The Best One, Came Last

Ed Davenport, winner of Farmville's Distinguished Service Award, was swamped by congratulations last night but the best one, as usual, came last. He got a big hug and kiss from his wife, Martha, who had been invited to the presentation without his knowledge. Ed's parents were also present at the meeting and came in with Martha during Mayor Charles Edwards' presentation announcement. (Reflector Staff Photo).

Farmville Fetes 2 'Men Of Year'

By JIMMY ELLIS

FARMVILLE — Ed Davenport and Alex Allen were honored as Farmville's "Men of the Year" and Thomas J. Canning of Cincinnati, Ohio, became the town's first honorary citizen at the annual banquet of the Chamber of Commerce last night.

Davenport received the Junior Chamber of Commerce's Distinguished Service Award for men under 35 and Allen received a similar award for men over 35. Canning, who will become manager of Farmville's new Flakeboard plant, was presented a certificate of honorary citizenship after presenting the main talk at the dinner.

Members of the Chamber of Commerce, Merchants Association and Tobacco Board of Trade held the meeting with members of the Junior Chamber of Commerce, Lions Club, Rotary Club and Kiwanis Club. About 135 persons attended the dinner meeting.

Allen's award was presented by Jaycee President Don Whitehurst. Whitehurst pointed out that the winner first came to Farmville as a representative of a tobacco firm. Since that time, he has been president of the Pitt County Farm Bureau, vice-chairman of Pitt Memorial Hospital, a member of the school board, a director of the Farmville Economic Council and President of the Bank of Farmville.

"Mr. Allen has been active in every phase of the growth and development of Farmville since he has been a member of the community," Whitehurst said.

In presenting the Distinguished Service Award to Davenport, Mayor Charles S. Edwards paid tribute to Davenport's work in the Chamber of Commerce and Merchant's Association, the Mid-East Airport Authority, and the Farmville Economic Council.

"He is past-president of the Chamber of Commerce and Merchants Association, vice-chairman of the Mid-East Airport Authority, and president of the Economic Council," Ewards said. "He has been a hard worker in all of them and a valuable asset to Farmville."

Canning's award of honorary membership was the first presented by the town since it was incorporated in 1872, Edwards said. The certificate was presented by Edwards.

All of the award winners made brief speeches of acceptance.

Canning's address to the group included a film on the history of Formica and a question-and-answer period about the Formica Division's flakeboard plant which will be built in Farmville.

In response to questions, Canning said Formica will make an initial investment of $5,800,000, or "about $58,000 for each employee". He said the plant will begin operations in January, 1958, with two presses that will manufacture three-quarter-inch flakeboard.

"However, we are already contemplating doubling the facilities of the plant with its first year of operation," he added. "I believe that eventually the plant will include two additional presses, a resin plant and, finally, a masonite plant on the site we have."

Construction is scheduled to begin next month with a spur railroad line and a warehouse slated to be the first units. He said the original plant will have about five acres of the 97-acre site within fences and "about three-and-a-half acres under roofs."

The automated plant will have 80 to 90 per cent of them skilled or semiskilled persons. He said that there are about 100 people already working behind the scenes to make the Farmville plant a reality and that about $70,000 has already been spent for research.

The film shown by Canning traced the history and development of Formica, showing production methods, uses and possibilities. Flakeboard produced at the Farmville plant will be used as an underlayment for Formica.

Rural Store Is Robbed In Night

Around 200 pennies, some cartons of cigarettes and a quantity of merchandise were reported missing from Hardy's Store at Mayo's Cross Road this morning.

Sheriff Ruel W. Tyson said thieves entered the front door of the store sometime last night.

The store is operated by Holly Hardy.

Final Word Of Praise For Pact As Saud Leaves

WASHINGTON (AP) — King Saud of Saudi Arabia left Washington today with words of praise for the airbase-for-aid agreement he reached with President Eisenhower during a state visit here.

Vice President Nixon was on hand to say goodby at departure ceremonies held in a steady rain at Washington National Airport.

Nixon apologized for the rainy weather and voiced a hope that it "doesn't leave a bad impression on your majesty." Saud, smiling broadly, said through an interpreter that it was of no consequence, that the thing he remembers is "the warmth of the heart."

An Army honor guard stood at attention as a 21 - gun farewell salute boomed out. The Army band struck up Saudi Arabia's national anthem and, as Nixon and the King inspected the guard, the band played the English air "Green Sleeves."

Saud and his party took off at 8:20 a.m. in Eisenhower's plane for a flight to the Azores. There a Spanish plane will pick up the royal party and take them to Spain for a four-day visit.

With Saud went Victor R. Purse, 38-year-old deputy chief of protocol for the State Department. Purse, who has been guiding the King on his American visit, is going back as Saud's personal guest for a visit of several days in Saudi Arabia.

The entire Arab world was represented at the airport. Arab and other diplomats queued up to wish Saud godspeed in the rain. Also present was Adm. Arthur W. Radford, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, and a number of State Department officials.

Secretary Dulles didn't make it —through a mix-up, aides said.

Prince Mashur, 3½-year-old son of the King, stole the show, as he had done on a number of other occasions. The solemn faced little boy with the soft brown eyes was the last figure to get aboard the plane.

Under prodding from his elders, Mashur waved goodby, smiled one of his rare smiles and then threw a kiss to Nixon, Mrs. Nixon and the two young daughters, diplomats, newsmen and soldiers clustered in the rain near the airplane.

His gesture won a burst of laughter and applause.

One of the last things Saud did was to invite Nixon to visit Saudi Arabia, and to bring Mrs. Nixon.

Nixon told Saud he hoped he could make it sometime.

Nixon told Saud he wished he could transfer some of Washington's rain to Saudi Arabia's arid desert. Saud, who has picked up a little English, laughed loudly and said, "Yes, Yes, Yes."

Nixon, speaking on a platform before radio - television microphones, told the King the American people were grateful for this visit.

"During these last few days we have come to know you personally, and we value this," Nixon said. He said he was sure close U.S.-Saudi Arabian relations were strengthened by the visit "for the years ahead."

In response, Saud said his Washington visit "has made a great impression on me."

He expressed thanks to Eisenhower, government officials and the American people for the "welcome and generosity" accorded him.

"My respects to all," Saud said.

Eisenhower sent his plane Columbine II back to Washington after flying to Georgia in it yesterday, so that it could take Saud on the first leg of his journey home. The present presidential plane, Columbine III, is being overhauled.

Still Believer In 'Tough Training'

PARRIS ISLAND, S.C. (AP)—The father of a Marine recruit who claims a drill instructor mistreated him at this training center was guest at a Marine parade yesterday and then remarked:

"Although I realize I'm getting a 'soft-soap' job here at Parris Island by officials, I still feel the Marine Corps is a good outfit and that tough training is required."

The trip here was the second for Nelson F. Porter of Hartford, Vt., since his son, David Lee Porter, 18, wrote last Dec. 9 that he was struck in the head with an iron bar and "forced to march with sand in his mouth."

Young Porter and several other recruits charge they were maltreated by drill instructors in their platoon. Four instructors were relieved of duty and a pretrial investigation now is under way to determine if charges should be filed. The instructors were not identified.

Capt. James F. Mahoney, public information officer here, said early inquiries "solidified" some of the charges. He did not elaborate except to reiterate that evidence thus far has shown that "nothing beyond the use of the hands" was used by drill instructors. He said the inquiry will be completed in about 10 days.

Porter conferred with Brig. Gen. Wallace M. Greene, director of recruit training, and visited his son before watching the parade as a guest of Marine officials.

After the parade, the elder Porter told reporters he felt like a "squealer" and "betrayer" of his son because he revealed the contents of the letter.

He said he felt "tough training is required," but added, "I feel however, that brutality must be eliminated."

Porter said that when he visited the depot last month shortly after receiving his son's letter he saw a "fresh" 1½ inch scar on his son's head and a "sore ridge across the back of his head."

He returned home, Porter said, and wrote a letter to Maj. Gen. Homer L. Litzenberg, base commander. A preliminary investigation by Marine officials followed.

Says Life Saved By Telephone Call

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — A call from Bob Hope's office got a TV part for veteran actress Hazel (Sunny; Boyne, And, says Miss Boyne, it saved her life.

The phone call aroused her in a house filled with fumes from a faulty gas heater, she said. She staggered outside into the fresh air and recovered from grogginess brought on by the fumes.

Her two parakeets were asphyxiated and her french poodle was rendered unconscious but recovered, she said.

Miss Boyne was able to report later to the job Hope had chosen for her. Hope years ago appeared in vaudeville with Miss Boyne, a 55-year veteran in the theater.

Hodges To Give Program For Legislature Monday

RALEIGH (AP) — Most Tar Heel lawmakers were weekending at home today awaiting the start of their second legislative week which will see Gov. Hodges outline his program for the next biennium.

Hodges will deliver his biennial message to a joint session of the House and Senate Monday night. In it he will make his recommendations for the lawmakers. He also will deliver the spending and tax recommendations of the Advisory Budget Commission.

The appropriations and revenue bills for the 1957-59 biennium are expected to be introduced at that time. This will set the stage for the Legislature to step up its pace.

The two-year budget is expected to call for a record total of spending while reducing corporate income taxes.

While the details of Hodges' program must await his message, he has indicated in speeches and at his news conferences that he favors many changes. He is expected to ask the Legislature to separate the Prisons Department from the Highway Commission and to reduce the present Highway Commission membership of 14 commissioners and one full-time chairman to a seven-member body.

In its first three days, the Legislature got its opening formalities out of the way and watched as Hodges and nine other state officials were inaugurated. As expected, veteran Rep. J. K. Doughton of Alleghany was elected speaker of the House and Sen. Claude Currie of Durham was elected president pro tem of the Senate.

Several bills were introduced. The House and Senate gave quick passage to a measure providing a $2,000 a year pay raise for members of the Council of State and $1,420 for the attorney general.

Lt. Gov. Luther E. Barnhardt, who presides over the Senate, said yesterday he hopes to name Senate committees next Thursday or Friday. Doughton said it will be Friday or later before he completes the makeup of the House committees.

In his biennial message, Hodges is expected to call for a pay raise for school teachers and state employes. It is not known how much increase he will recommend or the manner in which it will be distributed. The governor has said he is against an across-the-board pay raise and favors selective increases.

Hodges has endorsed reports from study commissions which looked into the state's tax structure, operations of the Highway Commission, and the question of separation of the prisons system from the Highway Commission.

One of the chief recommendations in the tax study report was tion income tax aimed at attracting industry to North Carolina. The proposal would cost an estimated eight million dollars a year in revenue.

The governor also has endorsed the reports of the Commission on Reorganization of State Government.

Jumped Out As Train Hit Auto

FOUNTAIN — Mrs. Lyman D. Dunn, 27, narrowly escaped injury this morning when he car was struck by an East Carolina Railroad train inside the Fountain town limits.

Police Chief L.F. Bradshaw said shortly before noon that Mrs. Dunn apparently escaped physical injury in the collision. The chief said he has not been able to complete his investigation, however, because Mrs. Dunn was suffering from shock. She was placed under care of a physician immediately after the accident.

Chief Bradshaw said Mrs. Dunn's automobile was struck by the train after it pulled out to pass another car which had stopped at the East Carolina Railroad crossing on N.C. 222. The chief quoted train Engineer Lee Dew of Tarboro as saying Mrs. Dunn pulled out into the path of the slow-moving train.

The car was pushed about 20 feet from the point of impact but Mrs. Dunn was said by the engineer to have jumped out of the right-front door of her before it was struck. The car was almost a complete loss, the chief said.

The engineer told Chief Parker that a Negro man had stopped at the crossing when the train approached. Mrs. Dunn reportedly pulled out to pass the stopped car which the chief said "disappeared after the accident". He is conducting a search for the car and its driver.

Mrs. Dunn formerly lived on the J. A. Mercer farm near Fountain. She now resides on the Johnson Galloway farm in Wilson County.

Collision Fatal To Four In Car

LUMBERTON, N.C. (AP) —The head-on crash of an automobile and a tractor-trailer car carrier near here early today left four persons dead and two injured.

The dead were identified as Mrs. Mary Lou Mathews, 28, of (4303 E. Ocean View Ave.) Norfolk, Va.; her 2 - year - old son, James Randall Mathews; her sister-in-law, Mrs. Emmie McDonald Mathews, 40, of Hemingway, S. C.; and Mrs. Emmie Mathews' son, Curtis, 3.

James M. Mathews of Norfolk, driver of the car and husband of Mary Lou, suffered head and internal injuries and was admitted to Robeson County Memorial Hospital here.

The driver of the car carrier, William Creech of (6298 Janke Rd.) Norfolk, received cuts, knee, shoulder and head injuries and also was admitted to the hospital here.

State Highway Patrolman D. O. Pearce of Rowland said the Mathews' were en route from Norfolk to Hemingway when they collided with the truck about 3:45 a.m. on U.S. 301 seven miles south of here. Pearce said the accident occurred at a point where the highway merged from four lanes to two and that the Mathews car crossed the centerline and met the carrier head-on.

Find Broken Gas Main In Reno

RENO (AP) — A shattered gas main was discovered yesterday under Sierra St. — scene of Tuesday's big blast which levelled a city block, killed two persons and injured 40.

Further investigation was planned today. It could not be determined whether the gas main was broken before the blast or by it.

Reno resumed its normally busy activity along Virginia St., which has been barricaded as a precautionary measure.

Leaking propane-air gas accumulations were blamed for the explosions.

Legislators Will Seek Toll Bridge Clearance In Bill

RALEIGH (AP)—Two eastern legislators say they plan to introduce a bill which would authorize the Highway Commission to issue bonds for the construction of toll bridges.

Reps. Lewis Combs of Tyrrell and Addison Hewlett of New Hanover are sponsors of the bill which already has been drafted. The measure is expected to be introduced next week.

Combs said Reps. Dick O'Neal of Hyde and J. M Phelps of Washington have signed the bill. Other signatures are expected by the time the bill is introduced.

While it would not be restricted to any particular bridge, the bill is aimed at the construction of a three-mile bridge across the Alligator River near Columbia and a shorter but more expensive bridge across the Cape Fear River at Wilmington.

The Cape Fear bridge, which would be about 700 feet long, would cost approximately 12 million dollars. The Alligator River bridge would cost three to four million.

CORRECTION

The identity of a wreck victim was erroneously given in yesterday's Daily Reflector. The Greenville white woman, Mrs. Kizzie Lockamy, of 210 Line Ave., suffered a dislocated hip. She was riding in a pickup truck driven by Walter F. Keel of Grifton, Route 2, at the time of a collision at the intersection of Boyd and Dickinson Thursday night. The automobile involved, was driven by Thelma McCarter Ebron, a Negro woman of 1606 West Third Street. The Reflector regrets its error.

Power Reactor In Regular Service

CHICAGO (AP) — A big stride will be taken today into the era of atomic generated electric power.

