30 Years Ago Today

March 27, 1927

Mrs. Jesse Moya was hostess on Tuesday afternoon to the Round Table club. The home was attractively decorated with spring flowers. The program for the afternoon consisted of a splendid paper on the subject "The Story of Photography." Mrs. W. B. Tighman led the club members into the intricacies of photography. Snapshots was the next subject on the program, which each member was privileged to interpret as she saw fit. Mrs. Herring's interpretation was quite the most humorous. She pictured the club celebrating the twentieth anniversary of its birth in five more years. Quite a few changes are to take place in the meantime. At this time, she predicts that the club will compose and give its own drama. At the conclusion of the program, the hostess served a delicious ice course.

An Area Need Being Recognized

Action by the Beaufort County Board of Commissioners is indicative of the kind of support the proposed state-supported school of nursing for Eastern North Carolina has in this part of the state.

We Too, Must Look Two Decades Ahead

While the predicted 46 per cent increase in population of the United States in the next two decades is causing quite a stir around the nation, we haven't noticed any particular flutter locally about the anticipated growth of Greenville.

If figures of past census periods are any indication of what to expect, Greenville's population will be increasing about 100 per cent during the same period the nation's population increases 46 per cent.

By 1975 the experts say the United States will be a nation of 220 million people, compared with the 150 million people counted in the 1950 census. If Greenville continues during the next two decades the population growth it enjoyed between 1930 and 1950, it will be a city of more than 33,000 people.

During the period between 1930 and 1940, Greenville's population increased 38 per cent. The following decade the city's population grew another 31.8 per cent. Though no accurate figures are available on the city's growth since the 1950 census, it is a conservative guess that Greenville's growth during the last seven years has kept pace with the previous rate.

Greenville, like other municipalities in Pitt County and throughout North Carolina, must not overlook the problems it will face with an increasing population. More schools, more streets, more homes, more government services and more of everything will be demanded by the increasing population. And these demands must be met.

When one takes a serious look not only at the anticipated population increase of the nation, but of the growth of individual communities, it is obvious that more and better long range planning must be done to meet the needs of future years.

Spending Keeps Economy Right

By ELMER ROESSNER
Somebody forgot to tell Mr. and Mrs. Joe Consumer —

Things are a bit rocky, you know. Industrial production dropped in January, carloadings are running below a year ago, television and appliance demand is off, new car sales aren't what dealers would like and housing starts are below the million-a-year danger point.

But Joe Consumer and his wife don't seem to have heard about the slide in those indexes. Or, if they have, they put more reliance on the fact that employment, income and population keep rising, and they keep on spending as if everything were all right.

And by keeping on spending, they make everything all right.

SALES TOTALS RISE

Government figures on retail sales show a general rise. Department store sales in the first two months of the year were 2 per cent above the same 1956 months. Sales so far in March are below year-ago figures but that's because Easter is late this year. The pre-Easter spurge will be at a peak in April instead of March this year.

Despite the fact that the national total of department store sales in the week ended March 9 were 10 per cent under the corresponding 1956 week, there were a few plus marks. An increase of 15 per cent was racked up in Springfield, Mass., while Cambridge, Mass., Los Angeles, Portland, Ore., and Spokane districts all made gains.

Commerce Department figures for all retail sales, complete for January and preliminary for February, show 7 per cent gains for each month over year-ago totals.

The only big drop in January was reported by lumber and building material dealers, down 10 per cent, largely reflecting the decline in home building. Automobile sales, about which so many people are worrying, were up 9 per cent over January, 1956, and tire, battery and accessory dealers registered an increase of 18 per cent. Those 1956 models apparently are ready for new tires and batteries.

FUTURE BUYING PROMISING

It is indicative too of the feeling of county officials toward meeting the needs of their respective areas so far as medical care is concerned.

The Beaufort County Commissioners have requested boards in 18 other Eastern counties to designate representatives to appear in behalf of the proposed school of nursing at hearings before the Appropriations Committee. We trust the counties of this part of the state will respond favorably to the request. If they do, it will strengthen the chances of obtaining the appropriation which is being sought.

The proposed school of nursing is planned to serve a broad area of the state; not just a few counties. The need for nurses in the East is not confined to a few counties, but extends to all the counties of the area without exception. By their individual action and their collective action, the counties of the East can show the merit of their nursing school plan before the Appropriations committee and before the entire legislature if necessary.

With so many requests for funds confronting legislators, however, it is apparent that some requests will have to be turned down. If the counties of the East leave it to a few people to carry the ball for the nursing school there is always the possibility the appropriation may not be approved; a chance no county in Eastern North Carolina can afford to take.

The proposal to establish a school of nursing in conjunction with East Carolina College has as much merit as any matter now before the General Assembly. Its importance to Eastern North Carolina behooves every county in the area to give every possible means of support to the bill.

Routine Costs Costing More

By LYNN NISBET
COMPLEXITIES — Nearly every administrative agency in North Carolina State government has appealed for more money to pay routine operating expenses. Such items as postage, telephone, per diem and travel pay for board members, insignificant in themselves and of small consequence in terms of a billion dollar budget, can mean the difference between efficiency and inadequacy for a department.

The need for heavier correspondence and more frequent meetings of boards stems from the growing complexities in the economy of the State. Even a color blind person can tell the difference between white and black, between daylight and dark night. The twilight zones are broadening every year, and whether a gray situation is nearer white than black is matter of opinion.

As governmental control is extended over activities which a few years ago were unregulated, the need for half-breadth decisions becomes more acute. These decisions cannot be made without study of the facts—or opinions—presented by the persons engaged in the several kinds of activities.

To obtain these facts it becomes necessary for members of the regulatory boards such as agriculture, conservation and development, education, health, highway, welfare, wildlife resources, et cetera, to spend more time in committee or full board meetings.

Heads of the departments are somewhat shamed when they request an addition of a few hundred dollars to a multi-million dollar appropriation just to take care of the extra meetings required. And attitude of the Appropriation Committee often is that such a small item is not worth bothering about. Still a letter notifying the member of a meeting cannot be mailed unless there is three cents available for a stamp.

SPECIALIZATION — A very able commission, headed by Nat Crews of Winston-Salem, long time domestic court judge, has recommended the establishment of a system of family courts in North Carolina. The idea appeals to many members of the General Assembly. The report of the commission makes out a good case for the need of such courts, to replace the present make-shift system of juvenile courts under the Superior Court clerks, and the occasional domestic relations courts in the larger communities.

There is considerable sentiment in favor of a system of traffic courts to deal more effectively with the increasing problem of highway safety, and for special State tax courts with more judicial authority than administrative agencies presently enjoy. The Utilities Commission has been given quasi-judicial powers in regulation of power, telephone and transportation operations in North Carolina. Several counties have "small claims" courts, distinct from the superior and county recorder courts, although often with concurrent jurisdiction.

In the realm of law enforcement there are numerous special purpose agencies. The highway patrol, the county sheriffs, and county and municipal police departments, the special State and county ABC officers, the Federal ATU boys, the SBI and FBI, all have their own particular areas of responsibility, and each is jealous of infringement by any of the others.

Without criticizing the efficiency of any of these judicial or enforcement agencies, some thoughtful people are beginning to wonder if we may be "specializing" ourselves away from adequate total administration of justice.

Specialization in medicine has relegated the old time doctor, who could and would treat any physical ailment; to the background. The old time sheriff who arrested anybody guilty of violating the law, and the judge who presided over the trial of any person charged with crime, seem to be going the same way as the old doctor.

