Macmillan Expected Have New Cabinet By Weekend

LONDON (AP) — Prime Minister Harold Macmillan continued his intense efforts today to line up his new government and predicted confidently his task will be completed this weekend. Queen Elizabeth II is interrupting a holiday to be at Buckingham Palace tomorrow, presumably to receive and give formal approval to the new ministers.

His Last Words: 'Thanks Warden'

CANON CITY, Colo. (AP) — Coolly accepting his fate, John Gilbert Graham was executed last night in Colorado's gas chamber for destroying an airliner that carried his mother and 43 other persons to death. The 24-year-old father of two children gulped the cyanide fumes and passed into unconsciousness in seconds. He was pronounced dead in 12 minutes.

'New Look' In Army's Aerial Supply Is Tested

FT. BRAGG, N.C. (AP) — A test of the Army's "new look" in aerial resupply began here shortly after dawn today under the watchful eyes of U.S. and British officials eager to see the Army's new "pentomic" division in action. The operation featured 91 sorties by C123 Provider aircraft, dropping supplies to the 187th Airborne Combat Group.

Senator Says Weakening Of Eisenhower Resolution Would Prove To Be Tragic

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. H. Alexander Smith (R-N.J.) said today it would be "tragic" if Congress should so weaken the Eisenhower administration's Middle East resolution as to indicate "a lack of confidence in the President." Smith, a member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, said in an interview "it would be a tragic disaster to reject the President's recommendation, and almost as tragic a disaster to so weaken or change it as to indicate a lack of confidence in the President at this critical time."

Rules NAACP Is Subject To Laws

RALEIGH (AP) — The National Assn. for the Advancement of the Colored People will have to pursue another course in its contention that it is not subject to two North Carolina laws. The State Supreme Court said so yesterday in affirming a decision in Wake Superior Court by Judge Hamilton Hobgood. The NAACP had asked for a declaratory judgment that it is not subject to (1) a law requiring registration of groups seeking to influence public opinion, and (2) a law requiring registration of foreign corporations doing business in North Carolina.

Way Cleared To Start On Roads

RALEIGH (AP) — The State Supreme Court has cleared the way for North Carolina to go ahead with its 1957 road program as it had planned. Highway Chairman A. H. Graham said last night a decision by the court yesterday made it virtually certain that the U.S. Bureau of Public Roads will remove any restrictions on interstate highway projects in North Carolina. The Supreme Court held that the Highway Commission has authority to condemn land for limited access highways.

Fresh Crackdown In Hungary As Rebellion Feared

BUDAPEST, Hungary (AP) — The government cracked down anew today to head off the possibility that renewed labor and student unrest might signal the renewal of open rebellion. It was apparent the Soviet-imposed regime of Premier János Kadar feared workers' demonstrations that swept Budapest yesterday could lead to new fighting. One government-controlled paper said: "Fear reigns in Hungary. Nobody knows if tomorrow might not bring another bloody revolution."

Car, School Bus Suffer Collision

The driver of a car which crashed into the rear of an unloading school bus on the Dag Hammarskjöld Highway yesterday afternoon will be charged with reckless driving, investigating patrolman James W. Boykin said today. He identified the driver as Cecil Arline Turner, 55, of 301 Summit St. Turner suffered chest injuries as a result of the crash and was admitted to Pitt Memorial Hospital. Boykin said the bus was being operated by William Junior Smith, 16-year-old Negro of Greenville, Rt. 6, and it was transporting students from Bethel Negro School. No one on the bus was injured. The patrolman said his investigation showed the bus had stopped to unload and two children had gotten off at the time the crash occurred. A third child, Doris Little, 9, was leaving the bus at the time of the crash. She was knocked against the door but she was uninjured. Her father was standing across the road and he saw the wreck as it happened. Boykin reported that Turner's 1956 model car skidded 54 feet before striking the bus. The patrolman quoted Turner as saying he thought the bus was moving and he did not see it until too late to stop. Both vehicles were headed south and the accident occurred about six miles north of Greenville. Boykin estimated damage to Turner's car at $500. Damage to the bus was set at $50.

—Almost Became A 'Passenger'

A telephone pole at the unmarked intersection of Forbes and 13th streets almost became a passenger in an East Carolina College student's car yesterday afternoon. Carlton Bruce Taylor, who lives at 206 13th Street, was headed west on 13th when his car was struck by a southbound vehicle operated by Ruth Griffin Briley of Route 5, Greenville. Taylor's car was spun around by the impact, jammed against the pole and headed in a northern direction. Mrs. Briley was cited for failure to yield right-of-way by investigating officers. A passenger in the Briley car received a minor head injury. (Reflector Staff Photo).

Passenger In Car Wreck Is Seriously Hurt

A passenger in a car which wrecked last night is in critical condition at Pitt Memorial Hospital. The injured man was identified as Henry Clay Nobles of Winterville, Rt. 2. He received a fractured skull and other injuries when the car in which he was riding overturned on a curve on the Nobles Road near Speight's Seed Farm. Investigating patrolman D. L. Minshew said Nobles was thrown from the car. Driver of the vehicle was identified as Henry W. Avery, of Winterville, Rt. 2. He also was thrown from the vehicle. Avery suffered shock and abrasions but his injuries were not said to be serious. Minshew said the car overturned one complete time after it went out of control. The wreck took place around 1:15 a.m. Investigation is continuing.

CHAPTER 25 After the Christmas dinner, Isabella Randall turned her chair toward the fire, then stooped and laid several chunks of cottonwood on the low flames. She said, "Let's sit here, Chad."

For a moment Chad Endicott could not take his eyes from here. She stood facing him, a sad but lovely woman. Chad wondered, as he had many times since he had first seen her, why she had married Colonel Randall.

Chad placed his chair beside hers, a sudden wariness in him. He was afraid to stay here, afraid of himself. He heard the steady, gurgling sound of the Colonel's breathing in the next room.

"Tell me about your sweetheart, Chad," Isabella said. So he told her about Elizabeth, about Christmas a year ago, about their plans. As he talked, the wariness left him, but he was remembering things long forgotten.

When he stopped speaking, Isabella murmured, "She must be a wonderful girl." She brought her gaze to Chad's face. "Tell her you love her after you're married. Tell her over and over until you think she must be tired of hearing it, but she won't be. Believe me, Chad, she won't be."

She turned her head to stare at the fire. "I know the questions that are in your mind. You're too courteous to ask them, but I'll answer them anyway. I married the Colonel when I was sixteen. He was twice my age, but he was handsome and I loved him. Age was not anything to worry about. I met him in New Orleans, in fifty-six. The year Buchanan was elected President. There was talk about war even then, but we didn't take it seriously."

She shook her head. "I've lived with him a little over ten years. I know him. Chad, I know his vanity, his jealousy, his fits of temper, his need to be bolstered by me. I know all his weaknesses and his one great asset. You know it, too. His appearance. Dignity. A talent for impressing people. He's used it to get where he is."

Her hands were folded on her lap. "He drinks because he's afraid of failure. Afraid he'll do the wrong thing. We were in Washington from Bull Run to Appomattox. All that time he kept talking about getting into the field, but he never really wanted it. He didn't want to come up here. He had to appear brave by asking for this assignment, but he was surprised when he got it. She threw out her hands in a gesture of futility.