The nation's first nuclear power system designed solely for experiments in producing such power will go into continuous operation. The schedule calls for a year-long trial run with refueling.

The nuclear station is the first Experimental Boiling Water Reactor (EBWR) at the Argonne national laboratory of the Atomic Energy Commission. It will supply 5,000 kilowatts of continuous power, meeting the bulk of the laboratory's needs for electricity.

The heat reactor was built to demonstrate the feasibility and safety of large scale power plants using uranium fuel of the lowest possible enrichment in uranium 235—the fissionable substance in uranium atomic bombs.

Scientists on the project describe it as a "promising new system" for generating usable power from nuclear fuels. They say its big points are that its operation is relatively simple, it is self-regulating and "inherently safe."

Members of the AEC and scientists at the laboratory are to take part in the ceremonies at the huge atomic research facility, which is located inside a closely guarded 3,700 acre reservation in suburban Lemont.

A spokesman said that the Commonwealth Edison Co. of Chicago, with a group of associated companies, based on data already obtained from Argonne's boiling water experiments, is planning a boiling water reactor at Dresden, Ill., to produce 180,000 kilowatts of electric power.

The boiling water reactor is one of several types the AEC will test to determine the most feasible design to produce economical nuclear-generated electric power.

The EBWR is the outgrowth of a series of "borax" reactors built at the AEC national reactor station at Arco, Idaho. The borax-III produced steam - generated electricity in sufficient quality to light the town of Arco, Idaho, the night of July 17, 1955.

The borax-I was deliberately destroyed in a transient nuclear reaction after all tests were completed to demonstrate that "extraordinary measures" were necessary to produce a damaging effect.

Opened A Door, Shot To Death

PILOT MOUNTAIN, N. C. (AP)— Police pressed their search for clues today to the identity of a person who killed a farmer with a shotgun blast when he went to his front door to see why a dog was barking.

Mrs. John Allen Branch told police yesterday her 58-year-old husband was killed about 7:30 p. m. Thursday night when he opened the door of their home at Rt 1, Pilot Mountain.

Mrs. Branch said she was afraid the person who did the shooting might still be outside and remained with her husband's body in a bedroom all night. Yesterday morning she sent her 14-year-old grandson to Pilot Mountain, 2½ miles from her farm home, to report the shooting.

Car Rolled Over 650-Foot Bank, But Two Unhurt

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Two San Francisco women were at home today without a scratch to show for a spectacular automobile accident — a plunge down a 650-foot embankment off Skyline Blvd.

Mrs. Bessie Whyland, 50, and Mrs. Foy M. Antonsen, 61, were trapped more than 12 hours in the battered sedan after it came to a shuddering halt against a tree Thursday evening.

The car had been forced off the road, out of control, by another speeding around a curve.

Doors and windows of the sedan were jammed. It wasn't until after daybreak yesterday that Mrs. Whyland managed to force open a window and squeeze through. She helped Mrs. Antonsen escape. Then they crawled back up the steep, brush-covered slope — a climb which took them two hours.

Said Mrs. Whyland wryly "it was quite an experience."

Sen. Jones Cool To Population Basis For 'Reapportionment'

By JIMMY ELLIS
Reflector Staff Writer

FARMVILLE — Doctor Paul E. Jones of Farmville put down his dental tools this week, packed his brief case and went to Raleigh where he's Senator Paul E. Jones of the North Carolina General Assembly.

The trip to the state capital was nothing new for Doctor-Senator Jones. He made it for regular sessions of the General Assembly in 1949, 1951, 1953, and 1955. He put in an extra trip last summer for a special session.

Even before the 1949 trip—a long time before—Jones had made a trip to Raleigh for official business in a General Assembly. He was a page in one session shortly after the turn of the century.

If some folks have their way, the 1957 session could be the last one the Farmville dentist will make as a Senator. In fact, if those folks go as far as they hope to go, it could possibly be the last time anybody from Pitt County goes to the General Assembly as a Senator.

Reapportionment

It isn't that Jones has enemies in the legislature. The group that has him in mind is simply demanding reapportionment of the state's districts. One suggested plan would place Pitt in a senatorial district with other counties, rather than letting it continue sending one man from within its own political boundaries to the state senate.

As a Pitt Countian, Dr. Jones is against the idea of his home county losing representation in the General Assembly. As a member of the state legislature, he thinks it's a bad idea to let population be the only measure for determining senatorial districts—something that would be done if preliminary ideas of reapportionment are adopted.

"I can't go along with the idea of reapportionment," he says frankly. "The ideas that have been expressed do nothing to keep control from one small area of the state and I can't see letting population be the sole basis of determining the number of representatives a county or area will have."

There have been other preliminary recommendations for reorganization within the state's governmental structure. One of the most important, according to Senator Jones, is that of the State Tax Study Commission. It's so important, he says, that he won't make up his mind about any of the provisions until he heard discussion of them.

SEN. PAUL E. JONES

No Rubber Stamp

"It's far too important to accept the recommendations as a 'package deal'. I know the Governor has gone along with most of the recommendations but the General Assembly is no rubber stamp for the Governor's opinions.

"I personally don't know how to interpret them in the light of how the recommendations will affect Pitt County. I have talked with enough people in the county to have an idea of how the citizens feel about some of the measures but the legislative discussions will bring out a lot of points with which I'm not familiar."

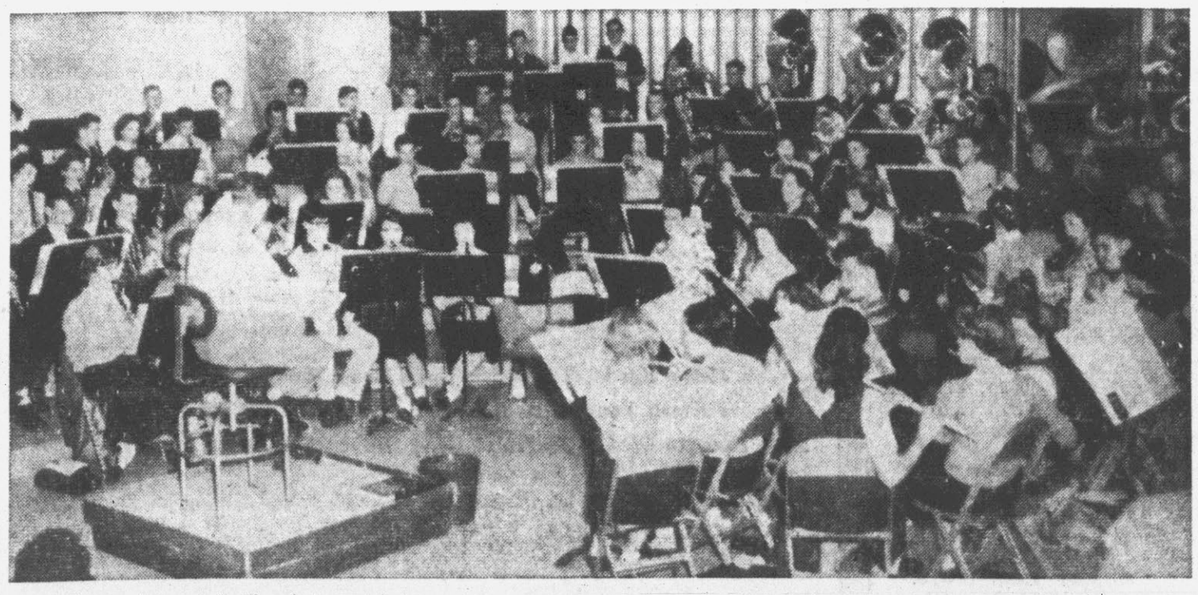

Legislative discussions are being looked for by Senator Jones on almost every point that has been proposed for action but he feels that most points are sufficiently organized to permit the General Assembly to adjourn within 120 days.

"We should finish within that time," he declares, "and I'll be disappointed if we don't. We have an experienced governor, experienced leaders and the General Assembly is better prepared than it has been for a long time."

One belief Senator Jones has held was backed up this week when both houses of the Assembly organized shortly after convening. He has maintained for some time that there would be no contest in organization and although he thinks the Governor will run into some opposition with his proposals, committee chairmen will be able to control action to the point of moving affairs along in an efficient

Christmas dinner was to be at four. June had told Grady Barton. He had the florist take red carnations to the Cowan home, and that afternoon when he had kicked the snow from his heels enough to go into the hall, the house was spicy with their fragrance.

With a smile and a pleasant wish for Christmas, Aaron, the houseman, took his hat and coat; Grady went on to the white-paneled living room where June rose from a corner of the curved sofa to greet him. Judge Cowan came down the stairs to add his greetings to his daughter's.

"I asked Virginia and Hank," June explained, "but Hank . . ."

"Has virus pneumonia," Grady completed. "He had the flu and went out too soon."

"Is he very ill?" asked June, ringing one of the carnations to thread into the buttonhole of his brown coat. She patted the flower softly. "Thanks," she said, smiling up into his eyes.

Grady nodded. "Of course he's ill. Judge, what's the chance of getting legislation on the confinement of people with colds?"

"None, as you well know. Sit down, my boy."

Then a thought struck Grady. "Virginia isn't sitting beside Hank is she?" he asked sharpy.

June looked anxious. "She said she thought she ought to stay and keep him company."

Grady stood up. "May I use your telephone?" He was already into the hall, and soon speaking firmly to someone in the Preston home.

"Seems that you'll need more than one bit of legislation, Doctor," said the judge when Grady returned to the living room.

"There are things I'd welcome more happily," the doctor assured him, "than an epidemic of virus pneumonia."

At exactly four, Aaron came to the door, an inquiring look in his eye.

"We'll wait five minutes for Mr. Chronister," June said to him with a conciliatory smile.

"A gesture, purely," commented her father. "He's no more apt to be here then than now."

"I know. But we'll wait five minutes."

Grady and June and the judge went in to dinner without Mo, and the turkey had been carved before the young man burst in through the front door. Still wearing his overcoat, scarf and galoshes, he came to the dining room and bent over June, intent on kissing her. Grady prevented this by offering to help him out of his big coat.

Judge Cowan stood coldly at the side of his chair, a frown between his eyes. "Bring some coffee now for Mr. Chronister," he said, coldly clear, to Aaron as the men sat down.

"You know how it is, Judge," said Mo. "Everyone you meet asks you to have a snort, and you do —and —" He shrugged and smiled. "How'ya, Doc?" he saluted Grady, as if seeing him only then.

Grady laughed. "I'm fine, thank you."

The meal was resumed, with Mo taking over the conversation. He told of his Christmas Day activities. Very early that morning he had ridden the patrol car and picked up a half-dozen unsavory characters on the "levee" at Holly Neighbors. "I promised the citizens I'd clean up that levee," he said earnestly, "and I'm gonna do it."

The judge looked doubtful.

"You think I won't?" demanded Mo.

"I think you'll think you've tried."

Mo frowned in an effort to understand. "Now, whadya mean by that, sir?"

The judge smiled. "Oh, you'll pick up a handful of vagrants now and then, put them in jail and-or start them out of town. In between, the levee will go on about its business as usual."

"Now, Judge, I don't consider that fair. What would you do?"

"If I were in your shoes, Mo, prosecuting attorney and thirty-five years old, with a political career ahead of me, I'd make the same gestures as you are making. But to clean up that levee—I'd take away the liquor licenses which are being violated, shut up the lunchrooms that allow gambling and bookmaking the back rooms and I'd crack down on the drugstores that sell forbidden narcotics. That would give me a start."

Mo leaned back to look at his host, dismay widening his eyes. "Well—gosh—Judge . . ."

The ludge laughed. "I'm sorry, Mo. It's awful to get old and wise."

"But—I thought that I could make an example of these men, and . . ." His face brightened. "I did something else today too."

"You did? What was that?"

"I—we—raided the Moose Hall this afternoon and confiscated the slot machines they have up there."

The judge leaned forward in dismay. "Oh, you didn't!"

"Sure did. I went up the front stairs, the chief went up the back, and we caught 'em all red-handed."

"But it's well-known they have those slot-machines!"

"They're not legal!"

"Well, perhaps not. But—"

"Now, Judge, you know there's no such thing as a perhaps-legal operation. It'd be like Doc here saying somebody was perhaps dead. They are or they aren't. Isn't that right, Doc?"

"Well, I'm not sure, Mo. I sometimes make a qualified statement."

With a reproving glance at her father and at Grady, June came to the young lawyer's assistance. "Tell me about the raid, Mo," she said earnestly. "Was it exciting?"

It was, he assured her with enthusiasm.

The Christmas pudding was brought in aflame, and served. Mo still told about the raid, with a deal of noisy swagger.

The police chief had not wanted to do the job on Christmas. "He said it seemed a shame to spoil anybody's fun on Christmas. But I knew there was to be this party for the members, and I knew it would be a ball. Was, too. You never heard such a racket! Dancing and bingo games and slots going full steam ahead.

"Well, like I say, I came up the front steps and I looked the place over — they had these three machines, with someone workin' each one — then I said, loud as I could, "Hold it, everybody- This is a raid.'

"It was a toss-up whether they were madder at me than at each other."

His voice rose to such volume that Aaron had to touch Grady's shoulder to get his attention. "You're wanted on the phone, Doctor."

Grady glanced at June, rose and went into the hall. Within five minutes he came back to say, "I'll have to go out to the Kopp farm. A visiting grandchild there seems to have the croup."

There were the properly expressed regrets.

"Be careful," said the judge. "There are slick spots on those roads."

Grady said thank you for the dinner, that he was sorry to be called away — and went back to the hall. Soon they heard the front door close.

"Doc to the rescue!" drawled Mo.

June whirled on him. "If you stage a raid on the Moose Christmas party," she accused, "it's important and dramatic. But Grady —children choke to death with the croup, Mo!"

"Oh, sweetheart," drawled Mo. "It's just another five-dollar house call."

June's flashing eyes appealed to her father. The calm in his face quieted her. She rose and suggested quietly that they move into the living room.

Doctor Barton faces a tongue lashing from an unusual client. Continue Chapter 14 Monday.

COSTLY CROSSING

JACKSON, Mich. (AP)—A traffic count showed that trains at a busy crossing in downtown Jackson block some 1,040,000 cars an average of 624 hours a year. City engineers say the dollar loss in man hours over the years would approximate 20 times what a grade separation would cost.

Ontario in Canda is the source of about 65 per cent of the free world's supply of nickel, a metal vital to mining and cement industries.

ARE YOU PUZZLED TOO?

Here is a young lady who's puzzled. She has all the pieces at her fingertips but how to make them fit into the finished pattern—that's her problem.

And it's your problem, too! Life is full of odd pieces which just don't seem to fit into any kind of sensible pattern. There are the odd pieces of sorrow and joy, of suffering and health, of doubt and faith, of evil and good, of death and life, and it sometimes seems as if we never could make them fit into a pattern which makes sense.

And yet there is a pattern for your life—and every life. God knows the pattern and wants to help you find it.

