WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Hennings (D-Mo) said today "the general purport" of President Eisenhower's discussion of the Middle East with congressional leaders today was that the administration will support sanctions against Israel if the United Nations decides to apply them.

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Eisenhower will go on the air tonight to report to the American people on the Middle East situation and Israel's refusal to withdraw troops from the Gaza Strip and the Gulf of Aqaba.

However, Sen. Knowland of California, the Senate Republican leader, told reporters no decision about possible support of sanctions had been "finalized."

Knowland said that it was suggested in the meeting that an attempt be made to get the United Nations to give renewed assurances to Israel that U.N. troops will be stationed in the Gaza Strip and the Gulf of Aqaba when Israeli troops are withdrawn from those areas.

Congressional leaders of both parties met with the President for two hours and 20 minutes.

Afterwards, Hennings told a reporter: "The general purport of what the President told us is that we would have to support the United Nations if the United Nations goes for sanctions."

The White House was expected to issue a statement on the meeting later. Hennings said that this was decided upon because there were no many divergent views.

Wildlife Body Will Ask Increased License Fees

RALEIGH (AP) — The Legislature will be asked to increase the price of state hunting and fishing licenses and to enact a so-called "worm" bill.

This was decided yesterday by the Wildlife Resources Commission. State hunting and fishing licenses now cost $3.10 each.

The proposed "worm" bill would require natural bait fishermen to buy a county license. At present, these fishermen are not required to have a license if they fish in their home counties.

The commission agreed to support a bill now before the Legislature which would give the commission authority to open the season on doe deer in areas where they are too numerous.

The commission said it will seek enactment of a law to prohibit anyone from chasing a deer with a motorboat while it is swimming in the water. In some areas, it was stated, it is common pracice to chase a swimming deer with a motorboat and kill the animal when it steps ashore.

Another legislative proposal the commission will sponsor would authorize it to license and regulate commercial shooting areas. There are four in the state.

Clyde Patton, executive director of the Wildlife Commission, estimated the proposed increase in hunting and fishing licenses would bring in $469,000 a year in revenues. He said the "worm" bill would add about $200,000 a year in license revenues plus $40,000 in federal funds which would be allocated to the state because of the larger number of licenses sold.

Merle Bradley Umstead, 14, of Durham unveiled the portrait of her father. In accepting the painting, Gov. Hodges said that with the death of Umstead, "North Carolina lost a devoted son, a dedicated public servant and a great leader."

Hodges, who stepped into the governorship upon the death of Umstead on Nov. 7, 1954, said, "I know from first-hand experience the grave responsibilities and the serious problems which he faced under such terrific handicaps."

State AAUW Leader Describes Paris Conference To Chapter

Mrs. Iona Berry, one of the two North Carolina leaders in the American Association of University Women to attend the meeting of the International Federation of University Women in Paris last summer, spoke at a dinner meeting of the Greenville AAUW last night on her experiences at this twelfth conference of the International Federation.

She led her listeners to share her feeling at being a part of a great gathering of University women representing 175,000 members in 48 nations on six continents in a meeting dedicated to the furthering of international understanding, friendship, and peace.

The meeting was presided over by Mrs. Hugh T. Patterson, the president of the Greenville branch, who welcomed local guests and five visitors from the Kinston branch, including the president, Mrs. John McLean.

She then presented Dr. Beesie McNeil, a long-time friend of Mrs. Berry and chairman of the International Relations Committee, to introduce the speaker.

After reviewing the founding of the International Federation in 1919 by a group of college women from Canada, Britain, and the United States for "the enterprise of preparing some portion of human material for the league of nations that is to be," Mrs. Berry talked informally and with contagious enthusiasm of the conference.

The addresses heard in the two general meetings at the Sorbonne, mostly delivered in French, she said, emphasized the power of an understanding of each philosophy, religion, art, theater to draw the peoples of the world together, and the contribution that the scientist can make to the peace of the world by the production of food and a minimum amount of the comforts of life for all.

Exchange of people at all levels was urged as a continuing means of fostering more understanding.

Mrs. Berry also told of the social events so much enjoyed by all, including a reception at Crosby Hall in London, a tea at Reed Hall in Paris and one in a private home in Paris.

Arrangements for the dinner were in charge of Mrs. Daniel Taylor and a committee composed of Dr. Lucile Turner, Dr. Elizabeth Utterback, and Mrs. Harry Billica.

Miss Chandler Talks On Paul

Miss Mamie Chandler spoke on the Letters of Paul when The Patient Circle of The King's Daughters and Sons held its regular monthly meeting February 12 at the Mamie E. Jenkins Alumni House at East Carolina College.

Miss Eunice McGee, Mrs. Helen Snider, Miss Kathleen Venters and Mrs. L. L. Rives were joint hostesses.

The Valentine motif was used in the decorations in the hall and in the assembly room.

The president, Mrs. C. A. Bowen, opened the meeting with the prayer of the order.

Miss Chandler gave the first in her series of four lessons in the Bible Study course, the Letters of Paul. She had the group consider Paul the man, as a great apostle to the gentiles, as a great missionary who took Christianity out of Palestine to the peoples of other lands, as a great author, and as a theologian.

She traced through many of his writings Paul's idea of the church and gave the members other thoughts concerning the church to look for in the suggested reading of his letters to the Ephesians, Colossians and Romans.

A short business session was conducted. Of special interest was the report of the social service committee, which had rendered financial and material aid to a number of families during January.

The Circle voted to make a contribution through the Around the World Department of the Order to Hungarian Relief.

Mrs. Clara Moye Shackell, representing The King's Daughters at the Area One Highway Safety Meeting held in Williamston on Feb. 12, reported the findings of the conference and suggested that the Circle accept their recommendations.

The group voted to send letters to the senator and representatives from this district urging the support of legislation whereby the youth of the state be trained in safe driving.

New 1957 Yearbooks were distributed and the meeting was adjourned.

The holiday motif was carried out in decorations, emphasizing a red and green color scheme. Burning tapers in silver candleabra were used on the refreshment table.

Chatham Book Club Had Its Meeting

The Chatham Book Club had its meeting February 19 with Mrs. R. W. Stark. Though it was a rainy afternoon, only one member failed to answer roll call.

The president welcomed visitors Mrs. Dave Whitchard Jr., Margaret Rawls Stancil and Miss Janet Livingston.

Following a business session Mrs. Whitchard gave a program on interesting places in North Carolina.

First, the club visited the isolated Ocracoke. Mrs. Whitchard warned not to put off the visit here, because as soon as it is made more accessible it will lose some of its unique flavor. She showed slides of Lake Mattamuskeet, the duck hunters paradise.