UNREASONABLE — Members of the Legislature are no exceptions to the rule that folks can be very unreasonable. The State Board of Buildings & Grounds and the Raleigh Police Department reserved all the parking spaces on streets around Capitol Square for cars of legislators. Only requirement for unlimited use was that a small windshield sticker prepared for the purpose should be displayed.

Some legislators did not want to show the sticker, and protested when their cars were tagged for overtime parking. Others put on the stickers and sought to use them in lieu of nickels at down town parking meters.

The new one-way street pattern adopted by Raleigh traffic officers makes it more necessary therefore to enforce limited time free parking in loading zones and to keep bus stops clear. It is not unusual for casual motorists to use these limit-time zones for parking long enough to eat a meal or to visit friends in office buildings. On the other side of the picture many business men who have obtained loading zone designations in front of their places for convenience of the public presume to utilize them for permanent parking of their vehicles, so that their customers cannot get in.

Almost every time a hotel doorman or a traffic cop reminds the motorist who is imposing on these public convenience zones that he is violating the law as well as infringing upon the rights of others, the offending motorist responds with vigorous, sometimes profane, statement that he will park there—as long as he wants to.

This condition is not confined to Raleigh. Your reporter just sees more of it in the capital city because he is here more than anywhere else.

Strength For Today

By EARL L. DOUGLASS
SOCRATES ON EDUCATION

Here are some great words which Socrates uttered centuries ago on the subject of education. In a day when we are talking and thinking so much about education, they have in them a quality of wisdom which we may well ponder.

"Whom then, do I call educated?" asks Socrates.

"First, those who control circumstances instead of being mastered by them; those who meet all occasions manfully and act in accordance with intelligent thinking; those who are honorable in all dealings, who treat good-naturedly persons and things that are disagreeable; and furthermore those who keep their plea-tures under control and are not overcome by misfortune. Finally, those who are not spoiled by success."

One marvels at times over the wisdom that came out of antiquity. This man Socrates had very little in the way of background. To be sure, he lived in an age characterized by the emergence of great thinkers, but neither he nor his comrades had the vast background of information which you and I enjoy. Yet he, and many who were associated with him, had the capacity to pierce into the very center of truth and to reveal it to others.

We have no books today, no committee reports, which discuss education so wisely or plumb the depths of the truth more deeply,

I Beat England, France And Israel—

by DON SCHLIENZ

Parody, A Baby, Flags

"Two score and four years ago, our fathers brought forth on this continent a new misery, conceived in desperation and dedicated to the proposition that all men are created taxable. Now we are engaged in a great long form, testing whether that taxpayer or any other taxpayer so confused and so frustrated, can long endure."

"The world will little note nor long remember what we pay here, but the Bureau of Internal Revenue will never forget if we don't."

"It is rather for us to be here dedicated to the tremendous payments still remaining before us — that from the examples of these financially bankrupt we take increased deductions for the cause — that this taxpayer underpaid shall have a new birth of lower taxes and higher wages, and that government of the taxpayer, by the taxpayer and for the taxpayer shall not perish from the earth."

The parody appeared in a Whitewater, Wisconsin, newspaper, I'm sorry fuller credit can't be given . . . but that's all my source had to offer. Thought it might knead a fellow-sufferer's funnybone.

If it's any consolation, my form-filing began about six weeks ago, and stopped that same night. It is still waiting, somewhere.

Three-days-old Mary Jane stretched, yawned and then setted back into the comfort of her hospital bassinet as though to say "If you can't beat 'em, join 'em." This is something; for when she came into the world she came with a very loud protesting bawl. Kicking and screaming (in protest?) she was borne to the nursery from the delivery room.

Her proud father made a mental note: "this is truly the Littlest Rebel of them all."

But last night she was resigned to her new horizons; and in resignation slept.

Tiny, beloved Mary Jane.

I think most people will agree that the VFW Auxiliary is undertaking a most laudable project in their campaign to teach young people about the American flag; its story and practices concerning the flag.

Most adults could stand a refresher course, too.

There's a fierce exultation and pride in seeing the colors parade at the head of your column or from the staff of a ship. Picture-images of Old Glory's long history flash before the mind's eye, and more than the beat of a drum or a bugle's call . . . the flag makes men stride with pride and vigor . . . a symbol of all they hold dear.

In later years it is again seen leading parades, lining streets with bright red, white and blue. But few bother to give the simple citizen's salute.

Hand over heart.

Is that too much courtesy toward the star-spangled symbol of America?

Opinions In Brief

ELSNORE, CALIF., LEADER-PRESS: "Regulation of gas prices at the well head makes no more economic sense than regulation of coal prices at the mine. . . . It is to be hoped that with the President's recently restated endorsement, Congress will see fit to restore to this segment of our industrial structure its basic freedom to risk, in the hope of profit."

Other Editors Saying --- Economists vs. Parents

(Norfolk-Portsmouth Virginian-Pilot)

It will take the influence of Governor Stanley, and the combined support of other governors, to put across the 12-month public school system. But a combined gubernatorial attack may be required. The need for more classrooms increases daily — and so do taxes and the cost of building schools.

Why this idea is controversial can be explained in terms of a family with more than one child. When a nine-month school term is staggered through a 12-month system, one child might have his vacation in the winter, another in the fall and another in the spring. Mamas and papas don't like that. Neither does Junior.

In 1948, William A. Early, former superintendent of Norfolk County Public Schools, advanced the 12-month school idea. He almost provoked mass meetings of protest. Henrico County, Virginia, and Denver, Colo., have studied the proposal in recent years but neither has taken the step. Last year Donald W. Shriver, executive manager of the Norfolk Chamber of Commerce, brought the proposal forward. Nobody sent him any flowers.

Nevertheless, the cost of convenience is rising each year with the tax burden for school buildings and the growth of split-shift classes. A capital investment which is idle one-fourth of the year is wasteful. Governor Stanley may be on to a good idea. If he could equate the saving of a 12-month system with a tax increase which that saving replaces, he might take some of the sting out of the proposal. We hope the Governors' Conference in Williamsburg next June takes a good long look at the plan.

WHO WOULDN'T BE PUZZLED? (The Daily Oklahoman)

A serious thinker who describes himself as "a shovel man" confesses in a letter to the editor that he is bewildered. The source of his bewilderment is $1.60 which he earned by working overtime in 1956. Of course that $1.60 was not the whole of his overtime earnings, but it was enough to elevate his income tax rating from a high bracket to a still higher bracket. The result of his elevation to an upper bracket increased his income tax for the year by exactly $9.

This disturbed "shovel man" declares that he could understand a $1.60 tax on a $9 earning, but for the sweet life he he cannot understand a $9 tax on a $1.60 earning. Of course it is no consolation to him to know that this country is fairly speckled with people who are bewildered by the intricacies of the federal income tax. In that predicament he is not alone.

Atomic Alliance Out Of Bermuda

WASHINGTON A peacetime and wartime atomic alliance between the United States and Great Britain is expected to result from the Eisenhower-Macmillan Bermuda conversations. Although many difficulties lie ahead before consummation, a reorganization and tightening of the West's defense establishment has become necessary for military and economic reasons.

The British, as Prime Minister Macmillan has made clear, cannot afford to maintain both a conventional and atomic force, especially in West Europe and its overseas outposts. Like the U.S., it is substituting a nuclear age Army, Navy and Air Force for old-fashioned units as conditions permit.

Since the Anglo-American Alliance is the West's hope for world peace and security, despite temporary disagreements, the British believe it should be a full-time partnership. President Eisenhower and his military advisers agree,

They are peculiarly expert in these limited fields.