The key to the puzzle of life is a Cross. And the Church, with its message of the Cross of Christ, can help make the odd pieces in the puzzle of your life fall into the finished pattern: a life of confidence and courage and serenity.

THE CHURCH FOR ALL . . . ALL FOR THE CHURCH

The Church is the greatest factor on earth for the building of character and good citizenship. It is a storehouse of spiritual values. Without a strong Church, neither democracy nor civilization can survive. There are four sound reasons why every person should attend services regularly and support the Church. They are: (1) For his own sake. (2) For his children's sake. (3) For the sake of his community and nation. (4) For the sake of the Church itself, which needs his moral and material support. Plan to go to church regularly and read your Bible daily.

Women's Who's Who Seeks Nominations

By EDWARD S. KITCH

CHICAGO (AP)—Editors of the forthcoming "Who's Who of American Women" are looking for new names of distinguished women to include in the volume.

Women who have achieved distinction in any field are eligible, says Wheeler Sammons Jr., associate publisher of "Who's Who in America" and nine other biographical volumes published by the A. N. Marquis Co. The new distaff volume is scheduled to appear in October, 1958.

"For several years we've had women's organizations wondering why there was no biographical book on women," he said.

Many national women's organizations since have volunteered to contribute names of outstanding women in civic, cultural, scientific and religious fields for listing in the special volume. Some 800 colleges have been requested to submit names.

Many new names already are up for consideration as entries by James M. Ethridge, director of research on the project.

Although women of achievement have been listed in Who's Who In America since its first edition in 1899, the new volume will be the first devoted to women alone.

Suggestions Welcomed

All women now listed in the Who's Who In America volume will be carried in the new book. About 2,500 names, plus 2,000 names in other books published by Marquis-Who's Who, Inc., will be added to some 15,000 names still to be suggested and processed.

"We've sent out 3,300 requests for data as a start on the project," Sammons said.

The women's Who's Who will follow the basic rule established for the selection of entries in Who's Who in America, which says:

"Who's Who In America shall endeavor to list those individuals who are of current national reference interest and inquiry either because of meritorious achievement in some reputable field of endeavor or because of positions they hold."

Thus, any woman who may be inquired about stands high as a candidate for entry in the volume.

"We plan to be more liberal with the Who's Who for women, although we are a bit more strict what names go into the regular Who's Who," Sammons says.

"There are a great many women who are not entered in Who's Who In America but who are in very important positions, so we plan to select women as women on their own merits. They can be successful in the fields of women's activities, or they may have achieved distinction by moving into a professional area formerly considered only a man's world," he said.

Ages Secret

Sammons estimates the cost of the new volume will run about $150,000. It will have 1,000 pages.

He says editors will not press feminine biographees for their ages.

"That's a secret they can keep, if they're sensitive about it. But if they want to be considered businesslike and the professional equals of men I think they'd want to be as accurate as possible. We'll ask them for their age, but we won't force them to give it. How could we?" Sammons asked.

Lighting, New Uniforms Set Stage For Outstanding Concert Of Band

By GEORGE E. PERRY

The East Carolina College Concert Band, under the direction of Herbert L. Carter, presented its annual Winter concert last evening in McGinnis Auditorium before a sizeable and enthusiastic audience. Once again, as always, the concert presented by this well-trained organization was outstanding in many respects.

To begin with, as one entered the auditorium, one was immediately aware of the anticipatory atmosphere, cleverly engineered by soft purple-pink lighting of the stage. It gave a feeling that the stage was preparing to come to life after a period of dormancy. And it soon did, with the entrance of the band (resplendent in new uniforms) and the gradual rise of the lights.

Purcell's Air and March was the opening number, and at the very start one was aware of the definite intonation and precise attacks and release which were to be so noticeable during the remainder of the program. There were some well-sculptored dynamics and playing of the cleanest sort; in current language, it was "on the head."

Mozart's Overture to the Impressario followed, notable for some very good balance, and for the fact that the rendition was kept tastefully within the refined limitations of the Classic period. The trumpet work here, and indeed throughout the entire concert, was of top calibre. Then, too, here was an example of an orchestral selection convincingly adapted for band.

The Polka and Fugue from "Schwanda" by Weinberger offered some excellent work in the study of contrasts without exaggeration, and some acutely precise playing, especially at the climax.

Mr. James Parnell, of the Department of Music Faculty, was the featured soloist for the evening, performing the Rondo movement from Mozart's Third Horn Concerto. This work, which with the other two, constitutes an apex in its field, gave Mr. Parnell something to sink his teeth into. It needs to be played fast and with considerable grace, a difficult trick on a horn, but this is just the way it came out. His tone was rich and warm, his fingering sure, his tonguing clean and distinct; and I among others am looking forward to hearing him in an extended work.

The second half of the concert began with Richard Strauss' "Zueignung" which contained some nice solo work and two thoughtfully-conceived climaxes. Following was the "Railroad Suite" by Mitchell, a work in three movements, describing in music three aspects of railroad lore. It was interesting to note how "sound effects" could be obtained without the use of instruments other than those customarily used in a concert band. Two of the three movements gave Dottie Jo James an opportunity to do some really musical work on the English Horn, and the third movement contained the best climax of the evening.

Closing the program were two Marches for Band—one by Bach, and the other by Beethoven. Of the two, the latter went across better; it was in fact a better transcription, so good a one that it might very conceivably have been written in this form by Beethoven himself.

The band and its conductor gave the audience an evening of notable and enjoyable listening, which is traditionally what takes place at each concert of this group. Time was when college band concerts were pretty much run-of-the-mill things. But it is evident here that such is a thing of the past.

Heart Cake For Valentine Table

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

If a heart-shaped cake is your fancy for a Valentine party, here's your recipe. It's a tender cake, made with four egg whites and bits of maraschino cherries to add Cupid's color.

We used the four egg yolks left over from the cake for a generous amount of filling—the sort everyone likes in Boston Cream Cake. Cover your heart cake with a white or pink-tinted frosting and decorate with another heart made of cherries. The frosting may, of course, be homemade or one of the fluffy varieties that now come in a packaged mix all ready to be made up.

The heart-shaped pans this cake is baked in are widely available because they are now marketed by three manufacturers. But if you haven't heart pans on hand, you can bake the cake in two regular 8-inch round layer-cake pans.

MARASCHINO CHERRIES add Cupid's color to cake.

SWEETHEART CAKE

Ingredients: 2 cups sifted cake flour, 2 teaspoons double-acting baking powder, ½ teaspoon salt, 2-3 cup butter or margarine, 3-4 cup sugar, 2 teaspoons pure vanilla extract, 1-3 cup milk, 1-3 cup water, 4 egg whites, 1-4 cup sugar, 1-4 cup (about 10) finely chopped well-drained maraschino cherries.

Method: Sift together the cake flour, baking powder and salt. Cream butter, 3-4 cup sugar and vanilla. Beat in gently the sifted dry ingredients, alternately with the milk and water, in four additions. Beat only until smooth. Beat egg whites until foamy; beat in 1-4 cup sugar, 1 tablespoon at a time; continue to beat if necessary until stiff straight-up peaks can be formed when beater is slowly withdrawn. Fold meringue and drained chopped cherries into flour mixture. Turn into two prepared 8-inch heart or round layer-cake pans. (To prepare pans, grease bottom; line bottom with waxed paper; grease paper.) Bake in moderate (350 degrees) oven about 30 minutes or until cake tester inserted in center comes out clean. Turn out on racks; turn right side up so tops of cakes won't stick to racks. Cool. Fill with Sweetheart Filling. Frost as desired with white or pink icing; garnish with slivered maraschino cherries arranged in a heart shape. Be sure to dry cherry slivers on a paper towel before using as a garnish so they won't "run."

SWEETHEART FILLING

Ingredients: ½ cup sugar, 2 tablespoons cornstarch, 2 tablespoons flour, ½ teaspoon salt, 1½ cups milk, 4 egg yolks, 1 tablespoon butter or margarine, 1 teaspoon pure vanilla extract.

Method: Mix together thoroughly the sugar, cornstarch, flour and salt in a medium-sized saucepan. Add ½ cup of the milk and stir until smooth; stir in remaining milk. Cook and stir constantly over low heat until thickened and boiling; this may take about 20 minutes. Make sure mixture is very thick. Beat the egg yolks slightly; gradually beat a little of the hot mixture into them; beat back into mixture in saucepan. Cook and stir constantly over moderately low heat about 5 minutes. If mixture is not very thick, increase heat and stirring constantly, let boil for several minutes. Remove from heat. Stir in butter and vanilla. Strain; cover and chill. Use as filling for Sweetheart Cake.

Dr. Withey Talks To Club

Dr. J. A. Withey was guest speaker when the Pickwick Book Club met at the home of Mrs. Connor Merritt.

Dr. Withey's subject was titled 'A Playwright Looks At The Changing South." Four plays were reviewed and passages from each were read to the group.

The first was Joshua Logan's "Wisteria Trees," portraying the plantation scene of a decadent Southern Mansion when the "poor white" assumes the position of the aristocrat but is not accepted as his equal.

"The House of Connelly" by Paul Green also had the old Southern mansion setting, but this time the "poor white" is accepted on a more equal footing and indicates optimism for a better future.

Tennessee Williams' "Baby Doll," in an even more retrogressive Southern mansion scene, takes note of the antagonism expressed by the local "folk" for the foreigner.

"Kiss the Boys Goodby" by Clare Boothe Luce portrayed the popular conception of the wisteria hung, languid, sentimental South.

In conclusion Dr. Withey expressed the hope that the playwright would soon treat the present day important themes of segregation and economic change.

Following the concluding remarks of the speaker the hostess served chocolate pie and coffee to the members and guests, Mrs. Dwight Garrett, Mrs. Lewis Clark and Dr. Withey.

A Leader For Transition Period

A bright future lies ahead for North Carolina under four more years of Governor Luther Hodges' administration.

As chief executive of the state for the past 27 months, Luther Hodges already is ranked by many critical observers as one of the outstanding governors in North Carolina's history. He is often referred to as the man destined to lead the state through one of its critical periods in history.

The next four years, like the past two, loom as critical times for North Carolina. The state faces many problems as it is guided through a period of social and economic transition. To successfully cope with these problems, it must have a strong, progressive leader whose insight into the problems will enable him to resolve them.

Such a man is Luther Hodges.

In a little more than two years the state has made tremendous strides in coping with its disgracefully low per capita income. Slowly but surely North Carolina is pulling itself up economically by its own bootstraps, largely because the chief executive has fired the people of North Carolina with the ambition to do so. The battle for industrial and economic growth in North Carolina is not won by any means. Thousands upon thousands of new jobs are still needed to provide year-round employment, to provide physical plants to be taxed, and to provide personal and corporate income in the state.

With the leadership in this field which Gov. Hodges can provide, the state should make even greater stride in the four years ahead.

The changing economic pattern in North Carolina brings with its social problems which must be heaped upon those already created by the Supreme Court decision affecting schools. Through sound leadership and the level-headed attitude of citizens of the state, North Carolina's public schools have not yet been seriously threatened. Steps have been taken which will assure preservation of the state's public schools.

The forceful leadership Luther Hodges has afforded North Carolina during the past two years already is giving the state a new look. Continued through four more years it will lift North Carolina to even greater heights.

Make April A Real Month For Clean-Up

There are few towns in North Carolina that couldn't profit by a god clean-up campaign. Unfortunately, Greenville isn't one of them.

It is with a nod of approval that we note the City Council has designated April as a "clean-up month" for Greenville. It is also with some misgivings that we look back on similarly designated periods which have been "clean-up" periods in name only. The town looked pretty much the same after as it did before. Maybe some trash and debris was removed from the streets, maybe a few coats of paint went on here and there, and doubtlessly some windows were washed.

But a couple of weeks after the campaign, Greenville looked just about like it did before . . . in need of another clean-up campaign.

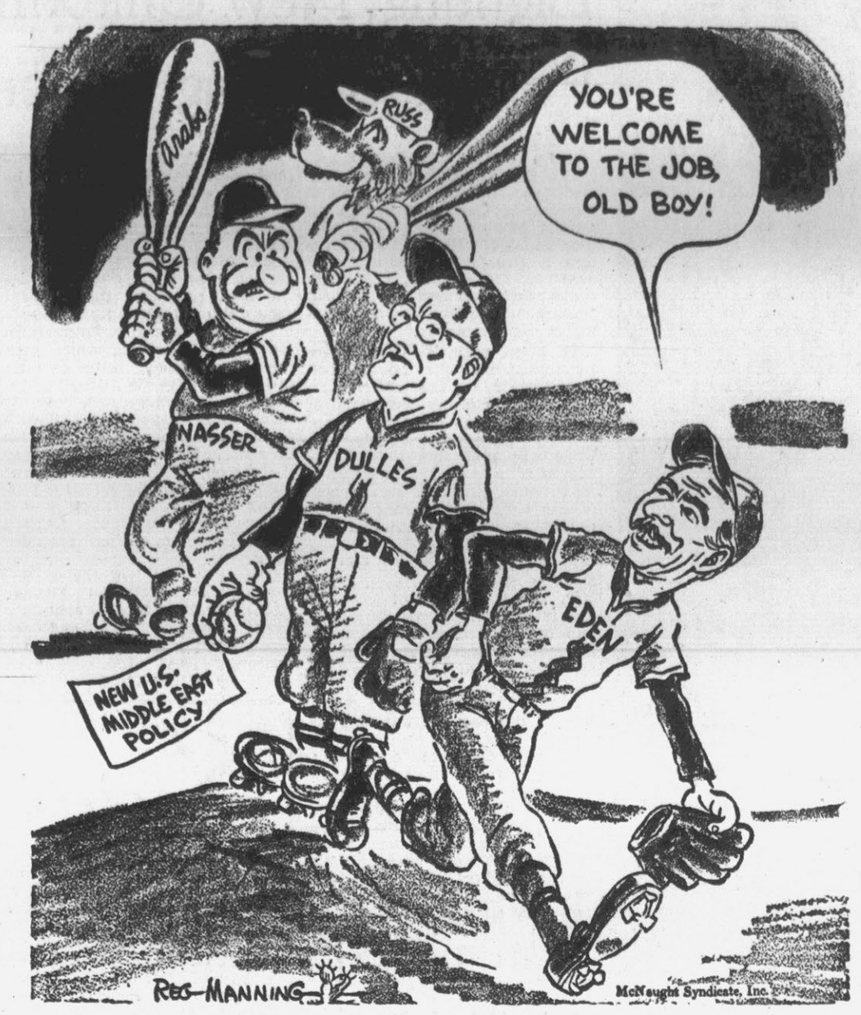

This year, we hope things will be different.

There is nothing that gives a visitor his impression of a community like its appearance. If the town is shiny and spotless, if its streets are clean, its approaches well kept, the visitor immediately gets the impression "this is a good town." If, on the other hand he enters the town through a semi-slum area, is confronted with debris-littered streets, and shaggy lawns his impression is exactly the opposite.

