January, at least.

We have missed much of our cold weather so far. That means there has been little of the exhilaration that comes when you step outside in the early morning to get the milk and the newspaper. There has been very little of the comforting tingle that comes when you walk down the street, chasing the little frost clouds that come with each breath and feeling the cold sidewalks which seemingly cut through shoe soles to fuss with toes.

The return of winter is a little bit saddening, too. Foolish little flowers and trees which were tricked into putting on new growth during the recent warm spells are suffering now. Even after only a couple of days the new greenery is turning brown and looking every bit as if it mourning the mistake of not waiting for April's gentle breezes.

Old Man Winter, in his usual bluff manner, has finally come back. There's very little gentleness about him but he's a nice fellow to have around. He forces us into brisk walking, quick movements and forceful actions. He makes a person glad to be alive . . . even when plucking frosted leaves off foolish camellia bushes.

At Least Our Holidays Saw No Highway Dead

Bloody Pitt can at least stand with head unbowed.

It came through the nation's bloodiest holiday period without a single fatal accident on its highways. There were some close calls, but no traffic fatalities.

If there is room for any pride in Pitt County's highway record it must lie in that one fact. Pitt County drivers and pedestrians can halt their needless slaughter of each other on the highway only by their own efforts.

Perhaps, and we honestly hope, drivers and pedestrians in Pitt are finally coming to their senses with highway safety. The county already has set a record of 24 traffic deaths this year, and unless there has been an abrupt realization of the seriousness of traffic situations, the toll could go much higher before the year is over.

It is our hope that Pitt did more than simply go through the Christmas holiday week-end without any traffic fatalities. We hope the commendable holiday safety record in Pitt is an indication that drivers as a whole have begun their own accident prevention campaigns. If that is the case, and drivers in Pitt County will carry their efforts through next year, 1957 can be one of the safest years in history on Pitt highways.

Nothing can be done to blot out the terrific toll exacted on highways of the county already this year. A great deal can be done, however, to keep next year's toll far below this year's record. It's all up to the drivers in this county.

Civil Defense Need For Funds Stressed

By LYNN NISBET

CIVIL DEFENSE — Although Gen. E.F. Griffin, director of civil defense, emphasized mostly the urgent financial needs of his organization, he tagged on an important two-fold proposal to his presentation before the conference of Congressmen here.

The suggestions if carried out would provide a trained force, subject to mandatory orders and discipline, for service on the home front in event of enemy attack or natural disaster.

The plan would require every citizen rejected on account of physical disability for military service, and all registrants of military age but in deferred status, be required by law to devote a certain number of hours each week to civil defense training. These trained people should be organized along lines similar to the National Guard with a recognized chain of command.

The training classes and drill would be held in evenings at school houses, armories, gymnasiums and similar places. The instructors would be on salary derived from Federal, State and local sources. The trainees would not be paid directly, but would be given credit for time through a method of income tax deductions.

General Griffin reminded that if it comes it will be an all-out struggle for survival, requiring full effort on part of every citizen. The military will be trained and equipped, but unless some better scheme than at present is developed the home front would be a useless mob. He sees no injustice in requiring service on the home front by those not able to do full military duty, since so many of the able-bodied are required to serve in the armed forces. That is especially true when it is remembered that nuclear "fall out" endangers home folks even in sparsely populated areas, almost as much as those on the front firing line.

PUBLIC HEALTH — Despite the connotation of the word "public", health is an intensely personal matter. In North Carolina the administration of "public" health measures is at the local level. Each of the 100 counties has some type of full-time health service, and several municipalities have independent local health departments. Approximately three-fourths of the cost of public health service is borne by county and city taxpayers.

Dr. Roy Norton, State health officer, has prepared a series of charts and graphs showing the distribution of the tax load for local health work. The total allocated for the current fiscal year, 1956-57, is $6,618,592.77. Of that amount $4,866,296.77 comes from counties and cities, representing 74 per cent of the total. The State of North Carolina pays $1,242,000, or 18.8 per cent, and the Federal government $280,306 or 4.2 per cent.

(The current budget includes a special poll fund of $200,000 item, about 3 per cent mainly from Federal sources. This is a temporary allocation which might be increased or decreased or eliminated as future needs require.)

Stated another way, per capita spending for public health on basis of the 1950 census is $1.63 for every man, woman and child in North Carolina. Of that amount local units provide about $1.21, the State of North Carolina about 31 cents, the Federal government the rest.

A good part of the public health allocated is on matching basis. In this field as in public welfare county and city governing boards have shown more concern for needs than has either State or Federal appropriating agencies.