From Morehead the trip continued on down the Inland Waterway to Myrtle Beach.

She touched on highlights in the Piedmont section, but indicated that she loved the beautiful mountainous section of Western North Carolina most.

Here she spent happy summers in camps and visited all the interesting places.

The hostess served cherry tarts with whip cream and coffee. From every plate waved a flag, a reminder of the birthday of the father of this country.

Furniture Fashions Go Formal

By EDWARD S. KITCH
OHIO (AP)—Furniture is going formal these days. Like mini wraps and low-cut gowns, white tie and tails, new furniture styling is being refined to meet modern American living standards and new concepts of interior decorating.

This is the impression one receives during a tour of the International Home Furnishings Market where some 45,000 buyers and sellers meet over the barrel head to line up stocks for local stores.

Traditional influences on contemporary styles show that the new decor has a benign simplicity that appeals to the eye of women whose strongest interest is in fashion magazines.

This hybrid created by the nation's top designers is sparked by strong competitive spirit among producers of home furnishings. They are aiming to please the little woman, despite the male concept that a chair is a chair.

To the interior furnisher, a chair, table, sofa or bedroom outfit with modern form and in fashionable color is a thing of beauty and a joy forever.

An idea of what the designers are creating is seen in a modernization of the old-fashioned round dining room table. A version by Charles Eames is a 45-inch diameter table with a white Micarta top on metal on a star base of polished aluminum.

Glo Ponti fashions a new arm chair in all-walnut frame with diagonal structure. The natural wood is oil finished and the upholstery is green fabric.

Paul McCobb's directional buffet server in cinnamon-finished mahogany is an example of the new clean look. It rests on an aluminum frame. The 66-inch unit consists of drawers and cabinets for storage. It also is furnished in brass framework.

A Cambridge, Mass., furniture firm shows a realistic copy of an old 18th century spoon-back chair. Its price would purchase a milk wrap.

A "conversational" chair by Laverne of New York consists of black cowhide leather stretched on a chrome steel frame. It is very high-fashioned.

A 96-inch long hi-fi, TV, bar and storage unit by John Abbate indicates how this growing mode of home entertainment is shaping up.

A 19th century heirloom recreation of a breakfast China cabinet has been modernized into a transitional piece. Of faded mahogany, the 82-inch high by 63-inch wide by 14-inch deep unit is aimed at the furnisher wanting one impressive piece in the home.

One of Edward Wormley's new designs in this market is a parakeet chair. Its scissored construction is of natural ash with cane back. Cushions are furnished in a thistle (purple), brown and pale blue.

Even grandfather's clock has been modernized. Fabricated of plastic, fluorescent tubes create a homey glow in the base which is fitted with a planter. The clock chimes on the hour and half-hour and the pendulum swings a cozy tick.

After the program the hostess invited guests and members into the dining room where from an appointed table they served themselves dainty party sandwiches, ham biscuits, cheese straws and coffee.

Mrs. Garrett passed a tray of meringue shells filled with black cherry ice cream and topped with miniature American flags, carrying out the theme of George Washington's birthday.

Leaf Surplus Is Of Wrong Type

With surpluses of tobacco in storage at an all-time peak, how could an abnormally short crop in 1957 adversely affect the export market for American flue-cured tobacco?

That question has been asked countless times since Rep. Herbert Bonner introduced his bill that will authorize a 10 per cent increase in tobacco allotments for 1957.

Figures cited by Rep. Bonner indicate the 1957 tobacco crop—based on present allotments—will fall 300 million pounds short of meeting the annual demand for flue-cured leaf. Certainly there would be no need for an acreage increase this year if surplus stocks of leaf could be dipped into to fill the market demands.

Unfortunately, that is not the case. A large portion of the 673 million pounds of tobacco now held by the Stabilization Corporation is made up of the pale, slick types of tobacco which lack the body and aroma purchasers are seeking. Stabilization stocks of the heavier, more bodied tobacco which purchasers want are virtually nil.

The annual production of heavier, more bodied tobacco has been snapped up by domestic and foreign purchasers on warehouse floors. With the change in purchasers' emphasis from light to heavy tobacco in the past few years, production of the heavier leaf has not kept pace with demand. This year foreign companies particularly will be looking for these heavier tobaccos to fill their dwindling stocks.

If a sufficient quantity of these more desirable types of tobacco are not available from American growers, purchasers will look elsewhere for substitutes. Once lost to the American tobacco growers, foreign markets are difficult to recover. And foreign markets at the present time account for one-third of the total consumption of American flue-cured tobacco.

A two-fold program this year could go a long way toward removing the problems which now face flue-cured tobacco producers.

1. This year growers must be permitted and encouraged to produce a crop of the quantity and quality to satisfy the demands of domestic and foreign purchasers.

2. A government-financed cut-rate foreign sale of undesirable types of tobacco now held by Stabilization could remove the top-heavy surplus which is a continuing threat to the tobacco program.

Cheerful View Of Economy

By ELMER ROESSNER
If declines in the stock market have upset you, if the wave strikes has stepped up your blood pressure, and if your hair is beginning to curl in worry over an imminent recession, relax a bit!

Let's start the week cheerfully by looking at some favorable interpretations. The happiest of these was the Valentine's Day report of the Chicago Federal Reserve Bank.

"Continued forward momentum of the American economy is carrying midwinter business to unprecedented levels. Industrial production started 1957 two per cent above the year-ago figure. Wage and salary employment . . . was about 1,000,000 higher than a year ago. Manufacturers' order backlog for machinery are holding at high levels reflecting business plans to increase spending on such items in 1957. Steel production was virtually at full capacity during January . . . Wage payments moved to a new high ground."

A BIT OF CAUTION
However, it should be noted that Guaranty Trust Company of New York, which has a fine reputation for business perspicacity as the Chl Fed, states, "There has been little perceptible change in the pattern of business activity during the early weeks of 1957. The high levels of employment, output, income and sales that characterized the latter months of 1956 have obviously carried over, but so too have the troublesome question marks."

It mentions automobiles, corporate profits and possible setbacks in steel production and expansion plans by General Electric and General Motors.

On the other hand, the Chl Fed states, "Sharply higher sales may be in store for retailers in 1957." The bank hedges this prediction with the notation that "the outlook for big gains hinges on two important questions: 1.—Will consumers be willing to take on much additional debt during the year? 2.—Will the personal saving rate decline from the high level recorded in 1956?"