SHARING OF NUCLEAR ENERGY PURPOSES When the time for large-scale production arrives, these British-developed models would be manufactured in volume in the United States and possibly Canada. For security and protection in actual war, the atomic plants should not be located in the exposed British Isles or on the Continent, although supplies could be stored there in safety.

The British would also let us in on their secrets in the use of nuclear energy for peacetime purposes. Because of the lack and high cost of conventional fuels—coal, oil, gas, water power—they are far ahead of us in this field. The Suez Canal crisis, with its threat to a steady flow of Middle East petroleum, has stepped up their atomic program.

WOULD PERMIT US TO ECONOMICALLY SHARE THIS KNOWLEDGE, it is believed, might save us several years in reaching the stage when atomic power would become commercially competitive with other forms of energy.

It would permit us to economize on the vast store of natural resources which now feed our factories, our military machine and our homes.

It would give the two democracies a great lead on Russia. It would enable us to outstrip Moscow in providing basic, permanent and constructive assistance to many neutral but backward nations, especially in Asia, Africa, South America and possibly a reformed China.

In short, the possibilities of an all-out and full-time alliance and partnership are incalculable, in the opinion of the specialists. It is as important, they believe, as the Joint Allied Command which Franklin D. Roosevelt and Winston Churchill hammered together in World War II to meet the threat of dictators far more orthodox than those who conspire against us in the Kremlin.

Out Of That Mailbag

By HAL BOYLE
NEW YORK (AP) — Things a columnist might never know if he didn't read his mail:

That the garbage man has a more dangerous job than a policeman or fireman. A survey showed that, based on the number of hours spent at work, city sanitation department workers suffer nearly twice as many injuries as cops, get hurt more than 1 1/2 times as often as firemen.

That you can get the best possible mileage out of a gallon of gas if you drive your car at 20 miles an hour — in fact you and the car will both live longer.

That Coryn Boccicchio believes she is the only woman engraver currently employed in the U.S. jewelry industry.

That America now has an estimated 41 million youngsters between the ages of 5 through 18, and 90 per cent of them read comic books.

That the mud skipper, a small fish that dwells in the mangrove flats of the South Pacific, has fins that look like paws; can live in or out of water, and can hop, skip and jump across land faster than it can swim submerged.

That Javier Pereira, the 167-year-old fellow from Columbia, South America, has had his longevity rewarded by seeing his likeness on a postage stamp issued by his country.

That a reader informs me 30 people named Rich are listed in the Beverly Hills Telephone book, but only two named Poor.

The noise of jet aircraft irritates bees, and they'll sting any bystander, guilty or innocent.

That the fixing of athletic events by gamblers is as old as sports. The ancient Greeks assessed heavy fines against contestants caught taking a bribe, and the money was used to set up bronze images of Zeus.

That the main symptoms of expectant fathers who take their approaching parenthood too seriously are headaches, dizziness, and stomach and intestinal pains.

That if you get a black eye, applying a raw beefsteak to it is more likely to infect it than reduce the swelling. Instead try cold compresses, and after 24 hours switch to hot compresses.

That the modern motor car has more light bulbs — 20 to 35 — than the average five-room house.

That it was Normann Vincent Peale who observed, "The American people are so tense it is impossible even to put them to sleep with a sermon."

At 46, Lillian Roth, who made one of the greatest comebacks in the history of show business, is saying goodbye to the night club world.

But she isn't quitting so she can retire to a rocking chair. She simply wants to branch out into two new careers — as a lecturer and newspaper columnist.

The dark-eyed movie and musical comedy star, who became a top entertainer after a losing 16-year bout with the bottle, said a three-week engagement next month at the Sahara in Las Vegas would be her last in the night club field.

"I'm grateful to the night clubs," she said. "They've been wonderful to me. They've paid me up to $10,000 a week, more than I earned in the old days."

"But it is no way to live permanently. I've been singing since I was 15, and since 1951 I've sung more than 50,000 songs."

"I'm 46 now, feel better than I did at 36, but if — God willing — I have a few years left, I'd like to spend them living another kind of life."

Delaware Baseballers Roll Up 13-4 Win Against East Carolina Nine

ECC-Delaware Baseball Action

COMING IN LOW—Delaware's Tommy Walsh cuts into third base in yesterday's game at College Field, after smacking a line-drive triple against ECC. Pirate third baseman Bucky Reep awaits the throw. Delaware trounced the Bucs 13-4 to snap a 12-game win streak and post East Carolina's first loss in three games this year. (Reflector Sports Photo by Billy Arnold).

Delaware snapped a brief 12-game winning streak by East Carolina here yesterday afternoon, topping the Bucs 13-4 in an inter-sectional game at College Field. East Carolina out-hit the visiting Delaware club, collecting eight base knocks to their six, but the Yankee outfit had 12 bases on balls and the excellent pitching of Tony Delucas paid off in victory chips. Delucas, a tall righthander, is the same boy that defeated ECC last year 5-4 in 11 innings at College Field. In fact, Delaware brought the identically same club onto the diamond yesterday, plus two new outstanding infielders. Coach Jim Mallory, whose Pirates whipped VPI twice in their only other games thus far this season, is not one who enjoys losing, but the slender mentor was far from disturbed. He said, "If we can get our pitchers into shape we'll be alright. They just need good hard work and the weather has been against that since we started practice."

Pirate hitting, for the third straight game, was good. Outfielder Joel Long polled a long triple and Breyer Stevens added a double for their only extra base knocks. Cella, Walsh and Watson of Delaware each slammed triples. Brief ECC Lead Mack Cherry, a veteran, was the first of four ECC pitchers and was credited with the loss. The Bucs gave Cherry a 2-0 lead in the first period of play, but the righthander was touched for four runs in the top of the second inning. Readying For Opening Tilt Today

GETTING SET FOR SEASON—Coach Raymond Martinez, above explaining some fundamentals to veterans James Blake and Maurice Everette, will send his 1957 East Carolina tennis team into action today against Kalamazoo College at the ECC courts. It will be their first match of the year and one of their toughest. Kalamazoo defeated North Carolina 9-0 yesterday and will be shooting for another. (Reflector Sports Photo).

ECC Tennis Team Host Today To Kalamazoo College Netters

East Carolina's tennis team, with very few days of actual practice beneath their belt, played host to Kalamazoo College netters of Michigan, today, at 1:30. Coach Raymond Martinez' outfit has been hampered by rain during the past month and only a few days of actual drill and work have been available. The Kalamazoo match was to be more of an exhibition test for the Pirates than anything else. Martinez has not named his ladder as yet and will probably use the Kalamazoo tilt to organize his positions. Very little is known about the Michigan club, except that they usually have a strong team and are a recognized tennis power in the East. The next Thursday, Martinez and his boys will begin a three-day trip that will take them to N. C. State on that day, Wake Forest on Friday, and Elon on Saturday. After that point, the schedule is a bit hazy, although it is certain that on the 19th of April, the netters will again take off on a road trip, this time to Florida. Along the way on the second trip, they will battle Jacksonville Navy (Florida), the University of St.