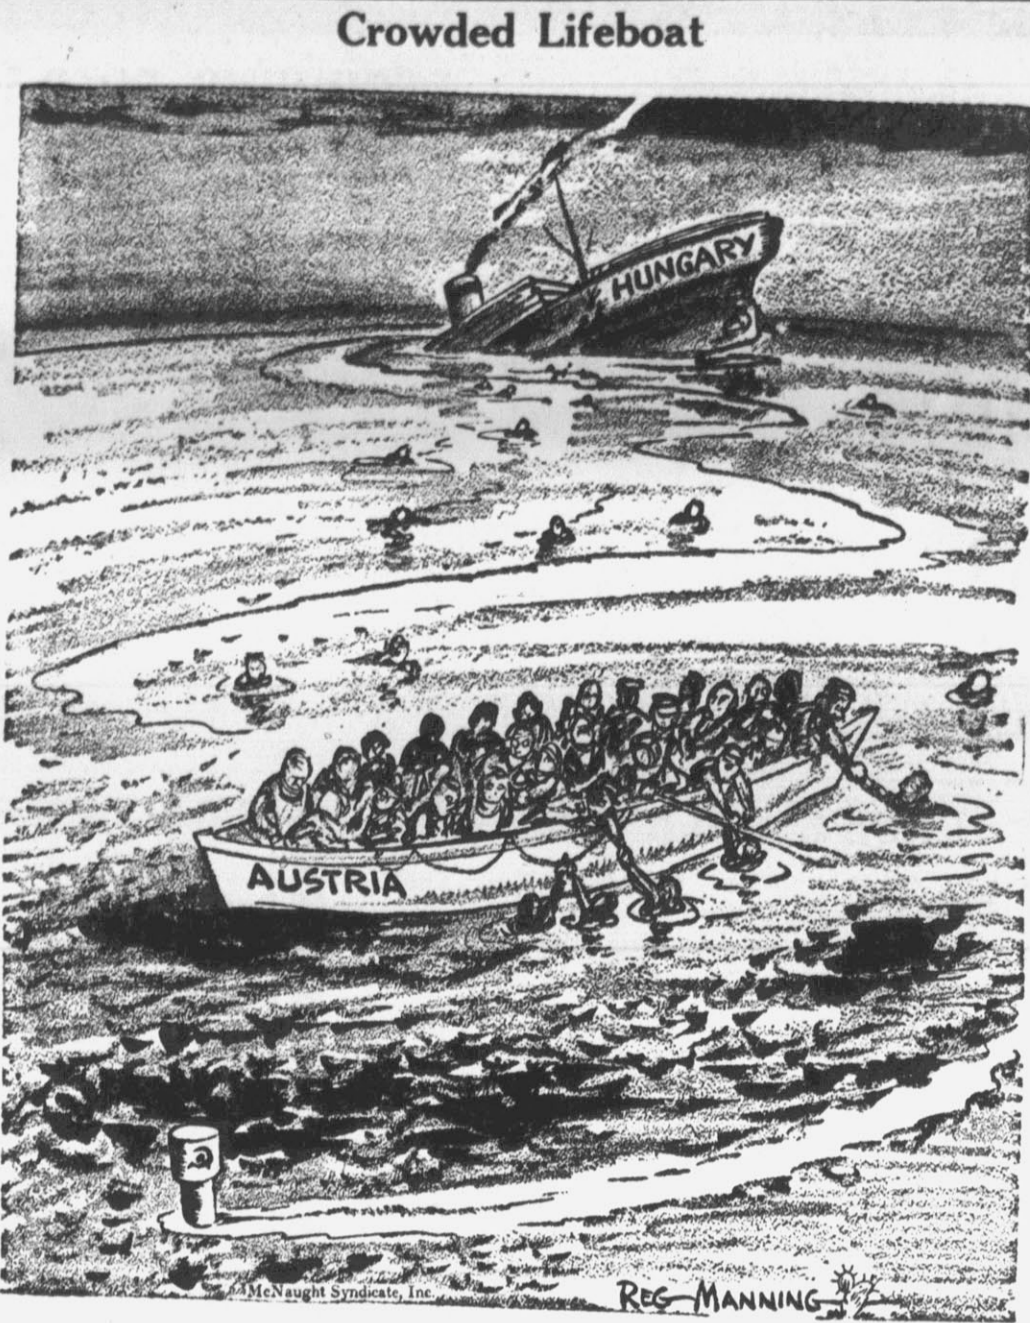

AUTOMOBILES — Besides being a nuisance on the highways, a convenience for many and an absolute necessity for thousands, the automobile affords a major source of employment income.

A good part of the Employment Security Commission Quarterly is devoted to the part played by the distribution and servicing of motor vehicles in North Carolina. The stories trace growth of the industry from advent of the first cars around the turn of the century to its present high place in the state's economy.

There are more than one and three quarter million motor vehicles registered in North Carolina this year. More than a thousand dealers are engaged in the business of selling automobiles and trucks. The investment in buildings and equipment by these firms last year exceeded $14 million, and they employed more than 20,000 people.

Nobody knows how many retail filling stations and other places which sell small automobile repair parts are in business. Records of the Employment Security Commission show that in 1955 there were 1,396 firms engaged in some phase of automobile service activity which were required to make wage payment reports to the commission. These firms employed 26,725 people and had aggregate payroll of $98,965,000 upon which unemployment taxes were paid. This exceeds by more than $2.5 million the total insured payroll of the wood furniture industry.

Data collected by ESC from unofficial sources indicates more than 38,600 persons employed with total payroll in excess of $120 million.

Full Of Vim, Vigor And Ugh!

Christmas is over and all the Reflector staff has returned full of vim and vigor, all ready to publish bigger and better editions of the newspaper.

All that vim and vigor carried over to me and I decided yesterday afternoon, that, what with the New Year coming up and all, it was time to clean up my desk. So fairly radiating exuberance, I went to work like a demon.

I really didn't get very far. One finds such interesting items in a well-stocked desk.

For instance I found: one old medicine bottle (empty); four grease pencils (one about used up, three blacks and one green); one red pencil; two short pieces of chalk (unsuitable for use). Amid all the writing instruments there were no plain ordinary pencils like everybody else uses.

But there were a number of paper clips (assorted sizes); two 4x8 prints of yours truly, complete with smile and boutonniere; one cigar (expensive, a gift from Ed. James W. Boykin when his child was born); a picture of four girls taken in the summer of 1954 (they were all looking the other way).

But that's not all. There were five key chain trinkets that must have come from a Cracker Jack box. Included were: a gold cup and saucer, a plain plastic saucer, a set of field glasses, a cherub shooting an arrow and a tiny red top (the only thing that really works).

There was a perfectly good United States penny, an unused flash bulb, a copy of the U.S. Army Special Orders which relieved me from active duty and a bill from Dr. E.W. Larkin (unpaid).

I'm telling you there's nothing like cleaning out one's desk to bring back memories. It's like . . . excuse me . . . I think I'm going to be sick. It must be that cigar that Jim Boykin gave me. Pardon me . . .

Notebook On Life

Oddities Around The Desk

By HAL BOYLE
NEW YORK (AP) — Oddities found by a columnist during his yearend desk cleaning:

That if, during a holiday cocktail party, you kiss a pretty blonde who has a cold, the odds are 9 to 1 you won't catch her cold. What you'll catch from your wife, if she sees you, is another matter.

That farmers suffer more colds than suburbanites, cautions old people suffer fewer than the young folks. And, to wind up the whole subject, January is national Take Care of Your Cold month.

That Dr. J. Schultz, head of a cosmetics firm, predicts that by the year 2,000 women will wear makeup that will last indefinitely. And one of the popular lipstick colors will be light blue!

That Mrs. Donna Workman, a Chicago business executive, says self-supporting working girls make the best wives.

That Santa Claus ranks not first but seventh in popularity as an adornment on the two billion Christmas cards Americans exchange annually. By the time the bills roll in next month, Santa will be a candidate for the FBI's 10 most-wanted list.

That the camel is the most popular animal on Christmas cards, followed by reindeer, the donkey and the lamb. Do you send your pet dog or cat a greeting card on its birthday? The custom is growing.

That there is a growing shortage of skilled mechanics as well as engineers. In 1950 there were 73 cars to each mechanic, now the 82-1, by 1965 is expected to reach 90-1.

That Frederick Jones, the hair stylist who thought up the idea of tinting Kim Novak's locks a pale lavender, has now created an "Elvis Presley bob" for teenage girl fans of the singer. Now they not only can listen to their idol—they can also look like him!

That interior designer Lee Kelly says there is a trend away from desks and conference tables in executive business offices. In their place in the deskless office of the future he predicts: A soft chaise longue, conducive to "dynamic creative thought."

That contract bride is now taught in at least 20 U.S. colleges and universities. With some 32 million players, it is ranked second only to canasta among card games. Then why is it everyone I know plays gin rummy? Am I moving in the wrong circles?

That Dr. Robert A. Savitt, a psychiatrist, says that it is as important for a dentist to have a warm and sympathetic personality as it is for him to have technical skill.

That pert and pretty Mary Yates has one of the most unusual odd jobs in television. She gets $125 for about 15 seconds of work each week. Her job: To sniff the smoke from a burning stogie and tell how nice cigars smell—and she hasn't coughed once.

That pean shells are used in making airplanes. They are employed in the blast cleaning of metal parts where it is important to avoid surface damage.

That it was Oscar Wilde who said, "Newspapers have degenerated. They may now be absolutely relied upon."

Customer Is Often Wrong

By ELMER ROESSNER

For years now many business executives have been saying, but not quite believing, that "the customer is always right."

They have uttered this pious thought so often that many customers believe it. It's a bucket of nonsense, of course. The one thing right about a customer is that she has money. Outside of that, she is more often wrong than right.

And the fact that she believes she can do no wrong actually leads her into further errors, some of them insufferable.

The customer is referred to herein as "she" purely for convenience. In actual practice, male customers are much less likely to be right than the girls. They have less experience shopping.

ILLITERATE, UNHEARING

Let's look at some of the more common complaints about the customer:

1. She misreads advertisements, labels, instructions. Almost any salesperson or retail executive will tell you that the largest source of complaints, misunderstanding and even abuse is the fact that many customers read too fast or read in reverse. There's nothing like the words, "No exchanges!" in an advertisement to bring some of the girls back, waving a corset or such, and saying, "But your ad plainly said I could exchange this!"

2. She doesn't listen. Any salesgirl will tell you that when she says, "This doesn't come in blue," some customer will say, "No? Well, let me see it in blue then." Or the girl will say, "That's out of stock and we do not intend to reorder." Or some shopper will say, "Reorder? When will it be in?" Or the girl will say, "This garment cannot be washed in the washing machine." And, sure enough, some woman will say, "I better take it then. My washing machine is out of order."

