Bob Ruark Here On Flying Visit

NOVELIST-COLUMNIST—Robert Ruark, native of Southport and noted novelist-columnist who is best known for his book entitled, "Something of Value", was a visitor in town yesterday afternoon. Ruark, on the left, is "talking over old times" with Tom Webb an old schoolmate at the University. Listening attentively is Miss Lyn Pretlow, the daughter of an old professional friend. Former Tar Heel, Traveling Writer Calls Spain Home

By EVERETTE PARKER Reflector Staff Writer "It's good to be back home again." Robert Ruark, novelist-columnist and world traveler, sat back on the sofa at the Country Club and softly tinkled the ice in his glass, as he made the statement yesterday afternoon.

The Southport native, who is best known for his novel "Something of Value", paid an old friend and classmate at the University of North Carolina, Tom Webb, a flying visit. They had not seen each other for over twenty years. Ruark, possessor of a neat mustache and a cosmopolitan air, talked freely of his many experiences since "the old days" at Chapel Hill.

His visit to North Carolina is the first "real" visit since he left this country to live in Spain four years ago. "Everything I've got in Spain now, my wife, dogs, books," Ruark was quick to say.

The roaming Tar Heel added, "I am going to Southport mainly to see if anyone has burned down the old house belonging to my grandfather."

Although his official residence is in Spain and he lives there whenever possible, Ruark still finds time to write three columns a week for United Features and recently signed a new six-year contract. He now makes $55,000 for his column work.

In addition to his columns that are printed in more than 175 newspapers throughout the country, Ruark's articles have been printed in the Reader's Digest, the Saturday Evening Post, Look and Field and Stream, and many other publications.

A little over four years ago, Ruark quit writing directly for Scripps-Howard for whom he was doing five columns a week. This job, "was tiring me down and I like to move around" he explained.

Two Eppes High Scholarships Are Announced

A great deal of work went into the writing of "Book sold to MGM for $300,000 with a riding clause that could net the author another $150,000. Although Ruark actually wrote "Something of Value" in less than a year, a considerable amount of anticipation, travel and peril were involved in his research.

With somewhat of a wondering look in his eye as he sat incessantly pulling on his cigarette, Ruark said, "Not only did I read for a number of years and make five trips to Africa... I also did a little fighting." During the Mau Mau uprising in Kenya, in the early 1950's, the 41-year-old adventurer, was a member of a band of soldiers that figured in the fighting. From these experiences some of the predominate characters of his novel were created.

Book Big Seller "Something of Value" shortly after it was published over two years ago became a Book of the Month selection and sold one million copies in four weeks in pocket book form. No other book has ever sold as many copies in pocket book form. It has been translated into 14 different languages since that time.

Ruark has just finished "The Old Man and the Boy" an autobiography of his boyhood days with his father along the North Carolina coast. In sequence, he is now working on "Poor No More... a logical title in connection with his recent success with "Something of Value", and he hopes to finish the novel in November.

The book deals with the discipline of a man to return "to the one pair of shoes class after he furthered himself in society," Ruark added. "The story is rather hard to explain... After a somewhat personalized first part dealing with life around Southport, I bring in a character who can't get enough and tries to cram it all away."

Although "Something of Value" has been accepted as a book, the author is also accepted in the South since it deals with violent racial conflicts. Ruark feels that racial problems will be "ironed out" in time and accepting the Negro's equality is inevitable. Graduating from the University in 1935, the climb to his lofty position in the writing world has been rapid. After starting out as a copy boy and doing a short jaunt as a seaman he began working with the WPA. "This didn't last long either since it only took them four months to find out that I was not an accountant," Ruark said. In 1937, he went to work with a

Two $800 scholarships, set up by members of Greenville's Ficklen family, will be awarded to two 1957 graduates of Eppes High School.

Announcement of the new awards was made today by City Superintendent of Schools J. H. Rose. Rose also announced establishment of an $800 scholarship for a 1957 graduate of Greenville High School. The Greenville High School scholarship, which is being contributed by an anonymous donor, is for attendance at East Carolina College.

One of the Eppes scholarships is being provided by the Ficklen Fund, Inc., founded by the late James S. Ficklen. The other is being provided by Mrs. Ficklen and James S. Ficklen, Jr. Both are being established in memory of the late Mr. Ficklen.

Both of the Eppes scholarships will provide $200 a year, for four-year attendance at a North Carolina college, according to letters from James S. Ficklen, Jr., to Rose. Rose will draw up conditions and requirements for both scholarships and will act as administrator for them.

The student selected to receive the new Greenville High School scholarship will be chosen by a committee of three GHS faculty members. The donor, who asked to remain anonymous according to Principal O. E. Dowd, stipulated that it "be given to that student who probably could not afford to go to East Carolina College without financial assistance." It, too, will provide $200 per year for each of the four years the student is in college.

The three scholarships will be awarded at commencement exercises in the two high schools.

Sen. Edwin Lanier of Orange offered the motion to strike out the exemption for newspapers and newsprint paper. The exemption has been applied as an administrative interpretation of the law for many years.

Eisenhower Pushes Plans To Air Foreign Aid Issue

WASHINGTON (AP)—While many senators talked of further cuts, President Eisenhower pushed today for public support of a trimmed foreign aid program.

