Memo to Brides

Wedding Photos Seldom Are Failure

(Editor's Note: This is the third in a series of articles written especially for the bride, her fiancé, parents, and members of the wedding party who want all the information they can get on making the wedding a big success.)

By ANNE SINGLETON Reflector Woman's Editor

Afraid your formal bridal pictures won't turn out well? Don't worry about it for a second, advise the professionals.

Professional photographers agree that, "While all brides may not be beautiful, we hardly ever find an ugly one. The lovely white dresses are so flattering, and the girls so eager to cooperate that retakes on bridal portraits are extremely rare."

"When the results aren't good, it's usually because the bride couldn't relax—but even this is easier than she might expect."

Other photographers believe that "brides are easier to work with than almost any of our other clients." But they do have a few tips that can help everyone concerned.

First, plan to have the pictures taken about a month before the wedding date. This is particularly important during the "big" bride seasons. Most studios count on the bride being in the studio for about two hours, including dressing time. It is also evident that the closer the bride gets to her wedding day, the harder it is for her to relax.

Look Best in Morning

Experts feel that 9:30 a. m. is the best hour, giving the bride time to get her eyes wide open, but not enough time to rush around in crowded stores before her sitting. The working girl should arrange for an hour off, add this to her lunch hour, and take both during the morning. Neither the bride nor the photographer should feel at all rushed and when a girl skips lunch, it

After the appointment is made, there are three important points to remember. First, reserve the night before for sleeping. Second, don't get your hair re-styled the day before the pictures are to be taken for the bride's hair will then be too tightly set and unnatural looking. Or she may decide that she doesn't like the new hairstyle, and change it even before the wedding.

Have Dress Prepared The third point is to check on dress and veil. If a store is sending them to the studio, the bride needn't worry about pressing. But if you are wearing a dress that has been worn before or made at home, be sure it is ready. Even if the studio has facilities for pressing, they hesitate to tackle a badly creased dress for fear of pressing in dirt or grease.

With today's film and lighting, photographic make-up is no problem. Some studios ask that rouge be omitted and a lighter lipstick worn, while others merely advise normal street make-up.

Brides who have decided on their bouquets can usually find an artificial model of similar style in the studio collection. Those who are still undecided are invited to look at all the types, make up their minds, and then take the picture to the florist later.

Next, the question of candid shots on the day of the wedding arises. Better studios charge between $50 and $60 for an album of 12 pictures, chosen from 30 or 40 shots taken. Only those who buy more than this minimum number of prints pay more than the minimum cost, regardless of how long the photographer stays or how many shots he makes.

Most photographers ask the bride and bridesmaid what candid shots they particularly want taken, and many have check-lists of possibilities. It is a convenience for the photographer to be furnished a list of relatives and close friends to try to include in his shots.

If possible it is even more helpful to give a bridesmaid, usher or relative the job of pointing out these persons for the photographer.

All of the photographers agree that wedding pictures, both formal and candid, should be affected as little as possible by economy considerations. The flowers will die, and the dress will be packed away, but the pictures and rings will outlast the couple themselves.

Plans June Wedding

MISS SHIRLEY O'NEAL—is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Walter O'Neal of Scranton, Pennsylvania, who announce the engagement of their daughter to Dr. N. Shelley Beard, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. N. Shelley Beard of Greenville. A June wedding is planned.

Miss Beatty, Amos Evans Feted

"This Is Your Life" was the theme of a miscellaneous shower for Miss Pat Beatty, bride-elect, and Amos Ray Evans last Thursday evening at the Red Oak Community Center.

Hostesses were Mrs. Lina Wynne, Mrs. Grace Winchester, Mrs. Lucy Allen, Mrs. Ruth Crawford, Mrs. Ethel Allen, Mrs. Nina Tripp, Mrs. Leota Tyson, and Mrs. Rena Manning.

Mock orange, iris, Peace Roses and other spring flowers were used in standards, on the piano and tables.

Receiving at the front door were Mrs. Lucy Allen and Mrs. Nina Tripp, Amos Ray and Miss Beatty, Mr. and Mrs. Beatty and Mr. and Mrs. Amos Evans.

They registered at a table presided over by Miss Katherine Winchester and Miss Bettie Lane Evans.

While the guests were arriving, Mrs. Leota Tyson played old love songs on the piano.

For entertainment the bride and bridesmaid-to-be were seated on a special seat covered with a light green cloth. Miss Beatty was declared three queens by the mistress of ceremonies. She was crowned "Queen of the Day," "Queen of the May" and "Queen of Amos Ray." A crown of red roses was placed on her head and a red satin cape around her shoulders by her bridesmaid-to-be.

"This Is Your Life" was carried out by the use of songs and a little narrative.

"A Sweet Old-Fashioned Girl," sung by Joandell Evans, was followed by "Tell Me Why," "Let Me Call You Sweetheart," "With Someone Like You," "Forever and Ever" and "When My Dreamboat Comes Home."

Miss Bettie Lane Evans sang "Mr. Wonderful." It was decided that the very best thing a young married couple could have while both of them were going to college was "A Money Tree." Miss Joyce Jackson sang this and everybody joined in with the clapping and patting.

Some advice was read to the bride, and an old leap year Valentine, received by Amos Ray from Pat, was read and enjoyed.

All kings and queens have a ball given in their honor so dance festivities closed with two dances.

The gift table was covered with an orchid colored cloth. White wedding bells tied with wide orchid ribbons were used at each end and in the center of the table.

The refreshment table, covered in a light pink cloth, held a centerpiece of pink snapdragons, fern and pink radiance roses flanked by crystal candelabras with pink candles. Mrs. Amos Evans poured punch and Mrs. Beatty served decorated party cakes. Nuts and mints were served.

Bride Of Saturday Given Coffee

Saturday-morning Mrs. J. H. Waldrop, Mrs. Charles A. White, Mrs. Ward Peacock and Miss Mary Ann Waldrop complimented Miss Virginia Perkins, bride-elect, at a coffee hour at the Waldrop home on East Tenth Street.

Multi-colored arrangements of peonies, roses, and gladioli were used throughout the house. Focal interest was on a large drum table placed in the living room that was centered with a tureen filled with orchid peonies and a few sprigs of Mock Orange.

Greeting the guests at the front door were Mrs. Waldrop and Mrs. White. Miss Virginia Perkins, Mrs. Reid Perkins, Miss Mary Ann Waldrop and Mrs. Ward Peacock, in the receiving line, introduced the guests to brides of the season, Miss Pat Beatty, Mrs. Graham Flanagan, III, and Miss Hannah Proctor.

From the receiving line, guests passed into the dining room where a green and white color scheme was carried out.

Mrs. Lee Hannah served coffee from a table covered with a white imported applique organdy cloth over green satin. Centering the table was an all-white arrangement of peonies, gladioli, and roses. A large silver platter filled with miniature green cakes decorated with white flowers was placed on the table.

About 40 guests attended this informal coffee hour.

The hostesses presented the honorees, Miss Virginia Perkins, Mrs. Graham Flanagan, III, Miss Hannah Proctor, and Miss Pat Beatty with white chrysanthemum corsages.

Slices of orange rind, cooked in sugar syrup, may be teamed with fresh orange sections for a refreshing compote.

Dr. John D. Humber, son of Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Humber of this city, has been chosen by Dr. Coffey, head surgeon of the Southern Pacific General Hospital, San Francisco, to represent him and through him, the hospital, at the national convention of the American Medical Association which meets at Washington City on May 16. Another indication of the esteem in which Dr. Humber is held is evidenced by the fact that he was granted a year's absence in order to complete special research work at Tulane University, New Orleans, his alma mater, where he was attached to the medical staff. Recently the church of which Dr. Humber is a member, the oldest Protestant church in California, made him a trustee and elected him Director of Religious Education.