"Oh, I don't know, Chad. Maybe he did want to come here. Maybe he thought he could prove his courage to himself. And to all of you. But he never will."

She laid a hand on his arm. "Forgive me for talking the way I have, but sometimes I think I'm going crazy, cooped up in this way inside the stockade. No one to talk to. The Colonel just sitting and looking at me." Her fingers tightened on his arm. "Chad, will you let me have a horse to go riding? Just a little way. I wouldn't go far."

"I'm sorry," he told her. "I couldn't. We don't know how many Indians are around, but they're watching us all the time."

"Please, Chad. I've just got to have a horse."

THEY'RE GOING TO STICK A NEEDLE IN ME Yes, Sonny, we do it all the time! Mommie holds you in her lap. And that nice, friendly doctor gets the needle ready. Then... OUCH! And there's one less disease for you to worry about. If only it were that easy to protect you from some of the other diseases that infest the world... the plagues that eat away man's moral and spiritual fibre. But religion can't be injected with a needle! So it requires wise parents, and Christian homes, and worshipping families, and vigorous churches to get you ready for a noble, happy life. Better take it up Sunday with your folks: ISN'T IT TIME FOR ALL OF US TO GO TO CHURCH? THE CHURCH FOR ALL... ALL FOR THE CHURCH The Church is the greatest factor on earth for the building of character and good citizenship. It is a storehouse of spiritual values. Without a strong Church, neither democracy nor civilization can survive. There are four sound reasons why every person should attend services regularly and support the Church. They are: (1) For his own sake. (2) For his children's sake. (3) For the sake of his community and nation. (4) For the sake of the Church itself, which needs his moral and material support. Plan to go to church regularly and read your Bible daily. Day Book Chapter Verses Sunday... Psalms 24 1-22 Monday... Psalms 1 1-17 Tuesday... Proverbs 1 1-10 Wednesday... Proverbs 22 1-9 Thursday... Dr. Jenkins Talks To Club

Dr. L. W. Jenkin was guest speaker at a meeting of the Pickwick Book Club Tuesday. Dr. Jenkins spoke on "Children and Religion" emphasizing that parents' first obligation is to their children and that to them should be given the maximum of their free time. He declared the religious education of a child is primarily the responsibility of his parents, reminding members that the child is always a mirror of his parents. "Show your child the importance of religion outside of the church—in government, in education and in every phase of his life," he advised. "Do not lead them to believe all prayers are answered or that religion makes everyone happy and prosperous. Pray with your children. You will derive more from a family devotional than from many of the meetings you might attend," he concluded. Mrs. J. K. Proctor Jr. was hostess to the club at her home. During the social period that followed Dean Jenkins' talk, Mrs. Proctor served caramel pie and coffee. Guests for the afternoon included Mrs. John Farley, Mrs. N. R. Armitage, Mrs. J. B. Kittrell, Mrs. J. Knott Proctor and Dr. Jenkins.

Book Club Holds Regular Meeting

The Lector Book Club met Tuesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Burney Warren Jr. Upon their arrival the members were served a dessert course with nuts and coffee. During a brief business session, the Emergency Committee reported on the family which had been helped for the holidays. The program was then turned over to Mrs. Warren whose topic was "Animism," which is one of the religions of the world in the most primitive form. The term Animism is used in considering savages and barbarians; or people of unscientific culture. There are still 173 million of these people in the world today who worship spirits and have no conception of the one true God. Following the program, books were exchanged and the meeting adjourned.

30 Years Ago Today

January 12, 1927 Greenville's oil bubble has been exploded. The geologist declares no oil will be found in Greenville vicinity. Thirteen inches of snow have fallen in this city since late Saturday night. This is the heaviest fall of snow in this community since 1919. The tobacco market reopened Tuesday morning following the Christmas holidays. On account of the snow, the growers experienced some difficulty in getting to market. Miss Stallings Guest Speaker Miss Nell Stallings was speaker of the afternoon when Mrs. W. L. Whedbee was hostess to the Clio Book Club Tuesday. Following a brief business session presided over by Mrs. Morgan Fambrough, president, Miss Stallings was introduced by Mrs. Whedbee. Her subject was "New Trends in the Medical World." Miss Stallings spoke of the Salk vaccine, giving statistics on the number of people who have taken the first two shots, and spoke of the need for teen-agers to take the third of the series. All people up to age 40 are urged to take the Salk vaccine, she said. Miss Stallings spoke of research now being made in cancer, the common cold, and venereal disease. She mentioned several of the much publicized diets which have appeared in many popular magazines lately. Mrs. Whedbee served a sweet course, nuts and coffee. She was assisted in serving by Mrs. Jesse Moye. Guest Discussed Care Of Shrubs Mrs. Vance Perkins spoke to the Elmhurst Garden Club Thursday night on "Transplanting and Care of Shrubs." The club met at the home of Mrs. Richard Worsley. The president, Mrs. James M. Grulke, presided. Mrs. Durward Harris, beautification chairman, reminded the members that beauty begins at home and urged the members to start planting in "our own backyard." Mrs. Joe Respass, horticulture chairman, gave the members tips on how to care for poinsettias. Mrs. Howard Wilson, program chairman, introduced the speaker. Mrs. Perkins told the members the proper way to dig a hole for shrubs and suggested November or December as the proper months to replant. "When pruning shrubs, try to conform to the natural habit," she said. Hot donuts and soft drinks were served by the hostess to the 23 members. The club will meet next with Mrs. Dave Fowler. Make up some hominy grits, then pour them into a pan so they are about an inch deep. Chill. Cut in squares, dip in flour and fry until golden brown. Serve with crisp bacon and currant jelly.

Degree Of Pocahontas Installed New Officers At Tuesday Meet

Withla Council members of the Degree of Pocahontas held their semi-monthly meeting Tuesday night at the Woman's Club. Miss Jean Bright, Pocahontas, presided. Mrs. Nina Joyner of Farmville Council and Mrs. Bessie Worthington of Ayden Council were welcomed as visitors. Mrs. Ruth Cox gave a report of the Auditing Committee. Five officers, Mrs. Rachel Moore, Mrs. Carrie Jones, Mrs. Bettie Nobles, Mrs. Kathleen Woolard and Miss Jeanette Bright, were presented before attendance prizes, hand-painted plates with their names on it, by the retiring president, Miss Jean Bright. Before leaving her office, Miss Bright said she had her officers' suitcases packed and had to pack her own, as it was time for her to go. She placed a suitcase in front of her and several garments of wearing apparel. She then called her officers, one at a time, telling of their help and thanked them, presenting each with a miniature suitcase and a hand-painted plate with their name and title on it. For the things she might have overlooked in her blindness during her term she added a pair of spectacles to her suitcase, and for the tasks she had not done she put crumpled tissues in the case, not wanting them to clutter up the incoming Pocahontas' suitcase. She closed the suitcase, "with gratitude for the past, an earnest prayer for the future and God's richest blessing ever rest upon the members. I bid you farewell." Mrs. Lissie Harris, Council Deputy, assisted by Mrs. Bettie Nobles, Past Great Pocahontas of North Carolina, thanked the retiring officers for their work and installed the following incoming officers: Mrs. Minnie Bailey, Pocahontas; Miss Jean Bright, Prophetess; Mrs. Rachel Moore, Wrennath; Mrs. Thelma Vincent, Powhatan; Mrs. Bettie Nobles, Keeper of Records; Mrs. Dora Bozeman, Keeper of Wampum; and Mrs. Carrie Jones, Collector of Wampum. Mrs. Ruby Hodges, first scout; Mrs. Esther McGowan, second scout; Mrs. Mildred Causey, first warrior; Mrs. Geneva Webb, second warrior; Mrs. Pauline Ross, third warrior; Mrs. Elizabeth O'Neal, fourth warrior; Miss Jeanette Bright, first runner; Mrs. Melba Manning, second runner. Mrs. Lillie Haddock, first counselor; Mrs. Fannie Lloyd, second counselor; Mrs. Peggy Bailey, guard of tepee; Mrs. Jettie Ross, guard of forest; Miss Bessie Nobles, pianist; and Mrs. Geneva Webb, trustee. As each officer was installed she was presented a carnation corsage by Pocahontas, Mrs. Bailey, and the jewel of her office was pinned on her. Pocahontas Mrs. Bailey in her acceptance speech asked for "support and cooperation to make her term of office successful." Miss Jean Bright was presented a past Pocahontas pin, a past Pocahontas certificate, a white Bible with her name and council name engraved in gold letters, and a hand-painted plate with her name and title written on it. "Good of Order" came a message of thankfulness from Miss Jean Bright. Mrs. Mattie Mayo read about the "Beginnings" from the Bible, closing with a prayer for the new year. After the meeting adjourned, the members were served fruit punch, sandwiches, iced cakes, nuts and mints in the dining room. Arrangements of greenery with white candles on the tables and mantels furnished the decorations.