Greenville could well use a good scrubbing behind the ears and some sprucing up. We have visitors every day and many of them, we're afraid, go away with not too good an impression of the city's appearance.

A month of intensive cleaning up can make a big difference in Greenville's appearance. More than that, however, Greenville needs to give more attention to its appearance the year round. Over a longer period it needs to give more consideration to planning for general beautification.

Praise For A Judge

(The following article on Judge William J. Bundy, of Greenville, recently appeared on the editorial page of the Wilmington Star-News.)

By RAY KALTWASSER
(Wilmington Star-News)

Another six months have passed and with them another judge has laid down the gavel in New Hanover County's aged, airy Superior courtroom.

This time it is William J. Bundy of Greenville who, in those six months that ended this past week, earned a simple verdict of his own from clerks, lawyers, deputies and observers sitting in personal judgment.

The finding was simple: "He's a darn good judge."

Judge Bundy would especially like that verdict because he thinks, to quote a civic club speech, that judging others is a "mighty" important job.

NOT AN EASY JOB

How does a judge become a "darn good judge?"

A few of his own words explain that:

"It's not easy to sit in judgment of others . . . even Solomon invoked divine guidance to help him discern between good and evil. That's why I open each session with a minister's prayer.

"You can't control anybody else's emotions unless you control your own."

This last bit of wisdom was directed at a young man whose ardor toward his scorning wife obviously puzzled the judge.

"Who could ever understand the way of a man with a maid?" he mused over the bench at the young man and beyond.

"Young man, what do you say about it?" The young man, convicted of assaulting his wife, broke just a trifle under the calm yet penetrating judicial gaze. He mumbled something about "not wanting to stay away from her."

For a brief instant the calm gaze narrowed. "Mr. Sheriff, he's in your custody." The boy was marched off to jail for a night, awaiting Judge Bundy's final decision.

There is also another quality of a good judge that those lawyers, clerks, deputies and observers noted during Judge Bundy's six months here. Something called courage.

Last month a man stood before the bench accused of a crime against nature involving young boys. Socially, there are few more shameful crimes, yet Judge Bundy did not send the man to prison. He suspended his sentence on condition the man submit to psychiatric treatment.

Only last week he made a decision that was a hard one to make and one that revealed both the man and the judge.

SUSPENDED SENTENCE

It was the case of Wilmington lawyer Walton P. Burkhimer, who pleaded guilty to embezzling $2,850 of funds entrusted to him. First came a sentence of from five to seven years. Three days later, as the session drew to a close and as it was clear that many Wilmington lawyers, a church and friends had rallied to help pay the total $5,277 Burkhimer owed, Judge Bundy suspended the sentence.

Then, there is another side of a "darn good judge." He can't take life too seriously.

Back at the civic club, Judge Bundy recalled a couple stories that make courts "just about the most interesting thing I know of." For instance, there was the rich old man who left a will saying:

"I John Smith, in this last will and testament, being of sound mind and good health, have spent every cent I owned."

And so forth.

Of course everybody has his own idea of what it takes to judge others and most times it doesn't need an explanation. And since some lawyers would rather exclaim than explain, that "darn good judge" is good enough for them.

Judge Bundy must have sensed it too. His parting words Thursday were . . . "hate to leave here, really do."

Post Exchange System 'Beef'

By ELMER ROESSNER

The Army and the Air Force are planning to increase the lines of merchandise handled by post exchanges on the American continent. Pentagon officials have been holding a series of conferences with trade association representatives in efforts to reach an agreement on what goods should be handled in PX's.

The services want to expand the exchanges to increase the fringe benefits for service personnel and their families, to make re-enlistments more attractive.

This seems a curious way to do things in a democracy. Instead of paying servicemen more out of taxes, the government is planning to offer fringe benefits that, in the end, must come out of the pockets of merchants and others, especially those near military posts. A relatively small group is being called upon to underwrite part of the costs of the entire national defense.

HOW SYSTEM WORKS

If the government were not running what amounts to a chain of discount houses, when a serviceman wanted a toaster for his family he would go to a retail store like anyone else and pay, say, $20. Of this, about $12 would go to the manufacturer and $8 would go to wages, commissions, rent, utilities, advertising, shipping, taxes and profit. The profit, if the store were efficiently operated, might be as much as 80 cents.

But with a post exchange handy, the serviceman could buy the same item for very little above the $12 wholesale price. The overhead is low, with little if any rent, light or heat, and no commissions, advertising or taxes.

At the same time, the local dealer would be losing a few cents profit and a chance to lay off some of his overhead; his employees would lose commissions and, if the drain was heavy enough, their jobs: the local community would lose some taxes.

That leaves the question: If that serviceman is entitled to an $8 bonus — or whatever his saving is — shouldn't all the nation share in the cost, not just one merchant and those who depend on him? Shouldn't servicemen be paid in cash instead of discounts?

REAR-GUARD ACTION

Trade association leaders, lacking adequate support from Congress, have been fighting a rear-guard action. They have conferred with Defense Department bosses and have resisted some losses.

An agreement on what the services would sell was reached in 1949 and, now that there are plans to expand the PX system, efforts are being made to reach another pact.

In recent sessions, the government negotiators agreed to maintain the previous $15 wholesale limit on electrical appliances handled by the exchanges and electric blankets were added to the list. The trade representatives agreed to an increase in record players from $25 wholesale value to $50, and the limit on sports equipment, garden tools and do-it-yourself items was raised from $25 to $50.

The previous $35 limit on radio was kept except for transistor models, on which a $35 limit was agreed upon. The Pentagon officials withdrew a proposal to increase the minimum from $25 to $35 for 34-piece sets of flatware. They also consented to keep the present 25-cent limit on drinking glasses. A 50-cent limit has been proposed.

Discussions of limits on juvenile furniture, cribs and dinnerware was postponed until next month.

Precedents For Future Enacted

By LYNN NISBET

RETIREMENT — The bill providing the same kind of retirement benefits for the Attorney General as has long been accorded judges sailed through the General Assembly without protest. That was in keeping with the promise made by Governor Hodges to Judge George Patton when he persuaded him to give up a seat on the bench with nearly ten years earned retirement credits to take the post as Attorney General.

The bill raising salaries of members of the Council of State from $10,000 to $12,000 also went through but not without some objection to the methods in passing it.

Both bills tend to set precedents which will plague the Governor and the legislators later in the session. The raise of 20 per cent in high salaries, when the leaders have said there is little chance for more than 10 percent increase for teachers and probably less for many State office workers will be cited in support of larger increases.

Adding the Attorney General to the covered list in the judicial retirement plan will almost certainly lead to revival of the proposal to bring district solicitors into the same system.

An attempt to bring them in last session failed for the main reason that provisions would immediately affect only one solicitor and it looked like personal legislation. Fact is nearly every amendment to the judicial retirement system has been for the benefit of one individual at the time, although extended to all persons in similar situations.

The solicitors have held several more or less informal conferences about legislation. Redistricting and retirement were the main topics discussed.

SAFE — Despite the face that Rodman swore in Charlie Gold Associate Justice William B. Rodman swore in Charlie Gold as "Commissioner of Revenue" instead of Commissioner of Insurance, the office to which he was elected last fall, there will be no vacancy in the insurance post. Under the constitution Gold will hold over until his successor is elected and installed. And if any question should arise about the validity of the oath administered at the inaugural ceremonies it could eventually be decided by the Supreme Court. Since Chief Justice Winborne almost made judges out of Senators the day before, the high court may be depended upon to validate the oath.

HODGES' LUCK — Governor Hodges' luck held good through the inagural parades and ceremonies. Thursday began with rain and fog at Raleigh and ended on similar note. But the midday hours from ten till two were relatively bright and dry — although the sun barely broke through the clouds. A shower near the end of the parade from the auditorium up street caught the official party, but did little harm.

Some of those responsible for seeing that the inaugural business moved along on schedule were talking about the weather the day before. One man voiced the hope that it would not rain, but the fear that it would. Another quipped with assurance: "No, it won't rain during the parade. I don't care what the weather man predicts. That fellow Hodges has a silver spoon in his mouth and it is bent on the end so it can't even be pulled out. Rain might fall on somebody else's inauguration, but not on Luther Hodges'."

Threatening weather kept a good many people from coming to see the parade, but the auditorium was comfortably filled and the program was carried out in every detail as planned.

PINE HANDLES — The use of pine handles in ordinary garden and field hoes pointed the way to a prosperous industry in another state — and some profit to a North Carolina store. Also it illustrates how home industries can be developed.

Clyde Greene of Boone, civic leader, farmer and merchant, was talking about the need for more payrolls in North Carolina. He is heartily in favor of every effort to induce big industry to locate plants in North Carolina. But he says the problem will never be solved until home folks develop their own local resources. He cites an illustration out of his own business experience.

His hardware store at Boone used to buy farm and garden hose from a plant "up north." The price continuaously climbed until it got beyond the ability of his average farmer customer to pay. Then he found that a small plant down in Mississippi was making hoes and putting native pine handles in them, instead of hickory or ash or some other hardwoods. They were cheaper and just as good.

So merchant Greene has been buying hoes from Mississippi for the past few years. He would rather buy them from a North Carolina firm, and he doesn't see why Tar Heels can't make just as good hoes as folks in the Magnolia State.

A Hanging Isn't Funny

As a general rule, hangings should be pretty serious affairs.

The rule should apply whether the intent is to deprive someone of life or an indication of displeasure with an individual. The rule should especially apply in the latter situation, because such situations are usually effigy affairs which imply that the perpetrators wish an actual person to be in the place of the dummy.

It has become a part of the Great American Tradition to have effigy hangings. In recent times, it has been aimed particularly at coaching personnel who are so unfortunate as to have ball clubs that don't win every game.

East Carolina College had been spared such a sorry spectacle until Thursday night when a bunch of poor losers and sore heads invited themselves into the act. They strung up an effigy of basketball coach Howard Porter in front of the college dining hall.

The effigy was prompted by East Carolina's loss to Atlantic Christian College, ECC's archrival in basketball. It was accomplished under the friendly mantle of darkness, that great friend of the Ku Klux Klan and similar organized coward clubs.

As an alumnus (B.S., '54) and graduate student at East Carolina, I have a justifiably keen interest in what takes place at the college. I have been proud of a lot of things that have occurred on the campus.

Thursday night's affair doesn't fit into that last category, however.

I have never been proud of people who have to sneak around to express opinions—especially when those people are supposed to be my friends. I have no respect for people who don't have enough guts to stand up and be counted when they have something on their minds.

There are ways and means of resolving differences, even between students and administration of a college. There exists on the campus an opportunity for every student to receive serious consideration of any legitimate complaint he might have—including complaints about a basketball team that doesn't win as often as the individual thinks it should.

In contrast to the way I feel about the students involved in the effigy hanging, I have a great respect for Howard Porter. I respect him both as a man and as a basketball coach.

I have known him since September, 1951, and have travelled many miles with him on basketball trips. He has always treated me with courtesy—even when I have been guilty of violating his training rules and got punished for doing it, and when I have confronted him with opinions that were in conflict with his own.

No man can ask more than that.

Other Editors Saying--- About Belling Cats

(Hertford County Herald)

Bird lovers in some communities often compel officials to have the cat population tagged with little tinkling bells, the idea being of course that kitty's stealth is a menace to innocent songbirds.

And if it weren't for the fact that at least some Tar Heel driver see an analogous picture in regards to a proposed piece of legislation to be presented the forthcoming General Assembly, it would be absurd to even comment on it here.

However, from even a casual perusal of the journals, and from conversations with local citizens, it's apparent the State Highway Patrol is in for trouble if requesting — horror or horros — a bunch of plain, unmarked police cars to deal with flagrant speeders and drag racers.

The "bell" advocates, though, read something sinister in this. After all, they reason, isn't a green or a blue or a black patrol car displaying false colors? How will motorists know who's ahead, or behind them, when the inclination to crack the throttle a mite over 55 comes on?

The everlasting point to this discourse, the way we see it is this: The always law abiding driver, the chap who motors along at a steady 55, or under when conditions are bad, doesn't give a whoop nor a holler where a police car may be — in front, in back, behind signboards, up a side road, anywhere.

We've heard the argument that plainly marked cruisers are a stronger deterent to speeding than mixing up the fleet with a few in mufti. This bears closer inspection.

According to traffic safety authorities, the constant presence of troopers, in plainly marked cars, on our roads is good.

Nobody denies it. But it is equally good, and a lot harder on the chronic leadfoot, for drivers to constantly suspect that in random traffic one car might be a police car. Or might not!

Call it "unsportsmanlike" if you will, but we are maintaining the stand that it's high time to quit thinking of traffic law enforcement as a game, and face up to the undisputed fact that the speeding, reckless driver is potentially as great a menace as any other killer or assassin.

We are informed that the top officers of the Highway Patrol have over 100 years combined experience in the traffic law enforcement and highway safety.

With this comforting knowledge we are content to let them handle the problem of protecting our lives and our property on the roads — using the methods they've found best in actual experience.

And from here that includes putting some fully uniformed troopers in cars undistinguished by glaring silver paint jobs, roof mounted red lights, and other accouterments of a circus wagon.

Strength For Today

By EARL L. DOUGLASS

NATURE OF LOVE

There are as many different varieites of love as there are different relationships in life. Most people regard love as an emotional matter. Basically, love is good will. It may be characterized by emotion or it may not. In the love of men and women for each other and of parents for their children, emotion so completely dominates the situation that rational design of any kind is practically indistinguishable. In the love we have for our neighbors, however, the love is almost entirely a matter of the will and of the mind. We determine that we will manifest good will toward our neighbors and unflinchingly and unceasingly do so. There must not be, at any time, the least emotional accompainment to such a resolve.

A person sometimes becomes annoyed at a spouse because of a suspicion that the spouse loves a mother or father, brother or friend, in a way that comes before marital love. Such a position is both tragic and ridiculous. A man has a certain type of love for his mother which in no way conflicts with his love for his wife. A woman has a type of love for her children which in no way conflicts with her love for her husband. There are as many different kinds of love as there are different relationships, and in a wholesome and well-integrated personality these loves never conflict.

Ike's Restraint Plea Has A Chance

By RAY TUCKER

WASHINGTON — "Do you believe," inquires F. G., of Los Angeles, Calif., who is obviously a businessman, "that President Eisenhower's mere request for restraint will induce the heads of American industry and the labor unions to co-operate in keeping down prices and preventing further inflation? In my opinion, the ever-increasing cost of living, using that term in its very broadest sense, is our principal problem today."

Answer: In co-operation with Congress, the President has great power for achieving the objective of restraining or minimizing increases in wages and prices. It is doubtful if any Chief Executive ever had a better chance to solve a problem which is really outside his official jurisdiction.

IKE'S MANY FRIENDS IN MANAGEMENT But Ike is on first-name terms with the top officials of almost every great industry, railroad, bank and businessmen's association in the country. He can, if he will, persuade them to lighten the price load on consumers.