To Strengthen Our City Schools

Greenville can build for itself a better, more adequate school system for future years if citizens of the city and the Board of Trustees of the Greenville City Schools give careful consideration to the five-point resolution adopted by the Junior Chamber of Commerce.

After a six-months study of the city's school system the Jaycees have come forth with a five-point resolution which, if followed, should strengthen the schools and afford better education for the children of Greenville. All of the recommendations may not be put into effect. There may be objections to some of them. Yet, each of these proposed by the Junior Chamber of Commerce has merit and should be evaluated in planning for the future of the city schools.

Few school systems are stronger than the public interest in them demonstrated by the people of the community. The proposal for a public program to acquaint the public with problems of local schools and to arouse public interest in the solution of the problems obviously can play a major role in strengthening the schools.

The Reflector also finds itself in agreement with the Jaycee proposal that a rotation system be established for membership on the school Board of Trustees. It will afford the board fresh viewpoints on school problems every year and obviate the possibility of membership on the board becoming static over long periods of time. A rotation system likewise would serve to acquaint more citizens more intimately with local school problems and result in greater public support for schools.

Specific long range planning is vital to an adequate school system. Short-term planning even coupled with generalizations over a longer period are inadequate. Because of the tremendous community financial burden involved in building school plants, and the accompanying tax problems, it is imperative that school needs and plans to meet these needs be projected over a long range period. Under such a program taxpayers would know what to expect from year to year far in advance and could be prepared to provide the necessary finances. Annual re-assessment and projection of school needs based on accurate studies and surveys could keep the school program in realistic balance with the needs.

A stronger community PTA organization through the individual schools will afford the community another important vehicle through which to keep informed on school needs and through which to arrive at sound solutions to problems which arise.

What good comes from this study and resulting recommendations concerning Greenville's school system made by the Junior Chamber of Commerce now rests with the people of the city. The Board of Trustees of the city schools should at the earliest possible moment give the public the benefit of its considered opinion of the recommendations. Teacher organizations, PTA groups, and other groups of local citizens should not hesitate to make their own evaluations of the Jaycee school study and recommendations. In the truest sense, school problems are the concern of every individual citizen and every group in a community; for no facet of the community life more vital to the community than the educational opportunities afforded its young people.

Teamwork, After The Voting; We Trust

Citizens of Greenville today elected five men who will be responsible for directing city affairs for the next two years. Events building up today's election have been marked by one of the more heated campaigns in the city in recent years.

At this writing there is no way to know which five candidates will be successful. Regardless of who they are, however, they have been elected by the people of Greenville to represent all the people of the city and to lead Greenville to more progressive better government.

Members of the City Council cannot fulfill their tasks and responsibilities of they allow any bitterness or animosity of the campaign to carry over into subsequent decisions as they direct the affairs of the city.

The five members of the Council will need the support and the constructive criticism of all the people of Greenville if they are to do the best job. When the polls close this evening the campaign must be forgotten and the best interest of Greenville as a whole held in the forefront by all the Councilmen and all the citizens of the city.

One Agency Has Dubious Future

By LYNN NISBET
CASUALTY — Will the State Department of Personnel as an effective independent agency be a casualty of the 1957 General Assembly?

That question is bothering a good many veteran State employees who had a part in setting up centralized personnel control back in 1949 — after several years previous effort. Stated perhaps another way, the question might be whether actions of the current Legislature will establish the department as the controlling agency for personnel, or personnel as the controlling agency for the department.

A number of heretofore independent agencies, departments and divisions have been abolished or reduced in prestige by the "mercy killing" operations of the government reorganization policy. New agencies have been set up by positive legislation to take over the functions. Sponsors of the current changes are just as certain they will make for economy and efficiency in government, as were advocates of an independent department eight years ago when personnel control was divorced from direct supervision by the budget bureau.

The Personnel Department was not among those to which mercy killing was administered. To the contrary, and although not dealt with by the reorganization study commission this time, the administration has positively sought to give it more power. If it does become a casualty it will be a victim of head-on collision between two different approaches to the method of applying promised pay raises for the rank and file of State employees.

YARDSTICK — The controversy arises over requests of the two employee associations, representing some 17,000 employees and purporting to speak for some 10,000 more workers in State offices and institutions, for a flat across-the-board percentage increase in salaries. They asked for 15 per cent increase, and the Governor in his second budget message recommended a little above 10 per cent. The Governor is backing the plan promulgated by the Department of Personnel (but believed to be mainly his own idea) to allocate the increase on a graduated classification basis, designed to give the lower salaried groups a higher percentage than those in top level brackets. They called his plan a "yardstick" for equalizing salaries and wages.

Lifton Beckwith and Otis Banks, respective spokesmen for the State Employees Association and the State Highway Employees Association, say it is a rubber yardstick — susceptible to bending and stretching at the will of the manipulator. These spokesmen support their statements by resolutions adopted at mass meetings of their association members and petitions signed by thousands of individual workers. Temper and tenor of these resolutions and petitions is such that the leaders believe if the yardstick method is forced upon them it will prove so unpopular and generate so much discontent that the employees will lose confidence in and respect for the Personnel Department. Inevitable result of that loss of faith will be confusion and poor moral among all State workers.

Governor Hodges, Personnel Director John McDevitt, and the Personnel Council are just as sure that the inherent equity and fairness in the yardstick method will prove it to be for the best interest of all parties, and that in a few months the Personnel Department will be more highly regarded by those over whom it exercises control. From any viewpoint, the Department is to considerable extent on trial in the court of public opinion.

DEFINITIONS — By changing the word "prosecute" to the word "report" in connection with functions of school attendance officers their jobs were exempted from the ban against double office holding. Seems only an "officer" can prosecute, but anybody can report offenses or violations to the prosecuting officer.

The Senate education committee was discussing a bill sponsored by Sen. Jule McMichael of Rockingham to make school buses drive within half a mile, instead of a full mile, of a student passenger's home. Sen. Ed Lanier of Orange suggested an amendment to require such distance "when deemed feasible by the board of education having authority over the areas." Up popped Sen. Ed Owens of Washington with the quip that "Down our way feasible means politics." Sen. Arthur Kirkman of Guilford suggested he preferred the dictionary definition to that of Eastern Carolina. None of which made much difference. The bill was given an unfavorable report.

In State offices and in most of the counties nomination and election of public officers are synonymous, and legislators set in the habit of using the words interchangeably. Republicans have been trying for years to get county boards of education elected by the people instead of actually appointed by the Legislature — although generally nominated in Democratic primaries. Sen. William Cobb of Burke, one of three Republicans on that side of the capitol, thought he caught the word "elected" with respect to board of education members in Moore county. (It later developed the elected applied to county commissioners only.) Chairman Lunsford of the committee observed that Senator Cobb had "objected" to the bill. "No sir," quickly spoke up the Burke man. "I just called attention to what looked like a discrepancy in provisions. I did not object to electing boards of education."

Strength For Today

By EARL L. DOUGLASS
SINS OF MIND AND SPIRIT
Bible readers have often observed that in his teachings, Jesus had very little to say about the sins of the flesh. He did say that the lustful desire was equivalent to adultery and that anger could very quickly burgeon into murder. What he did say about the sins of the flesh was searching and fundamental.

But it is true that for the most part he spoke not about the sins of the flesh but about the sins of the mind and spirit. He warned men for the most part against avarice, pride, jealousy, self-righteousness, selfishness, and lack of love. The appalling thing about these sins is that so often they are mistaken for virtues. The man of energy and enterprise, admired by everyone who knows him, may be dying, spiritually, of avarice. The man who beats his breast and speaks confidently about his devotion to righteousness may be hiding from himself, and trying to hide from the world, the fact that he possesses almost no righteousness at all.