Eisenhower volunteered plans for a $200-million-dollar cut in his original program yesterday, and then sought radio-TV time for two public appeals in the next two weeks. No definite times have been fixed.

James C. Hagerty, White House press secretary, said the first talk would deal with the over-all cost of the government and the second with "Why mutual aid is so essential in winning the peace."

Eisenhower detailed the $200-million-dollar cut as he outlined a new $3,300,000,000 foreign aid program at a White House conference with congressional leaders yesterday.

Some of those present said Eisenhower made an "inspiring appeal" for the program.

Sen. Sparkman (D-Ala.), a member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, called the new request "pretty reasonable" and "pretty close to what I have been advocating all along."

But with Congress in a strong economy mood, he said, the first place it looks for cuts is the foreign aid program, and it will take "some very good, active leadership by the President and his party" to sustain the reduced figure.

Chairman Russell (D-Ga.) of the Senate Armed Services Committee said he was unmoved from his original demand that all foreign aid be cut to about $2,400,000,000 for the fiscal year starting July 1.

Sen. Aiken (R-Vt.) commented that "I wouldn't say the foreign aid program couldn't be cut another 500 million dollars."

The President specifically asked: 1. $1,900,000,000 in new spending authority for military arms, planes, tanks and other equipment to allies and $900,000,000 in economic defense support for these allies, for a total of $2,800,000,000 in military and support assistance.

2. $1,800,000,000 for economic assistance, 500 millions of which would go into a loan fund. The remainder would cover 155 millions for the technical assistance program, 125 millions for the international cooperation administration's multilateral programs, and 300 millions for the President's emergency fund to use at his discretion.

Senate Democratic Leader Lyndon B. Johnson (Tex.) indicated Congress would go over the program carefully before deciding how far it can cut.

Johnson said Eisenhower's cut from an original $4,400,000,000 was attributed to plans for "better management, better funding, better screening" and other methods. He added Congress probably will do the same before it completes action.

Pitt Committee Lists Familiar Water Problems

Obstructions of rural streams and poisoning of fish in rural ponds by crop dusters were among the problems to come before a special Water Problem Inventory committee which met at the court house last night.

Pitt's committee is making the problem survey as a part of a broader study being sponsored by the State Board of Water Commissioners. The survey is being made to obtain an accurate detailed picture of the water problems that affect North Carolinians at the local level.

The Pitt meeting was the first county meeting to be held in the state. Some 14 persons appeared before the committee to present their problems concerning water supply.

One of the group told the committee that sawmills and logging operations were cutting trees and leaving tree tops and other obstructions in streams about the county.

Another pointed out that hurricanes had blown trees into swamps and streams flowing the water flow. Both problems cause undergrowth to appear in stream beds which in wet weather obstruct the water flow.

There was also a complaint that poisoning of crops — both by dusters in other ways — was sometimes killing fish in farm ponds and streams. Participants in the meeting said that crop dusters sometimes fail to shut off the crop spray before it hits a farm pond. In addition, they said, occasionally a heavy rain just after crops have been dusted will wash the poisons into ponds and streams killing fish.

Another problem turned over to the committee concerned drainage ditches dug by the Highway Department washing into farmers' canals.

Seething Colombia Handed Over To Junta

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP)—President Gustavo Rojas Pinilla today turned over the presidency to a military junta.

He acted, in the face of a bank business strike paralyzing Colombia's major cities, only two days after being re-elected to the presidency by parliament.

Only a few hours before, the Rojas regime had threatened criminal action to crash the business strike.

An official spokesman said 11 persons have died in the anti-Rojas disorders that began last week, but unofficial reports said the death toll might be as high as 50. Violence flared in opposition to Rojas' dictated re-election to another four-year term. University students generally led the protest demonstrations.

The Ministry of Economic Development announced that criminal actions will be started against all manufacturers who refuse to sell their products or try to hinder operation of their plants.

Officials said any banks remaining closed today would be seized and their employees drafted into military service. That action was taken yesterday against one of six Bogota banks which were shut.

Although there has been no nationwide strike call, shopowners, industrialists and bankers have closed down their operations in a continually widening protest.

Business reached a virtual standstill here in the capital. A general strike shut down industry, commerce and transport in Cali, a city of 83,000 persons 185 miles southwest of Bogota. The government spokesman said 18,000 workers are on strike in Medellin City.

Unofficial sources said the work stoppages have spread to Barranquilla and other cities.

Brig. Gen. Juan B. Cordoba, director of the government's information bureau, told reporters that demonstrators attacked the government palace in Cali yesterday and were turned back with tear gas without casualties.

Other sources said 20,000 persons took part in a protest march with three priests at their head. Cali has been the scene of some of the most violent outbreaks. Nine of the officially acknowledged 11 deaths were reported there.

Although bankers, manufacturers and shopowners have been largely responsible for the shutdown, Cordoba implied that the real enemy of the Rojas government is communism. He said the President's opponents "are in really helping extranational powers who are interested in tying up the strategic areas of the Americas."

The Navy ordered all retired naval officers living in Bogota to report for duty today. Reserve noncommissioned officers were ordered to report tomorrow. The army occupied Bogota last week-end and has been patrolling the city, along with the police, ever since.

