League Of Women Voters Hold Elections, Hear Yearly Reports

Mrs. Robert Forney has been elected president of the League of Women Voters for 1957. She succeeds Mrs. Michael Luskin.

Mrs. Forney's election was announced Tuesday night at the league's annual meeting, held this year in the Council Room at City Hall. Other officers who were elected at the meeting included Mrs. M. P. Bailey, first vice-president, and Mrs. Ann de la Mater, secretary.

League members also adopted an education survey for the 1957-1958 current agenda.

Year-end reports, which covered activities of the Greenville league's first year as a full-fledged unit, were presented by committee chairmen. The reports included activities on subjects dealing with international, national, state and local situations.

Mrs. Leon Ciporin reported that 41 local citizens have appeared on the weekly foreign affairs television program which was started in January. She also said that relief maps of Suez and Hungary were made and placed in a downtown store window, with up-to-date news items attached to the maps.

Other international activity included a public round-table discussion of foreign policy in the Middle East in January.

The national agenda report was prepared by Mrs. James Poindexter, committee chairman, and read by Mrs. Ciporin. The report stated there has been discussions on individual liberties and the O. T. C. Bill for technical assistance to the United Nations. The league also presented a television program on the United Nations.

Walter Jones, one of Pitt County's representatives in the General Assembly, was speaker at a public meeting on the Pearsall Plan. Legislative reapportionment, the state's judiciary system and the various types of courts in North Carolina were discussed at unit meetings, according to the state agenda report presented by Mrs. Forney.

Local activities were reviewed by Mrs. Bailey. She said telephone committees were formed for each election on the bond issue and that there was a public meeting on the recreation section of the issue. Members of the city's recreation board formed the panel for the public meeting.

League members also helped to man safety check lanes during the safety campaign and 500 "I Will Vote" tags were distributed during the national elections in November. Mrs. Bailey pointed out that the league is non-partisan and the tags which were distributed were simply reminders for everyone to vote.

A listing of how North Carolina senators and congressmen voted on 1956 issues in the Senate and House were distributed to league members at the annual meeting.

The new board of directors held their first meeting after the annual session was adjourned. Members of the board include Mrs. Forney, president; Mrs. Bailey, first vice-president; and bulletin chairman; Mrs. T. W. Rouse, second vice-president and membership chairman; Mrs. de la Mater, secretary; Mrs. Charles Adams, treasurer; Mrs. R. P. Rogers, state agenda; Mrs. James Poindexter, national agenda; Mrs. Michael Luskin, local agenda; Mrs. Jake Hadley, publications; and Mrs. S. A. Sewell, public relations.

Mrs. Charles Horne is chairman of the Telephone Committee.

It was announced that the next board meeting will be held Thursday, April 4, and the next unit meeting will be held April 10.

Program: Sonata Op. 48 No. 1 (Ignaz Plegel); Music Box Gavotte (Michael Mehul); March from Egmont (Beethoven) and Daybreak from Mardi Gras (Ferdie Grate).

This group has been selected to play at the several Music Federation meetings.

The April meeting of the club will be held Sunday, the 28th, at 3:30 in Austin Building when Billy Eby of New Bern, grandson of Mrs. Ray Tyson, and J. C. Dunn of East Carolina College will present a recital as part of the Fine Arts Festival.

After a short business meeting the members and guests enjoyed viewing fashions and coordinating accessories modeled by Mrs. P. J. Smith, Mrs. Leland Flanagan, Miss Marietta Northrop, and Miss Carol Ann Tadlock. They were assisted by Mrs. L. S. Nichols, manager of the College Shop.

The commentator, Mrs. William Rowland of the College Shop of Durham, gave detailed descriptions of the fashions and accessories. She was the center of a discussion concerning materials, fashion trends, and the way to build a useful wardrobe by the wise selection of color coordinated clothes.

Among her useful tips she cautioned against buying anything uncoordinated in an established wardrobe. She also stressed the importance of feeling comfortable in clothes mentally as well as physically.

Mrs. Smith, assisted by Mrs. Joe Stone, invited members and guests into the dining room where home made delicacies and spicy Russian tea were served from a table covered by a hand-crocheted cloth.

She used as the centerpiece a huge crystal basket filled with spring flowers, flanked by matching yellow tapers. An arrangement of purple flowers from a species of the Tulip Tree was used on the buffet and was a center of attraction because of color, texture, and shape of the flowers.

Guests who joined members for the evening were Mrs. Moulton B. Massey, Mrs. J. B. Kittrell Jr., and Mrs. Carl Anderson.

Reapportionment Solution Here

Favorable Senate Committee reports on two bills pertaining to the bitter question of reapportioning representation in North Carolina's General Assembly promise an acceptable way for the legislature to work itself out of the reapportionment dilemma.

Both bills call for constitutional amendments. One would create a special commission charged with the responsibility of reapportioning representation in the General Assembly following each federal census if the legislature itself did not act as the constitution now stipulates. The other bill would increase membership of the House from 120 to 130 members and provide that no county would have more than two senators and no senatorial district would be comprised of more than four counties.

The first measure, as approved by Senate Judiciary I Committee, would obviate the possibility of the legislature finding itself again in the position it now finds itself. Since the 1951 General Assembly did not see fit to reapportion representation as provided in the constitution, each succeeding session has questioned its own authority and responsibility to do so. Under the new proposal, the special commission would take care of the reapportionment task if the legislature failed to act in its first session following each census.

By increasing membership in the House by 10 members, limiting the number of senators any county can have regardless of population, and restricting the size of a senatorial district to a maximum of four counties, fair representation of the people of the state can be assured in the General Assembly. Under the present system both houses of the legislature are apportioned to individual counties and areas on the basis of population, with the guarantee that each county shall have at least one representative in the House. Under this system the extra 20 members of the House are allotted to counties whose population is considerably over the average for the 100 counties.

Under the present system a single county might have an unlimited number of senators and a host of representatives if its population were large enough.

The restriction on the number of senators a county can have would assure a better balance of power from throughout the state in the legislature. It would prevent the large counties (population-wise) from having complete control. At the same time prohibiting a senatorial district from including more than four counties would assure even the smallest county of having a voice in the Senate as well as the House.

This proposal for reapportionment has more merit in our estimation than any other yet advanced. Now that the Senate Committee has given it approval, we trust the Senate will see fit to act favorably upon it and the House will follow suit.

Defiance Alone Can't Win For Dave Beck

Teamster President Dave Beck has defied Congress by hiding behind several Constitutional amendments rather than answer questions of the Senate Racketeering Investigations Committee.

By his statements he indicates he intends to defy the AFL-CIO executive committee if that group rules he is ineligible to hold his present post because he has refused to answer questions before the Congressional committee.

Beck has even gone a step further in announcing his intention to seek re-election as Teamster president later this year.

By these actions we gather that Beck does not intend to answer the charges brought against him relative to mishandling and misuse of funds which belong to the union he heads. Though Beck occupies a strong position as head of the Teamsters, the position should not be sufficiently strong to enable him to defy the United States Senate, the AFL-CIO, and membership of his own union.

Beck should not be let off with the high-handed tactics he has so far employed before the investigations committee. Unless he is dealt with severely by the government, by the top echelon of the organized labor movement in this country and by members of his own union, there can be little hope for removing racketeering from organized labor.

Extra Care In Trustee Choice

By LYNN NISBET

UNIVERSITY — There is evidence that members of the General Assembly may be giving more than usual attention to the qualifications of candidates for places on the board of trustees of the Consolidated University.

To be sure there is the usual politicking on behalf of legislators as well as incumbents on the board. There are rumors of vote-swapping and of schemes to assure selection of the trustees favored by a clique of insiders. There is also evident purpose on part of a great many people to choose trustees with care and with a view of the real service they can render the state.

This attitude stems from a feeling of optimism and confidence in the stability and prospects of the University. One hears on all sides expressions of faith in the institution which are highly gratifying to students, alumni and friends.

The phenomenal record of the Carolina basketball team did not depreciate the feeling, but the athletic record is only a small component of the total atmosphere. For the same reason the unfavorable publicity about athletic recruiting at State College has not seriously affected belief in the basic soundness of the Consolidated University.

Governor Hodges told newsmen the other day that he was impressed by the attitude of faculty members and others with whom he talked at the Gardner Award Dinner last Friday night — before the basketball game at Kansas City. "There is a new spirit and a new interest," he said, "a willingness to work together and an atmosphere of confidence, that is very gratifying."