Guard against the sins of the spirit and mind. Often they so resemble virtues that one actually mistakes them and comes to regard them as virtues. Murders and toadstools look almost exactly alike, but toadstools are poisonous. Likewise, the sins of the mind and spirit often look like qualities God loves to see growing in the human heart, but they may be put there by the hand of Satan to deceive and ruin us.

Just Not Enough Time

Column-time has a disturbing habit of sneaking up and catching a person off-guard.

As a general rule, I prefer to sit down and think a bit before I write one (believe it or not). This time, however, the free time is mighty short.

I don't know why I let myself get into these predicaments. I suppose it's just human to do so, but it doesn't always work to advantage to wait until the last minute to knock something out.

I guess I could write something about Will Chamberlain's reported plans to quit the University of Kansas and cash in on his basketball ability. Such a column would require a little planning, however, and time is too short for that.

I might even write about my tepid romance with covering courts. I've been going steady with the courts since last June when I was sent to the Court House to cover the Talmadge Mitchell murder trial. But, here again, I'd have to plan a little bit and with Don Schliez breathing down my neck there just isn't time to make the proper comments.

I might be able to write about a four-way telephone conversation

Other Editors Saying --- Not Age But Inclination

(Charlotte (W.Va.) Daily Mail)

A good time to retire, it has always seemed to us, would be (a) when you can afford to, (b) when you can't stand the grind any longer, (c) a combination of these.

This, you will notice, has nothing to do with age 65, which has somehow become the fashionable and often the compulsory quitting point, and we are happy to hear that the Southern Conference of Gerontology thinks so, too. In fact, when it met recently at the University of Florida it pretty well agreed that a determined effort had been made to find the worst possible age for retirement — 65 years would have been the first choice.

At this point a man who is still functioning at all is too young to come to a full stop without severe damage to his gear shift. But he is too old to start all over again carving out a new career for himself in competition with the gay young blades.

Some people have no talent for retirement and should be permitted to tread the mill until they fall over. Still others, for whom we feel a strong affinity, have matured sufficiently by 40 and should be set free or a life of listless beachcombing on some far Pacific isle. Temperament and not age should be the determining factor.

CHOICE IS DYNAMITE OR MILTOWN (The Charlotte Observer)

Civilization and all of its gadgets — that is if you concede

I heard yesterday. But it would be a little difficult to dash off the proper comments without studying word structure and making sure that I wasn't doing someone an injustice.

I could cry on a gentle reader's shoulder with my sad story about all the school work I have to do in the next two weeks. But, who's interested in listening to the woe of a person who has put off everything until the last minute and finds himself snowed under by a term paper, preparation for three final examinations and worry about keeping a personal academic streak alive.

There is a slight chance that I could dream up some impossible story about Wee Urchin. Let's face it, though, he's just a little fellow and has done nothing spectacular lately except double his efforts to handle a spoon and a bowl of scrambled eggs.

I might be persuaded to ramble, at length, on a choice War Story — if I could think of one. Somehow, those old Army days fade farther and farther away with every passing day and I'm about resigned to the prospect of having them disappear completely from everyday thoughts.

I could comment, too, on the political campaign which should be completed today. There are several possibilities there but I suppose just about everybody has heard the same stories I've heard. I think I'll just quit thinking about a column for today and go vote. I might be able to do more good there—and I'd not worry half so much about it.

After all, I know the five men I'm going to vote for. And I've already done all my thinking on the subject.

Opinions In Brief

"The Post Office Department was never intended to be a money-making organization in a business sense. It is so far from being a business establishment that the money it takes in is not put into its own vaults or bank accounts but goes into the general fund of the United States Treasury. Whether it pays its own way or not can be told only by balancing what it puts into the Treasury against what it takes out." — (The Charlotte Observer)

An Eye On 'Invisible Government'

By RAY TUCKER
WASHINGTON The Congressional decision to investigate the "invisible government" which has grown into such an uncontrolled power at Washington has been underscored by a sensational but generally unnoticed ruling of a Federal Trade Commission examiner that is of bread-and-butter, dollars-and-cents importance to every American.

In an unfair practice action brought against a supermarket chain that has 238 stores and grosses $475,000,000 of business annually, the examiner found that the organization was immune from supervision by the Federal Trade Commission, which has jurisdiction over monopolies, prices and competitive methods. It is the authorized guardian against activities harmful to consumers and competitors.

SIDELINE SWITCH The chain had been accused of discriminatory practices. But the "eager beaver" examiner found that the 238 stores came under control of the Department of Agriculture simply because it operated a small meat-packing plant representing an investment of only $2,700,000.

By establishing this relatively small and insignificant sideline, the great nationwide concern was able to escape the only agency sufficiently equipped and experienced to enforce antimonopoly statutes.

Unfortunately, the Secretary of Agriculture's staff is wholly inadequate to give this protection to consumers. He has never tried to do this job at all, even though the 1921 law assigning him this authority was plain enough in its language.

However, due to lack of funds, Agriculture has not tried to enforce antitrust laws even against those companies which clearly fall under its jurisdiction—large firms slaughtering, processing and selling meat products.

FINDING LEGALLY CORRECT It is true that the examiner's finding was legally and technically correct. But critics point out that he should have permitted plain common sense to influence his decision. However, this is a virtue which many of these agencies are charged with lacking.

Thus, if the FTC and the Federal Courts uphold the examiner's ruling, the consumer will have no protection with regard to the prices of such an important article of the budget as food.

But the worst evil, according to Representative Emanuel Celler of New York, Chairman of the House Judiciary Committee, is the threat which this viewpoint poses to all laws and enforcement provisions designed to safeguard millions of buyers. Citing the effect of the examiner's ruling, he says:

EFFECTS OF "INVISIBLE GOVERNMENT" "This device could be used by tire producers, battery manufacturers, automobile manufacturers, integrated oil companies, or any other indus-

Major Decentralization Soviet Economy Decided

By TOM OCHILTREE
MOSCOW (AP)—The Supreme Soviet convened today to approve a sweeping decentralization of Soviet economy involving everything from vast industrial enterprises to corner groceries.

Russia's equivalent of Parliament opened its special session in the Kremlin's marble-pillared former throne room of the Czars. The Soviet put the economic plan at the top of its agenda.

During deliberations in the next few days the legislators will approve the administrative resolution drafted by Communist party boss Nikita Khrushchev. The plan completely revamps the monolithic economic structure the Kremlin built up over the last 40 years.

Until now, the Soviet economy has been directed by several dozen big ministries in Moscow. The new plan calls for a territorial system of organization. The central government will still set the broad lines of policy and planning, control prices and wages, allocate scarce materials and check on production by each region.

But economic councils of the various administrative-economic regions of the Soviet Union will take over planning for local production and supervision of local performance, cutting many of the administrative strings that now lead back to Moscow.

The plan's approval by the more than 1,300 members of the Supreme Soviet is certain. But the plan itself will take months and possibly years to realize fully. When and if it is completely achieved, it will give a new face to communism in operation in the Soviet Union. Many government ministries ultimately will be abolished or have their functions trimmed.

This plan represents the biggest revision of Soviet economy since Stalin collectivized the farms nearly 30 years ago. Since Khrushchev announced it in March, it has been the major topic of discussion in Communist party groups, factories and institutions of higher learning and by the press and radio. Some differences of opinion have developed over details but not over the conception as a whole.

Khrushchev hopes among other things that his plan will improve and rationalize the country's distributive system, always a great problem in a nation of this size and with this type of economy.