Financial Responsibility Needed

Pitt County's Representative Walter Jones has taken a step toward meeting one of the needs of North Carolinians with the announcement of his intention to introduce a compulsory liability insurance bill in the forthcoming General Assembly.

From the fight which took place before the present inadequate financial responsibility act was passed, it's a good bet that Rep. Jones' proposal will not be written into law without considerable effort. From the state's experience with the financial responsibility act, however, most of the people of North Carolina should be convinced by now that the state needs something better if citizens are to be afforded the protection they need.

While the financial responsibility act has proven itself worthwhile since it was written into law by the General Assembly, its shortcomings have also been evident. That particular legislation requires a driver to show evidence of financial responsibility if he operates a motor vehicle after being involved in one accident. It does not, however, afford adequate protection for the unfortunate victim of that first accident with the person who has neither liability insurance or sufficient financial responsibility to make restitution for damages which might be sustained in the "first" accident.

According to the proposal by Rep. Jones, liability insurance on a motor vehicle would be a prerequisite for the issuance of a license tag for that vehicle. It would assure that every motor vehicle which was licensed in North Carolina carries with it liability insurance for the protection of the "other fellow", and at the same time would provide the state with a means of keeping check on the validity of such insurance.

We need not deceive ourselves. There will be opposition to this proposal, and probably plenty of it.

While the supposition that every motor vehicle owner must carry liability insurance will be attacked, we do not feel there is a valid argument against the position that every motor vehicle owner has a responsibility to every other individual who owns a motor vehicle, operates one, or is a passenger in one on the public roads. In enactment of the financial responsibility act, the state legislature has embraced this latter supposition. By enacting the legislation proposed by Rep. Jones, the General Assembly will only be completing the job it started to do: afford protection for those who suffer damages in traffic accidents.

The Reflector commends Rep. Jones for the stand he has taken in this matter which is of importance to every person in this state. By the time the matter is officially put before the legislature in Raleigh, we trust that a sufficient public support will have crystallized to assure passage of the measure.

Cargo Diversity Is Sign Of Port Growth

Increased cargo tonnage handled* through the state port at Wilmington during 1956 shows the growing importance of North Carolina's ports in the economic progress of the state.

While the 11 per cent increase in tonnage is important in itself, we view the diversification of commodities as of possible greater long range importance to the state and its ports. During 1955, 36 different commodities were handled through the Wilmington Port. In 1956 there was no less than 57 categories of cargo handled through the port.

North Carolina has put a great deal of money into its two deep-water ports in the past decade. It is evident that more capital outlay will be required to keep the ports abreast of demands upon them. Growth of the ports in recent years, however, shows the state is gaining returns on its investment in terms of economic progress. Since 1955 the port at Wilmington alone has shown a gain of 139 per cent in tonnage handled.

Though North Carolina was slow in making a bid to regain its former prominence among the ports along the Atlantic Coast, the progress which has been made in recent years shows clearly that the Tar Heel ports can become major deep-water facilities for import and export of raw materials and manufactured products.

Many Factors Lure Industry

By LYNN NISBET

"CLIMATE." — A lot of things other than weather conditions go to make up an attractive "climate" for a business enterprise. Kenneth C. Towe, president of American Cyanamid, made this very clear in announcing the location of a plant at Farmville.

While every location has peculiar advantages or disadvantages for specific industrial activities, there are some factors common to all. Among these are adequate transportation facilities, availability of operating personnel, accessibility to raw materials and convenience to markets. Highly important also are the intangibles of community attitude and the governmental climate.

Governmental climate embraces primarily the tax structure, but includes also services rendered by the government in return for taxes paid.

All the varied factors are cold bloodedly appraised by the men responsible for picking locations. Speaking as a native Tarheel, proud to be able to establish another plant in his home state, Mr. Towe emphasized that sentiment has no place in locating industry. Sentiment as a factor became a casualty of the transition from ownership management to professional management, he said. Plants are located on the "arithmetics of economics."

In the case of the Farmville plant the site was selected because of other advantages outweigh the admitted handicap that North Carolina has one of the highest corporate tax schedules in the country. This handicap was to some extent alleviated by prospect of revision in the tax laws by the forthcoming General Assembly as recommended by the special study commission.

PROBATION — There was implication in Towe's remarks that while this plant is definite, the State is on probation for consideration of other plant sites. Failure to modernize the tax structure or to carry out projected policies for the conservation of forests and other resources might remove North Carolina from the company's prospect list.

Other industrialists have indicated a watchful waiting attitude on these same points. That is one reason Governor Hodges is a little "put out" at lack of full endorsement of the tax program by the Board of Conservation and Development at its recent meeting. Since the primary purpose of the revision is to make the climate more attractive to industry, and C&D is the main promoter of industrial development, sponsors of the tax reform had hoped for unqualified endorsement and active support of the program in the Legislature.

WOOD — The Farmville plant will manufacture flakeboard from pine chips and shavings, and prospective continuous supply of wood was a major inducement for locating here. To ascertain the suitability of Eastern Carolina pine for the product, the company shipped two car loads of wood to the Tacoma, Wash., plant for experiments. The purchase price of the wood was less than $500. Cost of getting the wood to Tacoma and back was more than $5,000. Home processing will save that $4,500 for North Carolina wage earners.

At first the Farmville unit will make only the flakeboard and ship it somewhere else for applying the Formica surfacing. Long range plans call for completing the whole process here, adding further to income of Tarheel workers.

TREES — Wood for this plant must come from trees. Same is true of the long time paper mills at Roanoke Rapids and Plymouth, the more recent Regal plant near Wilmington and the upcoming Union Bag & Paper operation between Kinston and New Bern. The "enlightened reforestation program" which Mr. Towe commended on part of the State of North Carolina, coupled with the conservation and reforestation policies of the big paper companies, assures continuing supply of wood for these operations and for the state's major wood furniture industry.