Atlantic Coast Baseball Clubs Racked Up 'Football Scores'

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS Atlantic Coast Conference baseball teams ran up scores like football squads yesterday in three games against non-conference foes. Duke thrashed Michigan State 21-5 to move up in the Florida State University invitational tournament at Tallahassee, Maryland opened its season with an 18-1 victory over Massachusetts Institute of Technology and Virginia dropped its season opener to William and Mary, 7-6. The schedule features two games today. North Carolina opens a five-day home stand with Delaware as its first opponent and Duke meets Florida State in the Tallahassee tournament. Batters had a field day in the Duke-Michigan State game, collecting 28 hits all told, 17 of them by the Blue Devils. Duke track star Dave Sime, right fielder, again proved a power at the plate with a home run and single for five at bats. Sime was a mainstay in the Duke victory over Yale in the first round of the tournament Monday. Catcher Frank Cribfield got a triple and a single in three trips. Second baseman George Hoover was the only Blue Devil who didn't hit safely. Veteran righthander Harley Fatzinger went the distance for Duke to earn his second victory of the season, Duke's fourth. Senior second baseman Howie Dare turned in a two-for-two hitting performance, scored six runs, stole four bases and got four walks to pace the Maryland team to victory over MIT. Outfielder Jack Doane slugged a two-run homer in the third inning. Maryland's only other extra-base hit was a double by first baseman Don Henderson. Virginia ran into trouble in the first inning of its season opener at Williamsburg, Va., with the William and Mary Indians scoring five runs. The Indians added two more in the second then held on for the 7-6 victory. Doyle Dawson, Virginia's third of four pitchers to see action, led the Cavaliers' batting with two doubles and a single in three at bats. Shortstop Cliff Inge contributed a triple and a single to the losing effort.

Industrial Loop Still Going At Furious Pace

Basketball is still going strong in Greenville. In the Greenville Industrial League, two games were played last Wednesday night and two more are on tap for tonight. The public is invited and no admission is charged. The program is part of the Recreation Department's athletic work. In last week's games, the Greenville Metal and Parts works defeated Pepsi-Cola 42-40 and the Carolina Dairy topped Carolina Sales 50-32. L. R. Hardee pumped in 19 points to pace the Pepsi-Cola club in the first game, but could not bring them to a victory. Warren netted 16 and Buttes 11 for the winning Parts and Metals outfit. In the other game, Smith Worthington and C. Tripp paced the winning Dairy five. Tripp sank 18 and Worthington 15. James had eight for the losers. Standings for the league, as released by the Recreation Department, are as follows: Carolina Dairy won 2, Greenville Metal and Parts 5, Pepsi-Cola 4, Carolina Sales 3. Greenville high school trackers, successful in both their 1957 meets thus far this season, will journey to Goldsboro tomorrow afternoon to compete against the AAA Quakes. The Phantoms are the defending champions of their own AA conference.

U.S. Ambassadorial System Is Open To Debate, But It Has Served Well

(Editor's Note: It costs money to be a U. S. ambassador, as a result many qualified men never make the grade. This country's ambassadorial system is explored in this second of three articles on the department of state.)

By BEM PRICE
AP Staff Writer

WASHINGTON (AP)—The ambassador is the key man in the implementation of United States policies overseas.

He is the President's personal representative in the country to which he is assigned and thus the kingpin of all American activities there.

During this year President Eisenhower will appoint about 30 new ambassadors. If the appointments run true to form, the so-called plus posts—London, Paris, Madrid, Rome, Bonn, Mexico City and New Delhi—will be filled by what the department calls "non-career diplomats."

To be more exact these appointments will be political rewards and the jobs will be filled by men with substantial private means. Traditionally one-third of the nation's ambassadorial posts are occupied by non-career people. The new ambassadors to Paris and London already have been named.

John Hay Whitney, an American grown aristocrat with a personal fortune estimated at between $0 and $0 million dollars, has gone to London. He is one of Eisenhower's golf and bridge cronies and he also helped raise funds for the 1956 campaign.

To Paris, the President appointed Amory Houghton, chairman of the board of the Corning Glass Works. Houghton was a heavy contributor to the Eisenhower campaign.

This is not to say that the sole qualifications for non-career diplomats are wealth and party allegiance. In these days intelligence is sought too. This U. S. political system of picking ambassadors has turned up some really top flight men, one of whom was Whitney's grandfather, John Hay. By the same token it has produced some real duds.

Those who receive the plush jobs can expect to spend between $0,000 and $100,000 a year out of their own pockets for entertainment.

For all its wealth and prestige the United States makes niggardly provisions for upholding its prestige abroad. Entertainment allowances run from $50 a year for say a vice consul, to $12,000 for the London embassy—$800,000 for all the 269 overseas posts.

The end result is that an ambassador often has to reach into his own pocket. One of the costs borne out-of-pocket by today's ambassadors for example, is the annual Fourth of July party to which all Americans living in the country are invited. In Paris some 2,000 show up annually. In London, the $12,000 Whitney will receive as an allowance this year will just about pay for the Independence Day party.

An ambassador also can be named from the ranks of the professional diplomats. The career man reaches the top after 20 or 30 years of service, during which he has been under annual examination as to his qualifications. Usually the professional is confined by lack of private means to the less expensive posts and thus the smaller nations.

Periodically, someone in Washington tries fruitlessly to change this system.

In this session of Congress, Montana's Sen. Mike Mansfield is saying that the U. S. government can afford nothing less than the best ambassadors available and that it should pay for what it gets. Mansfield has drafted an amendment to the State Department's appropriation under which the government would increase ambassadorial living expenses to the point where any man, regardless of private finances, can fill the top posts.

Mansfield believes many brilliant foreign service officers are kept out of posts for which they are the best qualified because of the present allowance setup.

He says that most other governments pay enough to get the best ambassadors available. The British ambassador in Washington, he says, had a living allowance of $75,000 several years ago and that it's probably more now.

Many State Department officials support Mansfield, but they agree that congress probably will turn a cold shoulder to the request.

In the past Congress always has been satisfied with the system of letting politically-appointed men of wealth pay their way as ambassadors.

Non-career diplomats usually are picked from among people recommended by the Republican or Democratic National Committee, senators and cabinet members.

The final decision rests with the president. Sometimes, selections have been a matter of whim. President U. S. Grant, for example, objected to men who parted their hair in the middle. In our time one of the most striking examples of a non-career man at work is Chester Bowles, former ambassador to India.

The United States, at the time Bowles took over, was accused of being unsympathetic to Indian freedom.

Bowles said nothing but invited thousands of Indians to a Fourth of July party. On each table was a reprint of America's Declaration of Independence from England. The Indians couldn't say much more.

How do we keep political appointees from fouling up the diplomatic works?

The answer lies in the structure of the department. The No. 2 man in every embassy is a career diplomat. He is the adviser and the technician.

Backlog Of $70 Billions Cited As Vital Factor

WASHINGTON (AP)—Sen. Byrd (D-Va.) said today President Eisenhower controls a backlog of 70 billion dollars in available funds. As a result, he added, Congress can't make any "real reduction" in spending without Eisenhower's help.

Byrd, who heads the Senate Finance Committee, called on Eisenhower to submit to Congress a downward revision in his estimated $71,800,000,000 spending program for the fiscal year beginning July 1.

Contending that there now is on hand 70 billion dollars in balances voted by previous Congresses, Byrd said the lawmakers can cut the President's new money requests and still not achieve any real reductions in expenditures unless Eisenhower cooperates with them.