There's cheer from other outlookers, too.

Edward J. Verity, staff economist for Lukens Steel, has gone on record as saying there will be no major depression over the next 20 years. He declared total output of goods and services will increase approximately 11 per cent a year for the next 20; that industrial production will increase 5 per cent a year; that the general price level will rise 3 per cent a year, and that steel production will increase at an annual rate of 4 per cent. His only hedges: a hot war or total disarmament would change the outlook.

STILL ANOTHER VIEW
Meanwhile, Seymour J. Phillips, president of the big Phillips-Jones shirt company, told the National Association of Retail Clothiers and Furnishers that the economy would continue at its present peak and that 1957 would be one of the best years in history for the clothing industry.

He added that "despite Administration talk of inflation leading to a depression, the fact is we are now and will continue for a long time in an inflationary period. . . . Fear in high circles about a change in this state of affairs will not automatically start a downward movement."

And Sinclair Weeks, Secretary of Commerce, says, "business is good and the outlook is good."

NEW BOOKS OF USE TO BUSINESSMEN
Among new books of more than usual interest to businessmen are:

"How to Build an Infant's, Children's and Sub-Teens' Business," by R. Duffy Lewis and Dorothy Store; 97 pages, $6, by Fairchild, New York.

"The World is Catching Up," by Harry Riemer; 638 pages in two volumes, $10, also by Fairchild; reprints of reports to Daily News Record on a round-the-world tour. The theme is that the tendency of old civilizations to produce new clothes is evidence that they are on their way to catch up with the American standard of living.

"Organizing for Effective Systems Planning and Control," a special report; 192 pages, $4.50, by American Management Association, New York.

A Bill Sure To Cause 'Favoritism' Charges

If North Carolina is to effectively cope with its horrible highway death rate, it can not afford to let down the bars on enforcement or punishment of those who are found guilty of highway regulations violations.

The mandatory one-year revocation of operators licenses of persons convicted of drunken driving has been an effective weapon in combatting the hazard of intoxicated drivers on the highways. To be sure there was a time when jurors appeared reluctant to convict a man of drunken driving because it meant he lost his license for a year. Time has fairly well taken care of that, however.

A bill now before the legislature would remove the mandatory year's revocation of drivers license in the case of drunken drivers. It would give the Department of Motor Vehicles discretionary power to take a man's license for anywhere from 60 days to a year upon a drunken driving conviction.

It is a bill which would cause the Department of Motor Vehicles to be flooded with requests for the minimum revocation period. It would immediately be in politics and influence into the matter of which drunken driver should have his license revoked for a few months and which should have his revoked for a year.

Such would not be in the interest of highway safety in North Carolina.

The bill, if it becomes law, will be a serious blow to the state's highway safety program.

As the statute for revoking the licenses of drunken drivers now stands it is completely fair and it has proven itself effective. Is there any good reason for changing it to something which would be ineffective and perhaps unfair to individual citizens of the state?

Leadership Has Difficult Role

By LYNN NISBET

CONTROL—Two weeks after convening of the General Assembly there is less distinction among divergent groups and less evidence of leadership control than seemed apparent on the opening day. Chairmen of the important committees, who constitute the heart-core of administration forces, are trying to commendations for a minimum ten per cent bonus.

It is apparent, however, that their task has been made difficult by the somewhat surprising and generally unsatisfactory recommendations for pay increases for school teachers and State workers generally. Employees of State agencies, departments and institutions, including the public school system, had hoped for larger pay raises, but had confidently anticipated recommendations for a minimum ten per cent bonus.

Administration budget proposals for less than that raise, and to be granted on selective rather than across the board basis, was disappointing. The fact that Sen. Joe Eagles and Rep. Carl Venter, who head the respective appropriations committees, helped to prepare the budget assures they will attempt to hold the line at budget level.

While control of legislative machinery was to some extent jeopardized by the disappointing salary recommendations, the effectiveness of opposition was depreciated by eager-beaver sponsorship of bills calling for higher pay before proponents of larger raises could organize their forces.

FREE—WHEELING—The budget bill, however disappointing, its provisions might be to those who earn their living working for the State, came to the floor backed by the prestige of a popular Governor and the traditional sanctity of the budget bible. It was based on careful study of potential sources of revenue to pay the bill for salaries and other expenses.

The State Board of Education, the United Forces for Education, the North Carolina Education the United Forces for Education, the North Carolina Education Association (composed of public school administrative and instructional personnel), the State Employees Association and the State Highway Employees Association all had done a lot of study along the same lines.

It is no secret that leaders in these organizations regret the precipitate introduction of bills, which they cannot afford to oppose but which do not effectuate their own program, calling for higher pay. They would have liked better timing on the introductions and to have the bills go in with organization rather than individual sponsorship.

ON USING THE PASSIVE TALENTS

These lines are written for those who are in or near the days when the doctor repeats the words "slow down." The lines might be "slow remembering" likewise by those whose inactive days are in the future.

Sooner or later we reach the spot when we can say, "I have done that — had that experience — no need to wear myself out repeating it." Let me explain that this does not mean putting oneself on the shelf. It does mean knowing when to let go gracefully. In house decorating, gardening, sports, entertaining, for example, see the attendant who in our necessity we want to take hold, push through to completion or perfection. By the time period when amendments are offered to the budget appropriations bill, is important only for psychological effect. Except in emergencies no special appropriations are considered until the budget bill has been enacted.

Long standing custom has been to fit independent bills dealing with items in the budget book into the master act, rather than vote upon them separately.

Strategists for the educational forces and other State workers are planning a course of action to get their ideas written into the big bill. They appreciate all the help they can get, but they realize that a mass offensive rather than individual snipping will be required to break the entrenched administration lines.

SPEECHES—Next to the presiding officers the respective chairmen of the Journals Committee speak more often than any other members of the General Assembly, rivaled by the chaplains and exceeded by the reading clerks. Their speeches are short, although occasionally a bit of wit is injected.