Other items on the agenda include a report from the Communist Party Central Committee and the routine ratification of decrees of the Presidium issued since the Supreme Soviet last met Feb. 5. The agenda did not list a sixth

Concrete Pipe Sewers protect the health of your family

While seldom seen or considered, a dependable sewer system plays a vital part in protecting the health of any household or community.

The very best sewers are built of sturdy, long-lasting, economical concrete pipe. Rugged concrete pipe can't rust or decay. Its uniformly dense walls keep sewage safely and tightly confined.

Concrete pipe sewers save taxpayers money too. That's because the first cost of installing a concrete pipe sewer is normally the last cost. Concrete pipe sewers seldom require replacement.

The strength and outstanding durability of concrete pipe sewer installations is proven by the fact that across the country many have been in use for 80, 90 and even 100 years.

Concrete pipe sewers offer outstanding durability, unmatched performance and unequalled economy.

THERE OUGHTA BE A LAW! By FAGALY and SHORTEN

Hiss Repeats He Is Innocent Of Charges

NEW YORK (AP)—Alger Hiss in a book out today says that political pressure, public hysteria, faked evidence and false testimony sent him to prison for 3 1/2 years.

The former State Department official, convicted of perjury in denying he gave confidential documents to ex-spy courier Whittaker Chambers, insists in the book that he was innocent, as he did throughout his two trials. The 419-page book, "In the Court of Public Opinion," was published by Alfred A. Knopf, Inc. Hiss was released from prison in 1954. He, his wife and son have since lived quietly in New York.

"The ordeal of fighting false charges has disrupted my life and has brought pain to me and to my family," Hiss writes. "But nothing can take away the satisfaction of having had a part in government programs in which I strongly believed. . . . the creative efforts of the New Deal and in the formation of the United Nations."

Hiss, disbarred in New York and Massachusetts after his conviction maintains in the book that testimony of ex-Communist Chambers, Chambers' wife and other government witnesses was at variance with documentary evidence. His book includes numerous reproductions of such evidence introduced at his trials, the first of which ended in a hung jury. Hiss, in giving his account of the affair, maintains that the typewriter on which copies of State Department documents were alleged to have been written was a planted fake.

He charges that Chambers' accusations of espionage against him were the result of pressure by the 1948 House Committee on Un-American Activities.

Hiss pictures then-Congressman Richard Nixon, now vice president, as the prime mover on the committee, an adviser to Chambers, and as the man who kept after the Justice Department to prosecute.

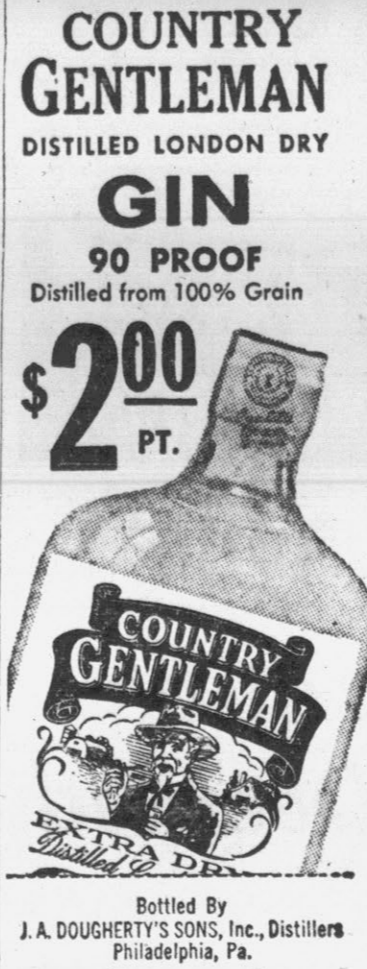

Hiss says he realizes now that his libel suit against Chambers "added heavily to the pressures on Chambers to pile charge upon charge by accusing me of espionage."

Chambers "must have received papers from persons whose identity he has never made public," Hiss said. "The documents he had received from others were used by him as the basis of his charges."

ECC Netters Move Up Into Conference Semi-Finals

GREENSBORO — Top seeded Maurice Everette, defending North State Conference singles champion, had little trouble in disposing of first round and quarterfinal opponents yesterday, faces John McCabe of Western Carolina in semifinals play today.

Everette defeated Earl Trivette of Guilford, 6-1, in the first round and Al Widenhouse of Appalachian, 6-0, 6-2, in a quarterfinal match.

only three in overall play. In Conference action, two matches with High Point still remain on the card, but those games cannot change the status of the teams. In loop play, the Bucs have a 5-0 mark.

Army's New Rifle Is All 'Dream' - - Until He Got It

EDITOR'S NOTE: Bem Price is a former Marine combat officer and a former combat correspondent in Korea, but he had personal trouble with the Army's new T44 rifle. Here is his story.

By BEM PRICE
ABERDEEN, Md. (P)—For 10 years the army tested its new T44 rifle without accident or incident—and then I came along.

I test-fired the light and heavy models of the new weapon—and it is one sweet rifle—at the army proving ground here late yesterday and promptly managed to wound myself slightly in a freak accident.

There are two versions of the T44 and each is an answer to an infantryman's prayer.

rounds in a box clip, are the superior answer to the Russian-made burp guns which beat out our brains on night patrols in Korea where the range was short and the object, at least, was to make the other guy keep his head down.

They are also the answer to the soldier's demand for a weapon which, while laying down a lot of lead, can deliver single shot aimed fire.

There is one beautiful characteristic of these weapons. There is a setting device on each to determine whether the rifle will function semiautomatically or as a full automatic weapon at the theoretical rate of 800 rounds per minute.

By setting the screw and then removing it from the weapon, the unit commander, be it of a squad or a division, can tailor his firepower to the tactical situation.

Green troops have a habit of shooting up their ammunition blindly in a tight spot. By building fire teams of green troops around one or more veterans equipped with the fully automatic device, a commander can control his unit's rate of fire.

Veterans of World War II and Korea will find the T44 much easier to handle because it is better balanced. The thing, however, kicks as much as the M1, or Garand, which fires eight shots.

The light and heavy models of the T44 are intended to replace the Garand rifle, the semiautomatic carbine, the model 1918 Browning automatic rifle and the submachinegun known as the "grease gun."

As of now these five weapons require three types of ammunition, the T44 only one. The new ammunition is still .30 caliber though designated as 7.62mm.

The cartridge has been redesigned to conform with that used by our North Atlantic Treaty Organization allies; but packs just as much punch as the standard .30 caliber.

By reducing the number of weapons issued to troops the Army hopes to speed training in basic weapons for combat units. Much has been made of the fact that the T44 is lighter than the Garand. Actually when equipped with sling and full magazine the M1 weighs 10½ pounds, the T44 10¼ pounds.

This brings me around to how I fouled up the Army. While I was firing the heavy model of the T44 the spring-operated lock on the bipod attached to the muzzle came loose and slipped off. Since I was firing full automatic I managed to clip the bipod with a solid .30 caliber shot and scattered metal all over the landscape—including my left arm, which was hit four places. I'll live.

Mayor Dismayed By Fouled Nest

PHILADELPHIA (P)—Mayor Richardson Dilworth is dismayed about the way the public "louses up" the city zoo with trash, and he says, "I don't know any other way to express it."

The mayor, his wife and a grandchild toured the zoo grounds recently. He cut loose with a blast against the trash-throwing public in a by-lined Page 1 article in today's Philadelphia Inquirer.

The mayor said the city spends more than a million dollars a year to keep its streets clean. Despite this, he said, "we have not succeeded in making anything like the progress we should. This is in large measure due to the fact that the average American seems to take some kind of peculiar pleasure in fouling his own nest."

Lafayette was an amateur hypnotist.