3. She's unfair about returns. She can't make up her mind, so she orders something, she gets it, she can get the opinion of the woman next door, or the postman. Or she orders two or three similar items and returns all but one. Or she changes her mind and sends all back.

The worst part about needless returns is that they penalize the customer who is right. Handling returns costs retailers money—and a lot of it. This cost has to be tucked into the price of all articles. But since the price must be the same to the thoughtless shopper as to the neurotic who cannot make up her mind, the one who abuses return privileges inflicts higher prices on all others.

4. She is not honest with salespeople. If she feels a price is too high, she may be tempted to say, "I don't like the color." The salesperson then will drag out more and more articles until it dawns on her that price is the real objection.

It is not always false pride that causes this time-wasting deception. Some shoppers are afraid to explain their reasons. If they like the color they say the styling is wrong. If they don't like the price they say they were just looking for their aunt.

5. She has the manners of a hippopotamus. She insists on being served out of turn, she demands lengthy service just at closing time, she leaves her identification at home and asks to have checks cashed, and she treats store employees abominably.

Only a minority of customers so behave. But enough of them do to send many salespersons sobbing to their pillows at night. With new resolution time just around the calendar perhaps some of us can resolve to be right customers at least once in a while.

Other Editors Are Saying.. Neither Practical Nor Sensible

(Washington Daily News)

Some of our most prominent farm leaders in this nation have come on record as proposing that a farmer in 1957 who has his crops subject to price supports, must first have land in the Soil Bank program.

This is about the most assinine proposal we have heard in some time. It is particularly vicious when we look at the plight of the small farmer. If such a course is adopted, then the small farmer, already hard put to stay on the farm, will find additional tacks being driven in the farm coffin.

If a small farmer has only four acres of tobacco now and he finds that he must put one of these acres in the Soil Bank in order to qualify for price supports, then just think of the economic condition he will find himself in.

The Soil Bank, in our opinion, was never intended to force any farmer to join. It works well for the farmer who has surplus acres and inadequate help in using these acres. It helps the farmer who wishes to go into semi-retirement. It helps the farmer who wishes to put part of his acreage in cover crops or

THE JEWS AND THE ARABS

By HARRY GOLDEN (The Carolina Israelite)

When questioned about Zionism, Lawrence of Arabia said, "The Jews will bring the westerner to the Middle East." The Jews have done exactly that, and in a remarkably short time. They have also "created" the new Egyptian leadership. With the establishment of Israel it was only a question which of the Arab leaders would forge to the front, with the ready-made "program," "Down with Zionism."

The Arabs feared the establishment of a highly developed State in the Middle East. They feared that this would do to the Arab world and its teeming millions of workers living on an average wage of fifteen cents a day. A highly developed state with workers living in western style was something which the Arab leaders could not afford to spread into Egypt, Saudi Arabia, Iran and Iraq.

What we forget sometimes is that by legal agreement the Arabs received a territory as large as one-third of the United States. The Jews received one per cent of that amount. What has disturbed them is not so much this thumb-nail in an ocean of land, but rather that a western-type state in his Arab world would create the danger to the emirs, and feudal lords—they were afraid that the gulf that exists between the emirs and feudal lords and their masses would be in danger of being bridged some day.

The Balfour Declaration was intended to be part of a much wider settlement in the Middle East. At that time the Arab countries, apart from Egypt, which by the way had always BEEN USED to consider itself an Arab country, were languishing in perfect contentment under the oppressive rule of the Turk. They covered an area of more than a million square miles. If there was one thing they did not pay any attention to at all, it was land. When the British dislodged the Turks in the Middle East they set up a plan of self-determination for the people, and it was the victorious Allies who decreed that the Arabs, too, should be freed from the bonds of their oppressor. Throughout this great land mass, independent Arab states were to be set up and something less than ten thousand square miles of Palestine was to be reserved for Jewish immigration and settlement and the development of a Jewish National Home. This was to be done without injustice to the six hundred thousand Arabs in Palestine whose civil and religious rights were specifically safeguarded, and who, immediately, benefited enormously in health, education and in standards of life due to the Jewish immigration. The Arab leaders themselves in 1919 at the Peace Conference through their leader,

Emir Feisal, later King Feisal I of Iraq, accepted as just and proper the idea of the establishment of a Jewish Palestine. Feisal's final statement of acceptance was: "We shall wish the Jews a most hearty welcome—home."

It would not be fair to say that the Arabs were wholly at fault in the break-down of this period of good will. There would be no crisis today if Britain herself had not wavered in her original policy which led to the bloody massacres by the pro-Nazi Grand Mufti in 1929 and again in 1936. The White Paper of the Chamberlain Government was a crushing blow, not only to hundreds of thousands of Jews who were thus doomed to die in the Nazi death camps, but it gave the Arab nations (also newly created) the "go ahead" sign for their out-and-out anti-Zionist policy.

But even then there was still a chance, but for another crushing blow, the complete betrayal of the Zionists by the Labor Government. This remains to this day one of the most tragic mysteries of modern times. Why the Socialists who were so friendly to Zionism in their trade-union halls should have so completely reversed themselves when they came to power is hard to understand. The same people who had championed Zionism against the Chamberlain government now sent the Royal Navy chasing after immigrant ships loaded with women and children who had seen most of their families exterminated in the European gas chambers. Mr. Churchill, always consistent, shouted: "Betrayal," and there was no other word for it.

The United States of America inherited the Middle East policy from Great Britain. Let us not be coy about this at all. The Middle East problem will be settled when and how the United States wants it to be settled. But here, too, there was some wavering. The Eisenhower Administration came into power on the platform of "Throw the rascals out", which is part of the American political system and there is no argument with that at all. But they had to come before the people and make it appear that they were not merely implementing the policies of Truman and Acheson. Since Truman had helped create the State of Israel, the Eisenhower-Dulles idea was to demonstrate "a difference." Israel was a good spot to show that they were not "Me, too" fellows and so the new administration said that as regards the Arab-Israel situation they would now be fair. Since they made no bones about it that this was to be a "new policy," being "fair" could mean only one thing: fair to the side of the Arabs and the middle east oil. And this was another go-ahead sign, this time for Nasser, and that is where we are now. We have built ourselves a great big headache.

Sues After She Missed Question

NEW YORK (AP)—A night club dancer has filed a $103,000 suit in U. S. District Court against the television quiz program, "The Big Surprise," asserting she "deliberately" was asked a question the producers knew she couldn't answer. Miss Dale Logue, a red-haired dancer now appearing in a Las Vegas, Nev., club, contended yesterday that she thus was cheated of a chance to win the show's $100,000 jackpot. Miss Logue said she missed a $10,000 question on the program Nov. 6 after she first had missed it in a "warm-up session" that preceded the broadcast. Her category was astronomy.

Texan Opposes Raising Hungarian Refugee Quota

WASHINGTON (AP)—Rep. Burdick (D-Tex.) said today he will oppose any legislative proposal by President Eisenhower to boost the number of Hungarian refugees allowed to come to America.

But Rep. Burdick (R-ND) said he would favor raising the Hungarian refugee quota, now filled at 20,500. Burdick is a member of the Judiciary Committee which that an Eisenhower proposal to ease the refugee problem might not have entirely smooth sailing in Congress.

Yesterday Eisenhower ordered U. S. agencies to continue process-

The opposing views, given in separate interviews, were a sign of the present situation, even though the present quota is all allotted.

Assistant press secretary Murray Snyder, in announcing the President's action, made clear it is a tentative move pending a final decision on whether to raise the quota.

He said this decision will not be made until after Eisenhower puts the refugee problem before a scheduled New Year's Day meeting with congressional leaders of both parties.