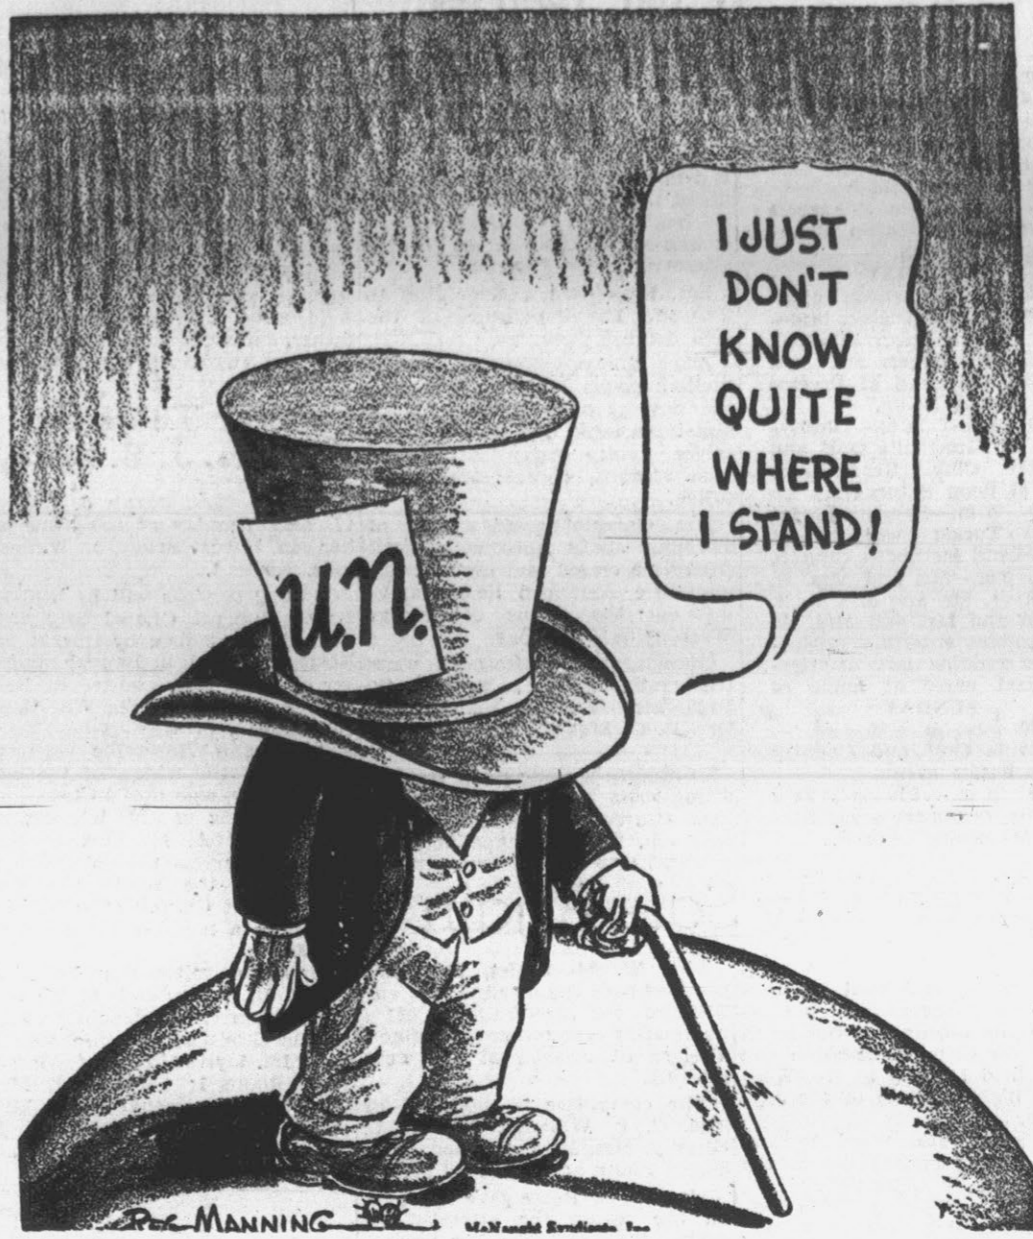

First order of business after formal calling to order and opening prayer is approval of the preceding day's journal. When that item is reached the committee chairman, this year Sen. Paul Stoner of Davidson or that side and Rep. Clarence Stone of Forsyth across the hall, rises to say something like this: "The journal of yesterday has been read, and I move that it be approved as written." (They are careful never to commit themselves on the point of who read it.)

The reading clerks have more to say every day than anybody else. They must read the title or caption of each bill, and resolution, and many times the full text of the paper. They must entone every time the bill or resolution comes up. "The General Assembly of North Carolina do enact," or the House of Representatives resolve, the Senate concurring," etc. So it is that the voices of Bill Byrd in the Senate and Bill Arthur in the House are heard more than any others.

Rules require that each branch be opened with prayer. For many years a Raleigh or visiting minister was invited to lead the prayer. In event no minister was available the reading clerk led the members in reciting the Lord's Prayer.

Casual chaplains sometimes seized the opportunity to make political propaganda speeches in their prayers. For the past 10 or 12 years permanent chaplains have been appointed by the presiding officers and carried as regular employees of the General Assembly. Veterans in the positions are Rev. Alfonso Jordan, blind but alert, in the House and Rev. E.C. Durham, a super-annuated Methodist preacher and poet, in the Senate.

I'm Not Lost

by DON SCHLIENZ

Visibility Is 360 Degrees

Ever have the feeling of being watched?

We have it at home, so we're in the market for a larger fish-bowl.

Don't go away, I'll explain. You see there's two tiny goldfish living a small bowl they call "home" atop the radio cabinet. As homes go it isn't much; a one-room affair with bright pebbles on the "floor" and a small bit of water plant floats around. No radio, no TV, no reading material in their lives. So they watch us.

Lack of privacy never seems to bother them. People may complain of "living in a goldfish bowl," but for this pair of inquisitive members of the carp family it represents a heaven for knot-hole watchers. Think of it; 360-degree visibility.

In the few weeks since these two fish came into our lives I can not remember a time of seeing them when they didn't see me first. As a general thing, I might pick up stray dogs, stray cats or injured birds. Memory does not recall ever living with two live goldfish in the house.

Fish fanciers think well enough of their hobby to buy specimen; but I doubt they would give these two a second glance. For myself, a fish's place is in the water where I'm fishing . . . and they should be hungry enough to think my bait looks appetizing. This wild dream seldom materializes. But to get back to these finny members of the Human-Watching Society:

We acquired them as a gift in a sales-promotion scheme, from a clerk who was obviously anxious to dispose of her charges so they wouldn't die off over Sunday. (This is no complaint, merely an explanation.) So our household was enriched by two new members. Their food costs next to nothing . . . and Little Buddy thought they were just wonderful. They're ideal guests. No complaints, easy to please, require very little room and one feels no compulsion to entertain. But, whenever I'm around they fix me with that unblinking stare. One is led to wonder just who lives in a fishbowl, or they.