The government called off a pro-Rojas rally it had scheduled for tomorrow. It said the cancellation was requested by Crisanto Cardinal Lique, Roman Catholic archbishop of Bogota. The cardinal had told Rojas he feared the rally would lead to civil strife.

More than 90 per cent of Colombia's population is Roman Catholic.

Stabilization and Conservation office. The commissioners' latest plan calls for transfer of the city schools offices to the Tucker Building after July 1.

The trustees also awarded an auditing contract to George D. Scott and Company, certified public accountants of Charlotte. The contract calls for complete audit of all fiscal records of the city system.

City's Elementary Schools Praised

An official of the State Department of Public Instruction, in Greenville to evaluate Elmhurst Elementary School, last night termed the city's elementary education program "excellent."

Homer Lassiter, supervisor of elementary education for the state department, put the tag on the program in a talk to trustees of the city's school system. He also commended the trustees, school administrators, teachers of elementary grades for "what they have done and are doing."

Lassiter's appearance before the trustees was one of the items of business handled the board in a regular meeting last night.

Other items included a "detailed study" of a Junior Chamber of Commerce report and resolution on conditions in city schools; acceptance of a petition requesting a new elementary school in Meadowbrook; acceptance of three $900 scholarships for graduates of Greenville and Eppes high schools; approval of a new head football coach; and discussion of transfer of city school offices from the Old Hospital building.

A statement on the Jaycees' report and resolution, made last week, was withheld pending final approval of the statement. Board Chairman J. B. James will issue the board's statement regarding the report and resolution, which calls for an "all inclusive and detailed school development plan" for the Greenville School District, and rotation of terms of members of the Board of Trustees.

Raps Minimum Wage Exceptions

RALEIGH (AP)—A veteran legislator and manufacturer said he doesn't go along with the idea that a minimum wage bill would "throw a lot of people out of work simply because we have to pay people a living wage."

Rep. H. Cloyd Philpott of Davidson made the statement yesterday as the House Committee on Manufacturers and Labor held a hearing on a Senate-passed bill to set up a 75 cents hourly minimum wage in North Carolina.

Philpott, a furniture manufacturer and a member of the committee, said he believes the federal minimum wage law "has done more to bolster the economy of the South than any other legislation since the turn of the century."

A few proponents and numerous opponents spoke out on the measure yesterday. The committee took no vote on the bill, which would raise the pay of about 60,000 Tar Heels.

Representatives of hotels, theaters, laundry and dry cleaning establishments declared the bill is certain to cost people their jobs and increase prices.

Win One Round In Saving 'Olympia'

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—The long battle to save Adm. Dewey's flagship Olympia appeared won today, said the head of the group which wants to preserve the ship as a national shrine.

Francis D. Pastorius, president of the Cruiser Olympia Assn., said he had received word from Washington that the Navy had finally agreed to turn the ship over to the association instead of scrapping it.

The committee's report will be forwarded to the State Board of Water Commissioners in Raleigh to become a part of the state-wide survey.

Says Too Few In 1-A Draft Group BALTIMORE (AP)—Lt. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey says there are "too few" men in the 18-25 age group in the 1-A draft classification.

The director of the National Selective Service program told the Baltimore Armed Services Committee of the National Jewish Welfare Board yesterday there are 3,700,000 untrained men in that age group.

Wooten Would Revise Laws On City Limits

RALEIGH (AP)—State laws covering extension of city limits would be rewritten under a bill introduced in the House yesterday.

Rep. Frank M. Wooten Jr. of Pitt, who sponsored the measure, said it would eliminate elections to decide whether city limits should be extended. Under the bill, the power to decide on city extensions would be placed in the hands of the Superior Courts.

Wooten said, "It is based on the theory that a town has the right to grow, and a person who buys property adjacent to the corporate limits does so at his own peril that it may be taken in."

Approval of the measure, he added, would eliminate legislative hassles over city extension bills. Other legislative highlights yesterday included: 1. The Senate passed and sent to the House a bill to tighten up sanitation inspections of public eating and lodgings establishments.

2. Rep. Carroll Holmes of Perquimans and four other House members introduced a bill to reduce the number of North Carolina banks permitted to charge a fee for cashing checks. It would prohibit banks and bank branches which have deposits of 2 1/2 million dollars a year from charging a fee for cashing checks drawn on or cleared through other banks.

Wildlife Office Furnishings Under Criticism

RALEIGH (AP)—The Joint Appropriations subcommittee has criticized proposed purchases of "elaborate" rugs and furniture for the new offices of the Wildlife Resources Commission.

One member of the subcommittee declared yesterday the commission "should live like the rest of us folks and not in an ivory tower."

The subcommittee approved the commission's budget for the next biennium, but it designated a special committee to draft a resolution which would put restrictions on the commission's spending.

The commission's proposed budget, which calls for more than four million dollars, is raised completely through fees. There is no direct appropriation from the state's general fund. However, some lawmakers said they felt some steps should be taken to curb the spending of money accrued in excess of the approved budget. Particular reference was made to the revenue which would come from the increase of hunting and fishing licenses.

When Buy Trousseau-Be Practical

COCKTAIL DRESS—Choosing her navy blue taffeta cocktail dress with care, bride-elect, Miss Virginia Perkins, will be able to wear this outfit year-round. Her matching hat of navy blue adds an extra charm to the dress. She will be married Saturday.