Vice President Nixon, just returned from a trip to the Austro-Hungarian border, met with Eisenhower yesterday to tell of his view that America "must do more" to help the escapees from Communist oppression. He said Eisenhower assigned a "top priority" to the quota matter.

Burdick said admitting the refugees cannot be justified either for national interest or humanitarian reasons.

He said the large number of escapees allowed shows the Russians feel it is to their advantage to have the mass exodus. Further, he said, the escapees are not carefully screened and there could be Communist secret police among them.

Burdick said flatly, "I'd be in favor of raising the quota."

"Any time they're murdering people I'm in favor of helping the victims," he said. "They know more about communism than we ever will here. They've lost their jobs and risked their lives opposing it."

SAFE SLIDING
HOLLYWOOD, Calif. (AP)—Bandleader Russ Morgan says he's working on an invention—a slide trombone that will move sideways instead of forward. He claims this would save the shoulder strain for short-armed trombonists. In addition, he says it would eliminate the danger to the musicians who march in front of trombonists in parades.

IN CLASSIC TONIGHT—Duke University, ranked no. 9 in the national cage ratings, will send a raw but surprisingly successful club on the floor tonight in the first evening game of the Dixie Classic against West Virginia.

Kansas Having Troubles; Same Predicted For State

Dixie Classic Rated Free-For-All Scrap

The Associated Press Kansas and Wilt (The Still) Chamberlain are human, after all. The Jayhawks, rated No. 1 nationally, just managed to escape being victims of the biggest upset of the campaign last night. It took a field goal by Gene Elstun in the last six seconds to give them a 58-57 victory over Iowa State in the opening round of the Big Seven tournament.

North Topped South By 17-7; Rebels Disagree

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — The North defeated the South 17-7 in the Shrine's annual college all-star football game last night, but you can't convince die-hard Rebels that the South didn't really come out on top.

Jackson To Meet Mederos Tonight

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Tommy (Hurricane) Jackson, the No. 1 heavyweight challenger, engages Cuba's Julio Mederos in a scheduled 10-rounder at the Milwaukee Arena tonight.

Blue-Gray Tilt Won't Present North's Colors

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP)—Fans interested in comparing the brand of football played in the South with the Midwest may get some idea about it from Saturday's 19th annual Blue-Gray game.

Although billed as another meeting of college all-stars from the North and South, the Blues are Yankees in name only this year.

Most of the squad is made up of players from the West and Midwest. In fact only two full-fledged Northern schools have representatives on the team.

Except for five imports from Texas A&M, Southwest Conference champions, the Blues are strictly Southern. Fifteen are from Southeastern Conference schools.

Odds makers have installed the South as a six-point favorite. "It'll be a close, hard-fought game," said the Yankee head coach, Don Faurot of Missouri.

In the series the Rebels are leading 12-5. With Purdue's Lenny Dawson in the driver's seat, the North may have an edge in passing.

Mackie Prickett of South Carolina and Auburn's Howell Tubbs have been doing most of the South passing in practice.

The game will be televised over a national network (NBC) except for a 100-mile radius TV blackout around Montgomery.

Aussies Win Davis Cup To Capture World Title

Vols Running To Retain Form

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Tennessee's Volunteers swept through their unbeaten 10-game football campaign without hardly drawing a long breath and Coach Bowden Wyatt has no intention of letting his boys lose that razor sharp condition before the Jan. 1 Sugar Bowl clash with Baylor.

Wyatt believes in conditioned athletes. And there was nobody to doubt his word after seeing yesterday's two workouts.

The 44 players were hardly off their train before they were at the regular season for a long conditioning session. It was run, run and more run for the Vols, whose only close call during the regular season was a 6-0 victory over Georgia Tech.

"Got to run off those pounds some of the boys picked up from too much eating since the end of the regular season," said Wyatt. "And there is nothing like plenty of running to do it."

The Baysors bears will not arrive until Sunday.

With the appearance of the Vols, this ancient Southern city started to take on a carnival atmosphere, second only to the Mardi Gras.

Hotel space was at a premium. Along world-famous Canal street talk of football took its place with "Who do you like in the sixth at the Fair Grounds?" Tennessee has been established the 7 1/2-point favorite.

Hoad, Rosewall Are Heroes Of Tournery

By WILL GRIMSLEY ADELAIDE, Australia (AP) — Stunned and staggered at the outset, Ken Rosewall and Lew Hoad pulled themselves together to win the Davis Cup for Australia today by defeating a U.S. "pickup" team of Vic Seixas and Sam Giammalva 1-6, 6-1, 7-5, 6-4.

The doubles victory gave the Aussies a 3-0 lead in the best-of-five competition and assures the coveted cup — symbol of world tennis supremacy — staying Down Under another year. Tomorrow's two final single matches will be nothing more than exhibitions.

Seixas is scheduled to play Hoad and Herbie Flam is paired with Rosewall. However, Captains Harry Hopman of Australia and Bill Talbert of the United States probably will change the lineups now that the pressure is off. The capacity crowd of 12,000 at the War Memorial Stadium sat in shocked horror during the first set. They could hardly believe they were watching Rosewall and Hoad, who between them hold every major singles title in the world, U.S. and Australian doubles champions.

Seixas, the handsome 33-year-old Philadelphia, and Giammalva, an emotional 22-year-old University of Texas student from Houston, who never had played in a Challenge Round before, ran the Aussies all over the court. Seixas won his first service at love.

Only Hoad was able to salvage a service for the Aussies, that in the second game. But in the fourth Seixas and Giammalva smashed through Rosewall's service and in the sixth they took care of Hoad's.

This was the American team that was picked by Talbert as an afterthought. He had considered using Flam, who had more international experience than Giammalva, but a few hours before the match decided that the Texan, with his big game, would give the Aussies more trouble. He was right.

The Americans promptly broke through Rosewall again to start the second set and the Aussies' situation became alarming. But suddenly Rosewall and Hoad moved to the offensive.

They broke Giammalva in the second game, Seixas in the fourth and Giammalva again in the sixth. It was that fast. After winning the first game, the Americans were blocked.

Still, that made it even, one set apiece. Seixas and Giammalva were in no mood to let up and again in the third set, they made the first service break. Again, however, they couldn't make it stand up.

They smashed through Rosewall in the fourth game, only to have the Aussies come right back in the fifth game and take Seixas' service.

The Aussies made the big move in the 11th game and broke Giammalva. That was the break of the match, because they held their own in the 12th and won the set.

Talbert's boys fought to 4-all in the final set, but the handwriting was on the wall. Seixas was having trouble getting his service in and dropped two deliveries. Giammalva, apparently on instructions from Talbert, began trying to get his first service in play instead of blasting it.

Readying For Gator Bowl Tilt

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP)—Johnny Micholosen and Bobby Dodd, who learned their football under two of the nation's leading single wing coaches, today put the final touches to the split-T attacks of their Pittsburgh and Georgia Tech teams that meet in the Gator Bowl game Saturday.

Micholosen's Pitt team arrived yesterday. Dodd's Tech team was due in today.

Tomorrow both squads will limber up with signal drills, punting and passing.

Micholosen is coaching at the school where he was a star player, quarterback and captain under the late Coach Jock Sutherland. The 1937 Pitt team which Micholosen captained was acclaimed national champion.

Dodd, also a quarterback played under Bob Neyland at Tennessee. In his three years on the varsity — 1928, 1929 and 1930 — Tennessee lost only one game.

While both became used to success under the single wing system, they changed to the higher scoring split-T as head coaches.

In this, too they have succeeded. Dodd has taken Tech to seven bowl games and won all of them. Micholosen, in his first year as Pitt head coach, won the Eastern championship and took the Panthers to the Sugar bowl against Georgia Tech a year ago.