PROGRESSIVE — A business man was talking about the same thing recently. He had said several years ago that he would not permit his grandson to go to Chapel Hill. He was not so much afraid of the rumors of communism on the campus as he told the officers that he had found it absolutely impossible to adjust himself to the outside world and expressed great relief at being behind prison walls again. "I can't tell you," he said, "how glad I am to be back."

This is the story of an inverted kind of happiness. It is the happiness of the person who 100 men and women on the board only one failed to attend a meeting during the past year. That was Leigh Winslow of Hertford, whose health did not permit him to attend.

PLAN — Governor Hodges has compromised on some points, may yield on others, but he is generally holding to a total plan for raising per capita income in North Carolina. He told newsmen that the bill providing for a minimum wage of 75 cents an hour and affecting some 90,000 workers is an integral part of the total plan.

Other items include revision of the tax laws, more emphasis on processing and marketing farm crops and better facilities for training technicians.

SUSPICION — The natural and spontaneous reaction of many legislators is to view with suspicion every bill that comes with sponsorship of the welfare department. A high percentage of the proposals are enacted into law, but not until they have been given close scrutiny by one or more committees and often only after prolonged debate on the floor.

Lawyer members of the Judiciary committee are just as zealous in protecting the rights of women and children as anybody. But court room experiences make them acutely conscious that sometimes well-intentioned "relief measures" are diverted to the benefit of worthless people.

Such diversion happens when money paid to parents for care of children is dissipated before the kids are fed and clothed. The lawyers also know from experience that secrecy provisions of domestic relations and juvenile courts often protect culpable adults more than the innocent children.

So it was that when a bill came before House J-1 increasing jurisdiction of domestic relations court, an eagle-eyed lawyer discovered its enactment would give the domestic court jurisdiction over some felonies, without a jury or public trial. That baby went to a subcommittee.

Another measure designed to help counties recover part of funds paid to support children in cases where the father was in another state, barely squeaked by with a favorable, because some of the lawyers felt it was more for the relief of the Federal government than for the affected children.

The same committee found a bug in an anti-fire-bug bill. A desirable amendment to the arson law contained the regular repealer section, which might have had the effect of repealing all the laws against arson. That one was left in the committee cooler for awhile.

Strength For Today

EXHILARATING EXPERIENCE — In a book published recently on juvenile delinquency, there appeared the story of a chap sent to prison before he was twenty-one, and kept there for about twenty-five years. At last, he was paroled. Almost immediately, he was in trouble again and returned to the institution. He told the officers that he had found it absolutely impossible to adjust himself to the outside world and expressed great relief at being behind prison walls again. "I can't tell you," he said, "how glad I am to be back."

Ain't Science Wonderful?

The Urchin Enjoyed It All

The movies made their annual invasion of television last night — and the Wee Urchin who runs our home with forceful lungs and an iron will thoroughly enjoyed it.

Why he chose last night to rouse himself from his normal all-night sleeping is beyond me. I can only conclude that he had some sort of feeling that Elizabeth Taylor would be on the show.

Despite the loss of sleep involved in sitting through such a show, I have to admit that I was fascinated in watching reactions of some of the Oscar winners. Some were suave and sophisticated about the whole affair; others were like little children at an ice cream and cake party; and there were still others who reacted as if they had been bopped over the head with the awards instead of having them handed out.

I have not been an avid movie fan during the past two or three years. Last year, for instance, My Fair Gwen and I saw three movies — and left in the middle of one of them. We did, however, sit all the way through "Written on the Wind" and I have to confess we enjoyed it.

We felt that the presentation of Dorothy Malone for best actress in a supporting role was fully justified. She was in "Written on the Wind" and did a marvelous piece of acting... but, of course, we could not compare her with the other nominees because we just didn't see any of them in their movie roles.

We also agreed with the choice of Ingrid Bergman for the best actress award, but it was strictly a sentimental choice. We have not seen "Anastasia" and unless the situation that now exists changes we probably won't see it.

Other Editors Saying --- Oil & Foreign Policy

(Rocky Mount Telegram)

Ever since the Middle Eastern crisis first began to boil and the United States began its zig-zagging and baffling policy of backing the Arabs and Egypt's tin-horn dictator Nasser, Americans and people over the world at large have vainly sought some logical explanation.

At the height of the crisis when the United States sided with the Arabs and the Communists against the three democratic allies, Britain, France and Israel, the consensus of opinion in England was that oil was the tail wagging the American dog.

This theory seemed preposterous at first but as time has dragged along and the United States has gone out of its way to accommodate Nasser and the Arabs at all costs and despite every reason to the contrary, it has become apparent that the influence of oil could be the only explanation for the administration's untenable policies.

The other day Columnist Drew Pearson came up with some startling facts which he had dug up and which emphasize the "oily" character of the Eisenhower administration at the moment.

These are Mr. Pearson's findings: Secretary of the Treasury George Humphrey has not sold his stock in the M. A. Hanna Company which he formerly headed as did Defense Secretary Charles Wilson with his General Motors stock. Why this oversight has not been challenged remains a mystery. It just happens that the Hanna Company owns 482,256 shares of common stock of Standard Oil of New Jersey. Value: $26,885,722. It happens that the Hanna Company also owns 187,500 shares of Seaboard Oil. Value: $11,671,875.

The law firm of Secretary of State John Foster Dulles represents Standard Oil of New Jersey.

Ex - Undersecretary Herbert Hoover, Jr., was an executive of Union Oil which is interlocked with Gulf Oil which obtains its oil from the Arabs in the Gulf of Persia.

Christian Herter, the new Undersecretary of State, is indebted to Standard Oil of New Jersey for his wife's fortune.

George Allen, who was lambasted as a "Truman crony," but praised now as a friend of President Eisenhower and who was with the President on the Georgia plantation during the height of the Middle Eastern crisis, has been chairman of the Yemen Oil Development Company.

Those who know these oil facts of life in Washington today were not as surprised as the rest of the world that President Eisenhower broke a precedent and personally met the King of Saudi Arabia at the airport, thereby offending all other heads of state who have met in the past and will not in the future be met on arrival by the President.

It is well and good to protect American commercial interest in the Middle East and anywhere else in the world, but vital interests, even oil, do not justify a sell-out of American principles in the fast game of international power politics.

I believe there are a number of would-be movie fans in situations similar to ours. We just don't take the time and trouble to go to the movies unless the occasion and the movie are rather special. It's much easier (and cheaper) to stay home and curl up in front of the television set.

The movie industry has obviously recognized that situation and has made an effort to produce better pictures. The industry has come to realize that TV fans aren't going to leave home unless there's a guarantee of good entertainment for the individual.

There are, of course, exceptions but as a general rule the quality of motion pictures has improved tremendously. That much is obvious even when an individual sees only three movies in an entire year.

Last night's Oscar Awards were pitched to the level of convincing television viewers that movies are "better than ever." I believe that the industry may have won back some old fans and encouraged new ones with their program last night.

Wee Urchin was convinced anyway. Every time something was said about how great movies are he'd grunt and settle down with a satisfied air about him.

And when he finally decided he'd seen and heard enough he went back to sleep without a fight — and with a smile he pulled out when Elizabeth Taylor was first shown in a close up shot.

I smiled, too. After all, I was madly in love with the girl about 10 or 12 years ago.

An Eye To The Future

By RENE CAPPON

AP Newsfeatures — Shortly after the first World War, a young Navy veteran in Seattle abruptly decided to drop his laundry bags for a union job.

"I had the laundry route built up to where I was making $100 or more a week, and that was big money in those days," Dave Beck was to reminisce later as the $50,000-a-year president of the mammoth Teamsters Union. "but I couldn't see any future in it."

Beck has headed the Teamsters, a 1,400,000-member organization of pervasive economic power, since 1952. He is also something of a Seattle real estate tycoon.

Beck the businessman never has been wholly submerged in Beck the labor leader, and he likes to stress parallels between running big unions and big corporations. He has encouraged a policy of investing surplus union funds in various business enterprises, and loaning to companies with which the Teamsters held contracts were sometimes made from the union treasury.

Bulky, round-faced, and well-tailored, the 63-year-old union leader lives in a $163,000 lake-shore home in Seattle, complete with swimming pool and movie projection room. The handsome residence was a gift from his union.

Beck has been called a millionaire and although he has disclaimed the title, he recently conceded he has made "a heluva lot of money."

Just how much is not a matter of public record. More light on this question and many others connected with Beck's activities — official and unofficial — may be shed when the labor leader appears before the special Senate committee investigating alleged labor racketeering. The committee has been building a long and sensational dossier of testimony on the Teamsters.