Other Editors Saying-- Like A Ton Of Bricks

(Henderson Dispatch)

In a recent study, the U.S. Chamber of Commerce concluded that this country's aggregate public and private debt today is close to a trillion dollars. It said the load could be carried if prosperity lasts. But there was the warning that "a burden which feels like a featherweight during prosperity may feel like a ton of bricks in a depression."

The mind of man can only with difficulty, if indeed at all, comprehend the magnitude of a trillion dollars — or a trillion anything else. Such astronomical figures are something to roll around on the tongue rather than for mental assimilation.

The U.S. Chamber's calculations indicated a debt load of more than $16,000 for every American family, and $4,650 for every man, woman and child in the country. Does your family have its share, or do you as an individual possess the $4,650 defined as the part of all Americans? Well, some do and many do not. And those who have cannot compensate for those who have not. That leaves a lot of money — or debt — hanging in mid-air.

Astronomical obligations of this character should be sufficient to put the brakes on new deficit spending, or even on increased cash outlays for public activities. But they won't. At most, there will be only a shrug of the shoulders, with an attitude of letting life or somebody else do the worrying. Unfortunately, however, even they are not too concerned, as witness latest spending proposals.

It used to be, a short few decades ago, that debt was something to be shunned. Nobody wanted anybody else to know he owed money. Now, in these latter times, it is the popular thing to do to borrow money. Many give it little thought if only they can obtain credit. The rainy day is considered to be so far off as not to be a threat or even a serious concern. But for both government — at all levels — and for the individual, payday could be nearer than is supposed.

Chief comfort in this debt predicament is that nearly everybody is in the same boat. Not all, however, would fare alike in some emergency should it come.

Reasonable debt for legitimate and worthy purposes is a wholesome condition. It is easily possible, however, for one to wade into the water over his head, and many have. If government hasn't it is not far removed from the brink.

The U.S. Chamber's deductions should be a sobering thought for contemplation.

So be it.

That's why a larger bowl is in demand . . . something big enough to contain a turreted castle or a tiny palace with minarets and hidden corridors. I will buy them all this in the hope they will come to enjoy a modicum of privacy, and also restore some to me.

When A Man Is 45

By HAL BOYLE
NEW YORK (AP) — When a man isn't 45 years old—or, naturally, whether he is — he leaves an area of doubt.

Life is just about to settle this area for me.

Tomorrow will destroy the doubt. It'll be a year older. Will I feel like when 19 years old, I went in for collegiate wrestling — middleweight champ, night hours, co-educational. Or will I feel like two years old when I still insisted on autographing diapers?

The thing I am sure of is that I won't feel like 45, which I won't be.

Who am I? Where did I come from? Where do I want to go? When I was a child I looked into a mirror and asked myself these questions. There was none to give me answer. Now again, after the trouble of many years of living, I ask the same question. The answer is the same.

I walk the walls of this world — as every man must — and I see no security except the courage to walk and defend these walls.

What does a man learn while walking . . . When he isn't 45? He has seen so many topple from the wall of this world from pride, envy, malice and hate that he knows that for these reasons — and other reasons — they no longer walk.

But in his walk along the wall he also misses many he met along the way — from kindergarten to Korea and beyond — who he treasured and who had every ability except how to escape death. Some didn't try. Some did. In any case frost changed and held them.

When a man isn't 45 years old, where is he?

Time, the Merlin of the heart, stern calendar of the blood, assures an anxious vein, casts a forward shadow on the splendid tapestry of life's wonder, performance and desire.

When I was a child, since I was a child, life was always a thing of awe to me. And in my mind there was always an interior clock.

The clock didn't give me a particular message. I was just aware of it. As the people I knew rose and disappeared after their fun in the sun or their defeat in the dark, I had the feeling that time was going by, too, and sometimes wondered whether I would join them in sunlight or shadow.

But I never had much of a sense, really, of either going or staying after I grew up. I suppose I felt I would probably be around a little longer, why I don't know.

When a man isn't 45 years old, he naturally wonders — since the law doesn't guarantee he won't be 55 or 105 — who will walk the walls of this world if he should no longer walk them, as in time he won't.

Will they be his kin? Will they stand upright? If they are strangers, will they walk taller? Will the wall be walked and defended by as high as he thought? Or just a hurdle or a careless step for the people of tomorrow?

These are merely a few of the thoughts of a man who has spent most of his life not being 45 years old.

Wonder what the world looks like to a fellow on his 46th birthday? Tell you tomorrow.

Opinions In Brief

MONTICELLO, IND. TIMES: "In his State of the Union message to Congress, President Eisenhower devoted considerable space to the subject of inflation. . . . The chief executive noted that the nation stands on a peak of prosperity. He then went on to say: "But in any realistic appraisal, even the optimistic analyst will realize that in a prosperous period the principal threat to efficient functioning of a free enterprise system is inflation. This was a clear warning, supported by further remarks about the responsibility of government, business, labor and individual citizen to guard against any further undermining of the dollar."

View No Basis For Acute Alarm

By RAY TUCKER

WASHINGTON High prices and consequent consumer caution will be highlighted as danger signals to continued prosperity in a forthcoming report of the Joint Congressional Economic Committee, which is dominated by Democrats. Chairman is Representative Wright Patman of Texas, long-time foe of Administration policies in this field.

Many economists, however, sympathize and agree with him, although friendly to the man in the White House. In their opinion, the situation is soft, spotty, insecure, and extremely uncertain. With a loss of $18 billion in paper values since 1956's high, Wall Street seems to share their fears. There is a general feeling of instability in the air.

These experts discern no reason for acute alarm. Indeed, they consider current discussions and warnings to be a favorable sign, since it contrasts with the blind optimism that led us into previous recessions and depressions.

Although the basic cause for concern is inflation, the long-term worry is deflation, or a drying-up of purchasing power because of excessive costs of both heavy (durables) and light (consumers') goods.

MASS MARKET NECESSARY FOR PROSPERITY Despite the puzzling technical lingo which beclouds these grave problems, the key man and the unknown quantity in the situation is the ultimate consumer — the buyer. In our vast and integrated economy, only a mass market can support and accelerate continued economic expansion and prosperity.

And there are indications that John Q. American and his wife are weary to the point of rebellion over today's living costs, as the forthcoming report will warn. The Patman Committee has assembled undeniable evidence of this trend to substantiate admissions by such illustrious figures as President Eisenhower, Secretary Humphrey and Herbert Hoover.