Tech won 7-0 and this Gator Bowl game is a rematch.

Parker Gets New Detroit Contract

DETROIT (AP) — Detroit Lions football coach Raymond (Buddy) Parker looked like a Texas oil man who had just capped a gusher.

Parker's well will bring in $30,000 a year for the next two years in the form of a new contract with the National Football League club.

It was capped yesterday when the Lions' 15-man board of directors finally decided to offer a two-year pact to the 43-year-old Texan instead of sticking to the one-year contract Parker turned down last week.

"I think my coaching record with the Lions deserves more than a one-year contract," Parker had said. It's Detroit teams won Western Division titles in 1952, 1953 and 1954 and world titles in 1952 and 1953. The Lions finished second this year.

"Now I'm going to work on our next draft meeting in Philadelphia. I haven't made up my mind what we want yet, but we've got to get on it quick."

Lions President Edwin J. Anderson said the reason Parker had not been offered a two-year agreement last week was a "misunderstanding between Buddy and myself."

UN May Yet Be Defeated By Suez Difficulties

By JAMES MARLOW
Associated Press News Analyst
WASHINGTON (AP)—United Nations prestige leaped upward with its success in Egypt, then sagged with its ineffectiveness in Hungary. The U.N. may yet be made a fool of by Egypt's President Nasser.

The U.N. — led by the United States and Russia — saved Nasser's skin by pressuring the British, French and Israelis into ceasing their attack on Egypt and withdrawing from the Suez Canal zone.

Nasser is developing a pattern of laying down conditions under which he'll do business one at a time. When he gets what he wants on one, he imposes another.

The result: The Suez Canal is still closed to world traffic almost two months after the attack on Egypt ended. When Nasser will still he hasn't permitted work to begin although last Nov. 2 the U.N. General Assembly adopted a resolution which said that when the cease-fire became effective, steps should be taken "to reopen the canal and secure full freedom of navigation."

Nasser's latest demand, as reported Christmas night, was that no clearance work could begin until all Israeli forces had quit Egyptian territory. The last British and French troops had sailed away Saturday.

The Israelis may never agree to quit the Gaza Strip through which they said Egyptian attacks had been made on Israel. That could stay only as long as he would seem to shove the start of work on the canal off into the indefinite future.

Yesterday Nasser threw another gimmick into settlement of the Suez Canal problem which he created last July with his seizure of the canal. He claims full control of the waterway, which lies entirely within Egypt.

In August 18 nations — including the United States, Britain and France — proposed to Nasser creation of an international board to supervise the canal. Nasser said no.

Another proposal was made to him in September, a vague and toothless proposal. He turned that down too.

Early in October, almost a month before the attack on Egypt began, the U.N. Security Council agreed on six principles as a basis for negotiating a Suez settlement.

On Oct. 12 the British, French and Egyptian foreign ministers accepted the principles as a basis for negotiation. By the end of October the attack had begun. Yesterday an authoritative Egyptian source said Egypt will not negotiate with Britain and France, which attacked her, but only with the U.N. Thus Nasser throws the problem back to the U.N. to start all over. More time used up.

What can the world organization do if in the end Nasser ignores its proposals? Perhaps no more than it did when the Russians slaughtered the Hungarians.

The U.N. condemned the Russians. The Russians ignored the U.N. and are still in Hungary. The U.N. sits powerless to do anything.

An estimated 7,400,000 Californians are covered by some form of health or hospital insurance, says the Health Insurance Council.

Powell Asserts Purge Attempt

NEW YORK (AP)—Rep. Adam Clayton Powell (D-NY), who bolted the Democratic presidential ticket to support President Eisenhower, says House Speaker Sam Rayburn (D-Tex) seems "bent on purging me."

Powell, a Negro, said last night that Rayburn sent him a letter dated Dec. 4 and told him he would not be given a set of new congressional offices. Powell said he was entitled to these offices "on the basis of seniority."

Appearing on Mike Wallace's "Night Beat" television program, Powell declared: "As on March 1, I was entitled to new office space vacated by Dan Reed (R-NY). He (Rayburn) has given these offices to Chief

Critical

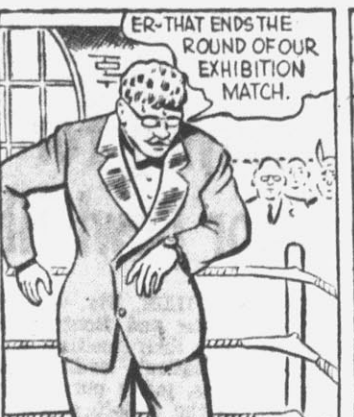

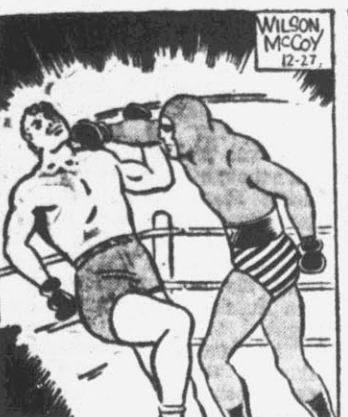

MOSCOW (AP)—Moscow radio says the Christmas message of Pope Pius XII "could hardly be described as that of a religious leader."

Accusing the Pope of supporting preventive war and thus "doing what few Western leaders now dare do," the Moscow broadcast said he "sounded a note of dissonance contrasting with the Christmas music and hymns."

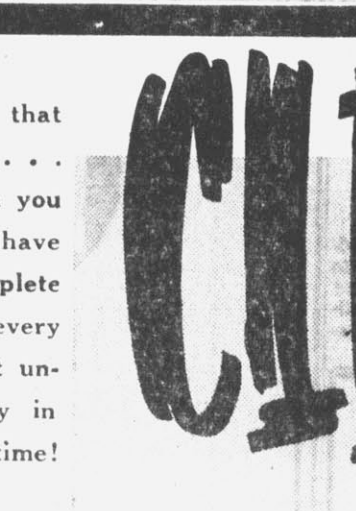

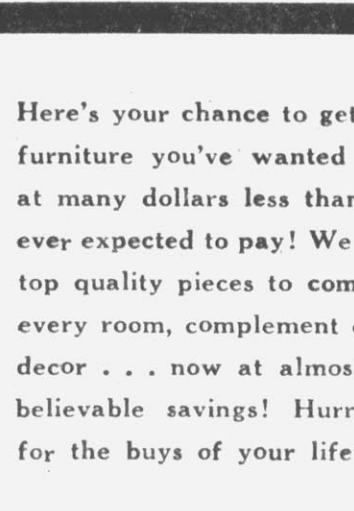

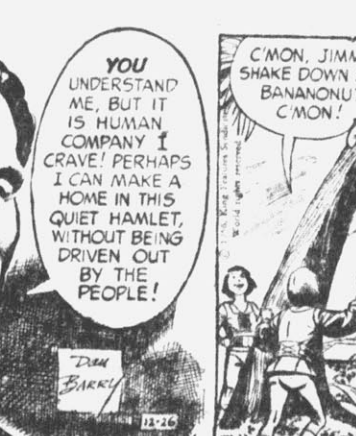

In his annual message, the Pope proclaimed the morality of defensive war and called on the world to give the United Nations the right and power to prevent aggression.