LUNCHEON DRESS—Miss Hannah Proctor, bride-elect, is shown about wearing a lavender luncheon dress with matching wide-brim hat that is essential in every summer bride's trousseau. This cotton although practical, is dressy enough for afternoon teas, luncheons, or coffees. She will be married June 15.

Memo to Brides

(Editor's Note: This is the third in a series of articles dedicated to the world's darling, the bride.)

By ANNE SINGLETON
Reflector Woman's Editor

No bride's trousseau is going to last a lifetime, though her fiancé might be tempted to think so as he adds up the results of innumerable shopping ventures. Nevertheless, since Daddy won't be footing the bills when she's married and the grocer will be getting what used to be pocket money, the wise bride concentrates on practically and turns a stern eye on "irresistibles" though probably useless luxuries.

Since hot weather clothes will more quickly than heavy wool suits, this once posed a problem for the summer bride. But now, many cotton and cotton combinations, lace, chiffon and silk have become all seasonal.

The only problem is keeping style and color in mind. A gray, navy or brown sleeveless dress, topped by bolero jacket in light-weight tweedy-looking material can take one through a high or low mercury day.

Fortunately, cocktail and evening dresses are made of materials that are used all year round. Velvet and organdie are among the exceptions.

In the color line, red and black are apt to look hot in the summer, and a light print dress might make the wearer feel something like the last rose of summer in the middle of winter.

Don't forget house slippers when trousseau shopping. There are a wealth of bridelike ones available, from satin to pastel leather to jeweled ballet slippers.

A negligee might be called a "necessary luxury" for the bride's trousseau. Traditionally frothy and ultra-feminine, the negligee or peignoir is, nevertheless, an extremely useful cover-up, and since many are of sheer nylon or other man-made fabrics, it is one of the simplest articles to wash, drip and dry, no matter how fussily feminine it may look.

Luncheon Fetes Brides - Elect

'Brides of the season, Miss Virginia Perkins, Miss Mary Ann Waldrop and Miss Hannah Proctor, were feted at a two-course luncheon Thursday afternoon in the home of Mrs. D. J. Whichard Jr. on Elm Street.

Hostesses for the luncheon were Mrs. W. W. Lee, Mrs. J. B. Cummings, and Mrs. Whichard.

After guests were greeted by the hostesses, they were introduced to the receiving line composed of the honorees and their mothers, Mrs. Reid Perkins, Mrs. Herbert Waldrop and Mrs. J. Knott Proctor Sr.

Of focal interest was the bride's table placed in the center of the dining room where the brides-elect and attendants were seated. Centering the table was a flower arrangement of small rose buds and white lilies designed as replicas of a three-tiered wedding cake. A white cutwork cloth covered the table and found at each of the brides-elect places were miniature doll brides dressed in full bridal attire.

Mothers of the brides-elect and other guests were seated at individual tables throughout the house, which were covered with pink cloths. Arrangements of pink and white rose buds and lilies-of-the-valley were placed on each table to carry out the pink and white color scheme used for the afternoon.

Assisting in the dining room were the hostesses.

Each of the honorees was remembered with trousseau gifts and presented pink and white nosegays of Sweetheart roses and lilies-of-the-valley.

Goodbyes were said by the hostesses.

BEAUTY HINTS
From . . .
Harrell's Beauty Salon

Make no mistake about it: Hair coloring should never be a "do it yourself" endeavor! It takes skill and training to blend a colour that does the very most for your eyes and your own skin pigment . . . a colour that doesn't streak, that won't change its tone a few days after the job is done. Besides, you'll like the convenience of putting your hair in the hands of a skilled cosmetologist. And think what fun the two of you will have trying shades against your face, planning together the colour that will capture the most interesting part of your personality!

Light, natural colors are newest for this Spring and Summer. And at the fashionable resorts, where ladies wear the trends first, there is more and more "tipping"—a blonde or silver streak to dramatize brunette or black hair. Or, to create a very special effect indeed, a pale red colour against dark auburn. This is nice in a "wing" of brightness—placed high enough so that it can become the highlight of a pompadour above your brow, or with just a change in the part of your hair, two separate streaks of light across an eye-catching head.

Lipstick stays longer if you try this trick: Apply your lipstick early in your makeup routine. Then powder it carefully and let it set. Put a second coat over the powder, and leave it for three minutes before blotting. See how much longer the color will last!

Pink lipstick is pretty—but sometimes it needs a touch-up. If one of the new pink shades looks best on you, try outlining your lips with a darker pink. This defines your lips—and gives you a chance to change their shape, ever so slightly, when you apply the darker lipstick.

Miss Lowe Took Club On Tour

Miss Velma Lowe, a member of the faculty at East Carolina College, took members of the Aries Book Club on a tour around the world.

Colored slides were used by the speaker to illustrate her trip. Her descriptions, feelings and side-ights made her pictures come alive. Of special interest were the slides of the Holy Land.

Miss Lowe had the unusual experience of probably being the first American lady ever to visit a certain mountain village.

Other places of interest included Rome, Athens, Cairo, Siam, Hong Kong and Honolulu.

Many souvenirs were on display from the various countries she visited.