HOME BUILDING FALLING OFF The construction of new homes and apartments is falling off because young couples cannot afford them, despite a startling increase in population. As in wartime, they are huddling in inadequate quarters, or they are moving in with the old folks. Shortages are especially noticeable in low-cost houses. High interest rates, so Chairman Patman believes, and the Administration's "light money" program are responsible for this scarcity and decline.

Despite record-breaking sums spent on advertising, such articles as automobiles, radio and television sets, household furniture and appliances have shown a downturn. To weaken customer resistance, distributors have had to offer unusual bargains in all lines. Although they may stimulate sales, it means smaller profits and a runoff of inventories which they hesitate to replenish.

Even such necessities as food and clothing are moving slowly. Buyers are becoming more selective and crowding the stores only for sales. Even when bargain offerings boost the volume of sales, profits are down. PURCHASING POWER GREATLY REDUCED Two factors contribute to customer caution, in addition to high prices. That key person—the buyer—has gone in debt up to his neck in installment purchases, charge accounts and borrowings. Moreover, largely because of soaring taxes (Federal, state, local), he has only a small total of liquid savings. It is estimated that people with below-$5,000 incomes have nothing put by.

Thus, the sometimes "forgotten man" of our economic system has a negligible amount of money to buy current goods, and nothing to save as a basis for capital expansion, which Secretary Humphrey regards as so necessary.

For all these reasons, plans for building and expanding plants may be curtailed sharply, save for those engaged in production for national defense and public works. Management will expand only in anticipation of a steady growth in demand for its products. Such a cutback would bring unemployment.

In short, the goose that lays the golden egg of prosperity—the buyer—is beginning to feel like a "gone" goose. There is valid reason for worry on the part of the three men who have only figurative hair to "curl"—Eisenhower, Humphrey and Hoover.

Danforth Foundation Grant Goes To Local Director Of College BSU

Miss Gloria Blanton, director of the Baptist Student Union at East Carolina College, has been awarded a Campus Christian Worker Grant by the Danforth Foundation for twelve months study toward her Ph.D. Degree.

One of twenty-one to receive this award, Miss Blanton will be allowed to attend the university or seminary of her choice in the United States.

Notification was received last week by Miss Blanton from Dr. Kenneth Brown, executive secretary of the Danforth Foundation. The grants were awarded, according to Dr. Brown, to persons "vocationally committed to extra classroom campus Christian work who show unusual potentialities of leadership in this field."

Miss Blanton revealed yesterday that a twelve months leave of absence was granted her by the Executive Committee of the General Board of the Baptist State Convention on Friday.

Her leave of absence from her present job will become effective in September of this year. Miss Blanton has applied to the graduate schools of both Duke University and Yale. She will announce later which school she will attend.

Her plans are to return to Greenville and her job with the Baptist Students here after completing the year of study made possible by the Danforth Grant.

In talking of her reactions, Miss Blanton stated, "My roots are here and I have sunk them deep. I feel a sense of sadness at leaving and shall look forward to returning. This opportunity is one which I feel I must take advantage of."

Miss Blanton expressed the feeling that this year of study will better prepare her for the work which she has headed locally for the past ten years.

She recalls when she came to the job, East Carolina College had about 600 Baptist Students. Now the enrollment has grown to include some 1100 students with Baptist affiliations.

"While I can't hope to reach all of these, I feel that a year of study will help me to better meet the challenge of the job," she stated.

Miss Blanton, formerly of Teachey, is a graduate of Wake Forest College and holds a Masters Degree in Christian Education from Columbia University and Union Theological Seminary in New York City.

In Greenville she has become a familiar figure in church and civic circles. She is a past president of the Greenville Business and Professional Women's Club, a past secretary of the Pitt County Allied Church League and headed the Greenville City March of Dimes Drive for two years.

At present she is serving as publicity chairman of the South Roanoke Federation of Baptist Business Women's Circles.

It was disclosed that Robert Adrian Brown, 1950 graduate of the Robersonville High School, would receive his certificate as soon as he had completed the experience requirement.

Formal presentation of certificates to the new CPAs will be made at an awards dinner to be held in Chapel Hill on March 22.

High Point Quint Invades ECC Gym Tonight In Final Bid For Third Place

High Point, making a last bid for third-place honors in the North State loop, invades East Carolina's Memorial Gymnasium tonight, for the final home game of the Pirates' 1956-57 card.

The Panthers, with a 9-5 mark, are currently running in fourth place, behind Lenoir Rhyne, Western Carolina and Elon. ECC, with a 6-8 record, is sixth.

Point, the Panthers outscored their conference foes 111-94. East Carolina's Don Harris grabbed high honors in that match with 34 big points, his best output of the year.

Dark Horse Duke Upset By Virginians; UNC Still Hot

Duke University, the last dark horse of the Atlantic Coast Conference this season, got a bottle of bleach dumped on its tail last night from the most unexpected source.

Virginia's Cavaliers, previously out of luck in all but one of 11 conference starts, overhauled Duke in a strong second-half surge at Charlottesville, Va., and marked a 90-81 victory.

The game left him with a season average of 30.41 points per game. Furman had as many as three men on the janky Kentuckian during the game.

Yanks Add More Pitching Power

NEW YORK (AP)—Casey Stengel, the master manager who says "I've never seen a man yet who couldn't use a pitcher," today can add Art Ditmar and Bobby Shantz to a staff he already had figured deep enough to bring his New York Yankees still another American League pennant.

Ditmar, a 27-year-old right-hander, and Shantz, a stubby, 31-year-old southpaw, were the key men for the Yankees in a 13-player trade with the Kansas City Athletics yesterday.

Along with the two new front-line pitchers — two, that is, if Shantz can lose his sore arm troubles — the Yankees also received infielder Wayne Belardi, southpaw pitcher Jack McMahan and two players yet to be named.

Pastrano Fights Big John Holman In Tonight's Bout

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP)—Fourth-ranked heavyweight Willie Pastrano pits his lightning fists and agility against the sledge-hammer punch of eighth-ranked Johnny Holman in a nationally televised 10-round match tonight.

Pastrano, touring a 45-4-4 record, and reckoned for a title shot in a year or so, is the 5-17 favorite. Holman, fighting to remain a long-shot title contender, lists a 30-13-1 record but his wins came against worthier opponents over a longer pull and include 18 knockouts against Pastrano's eight.

The third in a series of study courses sponsored by the PTA City Council will be held tomorrow night at the West Greenville School Auditorium at 8 p.m.

A film entitled "The Angry Child," describing the work of a mental health clinic, will be presented.

Paul Curtis, psychiatric social worker at the Pitt County Mental Health Clinic, and Dr. Luciano L'Abate, psychologist, will be present to discuss the work of the local mental health clinic and answer questions about its function.