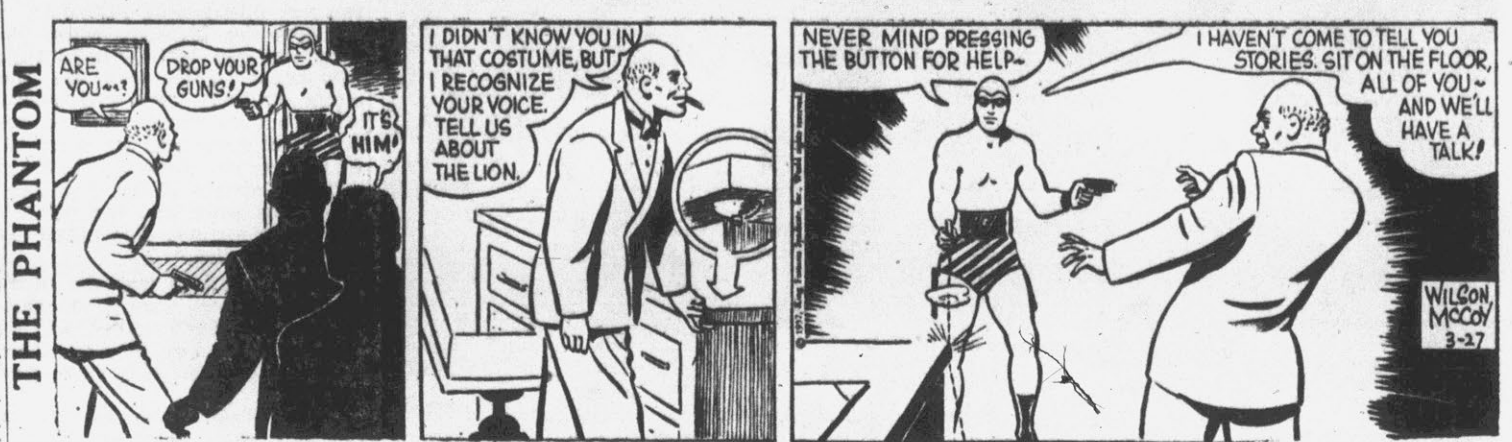

"I fully realize the responsibility for enacting appropriations rests in Congress," Byrd said, "but the President controls the rate and the time of expenditures. It is my firm conviction that coordinate action between the President and the Congress is essential to bring about retrenchment."

Eisenhower has said he is willing to cooperate, but has insisted that it is Congress' primary duty to find places where his budget can be cut.

Sen. Knowland of California, the Republican leader, said in a separate interview that while the administration is giving intensive study to possible economies, he does not expect Eisenhower to submit any specific recommendations in this field.

However, Chairman Saltonstall (Mass.) of the Conference of All Republican Senators, said Budget Director Percival Brundage told congressional leaders at a White House meeting yesterday he hopes to have a report soon on possible economies.

Saltonstall said he assumes the report will go to Eisenhower.

Describes Life In Trapped Train

KANSAS CITY (AP)—"Now I know how the Eskimos live." That is how Norma Duff, 26, Middletown, Ohio, one of 253 passengers, described two rugged days and nights aboard the Rock Island Railroad's Golden State Limited, buried in a snowdrift near Meade, Kan.

A rescue train picked up all the passengers yesterday afternoon at Meade and stopped here for two hours late last night before continuing to Chicago. Bedraggled but happy chair car passengers agreed with Miss Duff and added their descriptions of darkened coaches, some without water and all without heat in the raging blizzard that stalled the Los Angeles to Chicago train Saturday night. It was late Monday before school buses had taken all the passengers, including 22 children, to Meade. Most of them took turns sleeping in the high school gymnasium.

Some 15 passengers were overcome by foul air Monday in Car No. 48, buried and insulated by the snow. "If it had been night and we had been sleeping when these people collapsed, I think some of them might have died," said Mrs. George Heffrich, Brookfield, Ill. She said they had nothing to eat Sunday except snacks they had in their luggage.

Mrs. Irene McHugh of Los Angeles and her baby daughter Adele were overcome. "I'm still a bit woozy, I think, or maybe I'm just worn out. I can't really tell," she said wearily.

Miss Duff, helping Mrs. McHugh watch over the sleeping Adele, described their plight this way: "I felt like I was in an igloo. We didn't have the kind of clothes for it, though. It was terribly cold and we had to open doors and kick out some windows to let fresh air in. The snow was clear up past the windows and almost over the top of the coach.

"We tore down the curtains from the windows to try to wrap our legs and keep warm. We didn't have anything to eat for one day and very little until the whirly-birds came over and dropped some food.

"I never was so glad to get out of anywhere as I was to get into that bus that took us in to Meade. Those people were wonderful. I didn't know coffee could taste so good."

The snowbound train was being dug out today by workmen and five others were snowbound by the blizzard that swept the Western Plains last weekend. But only four had their passengers aboard. They were at way stations and passengers were suffering no hardships.

The Union Pacific freed its westbound City of St. Louis with 213 passengers from drifts near Winona, Kan., yesterday. The westbound Golden State Limited still was at Liberal, Kan., waiting to get away with 100 passengers to Los Angeles. The Missouri Pacific had two passenger trains (Colorado Eagles) at Horace and Hoisington, Kan., one with 53 and the other with 75 aboard.

The eastbound Santa Fe Grand Canyon Limited was freed yesterday from a drift one mile from Dodge City with 123 passengers and arrived here. Its passengers were served regular meals and suffered little discomfort.

How often do you check your million dollar eyes?

If you had two million dollars invested in some machine, you'd have it checked regularly to make sure everything was always okay.

But folks take their million dollar vision for granted, failing to have it checked for the changes which may occur in eyesight in a few months.

Just as you perhaps see your dentist twice a year for dental check-ups, so should you see your eyesight specialist at least once a year for a vision examination.

Claim No 'Secret Pacts' But Much Off The Record

By JOHN A. HARRIS
 WASHINGTON (AP) — The White House says President Eisenhower and British Prime Minister Macmillan made "no secret agreements" at Bermuda, but that there were off-the-record talks. James C. Hagerty, Eisenhower's press secretary, told a news conference yesterday.

"There were no secret agreements. There were discussions on defense that were kept off the record," Hagerty declined to go further. But he replied "That's right" when a reporter asked if he meant "there were secret discussions but no secret agreements."

British sources at Bermuda have said secret directives were put into writing during last week's conference between the two leaders. U. S. officials deny that.

This apparent contradiction may represent an effort on the part of each nation to interpret the results in the light of its own policies.

Hagerty was questioned anew on the subject yesterday, as was Secretary of State Dulles, after reports that the British had reviewed with Canadian officials what were described in Bermuda as 29 secret directives, agreements and protocols on key problems signed jointly by Eisenhower and Macmillan.

Reports from Bermuda said these documents covered such topics as orders to pool intelligence and planning, decisions in some defense and political matters, and agreements on what courses to follow in event of new developments in certain areas, including the Middle East.

Dulles, in response to questions, told a news conference yesterday: "There was no understanding put down on paper at Bermuda, except a procedural one for refurbishing, you might say, or reviewing the intelligence arrangements which we have concerning alerts."

He had said previously the United States had made arrangements with other nations for intelligence cooperation on alerts "if there should seem to be a danger of a Soviet attack."

At a Bermuda news conference Sunday, Macmillan said, "The British and American governments have agreed on the line they propose to take in the short term and in the long term."