Preceding Miss Lowe's talk, Mrs. Stephen Bartlett presided over the business meeting.

The meeting was held Tuesday night at the home of Mrs. Troy Dodson in Forest Hills. Arrangements of summer flowers were used throughout the house. A dessert with coffee was served by the hostess.

Mrs. Wendell Smiley, sponsor of the club, and Miss Lowe were guests.

Easement For The Cane Pole Set

Tar River fishermen, or at least some of that peaceful lot, have prevailed upon Representative Frank Wooten to put in a good word for tranquil hook-wetting.

Brother Wooten, probably a fisherman at heart, although he is marooned in the high-and-dry State Capitol, has taken the suggestion hook, line and sinker. He has come through with a whole mess of 50-pound test words that should make the cane pole crowd a happy lot.

Pitt's legislative Izaak Walton has introduced a bill that would put the brakes on power boat operators who have turned the lazy Tar into an aquatic Darlington. His bill would make misdemeanors of careless and reckless boating, and speeding in excess of ten miles-per-hour or what would be considered reasonable and prudent under existing circumstances.

Now, anybody who has ever vet a hook or dropped a wiggling red worm in the Tar knows that the bill has some merits. In low water days, there's hardly enough water in the river to keep a two-pound carp alive and the motor boat crowd moves a lot of that into the low ground when they roar up and down the main channel.

Of course, if the bill passes it'll create a few problems for the law enforcement agencies. Greenville Police Chief S. G. Gibbs and Sheriff Ruel Tyson will have to pool their resources to purchase a police launch big enough to pull the aquatic cowboys over to the bank where a ticket can be written.

Then, too, there'll be the question of figuring out where the jurisdiction of the various law enforcement agencies begins and ends. We wonder if the motor boat boys will be able to pull out beyond a three-foot or ten-foot limit from the bank to escape the long arm of the law.

There are certain provisions of the bill which are designed to ease the troubled minds of the motor boat operators, too. The bill provides that they can hold regularly scheduled and advertised races in waters more than one-half mile in width, provided they can obtain a permit for such races from Clerk of Court Dave House at least five days before the races are to be held.

On second thought, though, that provision doesn't hold much water for the motor boat boys. Since the bill pertains only to those portions of Tar River in Pitt County, it practically eliminates the chances of holding any races.

The only time Tar River gets a half-mile wide in Pitt County is when it rains mightily hard for a week or so on the other side of Rocky Mount. That's when the Tar, laden with good Piedmont farm land, spreads out all over the Eastern end of the county's low grounds.

That makes the river wide enough for the racers to obey the law—but there's still something fishy about having to flood a tobacco field to hold a boat race.

We're glad, in a way, that Brother Wooten is asking the General Assembly to argue the merits of the bill. Frankly, we find it's just too much to worry about when a man's got to consider where his next can of worms is coming from.

Ideas That May Be Found Useful

By ELMER ROESSNER

For the past two days, a group of traffic managers of retail stores have been swapping money-saving ideas in Chicago. They were participating in the 36th annual traffic conference of the National Retail Dry Goods Association. Traffic men are responsible for getting goods from manufacturers to the selling floors.

Here is a synopsis of some of the ideas that seem useful to other merchants:

Keep the store's buyers informed about shipping costs in terms of money, instead of in terms of routing, minimum shipments, etc. For example, show buyers that a coat that costs 15 cents to bring in in a consolidated shipment costs 53 cents by express and $1.50 by air. Give them charts so they can calculate costs per item by various kinds of transportation. That's from Ray Propriator, of J. L. Brandeis & Sons, Omaha.

DOLLY SAVES TIME

Consider the use of a pallet dolly at receiving platforms. J. S. McDougal, of Woodward & Lothrop, Washington, said their purchase of a $44.25 dolly cut unloading time 40 per cent.

Check manufacturers' charges for their own deliveries, suggested L. J. Lewison, Macy's, New York. He found some vendors used their own trucks but charged common carrier rates, making a neat profit. Others used their own trucks and charged by the piece at rates that were found to be exorbitant. Even when rates were cut for delivering multiple units, they were still double what they cost the manufacturer.

Analyze costs of receiving and ticketing goods and charge costs to departments ordering them, suggested John Sheldon, vice president of Charles A. Stevens & Co., Chicago. It makes buyers realize the costs of rush orders and special treatment. The Stevens store used this system for five years and it brought about such an understanding of receiving costs that further analysis was unnecessary.

LIMIT CARRIERS

Consider routing as much as possible by a limited number of carriers proposed Thomas C. Hope, Montgomery Ward traffic manager. This reduces congestion at receiving docks, saving both store and carriers money. It gains specialized attention from the carriers used because each makes more money, and it makes it easier to correct their failures.

J. A. Phelan, of the Fair, Chicago, pointed out that invoices without order or department numbers create extra work and expense. His store, he said, sends careless suppliers a tough form letter stating they will redate invoices, thereby extending the discount time, and reserve the right to return goods unless the numbers arrive within 10 days.

Ordering carton flats bound with steel straps and on pallets, instead of in the usual twine-tied bundles, saves 10 1/2 man hours per trailer load, or $10,000 a year, M. M. Frohock, of Cluett, Reebody, reported. It reduces congestion in the receiving areas, lessens damage, makes handling easier and saves time for suppliers' trucks, he said.