The records reveal that their profits have been on the high side during and since World War II, even after heavy taxes. Congressional investigations may prove to be a helpful weapon, and many inquiries are already assured.

AWARENESS OF LABOR LEADERS With a few exceptions, labor leaders are beginning to realize that they can kill the goose that has been laying the golden egg of high wages. Unless the working force can increase productivity commensurately with fatter pay envelopes, they will lose rather than gain from raising their ante. I think that the more responsible union officials appreciate this fact.

John L. Lewis, for instance, lectured his mine workers when a few union officials urged him to seek a contract that would pay them for six days' work the same amount that they now receive for eight. He told them that it would mean no pocketbook gain, and they withdrew their request.

Although I may be overoptimistic, both management and labor are beginning to show a little more common sense in handling these questions. With a show of courage in tackling them without partisanship or class rivalry, I believe that living costs can be kept near the present level, which is high enough.

"Do you think that Congress will provide a Federal bonus for veterans of World War II and the Korean 'police action'?" asks D.L., of Albuquerque, N.M.

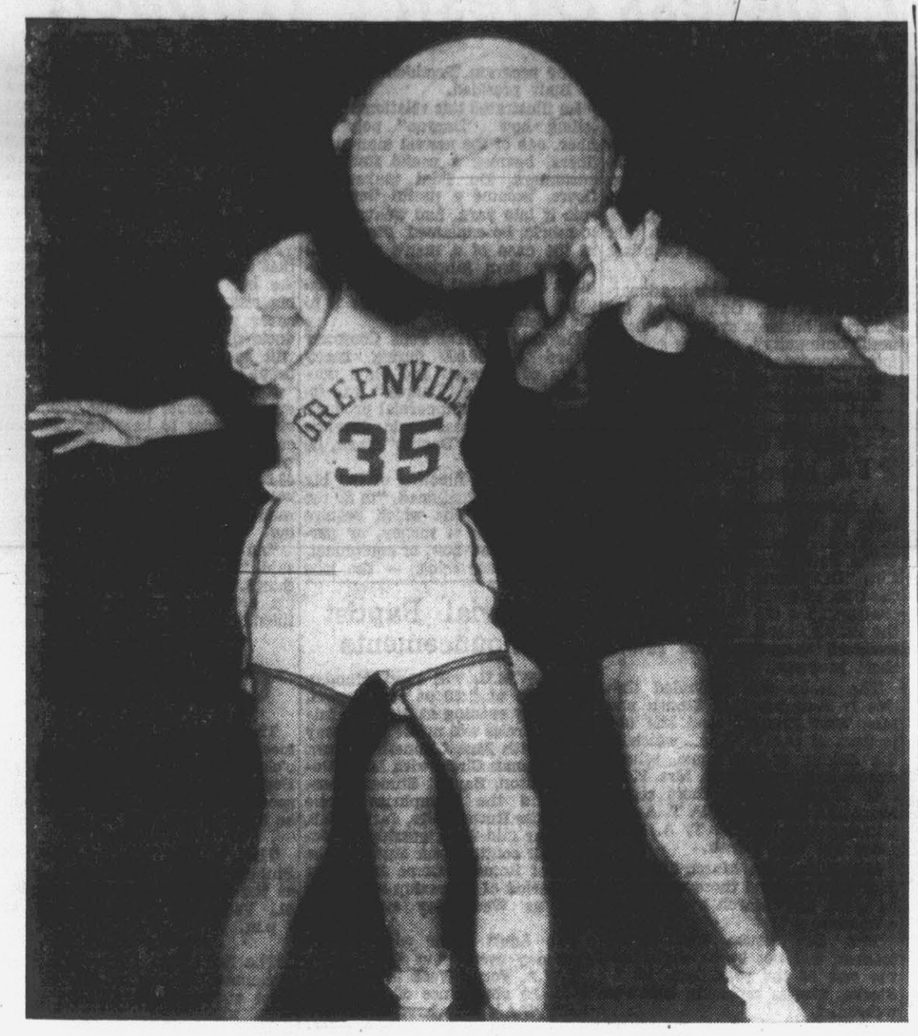

Answer: It does not seem probable, although many measures to this effect have been introduced in Congress, and they have the support of politically influential veterans' organizations.

STAGGERING COST OF DISABILITY PENSIONS As the debates show, Congress provided funds for education and loans at low interest for World War II soldiers, and these were supposed to serve in lieu of the bonus which World War I men received. In addition, pensions for disability were scaled upward, and the cost has been terrific. As of today, there appears to be no likelihood of a cash payment.

HOUSE FOR RED CROSS PRESIDENT "Why should the American Red Cross buy a house for its new president, General Gruenther?" explodes Mrs. R.R., of Springfield, Mass. "Why not use that $75,000, along with our contributions, for relief work?"

Answer: The $75,000 does not come out of the normal Red Cross contributions. The house purchasing money was contributed by 70 or more prominent and wealthy men 35 years ago. I should add that many other readers expressed some irritation over this expenditure.

Phantoms Topple Roanoke Rapids For Sixth Victory

OH, MY HEAD!—In last night's GHS-Roanoke Rapids tilt, Greenville's Wesley Hudson (35) and Roanoke Rapids' Zucker (13) both seem to have lost their heads. The camera snapped Hudson in the midst of receiving a pass from a teammate. Note the ears that seem to be growing out of both sides of the ball. (Reflector Sports Photos by Billy Arnold).

Hudson Paces Green Crew To 62-51 Win

By BILLY ARNOLD
Reflector Sports Editor

The Greenville Phantoms came from behind early in the first quarter of a game with Roanoke Rapids last night, to score a solid 62-51 victory over the Yellow Jackets in GHS Gymnasium.

The win was a Northeastern Conference triumph and moved the Phantoms' league mark to 6-2. Roanoke Rapids' record moved to 0-8.

The G-Men hit in the double scoring figures to pace their club to victory. Wesley Hudson, an alternating guard in Coach Bo Farley's two-platoon system, drew 16 to take high honors for the night. Forward Peanut Nunn nabbed 12 and center Steve Noble collected 10.

Phants Behind

The Yellow Jackets, who bowed to Greenville 59-44 in an earlier meeting, stunned their hosts early in the contest last night by taking as much as a 9-2 lead. Roanoke Rapids forwards Reid and Tompson touched off seven quick points to give their club a brief lead. The Green Phants were unable to click until the half-way mark of the period, when Mack Roebuck, Billy Cox and Peanut Nunn began to connect.

However, before the Phants could move ahead of their foes, the buzzer killed the first quarter. The score was 14-14.

The surprising Jackets once again got the jump on their hosts early in the second quarter and moved to a slight advantage. A basket by Charlie Smith tied the score 18-18 and Coach Farley's quintet began to find the range from that point on. They chalked up a quick lead of 22-18, then pushed to 28-18 before the Jackets could catch their breath.

Half Time Lead

The third-ranked Phantoms held at 11-point lead at halftime, 34-23.

Roanoke Rapids outscored the locals 13 points to 12 in the third quarter, but the already-established Phantom lead was too much to overcome. The final quarter was a dead-heat with both clubs putting in 16 points each. The Phantoms' early scoring in the second quarter made the difference. At the end it was 62-51.

Top rebounders for the locals were Nunn, Noble and Smith. Mack Roebuck and Wesley Hudson handled the play-making chores for Coach Farley and Hudson was also the big point man, as stated before.

Jayvees Lose

Greenville's Jayvee team suffered another loss, bowing to the Roanoke Rapids Baby Jackets 46-38 in the preliminary contest last night.

Jacket guard Parkinson was high for the night with 15 points. Greenville's scoring was done by Garner (14), Finch (10), Bynum (7), Moye (4) and Ward (3).

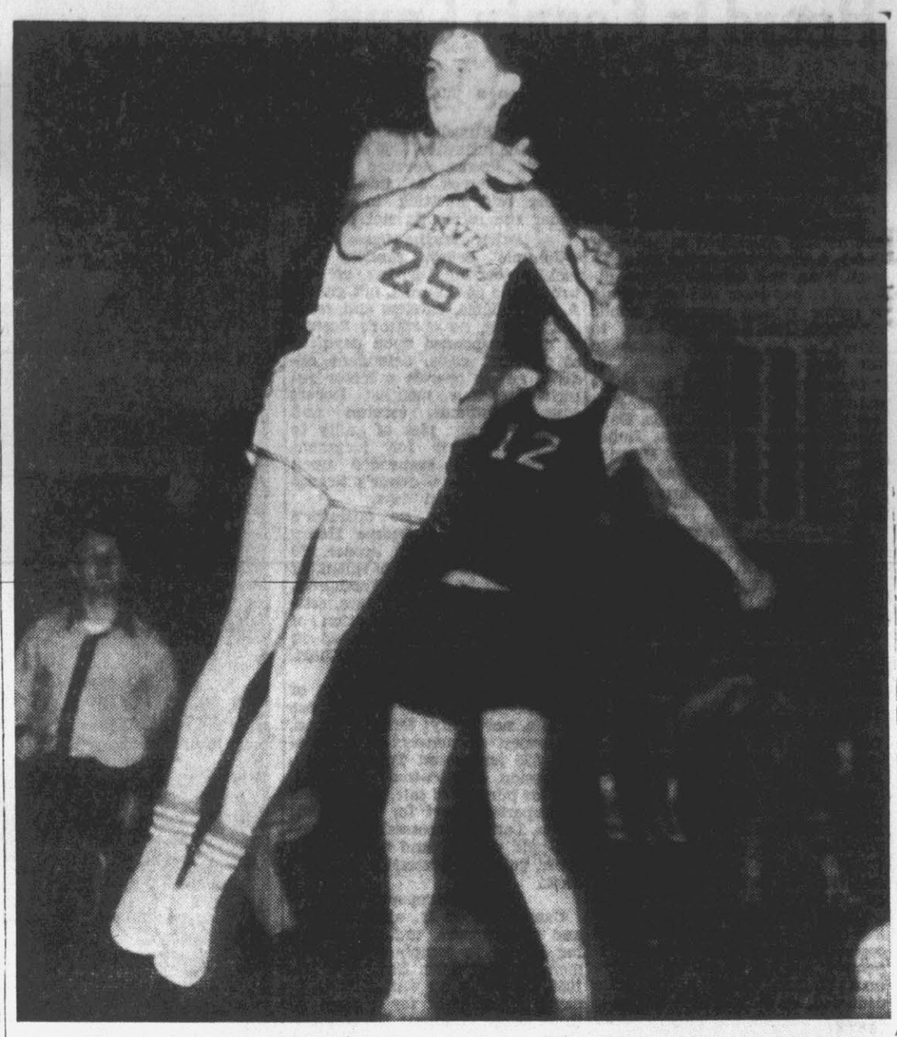

Greenville's next ball game will be played Tuesday on the GHS court, against Jacksonville. It will be the Phants' last home game of the season.

Top-Ranked Carolina May Face Biggest Test Tonight

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Poised and confident, undefeated North Carolina, the nation's No. 1 basketball team, a "team too young to be scared," faces what could be its sternest test tonight against Duke.

The Tar Heels, riding a 17-game winning streak including seven straight in the Atlantic Coast Conference, play host to Duke, their No. 1 arch rival.

North Carolina Coach Frank McGuire who says playing on its home court before a partisan crowd can be a team's two greatest assets, holds the marbles tonight.

Traditionally North Carolina is always tough at home and the sellout crowd of more than 5,500 will be mostly home fans, rooting for win No. 18.

McGuire had worried about the pressure building up on his club with each victory. But after North Carolina edged Maryland Tuesday night 65-61 in double overtime, McGuire observed: "This team is too young to get scared. Only the old know fear, you know. These kids don't worry about anybody."

Coach Hal Bradley and his Blue Devils hope tonight's game will be reminiscent of the last game of the 1955 season played at Chapel Hill. Duke won that one, the last time the Tar Heels were beaten at home.

Duke, second in the conference at 5-2 and 10-6 over-all, need tonight's game to hold their position.

The two clubs met once before this season, in the semifinals of the Dixie Classic. North Carolina won easily 87-71.

The other game involving ACC teams tonight is South Carolina's invasion of North Carolina State. South Carolina whipped State 75-61 in their previous meeting and in their last outing knocked off Wake Forest 55-49. Both clubs are in the bottom division of the ACC, State with a 4-5 mark and South Carolina 3-5.

Wake Forest, which had seen its seven-game winning skein go down the drain against the Gamecocks Thursday night, bounced back last night with a 93-72 win over Clemson, the ACC's tailend club. The Deacons broke the game wide open in the last eight minutes and were led by guard Ernie Wiggins with 27 points. Jack Williams followed with 24. Forward Ed Brinkley had 22 for Clemson.

Washington and Lee opened its second - half Southern Conference drive last night with an 89-70 victory over Davidson, featured by a 40-point scoring outburst by center Lee Marshall. The Generals piled up a 10-point lead at halftime but hit a seven-minute famine after intermission and Davidson narrowed its deficit to six points at 47-41. Marshall then started hitting again and W&L pulled out of danger.

The 40 - point barrage was the greatest of Marshall's career, and lifted his season's average to 24.6 points per game. He's scored 369 points in 15 starts, of which W&L has won 12.

Dick Weeks topped Davidson's attack with 18 points.

Martinez Climbing In Featherweight Ratings

By JACK HAND

NEW YORK (AP)—If Isidro Martinez can keep up the pace of his first two U.S. fights, the nimble little man from Panama is going to force his way into the featherweight sweepsteakes.

Martinez, 22, won in a romp last night at Madison Square Garden, brushing off a second-round knockdown, to stop Bobby Courchesne in 32 seconds of the 10th and last round. On Jan. 4, Martinez upset Ike Chestnut.

The tournament to crown a successor to Sandy Saddler, who now is thinking of returning to the ring at some future date, already has been set up. Miguel Berrios boxes Carmelo Costa, March 22 and the winner takes on Hogan (Kid) Basey of Nigeria for the right to fight France's Cherif Hamia for the 126-pound title.

Martinez, a late starter, has ideas of crashing the gates and forcing his way into the scramble.

Billy Brown, Garden matchmaker, said he has an open date March 15 and would like to match the Panamanian with "the best 126 pounder we can find outside the tournament." That presumably would include Gil Cadilli, Flash Elorde and possible a Chestnut rematch.

It was a lopsided rout after the first four rounds. Courchesne missed his only chance when he failed to take advantage of the knockdown he scored with a right to the jaw in the second. Martinez was up quickly but had to take the automatic eight-count. Bobby couldn't put over the crusher.

"He made a mistake," said Martinez when he returned to his corner. "Now I get him."

Referee Conn and Judges Bill Recht and Leo Birnbaum all had it 8-1 up to the end. So did the AP, giving Courchesne only the second.

The winner was a 12 to 5 favorite.

Fix Case Turned Into Amusement

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Boxer Dick Goldstein threw welterweight Art Aragon's fight-fixing trial into an uproar yesterday by calling him "a bum."