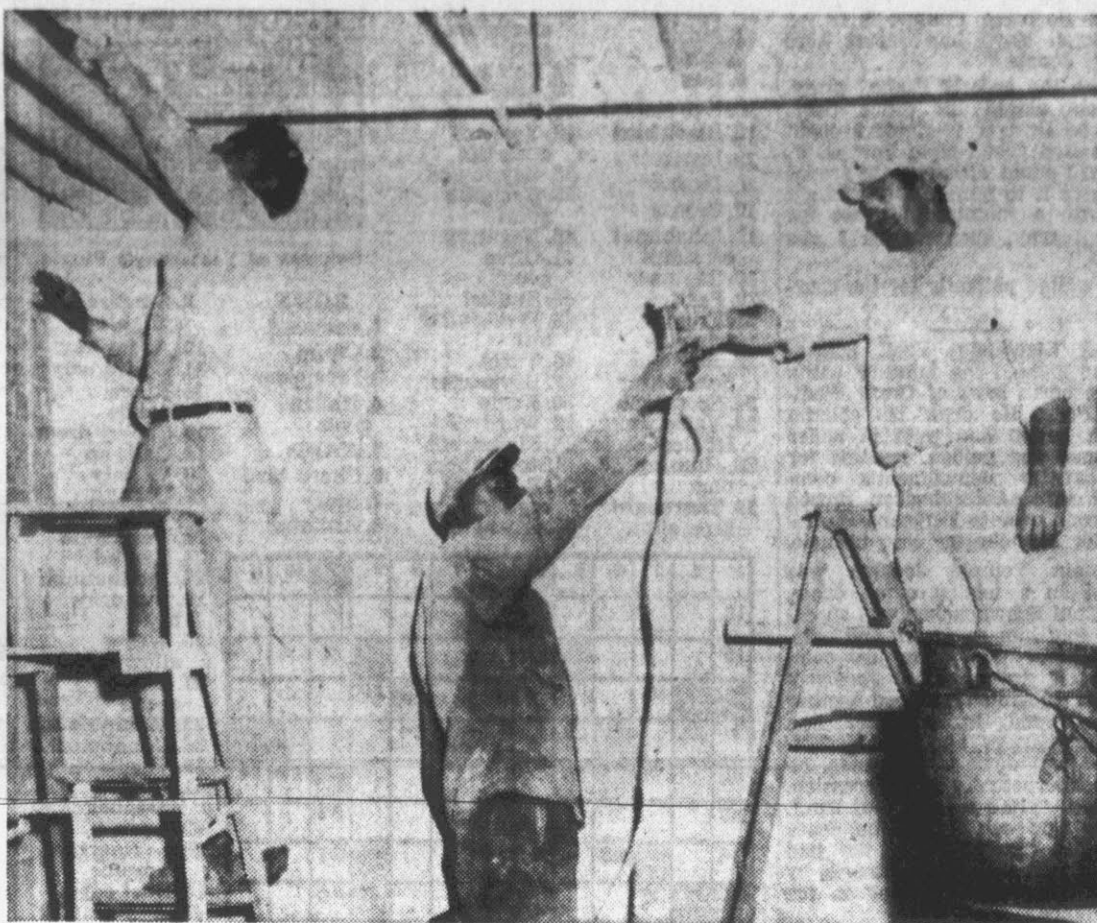

Congressmen who conferred with Eisenhower Monday said the President told them he and Macmillan had reached no secret directives.

Tonight Is 'Oscar Night' For Hollywood's Best Productions

By JAMES BACON
 HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Tonight is Oscar night and, as usual, the only safe prediction is that the men stars will wear tuxes and the women will wear mink.

But Hollywood being the betting town it is, there is a morning line of favorites. Here is the consensus of the so-called experts:

Best actress — Ingrid Bergman.
 Best actor — Yul Brynner.
 Best picture — "Around the World in 80 Days."
 Best supporting actress — Dorothy Malone.
 Best supporting actor — Robert Stack.
 Best director — George Stevens.
 Best song — "True Love."

However, most of the industry will concede that this is the closest Academy Awards race in years — and anything can happen.

Only Miss Bergman and Stevens won the Screen Director's Guild award for his helming of "Giant" and in the last five years the winner of the SDG award has gone on to win the Oscar.

The glamorous Swede, absent from town since she took up with Roberto Rossellini in 1949, faces her stiffest competition from the popular Deborah Kerr. Others in the race are Katharine Hepburn, Carroll Baker and Nancy Kelly.

Brynner is the favorite of all men who comb their hair with a towel and the Academy has enough bald-headed voters to swing it. But Brynner also has three of the year's best performances working for him in "The King and I," "Anastasia" and "The Ten Commandments."

His main competition will come from Kirk Douglas and the late James Dean. "Giant" was Dean's last picture and, of course, the last chance for the Academy to honor the brilliant young actor. Others are Rock Hudson and Sir Laurence Olivier.

"Around the World" is Mike Todd's first movie production and there conceivably could be some opposition from jealous producers who have yet to smell a nomination after years and years.

But most in the industry feel that Todd, a supershowman, has given Hollywood a much-needed hypo. "Giant," a superb job by Stevens, is edging Todd at the wire — so much so that the two may knock each other out. If that happens, watch for "The King and I" to take it. The others are the big spectacle "The Ten Commandments" and "Friendly Persuasion."

Stack's main threats are Mickey Rooney and the ever-present Tony Quinn, Tony Perkins and Don Murray will bear watching but not this year.

Miss Malone finds herself in a nominee's dream — her four competitors all are from one studio and sure to split the Warners' vote. The four are Eileen Heckart and Fatty McCormack of "The Bad Seed," Mercedes McCambridge of "Giant" and Mildred Dunnock of "Baby Doll."

Jerry Lewis will emcee the nationwide telecast and international radio broadcast of the show over NBC beginning at 10:30 p.m. EST.

"We are thrilled at the prospect of preaching the gospel in the British Isles," Rev. Owen declared. "If this mission is to be successful, we must have the prayers of many Christian people. We call upon the people of Pitt County to join us in faithful prayer that God will mightily bless this mission to Britain and Ireland."

Gibbons, who will serve as song leader and soloist on the trip, is a junior in Duke Divinity School and he is a native of Wilmington, Delaware.

In addition to being pastor of St. James, Rev. Owens conducts a Sunday afternoon radio and television religious program, "The Circuit Rider."

The young minister is a graduate of Davidson College and Duke University Divinity School.

Organize Scout Troop Tonight

Scoutmaster Jim Rayford has announced that Boy Scout Troop 205 will be organized tonight in a meeting at the Memorial Baptist Church.

All boys who are 11-years-old or older who are interested in joining the newly organized troop are requested to attend the meeting. Chairman Ott Alford of the Troop Committee be present for the meeting.

Flags Ordered For Schoolrooms

Both Third Street School and West Greenville School have ordered flags for each of their classrooms and will receive them soon through a flag program sponsored by the VFW Auxiliary.

"The children have displayed quite a bit of interest in the flags," explained Miss Agness Fullilove, principal of West Greenville School.

Different money raising projects have been undertaken at the schools to raise the money for the flags.

At Third Street School "The children are raising the money by buying fruit during recess that was donated to the school for this purpose by the Greenville Merchants' Association," explained Miss Lela Stancil, principal.

West Greenville students used the money they raised from a recent sale of seeds for their flags.

CHAPTER 16

As he had missed every long-desired thing in his life, Lieutenant Emil Schwabacker missed the arrival of Jim Bridger at Fort Kearny by better than eight hours. Some men lived to become legends, some men witnessed legends, while others merely had legends pass them by, close, but pass nevertheless. Schwabacker was beating east through the night when Bridger came off Lodge Trail Ridge, an old man, humped in the shoulders and dressed in a dirty canvas coat. But he had the softness of forest winds in his voice and eyes that were accustomed to gazing at inscrutable distances. Ancient now, Bridger had tobacco-stained whiskers and deep wrinkles in the gutter beneath his chin, which had earned him the Sioux name, Big Throat. Mountain man, trapper, horse thief, he was everything a man could be, and more, and the post watched as he came through the gates, going directly to headquarters, the buttonless coat flapping as he walked. About him were the wild, nameless favors of years past. He was the living link to the Bents, to St. Vrain and Hugh Glass, all gone now in the shadows of the great fur trade. All this the men felt who watched Jim Bridger, his old body bent to the wind.

The orderly woke General Wessels, who had slept the night at his desk. Bridger took a chair while the general splashed water over his face. He turned with a towel, his words slightly muffled through it.