The discussion will revolve itself around the child whose present disturbances manifest themselves in school difficulties.

ELIZABETH SEIFERT'S NEW NOVEL
A Call for Doctor Barton

CHAPTER 22
 On the fourth day after the court hearing, Grady Barton took his medical contract with the towns of the Hollies and went to see Judge Cowan. Could Oren Kopp, he asked, force him to leave?
 The judge made a show of reading the doctor's contract, which of course he well knew. "Has he bothered you?" he asked. "Since that morning?"
 No. People keep quoting his threats to me."
 "I see." The judge folded the paper and laid it on the desk. "Legally, your position is firm. Grady, the court said you had committed no fault." He sat looking at Grady, but not smiling.
 "What I'd like to persuade myself," said Grady, "is that the dismissal of the charge indicates that no one really believes I would hurt a child."
 Cowan said nothing.
 "It doesn't mean that, you think?"
 "I don't know, Grady. The facts are there — you were charged, and the charges were dismissed. But meanings — they change with the weather, with a person's disposition. Kopp is definitely being vindictive. He may talk himself out. Or he may get others to believe him. People are odd, you know. If enough people listen to Kopp, things could be difficult here for you. Not in a legal sense, but really — actually."
 "Yes," Grady admitted. "I see what you mean. It's a funny thing, sir — when I took routine care of Judy Nolan, I was praised far beyond my merit. Then, when I took just as routine care of Kopp's grandchild, I find myself threatened with destruction."
 Cowan's blue eyes twinkled. "Grady, you're a thoughtful young man. You must have given some consideration as to why rural communities — places like the Hollies — don't attract, and keep, young doctors."
 "Well . . ."
 "The work isn't too hard. And I think you've found out, once established to a modest extent, that a man can make a living."
 "Yes, sir,"
 "Granted," said Judge Cowan, seeming to go off at a tangent,

Solution of Yesterday's Puzzle

Grady stood up. "I don't know if the fight's worth doing, sir," he said firmly, "but I'm ready to give it a try."
 Judge Cowan nodded. "That's what I thought," he said quietly, "when I agreed to be on the committee asking you to come here and practice. I thought you were that kind of man."
 On that high note of resolve, it was rather deflating to have it seem for a time that the fight was not going to be a very tough one. Though Grady realized that his own busy-ness might have blunted his awareness of adverse currents.
 He was busy and the town certainly needed a doctor during the epidemic of measles then running among the children of the town, and the wave of flu sweeping through the ranks of all ages. For two weeks Grady had so many house calls to make that he could scarcely keep office hours. He warned his fellow Lions that he might not be able to serve on the committee for their stunted dinner.
 He decided to wait, however, until a day or so before the event before releasing June Cowan from her date with him for that affair. He'd had only glimpses of her during these two weeks, and as sure as he'd tell her he couldn't make the dinner, Mo Chronister would take over her entertainment. That Grady hoped to prevent.

 The stunt and dinner were planned for the last Friday in January, their regular meeting night, and on Wednesday of that week, Grady could say he thought he might make it. On Thursday he talked to June and confirmed their date. They made a few plans.
 The group would go first to the Junction filling station where a police car would assist the Lions in choosing their guests for the evening entertainment. The committee consisted of Grady, Norvell Lee and Mo Chronister.
 "Virginia is going with Mo, I think," June broke in.
 "Oh?" What was Henry Preston saying to that? He and Virginia often helps Mo out, June went on to explain.
 "It isn't necessary that he drag a date."
 "No, but — well, I think this sort of arrangement will work out, Grady. Considering everything . . ."
 Grady's free hand clenched upon his desk blotter. "Considering that Dr. Barton was a married man," was what June had left unsaid. Virginia, "as good as engaged to Henry Preston, would make a chaperone-type second girl in their foursome. And those matters had to be thought of, for everyone's sake."
 Grady concluded the arrangements by the phone down and sat frowning at it. As soon as he possibly could, he must set things straight here in the Hollies about his status as a divorced man. He only hoped he could do it before Kopp, or some character like him, began ugly questionings about the doctor's wife.
 The simplest way to handle the matter would be to go to the committee, state that he'd not told the whole story — in his anxiety to come to the Hollies as their doctor — admit that he shouldn't have done this, say that he was sorry, and . . . Kopp would ask what other lies he had told.
 Grady groaned aloud. But he still meant to "do something," and as early as the next week. Meanwhile the Friday night stunt had to be gone through, and with as much fun as possible. For everyone.
 He did the things required of him as chairman of the "stunt" committee. He briefed the young people who would be on the welcoming committee with him, and checked with the chairman of the dinner committee to be sure their plans meshed.

 Friday turned out to be a cold evening, but clear. A huge moon hung in the eastern sky, and the people waiting at the junction were in good spirits. It was only ten minutes before six when the police radio announced that they were bringing in a car.
 "Honeymooners, I'll bet," commented the officer.
 Everyone was delighted! The welcoming committee buttoned into their wraps and went out upon the lighted apron of the junction station.

that young men don't always choose the medical profession for high ethical reasons of noble self-sacrifice and so on — it must be in the mind of most doctors that they should be allowed to practice the art of healing unhandicapped by the effects of personal prejudice and vindictiveness."
 Grady leaned forward in his chair. "That's just it, sir," he said eagerly.
 "Small towns give a clear field to personalities. Grady. In the city you can escape them or cover over such bruising experiences as occur. But in a place like the Hollies — what one man says and does and thinks is loudly evident."
 "You're saying that a shortage occurs because most doctors won't be bothered to fight for a right to practice."
 "Some in small town practice," said his friend, "are too incompetent to make a good thing of practice in the city. Some can bring themselves to compromise with the Koppes."
 "And a few of them — a very few — are ready to fight the Koppes. Some even think it's worth doing." Judge Cowan lifted an eyebrow at his visitor.

MOST POWER OF THE Low-Priced 3

You get a power reserve in a Dodge Power Giant that pays off every mile you drive. From 204-hp. pick-ups to giant 232-hp. tandems, Dodge gives you the most power of the low-priced three . . . actually as much as 31% more.

Extra power means faster acceleration, safer, passing . . . cuts your time costs every trip. It cuts operating costs, too, because it lets your Dodge engine loaf under loads that make less powerful engines whine with strain. Less strain means less wear, fewer repairs. And the special design of these Power Giant V-8's delivers full-powered performance on regular gas.