Superior Judge Hebert V. Walker twice threatened to clear the courtroom of spectators, saying it was "not a place of amusement."

Goldstein charges that Aragon offered him $500 to "take a dive" in their scheduled bout at San Antonio, Tex., last Dec. 18. The fight was cancelled when Aragon said he was ill.

Yesterday's furore began when Aragon's attorney, Paul Caruso, asked Goldstein if he had said, "Aragon is a bum. Before I'm through with him he'll be off the sports pages."

Goldstein said he had not threatened Aragon's career but added:

"I called him a bum many times."

"You feel he is a bum today?" asked Caruso.

"Yes," Goldstein replied.

Goldstein had testified earlier that Aragon told him that if he changed his mind about the purported fix "my life wouldn't be worth two cents."

DeMarco Is 10-6 Over Ortega

BOSTON (AP) — Former Welterweight Champion Tony DeMarco, only 25 but at the crossroads of his fistic career, rules a 10-6 favorite over two-time conqueror Gaspar Indian) Ortega in their third 10-round meeting tonight at the Boston Garden.

The Boston slugger has been installed the favorite despite two straight losses at the hands of the durable Indian from Tijuana, Mexico, in nationally - televised bouts last November and December in New York.

Tonight's bout will not be on radio or television.

The oddsmakers figure that DeMarco just missed in the official voting in the New York bouts and this time has the advantage of fighting in a familiar ring with hometown fans cheering his every effort.

Ortega, an underdog at 4-1 and 2-1 in his first two bouts with DeMarco, upset the odds and knocked Tony from the No. 1 welterweight contender's spot with a pair of divided decisions.

The lanky, 21-year - old battler has risen to the No. 2 contender's rating, a notch ahead of DeMarco, with the help of five divided decisions in recent months. He made his Boston debut last October by gaining a highly disputed decision over Cuba's Isaac Logart.

Courtney Attempting The "Impossible" Race Tonight

By ED CORRIGAN

NEW YORK (AP)—Olympic 800-meter champion Tom Courtney will try to do the "impossible" and beat Arnie Sowell to the tape in the half-mile — the most interesting of a fistful of top events — tonight in the 50th anniversary of the Millrose Games in Madison Square Garden.

If Courtney or Sowell really turn on the heat, this race could overshadow two other features, the mile pitting Ron Delany, Ireland's Olympic 1,500-meter winner, against Hungary's Lazslo Tabori and the two-mile in which pint-sized Fred Dwyer will try to lower Horace Ashenfelter's 8:50.5 world indoor record.

All the years Courtney has been racing Sowell, he has beaten the skinny Pitt runner indoors just once. That was in a 1,000-yard race in Washington two years ago. And Sowell tripped on one of the turns.

"I still think I can beat Sowell on a banked track," said Courtney, a Fordham alumnus who is serving in the Army. "I've been working hard at my training and I'm ready for my best.

"I was just recovering from a bad ankle in the Olympics," said Sowell, "but my leg is as good as ever again and I'm feeling like my old self."

As for Delany, the turkey-trotting 21-year-old from Villanova, he never has lost a race indoors and someone will have to do a lot of pushing to get him down around Gunnar Nielson's 4:03.6 indoor mark.

Delany runs only as fast as he must to win. No fighting the clock for this lad. Ordinarily there would be no end of excitement for a Delany-Tabori clash. It will be the first indoor battle between two sub-four-minute milers. But Tabori, who has defected from his native Hungary, has been unimpressive having lost all three of his starts this winter.

Bobby Seaman of UCLA might give Delany a closer run than Tabori. If Seaman hopes to win it, though, he'll have to open a lot of daylight on Delany before they go into the last lap or two. Other starters will be George King of Boston, Jim Beatty of North Carolina and Burr Grim of Maryland.

Dwyer will be running against Ashenfelter, the man whose record he wants to break. Here, again, if there is to be a record, Ashenfelter, now 33 and seemingly beyond extraordinary efforts these days, will have to push Dwyer.

Cahrlie Jenkins of Villanova is the choice in the 600, Bob Richards (one of four 15-footers) in the pole vault, Ira Murchison of Chicago in the 60-yard dash, Lee Calhoun of North Carolina in the 60-yard hurdles, and Phil Reavis of Villanova in the high jump.

Youngsters Leading In Golf Tournament

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Youngsters lead a closely packed field into the third round of the $15,000 Tucson Open today, but some of golf's brightest names were close behind.

Luck rode the broad shoulders of 25-year-old Billy Casper Jr., of Bonita, Calif., as he chipped in twice from traps yesterday to lead by a stroke after 36 holes with a nine-under par 131.

Bob Harris of Winnetka, Ill., put together the best 36 holes of his eight years as a pro for 132 and sole possession of second place.

Julius Boros of Mid Pines, N. C., ex-U.S. Open champ, and John Cleary, a rookie from Hartford, Conn., were tied with 133s.

Two drives that snuggled against tree trunks cost Doug Ford of Mahopac, N.Y., the big money winner of the winter circuit, a place with the leaders. Both slams sent him over par, leaving him tied with Howie Johnson of Houston, Tex., the first round leader, and Frank Stranahan, Toledo, Ohio. They had 134s.

Mike Souchak of Grossinger, N. Y., and Dow Finsterwald of Tequesta, Fla., considered among the most dangerous men in the field, were grouped with six others four strokes back of the leader at 135.

Defeats Hartwig To Capture Prize

SYDNEY (AP)—Tony Trabert of Salt Lake City beat Australia's Rex Hartwig 6-4, 6-2, 6-4 to take fifth prize money of $1,120 in the professional tennis tournament today.

Ken Rosewall and Hartwig beat Trabert and Pancho Segura 6-3, 6-4 to win the first prize of $1,960 in the round robin doubles.

Pancho Gonzales and Rosewall play tonight for third and fourth position in the singles.

Golfer Catching Breath After 28

PINEHURST, N.C. (AP)—A young Yale University golfer was collecting his breath today after playing 288 holes of golf over four Pinehurst courses in five days.

Paul Rowden of New Haven, Conn., who finished his marathon stint yesterday, played 27 holes Sunday, 63 Monday, 36 Tuesday, 54 Wednesday, 72 Thursday and 36 Friday.

For his 72 holes Thursday, Rowden, a member of the Yale golf team, shot 328, playing each of the four courses. Par for all four is 282.

Christian Church Announcements

The Eighth Street Christian Church salutes the Boy Scouts of America as they begin the anniversary of Boy Scout Week. M. E. Cavendish is chairman of Troop 33 committee and Charles Johnson is Scout Master ably assisted by Joe Miller and Milan Brickhouse.

At the service Sunday morning the choir will sing, "Christ of The Upward Way" by Mueller. At the service last Sunday morning the following new members were received into the church: Mr. and Mrs. Bill Ellington, Mr. and Mrs. Woodrow Boyd, Mr. and Mrs. Roger Riddick, and Mrs. Margaret Kelly and her son Douglas.

The attention of the Church and Sunday School is called to the observance of "Crime Prevention Week" throughout the nation this week in which the heavy burden of responsibility is placed upon the families of America. This is timely since our annual crime rate is increasing year by year.

The flowers in the chancel Sunday will be presented by Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Laughinghouse in memory of their fathers, Mr. John Britton of the Christian Church of Everetts and Rev. W. H. Laughinghouse, minister for many years in eastern Carolina and the founder of the local Free Will Baptist Church.

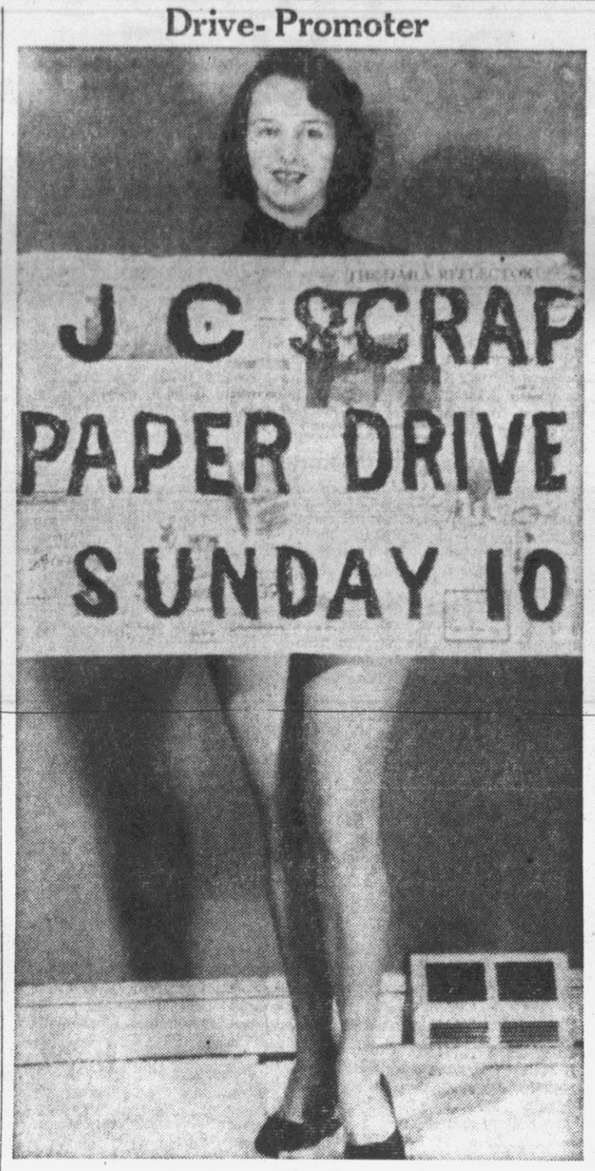

During the week February 17-24 the Disciples of Christ everywhere observe a period of fasting and prayer and compassion for the needy peoples of the earth. During this week the Christian Churches have been providing annually over $500,000.00 to help relieve suffering humanity. The need of the world is tremendous. So the members of the church and the Sunday School are urged to bring a sacrificial offering on the Sundays February 17 and February 24 for the Week of Compassion.

'Mission: U.S.A.' Is Subject Of Study Course At Church

"Mission: U.S.A." is the subject of a study course to be sponsored by the Woman's Society of Christian Service of St. James Methodist Church here. The course will be taught in two sessions, the first of which will be Monday night at approximately 8:30. The study will follow the regular monthly business meeting of the women which begins at 8 o'clock. The Minister of the Church, the Rev. J. Malloy Owen, III, will teach the course. The concluding session will be held one week later, Monday, February 18, at 8 o'clock.

The course is a survey of the America of 1957 "viewed from the vantage point of Christian opportunity and responsibility," Mr. Owen states. It begins with a glance at the wealth, international responsibility, and other characteristics of our present-day United States. 'millions on the Move," "The Family Stumps the Experts," "Alabaster Cities Gleam," "The Bars and Stripes," "The World's Biggest Audience," are some of the chapter titles of the text. James W. Hoffman, a Pennsylvania Presbyterian layman, is author of the book which is being studied by Methodist women throughout the United States this year.

Home Rule

Senator Jones believes, too, that some of the efficiency he is anticipating in the General Assembly will rub off on local governments if he can find enough legislators to agree with him on "home rule" legislation. He, like other Pitt members of the Assembly, believes in letting local governments settle their own problems and run their own shows.

That "local settlement of local situations" goes hand-in-glove with the idea of a liquor referendum, so far as the Senator is concerned. When the talk swings around to a proposed referendum, he says it's something that should be settled on an individual county basis. That way, he explains, if a county wants to be "wet" or "dry" it can be that way without having somebody on the other side of the state butting in.

A couple of local propositions will be put before the Assembly with Senator Jones' backing and he expects them to be greeted favorably. He thinks a $35,000 request for construction of a wing on the Pitt County Health Department building will pass. The new wing will house the department's Mental Health Service, which is presently serving 22 Eastern North Carolina counties.

The other local measure—establishment of a school of nursing at their chances — especially since Jones feeling "very encouraged". He thinks it will get support and he intends "to do all possible" to get the school established.

The two local measures will involve money and that might hurt hetheir chances — especially since there is so much agitation to give school teachers and other state employees a salary increase. All of the money requests mean, if they are passed, additional sources of revenue will have to be found.

Salary Increases

"I intend to work for those raises and to see that revenue for them is produced," Senator Jones states. "It is a simple question of 'how much?' we should raise the salaries, instead of 'should we? and I would like to see them raised at least ten per cent."

Reorganization of the State Highway Commission is a "generally good idea" so far as the Senator is concerned but he wants to hear legislative discussions before he casts any votes. Separation of the Prison Department from the Highway Commission is a horse of another color, however.

"I'll give a blanket endorsement to the idea of prison and highway separation," he says. "It's long past due."

The Motor Vehicles Department's armload of requests haven't cut much ice with the Senator. He doesn't care for unmarked patrol cars, chemical tests for drunken drivers or mechanical inspections of motor vehicles.

Special Permission

"I would hesitate to give the department permission to use unmarked cars because, frankly, there are some people who can't use such authority. I believe that if the Highway Patrol wants to use the cars, there should be some method of receiving special permission for specific occasions. The Governor would be a good person to grant such special authority.

"I don't believe in the accuracy of chemical tests in drunken driving cases. I've studied the various formulas and I can't satisfy myself that they're authentic and reliable."

He has little to say about the mechanical inspections that are being proposed but he believes wholeheartedly in Pitt Representative Walter Jones' proposal to require compulsory liability insurance.

"I feel we should have protection for people not otherwise protested in traffic accident situations. I'll support Representative Jones' plan."

Representative Jones takes comfort in hearing those words. He knows that Senator Jones (no relation) has a powerful lot of friends in the Senate side of the State Capitol.

Rev. J. Malloy Owen To Be Guest Speaker

The Rev. J. Malloy Owen, pastor of the St. James Methodist Church, and also known in this area for the TV program, "The Circuit Rider," will be the guest preacher at 7:30 Sunday evening at the Meadowbrook Presbyterian Church.

He will speak on the subject "Can I Know?" Special music will be brought by Ed Conway.

These evening services, begun the first of the year at the Meadowbrook Church, have proved quite popular and the public has ings this week and every week. ings this week and every weeks.

Dupont Speaker Tells Club Progress Doesn't 'Happen'

Progress never "just happens", it must be created. And developments created in research laboratories need the entire force of American business enterprise, large firms and small, to make them commercial realities, John H. Noyes, Southern District Manater for the Du Pont Company's Extension Division, said in a talk at the Greenville Kiwanis Club last night.

Noyes, who makes his headquarters in Atlanta, Ga., called the American business system a "business community", pointing out the interdependence of concerns of all sizes — large, medium and small.

Kiwanian Joe Waltz had charge of the program. President Charles E. Blair presided.

He illustrated this relationship by telling how "Dacron" polyester fiber, one of the newest man-made fibers, bevmes a useful item for customers. Du Pont makes the fibers, became a useful item for spin it into yarn, and weave it into fabric, he explained. Finally, as in the case of a man's suit, still another firm fabricates the garment and a local haberdasher, usually a small business, sells it to the consumer.