A. Burin, a retailer but president of Globe Shipping, New York, gave traffic men this tip: On air freight, get your own insurance through your broker instead of buying insurance offered on airway bills. Your own insurance protects from shipping to receiving point, he said, but waybill coverage protects only when goods are in the hands of airlines or their agents.

WHY NOT MUSTARD ON CHERRY ICE CREAM?

The following item in full is from Pak-Facts, a house organ of Tee-Pak, manufacturers of cellulose casing for sausages: NEWEST RAGE: Hot dogs steamed in beer and smothered in sherry-flavored sauerkraut. If that is truly the newest rage, we are not at the tipping off point for the decline and fall of the Western Civilization.

NEWS YOU MAY USE IN MANAGEMENT

The Small Business Administration has issued three new "technical aid" bulletins for small manufacturers. They are "Use of Plastics for Tools, Dies, Jigs and Fixtures," "Reduce Waste—Increase Profit," and "Control of Expendable Tools." They are free from field offices of the SBA or the Department of Commerce. The National Retail Dry Goods Association, after two years of study, has published its "Wrapping Supply Manual" of 144 pages intended to simplify and economize store wrapping procedures. It is $20 to nonmembers. Thirty-two per cent of the fashionably dressed women now wear the tapered toe, according to 50 New York University School of Retailing students who watched dozens of Easter parades. The style was rarely seen in recent years.

OLD PROMOTER MORALIZES ON BRITISH MILK GLUT

"You were in England during the war," the Old Promoter remarked on his weekly visit. "Remember how difficult it was to get a glass of milk?" We did. The British called pasteurized milk "arf boiled milk," and you almost had to be a cousin of a farmer to get a bit if you were past the diaper age.

"The British have been guaranteeing milk prices," the old one said. "Now I see that so much milk is being produced that the British can't drink it all up. That's exactly what happened here when we guaranteed cheese, butter, grain and other farm prices."

"You know," he said, "we're mighty like the British in one respect: We both have to learn the hard way."

ANOTHER MEDLEY OF BUSINESS DRUM BEATS

The average auto dealer may do well this year to break even, according to Carl E. Fribley, past president of the National Automobile Dealers Association. He blames slow sales and thin margins. Shipments of folding cartons during the first three months of this year were 1.3 per cent higher than year ago, the Folding Paper Box Association reports.

Low Cost Duty By School Buses

By LYNN NISBET

SCHOOL BUSES — The current issue of State School Facts, publication of the Department of Public Instruction, presents some interesting figures on bus transportation of public school children. North Carolina hauls more children at less cost per child than any other State.

During the school year 1954-55, last for which comparative figures are obtainable, North Carolina transported 477,031 pupils in 7,268 publicly owned buses at a per passenger cost $11.44, not including replacements. Texas transported fewer pupils, an estimated 400,000, but operated 7,890 publicly owned buses, plus 400 other vehicles of which 347 were privately owned, at a per passenger cost of $42.25. Delaware hauled only 22,131 pupils, but the per capita cost was more than three times that here—$36.47.

Last year, 1955-56, there were 7,502 buses in North Carolina, hauling an estimated 488,789 pupils. The total cost, including replacement of worn out buses, was about $15.45 per pupil. The school buses traveled nearly 50 million miles at an average cost per mile of 10.7 cents.

COUNTIES — One table shows the comparative rating of the 100 counties. Per pupil cost ranges from $7.27 in Forsyth to $19.94 in Hyde. The cost per mile ranges from 8.2 cents in Hoke to 13.2 cents in Madison. The Department confesses major interest in the cost per mile or interest in the cost per mile reasons for these variances in costs—condition of route, age and year of bus, weather conditions, number of stops and need for repair parts," says the report. "There appear to be reasons also why differences should not be as great as they are between some units."

DISCRIMINATORY — School Facts was simply analyzing the operation of the pupil transportation system as it exists. There was no occasion to point out the gross discrimination against several hundred thousand school children who live in cities and towns. Free transportation is provided only for rural children who live more than a mile from the school house and within one mile of the school bus route.

The State Board of Education has repeatedly asked for the same kind of service to city children, but economy and rural minded Legislatures have consistently refused to appropriate funds for the purpose.

Testimony given before committees this session has shown that in Greensboro there are pupils of the high school living as much as seven miles from their school house. In contemplated annexation areas at Charlotte and Hickory there will be many pupils as much as four miles from their school.

Several city administrative units, including Greensboro, levy a special ad valorem tax to provide partial bus service to pupils. City pupils who are not afforded free bus service, either by the State or by double taxation of their parents, must walk or pay their own regular bus or car fare.

(This reporter rides a bus to work every morning on which seven or eight high school pupils are riding to high school, more than a mile away, at the rate of 20 cents each for the round trip. In addition to forking up that 20 cents, their papers are paying for free rides for the country cousins.)

ICE-BREAKER — Sen. W. B. Shuford of Catawba has a bill in the works providing that where school bus transportation is now provided it cannot be discontinued solely because the area in which the passengers live has been taken into corporate limits of a city or town. If that bill is enacted it will add nothing to the present bus costs, and will be a sort of ice-breaker toward equalizing privileges of city and rural children.