"The committee has not been ready for Mr. Beck," Sen. John McClellan (D-Ark.) said in explaining why Beck was not called after his surprise return from a prolonged European trip. "When it is ready, the committee will issue a subpoena for him and hear him."

The senators already have heard testimony linking Teamsters representatives in Portland, Ore., with efforts to open the city to gambling and vice.

The son of a poor carpet cleaner from Tennessee, Beck was born in Stockton, Calif. Four years later his family moved to Seattle. He quit high school to go to work. Married and the father of a son, Beck has no consuming hobbies, neither smokes nor drinks.

His first union office was as a business agent for a laundry driver's local. In 1927, he was named a Teamsters' organizer by Daniel J. Tobin, whom Beck eventually succeeded to the presidency after heading the powerful 11-state Western Conference of Teamsters for 15 years.

Beck prides himself on "fighting like hell for a contract," and then rigorously abiding by it. But he is a veteran of many raucous inter-union fracas as well. Labor chiefs whose picket lines the Teamsters were ordered to cross have called Beck a "Judas," "America's No. 1 Strikebreaker," and many other things.

Beck counters that he wouldn't "pay the price of violating contracts to stay popular."

Other points of friction arose over jurisdictional battles. The Truckers under Beck have seldom been known for reluctance in pressing such claims, and their chief once reportedly summed up his idea of the Teamsters' domain in one succinct sentence: "Everything on wheels, that's our jurisdiction."

Opinions In Brief

"National Safety Council figures" for last year show that three people were killed in traffic accidents during the hours of darkness for every one killed by daylight, even though there is two times as much driving by day as by night. The cause is obvious: Visibility during darkness is not and never can be as good as it is in daylight. —(The Tulsa Tribune)

Probe May See Tax Law Changes

By RAY TUCKER

WASHINGTON — Senator John McClellan believes that the Beck-Brewster handling of Teamster Union's funds may necessitate drastic revision of the Federal tax laws in order to prevent legal or illegal looting of union treasuries. Internal Revenue officials agree with him that the tax exemption now accorded to unions may have to be withdrawn.

The McClellan investigation has shown that the Frank Brewster bosses, Dave Beck, Frank Brewster and James E. Hoffa, do not keep records of secret financial deals, including loans to themselves, gifts to friends and political contributions unrelated to their members' interest or benefit. They destroy these documents systematically and periodically. And the secretarial keepers of the few records available are sometimes shipped on a slow boat to a faraway land.

Internal Revenue officials, who are following closely the McClellan revelations, concede their helplessness in checking on Beck-Brewster-Hoffa transactions. In the first place, unions are exempt from Federal income taxes. And for this reason, court decisions have blocked government attempts to pry into union officials' use — or misuse — of union funds.

UNION OFFICIALS REFUSE BOOKS TO TAX AGENTS Hoffa, who has frequently been mentioned at Beck's possible successor as Teamster president, flatly refused to produce his books to Federal tax agents two years ago. Like Brewster, he told a Congressional investigating committee that he ordered union records to be destroyed at the end of each year.

An action to recover $6,059 in taxes allegedly owed by Hoffa for 1952, 1953 and 1954 is now pending in the United States Tax Court. It is expected that similar suits will be filed against other Teamster officials as a result of the data Internal Revenue has obtained from McClellan COURT RULING BLOCKED

FEDERAL AUTHORITIES In addition to the tax immunity granted to unions by Law, Federal authorities were blocked from investigating Brewster's tangled financial affairs by a decision of the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals. The 2-1 decision was delivered by Judge James Alger Fee, who was appointed by President Eisenhower early in 1954. Judge Walter L. Pope wrote a scathing dissent, which the McClellan disclosures appear to justify.

In January, 1954, Federal agents began an investigation of Brewster's 1943-1952 tax returns, based on many of the same facts brought out at the McClellan inquiry. They asked his union, Local 174 of Seattle, to produce all records of transactions by Brewster and his wife, Dorothy. The union produced an "abstract," but refused to turn over the original papers. It now appears that they have been destroyed.

DECISION AND DISSENT The Federal District Court ordered production on the ground that the demand was "reasonable." But Judge Fee over-ruled this decision on the ground that the request was too broad. He held that Brewster alone, not the union, was under investigation. And union tax records are exempt even from inspection by Uncle Sam, although corporations are not.

Judge Pope's dissent was prophetic, in the light of the McClellan developments. He said: "The showing made before the District Court was that Brewster... had numerous financial dealings with the union, indicating many transactions which were not reflected in his income tax returns."

"The investigating officers found notes to the local signed by Brewster in the name of the Clearwater Stock Farm (Brewster's racing stable — Ed. note), which provided for no payments of interest, and the records available to the investigating officers indicated that these substantial so-called loans from the local to Brewster were never paid."

Academy Acting Honors For Stars Of 'Anastasia'

By JAMES BACON
HOLLYWOOD — The movie industry has given its highest honor to Ingrid Bergman, who left Hollywood amid scandal and criticism eight years ago and hasn't returned.

The 42-year-old Swedish star won the Academy Oscar — her second — at its 29th annual awards presentation last night. The prize was for her sensitive portrayal of the bewildered Russian princess in "Anastasia."

Miss Bergman, in Paris, was the star in a series of ceremonies in which Yul Brynner won the top actor award for "The King and I" and "Around the World in 80 Days," with five Oscars.

A surprise winner was the song "Que Sera Sera" (whatever Will Be, Will Be), written by Ray Evans and Jay Livingston.

PARIS — Actress Ingrid Bergman, told on awakening this morning that she had won her second Oscar, said she was "absolutely delighted and very happy."

Hollywood named the best Swedish-born actress of the year for her performance in the movie "Anastasia."

She said she was especially glad that Yul Brynner was named best actor for his role in "The King and I."

"You know Yul and I costarred in 'Anastasia' and we became very good friends," she said.

Miss Bergman's second Academy Award was accepted for her role in Hollywood by actor Cary Grant. She won her first Oscar for her role in "Gas Light."

Skipped School For 6 1-2 Months

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — While their parents thought they were in school every day, two young boys live in a Huckleberry Finn life for 6 1/2 months "exploring and sitting and watching the sky."

The heaven they built for themselves at their "secret" cave was shattered yesterday and they were to be enrolled in school today.

Police discovered Ora Lee Linville, 14, and his brother Jerry, 13, sitting beside a cheery camp fire in their cave yesterday morning. The cave, located in a creek bank near Southeast High School, was near a playground.

"We spent the mornings exploring," Ora said. "Then we'd build a camp fire and eat lunch. In the afternoons we'd just sit and watch the sky or the creek until school was out and then we'd go back home."

Sometimes they would hike into the country — if the day was warm. Their mother thought the boys had enrolled in school last September. They admitted it was a touch-and-go situation keeping mom and dad fooled.

"When mother asked for our report cards we told her we had lost them or that the school wouldn't give them to us until we paid a fee," Ora Lee said. The family moved here recently from Chickasha, Okla., and weren't familiar with the grade card system.

He said other things also had to be explained such as not bringing books home or not having any home work.

The parents, Mr. and Mrs. Earl Linville, said the first time they knew the boys had not been at school was when a police car brought them home.

"They'll be in school tomorrow morning," Linville said.

"Dad gave us a pretty hard talking to when he found out about it," Ora said.

The lads were discovered by officers after neighbors reported seeing them near the cave during school hours.

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Patrick Coleman, 6, was touring a firehouse with his first grade classmates. On the second floor he stepped into the hole used by firemen when they slid down the pole. Patrick went down, without help from the pole, falling 14 feet and landing on a rubber mat. The damage — one loose tooth.

MARIETTA, Ohio (AP) — A Marietta College professor, completing a study of Midwest criminals, claims the study offers proof that there is a "criminal type."

Dr. Max N. Burchard, 31-year-old sociology professor, said the results of a series of tests have been compiled to form a classification he terms the "pro-habitual convict" or the "criminal type."

Here are some other characteristics of the "criminal type," according to Dr. Burchard's survey:

He has no feeling of responsibility, seems to feel more secure behind bars, is a lonely, derelict type, is an ineffectual criminal action as he is in everyday life, and has no desire to improve his station.

The criminal type does not plan his crimes effectively, is easily apprehended, is convicted on a guilty plea, earns one or more paroles, is easily controlled while in prison, and does not go to prison school.

GANSEVOORT, N. Y. (AP) — Fifteen-month-old Diane Radecki, run over by her father's automobile, nursed only minor bruises and abrasions today.