Faculty Pianists Give Duo-Piano Recital Here

Interesting programming and expert performance characterized the recital given last night by the duo-piano team of Elizabeth Drake and George E. Perry, members of the department of music at East Carolina College.

The faculty pianists appeared before an audience of approximately 300 people from the campus and the city. Enthusiastic applause following each of their numbers was an index of the approval and appreciation of those who were present.

The recital was sponsored by the department of music at the college. It was scheduled as part of the observance on the campus of National Music Week.

The program opened with Mozart's Sonata in D Major, K. 448.

Miss Patricia Carter, daughter of

Mr. and Mrs. Herbert L. Carter of Greenville, acting as narrator for the performance of Saint-Saens' "Carnival of the Animals," read the Ogden Nash poems which serve as introduction to the selections making up the composition. The young reader was called back to the stage for a series of bows with Miss Drake and Mr. Perry.

"Les Songs" by the modern composer Darius Milhaud, was followed by Ravel's "La Valse," a brilliant and difficult number, which evidenced the skill of the duo-pianists and which provided a fitting climax to the evening's program. Two of Brahms' Liebeslieder waltzes were played as encores.

Miss Drake and Mr. Perry have appeared at the college in several previous recitals for two pianos. Their program last night was again marked by the precision in duo-piano performance and the sympathetic interpretation of varied numbers which have made them popular with local concert audiences.

Suspend Pupils For Panty Raid

BANNER ELK, N.C. (P)—Amidst night panty raid a week ago resulted in suspensions ranging from four to eight days for 18 Lees-McCrae College students.

The suspensions were announced to the student body yesterday by Dean E. Lafferty. The disciplinary action was taken by the faculty executive committee after student government officers resigned in protest over the college's handling of the affair.

Dr. Ivan B. Stafford, vice president of the college, said the student officers resigned "because they felt they did not have the confidence of the members of the faculty."

Dr. Fletcher Nelson, president, said that over the years the students have been "splendid leaders" and have often shown real statesmanship.

Student leaders who resigned were Dick Weaver of Greensboro, president, Alice Oliver of Raleigh, president of the women's student government, and Ralph Robinson of Burnsville, president of the men's student government.

The student officers said they felt the faculty should not have taken over investigation of the panty raid and felt it was within the student government's jurisdiction.

Lost Once, And He Loses Again

PITTSBURGH (P)—C. T. Marshall wanted to make a left turn at a downtown intersection. A traffic officer waved him on.

Marshall objected, violently, said the traffic officer.

The officer took Marshall before a police magistrate and he paid a $10 fine for abusive language toward a policeman.

Marshall then went back to pick up his car. It wasn't there. It had been hauled to the city pound by a tow truck to avert a traffic tie-up.

Marshall paid another $8.50 for the tow truck fee.

Yell Loud Enough And Be Heard

STATESVILLE, N. C. (P)—Impatient Arnold Tredway, 22-year-old furniture worker, learned in City Court that if you yell long enough, you are bound to be heard.

Tredway, charged with public drunkenness, twisted and turned as the court repeatedly bypassed his case while awaiting the arrival of the arresting officer.

Twice Tredway called to Judge Baxter H. Finch to please dispose of the case. Twice the judge told him to keep quiet.

Tredway tried a third time. Result: contempt of court, 30 days in jail.

J-2 ROCKET!

TRY IT AND YOU'LL WANT IT!

ECONOMY WHEN YOU WANT IT!
 Here's the secret of its greater gas mileage. In the J-2 Rocket a single two-barrel carburetor serves the engine, at peak efficiency, for all your ordinary power needs. You choose your own kind of performance—you're in economy range up to ¾ throttle. Yet you enjoy famous Rocket action all the way.

POWER WHEN YOU NEED IT!
 All three carburetors (six barrels) go into action, automatically, whenever the occasion demands. Push your foot to the floor, and you have extra safety power on tap to whisk you up the steepest grade, or out of the path of danger. Here's alert action for added safety in any driving situation!

OLDSMOBILE NOW OFFERS YOU THE MOST EXCITING NEW ENGINE DEVELOPMENT SINCE THE FIRST HIGH-COMPRESSION POWER PLANT!

Greater economy for all normal driving! A greater reserve of extra safety power for the exceptional situation! That's why Oldsmobile's new J-2 Rocket Engine* is like two engines in one. And you, the driver, are in complete control of how you want to travel. For practically all driving needs you enjoy the fuel-saving economy of a single carburetor. Or, a touch of the accelerator past the three-quarters mark will bring two additional carburetors into use. This gives you gas-saving performance over a 50 percent broader operating range plus a reassuring reserve of power that means added safety. If you have not already tried the J-2 Rocket, your nearby Oldsmobile Dealer invites you to come in for a drive soon. Be his guest for a J-2 test. You'll find it is a totally new and wonderful driving experience.

*Optional at extra cost on all Oldsmobile models.

Unprecedented 4th Pulitzer Prize Is Won By Playwright Eugene O'Neill

NEW YORK (AP)—The late dramatist Eugene O'Neill has won his fourth Pulitzer Prize and Sen. John F. Kennedy (D-Mass.) has won the first ever bestowed on a member of Congress.

The awards were among 14 Pulitzer Prizes in letters, journalism and music announced yesterday by the trustees of Columbia University.

O'Neill received the drama award posthumously for his autobiographical play "Long Day's Journey Into Night." It is a current Broadway hit.

The biography prize went to Kennedy, 39-year-old Massachusetts Democrat, for his "Profiles in Courage." The book is a study of political integrity as exemplified by selected U. S. politicians, some famed and some obscure.

"I'm delighted—more than delighted," said Kennedy when told of the award.

Mrs. Carlotta Monterey O'Neill, widow of the playwright, said she now knows she "did the right thing" in violating a 25-year embargo on "Journey." She authorized production of the drama here last year.

O'Neill wrote the play in 1941 but he said he did not want it staged in the United States until 25 years after his death. He died in 1953.

Only poet Robert Frost and the late playwright-biographer Robert Sherwood have also won four Pulitzer Prizes in the 40-year his-story of the awards.

O'Neill previously won Pulitzer Prizes for "Beyond the Horizon" (1920), "Anna Christie" (1922) and "Strange Interlude" (1928).

No fiction award was made this year. Kenneth Roberts received a special citation, however, for his novels on the nation's early history.

Eight prizes were granted in the field of journalism.

The Chicago Daily News took the meritorious public service award for exposing a 2½-million-dollar fraud in the office of the then state auditor of Illinois, Orville E. Hodge.

The work of 21 of the newspaper's staff members ultimately led to Hodge's imprisonment.

The Pulitzer Prizes were established in 1917 under the will of the late Joseph Pulitzer, publisher of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch and the old New York World.

The Columbia trustees grant the awards each year from recommendations made by an advisory board. Most of the advisers are newspaper executives.

The journalism awards are worth $1,000 each, except for the meritorious service prize. A gold medal is awarded for it.

The prizes for music and letters are worth $500 apiece.

The awards, except for those in drama and music, are for work completed or published in 1956.

Other winners announced yesterday:

History—George F. Kennan, former U. S. ambassador to Russia, for "Russia Leaves the War."

Poetry—Richard Wilbur for his "Things of This World."

Music—Norman Delio Jolo for "Meditations on Ecclesiastes."

Local reporting under pressure of edition time—Salt Lake Tribune for "prompt and efficient coverage" of the crash of two airliners in the Grand Canyon last June 30.

Local reporting when there was no edition pressure—Wallace Turner and William Lambert of the Portland Oregonian for exposing "vice and corruption" in the Teamsters Union in Portland. The probe touched off others elsewhere and embroiled Teamsters President Dave Beck.