The education committee last week gave an unfavorable report to a bill by Sen. Jule McMichael of Rockingham to require school buses to go within half a mile instead of the present mile of every pupil. It was stated at the committee meeting that the extra half mile would add some $80,000 a year to bus operating costs.

DIFFERENCE — Important differences between situations in rural and urban areas are readily apparent. Rural communities do not have public transportation facilities to anything like the extent they are available in the larger cities. The school consolidation program put many rural pupils ten miles or more from their school houses. In cities there are few instances where pupils live much more than a mile from an elementary school, although high schools often are several miles away.

Enforced consolidation puts some responsibility on the State to provide transportation. Whether that transportation should be entirely free for part of the school children and charged against another large part of them is a serious question.

On that point Albert Ellis, Jacksonville attorney, has a suggestion. He proposes nominal bus fare payment by all riders, rural and urban, on approximately the same basis school lunches are provided. Pupils certified by welfare agencies as unable to pay would be hauled free, just as they are provided free lunches.

The Word On Tomorrow

As the first sprouts of vivid green grass mark the beginnings of spring: The first tentative Christmas decorations in the stores mark the approach of Thanksgiving Day.

A changing voice hints the coming of young manhood. . . . So too, do these first few pictures of graduating classes on Reflector pages herald an end to another school year.

Very soon the graduates will be sitting and listening to sage advice . . . coupled with the glowing words "you now stand on the threshold of the world"; which is all very true, but it is also true these graduates have also been standing on that threshold ever since they got out of the crawling stage.

And remember that cliché, "vast new horizons are opening to you"? That is likewise true; just as it is true that these same graduates have been encountering new horizons with every waking hour . . . and learned to live with them.

To my mind there is no single magic moment when an individual crosses the bridge from immaturity to maturity. The qualities of adult-hood are learned over a period of many years; and diplomas that will soon be issued to graduates over the land mark only one intangible link, of many links, that stretch behind them and before them.

But back to those pictures. Look them over . . . they represent Tomorrow. All young, scrubbed, fresh and shining. Tomorrow is always full of promise.

If the weather holds fair and warm over the weekend, there should be some dandy sunburns in evidence Monday.

The lucky ones will content themselves with knowledge their summer tan will return. Others are going to suffer with no hope . . . only a silent resolve: next time they'll be more careful. The sight of these fair-skinned ones (count me in) at a beach . . . wearing long-sleeved shirt, a hat, sunglasses and other safeguards against Old Sol . . . is a painful contrast when seen amid well-tanned sun-lovers.

Summer represents one long campaign of care vs. carelessness among the non-tanners. Their lesson in this respect was learned the hard way; and every one of them can tell bloody-curd

Other Editors Saying --- Seeking The Answer

SEEKING THE ANSWER

(Washington Daily News) The General Assembly of North Carolina has a constitutional duty to perform. The constitution requires it to reapportion both houses of the legislature after each national census.

The legislature has not carried out its constitutional duty in quite some time now. And indications are that it will not carry it out this time in the present form in which reapportionment has been presented.

The Weathers report on reapportionment handed to the General Assembly has found stubborn opposition from small counties who see in it a concentration of legislative power in the Piedmont area of North Carolina.

Now along comes the Currie plan whereby the Legislature of North Carolina would be modeled after the congress of the United States. Under terms of the Currie plan the senate would have 100 members with one senator coming from each county, large or small. The lower house would have 160 members with each county having a minimum of one representative. The other 60 seats would be given to larger counties according to population.

Since this is a constitutional question, the people of North Carolina would have to approve any change in the present system of reapportionment. The Currie plan might be the only possible answer right now.

We know this. The present system will not be invoked because the small counties can band together and defeat any efforts at reapportionment. The larger counties naturally want the present plan carried out because of the extra power it would give them in the legislature.

The larger counties are expected to oppose the Currie plan because it would at best be a compromise and they would stand to lose some of the power which they would have if present reapportionment plans are carried out.

The Currie plan is not perfect. It does not answer all the problems of reapportionment. For one thing it should be said that the present legislative chambers could not take care of increased membership. There is already talk, however, of building a new capitol building in Raleigh. The Currie plan would be purely a compromise, and it would give recognition to population in the lower house and to county units in the upper house.

From the practical standpoint one factor stands out. We are not going to realize reapportionment under the present system. Unless some change is made, we will continue to go along ignoring our constitutional responsibility. The Currie plan might be the answer.

The Daily News is against concentration of power into the hands of the larger and more populous counties. At the same time the constitution sets out a duty which should have been performed. Unless a change in the constitutional responsibility is made, then it is clear that we ought to go ahead and reapportion on the basis which the constitution now sets out.

The Currie plan ought to be studied carefully. It contains much merit. It is a pure compromise. It could be the only answer possible under the present circumstances.

ling tales of days when neglect raised blisters "the size of a half-dollar" all over their arms, back and neck.

Skeptics will advise "try exposing yourself to the sun five minutes one day, six minutes the next, seven minutes on the third day . . . and so on; then you'll toughen your skin so you can take it."

Odds are that the well-wrapped veteran has attempted that remedy. He has also probably spent good money on lotions and potions intended to induce a tan where no tan was obviously intended to exist.