Diane's body sank into soft earth yesterday as a wheel of the car passed over her hip. Her father, Stanley, was backing the car from his garage.

U.S. Foreign Service Officers Are Uncle Sam's Key Figures Overseas

By REM PRICE
WASHINGTON — Fred Sacksteder was vice consul of the United States at Lyon, France, in 1955.

Until Sept. 1 of that year, life had been fairly routine — visas, import-export licenses, looking after lost or wayward Yanks.

But on that day Sacksteder, now serving in Washington, had an opportunity to demonstrate the payoff of the State Department's careful selection of each Foreign Service officer, this government's eyes, ears, right arm and backbone overseas.

Lyon, a heavy industrial center, was subjected to a severe storm. Hailstones shattered nearly every skylight in town. Millions of dollars worth of machinery was exposed.

Sacksteder said in an interview. "The consul was out of town when I got a call from the French asking if we could contact our military and obtain canvas tenting for covers."

"We started an airlift of tents and tarpaulins. Then we hauled it in by truck. In all we provided about 500,000 square feet of canvas. In Lyon it is a Page 1 story. The tone of those stories was that 'other countries may talk of what they do for us. The Americans act.'"

Often humdrum, the life of an FSO does have its dramatic—and dangerous—moments. Since the department was founded in 1789 some 75 FSOs have lost their lives, some in earthquakes, some in shipwrecks and some by bullets and bombs.

On Nov. 1, 1948, the Bamboo Curtain descended before the American consulate at Mukden, China, headed by Angus Ward. The staff was imprisoned, threatened, accused of being spies and finally deported. Ward himself was beaten by a Chinese servant trying to curry favor with the Communists. Despite 28 days of intensive questioning, Red-style, none of the staff members cracked.

In the State Department's command setup, which closely parallels that of the armed services, the FSO is under constant scrutiny. His personnel folder is examined by experts yearly. If he is classed with the bottom 10 per cent in proficiency for three consecutive years, he is fired.

His beginning salary is between $4,300 and $5,350 a year, depending upon marital status and background. He can look forward to promotion about every two or three years and possibly the title of career minister at a salary of $17,500. If he becomes a career ambassador his salary will be $20,000. The job of an FSO is varied.

This recommendation is being carried out under Deputy Undersecretary Loy Henderson. Ideally an FSO will come home fody duty after every six years overseas.

Last year 12,595 young Americans applied for FSO jobs and of these about 5,500 actually took the extraordinarily stiff written and oral examinations. Only 20 per cent of those making top grades were selected.

The consular and embassy staffs in Italy provided housing and cars for Americans evacuated from Egypt at the height of the Suez crisis, even supplying Thanksgiving dinners out of their own pockets and often in their own homes.

The Austrian and Hungarian staffs worked around the clock during Hungary's October revolt to rescue Americans and then to provide visas and transportation for thousands of refugees.

Until 1954 the department was divided into two services — civil and foreign. The civil group functioned exclusively in this country on policy-making jobs. There was no provision for interchange of jobs.

The net result was the practical exile of the FSO. While important jobs in the United States were held by men with little or no actual foreign experience. No other country had a system like it.

In 1954 a committee headed by Henry M. Wriston, former president of Brown University, examined this setup and found that among 197 FSOs with more than 20 years experience, 67 per cent had not served more than three years in this country.

"Men immersed continuously in other societies," the report noted, "inevitably tend to lose touch with the circumstances and attitudes that shape policy at home."

This observation cut two ways. Men here permanently could not fully understand foreign problems. Wriston's committee recommended a merger of the two services and a rotation system.

CHARLOTTE — Army Sgt. Ray Alexander of Charlotte operates under probably one of the most unusual sets of orders ever issued a military man.

The Army ordered him to seek out church and civic groups and, with photographic slides and his first hand knowledge, tell the story of a mud and straw church in Korea.

The sergeant, born and raised in nearby Long Creek, is a Marine veteran of World War II and an Army veteran of Korean fighting. But his church story began in 1955 when he signed up for another Army hitch.

"They said it was impossible for me to get assigned to the 11th Engineers, my old outfit," said Alexander. "But it just seemed like a miracle. Pretty soon, I was over there in Ohkumni (Korea), back with the Engineers."

Alexander was a chaplain's assistant. In the absence of a chaplain he put up a squad tent and planned GI religious services.

War - impoverished Korean natives started to attend.

Alexander wrote to Charlotte for clothing and his wife interested her church in the project. The church sent 10 shipments, enough to clothe every Korean in Ohkumni.

After a year—with 45 Korean adults and 125 children crowding the tent services—Alexander figured it was time to build a church.

The church members dug mud from rice paddies, mixed it with straw and made blocks with which they built the church. They plastered the building with lime meant for a GI football field. They roofed it with materials paid for by Charlotte residents.

A blacksmith in Seoul forged a bell.

"We ended with a Christian village," Alexander said. "The church is the biggest building in town, the only place where the people can get together. They hold services Sunday, Monday, Wednesday and Friday."

That's the story the Army ordered Alexander to tell.

Stock Exchange Wants To Help Teach 'Jargon'

By SAM DAWSON

NEW YORK — Does the jargon of the stock market throw you? If you're one of those who wouldn't know if you're becoming involved in a boiler room or a bucket shop, the stock exchange wants to help you.

It's out today with definitions of 240 terms used on Wall Street in New York; LaSalle Street in Chicago and Montgomery Street in San Francisco.

The stock exchange declares that some 30 million Americans show an interest in learning more about stock investments, and that about half a million of them become new investors each year. So it thinks if people knew what the were talking about, or wondering about, it might help.

To that end the exchange is publishing a glossary of terms called "The Language of Investing."

A convertible in Wall Street isn't an auto. According to the glossary it's "a bond, debenture or preferred share which may be exchanged by the owner for common stock or another security, usually of the same company, in accordance with the terms of the issue."

Locked in is defined thus: "An investor is said to be locked in when he has a profit on a security he owns but does not sell because his profit would immediately become subject to the capital gains tax."

Formula investing is: "An investment technique. One formula calls for the shifting of funds from common shares to preferred shares or bonds as the market, on average, rises above a certain predetermined point — and the return of funds to common share investments as the market average declines."

A thin market is one "in which there are comparatively few bids to buy or offers to sell or 'both' either because of 'lack of interest' in particular stocks or 'limited supply' of them."

Liquidity is "the ability of the market in a particular security to absorb a reasonable amount of buying or selling at reasonable price changes."

A boiler room is defined thus: "High pressure peddling over the telephone of stocks of dubious value. A typical boiler room is simply a room lined with desks or cubicles, each with a salesman and telephone. The salesman call what is known in the trade as sucker lists."

Mother Admits Son Beat Her

NEW YORK — A 51-year-old man is charged with felonious assault in the beating of his 84-year-old mother.

Mrs. Mae Amory was taken to Bellevue Hospital yesterday with a fractured skull and multiple injuries. Her condition was described as critical.

She had been living with her son Fremont Amory, an architect, for about a year in his Manhattan apartment.

At first the frail mother denied her son had beaten her during an argument. Later, however, she told police: "Yes, he did it. I wanted to protect him. I didn't want him to be hurt."

Downed A Dozen Tranquilizers

DENVER — Donald Seick Jr., 4, downed a dozen of his mother's tranquilizer pills yesterday and went out to play.

A few minutes later a playmate found him asleep.

Doctors were called in time to save the boy but they predicted he would be sleeping for several hours.

Summer Workshops At College Are Announced

East Carolina College has announced that the 1957 summer session will include three specially scheduled workshops which are expected to be of benefit and interest to teachers and other groups interested in public education in this state.

The programs of study and the dates when they will be held are: Moral and Spiritual Values in Public Education, June 4-14; Alcoholism in Health Education, June 17-27; and Family Problems with Emphasis upon Personal and Family Living, June 23-July 9. Each will be offered for three quarters-hours of credit.

The workshop in Moral and Spiritual Values in Public Education will be sponsored by the college and the American Association of Colleges for Teacher Education. Dr. A. L. Sebaly of Oneonta, N. Y., national coordinator of the Teacher Education and Religion Project for the AACTE, will serve as consultant.

Dr. John B. Bennett of the college faculty, who is in charge of arrangements, has announced that members of various departments at the college will discuss the relationship of religion to their areas of work. Representatives of different denominations and faiths will also give the views of their groups regarding the relationship of moral and religious values to public school programs.