Statistics on tree farming run into astronomical figures. State nurseries this year will produce some 50 million seedlings, and they will not need the demand. Governor Hodges reported that 64 percent of the state land area, or 19 1/2 million acres, are in forest — and the area is increasing every year. Most of the forest land belongs to small individual owners — some 230,000 or thereabouts — and these small fellows are alert to the value of trees as a cash crop. There are some big corporate owners. West Virginia Pulp & Paper Company owns about a third of a million acres in Dare, Hyde and Tyrrell counties on which modern forestry practices are used.

A new profession is developing of forestry consultants. There are several individuals and firms which offer service to small land owners in selective cutting and marketing of timber and replacement of trees cut out. An increasing number of land owners are following the practice of planting a tree for every tree cut. Also they are realizing that with or without any soil bank program, many acres heretofore counted as wholly waste land are adapted to growing a tree cash crop.

Strength For Today

NATURE OF TRUE GOODNESS — The "Cross, Jesus" gave utterance to the immortal words, "Father forgive them for they know not what they do." This is generally considered — and rightly so — the perfect setting forth of the forgiving spirit. These men were perpetrating the most heinous crime in history and the Victim's prayer was that they be forgiven. What a divine example of love it is!

But it also shows forth another truth frequently overlooked. Here was perfect goodness on the Cross. Jesus extended complete forgiveness to His persecutors. We see emerging from this circumstance the great truth that genuine goodness has no enemies.

It has opponents, it may even have persecutors. But real goodness has no enemies. It is impossible for any thoroughly good man to look upon anyone as his enemy.

This does not mean that we are to take a wishy-washy attitude toward the marked difference between right and wrong. We are not to be blind either to our own mistakes or to the mistakes of others round about us. We are to be well aware of the fact not only that we are sinners, but that others are sinners also and perhaps very grievous sinners.

But they are not our enemies. Opponents? — yes. Misdled and mistaken persons? — yes. But not enemies. True goodness knows no enemies.

Meanest; SHP; Pennies

Preston Corey has his nomination for the meanest man in Pitt County.

Corey, who operates a realty and insurance agency locally, walked into the post office to mail a letter the other night. He glanced at a March of Dimes iron lung coin collector in the post-office lobby. You guessed it. Someone had broken out of the celluloid front of the collector and taken its contents.

Corey said there were three pennies left in the container and he took those and deposited them in another collector.

"Someone must have run short of change for the stamp machine," says Corey.

Personally I figure the lights must have been off in the lobby when the collector was pilfered. Nobody could look the little girl on the poster in the eye and rob the iron lung at the same time.

Highway patrolmen, as some folks know, do more than lurk in dark places along the road side ready to pounce upon innocent drunks, speedsters and hot-rodgers.

Pit. Bill Whitehurst of Ayden investigated a wreck on N.C. 11 near Greenville recently. A navy nurse on her way to Camp Lejeune was involved. Whitehurst after investigating charged the nurse with failing to stop, for a stop sign.

The woman, nervous after the accident, decided to stay in Greenville rather than attempt to drive on to Camp Lejeune. All motels and hotels were full, however. She went to Ayden and was unable to find lodging there. So, Whitehurst and his wife invited the nurse to spend the night at their home.

She did and the next morning she was able to continue her trip to Camp Lejeune. Patrolmen can be sympathetic as well as hard-boiled.

(Rocky Mount Telegram)

One more statement of fact — one courageous sentence from President Eisenhower during the height of the Middle Eastern crisis would have saved much of which we have lost and favorably influenced the history of the world. But the crucial words were never forthcoming.

The resignation of America's great and good friend, Sir Anthony Eden, as Prime Minister of England is only part of the barren and bitter backwash of the administration's tragic mistakes in the Near East.

After repeated failure to obtain any promise of success in dealing with the ambitious, adventurer Nasser, and after having Secretary of State Dulles go back on his word, the British, French and Israeli governments finally determined on their desperate military gamble to restore the Suez to the West and stabilize the Middle East. The invasion was succeeding in a spectacular fashion. Millions of dollars worth of Soviet arms were taken by the small Israeli army. Anglo-British forces quickly occupied some 25 miles of the Canal. The gamble was about to pay off with dividends for all the free world.

Then the Kremlin stepped forward with a bold bluff which worked beyond their wildest dreams. Russia threatened Britain and France with rocket destruction and also threatened to send thousands of Red volunteers to fight with Nasser.

The Eisenhower administration was seized with hysteria. Washington all but caved in. There were frantic calls to London and tremendous pressure applied behind the scenes for a cease fire along with joint U.S.-Russian resolutions of condemnation in the U.N. Faced with rising Labor unrest at home in addition to increasing international pressures, Prime Minister Eden felt he had no alternative but to call off the whole undertaking. A cease fire was ordered. The old status quo was restored.

Soviet blackmail enjoyed its biggest triumph since Korea.

All would have been different if President Eisenhower, while making clear U.S. objection to the unilateral action of our allies, had only called the Soviet bluff by reminding the world that the United States is bound by solemn NATO treaty to fight if either Britain or France are attacked and that the United States would live up to its treaty obligations. This all-important sentence would have sustained our allies and saved the day. Its absence instead saved Nasser, delivered the Canal to blockage and endless dispute and gave Soviet Russia one of its greatest diplomatic triumphs. Indeed the Middle-Eastern victory more than offset Russia's losses inflicted by the sacrifice and bravery of heroic Hungary. And, the Communists, not America or the U.N., are today given credit by grateful Arabs for saving them.

We do not know who will succeed Prime Minister Eden, but it is unlikely that whoever he is will be as friendly to this country. This is but one more payment required of us for our folly, and the end is not in sight.

Mr. Dulles must fight.

Billy Laughinghouse of Bostic-Suggs who, recently released from service, has joined his father in business, sold a $56.65 mattress the other day.

Nothing unusual about that. It's the payoff that adds the news value to this item.

The payoff, if you're interested, came in the form of a bucketful of pennies. Some 5,787 to be exact. Billy, who purportedly has never lost a customer, graciously accepted the pennies which were transferred to a card board box.

Once back in Greenville he hotted it down to the bank and explained his problem. Bank personnel usually won't accept unrolled coins, but realizing Billy's problem, they agreed to count the things on their machine just that once.

So now everybody's happy. The customer's got a mattress, Billy has payment and the bank has plenty of pennies.

Incidentally those mathematicians who wonder why Billy got 5,787 pennies for a $56.65 mattress there's an explanation.

The customer counted out 5,665 pennies but, afraid she might have made a mistake, she threw in an extra handful. She'll get credit for the extras.

South's Big Fight To Keep Influence

By RAY TUCKER

WASHINGTON — "What is the reason for the bitterness and stubbornness behind the anti-filibuster movement?" inquires Mrs. M. L. C. of Troy, N. Y., as well as many other mostly Northern readers. "It seems to me that there should be no prohibition against acting on legislation under our democratic form of government."

Answer: Although some of the advocates of a bar against filibusters may be motivated by the ideal which Mrs. M.L.C. mentions, the fact is that cold and practical politics animates both the Northern proponents and the Southern opponents of the anti-filibuster measures.