SYNOPSIS
Lieutenant Chad Endicott, a Civil War veteran, is irked when he is ordered from St. Louis to establish an Army post in hostile Dakota Territory. For he must leave his fiancée, Elizabeth Tipton, daughter of General Tipton, and postpone their marriage for at least a year. Before he leaves, Chad warns Alvin Stiner, a wealthy trader and his rival for Elizabeth, to respect their engagement or he will kill him when he returns. Myra, fun-loving wife of Major Otto Grunwald, is in love with Stiner, and, although she knows he prefers Elizabeth, helps him plot against Chad. Meanwhile, Chad sails up the treacherous Missouri river with an infantry company commanded by Colonel Randall, who is bringing his beautiful Spanish wife, Isabella. Chad doubts Randall's ability as a leader. As the river boat makes its way slowly upriver to Indian territory, Chad Cubberly, a weather-beaten scout for the Army, tells Chad what to expect from the warlike Sioux. Back in St. Louis, Stiner, after a reasonable wait starts his campaign to win Elizabeth. At about this time, Chad and his troops experience their first difficulty — the boat gets stuck on a sandbar. Before they can get clear, a band of Indians attack. But Chad and his troops drive them off without casualties. Finally, after two months they reach their destination. As they start to build their fort, the Indians threaten an attack.

CHAPTER II
Chad saw the Indians within a matter of minutes, but they kept their distance, content to remain in the fringe of timber and yell their defiance. Chad, crouching behind a pile of logs, heard Mullivane mutter disgustedly. "This is some fight. What are we doing, swapping eyeballs?"
A careless remark caused the firing to start by picking his head above a pile of poles. A shot rang out as lead buried itself in the soft wood with a dull plock.
"What are you trying to do, Saunders?" Chad shouted.
The boy ducked down. He licked his lips, glancing at Chad. "Just wanted to see what they looked like, Lieutenant."

"You wouldn't be seeing anything if you'd got that ball between the eyes," Chad nodded at Mullivane. "Burn a little powder, Sergeant, just to show them what we've got."
For a moment, rifle shots made a steady roll of sound, powder smoke drifting upward from the piles of logs. The Indians drew back into the timber. Mullivane threw Chad a challenging grin. "Let's get 'em, Lieutenant. I want that scalp Cubberly promised me."
Chad shook his head. "We don't have any men to throw away, Sergeant."

"That's one way of saying it," Mullivane flung back. "I ain't yellow. Just give me the order."
Chad's gaze locked with Mullivane's. This was insubordination, he felt, but still insubordination an indirect way of calling Chad yellow before the men.
"Later, Sergeant," he said curtly, and crawled to where Randall and Zack were squatting behind another pile of logs.
"How many Indians are out there, Cubberly?" Randall asked. "Fifty, maybe," Zack answered. "They just aim to devil us a little. If it was Sittin' Bull and his Strong-hearts yonder, we'd have a tussle on our hands."

"I don't intend to sit here all day. I've got a fort to build," Randall motioned to Chad. "Lieutenant, take Company A and flank the hostiles on the right. We'll cover you until you pick up shelter from that ridge." He jabbed his forefinger at a small spine of land that pointed itself at the fort.
Chad didn't like it. If the Sioux really intended to fight, they could pick off half the company before he could lead his men to the scant cover the ridge afforded.
"Yes, sir," he said. "You want us to drive them into the river, or just get them out of the neighborhood?"

"As soon as I see you're pressing them toward the river," Randall answered, "I'll lead a frontal attack and we'll squeeze them like a nutcracker."

"You won't lie nary a scalp, Cunnel," Zack said. "Them Indians ain't gonna wait for you to try out your military tactics on 'em."
"Go on, Lieutenant," Randall said curtly.
"I'll go along," Zack said, "just for fun."
Chad returned to Mullivane, Zack crawling behind him.
"Company A will occupy that ridge," Chad pointed to it. "From that point we'll work toward the river and the Colonel will lead a frontal attack."
Mullivane grinned wickedly. "Thought we didn't have any men to spare, Lieutenant."
"Colonel's orders," Chad said. "Come on."
He rose and ran toward the ridge, keeping low, Zack beside him. Company A followed, Mullivane yelling, "On the double!"
The ridge was a good hundred yards from the fort. Chad expected to hear the hum of lead and the crack of rifles any moment, but none came. They reached the ridge and dropped flat along its crest. Mullivane swore. "They're pulling out!" he yelled, and jumped up, shook his fist at the Indians. "Come back and fight, you red-bellies!"
The Indians had left the timber and were racing upriver. Zack laughed silently. "Like I told the Cunnel. They just wanted to devil us."

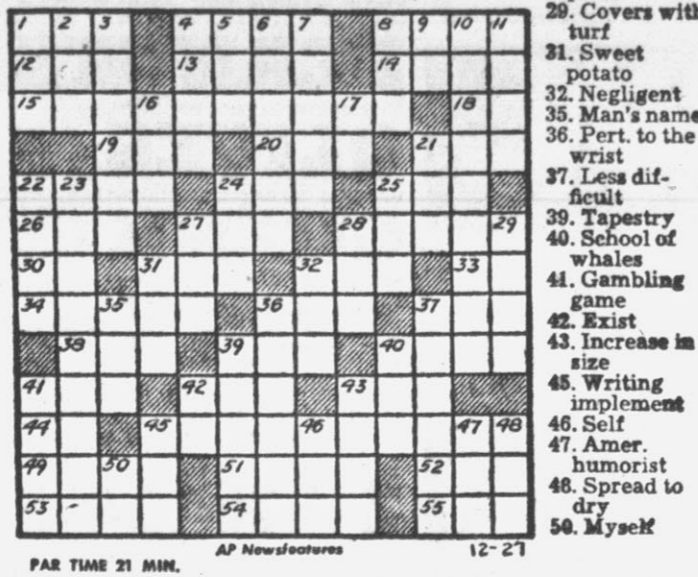

Mullivane wheeled on him. "So that's the kind of fighters the Indians are. The army should have sent a bunch of women up here." Zack spit a brown ribbon at a clump of grass. He wiped his mouth with the back of his hand, winking at Chad. "The sergeant is a mite impatient, now ain't he, Loo-tin-ant?"
"We've got a fort to build," Chad said. "Let's go build it."
On the way back Zack said, "Know somethin', Loo-tin-ant? You'd better get that fort up or the Cunnel is gonna get some good boys rubbed out."
"You mean it won't go this way next time?"
"Might not," Zack said. "I dunno where the Hunkpapa is, but they'll hear about us bein' here and they'll come around to look us over."
Chad said nothing, not wanting to criticize Randall in front of Zack. He said, "Sergeant, don't let the business this morning make you relax your vigilance."
"Vigilance, is it?" Mullivane belovled. "Don't you worry none, Lieutenant. I'll do your fighting for you."
Chad saw the expression on Zack's face; he saw the men exchange glances.
"I want to see you tonight on the river behind those trees," Chad said, jerking his head at the timber. "Alone."

For just a moment Mullivane stared blankly, then he understood what was in Chad's mind and a wide grin curled across his Irish face. "I'll be there, Lieutenant," he said.
Chad turned away. It was not what he wanted to do, but he had no choice. Win, lose, or draw, he had to do it. It wasn't Mullivane who really worried him. The man hated him because he wanted Chad's shoulder bars, but he was a fighter. In the showdown he'd hold up his end and more.
Randall was quite another problem.

Marie Dionne's Shop Is Closed

MONTREAL (AP)—Marie Dionne has closed her flower shop, the first personal business venture of any of the famous quintuplets.
Unconfirmed reports said the shop lost $25,000 during its seven-month operation. Neighbors said it attracted large numbers of tourists, but apparently Marie and her sisters were their object.
Marie's assistant Ellen Bourget said Miss Dionne had closed the business because of personal reasons. She added it was not a matter of Marie's health, which has been delicate.
Miss Bourget reported Marie now would occupy herself keeping house for her sisters in the quintuplets apartment. The four girls on their 21st birthdays in 1955 came into possession of about a million dollars accumulated during their childhood.
Marie lives in the apartment with a girl friend, Yvonne and Cecile stay there on holidays from the suburban hospital where they are student nurses. The fourth surviving quintuplet, Annette, is studying music at Nicolet, 150 miles east of Montreal. Emilie, the fifth sister, died in 1954.