The workshop on Facts about Alcohol will be offered under the direction of Dr. N. M. Jorgensen, head of the health and physical education department at East Carolina. Sponsors will be the college and the North Carolina Alcoholic Rehabilitation Program.

Lecturers will include Dr. Norbert L. Kelly, education director and S. K. Proctor, executive director, both of the NCARP. The Nature and Extent of Alcohol Problems, Educational Procedures and Techniques in N. C. schools, and Some Aspects in the Causation and Treatment of Alcoholism will be among topics of discussion.

The American Social Hygiene Association and East Carolina College will act as joint sponsors of the workshop in Family Problems. Dr. George Douglas, coordinator of family life education in the Charlotte city schools, will act as coordinator. He will be assisted by Mrs. Edna Earle Baker, supervisor of Pitt County schools, and Dr. Bennett.

The American Social Hygiene Association is granting fifteen scholarships to this workshop which will take care of all expenses, including room, board, and tuition, and fifteen tuition scholarships of $20 each. Those interested should apply to Vice President Leo W. Jenkins, East Carolina College.

Panel Will Talk Suez Reactions

Two East Carolina College faculty members and a former member of the U. S. Foreign Service will discuss the United Nations doctrine on Suez tomorrow on the League of Women Voters' weekly television program.

The program, which will be shown on WNCN at 1:15 p. m., will include as panel members Dr. Kathleen Stokes of East Carolina's Social Studies Department, Frank Fuller of the Education Department and Herbert Lee, a former member of the Foreign Service who was assigned to Egypt. Mrs. Michael Luskin will serve as moderator for the discussion.

Each of the three panel members will discuss reactions in individual countries in the Middle East.

Raps Low Pay In Technical Field

By ALTON BLAKESLEE
AP Science Reporter
ST. LOUIS (AP)—A high percentage of certain laboratory tests on your health are wrong or not good enough, a doctor declared today. The test results partly and sometimes vitally influence the treatment your doctor then gives said Dr. Lewis Smith, a pathologist from Dallas, Tex.

The main reason for poor tests is very low pay usually given medical technologists—the doctor's helpers who run the vital laboratory tests, Dr. Smith told the American Academy of General Practice.

He said too many are paid less than secretaries or typists. The result is too few good technologists and insufficient training. Dr. Smith said a national survey finds 14 per cent of medical technologists make less than $46 a week; 35 per cent get $58 to $70; 25 per cent $70 to $80; and only 8.5 per cent get more than $80.

Good standards demand a medical technologist has five or six years of college and at least one year of training in a special medical technology school, the doctor said.

Dr. Smith reported a three-state survey some years ago showed 42 to 62 per cent of tests for specific blood measurements were "not satisfactory—outside the bounds of acceptable accuracy."

These included tests for anemia, for blood sugar, blood salts, for nitrogen in uremia or blood poisoning, and for blood plasma proteins.

Laboratory tests partly determine whether a doctor decides to give a blood transfusion—which can be costly and not without hazards—or start other treatments.

Dr. Smith declared erroneous or not-too-accurate laboratory reports "can be responsible for a major number of prolongations of illnesses and some deaths."

Kept Vigil Over 240,000 Bugs
OKLAHOMA CITY (AP)—If Mrs.

M. H. Bain had bugs under her eyes today she could blame them on 240,000 lady bugs. Her husband kept the insects in a box in the house until he could take them to his farm. Bain said the bugs were bought in Phoenix, Ariz., and were to be put in his alfalfa field to kill harmful insects.

Mrs. Bain said she checked the box frequently during the night to be sure none escaped.

School-Need Figures Basis Of Federal Aid Argument

WASHINGTON — Evidence that the U.S. Office of Education here used coercive tactics against State officials will henceforth enliven the arguments over whether federal aid to education would lead inevitably to federal control of the schools.

Out of the recent tumult that accompanied a House Education subcommittee's hearings on bills providing for federal aid to school construction, there emerged this fact, as attested to by Rep. R.W. Gwinn (R-N.Y.), a member of the subcommittee:

"The Office of Education, building up support for its estimate that there is a nation-wide shortage of 159,000 schoolrooms, sent questionnaires to the States and in Rep. Gwinn's words:

"If it (the federal agency) did not like the answer that came back from the person who filled the questionnaire in . . . it would return the United States and other organizations opposing federal intervention in public school systems maintain that federal funds for school construction inevitably would lead to federal control of schools.

Mr. Folsom has made no survey, conducted no study on the ground to get his 159,000 figure. Not a man went into the field from Washington to visit a single school district out of the 51,000 he (Mr. Folsom) now pretends to speak for."

"In no case, Rep. Gwinn said, was any information obtained from any school board, 'the only authority that can speak for any school district.'"

"Some of the answers consisted of 'post cards from local school superintendents and sometimes the schoolteachers answered them,' he said.

"No governor, no legislator, no school board has come forward asking for federal aid. Federal aid and control is literally being thrust on the states in spite of themselves, so far as the record or testimony goes."

Michigan Netters Defeat East Carolina Team, 7-2

The highly-respected Kalamazoo (Michigan) College tennis team downed East Carolina's netters 7-2 yesterday afternoon in the Bucs' first tilt of the season at College Courts.

Sweeping the singles competition, the powerful Michigan team racked up their 42nd consecutive victory in a span of over two seasons. They opened their season Tuesday with a 9-0 triumph over the University of North Carolina.

Singles Victories Kalamazoo rolled easily over what was expected to be East Carolina's strongest point of play, their singles performers. Maurice Everett, the North State Singles champion last year and ECC's most celebrated player, was tripped 6-4, 6-0 by Michigan's Dodson. Schram defeated ECC's John West by the same score. Japlings topped Hollowell by 6-3, 6-2. Brice defeated Savage 10-8, 6-3, 6-2. Yewell defeated Katsias 8-6, 6-2, and Nesbitt dropped Blake 4-6, 6-4, 6-0.

Everette, Katsias, and Blake are all veterans from the 1956 North State championship team from ECC. It was only in doubles competition that the Pirates managed to score. The teams of West and Savage and Katsias and Hollowell defeated their visiting foes to tally two points for the locals and save their club from being blanked, as was Carolina on Tuesday.

West and Savage, both newcomers this season, topped Nesbitt and Yewell 7-5, 1-6, 6-2. Katsias and Hollowell trounced Kalamazoo's Faulk and Byenneman 4-6, 6-1, 6-2.

Little Practice The East Carolina netters have had little time for practice thus far this season. For the past two weeks, rain has hampered drills. Also, Coach Raymond Martinez was away with his championship swimming team for almost a week at Carbondale, Ill.

The Bucs will have today and tomorrow to work on their mistakes, and then play host to Elon College in their first North State tilt, on Saturday.

Industrial Loop Basketball In Two Contests

In Industrial League basketball last night at the Greenville Armory, Carolina Dairy defeated Pepsi-Cola 49-46 and Carolina Sales trounced Greenville Paris and Metals 50-42.

L. R. Hardee was high scorer for the losing Pepsi-Cola crew in the first game, with 19 points. Smith Worthington of the winners was the game's top man, however, with 21 tallies.

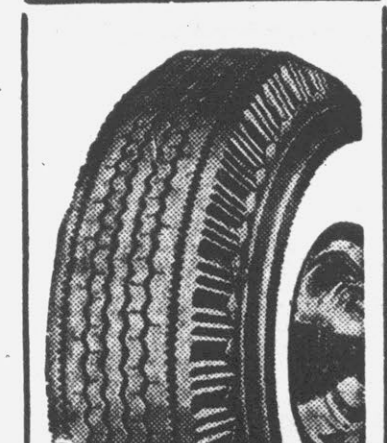

Pepsi-Cola was leading at half-time, 26-19, but a last-half surge by the Dairy put them in front to stay. Worthington notched 15 of his 21 points during the last half.

In the second contest, Carolina Sales jumped to a quick 22-14 first-half lead and carried it all the way to a 50-42 win. Cardell was high man for the winners with 16 points, while Warren notched the same total for the losers.

TAKING A CUT—ECC veteran netter James Blake, of Jacksonville, takes a vicious cut at a ball in yesterday's match against powerful Kalamazoo (Michigan) College, here. Nesbitt, of the visitors, defeated Blake, 4-6, 6-4, 6-0, as the Kalamazoo outfit rolled to a 7-2 victory. ECC's points came on two doubles wins. It was the Pirates' first encounter of the 1957 season.

Olympic Stars May Set Pace

By HUGH FULLERTON JR. CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — To duels each between two pairs of U.S. Olympic swimmers may touch off a record smashing spurge in the 34th National Collegiate swimming championships, but the outcome of the whole meet likely will depend on tonight's opening event in which a record is only a faint possibility.