He said the Du Pont Company risked $80,000,000 during many years of research and plant construction before "Dacron" was introduced as a commercial product. No small business could develop, or even make, "Dacron" yarn, he added.

"That is the function of the big concerns," he continued, "to do the big jobs, the jobs which require vast resources of money, or personnel, or know-how, or equipment, or all of these things — the jobs which entail great risk, the jobs which consume so much time that it is frequently years before you get any return on your investment, if indeed you ever get any return — the jobs which require huge plant facilities to mass-produce a product so that its price can be low enough for all to enjoy it.

"It is these concerns — the ones that are able and willing to make the big investment and take the big risk — that are going to discover and produce the new products of tomorrow. And everyone will benefit — all levels of business, all levels of consumer."

Noyes said that business of every size must increase productivity in order to keep up with the country's growing population, which is expected to increase by 48,000,000 people in the next 20 years, and the ever increasing demand for a higher standard of living.

"As the nation gets bigger," he said, "it is going to take some big things, some big thinking and some big creating to keep the larder filled."

Safety Theme Topic PTA Meet Tuesday

A Safety theme was the main topic of the Third Street School P. T. A. Thursday evening. Mr. Willie Pate showed an interesting film "Too Young To Burn." After the film Mrs. Eloise Greene, safety chairman for the school, presented the Safety Patrol. The children introduced themselves and gave a short program.

The group was reminded that this is Founders Day Month and Mrs. Bert Stancill read the objectives of the P. T. A., which is the linking of the home, school, church and community. Mrs. Kenneth Brown gave a short report about the founders of P. T. A., reminding that the P. T. A. is 60 years old this month.

Mrs. John Allen, March of Dimes chairman thanked those who helped make the "March by Mothers" a success.

Mrs. Sue Rouse, sixth grade teacher, will not be at the school the rest of the year. Mrs. M. C. Stocks, who is replacing her, was welcomed.

The president, Mrs. David W. Mosier, reminded that the second study course will be on Feb. 14 at 8 p.m. in the Wahl-Coats School auditorium.

Patrolmen Are Teaching Rules Of Safety In Schools

By EVERETTE PARKER
Reflector Staff Writer

Last year at this time 24 people were living that are now dead as a result of careless and reckless driving, and pedestrians who failed to obey simply safety rules.

In Pitt County last year there were 285 accidents resulting in 109 serious injuries and 24 fatalities. Property damage amounted to $119,540. These figures only account for accidents investigated by members of the Pitt County Highway Patrol. These figures would be considerably higher if accidents within the city limits of Greenville and other county towns were included in addition to accidents not reportable.

The Highway Patrol feels that this high number of fatalities and accidents could have been prevented or at least reduced if the drivers and pedestrains had only known and practiced the simple rules of safety.

With the one thought of Highway Safety in mind, the patrolmen of this county are freely giving of their time and talent in an all-out effort to reduce accidents and fatalities this year and in years to come.

Headed by Corporal C.E. Whitfield, the Pitt County patrolmen are conducting a safety educational program in all the schools throughout the county and to date have presented this program to over 17,000 school students in city, town and rural areas.

This school indoctrination program is the first step toward the 1957 goal for the overall an safety plan and thus far has proven to be more successful than at first planned.

In 1954 a similar safety program was conducted in this county and according to reports from the State Highway Patrol not a single accident or fatality occurred during the year involving a student of elementary and high school age.

With the success of this program in mind as well as last year's high death rate, the highway patrol felt that another school safety program might prove to be equally as successful. D.H. Conway, Superintendent of Pitt County schools, gave his full support and arranged a schedule for the patrolmen to appear in each county school with the exception of the Greenville city schools. These schools will receive the program at a later date to be given in conjunction with the Greenville Police Department.

Participating in the safety programs have been the following patrolmen; Pfc J.B. Surles, Pfc J.W. Boykin, Ptl R.E. Tayloe, Pfc W.B. Whitehurst, Pfc. D. L. Minshew and Cpl. W. E. Whitfield.

Every member of the safety team has given freely of his time since the program began on the 16th of January, working in schools on their days off and in some cases giving lectures to school children after already having worked duty on assigned patrols.

The program, given to pupils from the First grade through the Senior class, consists of a 25 minute film on different phases of safety that was filmed by the North Carolina State Highway Patrol, lectures and the passing out of literature dealing with accidents and their prevention. Lectures by the patrolmen include a diagram of accidents for 1956 and how and where they occurred and several informative discussions on safety while walking, riding a bicycle and an automobile. A spokesman stated yesterday that over 18,000 pieces of literature had been given away in the county schools.

Since the program began early last month, the patrol headquarters has received many calls of congratulation for their effort. One lady called the other day and related a story of how her 2nd grade son came home from school on the day that the patrolmen had lectured and demanded that his parents sit down and listen to what he had to say. She stated that the little boy got his safety literature out and talked to them on the subject for over an hour, concluding by saying that they would not have to worry about him crossing the street without looking both ways again This is one of the many cases that has been called to the attention to Pitt County's safety conscious patrolmen.

Every school student has pledged his or her support to the program in the interest of highway safety and in addition were asked to discuss the accident situation with their parents on the day that the program was given in their school and to let them in turn read the literature passed out during the lectures. The highway patrol feels that Pitt County's fatality rate must be cut down and that the only way for this to come to past is for the driver on the streets and highways and the pedestrian to be safety conscious at all times.

It has been estimated that 90,000 boys and girls in North Carolina became 16 years of age sometime around January 1 and that a very large per cent of this group will obtain driving licences. By presenting safety lectures to these boys and girls in school and emphasizing the importance of safety on the highway, the Highway Patrol feels that this program will be an overall success.

Cpl. Whitfield stated yesterday, "The young boys and girls of today who are attending school are the ones that, in the near future, will have to take over the American way of life now being maintained now by adults. In order to do so they will have to live; and only one careless mistake while driving or walking might snuff out their future. With this in mind we should do everything in our power to help them safely along."

This school indoctrination program is the first step toward the 1957 safety goal set by the Pitt County patrolmen. Plans are now in effect to have a major safety program in this area each month. In addition to the schools, the patrolmen are now presenting a film and lectures to civic and church groups in various communities throughout the county.

Emphasis is also being placed on two phases of patrol functioning. There are law enforcement and engineering.

Last year 4,635 arrests were made by county patrolmen for violations of North Carolina motor vehicle laws. Despite this phenominal number of arrests, the county still suffered 24 deaths, the largest number since records were placed in effect in 1936.

The following list and percentages show the cause of accidents on North Carolina's highways in 1955: failure to yield right-of-way-18 per cent; Speeding-17 per cent; following too closely-12 per cent; on wrong side of road-10 per cent; violating stop signals-8 per cent; improper passing-6 per cent; under influence of Alcohol-7 per cent; improper signal or failure to signal -4 per cent; improper parking or starting from parked position-3 per cent; hit and run-3 per cent; and all other violations-12 per cent. (Patrol officials state that figures have not been completed for last year but run approximately the same from preliminary reports.)

Captain S.H. Mitchell, commanding officer of Troop A's patrolmen, covering 27 counties in eastern North Carolina, stated earlier in the week that law enforcement would be carried out to the limit in an effort to make the highways of this county safer this year.

He stated over 22,000 automobiles are now registered in Pitt. The tourist and military traffic however still constitutes a major problem to the patrol, many of the accidents being accounted to service men traveling to and from nearby military reservations.

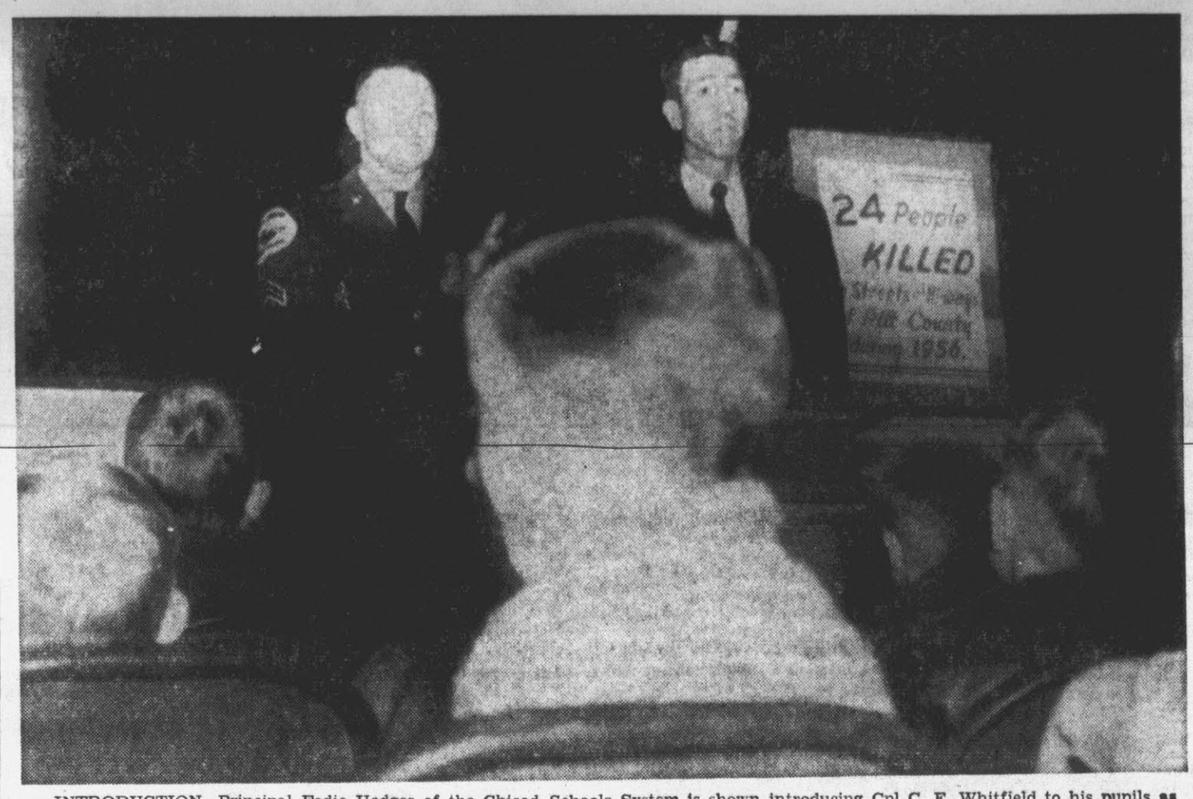

Major steps have been taken-engineering wise to make the highways safer for the driver. The Troop A commander emphasized the importance of elevated curves, well placed caution and stop signs.

Several examples of danger spots were given. These intersections and hidden curves had proven disastrous and costly in many instances, in lives and damage to personal property. This situation was alleviated in each instance by the changing of signs, in size and position and the proper elevation of the curves in question.

None of the improvements seeking to be made can be successful if cooperation from the driver is lacking. Therefore, students and adults alike must obey the rules of the driving game.

Every member of the staff of the county patrol are constantly seeking answers to the why, what, when, where and how of each accident in an effort to prevent a recurrence in the future.

Many problems face our patrolmen today but it is generally felt that by educating the school children and parents alike, by stricter law enforcement for those that never learn, and constant improvement engineering-wise on the county highways—the problems will be licked one by one. The patrolmen is your friend, help him help yourself for safety is yours an everybody's business.

INTRODUCTION—Principal Fodie Hodges of the Chicod Schools System is shown introducing Cpl C. E. Whitfield to his pupils as a preliminary to the safety lecture and program to be given in his school. These lectures are being given by the Pitt County Patrolmen on their own free time in order that the number of fatalities on the sign in the background might be reduced this year. All the schools in Pitt have been given this safety indoctrination program with the exception of the Greenville city schools who will receive it at a later date.

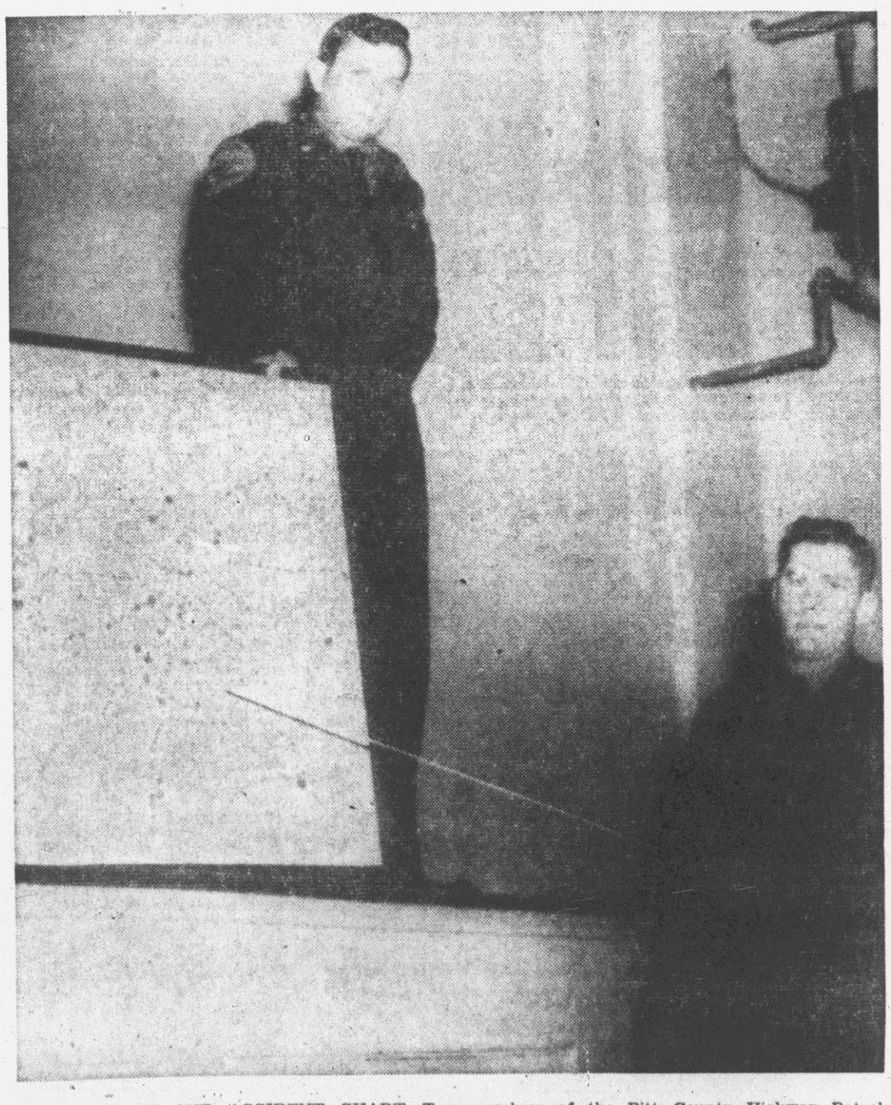

INDICATING RECORD—Pfc J. W. Boykin and Pfc J. B. Surles are shown holding the chart that represents a record number of deaths due to traffic accidents on the county highways and streets. During every lecture students had this fact impressed upon them and what they could each individually do to lower the number of fatalities this year and in the years to come.