National reporting—James Reston of the New York Times for "distinguished national correspondence," particularly his five-part analysis of the effect of President Eisenhower's illness on the functioning of the executive branch of the government.

International reporting—Russell Jones of the United Press for "excellent and sustained coverage of the Hungarian revolt."

Editorial writing—Buford Boone, president and publisher of the Tuscaloosa (Ala.) News, for his "fearless and reasoned editorials in a community inflamed by a segregation issue."

Cartoon—Tom Little of the Nashville Tennessean for his cartoon "Wonder Why My Parents Didn't Give Me Saik Shots." It depicts a small boy, on crutches and with his legs in braces, watching other youngsters his age playing football.

Photography—Harry A. Trask of the Boston (Mass.) Traveler for his aerial picture sequence of the sinking of the Italian liner Andrea Doria last July 26.

Aquatics Club Will Sponsor Water Show

Competitive swimming, demonstrations of water sports, and the crowning of a beauty queen will be chief attractions of the 1957 Water Show sponsored Wednesday and Thursday nights of this week by the Aquatics Club of East Carolina College. The meet will begin at 8 p. m. in the Memorial Gymnasium on the campus.

Ted Gartman of Portsmouth, Va., president of the Aquatics Club, is acting as director of the water show. Approximately 75 students will take part.

The program will include swimming matches and exhibitions of diving, synchronized swimming, and water safety techniques.

Campus organizations will be represented in a beauty contest by women students elected to participate in the water show. A beauty queen will be chosen from these representatives and will be crowned Thursday night.

Dollar A Day

LONDON (AP)—How far can a far go on a dollar a day in Norfolk, Va.?

Some 2,000 sailors on three British warships are worried, because a dollar a day is all they're getting when they attend the U. S. naval review at Norfolk June 8-17.

The ships are Britain's biggest aircraft carrier, the Ark Royal, and the destroyers Diamond and Duchess.

The daily spending money limit was fixed by the British treasury, which suffers a chronic shortage of U. S. currency.

British newspapers reported some of the sailors are grumbling that they will be known around Norfolk as "just another bunch of poor Limeys." An Admiralty spokesman said he thought a dollar a day would be enough—"they will live on board, where all essentials are available."

The spokesman conceded that he had never personally tried having fun in Norfolk on a buck a day.

HONORING NIXON DEFIANCE, Ohio (AP)—Vice President Nixon will be honored by Defiance College with an honorary doctor of laws degree at commencement ceremonies June 2. He will not be present personally.

First Students To Be Members Of Institutes

Eight students at East Carolina College, seven from North Carolina and one from Tunisia, became the first collegiate members of the American Institute of Management and the Southern Institute of Management in ceremonies in Tarboro during the weekend.

L. W. Hill of Tarboro, president of the Carolina Telephone and Telegraph Co. and member of the AIM President's Council, presided at the induction.

The East Carolina students qualified as members by completing requirements in a course in "Executive Techniques," taught in the college department of business by Dr. E. R. Browning, head of the department and educational counsellor of AIM-SIM. Major objectives of the course are to develop a group of citizens capable of seeing the management view from the top and to prepare them for executive positions.

Introducing the East Carolina students at the induction ceremony, Dr. Browning pointed out that not only are they the first college students ever to be admitted to collegiate membership in AIM-SIM but also the East Carolina course in "Executive Techniques" is the first college course to use the "Methodology of Management Appraisal" of the AIM. Students who became AIM-SIM members are Monique L. Farge, McDonald, Greenville; Leonard Davis, Fayetteville; Alton Howard, Greenville; William Griggs, Kinston; Charles Yates, Greenville; and Virgil Wilton Lane, Burlington. Passengers on some British railroads can pay an extra fee of one shilling to ride on trains on which "No Standing" is permitted.

Rae Foley's new mystery novel RUN FOR YOUR LIFE

CHAPTER 15

After dinner, Mr. Potter strolled up and down the veranda with a cigarette, waiting for the others to settle down for the evening. When he went into the inn at last and walked quietly upstairs, Deming had corralled Mrs. Riddle, Nora and Finn into a bridge game; Frank Deming had tentatively suggested chess to Stuart and they were setting out the pieces. Tom Jones was flipping the pages of a magazine. Everything was under control. Mr. Potter, moving silently, began his search for the missing photograph of Candy.

He started the Deming rooms next—Deming's neat and characterless; Frank's untidy, with fishing rods, riding boots, tennis rackets scattered around, and pin-ups on the wall. The tutor's room was beyond. This was neat as Deming's. As he went through the clothes closet, checking pockets, Mr. Potter was interested to see that Jones' wardrobe was extensive and made by an excellent tailor. He had luxurious tastes for a tutor. An attaché case was locked and defied his efforts to open it.

In the hall once more, Mr. Potter paused to listen for a moment. He heard Deming say, "Three hearts." Stuart Young laughed. They were still under control. He stood whistling soundlessly to himself. Presumably the Husers were in the kitchen but where was the enigmatic nurse?

He went downstairs again and outside. The kitchen windows were lighted. Standing in the shadow, he heard Hazel Huger say sharply, "Bert! Don't take another drink."

"For God's sake, can't you let their voices murmuring. The kitchen light was shut off and Hazel came out, locked the door and walked toward the Annex. Then, using his flashlight cautiously, he found the basement door. It was unlocked; he eased it open and went noiselessly down the steps.

The place smelled damp and musty. There were an old burner, oil tanks, a cord of wood, and half a dozen high wire trash baskets. He got to work methodically, tipping the latter on the floor one at a time and examining every scrap of paper before he put it back. The torn envelope addressed to Miss Nora Pendleton was in the second basket. He nearly missed the photograph of Candy, which was in a brown paper shopping bag, the cardboard cut into small fragments not more than an inch long.

At length he fitted in the past piece and looked down at the laughing face of Candy Kendrick. Slowly he straightened up, and then, with lightning swiftness, he moved the flashlight, pinpointing the man who crouched behind an oil tank.

"Is this," he said to the tutor politely, "what you were looking for, Mr. Jones?"

"You must have been a comfort to Miss Pendleton," Doc Ives was saying. He slipped his arm around Garry's shoulders. "You'd be a comfort to anyone."

There was a curious rigidity about the nurse.

"They're going to re-open the case," continued Ives. "I suppose you've heard."

"Let's not talk about it," Garry said sharply.

"I'd rather talk about you, anyhow," he said darily. "About you and me, Esther. He cleared his throat, "I missed you a lot."

"No one would have thought so last year. You left the village and came up here to the inn to make an impression on That Girl. Half killed yourself riding horseback because that's what she liked."

"I know," he said so humbly that he disarmed her. "I don't understand what got into me, Esther. Honestly. From the time we met I knew you were the girl for me." As she made an attempt to move away, he tightened his arm. "Only she was—I can't make out what happened to me."

Garry laughed harshly. "Any woman could. She was just a man trap and you fell into it."

"No." His tone was quiet but something in it silenced her. "No woman would understand in the least. She wasn't a man trap. She was a man's dream. I can't explain it."

"If you ask me, every man around here fell for her."

"Probably," he said. "She got into your blood, some way. But I didn't come back here to talk about Candy." His voice was harsh. "She's dead. She's the past." He steadied himself. "I came to talk about you, about us. I wanted you to marry me a year ago. I want you to marry me now."

There was a long silence. At length she said, "You've still got that girl in your blood, whether you know it or not. She's what you dream of. What would I be, just a cook and housekeeper to come home to?"

"We've got to forget Candy," he said heavily. "I'm awfully fond of you. There's no one I'd rather marry. It's not just a cook and housekeeper I want." He groped for words. "Could you consider it, Esther? Do you like me a little?"

"Yes," she said dully. "I like you a lot. I always have. And I suppose I'll marry you."