It's an odd situation which finds a great deal depending on Yale's Ray Ellison, who only finished sixth a year ago. Yale's powerful team, winner of 156 straight dual meets, appears by far the strongest of the 59 entered for the three-day meet in North Carolina's Bowman Gray pool. If Ellison wins the 1,500 tonight, it will be hard to stop the Ellis.

"But they need those seven points," North Carolina Coach Ralph Casey, co-director of the meet, said today. "If Ellison should have a bad night, they'll be human beings like everybody else."

The 1,500 is the only event in which the entries aren't seeded to provide balance heats. It is decided on time, with the six swimmers who have the best season records going into the last heat. They usually set a fast enough pace to kill off any ordinary swimmer or one who is off form. Last year George Breen of Cortland (N.Y.) State won in meet record time of 18:05.9 and then went on in the Olympics to set a world record of 17:52.9. Ellison's best time this season is 19 minutes flat.

The best competition of the meet is expected when Michigan's Dick Haney and Indiana's Bill Woolsey, both members of the U.S. relay team which finished second in the Olympics, hook up in the 220-yard duel. They swam a dead heat at this distance in a dual meet and Haney won the Big Ten title by less than an arm's length. The same pair will clash in the 440 freestyle.

Yale's 19-year-old sophomore sensation, Tim Jecko, and Indiana Olympian Dick Tanabe are due to do the 100-yard but 10ly and 200-yard individual medley with exciting results.

Jecko, rated the best prospect to score the first NCAA swimming triple since the late John Marshall of Australia and Yale won three races in 1951, is favored in both butterfly events and the medley. His best "fly" times—55.6 seconds and 2:08.6—are well under the meet and NCAA records held by Michigan's Jack Davies. He has done the medley 2:08.6, as compared to Al Wiggins' American mark of 2:07.5 set in this meet last year.

Tanabe has a time of 55.3 for the 100 and 2:08.9 for the medley. Ohio State's team, which includes two Olympic divers in addition to Wiggins, isn't eligible to defend the team title it has held for three years. The Buckeyes are on probation for violating NCAA rules concerning their work program and loans to football players. A similar situation confronts the Southern California team with breaststroke champion Bob Hughes and Olympic diver Dick O'Connor.

Three Big Ten teams—Michigan, Michigan State and Indiana—are expected to give Yale its strongest competition for team honors, with North Carolina, Harvard and Oklahoma cutting in for at least a few points.

A check disclosed Sissom had not followed the National Boxing Assn. "5-point-must" scoring system, adopted by Missouri and had, instead, scored five rounds of the fight under the old rule. It awarded up to 10 points per round.

Under the "5-point-must" system, no one fighter in any round can be given more than a maximum of 5 points. The loser can be awarded four or less. An even round is scored 5-0.

On his scorecard Sissom gave the winner of the second, fifth, sixth, seventh and ninth rounds six points instead of five. It was these rounds Giardello and Carter protested.

As a result of Giardello's challenge, the referee's card was officially changed to read 47-45 in Vaughn's favor.

The Hollywood Negro, a 5-1 underdog, carried the fight to Giardello all the way, and in the fifth bloodied Joey's brow over the right eye. Vaughn gained confidence as the bout progressed, winding up the stronger fighter and virtually unmarked. He weighed 160, Giardello 159 1/2.

Buc Baseballers See Week Of Work Before Next Tilt

By BILLY ARNOLD Reflector Sports Editor East Carolina's baseball team, with a 2-1 record thus far in the early season, will have a full week of work ahead of them before their next ball game.

Saturday, April 5, the Bucs play host to Atlantic Christian College, to open their North State season. ECC is the defending champion of the loop for the second straight year.

Coach Jim Mallory, who has indicated that his present group of baseballers may be his best team to date, found some cause for worry Tuesday, when Delaware trounced his club 13-4. He commented during the game that his "pitchers need a lot of good hard work. If we can get our pitchers in good shape, we'll be all right."

Mallory used four pitchers against Delaware and, while his hurlers gave up only six hits, they also produced 12 fatal walks.

Williams Showing Up Big George Williams, an 18-year-old freshman righthander from Shawboro, has been showing up well in his first two appearances for the Pirates. Williams pitched four years of ball at Camden high school and was rated as one of the hottest pitching prospects in the state last season.

He won East Carolina's first game of the year against VPI, 11-4, pitching seven innings and batting in the winning run himself.

Mallory used Williams again Tuesday for 2 2-3 innings against Delaware. He fanned two, gave up two hits and no runs.

Charlie Russell, the leading Pirate moundman with a 10-0 record which extends back to his freshman year at ECC, is still on the sidelines with a sore arm. Russell has never been beaten in collegiate competition and was a big cog in the Pirate machine that copped the North State title both in 1955 and 1956. He was an All-

State performer last season. Leonard Lilley showed up well in his only performance of the season against VPI, last week. It was behind Lilley's pitching that ECC built up a 4-0 lead over VPI in their first meeting. The Pirates went on to win 11-4.

Mack McPherson, Mack Cherry, Ben Baker, Bob Miller and Bruce Shelly are the only other hurlers to see duty thus far and all of them have been bothered by wildness. Mallory said, concerning the matter, "what our pitchers need is plenty of good hot weather and hard work. That's the only way to get them in shape."

Hitting Good Pirate hitting during the first three games of the year has been strong. They have collected 24 base knocks in three games and 26 innings, for an average of eight hits per game. Several of the hits have been for extra bases and one has been a homer.

Leading the batting parade have been Berney Stevens, Dean Robinson, Joel Long, Tommy Land, Jerry Stewart and Tommy Nance.

The Atlantic Christian game, next Saturday at College Field, may put the Bucs to their biggest test yet, as far as their hitting is concerned. ACC lost most of their infield and outfield by graduation in 1956, but Coach Jack McComas still has his top pitchers.

Back for another season will be Ken Fulghum, a senior righthander from Rock Ridge, who was one of the loop's best last year. Others who have seen prior service will be Howard Ham, Tommy Norville, Troy Perry and Fred Rouse.

Other than his pitchers, only three experienced hands will be back to boost McComas' squad. They are Durwood Davis, shortstop; Bob Whaley, outfielder; and Reuben Hollowell, second baseman.

Meet Tonight Greenville's Recreation Department announced today that there will be a meeting of the Industrial Softball League tonight, at Elm Street Park, at 8:00.

All people interested in playing or anyone interested in sponsoring a team in the summer league should be present.

Rare Disease Has Infant In Its Grip

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Mark Steven Lawrence will come home from the hospital this week — but no one is sure how long he will stay.

The Rev. and Mrs. C. J. Lawrence, parents of the bright-eyed 9-month-old boy, are going to "face each day as it comes and try not to think of the future."

Mark is the victim of porphyria — a rare disease which doctors here believe has never before been recorded in a child so young. The disease — an inborn mistake in the baby's metabolism — interferes with the conversion of food into living tissues.

And there is no telling when it might strike again. Mark weathered the first attack only by a narrow margin. Doctors said that at one point he was clinically "dead" — his breathing stopped — for a period of two or three minutes.

Emergency action with positive oxygen pressure revived him. The child's father, a Baptist minister studying at the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary here, said he and his wife first noticed the trouble about two weeks ago. Mark was unable to swallow milk. His throat muscles wouldn't work. He couldn't cough or cry with any force and he became irritable and nervous. It was the child's irritability that led doctors to suspect porphyria—which sometimes causes severe jangling and inflammation of the nerves.

Chemical tests confirmed the doctors' suspicions. A big help to Mark was a tranquilizing drug used in treatment of the mentally ill. It quieted Mark's nerves.

And, the minister said, he and his wife prayed and their friends prayed.

Mark, who will go home tomorrow or Friday, is again eating normally and has a lusty cry that sounds "mighty good" to his parents.

But, his father said, "in all probability we can expect further trouble — it is unpredictable."

Her Electricity Was 'Leaking'

DURANT, Okla. (AP) — A woman called the Durant Electric Co. office and complained her bill was too high.

The company checked her meter and wiring and reported nothing wrong. Two days later, the woman called to apologize, announcing she had discovered the trouble — found a socket without a light bulb in it and the "electricity was leaking there."