More power lets you haul bigger loads. That's why Dodge can offer bigger payload capacities in every weight class. For instance, the Dodge 300 pick-up packs up to 73% more payload each trip than comparable competitive makes. And that's the kind of payload advantage that many times means one trip instead of two.

Dodge is the easiest handling truck on the road — with the shortest turning radius for easier parking and quicker zip-in-and-out maneuverability. Power steering is available for most models. And, for the first time on any truck, Dodge offers the extra convenience of a push-button* automatic transmission for the easiest driving ever.

MOST PAYLOAD OF THE LOW-PRICED 3 . . .
 Dodge pick-ups haul as much as 73% more than other low-priced makes.

Combine all these features with smart new Forward Look styling and comfort-designed cabs and you've plenty of reason to take a good look at a Dodge. Why not do it soon? You'll find your Dodge dealer's deal will help you decide on a new Dodge Power Giant right now!

*Available on all low-tonnage and Forward-Control models.

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP)—Steels and oils paced the stock market to a rise early this afternoon after two sessions of scant change.

Pivotal stocks were up fractions to a point or more in moderate turnover.

After a fairly active start, trading quieted.

At the outset, the oils picked up where they left off yesterday's vigorous rise after the Texas Railroad Commission increased the state's allowable oil production for March.

The sympathetic response by other stocks was only temporary yesterday. But today most other groups tagged along to a greater or less extent.

A Wall Street report that the Federal Reserve Board may ease the supply of money for the tax-paying period was an encouraging factor in a market which has been depressed for months by the tight money situation.

Soco-Mobil and Gulf Oil were both ahead better than a point. Smaller gains were registered by both other leading oil, including Soco-Mobil and Gulf Oil were both ahead better than a point.

Smaller gains were registered by most other leading oils, including Sinclair, Amerada, Royal Dutch and Phillips Petroleum.

A spark of enthusiasm was contributed by American Cyanamid which was up around 3 at one phase in response to news of a 2-for-1 stock split proposal after yesterday's close. It lost a fraction of this in later dealings.

U.S. Steel was higher by a point or so. Bethlehem and Youngstown advanced fractionally.

Du Pont was another 2-point gainer in the chemical group. But U.S. Hoffman Machinery dropped a major fraction, selling off 1/2 at 11 on a big trade of 10,300 shares.

Aluminum Ltd. and Alcoa were other 1-point gainers. Coppers were mixed with a downside preference in continued reaction to price cut news.

Aircrafts were solidly ahead. Boeing, Douglas, United and others added fractions. Rails showed some gains, running to about a point for Northern Pacific and Chesapeake & Ohio.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks at noon was up 70 cents to $172.80 with the industrials up $1.30, the rails up 70 cents and the utilities up 10 cents.

RALEIGH (AP)—(NCDA)—Hog prices mostly 25 to 50 higher. Tops of 16.50 to 17.25 at Bethel, Tarboro and Enfield; 16.50 to 17.00 at Kinston, New Bern, Benson, Pine Level and Nahant.

16.25 to 17.00 at Rocky Mount and Wingate; 15.75 to 17.00 at Hillsboro; 16.75 at Clinton, Fayetteville, Micro, Elizabethtown and Castle Hayne; 16.50 at Siler City, Mount Gilead, Goldsboro, Spring Hope, Clarkton, Shallotte, Bailey, Dunn, Whiteville, Tabor City, Rich Square, Lumberton, Smithfield, Newton Grove and Mount Olive; 16.25 at Keno.

Sheriff Padlocks Local Night Spot

A Negro night spot on Albemarle Ave. has been padlocked by court order, Sheriff Ruel W. Tyson said today.

A court order signed by Superior Court Judge J. Paul Frizzelle ordered the spot, located on the east side of Albemarle Ave., to be closed for one year unless "sooner released."

The order named Willie Knight Jenkins alias "Bitty" Jenkins and Vanilla Jenkins as owners and operators of the place of business and W. C. Clark as owner of the premises.

A petition requesting the court order for closing the cafe was signed by District Solicitor Robert House.

The petition said "building or buildings" are "used for and in connection with the sale of beer, wine and liquor illegally, where boisterous conduct is engaged in, where there is carousing, drinking, gambling and fighting, where questionable characters are harbored and maintained, where there is loud music at all hours of the day and night and where there is prostitution and other nuisances maintained and other violations of the law."

A Superior Court hearing on the matter will be held.

It was the second place of business to be padlocked in the county within recent weeks.

Smokey's Place in Fountain was closed as the result of a court order signed by Superior Court Judge William J. Bundy.

The building was ordered closed for one year.

The order named Robert Lee Jones as owner and operator.

WILSON—A $100 bill that was offered to an alert Wilson merchant Saturday, plus some quick sleuthing by Wilson police and the SBI, resulted in the solving of a $11,000 robbery of a Walstonburg farmer.

'No Progress' In Finding Money

SNOW HILL—Greene County Auditor George Edwards said today "no progress or new developments" could be reported in a case involving between $1,700 and $1,800 missing for more than a week from the Greene County Sheriff's Office.

Investigation in the case is being conducted by Sheriff H. K. Cobb, from whose office the money has been missing, apparently since February 9. The exact sum, which has not been determined, represents fines and other court payments collected by the sheriff and placed in his office safe.

Sheriff Cobb told other county officials that the money had been placed in his safe on February 9, and was last seen on that afternoon. The money was found missing the following Monday. The Sheriff added that the safe remained closed under normal conditions and that there was no evidence it had been tampered with.

Edwards said he had no knowledge of the State Bureau of Investigation entering the case. SBI Director J. W. Powell said yesterday that his office had not been requested to enter the investigation although there had been several reports that an SBI agent was working with the sheriff.

Quiet 'Death'

ATLANTA (AP)—Two proposals dealing with racial segregation apparently are dead for the current session of the Georgia Legislature.

They are a bill to prohibit interracial sports and other activities and a resolution calling for an investigation of the National Assn. for the Achievement of Colored People. Both have been sent to the House State of Republic Committee. Chances of either coming out before the legislature adjourns Friday are remote.

Rep. Colbert Hawkins of Screven County, administration floor leader, said yesterday the investigation resolution is not needed. He said the Georgia Education Commission already has authority to investigate any organizations which "direct thought or foment strife."

The interracial sports proposal already has passed the Senate. The committee met yesterday without acting on it.

The cover of life's book is closed For one we loved so well, But loving deeds of bygone days Are what the pages tell. Each chapter in it leaves a thought As lonely as can be For us to keep within our hearts Dear Aunt of you still. Her Loving Niece, Naomi Burney