He turned her head toward her, bent forward to kiss her.

"And all our lives," she said, her voice breaking, "we'll remember Candy." Her face was against his chest and her body shook with her sobs.

In the darkness his eyes opened wide. "How much do you know, Esther?"

"I thought we were going to forget her."

"How much do you know?" he repeated.

She told him.

Third Generation at the Wheel!

"Like father, like son", the poets say. And never was it truer than in the case of a great many fine Cadillac families.

For there are, in our land today, a number of families that currently boast as many as three generations at the wheel.

We mention this simply to underscore a great and dramatic truth about Cadillac—that, of course, is its unchanging goodness and quality.

For fifty-five years, the Cadillac name has signified one and the same thing to motorists everywhere—a motor car created at the highest level that automotive science would permit.

Over that time, Cadillac has attracted to the ranks of its owners the finest list of names to be found anywhere on the American motoring scene.

And, those who have followed the path to Cadillac in 1957 are enjoying the most abundant blessings of this ceaseless crusade for quality.

The new "car of cars", with coachcraft by Fleetwood, is beautiful and luxurious to an unprecedented degree. And its performance and handling ease are a revelation!

Certainly, the Cadillac car has now become an even wiser investment for an even wider circle of America's motorists.

If you have yet to acquaint yourself with these brilliant Cadillac virtues for 1957, your dealer will be delighted to tell you how easily you can make Cadillac a fine family custom of your own!

NEW YORK (Aircrafts, rails and selected stocks) gained in a generally mixed stock market early this afternoon.

Most pivotal stocks showed slight changes ranging from fractions to around a point. Turnover held up pretty well above the daily two-million share level.

The market was still consolidating a shade below the 1957 highs which were almost penetrated last week, brokers said. There was enough variety in corporate news to prompt fairly brisk buying and selling.

A sign of possibly easier money came in a drop in the U.S. Treasury's short-term borrowing costs to the lowest level since October.

A government clamp-down on export licenses for steel scrap had little immediate effect on steel shares. The leaders showed practically no change.

Radio Corp. stepped ahead more than a point in brisk trading on the news of record earnings and sales in the first quarter. There was a flurry in Sperry Rand which gained a fraction on word of a $1 million dollar Navy contract.

General Tire & Rubber added 3 points to its rise of 4 1/2 yesterday on the prospects for its rocket-making subsidiary, Aerojet.

Among the major divisions, aircrafts did about the best. Grumman, United and Douglas Aircraft rose around a point or better. Boeing and North American Aviation picked up major fractions.

As the lagging rails moved forward, Northern Pacific was up a major fraction, adding to its 1-point gain of yesterday when it was the second most active stock. Other gainers were Southern Pacific, New York Central, Baltimore & Ohio and Southern Railway.

Aluminum Ltd. and du Pont each fell a point or so. Smaller losses were taken by Texas Co., Royal Dutch, Ford, Zenith, Kennecott and International Nickel.

Gains of around a point were made by Atlantic Refining, Gulf Oil, Goodyear and International Paper.

Legal Residence To Be Required

Classified employees of the Pitt County Health Department will be required to be legal residents of Pitt County under terms of a regulation adopted April 18 by the Board of Health and approved yesterday by the Board of County Commissioners.

The regulation, also stipulates that classified employees will "devote at least 50 per cent of their monthly week-end time in residence in the county and subject to emergency duty." Health Department employees were notified of the regulation in a letter from Dr. Walter C. Humbert who required their signature on the copy which was forwarded to the commissioners. There were 22 signatures, including Dr. Humbert's on the letter which the commissioners approved.

Board of Health members approved the regulation after hearing complaints about some department members not maintaining a residence in the county.

The regulation affects personnel who are classified under the classification system of the Personnel Department of the North Carolina Board of Health and the North Carolina Merit System. Exceptions to the week-end residence provision include being out-of-town on approved annual business or sick leave.

Voters Reaffirm Primary Choices

BETHEL — A five-man Board of Commissioners and a mayor were officially elected in Bethel's election yesterday.

Actually races had already been decided in the primary held last week.

A total of 147 votes were cast in yesterday's election compared to 294 in the primary.

C. W. Everette, local attorney, received 110 votes for mayor in the election. Members of the commission elected for the coming year and the votes they received: W. E. Andrews, 124; J. M. Butterworth, 123; J. R. Cullifer, 127; M. L. James, 137 and R. J. Whitehurst, 128.

W. R. Everette received three write-in votes.

The new board will be sworn in the first Tuesday in July. Everette will replace R. E. Reddick as mayor. Reddick did not run in this year's primary and election.