"What's going on out there, Jim?" He threw the towel aside and rummaged around for a cigar.

Bridger slumped in the chair, studying his gnarled fingers with their broken nails. "Been a hard winter fer th' Sioux, General. They fussed around until it was too late to hunt much. Been livin' off their moccasins an' that's poor fixin'."

"What's their strength? They have united with the Cheyenne."

"Heap much," Bridger said. "I seen a heap o' Cheyenne lodges. Feitman kidded me all m' life. He raised his head then. "You want some advice, General?"

"I'm not Carrington, Jim. I'll take all I can get."

"They sot fer a whoop-up," Bridger said softly. "Th' medicine's right, th' weather's right. Was I you I'd send all th' sojers I could spare to Fort Smith. When Red Cloud hits, he'll hit there first."

"Any reason to think this?"

Bridger's shoulders rose and fell. "Hunch. Th' smell in th' wind. I've been sniffin' it all m' life. I here'n now get th' feelin', that's all."

Wessels ran his fingers through his thick mustache, worry building furrows in the flesh of his forehead. "I'm under strength and General Cooke is pretty tight with his replacements. Carrington lost a lot of men and there'll be a sink raised about it before the campaign's over. I've a regiment of infantry on the way. I'll have to make do with that, Jim."

"Ain't hard to figure Red Cloud's strategy," Bridger said. "For nigh onto a year now he's been snipin' away, a man at a time. Guess Carrington lost a heap of sojers that way, one at a time. That fool Fetman kidded me onto eighty at one whack; that was Red Cloud's big day, yessiree. You want an ol' beaver's opinion, General? You pull them sojers out of Fort Smith and let th' Indians have it. What is it they call it in lawyer talk? Sue for peace; that's it."

"And after I pull them out, what? Have them killed while marching here?"

"Wal, now, that ain't no like-ly," Bridger said. "Red Cloud just wants you folks outa his huntin' grounds. He's said so afore, but no one wanted to believe him. Was I to make a guess, I'd say he'd just watch while them sojers march south."

"Then I'd have to make my stand here," Wessels said flatly. "Jim, I have orders to follow."

"Dang-fool orders they be too," Bridger said and moved toward the door. He stopped when Wessels spoke again.

"Jim, I've never asked, but what's in this for you, besides the pay?"

"Nothin'," Bridger said. "I'm old. M' kids is grown an' things is changin' so's a man can't keep up with 'em no more. I keep sniffin' th' wind like an old dog, hopin' there's somethin' out there. But there ain't nothin'; this one's seen it all. But a man's a fool who don't know when to quit." He shook his head sadly. "There was a time when I'd ask a man for notin'. I can't recollect th' day I'd ride into rendezvous with m' hosses sway-backed with plews. Now I ain't got a good rifle."

For a moment Brevet Brigadier General H. W. Wessels was held motionless by the honesty of Bridger's words. Then he said, "I believe we're all near the end of something, you. Me. Red Cloud. This is the great year, Jim. We've made our threats and shaken our

Crossword Puzzle

After Jim Bridger left, Wessels summoned his orderly. "Corporal, see if Portugee Phillips is in his barracks. Have him report here on the double."

When the orderly dashed away, Wessels closed his office door. "Maybe Bridger is right; I ought to let Red Cloud have Fort C. F. Smith. I could withdraw the troops and give it to him. If I can't fight and win a summer of peace for Fort Kearny, then maybe I can buy it."

He waited patiently for the courier.

First Lieutenant Emil Schwabacker sighted the infantry camp on the north bank of Crazy Woman's Fork. He drew his column into a gallop and went in under the horn and guidon, heading for the cavalry detachment's command tent. Schwabacker turned the troop over to Sergeant Finnegan for dismounting and bivouac.

Captain Temple Jocelyn was seated on a folding camp chair, and Emil Schwabacker was shocked to find him so drawn and pale. Cove Butler was there, just completing a dressing on Jocelyn's wound. He smiled and toed another chair around. Butler's face was long and narrow, and since his eyebrows bent down at the ends, he wore a perpetually sad expression. He said, "Glad to see you, Emil. Maybe you can talk some sense into this man. He has the bad habit of unraveling my sutures by riding instead of lounging in the ambulance."

Butler snapped his bag shut and Schwabacker drew his chair close to Jocelyn's. On Jocelyn's forehead sweat slickened the skin like oil. He was in pain, for his lips were pinched and the corners of his eyes drew into small wrinkles. Schwabacker said, "Sir, with your permission I'll lead the command into Fort Kearny."

"Denied," Jocelyn said, eyeing Schwabacker's shoulder boxes, where the solitary lieutenant's bar stood out fresh and new.

"You're a stubborn jackass," Butler said bluntly.

Jocelyn was seized with a fit of coughing, and put his handkerchief quickly to his lips. When he drew it away there was a smear of pink on it. Schwabacker forgot all about being an officer and became a doctor. He shot Butler a worried glance.

Butler turned to Jocelyn. "Care for some advice, Temple?"

"If it's cheap."

"Let Schwabacker take the command in. Get in the ambulance and stay there." He saw by Jocelyn's inflexible expression that his advice was unheeded. "Oh, well," he added. "Had I been anything but a fool I might be doctoring the governor's prize mare now and reaping a handsome fee instead of talking to fool captains."

He turned away, but before he did managed to catch Emil Schwabacker's eye. A moment after Butler walked away, Schwabacker said, "Will you excuse me, sir?" and followed the doctor to the slab-sided wagon.

"You saw him," said Butler. "What do you think, Emil?"

"Are you asking for a medical opinion?"

Cove Butler nodded.

"Then he's putting one foot in the grave."

Adventists Prepare For Annual Relief Offering

Every time a member of the local Seventh-day Adventist church sits down to a meal in his home between now and May 25, he will be reminded of persons in need throughout the world.

The reminder will come in the form of a "Self Denial Bank" which is being given each member of the church by Pastor Lyndon De Witt. The banks will be kept on family dining tables from now until May 25 when the funds will be collected for church's annual Disaster and Famine Relief Offering.

Purpose of the offering, according to Sammy Laughinghouse, Home Missionary Leader of the church, is "to bring relief to an ever increasing number of persons in the United States and abroad who simply do not have the necessities of life.

Besides continuing poverty in thousands of cases, there are increasing numbers of persons whose entire resources are wiped out in a single day or hour by disaster," Mr. Laughinghouse said.

In 1956, the church official said, Adventists gave some $8,000,000 in cash, clothing, food, and other supplies to aid persons in 30 different countries affected by famine and disaster.

The May 25 offering is expected to bring in about $260,000 from Seventh-day Adventist churches throughout the world, Mr. Laughinghouse stated. The funds will be used for shipping of supplies contributed by other elements of the church, and for on-the-spot cash outlays in emergency disaster conditions.

Scandal Mag 'Target' Blames The Readers

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — What can Hollywood do about the scandal magazines?

Nothing, says Marlon Brando, a favorite target for the so-called exposés.

The scandal mags have been a worry for the film industry ever since their appearance. The problem was pointed up at the recent state legislative hearings. I asked Brando if he thought the publicity concerning the scandal mags' methods would help Hollywood's battle against them.

"No," he replied tartly. "The publicity only adds to the magazines' allure. People read the news like this." He pantomimed a reader voicing disapproval but licking his lips.

"The answer won't come with legislation," he said. "You can crack down on the detective agencies, which supply 75 per cent of the material to the magazines. But they still find other sources of information."

"These magazines are read by 5 or 10 million people — maybe more by the time the issues are passed around. The popularity of the magazines shows that there is a demand for this kind of material. There are people who derive a vicarious thrill from prying on the private lives of famous people."