'Entries' Were Born Yesterday

PONCA CITY, Okla. (AP)—At the pet contest held here, a young lad presented the judges with a jar filled with water.
"Why, son, you've lost your entry," the judge told the boy.
"Oh, no sir. You see they were just born yesterday," he replied. The judge squinted, and sure enough, there were two guppies in the jar.

Army's Supply System Is Given An Electronic Key

By HERB ALTSCHULL
STUTT GART, Germany (AP)—The U. S. Army is getting so streamlined that even the nuts and bolts that keep its equipment together are being supplied electronically. Its all part of Project Mass and the top brass at 7th Army headquarters here report that the pioneer work done so far has just about proved the efficiency of the new electronic supply system.

Mass stands for "Modern Army Supply System," and it's just that. Every item the Army uses can now be ordered by electronic means—spitting out cards filled with tell-tale holes.

Sgt. Joe Doakes at a forward Army post in Germany can order a spare part for a truck or howitzer all the way from the United States and have it in hand in a couple of days. Project Mass has not yet been made routine for the whole army. But 7th Army officials predict that the current elaborate testing program will convince the Pentagon to put it into force all over the world.

The experimental project has been under way here since last July. Its action officer, Maj. Harold Maier of Lansing, Mich., says, "We have made tremendous progress."

"Our supply system was really a mess," said Martin Tieman of George Washington University, one of the top civilian officials of Project Mass.

"We had half a million items scattered all over the place. A lot of them had no supply numbers and there were plenty that hadn't even been catalogued," he said. So the nut and bolt roundup began. In half a year most of these items have been located, tagged and numbered.

"Our goal is to keep about 40,000 items on hand in mobile supply units in Europe," Tieman said. "That represents about 85 per cent of the Army's needs. The remaining 15 per cent can be ordered directly from the United States."

One of the major reasons for Project Mass was fear that atomic strikes could swiftly wipe out the many bulky supply depots the Army has been maintaining in Germany and France.

The plan is to cut the number of European depots to no more than five and increase the number of mobile "direct supply units" to about 100. The latter stock the replacement parts most in demand. The depots, also being put on wheels, stock important items not so frequently needed.

Bigger, slower moving items are handled directly from the United States—either by ship or plane.

Radio runs it all. In the stock control center at Stuttgart, soldiers man a series of electronic "transceivers" which take orders on cards and place calls within seconds.

Each depot and direct supply unit has its own transceivers. So does supply headquarters in New York.

"In modern warfare," Maier said, "troops must move quickly, mass for an attack and then disperse. There isn't any room for old-fashioned supply units. They wouldn't last very long in an atomic war."

In the past ships carried replacement parts from the United States to Germany in an unending stream. Under Project Mass, no equipment moves unless it is ordered special or unless the electronic brains find out the European depots have fallen below required replacement supply. Then it comes automatically. Formerly, it took 120-180 days to replenish supplies from the States.

"We hope to cut it to 20 days eventually," said Robert Faylor, director of George Washington University's logistics branch, which is mastering the program. "Right now, we can move 80 per cent of the items in 23 days."

Claims Spelling Skill Not Vital

NEW YORK (AP)—Today's spelling lesson: "A skeeter bit the human bean on the shoulder of his buddy, drawing blood, and he called a docer and nerser before he devilled brane fever."

If you fail to spot the errors, you can still go to college, says Dr. Kenneth B. M. Crooks, zoology professor of Fort Valley State College, Georgia.

He says he has seen from 100 to 500 college students make these same misspellings, and more. Words like ginny pig, bruce, body, blud, nerser, colur, curcle, something, punkin, wort (for whart), anamal.

Many college students can't spell common words, some do not know the alphabet, and something should be done about it, he told the American Assn. for the Advancement of Science.

"It is well known that college students do not read, write, nor comprehend as well as they should. This study, over a 26-year period, proves that they cannot spell either."

Dr. Crooks cited these among the probable reasons:

Children don't get enough drill in writing and spelling. We are addicted to slogans. Incorrect public signs and notices. Most school teachers seem to feel that teaching spelling is beneath their dignity.

'Precedent' For Teacher Scales

GREENBUSH, Wis. (AP)—A 100-year old letter pertaining to the State Road School, which now stands abandoned, was located recently.

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK — The stock market moved slightly higher in the early afternoon today.

Gains of fractions to a point were scattered through most major divisions. There also were numerous fractional losses in the list.

Wall Street observers said the market was making a try at a traditional year-end advance but pointed out this move was curtailed by year-end transactions for income tax purposes.

Trading was active in the opening minutes, then proceeded at a moderate pace.

Gulf Oil and Goodyear rose around 2 points, and Lukens Steel and Zenith about a point.

Also higher were Bethlehem Steel, Douglas Aircraft, American Telephone, International Nickel, Illinois Central and Texas Co.

Anaconda declined more than a point. Small losers included Ford, Chrysler, United Aircraft, Kennecott, Baltimore & Ohio and Sinclair.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks at noon rose 20 cents to $180.90, with industrials up 20 cents, rails up 50 cents and utilities unchanged. The average went ahead 50 cents yesterday.

RALEIGH (NCDA)—North Carolina poultry markets: Fryers and broilers generally steady to firm; farm price 15, f.o.b. plant 16 1/2 to 16 3/4.

Raleigh eggs steady A large 35-40; Asheville eggs unsettled, A large 36-38, mostly 37; Charlotte eggs unsettled, A large 37.

Lost Fight For Further Tax Aid

WASHINGTON — The steel industry has lost its battle for further government tax aid in expanding its facilities.

The Office of Defense Mobilization rejected yesterday the industry's request that rapid tax amortization be permitted on the cost of another round of plant expansions to meet a growing need for steel.

ODM Director Arthur S. Flemming announced also the government will not set up a priority system to channel steel supplies to tanker construction. Such a program, he said, could take steel from other needed uses and could lead eventually to a "controlled economy" in peacetime.

Under the tax amortization program in which the steel industry shared during the Korean War, a company is permitted for tax purposes to charge off a substantial portion of the cost of a new plant within five years. Normally the depreciation must be figured over a period of 20 years or more.

At the faster rate, more of the cost could be met from money which otherwise would go to the government in income taxes.

Flemming said that to restore the program for steel plants would be "contrary to the intent of Congress" and would discriminate against other industries.

He said it has been determined that there would be sufficient steel capacity for a mobilization, and that current shortages result from "the current needs of a rapidly expanding civilian economy."

On The Records, Gina Big Earner

ROME — Gina Lollobrigida out-earned Sofia Loren in 1956, according to their tax returns.

But both stars—always according to the tax files—earned more than Anna Magnani, whose performance in "The Rose Tattoo" won Hollywood's Oscar last March.

The reported earnings: Gina, 30 million lire, or slightly less than $50,000; Sofia, a scant $16,000; Anna, less than $15,000.

Italian tax records, needless to say, are not regarded as completely accurate.

Inspectors Work On Postal Theft

GUILFORD, N.C. — Postal inspectors today were working on the theft of an estimated $600 and valuable papers from a safe in the post office here Christmas Eve.

Deputies assisting them said the 600-pound safe was turned on its back and the door was opened with crowbars and a sledgehammer.

Two pinbars and a sledgehammer were found in the office.

Officers said the thieves broke open the window of a grocery next door, and cut through a partition of the grocery to get into the post office.

Meteor Shower May Be Space Travel Obstacle

NEW YORK (AP)—Speedy visitors from space kiss the earth 2,300 times a second, by new calculations reported today.