FIRST SERIOUS EFFORT AGAINST BARRIER IT WAS not until 1953 that Northern Democrats made a serious attempt to remove the barrier to legislative action. F.D.R. and Harry S. Truman had made many gestures on behalf of Civil Rights, but they never threw their influence behind their proposals. Recent bio-ographies of F.D.R. reveal that his interest in this problem was chiefly political — namely, the votes which appeals to minorities, especially the colored people, would corral.

But when President Eisenhower made inroads among these elements of the electorate in 1952, the Democrats felt it necessary to bestir themselves. The loss of this vote in the great cities meant that Democratic candidates for local, state and national offices in those areas would be endangered.

As a result, and especially in view of the 1956 outcome, they made a more determined effort to recapture these deserting voters, and they will continue to do so. The fight has just begun, especially as they picked up 17 more Senate votes than they had in 1953.

SOUTH'S LAST STAND FOR INFLUENCE For the South it is a last stand to retain that section's influence in national affairs insofar as assaults upon its way of living are concerned. Southern domination of Congress, sometimes through resort to the filibuster, has become necessary because of other losses which Dixie has suffered.

In 1932, at the demand of F.D.R. and James A. Farley, the South lost its veto over selection of a Democratic candidate for President when the two-thirds requirement for nomination was overturned. For the same reason, the South lost a great deal of its influence in writing the Democratic platform.

UNDERSTANDABLE OPPOSITION With the appointment of "liberal" men to the Supreme Court by Roosevelt, Truman and Eisenhower, the South lost what might be termed a judicial Dixie was on the outside looking in with respect to the political, executive and judicial arms of our system of government. And all this happened at the very moment when the South's advancing economy and industry required greater consideration at Washington.

Biggest Copper Mine

By FRANK WETZEL
BINGHAM, Utah (AP)—"Man," said the tourist, "Dig that crazy golf divot."

And crazy it was, man, for the tourist stood on the lip of the world's largest, open pit copper mine, one and three-quarters miles across and 2,200 feet deep.

For the statistically minded: The mine produces more than 13 billion pounds of copper a year, 30 per cent of the nation's yearly yield of newly mined copper and 10 per cent of the world's annual supply.

The mine has produced, in 51 years, enough copper to encircle the earth at the equator with a solid band one inch thick and more than two feet wide, or about 13 billion pounds.

The pit is so big engineers keep track of its changing face with aerial photographs.

There are 175 miles of railroad track on the various bench levels in the mine. The pit, shaped like a bowl or cup, looks similar to a giant football stadium.

If the bench levels were covered with bleachers, all the people in Utah and Texas could be seated comfortably. It would take all the people in Nevada to sell the hotdogs, peanuts and popcorn. The spectators could watch as many as 10 separate football games going on at the bottom of the pit.

The pit is owned by the Kennecott Copper Corp., and is operated by the company's Utah Copper Division. Operations continue around the clock. About 3,220 men are employed at the mine.

Its development is a study in perseverance, chiefly by Daniel C. Jackling, who worked his way up from a dollar-a-day hard rock miner to a multimillionaire.

The average grade of ore now being mined is only .82 per cent copper. Ore containing as little as .4 per cent copper is processed, with material below that grade going to the dump heaps.

Sixty years ago such poor grade ore was considered useless. But Jackling developed a process for mining the low grade ore—a process which now accounts for more than 60 per cent of the world's copper production.

The mining process begins by blasting. More than six million pounds of dynamite are used in the pit each year.

The mining process begins by blasting. More than six million pounds of dynamite are used in the pit each year.

Through a series of careful tests, engineers decide if the blasted material has enough copper to be worth processing.

Electric shovels load the material into side-dump railroad cars. The shovels, weighing from 200 to 250 tons, load a 100-ton ore car in about seven minutes with dippers taking 10 to 14 tons of material at a bite.

If the material contains enough copper, it goes to the mills. If it doesn't it is hauled to the various outlying waste dumps. The waste mined over 51 years—927,700,000 tons of it—has filled in branch canyons and gullies and it is necessary to haul the waste farther and farther to new dump sites.

The ore is hauled over the company-owned railroad to the Arthur and Magna mills near the shore of the Great Salt Lake. Here the ore is processed into a concentrate containing about 30 per cent copper.

The copper concentrate goes from the mills to a nearby smelter where anodes copper is produced. The anodes contain 99 per cent copper.

From the smelter the anodes go to a refinery at Garfield, where the copper reaches 99.96 per cent and is cast into marketable shapes and is sold to a variety of customers.

For the entire mine-to-refinery operation, the Utah Copper Division employs 6,300 men. During 1955, the expenses for payroll, taxes supplies, freight and other items totaled nearly 134 million dollars—a major factor in the economy of Utah.

How long before the mine peters out? Well, that's a tough question to answer. In any such mass production operation, the increase in cost of only a few cents a ton can shorten the life of the mine considerably.

practical and real politics, the attitude of the opposing factions becomes understandable. "Do you think, as the British charge, that President Eisenhower's new Middle East policy is designed to advance the interests of American oil companies?" asks T.F. of Houston, Tex.

Answer: I certainly do not. It is true that American companies own about 60 per cent of the oil produced in that area, with the balance divided among the British, French and Dutch.

LONG-TERM OIL CONCESSIONS This division is frozen by long-term concessions, and it cannot be affected by the Eisenhower proposals for defense of the Middle East against Russian invasion. Moreover, if the United States does not and cannot keep this area free of Communist domination, the British, French and Dutch might be thrown out of the oil fields altogether.

First In Pitt To Qualify For Social Security Under Farm Work Proviso

Tangible evidence of farmer benefits was received recently when William "Bill" Adams, Grifton, Route 1, was the first in Pitt County to qualify and receive insurance payments based solely on farm work.

(The files of the Social Security Administration are confidential and cannot be disclosed. However, Mr. Adams gave his permission that all facts regarding his application could be released, in order that others would learn of their rights and obligations under the law.)

Avera explained the circumstances under which this was possible. The Social Security Act was amended in 1954 to cover the working farmer for the year 1955 and thereafter. Farmers were divided into three groups for 1955: (1) Those working as wage hands, (2) Those working as tenant or share-farmers and self-employed farm operators and (3) those renting land to a share-farmer, or for cash rent. The third group was not covered in 1955, Avera said.

Adams, 73, has been a life-long farmer in Pitt County. During recent years he has been a share-farmer in the St. John's community. Father of 10 living children, he says "It has taken everything I ever made to keep my family going and give them schooling that I never had."

Avera also stated that the 1956 amendments to the law provide that the landowner who "materially participates" in the operation of his farm with a share-farmer, will be covered beginning with income received for the year 1956 and thereafter.

People interested in gaining more complete information about their rights should contact the Social Security Administration, 116 S. Franklin Street, Rocky Mount. To better serve those in Pitt County, a representative of that office will be in the Council Room, 2nd Floor, City Hall in Greenville each Tuesday from 10:00 a.m. to 3:00 p.m. However, many times the representative is unable to render complete service during such visits. Therefore, Avera asked that when possible individuals either write or visit the Rocky Mount office.

The Pitt County Commissioners and other community leaders are presently making a concerted effort to get qualified workers in a payment status. According to Manager Avera, progress is being made and further reports will be made from time to time. He also explained that the insurance provisions of the Social Security Act provide for cash payments to qualified survivors of deceased insured workers, and to qualified disabled workers at age 50 when it can be medically determined that they are unable to engage in any "substantial activity."