Just In Time To See Burglars

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Ten police cars sped to Good Will Industries of Philadelphia early yesterday and their occupants were just in time to see two men vault a fence, scramble over rooftops and hot-foot it down some railroad tracks. The thwarted burglars left behind a lazy cocoa-brown horse hitched to an old milk wagon fitted up with auto tires. The wagon was loaded with scrap iron, two old washing machines and a batch of other material collected by Good Will, a welfare organization specializing in the employment of handicapped persons to mend clothes and repair furniture, appliances and the like. A stableman said horse and wagon had been rented the day before and taken out at 3:30 a.m. Police said there was no trace of the two men who got away.

Big, Expensive Gamble In New Television Shows

By CHARLES MERCER

NEW YORK — If you have an idea for a regular television program you must make a "pilot film" in order for anyone to take your idea seriously. But that doesn't mean, of course, that anyone will buy it.

It is estimated that of every 20 pilot films made, only one reaches the home screen as a regular TV program. It's a big gamble — and an expensive one.

Production cost of a pilot film is usually about $40,000.

That is the approximate cost of a pilot recently completed in New York by the producing team of Norman Frank and Stanley Niss. Tentatively entitled "U.F. 61," it will be (they hope) a series about the activities of a mythical New York detective squad. The word is that ABC-TV is definitely interested in the series.

Frank and Niss pondered and planned the series on and off for four years before taking the big gamble of actually producing a pilot. Because a successful pilot theoretically must be better than 19 other pilots, they collected a first-rate production staff and cast.

For a director they chose Frank Schaffner, as cinematographer, Burgi Contner, as musical director, Alfredo Antonini, James Gregory was picked to play the role of the central character, Lt. Bernard J. Savage. About half the footage for the proposed series will be done on location.

Various television series have shown detectives based in a central police headquarters assigned to homicide one week, narcotics another, and so through various types of crime. Frank, a stickler for authenticity, insists that it isn't done that way in actual police headquarters practice. But precinct detectives do have more versatile roles.

So he invented the 12th New York precinct as the dramatic background for Lt. Savage and his fellow policemen. The projected series does not seek to take stories from New York police files (which have been sealed as a source to TV programs anyway). It did hire a police consultant for the pilot film to assure complete authenticity of detail. The consultant's only criticism was that one actor needed a haircut before he could portray a cop.

will be the deadline for prospective candidates to file. The Town Clerk added that filing is usually slow until the latter part of next month.

Only two offices will be filled in the coming election, one commissioner and the mayor. Mayor Burney L. Tucker has not disclosed as yet whether he will seek reelection.

None Filed Yet In Winterville

WINTERVILLE — City Clerk T.E. Cannon stated yesterday afternoon that no candidates have filed for offices to be filled in the town's election to be staged May 6.

The registration books will be opened on April 6 and will remain open until April 27. April 27 has been designated Challenge Day. According to Cannon, April 26

Young People To Serve In New Revival Series

Teen-age youth are going to be the preachers at a new type of revival series being sponsored by the Missionary Volunteers of Greenville. Those attending will see the youth of Greenville in action, not only as speakers, but also as musicians.

The local MV society announces the first program for Friday night, 7:15. A film of unusual interest has been secured, Walt Disney's fabulous "Beaver Valley." Following the film, Larry Leach, salesman, will lead the youth in singing.

The evening's message will be presented by four local youth. Their subject is "The Book, The Blood, and The Blessed Hope." Also featured in the evening's program will be a special Health feature, on Better Living. During the course of the evening, three drawings will be held, in which an interesting story in book form will be presented to the lucky winner.

The Voice of Youth Crusade Revival is slated to continue every Friday and Sunday nights beginning March 29, and ending May 17. These programs, designed especially for modern youth, will be held in the Voice of Youth Auditorium, E. 10th St. Ext. Colonial Heights. The revival series is being sponsored by the Southern Union Conf.

The Missionary Volunteer Department, under the direction of Mr. Buck Kite, invites all young people of Greenville and the surrounding area to attend.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Superior Judge Newcomb Condee declared James D. Starns out of the race by a default divorce decree after Mrs. Ellis L. Starns testified he was more interested in handicapping horses than paying attention to her.

CHAPTER 17

"If I could give Jocelyn the will to go on," Emil Schwabacker said, "would you help me relieve him of his command, Cove?"

Cove Butler let his breath whistle through his teeth. "That will get you court-martialed, son. But quick."

"I know that," Schwabacker said. "Jocelyn is the kind of man who'll go as far as his legs will carry him, then he'll travel a little farther on guts, but there has to be an end. I give him six weeks at the outside if he doesn't get to bed and stay there."

Butler shook his head. "I don't give Jocelyn a thing, Emil. He can make up his own mind. I've told him the truth, what would happen if he didn't rest. You be smart and keep out of it."

Schwabacker looked around the camp. The infantry were lounging in the army's manner of systematic disorder. The cavalry were dismounted, but still waiting on the flanks. "Who picked this bivouac, Cove?"

"The captain. To tell you the truth, he couldn't go any farther and didn't want to admit it. Pretty poor, isn't it?"

"From a military standpoint," Schwabacker said. "It's terrible. There are hostiles around here too," Butler said softly. "More than I care to think about. They've been pacing us all the way from Fort Laramie."

"Cheyennes?"

"Sioux too," Butler said. "Between you and me, I think Jocelyn means to make a last-man stand here."

Schwabacker shook his head. "Not with one troop of fresh cavalry recruits and a regiment of infantry too fat to run."

"Two troops of cavalry," Butler contradicted. "He's got your nose, boy." He paused to scan the bracketing hills for several minutes. "I saw smoke up there all afternoon. I wish they'd drop the other shoe. It nearly kills a man to know they're out there and have to wait for them."

"Who's in command of the infantry?"

"Captain Blaine. This is his first tour in Indian country," Butler smiled.

Emil Schwabacker went back to his own bivouac, where he found Sergeant Sean Finnegan inspecting the surrounding terrain and not liking a bit of it. No one had to tell this troop of hardbitten fifty-cent regulars that hostiles were out there or what they were there for.

Finnegan said, "How's th' capt'n, sor?"

"Very poorly," Schwabacker said. "Well, Sergeant, what would you say our chances were here?"

Finnegan took off his kepi and made a mess of his hair with probing fingers. "Well, sor, it surely is hard to say. Them duck-footed infantry men is mighty temptin' to a mounted Sioux. Then again, there is somethin' holdin' 'em back or they'd have attacked already."

"Ain't no disrespect, sor, but it ain't th' capt'n's cavalry. I'd like to see you lead 'em."

"I'm only suggesting a solidification of command for safe-medicine."

"In short, Sergeant, you don't know any more than I do."

"Aye, sor," Finnegan said, grinning, "but I was sort of hopin' you wouldn't find that out." He scuffed dust into a small pile, then picked it into a cloud. "I just don't like this dang'd country here, sor."

He was justified, Schwabacker decided. Jocelyn's camp was in the only open stretch of land for the next fifteen miles. His picket line formed in the grove near the bend of a stream. A circular bivouac could be formed here, but Schwabacker struck the possibility out of his mind. The only answer was to move, with or without Captain Temple Jocelyn's consent.

"Sergeant," Schwabacker said, "what are the possibilities of making a night march?"

"Poorly, sor. It's all right for the cavalry, but them poor foot sojers'll stumble all over themselves."

"They'll have to get along the best they can," Schwabacker said with finality. "Sergeant, you took me into your confidence once concerning Captain Jocelyn's past. I want you to go a step further and give me his wife's address."

"I couldn't do that, sor."

"Finnegan, I don't mean to pull rank on you, but I haven't time or inclination to explain at this time. I simply want his wife's address. If the man insists on dying, then I think she has the right to choose between being with him at the end or not. Now, will you give me her address?"

"Yes, sor. Sexton's Junction, Virginia, sor." He paused to wipe a hand across his mustached mouth. "I sure hope this is right, sor."

"If you can save a man's life it's right," Schwabacker said. He's been waiting for a letter from her. Maybe I can get what he wants."

"Fetch my dispatch case and select a man who can ride. I want this letter taken to Laramie in time to catch the Wednesday stage."

"Yes, sor," Finnegan said and turned away.

With the letter to Temple Jocelyn's wife sealed and in the hands of Trooper Johnson, Schwabacker walked over to Captain Jocelyn's tent. Jocelyn was sitting in the camp chair, his head thrown back, his eyes closed. He heard the trooper ride out and his eyes followed him until he passed from sight. Then they focused on Emil Schwabacker. "Lieutenant, I authorized no one to leave this bivouac."

"He left on my authorization, sir," Schwabacker said firmly. "I'm sorry to disturb you, sir, but I would like a word concerning the disposition of the troops."