"The only solution would come if those readers could be persuaded not to read such cheap smut."

Brando will talk to only a handful of Hollywood correspondents.

"I have made it a rule that I will answer no questions about my personal life," he explained. "This morbid curiosity about how a person lives and eats and sleeps is revolting to me and I will not contribute to it."

"When I first came to Hollywood, I made mistakes. I didn't know the ropes, and I found people taking advantage of me. But I

No Escape From Traffic Fines

DECATUR, Ill. (AP) — Jesse Herman Johnson was held up until he paid police $102.20 for fines dating back to 1949. He was caught while speeding 70 miles an hour in a 20-mile-an-hour zone.

The speeding fine amounted to $59 and the balance included running a red light.

BOMB SEARCH

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — More than 100 policemen searched every corner of the 450-room State Capitol Building after an anonymous telephone caller reported a bomb was planted there.

No bomb was found.

Grown A Foot? No, She Hadn't

CHICKASHA, Okla. (AP) — A visitor noticed 2-year-old Linda Lou Cargill and remarked: "Why Linda Lou, I haven't seen you in so long. You've grown a foot."

The child calmly pressed down her skirt in front and bent over to look, then answered: "Why, I still just have two."

CONSTIPATED? New laxative discovery un-locks bowel blocks without gag, bloot or gripe

Constipation is caused by what doctors call a "thrifty" colon that, instead of retaining moisture as it should, does the opposite: robs the colon of so much moisture that its contents become dehydrated, so dry that they block the bowel; so shrunken that they fail to excite or stimulate the urge to purge that propels and expels waste from your body.

To regain normal regularity, the dry, shrunken, constipating contents of your colon which now block your bowel must be re-moistened. Second, bulk must be brought to your colon to S-T-R-E-T-C-H STIMULATE it to action; to a normal urge to purge.

And, of all laxatives, only COLONOID, the amazing new laxative discovery possesses COLONOID's great moisturizing capacity, plus COLONOID's stretching stimulating bulk. So effective it relieves even chronic constipation overnight, COLONOID is yet so smooth, so gentle it has proved safe even for women in critical stages of pregnancy.

Superior to old style bulk, salt or drug laxatives, COLONOID neither gags, bloats nor gripes; won't interfere with absorption of vitamins and other valuable food nutrients; in clinical tests, did not cause rash or other reactions.

It's a physiological fact: Exercise tones your body! And COLONOID exercises your colon to tone it against constipation, overnight! Get COLONOID, in easy-to-take tablet form at any drug counter, today! Only 98¢ for the 60 tablet package, brings positive relief at less than 2¢ per tablet.

After 23 Years, Escapee Turns In

JACKSON, Mich. — Thomas Fay, 50, who apparently lived inside the law for the past 23 years, turned himself in to police yesterday as a 1933 escapee from a North Carolina prison, Lt. Kenneth Gress reported.

Gress said local records give Fay, alias Thomas McGrail, a clean bill of health, but federal records are being checked.

Fay told Det. Lt. Fred Foster that he gave himself up after his arraignment yesterday on a non-support warrant, issued on complaint of his wife, Helen. The couple separated six weeks ago.

Fay pleaded not guilty to the non-support charge, saying he gave his wife $31 of his $40 salary this week alone and had given her $100 over the separation period.

He told Foster that he was giving himself up because he knew his fingerprints would be checked on the non-support warrant and his past record would be discovered.

Patrol's Safety Program Is Concluded

SAFETY PROGRAM—The Pitt County safety series for this year was terminated with a program in the Greenville High School this morning. Shown above, left to right, are: Jerry Howell, president of the student body; Greenville Police Chief S. G. Gibbs; Principal O. E. Dowd; and Cpl. E. Whitfield of the State Highway Patrol. This program began in the county on January 16 and has been presented to over 17,000 Negro and white children of school age. (Photo by Everett Parker).

The State Highway Patrol terminated its extensive safety program this morning in the Greenville High School.

"The efforts of the courts, law enforcement officers and legislators alone cannot make the highway and streets safe. The effort must enlist the active help of every person and every agency that recognizes moral standards and discipline," stated Patrol Cpl. C. E. Whitfield, speaking before the high school students.

Greenville police worked with the Highway Patrol in presenting this safety program to all the school children in the city. Chief of Police S. G. Gibbs was present and assisted in the presentation of this morning's program.

This series of safety lectures began in Pitt County on January 16 and terminated early in February. The program, given to pupils from the first grade through the senior class, generally consisted of a 25-minute film on different phases of safety that was filmed by the North Carolina State Highway Patrol, lectures and the passing out of literature dealing with accidents and their prevention. Lectures by the patrolmen have included a diagram of accidents for 1956 and how and where they occurred and several informative discussions on safety while walking, riding a bicycle and an automobile. Over 18,000 pieces of this literature have been passed out.

It has been estimated that well over 17,000 Pitt children have been given this program this year since it began in January.

The series began in the city schools on March 12. Participating in this morning's program was Chief Gibbs, Cpl. Whitfield and Principal O. E. Dowd. The students were also shown a 25 minute film.

This school indoctrination program was the first step toward the 1957 goal of a sharp decrease in the number of traffic fatalities and has proven to be more successful than at first planned. Thus far this year only two deaths have been recorded on the streets and highways of this county. Last year, Pitt had 24 deaths, more than any previous year.

A similar program was conducted in this county in 1954 and according to reports not a single accident or fatality occurred during the year involving a student of elementary and high school age.

During the course of his lecture, Cpl. Whitfield stated, "The most lethal weapon of the future may be the hydrogen bomb but today it is the motor car. It has killed more Americans than have died in all the wars in which the United States has engaged."

'Sandwiched In' 4 Other Cases

Two time-consuming trials occupied Superior Court officials most of yesterday but the officials did manage to sandwich in four other judgments during the day.

Those judgments included:

Nelson Midgett, Negro, Farmville, driving under the influence, not pros; Nelson Midgett, Negro, Farmville, careless and reckless driving, $50 and costs; Mack Thomas Harrell, Stokes, driving under the influence and driving to the left of the center line, defendant entered a plea of guilty to public drunkenness, $10 and costs; and Simon Somerville Lawrence, Jr., Wilson, speeding, $25 and costs.

In addition, another defendant, James A. Harper, no address listed, was called and failed to answer to a charge of driving under the influence. Judge J. Paul Frizzelle ordered a judgment nisi, scilicet and capias instanter for Harper.

Judge Frizzelle also appointed Milton Williamson of Greenville as defense counsel for Ella Smith, Greenville Negro who was indicted Monday by the Grand Jury on a first-degree murder charge. Williamson was appointed after Judge Frizzelle ruled that she was unable to employ an attorney to assist her.

Would Provide Pay Increase For ECC President

RALEIGH — The House put its stamp of approval yesterday on a bill which would create a general services division to replace the present State Department of Buildings and Grounds.

Other developments on the legislative front yesterday included: The House received a bill to allow disabled war veterans to buy their automobile license plates for $1 and to exempt their cars from property taxes. Reps. Frank W. Sneyd, James B. Vogler and Ernest L. Hicks of Mecklenburg offered the measure.

The salary of the presidents of three state-supported colleges would be increased under a measure introduced by Reps. L. H. Ross of Beaufort and Marcellus Buchanan of Jackson. Under the measure, the salary of the president of East Carolina College would be upped from $11,000 to $14,000 a year. The president of Western Carolina College would be raised from $9,500 to $12,000 a year, and the president of Appalachian State Teachers College from $10,000 to $13,000 a year.