Oil Drilling Gear Is Heading North

EDMONTON, Alta. (AP) — Heavy oil well drilling equipment has been moving up the Alaska highway in one of Canada's most northerly searches for new oil fields.

The equipment is being stockpiled at Flat Creek Landing, 40 miles south of Dawson City, Yukon. Later it will be hauled 300 miles farther to the site of test operations well within the Arctic Circle.

There, in desolate muskeg country, three wheels will be sunk by Peel Plateau and Exploration Ltd., a company which holds exploration rights on eight million acres in the Northwest Territories and the Yukon.

After 12 Years, Mercy Is Repaid

MUNICH, Germany (AP)—It has taken a dozen years, but the United States is at last repaying Klara Kende for a deed of mercy to a U.S. flier.

Miss Kende, a novelist whose real name is Mrs. Paul Barossy, proudly displays a citation from the U.S. Government saluting her "for gallant service in assisting the escape of allied soldiers from the enemy."

And now the United States is helping Miss Kende escape—from Hungary to the United States. She is among a group of Hungarian refugees being evacuated to the United States in an airlift. She expects to arrive at Camp Kilmer, N.J., this weekend.

"I'm a novelist," she said in an interview that shifted from Hungarian to German to English. "I hope to continue my career in America."

Miss Kende said she is the author of two love stories, "Night in Cairo" and "Rendezvous in Rome," which she described as best sellers in Hungary in 1946 and 1947 before communism engulfed the country.

The Communists put her novels on the restricted list, and sent her and her family to work in rice fields near the Tisza River. She and her second husband, a painter, and her 22-year-old son escaped into Austria and now are U.S.-bound.

They have no relatives there but they plan to settle in New York. The citation was for harboring an American aviator named John McCormick. She doesn't know where he lives in the United States.

The citation was signed by Dwight D. Eisenhower, then General of the Army.

President Blair made a brief inaugural address, spoke of the pleasure of being a Kiwanian and the honor of being president of the Greenville Kiwanis Club. He and other officers and directors pledged full support in 1957 and indicated that the goals shall be "more members and at least to organize one new Kiwanis club."

Mrs. Blair, Mrs. Barnhill, Mrs. Waldrop, Mrs. McGlohan and Mrs. Reynolds were special guests of the club.

Mrs. Reynolds won the attendance prize. Claude D. Ward had a birthday and donated a dime for each year of his age for the Underprivileged Child Fund. Other guests were: Pete Heller, son of Kiwanian Dick Heller, and Circle K Club members Horace L. Rose, Jr., and Bucky Monroe.

The Greenville Kiwanis Club was organized in 1921. It now has nearly 100 members and meets Fridays evenings at 6:30.

Now's The Time; No Rush For Car Licenses

GREENVILLE 1957 TAG—City clerk's officer worker Mrs. Gentry Mills smiles as she displays the 1957 city license plate. The white and green tag advertises Greenville as "Home of East Carolina College."

By ALVIN TAYLOR
Reflector City Editor
It's that time again. To buy license plates, that is. North Carolina motorists have until February 15 to purchase their new orange-on-black 1957 license tag.

The tags went on sale here Jan. 1 and after a few rush days the number of buyers dwindled off. Unless things pick up at the license bureau during the remainder of January, clerks expect long lines of late purchasers to begin to form as the deadline approaches.

"We'd like to rush it up a little now because things are getting a little slow," Mrs. A.J. Garris, clerk at the Carolina Motor Club office says.

"And ask them to please look at their registration cards and to correct addresses on them," Mrs. Garris requested. "If they have them corrected when they get here it saves a lot of time."

The clerk says that so far there haven't been too many people who showed up at the license bureau without their registration cards.

For those who haven't received their cards through the mail, she suggests that they check the post office which holds the cards they cannot deliver for a certain period of time.

The license bureau won't accept checks in payment for license. Mrs. Garris points out and it is helpful if purchasers have the correct change when they come to buy the plate, especially when the rush begins.

Mrs. Garris has a word of caution for auto owners who have moved into the state recently. Out-of-state cars have to be inspected at the highway patrol office before they can be registered in North Carolina.

Thus car owners who have recently moved to North Carolina will save a lot of time if they have their cars inspected before they apply for North Carolina registration at the license bureau.

Through Thursday the license bureau had sold 2,901 car plates, 705 truck plates, 343 trailer plates and 12 motorcycle plates. However, that number was small compared to the 14,878 car plates, 89 motorcycle plates, 3,519 truck plates and 1,646 trailer plates sold in 1956.

Numbers which Pitt Countians will receive this year include: ZE-9001 to ZE-9999; ZH-1 to ZH-9999; ZJ-1 to ZJ-5600. Trucks will receive the ST prefix, farm trucks, RC. Prefix for trailer licenses will be KE and for large trailers, L.

The license bureau is open from 9 a.m. until 4 p.m.

Most people who live in Greenville make a trip to City Hall a block away from the State license bureau immediately after they obtain their State plate. There they can purchase their green-on-white city tag which is to be displayed on the front of their automobile.

City tags must be on display by Feb. 13, also.

Chef Has Train For Service

BALTIMORE (AP) — It may be a heckuva way to run a restaurant, highballing hamburgers to the customers by mainline fast freight. But it has the small fry ga-ga and Pop on the edge of his seat.

And if Mom doesn't give a hoot for model railroading, at least she can enjoy her food unmoistened while her offspring give their attention to Nat Begun's "built-in baby sitter."

At Begun's "Hamburger Junction" on Baltimore's northeast fringe, a model freight train circles the inside edge of the counter.

The chef loads the freight — a hamburger and french fries, perhaps — on the flat cars at the kitchen window. He pushes a button, and a two-unit Diesel engine, its horn tooting, drags the load down the main line.

When the freight reaches its destination, a waitress punches one of the strategically located control buttons beneath the counter and the train stops. After she unloads it, the empty freight deadheads back to the kitchen window where it stops automatically.

What's the reaction of the customers? One, a regular, bangs through the door each noon and calls: "Start the train!" A kid? No sir. He's over 30.

Another once asked Begun for a job. "You don't have to pay me," he said. "Just let me run the train." A kid? No, again. Full grown.

The junction is the brainchild of a young man liberally indoctrinated in commercial art, GI cookery and practical selling experience. Begun, a New Yorker by birth, concentrated on art in high school and worked at it following graduation. He was tapped for Army service early in World War II, and went through cooks and bakers school. He later wrangled his way into an art section and eventually wound up in the Air Force.