FATALITY AND ACCIDENT CHART—Two members of the Pitt County Highway Patrol Pfc D. L. Minchew and Pfc W. B. Whitehurst are shown above indicating to pupils how and where accidents and fatalities occurred in this county in 1956. Last year more people were killed in Pitt County than any year since the records started being kept in 1938. The large red dots represent fatalities and where they occurred.

Compression Ratio Of 12-1 Will Mark Limits

By DAVID J. WILKIE
AP Automotive Editor

DETROIT (AP)—Automotive engineering sources say that some future car models may boast 12 to 1 compression ratios but at that point the practical limit will have been reached. They say, at the same time, that conventional auto engines already are close to the maximum practical level.

There are some cars now on the market with compression ratios of 10 to 1. For the most part they are models in the more expensive bracket. They are a few limited production models whose power output can be boosted close to the 400 horsepower level. Chrysler recently disclosed it got 405 horsepower from one of its special 300-C models equipped with a fuel injection system.

The system, incidentally, is not designed for general use in any of the Chrysler-made cars this year.

The engineering argument for higher compression ratios with resulting higher horsepower is that it improves over-all efficiency of the powerplant. Generally these engineering advances have required much higher quality fuel —with octane numbers getting close to the 100 level.

Both the car and the petroleum industry engineers are getting close to the point where adding to compression ratio and to fuel quality become increasingly difficult. There are, in fact, engineers in both groups who say they are reaching the point of rapidly diminishing returns on the advances in their respective fields.

It costs a lot of money to add to compression ratios above the present top level; similarly to add an octane number to fuel quality also runs into a huge sum if applied industrywide.

Probably there will be some high priced cars with 12 to 1 compression within the next few years. But when that point has been reached the engine designers will be pressing the point where they automatically move out of the conventional type of combustion in a car engine and move into the diesel field.

In the diesel area combustion results from the heat generated by compression alone. In the engine common to most American - built automobiles combustion is achieved with an electric spark at the precise instant the fuel is compressed into its tightest area.

One of the major engineering tasks brought along with the higher horsepower cars has been development of new braking systems. The auto makers' engineering staffs currently are devoting considerable time to the braking problem.

Two Bad Months For Pupil Absenteeism Due To Colds

By ANNE SINGLETON

January and February seem to be the months that the common cold prefers.

A recent study of absences in the Greenville city schools indicated a record of over 4,000 absentees in January. Of this number there were 2,063 white and 2,097 Negro children absent.

Most of the principals blamed the common cold as the main reason for this staggering number of absentees.

Flu and virus have also been prevalent among the school children recently. Measles, chickenpox, and mumps have caused a large number of the children to remain away from school.

Although January is always considered to be one of the worst attendance months of the school year, the weather during last month did not help. Bitter, cold days were recorded in January. Sprinkled in with a few "June in January" days.

When the sun decides to shine again, maybe it will chase away a lot of this sickness that seems to be widespread throughout Eastern North Carolina at this time.

Greenville city schools reported the following absentees in January: Greenville High School — 428; Brookgreen — 133; Third Street School — 514; West Greenville — 357; and Elmhurst — 431.

Eppes High School — 1152; Fleming Street School — 270; South Greenville School — 675.

Took Part In Institute Here

George Corey, manager of the Corey Plumbing Co. of Williamston, (second from left) receives a certificate indicating participation in a three-day management institute held at East Carolina College this week for heating and air conditioning dealers in the eastern counties of the state. Mr. Corey was among thirty-one business men who attended the meeting. Presenting the certificate is Dr. J. Warren Smith, director of vocational education, North Carolina Department of Public Instruction. Pictured (left to right) also are Dr. E. R. Browning, director of the East Carolina department of business education; F.H. Worsley, of the Carolina Sales Corporation, Greenville; and F. M. Sinclair of Raleigh, training specialist with the state Distributive Education Service. The institute was sponsored by the Distributive Education Service, N. C. Department of Public Instruction; the East Carolina College department of business education; and the National Heating and Air Conditioning Wholesalers Association.

Two Win Nat'l Rifle Association Awards

FRANKLIN STEINBECK

BILLY RAY TAYLOR

Two members of the Carolina Gun Club have been presented the second-highest award that can be made to members of the National Rifle Association.

Billy Ray Taylor, 16, and Franklin Steinbeck, 15, both sophomores at Greenville High School, have been presented with Expert Rifleman awards. Of the 15 rankings set up by the National Rifle Association, only Distinguished Rifleman is higher than the Expert rating.

Both Taylor and Steinbeck have been members of the local Carolina Gun Club since shortly after it was organized. Billy Ray joined in February, 1956, and is now secretary-treasurer. Franklin joined in November, 1955, and is now vice-president. The two are the only members of the club with Expert rank.

Bily Ray is a member of the N. R. A. "Fifty" Club an award for shooting a perfect target (scoring 50 our of 50 possible points); a participant in postal shooting matches; and high scorer in the Carolina Gun Club.

Franklin is also participating in the postal matches, was club champion in 1956, and has been an avid fan of shooting and hunting since he was 10.

The local club was organized in 1955 and now has an active membership of about 15 members. Meetings are held each Wednesday night at the East Carolina College rifle range, under North Dining Hall, where members participate in practice firing, safety demonstrations and other club activities. Instruction in actual firing under the direction of Bob Forney.

John Luskin is president of the club and serves with Steinbeck and Taylor. Members of the club's advisory committee are H. Frank Steinbeck, Michael M. Luskin, and W. W. Howell.

By MARTHA JANE PIERCE
Greenville High School Reporter

MARTHA

A concert directed by Herbert Fred of the University of North Carolina will be given Saturday at 8:00 p.m. in the Wright Auditorium.

John Sloan, a former science teacher and graduate of Duke, presented a demonstration of liquid air this morning in an assembly.

Frances Smith, Grayson Waldrop, and Sally Ross Simpson left Wednesday for a whirl of events at the Governor's Pre-Inaugural Ball. The three girls will be gone for three days.

Rebecca Highsmith, Nelson Dudley, and Joyce Sutton went to a birthday supper for Bobby Carroll last Friday. It was Bobby's seventeenth birthday and the girls were nice enough to let Nelson and Bobby do the dishes.

Cynthia Cranford surprised Camilla Henderson with a birthday party Saturday. Her guests were Anne Moore, Judy Jolly, Milly Bowden, Ruth Young, Jane Perkins, Lillian Moye, Beverly Dunn, Barbara Davis, Margaret Harrell, and Martha Moye. To keep the party a surprise, the girls had to park their cars near the pig pen.

Something New Found On Mars

By RENNIE TAYLOR
AP Science Reporter

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Something new on Mars—a network of irregular blue lines running through the bright red desert areas of the planet — is reported by a California astronomer.

They were seen fleetingly by Dr. Robert S. Richardson through the Mt. Wilson 60-inch telescope June 3, 1956.

Dr. Richardson noted several other details as the planet approached the earth but never saw the intriguing blue lines again. His report, one of the first to come from the 1956 observations, was published today by the Astronomical Society of the Pacific.

Mars then was 74 million miles away. It was coming toward the earth but did not reach its closest point until Sept. 7, when it was only 35,131,000 miles away.

The crooked blue lines probably are canals, Dr. Richardson said. But they are different from the long, straight lines heretofore seen by astronomers. The straight lines also have been called canals but they are a matter of much speculation. They appear during the Martian spring and fade out before autumn. They can be seen only occasionally and never have been photographed clearly.

Another difference noted by Dr. Richardson was that the desert canals were "distinctly blue" and looked something like veins running through a chunk of mineral. Other observers have described the better known straight lines as merely dark or gray.

First Presbyterian Announcements

Sunday morning the Reverend Leonard W. Topping will have as his topic "The Sin of the Censorious Spirit." The nursery, conducted by the Women of the Church to make it possible for parents of young children to attend church, will be cared for by members of Circle No. 5, Mrs. Floyd Simmons, chairman.

The School of World Missions will begin this Sunday night at 6 o'clock. Activities have been planned for each age in the church, and a nursery will be provided for small children. Families will meet at 6:00 in the Fellowship Hall for supper. Each family is asked to bring sandwiches. The program for the adult division will be given by Mr. and Mrs. L. W. Topping on "The Church in Southeast Asia." The youth groups will have their regular meetings with a program on World Missions being given in each group.

The Board of Deacons will meet Sunday night at 8 o'clock in the Fellowship Hall.

Circle No. 1, Mrs. John Barnhill, chairman, will meet Monday afternoon at 3:30 with Mrs. T. M. Watson, 1407 E. 4th Street.

Books & Stuff

By DR. ED HIRSHBERG

Quoted from one of those wonderful, leisurely editorials that sometimes appear in the N. Y. Sunday Times, labelled "Better Than TV or Talk":

"Books are still the best vehicle ever invented for taking their readers to places they have never been, for introducing them to all sorts of people in all ages, or for making readers think. Books go where TV cannot tread. Characters in books can be more lively, too, than those which enter the living room via coaxial cable and antennae, and that is something. (Amen!) Books are even better than conversation. . . . Talk in good books never bores, whether it is made by the author himself or his creations. With these voices a reader may agree or not; the beauty of a book is that it will not reply. . . . When books afford so much pleasure, fun and knowledge, it is surprising (even discouraging) that all 90-odd million American adults are not busy reading them. . . ." Most of them are busy doing something else, and we must admit we sometimes wonder why. . . .

HIRSHBERG

Announcement

We've been asked to let you know about a new book about eastern N. C., "Stories Old and New of the Cape Fear Region," retold by Louis T. Moore, who is the chairman of the New Hanover Historical Commission. It contains 60 stories concerning the local history, traditions and myths relating to the romantic Cape Fear territory. It's illustrated by Art Newton, contains 262 pages and is published by the Wilmington Printing Company in a limited edition of 1000 copies. If you want one—priced at $5.00—get in touch with Mr. Moore at 121 So. Fifth St., Wilmington, N. C., or ask This Column . . .

American Speech?

A long-time British critic of American speech habits—reminding us of Prof. Higgins in "Pygmalion"—named Baron Conesford of Chelsea has been sounding off recently about how deplorably we Americans speak. Though he admires some of our earthy slang expressions, like "bulldozed," "baby-sitter"—we didn't even think that one was slang—and "gobbledy-gook," he deplores long, elaborate words like "hospitalized," for example. "What happens when a man's cured?" asks the Baron. "Is he Dehospitalized? or Homeized??" He also is quoted as having converted Churchill's famous World War II plea, "Give us the tools and we will finish the job," into Americanese jargon, like this: "Donate us the implements and we shall finalize the assignment." Even we will concede that Churchill sounds better. . . .

Local Scene

Something we think the Community should take advantage of is the series of lectures being sponsored by the Religion in Teacher Education Committee at East Carolina. Kick-off lecture was Wednesday night, given by Kirtley Mather, Professor Emeritus of Geology from Harvard. He talked on "Religion and Science" and we have seldom heard a more inspiring and yet informative and provocative speech. . . . The series is open to everyone, and lectures will be on the next four Thursday nights, beginning for dinner at 6:15 in the college cafeteria. Coming up on Thursday the 14th: "The Relation of Religion and Medicine," by Dr. Donald Koonce, President of the N. C. Medical Society. . . . Today's Review

Mrs. John Bennett, wife of the co-ordinator of religious activities at E.C.C., contributes her perceptive comments on a new book that already has won critical acclaim in many quarters. Mrs. Bennett herself has had considerable experience in raising children. . . .

THE STORY OF GABRIELLE, By Catherine Gabrielson. Cleveland: The World Publishing Co., 1957. 118 pp. $2.75.

"Gabrielle" is a moving story of the death of a little girl, written by her mother. The facts are few—nine-year-old Gabrielle, an attractive and alert child, had an incurable form of cancer and her physical disintegration lasted over a period of several months. Yet Mrs. Gabrielson has made of these sad events a chronicle of courage and quiet beauty.

When Gabrielle's illness had been diagnosed as fatal, Mrs. Gabrielson set about to live with her daughter one day at a time. With devotion and imagination she filled the days with whatever comforts and interests she could. It was not an unhappy time. Rather it was a period of deepening acquaintance with each other and with life. As Gabrielle's physical strength ebbed, her mental powers flowed strongly and she seemed to see beneath the surface of things and perceive the meanings that lie beneath.

To be sure, Gabrielle was an unusually gifted and intelligent child, and her mother likewise an unusually sensitive reporter. But even the more ordinary mothers of more ordinary children will recognize these moments of intuitive wisdom that come with such startling freshness from children.

It could not be said that Gabrielle lost her life. When death came, she (and her mother with her) saw it as the last great step in life.

Wailed Because Operation Delay

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Temple University Hospital has a preoperative tonsil section where it's normal to hear kids wailing from sedation shots before the tonsils come out.

But nurses had to get help to quiet 4-year-old Kathi Worman, who outwailed them all.

Because of the shots? No, because Dr. Samuel Ringold told her she had a fresh cold and couldn't be operated on that day.

Another Series Of ECC Entry Tests Announced

East Carolina College has announced entrance tests for the 1957-58 term will be administered at five centers in the state during February and at the college in April. Results of the examination will be used in helping clear admission of students to the college.

The dates and places where students wishing to enter East Carolina may take the tests are as follows: Fegruary 16 — Needham Broughton High School in Raleigh, Albemarle High School, and Senior High School in Greensboro; February 23 — Jacksonville High School and Elizabethtown High School; and April 27—East Carolina College.

Each person wishing to take the examinations should notify as soon as possible the principal of the school in which he is enrolled as a student. The principal will handle details of making arrangements with the college.

The tests will include a psychological test; an English test, including a test in reading comprehension; and a mathematics test, according to Dr. Hazel Taylor of the department of psychology, director of testing at East Carolina. Members of the college faculty will be in charge of the testing program in the various centers where the examinations will be administered.

Testing will cover four and a half hours, divided into two periods extending from 9:30 a.m. to noon and from 1 p.m. to 3 p.m.

Those who plan to enroll as freshmen at East Carolina during the 1957-1958 term must take the entrance examinations, President John D. Messick of the college has announced. Any high school senior who is already planning to enter East Carolina or who may decide later to attend the college, he stated, should take the tests as early as possible because of limitations of dormitory and classroom facilities.

Faith In Human Nature Is 'Bent'

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Otto K. Olesen, the persevering Los Angeles postmaster, refuses to abandon his faith in human nature, but he's getting a bit discouraged.

Last September he furnished post office desks with 2,000 ballpoint pens, each secured by a chain.

All were stolen — including the chains.

He put out 2,000 more yesterday, but this time he also installed grim little signs pointing out that theft of government property can result in a $500 fine and a year in jail.

The pens were still intact at nightfall—at least.