These visitors are meteors or shooting stars.

They are so numerous they might literally blast open a space ship long before it could journey to the moon or Mars. They could be one of the greatest barriers to the promised age of space travel.

The new calculations are that 200 million shooting stars visible to the naked eye zing into the earth's atmosphere every day.

They range from the size of dust specks to BB shot or bigger. In total, the 200 million daily visitors weigh at least 10 tons. They travel at speeds from 30,000 to 160,000 miles per hour, and most perish in incandescent brightness from friction on our planet's air.

They all come from so-called empty space, which man is on the eve of exploring with little man-made moons.

The new estimate was prepared for presentation to the American Astronomical Society and American Assn. for the Advancement of Science by Peter M. Millman and Miriam S. Burland of the National Research Council, Dominion Observatory, in Canada.

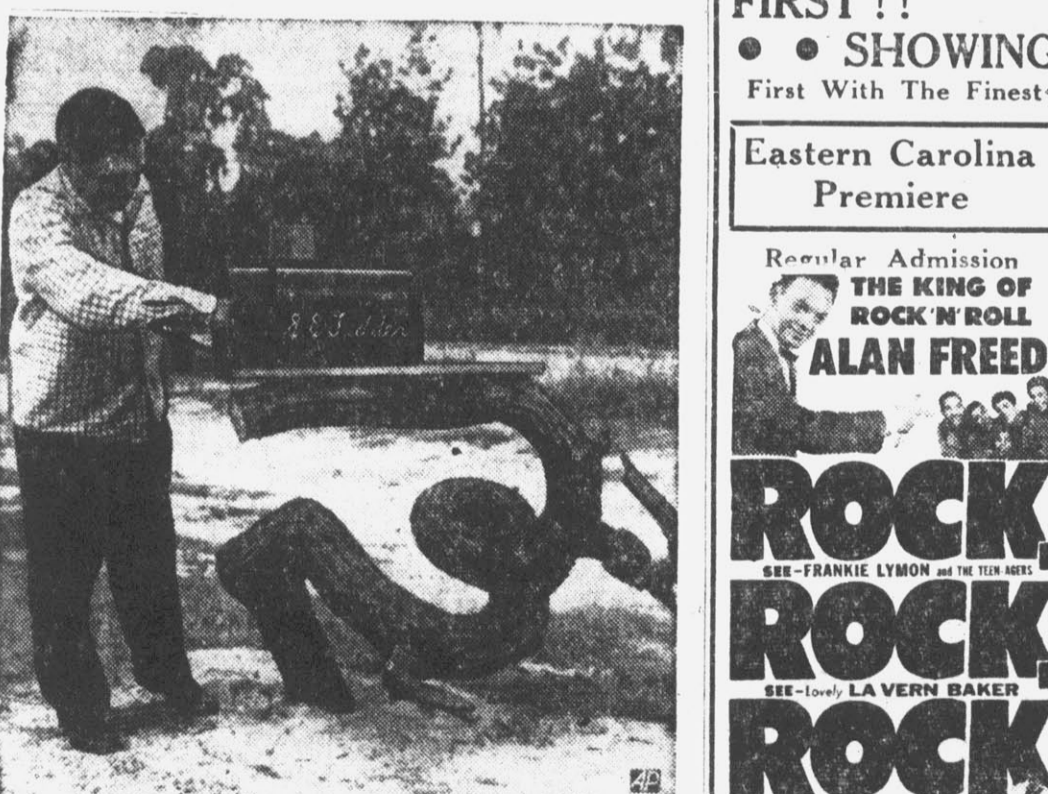

The estimate is based upon the number of meteors actually seen over a 23-year period by groups of human observers.

DORMITORY SUM — The Community Facilities Administration last night announced a $250,000 loan to help finance a dormitory at Elon College.

It will house 123 men students.

GOING TO DOGS — FARMINGTON, N. M. (AP)—When the city poundmaster resigned in this northwestern New Mexico city, the Farmington Times solemnly reported that it was safe to say the town was going back to the dogs.

TRIED AND TRUE — TAHLEQUAH, Okla. (AP)—Tom Chastain should be a good prospect for a new car but he isn't. He says his 1932 model Ford, which has turned the 100,000 mile post twice, still percolates on all four.

Drivers Charged In 2 Accidents

Both drivers were charged when a car and a truck collided on N.C. 43 about 2:30 yesterday afternoon.

Drivers of the vehicles were identified by investigating patrolman D. L. Minshew and Jerry O. Roberts, Negro of Grimesland Rt. 1 and George R. Gaskins of 1103 Dickinson Ave., Greenville.

Minshew reported that Gaskins was making a left turn into a private drive and Roberts was passing at the time of the accident.

Gaskins was charged with failing to give a proper signal and Roberts with failing to give an audible warning in passing.

Damage to each of the cars was estimated at $150.

At 4:10 p.m. yesterday afternoon a truck being operated by Charlie Harris, Negro, of Greenville Rt. 4 and a car driven by Richard L. Vines, Negro, of 316 Seaton Pl. N.E., Washington, D.C. collided on the Old Stantonburg Rd.

The accident occurred about four miles west of Farmville.

Ptl. Minshew said Harris was charged with failing to give a proper signal and Vines with failing to give an audible warning while passing.

Damage to Harris' truck amounted to $125 and damage to Vines' car was set at $200.

Liquor Prices To Go Up Jan. 1

CHARLOTTE — A price increase by distillers will mean a boost of 5 to 15 cents a bottle for about 25 per cent of the liquor sold at North Carolina ABC stores after Jan. 1.

But the increase will mean a windfall for liquor stores here.

Liquor is being stockpiled at the old price. The ABC people figure they will make about $18,000 by buying at lower prices and selling after Jan. 1.

Carl Wester, State ABC Board auditor, said the increases will amount to five cents a pint and 10 cents a fifth for the affected blends, and 10 cents a pint and 15 cents a fifth for the affected bonds.

He added that the increases will be reflected in 75 of the 270 items on the liquor store lists, and will hit about 25 per cent of the volume.

Profits from the 10 stores here go to Charlotte, Mecklenburg County, and the public library system.

Checks totaling $377,000 will go to them this week, representing quarterly profits. They will split an estimated one and one half million dollars in profits this year.

Maid Of Cotton Contest Begins

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) The annual Maid of Cotton contest begins here today with 23 Cotton Belt beauties on hand.

Today's events include briefing sessions for the girls, a luncheon and a dinner dance.

The Maid will be named Friday night after a panel of judges sizes them up for beauty, charm, the ability to model, and family background.

She will be given a convertible automobile, a cotton wardrobe and a six-month tour of this country and western Europe during which she will model the cotton creations.

$200,000 In Art Is Lost To Fire

NEW YORK — Fire damaged or destroyed paintings valued at a minimum of $200,000 in Greenwich Village yesterday.

The blaze broke out at the headquarters of Masterpiece Restorers, Inc., as a staff of artists worked on a collection of about 30 paintings, 20 from the Kress foundation, Washington, D.C.

Included among the destroyed paintings were Titoretto's "Birth of the Virgin," with an estimated value of $50,000; Brueghel's "Country Fair" and a Magnasco landscape.

Firemen said a blowtorch, used to remove paint from a door on the first floor of the five-story building, started a fire which spread rapidly. No one was injured.

Tanker Plane Is Down In Alaska

ANCHORAGE, Alaska — The Alaskan Air Command reported today that a four-engine tanker plane carrying eight men had crashed northwest of Willow, 50 miles north of Anchorage.

It was not known whether there were any survivors. A ground party was enroute to the crash scene.

The plane crashed on Bald Mountain just minutes after taking off from Elmendorf Air Force Base late last night on a routine training mission, the Air Force said.