Out of service, he sold women's

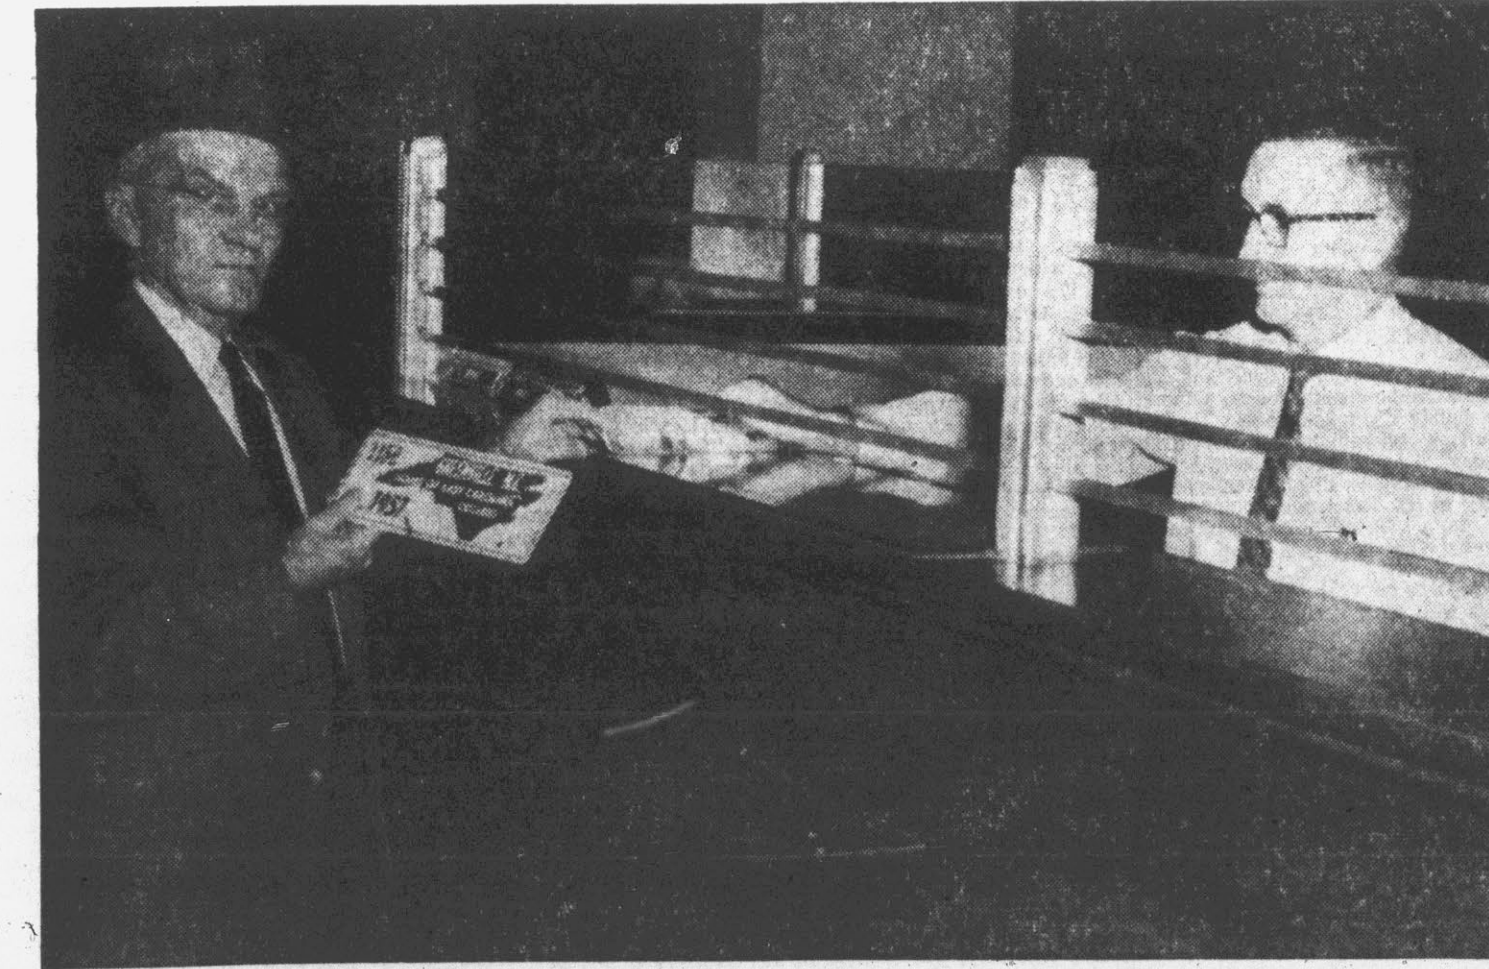

OFF WITH THE OLD—Service station operators are called upon to change license plates countless times in January and February. Here, service station operator Carr Allen removes an old 1956 state license plate.

ON WITH THE NEW—Above Allen bolts a shiny new 1957 plate on the rear of an automobile. Only one plate is issued to motorists this year. That is to be displayed on the rear of vehicles.

TIME TO BUY STATE TAGS—Thomas L. Craft, Jr. of 202 Montague Ave. Ayden purchases his state license tag from Mrs. Jean Garris, clerk at the Carolina Motor Club office in Home and Auto Supply on Fifth St. The office is open from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. and motorists have until Feb. 15 to display their 1957 plates.

PURCHASES NEW PLATE—C. W. Woodward purchases his city license tag from W. N. Moore, assistant city clerk. Greenville plates are on sale in City Hall and must be purchased separately from the State plates. The city tags are placed on the front of vehicles. (Reflector Photos by Alvin Taylor).

linerie made from nylon para-chutes for awhile and then bought a surplus Army bus at an auction. He yanked out its seats, installed a grill and refrigerator, slapped on some new paint and labeled the mobile eatery "The Sad Sack." He hired another ex-GI to manage it and had him park each day in front of the U.S. Employment Service office. The Sad Sack did a brisk business among the jobless folk who waited in line for hours to pick up their benefit checks. The bus was sold when Begun went to work for a manufacturer of powder puffs and cosmetic bags. In eight months his novel merchandising ideas won him promotion to general sales manager and he returned to Baltimore. The re-sult is Hamburger Junction — a ham-berger was to sell a ham-burger.

NAT BEGUN presses the starting button . . .

. . . AND A LOAD of burgers reaches the customers.

State Student Music Auditions Slated In March

The State Student Auditions Contest sponsored by the North Carolina Federation of Music Clubs will be held Saturday, March 2, at East Carolina College. George E. Perry, of the East Carolina department of music, state student advisor for the Federation, will act as chairman.

The contest is open to student musicians of North Carolina between the ages of sixteen and twenty-five. Entrants may audition in the areas of piano, voice, organ, violin, or cello. Each contestant, however, may enter only one division. Mr. Perry has announced.

Two state student scholarships will be awarded this year's winners. They are the Federation Student Scholarship of $150 and the Belois-Perry Scholarship of $100.

Those who wish to become contestants may obtain entrance blanks and pamphlets giving rules, regulations, and other requirements of this year's auditions from Mr. Perry at East Carolina College.

For The Birds, And Not Rats

SAN RAFAEL, Calif. (AP)—Rats, says the county of Marin. Birds, insists Miss Mary Jane Stumer.

In a formal complaint, the county charged Miss Stumer with feeding rats in the yard of her attractive home.

"I've been putting out bread crumbs for birds for nine years," she said. "I'm guilty of feeding birds, not rats." If rats take a bite, now and then, Miss Stumer told reporters, she is not responsible.

Fort McNab was built in the harbor of Halifax, Canada at a cost of $24,000 which was paid for by British profits from the Suez Canal in 1888.

Senator Urges Congress Look Into Newsprint

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Potter (R-Mich.) today urged a congressional investigation of the newsprint industry, saying that "skyrocketing prices" are "working a hardship on the American press and other users of newsprint."

The Michigan senator asked for the inquiry after conferring with chairman John Gwynne and other officials of the Federal Trade Commission.

Potter said FTC officials "are in agreement with me that a public hearing is in order to get to the bottom of a situation which has all the evidence of restrictive trade practices."