Approve Relief For A Taxpayer

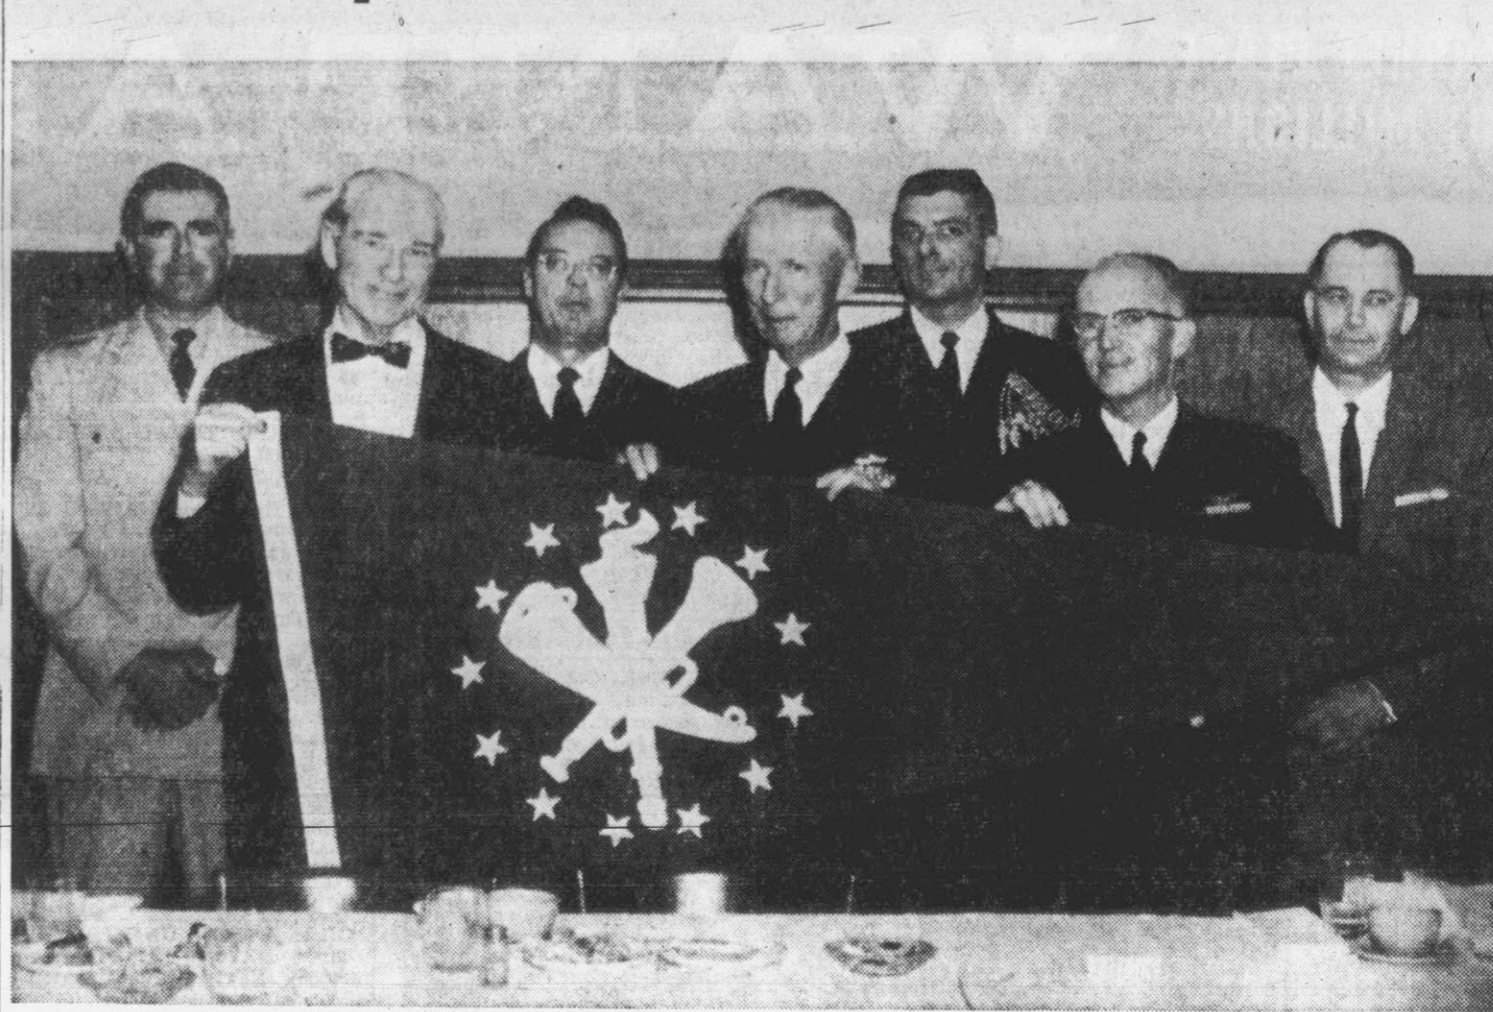

Pitt County commissioners, sitting as the county's Board of Equalization and Review, yesterday approved tax relief for one taxpayer.

The board granted relief to V. S. Harrington who had entered a complaint on the county's assessment of property at College View Apartments.

No action was taken on other complaints heard last week by the board, which voted yesterday to continue its meeting at a date to be set.

Defense Dept. Reserve Award Is Presented

Admiral George C. Crawford, USN, (center), President John D. Messick of East Carolina College (left) and LCDR. John O. Reynolds of the college faculty are pictured holding the pennant presented to East Carolina College last night in recognition of services to the Reserve Forces of the country. Others participating in the ceremony are (back row, left to right) Lt. Col. J. Partridge, professor of air science at the college; Commander E. F. Lamsche of Greenville; LCDR. F. F. Clifford, who accompanied Admiral Crawford to Greenville; and Mayor W. L. Whedbee of Greenville.

East Carolina College received last night the Department of Defense Reserve Award in a ceremony conducted in the East Dining Hall on the campus.

Admiral George C. Crawford, USN, Commandant of the Sixth Naval District, with headquarters in Charleston, S.C., presented to East Carolina College the Reserve Award Pennant and the citation attesting the award. Admiral Crawford is a North Carolinian, his home being in Black Mountain.

Describing the Reserve Forces of the United States as the answer to the problem of maintaining sufficient trained manpower for the defense of the country, Admiral Crawford cited contributions being made by East Carolina College to encourage the Reserve program.

Many physical facilities of the college have been, he stated, made available to reservists of the Navy, Marine Corps, and Air Force for meetings and drill purposes. Reserve employees of the college, he pointed out, are given schedules which do not conflict with attendance or active duty training.

Also, he continued, the East Carolina administration has encouraged the college News Bureau to publicize the need for active participation in the reserve corps by employee and student reservists.

"These concrete items, among many others, and the pride of this college in maintaining this strong element of mutual understanding of the relationship of reserve forces and national defense, place this institution on a high national pedestal for all to see—and to imitate."

As he presented the award to President Messick on behalf of the Secretary of Defense, he said: "East Carolina College has contributed immeasurably to public understanding and greater awareness of the role of the military reservist in the United States today. The Department of Defense Reserve Award is actually a symbol of appreciation of this fact. It also serves to point up to the rest of the Nation the outstanding efforts the Reserve program in general. Without such support, our reserve components would find it hard to survive. For, in essence, our reserve forces represent only an expression of the serious concern of our civilians for their country's defense."

LCDR. John O. Reynolds, USNR, faculty member of the East Carolina mathematics department, who recommended the college for the award, was recognized during the presentation ceremony by Commander E. F. Lamsche, USNR, commanding officer of NRCC 6-26, and spoke briefly to those present. Dr. Reynolds has been a member of NRCC 6-26 since its activation in April, 1949, and acted as its commanding officer for the first five years. During World War II he served with the Navy arm.

Admiral Crawford was honor guest at a dinner at the college preceding the presentation of the award. Special guests introduced by Commander Lamsche included, in addition to college personnel, Mayor W. L. Whedbee of Greenville; LCDR. F. F. Clifford, who accompanied Admiral Crawford to Greenville; J. T. Little of Greenville; E. E. Rawl of Greenville, member of the college Board of Trustees; Col. B. Brockdorf, commanding officer, Lt. Col. L. E. Meeks, acting senior army advisor, and Maj. A. C. Marcereau, retiring commanding officer of all of the North Carolina Military District; LCDR. Y. N. Fontenot, commanding officer, Naval Reserve Training Center, Raleigh, N.C.; Lt. Col. L. J. Partridge, professor of Air Science at the college; Hartwell Campbell of Station WNCN, Greenville; and David J. Whichard III of the Greenville Daily Reflector.

Chief Petty Officer Aviation Pilot Alton Cox, who piloted Admiral Crawford's plane here from Jacksonville (Florida) Air Station, graduated from East Carolina College in 1935 and entered the navy the same year. He now has 22 years of service. He piloted the plane at 8 a.m. today to Charleston, S.C. Pilot Cox spent last night in Greenville with his brother, Elmer M. Cox, 608 West Fourth street.

G. Cooper, who handled the sale for the estate; Sam O. Worthington; and Sam Underwood have first-floor suites in the building.

The building is the second the county has bought in the last two weeks for use as additional office space. Last week, commissioners completed negotiations for purchase of a house and lot behind the county jail on Washington St.

The county accepted the building with the reported understanding that three attorneys who have office space in it would be permitted to use the space until the county needs the offices. Lewis

Formal Title To Edwards Bldg. Expected By County This Week

Formal title to the Edwards Building is expected to pass into Pitt County's hands this week.

A confirmation of an April 23 public sale was signed yesterday by Clerk of Court D. T. House, Jr., and last night by resident Superior Court Judge W. J. Bundy.

The confirmation approved the county's bid of $40,000, made by Board of County Commissioners Chairman B. Alton Gardner.

Commissioners yesterday followed up their bid by appropriating the purchase price from the county's General Fund. The money will go to heirs of the estate of Henry C. Edwards.

Yesterday's action ended sale efforts which began in January. The county had placed a bid of $30,000 at a public sale March 11 but the sale was vacated when heirs refused to accept the sum which was the only one offered at the public sale.

The county subsequently raised its bid to $37,500 when the building, which is situated between the Court House and the National Guard Armory, was offered at a private sale. That bid, too, was vacated when a private group offered $39,425.

The second public sale, required by law after the private bid was raised, ended when the county placed its $40,000 bid.

Specific plans for use of the office structure have not been announced. County officials have said, however, that they plan to use the available office space for expanding existing crowded facilities in the Court House, old hospital and other county-owned buildings.

The county accepted the building with the reported understanding that three attorneys who have office space in it would be permitted to use the space until the county needs the offices. Lewis