"As you can see they are in bivouac," Jocelyn said flatly. "Lieutenant, I suggest that you unite your troops with mine."

"Does that mean that I am relieved of my command, Captain?"

"No, no, of course not," Jocelyn said with a trace of irritability. "I'm only suggesting a solidification of command for safety and maximum security."

"Sir," Schwabacker said bluntly. "I believe that this bivouac violates every concept of field security. It's unwise to remain here."

The look Temple Jocelyn gave Schwabacker was a shock to the young officer, for something of Schwabacker's father came into Jocelyn's eyes and the stony cast of his cheeks. Sergeant Finnegan chose that time to come over. He stood to Schwabacker's left, near Jocelyn, but the captain did not even favor him with a glance. "Lieutenant, are you pitting your picaune experience against my years of service?" He waved his hand. "You've served me; you know I'm not a martinet! But I believe I'm the best judge in this case."

"I have no intention of debating," Schwabacker said.

"Neither have I, Lieutenant! As your senior officer I might remind you that your conduct is bordering on the disrespectful. I'm not going to be tied to a saddle again, do you understand? As long as I have voice to command, command I will!"

For a moment Schwabacker could only stare in stunned disbelief. Even Sergeant Finnegan, with his long relationship, could not quite hide his shock. At first, Schwabacker was unable to understand Jocelyn's meaning, but the pieces fell into place like a difficult puzzle. All along, he had mistakenly believed Jocelyn was grateful for having been saved at Ryndlee's. But Temple Jocelyn was, not! Instead of uniting them, Schwabacker's action had only pushed them further apart. Jocelyn, like Schwabacker's father, felt shame, not gratitude, when a weakness was exposed. With this new knowledge, Emil Schwabacker was certain that the only thing that would ever right this would be a time when he was weak and Jocelyn could bestow his strength. In that moment he learned a startling truth about Jocelyn.

Lieutenant Emil Schwabacker said slowly, "Captain, I'm sorry, but I deem it inadvisable to remain here. I'm ordering the command to move in one hour."

"In that event," Jocelyn said evenly, "I will see that you face a general court-martial." He coughed and flecks of blood came to his lips. Quickly he covered his mouth with his handkerchief.

"Sergeant Finnegan," Schwabacker said, "ask Dr. Butler to come here. I want the captain removed to the ambulance."

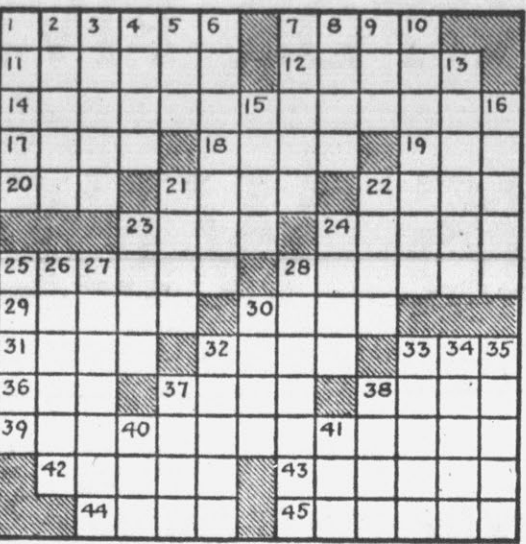

Finnegan started to turn, but stopped when Temple Jocelyn unflapped his pistol holster and drew his gun. The cocking hammer was a series of snapping sticks, then the bore settled on Emil Schwabacker's belt buckle.

"Your arrest, sir. I'm placing you under arrest."

Jocelyn holds the gun. What does the immediate future hold for Emil? Continue Chapter 18 tomorrow.

Too Quiet, He Needed A Cure

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — Peggy Crawford, a drugstore saleslady, was somewhat puzzled by a customer who came in asking for a cure of laryngitis.

Noting the man's voice was clear and not at all hoarse, she asked:

"Do you have laryngitis?"

"No," the man shook his head. "It's my wife. She hasn't been able to say a single word for several days."

Contrary to most husbands who would be happy with such a situation, this fellow insisted on a cure for his wife's ailment. "It's so quiet around the house I'm getting lonesome," he said.

Status Quo Was Found Preferred

SUPERIOR, Wis. (AP) — Two Superior men who attempted to organize a housewives' union have reported to Chief of Police Arthur Buchanan that they spent $50 on postage and supplies and failed to get a single application for membership.

The one dollar registration fee was to have entitled members to the privilege of sending two written grievances to a board of review.

Chief Buchanan said the women who asked police to investigate the promotion scheme told him she, personally, wasn't interested in joining as she had been married 40 years and figured there was no point in "asking for a change in conditions at this late date."

Claims Evidence Was Nail Polish

PITTSBURGH (P)—Mrs. Alberta G. Reed, 58, of nearby Bridgeville, testified in Criminal Court yesterday at her drunken driving trial that she wasn't drunk when two patrolmen stopped her car. Why, she said, the officers had not smelled liquor on her breath—they smelled a "heavy" coat of nail polish she had applied about an hour before being involved in a minor accident.

Grifton Group Forms Industrial Commission

GRIFTON—A group of civic leaders met last week to form the Griffon Industrial Commission, an organization designed to work toward the goal of obtaining new industry for the town and this immediate area.

According to information received this morning the following officers have been named: chairman, Iwan Bissette; vice - chairman, Thurman Williams; secretary, Robert Wheeler; treasurer, Bill Daws; and publicity chairman, Clyde Simmons.

It was also pointed out that labor representatives from federal labor and state departments were in Griffon during various intervals last week making surveys of the labor market possibilities.

Town officials feel that Griffon has excellent potential as a future industrial site. It was noted that some plant could locate in this vicinity that might be able to use some of the by-products of the DuPont plant as well as other by-products, namely lumber.

At the present time the Commission is working on outlines and the forming of other committees, to be named in the near future.

The present farm situation was the primary factor behind the forming of the Industrial Commission," States Chairman Ivan Bissette. Officials feel that additional industry will be a definite asset to the farmer and businessman alike and should provide a supplementary income to many in the Griffon community.

Organizers of the Commission feel that a community wide by-representing the entire community would be the most advantageous method of obtaining new and additional manufacturing concerns.

A spokesman stated this morning, "We are definitely optimistic and feel that the newly formed Industrial Commission is a big step toward acquiring a supplementary income for the people of this area."

Eastern Carolina News Briefs

CONSIDERING CLINTON CLINTON — Zenith Plastics Co., a wholly owned subsidiary of the nationally known Minnesota Mining and Manufacturing Co., has let it be known officially that it is "interested" in locating a plant in Clinton.

Officials have stated that Zenith's interest in the Clinton plant stems from its need for an eastern site for manufacturing fiber-reinforced plastic components for airplanes, principally radar housings. The negotiations deal with the possible sale or lease by the Clinton Development Corp. of a modern type building the corporation built at a cost reported to have been in excess of $300,000.

SURVEY COMPLETED WILLIAMSTON — Representing a cross section of the county, 114 persons took special driver vision tests here and in Bear Grass last week. The survey is being sponsored by the National Council of Women's Home Demonstration Clubs and the American Optometric Association Auxiliary throughout the United States. This preliminary survey is being limited to one county in each of the forty-eight states, and Martin is chosen the pilot county for the survey in this state.

Results of the survey have not been tabulated. The survey is designed to obtain information and statistics about vision as it relates to safety, and to enhance highway safety by pointing out visual deficiencies.

FISH POND BANK RICHLANDS — Mr. and Mrs. Graham L. Cavanaugh of Rich-lands are $1,429.66 richer yesterday, thanks to their unique "fish pond bank" at their home here.

This story of prosperity began 18 years ago when Cavanaugh lost a coin in the pond. Evidently the incident causing considerable thought and he decided to use the "fish haven" for a bank since it would be seemingly impossible for him to draw the money out whenever he wanted to.

On Sunday, he and his son decided to pick up some of the change and got $42 in a matter of a few minutes. With help from associates he finished the digging operation on Tuesday and came up with $1,429.66 in coins—mostly 25 cents, 50 cents and a few silver dollars.

BEAUTIFICATION PROJECT WASHINGTON, N. C. — A rural church beautification project with $900 in prizes was approved earlier this week by the Executive Committee of the Beaufort County Farm Bureau.

The plans provide that any rural church in Beaufort county may enter the competition, and it identified a rural church as one in which 50 per cent or more of its members live in rural areas. Entry deadline has been set on May 15, with judging to be done on November 15.