Potter asked chairman Magnuson (D-Wash.) of the Senate Commerce Committee to conduct the inquiry, citing recent increases by Canadian newsprint producers who supply most of the newsprint used in this country, from $138 to $142 a ton.

Dead Letters Get Closer Look

DALLAS, Tex. (AP)—A clerk in the dead letter office of the Post Office here is taking a closer look at the correspondence he receives these days.

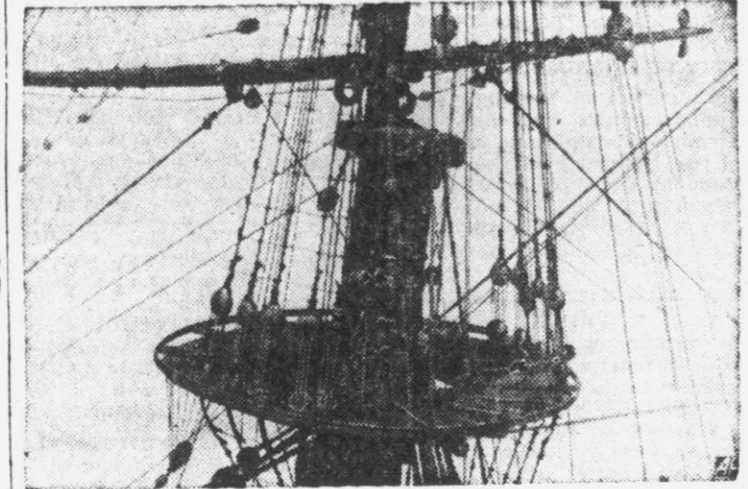

His wife wrote him in care of the dead letter office while on a visit to another city. The letters were dutifully received, but he failed to note his name and destroyed them along with other undeliverable letters.

He discovered what he'd done when his wife mentioned in another letter that it seemed odd he was not receiving his mail.

Annapolis Is Harboring Costly Ship Collection

TWO CENTURIES OLD: This model of the Prince Frederick was submitted to the British Admiralty in 1740 by the ship-builder seeking a commission to build the full-scale version.

MINUTE DETAIL: Closeup of a mainmast shows how model builders worked for accuracy down to the last knot in the rigging. The Rogers collection is valued at one million dollars.

By MARTY SUPPHIN

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (AP)—An old naval tradition, "Don't Give Up the Ship," has real meaning for the staff of the U. S. Naval Academy museum.

wooden vessels suffer greatly from changes in humidity. Bowls of water are placed in each glass exhibit case during the winter to prevent drying damage from the academy's steam heat.

Thirty-four of the ships are "admiralty" scale models, so named because English ship builders used them to obtain commissions from the Navy Board of Great Britain.

The admiralty models are complete in every detail, including hatches, ladders, gun positions, rigging, mess rooms and cabins.

They even include carvings and paintings done by the best known artists of the day.

Fourteen admiralty models have been identified as specific ships. These include the "St. George," which has not needed repair since its completion in 1702, and the "Royal William," constructed in Portsmouth in 1719 and valued at $50,000.

Another is the ill-fated "Royal George." This 100-gun first line ship of the British fleet capsized in 1792 when her captain ordered weights shifted during a repair operation.

There is also a model of the Royal Barge of Charles II. History says the king used the barge to reach great ships anchored in the Thames, then charged the ladies aboard a kiss for the visit.

The Rogers collection also has ship models believed to have been carved from beef bones by French sailors who were captured by the British.

Most of the models are kept in the museum but some are on display in other academy buildings. They may be viewed year around by visitors.

Nothing Safe Is Just Their Joke

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP)—Detective Ed White isn't sure whom the joke is on.

Burglars hauled off a safe typewriter and adding machine. The safe later was found abandoned with a note scribbled across the front of a burglary policy: "This is a good, big joke. Ha, Ha, Ha."

The burglars had pried open the safe, only to find the policy and a few old coins.

Eyes Wrong For Police Roundup

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP)—An appliance store owner reported to police that a man with a black right eye had stolen a portable television set.

Det. Capt. Joseph P. McDonald's squad picked up four men with black right eyes within a short time after the complaint was made. The thief was not among them.

Conscientious; Ticketed His Car

ALBANY, Ga. (AP)—Traffic Officer E.H. Jeter wrote out parking violation tickets for three cars in a row which were beside meters showing time expired.

Only when he got back to headquarters and turned in his duplicate tickets did he realize one of the cars was his own.

It cost him the usual $1.

Devious Route In Radio Rescue

JACKSON, Miss. (AP)—Hugh Jiffis, a ham radio operator, got himself out of the mud in adjacent Rankin County through use of the airwaves — via Panama.

His car got stuck while he was squirrel hunting and he used his car radio transmitter to summon help. He couldn't pick up anyone but an obliging ham in Panama heard his "SOS" and relayed it back to C.C. Griffith and Myron Lockett, Jackson amateurs. They came to the rescue quickly with fire chains.

Has Dim View Of Honesty's Price

POTTSVILLE, Pa. (AP)—Alderman William A. Thompson takes a dim view of people who put a price tag on honesty.

A woman appeared before him who refused to return a purse she had found because she thought the $5 reward was insufficient payment for her honesty.

Thompson told the lady to return the purse, which contained a set of contact lenses valued at $50. She lost her reward. And—bitterest blow of all—she was fined $11 court costs.

None of the parties were identified.

Spirited Youth Proved Obliging

OMAHA, Neb. (AP)—An Omaha nursery school teacher handed one of her charges a magazine and suggested he cut out a picture of something he thought his father would like.

The four-year-old flipped the pages, then without any hesitation jabbed the scissors into a page and clipped out a picture of a bottle of gin.

Confession Is Good For Judge

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP)—Forrest D. Preston had this to say in City Court when he appeared on a charge of public drunkenness:

"Yes, sir, I was drunk. Very drunk. I wasn't fit to be on the streets. That's why I staggered in and gave myself up."

This almost unprecedented lack of any denial or excuse so flabbergasted Judge Beverly Boushe that he dismissed the charge.

Named Interviewers In 1957 Consumer Survey

Mrs. Clara Shackel Moyer and Mrs. Dornig P. Jenkins of Greenville are interviewers for the 12th annual "Survey of Consumer Finances," sponsored by the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System.

The interviewers were appointed by the Survey Research Center of the University of Michigan. They began their work in Pitt County today, which will continue through January and February. This is one of 66 areas in which interviews will take place.

Interviews will be conducted in the cities of Baltimore, Boston, Chicago, Cleveland, Detroit, Los Angeles, New York, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, San Francisco, St. Louis, and Washington and their suburbs. Other cities and rural areas covered are scattered throughout the United States. Within each area, individual addresses are selected at random. Reports from persons living at these addresses furnish financial statistics representative of all consumers throughout the country.

The 1957 survey will include questions regarding income, financial position, major purchases during 1956, intentions to buy cars, other durable goods, and houses during 1957, and attitudes toward different forms of saving and investment. Also covered is the consumer's evaluation of his current financial situation and his prospects for 1957. Similar information obtained in previous Surveys of Consumer Finances has been very useful in appraising the general business outlook.

All interviews are held in strictest confidence and no information concerning individual families is disclosed. The information is used solely for statistical analysis of the financial position and prospect of different groups of people in the country. Many families have been interested in these results.