Despite all their precautions, it is a rare summer when one of these breed doesn't forget and get seared, at least one time.

Unique Office Break

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK (AP) — Businessman Peter Volld has found a new way to boost office morale — with "religious breaks."

For six months 100 employees in his Chicago headquarters have interrupted their usual chores for a half-hour each Monday to hold interfaith religious discussions.

"This hasn't made any saints of us, I'm sure," said Volld, president of the King Korn Premium Stamp Co., one of the nation's largest trading stamp firms.

"But I can tell the difference in morale already. We're doing better work, the atmosphere is more cheerful, and the caste system you find in many offices has been broken down."

"I think any business office would benefit by trying our brotherhood hour plan."

The plan is very simple. At 2:30 each Monday work halts, the employees gather in a conference room. They spend their usual 15-minute "coffee break" plus 15 minutes of company time discussing religion.

The discussions are led by a Protestant clergyman, a Roman Catholic priest, or a rabbi. They rotate from week to week, explain their faith, answer questions.

"Sometimes the discussions last nearly an hour, and we have to break them up," said Volld, genially. "Participation is entirely voluntary, but now everyone in the office attends."

"As a matter of fact, neighbors and waitresses from a nearby restaurant have started dropping in, as well as visiting salesmen, and our conference room is getting crowded."

"The clergy's response has been very enthusiastic. A number of clergymen from other faiths, including a Japanese Shinto priest have asked to appear."

Volld, who is Jewish, married to a Roman Catholic and has a brother-in-law who is a priest, believes that misunderstanding and ignorance lie behind much of the prejudice among people — at the office as well as the world level.

"You can't have a successful business operation if there is internal conflict," he said. "Petitness, lack of cooperation and hate inevitably lead to buck-passing and irresponsibility."

"But you don't have these things in an office if everyone understands the other's problems and his way of life. Then employees go out of their way to help each other."

Has the office brotherhood hour programs made any converts?

"Frankly, I don't know, but I doubt it," said Volld. "But that wasn't our purpose. We haven't gone in for any banner waving, crusading, or religious ballyhoo."

"Our purpose wasn't to make money either. It was simply to make our employees know each other better, to feel better toward each other."

"They do now. The office workers don't act as if they were superior to the warehouse help, but more as if they were all members of the same family."

"Productivity has increased, but the main benefit is that the work flows more freely because the employees feel more comfortable together than they did before."

"After all, one's particular religion is often an accident of birth. The employees realize now that while all creeds have their differences, yet underlying them all is the same basic doctrine of mutual help expressed by the Golden Rule."

"If you put an extra 'o' in God," Volld concluded, smiling, "it spells good."

Opinions In Brief

"In granddaddy's day, the typical American consumer paid rent for a flat, rode to work in a streetcar, sent his starched collars to a laundry and for entertainment took his wife to a vaudeville theatre occasionally. Today he owns a house in the suburbs, drives an automobile to work, gives his wife no-iron shirts to process in an automatic washer-dryer, and watches television for entertainment — all largely because of consumer credit." — (Albert L. Krasas, in the New York Times)

In the investigation of the natural gas lobby. "STATEMENT OF PRINCIPLES" OF RADICAL ORGANIZATION. The "statement of principles" of the A.D.A., issued on its tenth anniversary, asked for the expenditure of many billions for urban rehabilitation, housing, schools, health, social insurance, nutrition, and similar social and economic programs. It denounced the Administration's monetary and fiscal policies because they favored construction of factories and stores instead of homes and schools.

But the most startling reform of the A.D.A. contemplates collection of almost all taxes by the Federal government, which would then redistribute them to cities and states on a "grants-in-aid basis." According to the A.D.A. theory, states and cities now obtain revenue from taxes that bear most heavily on those least able to pay — sales, excise, licenses, property.

Strength For Today

By EARL L. DOUGLASS

THROUGH THE NEEDLE'S EYE Jesus once said that it was easier for a camel to go through a needle's eye than for a rich man to enter the kingdom of heaven. His disciples were astounded at his saying, and no wonder. They asked, in complete bewilderment, "Who then can be saved?"

With his divine penetration, Jesus was able to perceive that money is one of the great factors destroying moral character. This does not mean that poor people are all virtuous and that high moral qualities are never found among the rich. Some of the finest people in every nation are wealthy people. Possession of adequate financial means can be a real blessing to a person if the person sets himself to make it so. But, by and large through the centuries, money, the desire for money, and the means taken to get it have probably ruined more souls than any other factor in this wicked world.

The Biblical ideal is not poverty. The Biblical ideal is stewardship. A steward is a person who administers the property and affairs of someone else. Behind the doctrine of stewardship is the conviction that all we have comes from God and belongs to Him and is to be administered to His glory. Millionaires can be as saintly as paupers, although they seldom are; and paupers can be as materialistic and avaricious as millionaires.

Every factor in life is testing us to see whether or not we are worthy to live eternally in fellowship with God. Money is one of the great tests of character. It has been called the acid test.

By RAY TUCKER

WASHINGTON — Neither Republican nor Democratic conservatives will derive any comfort from the Truman - Stevenson - Butler faction's politico - economic platform as recently framed at their Washington conference. What has previously been a harmless Democratic get-together was upset completely by this radical and unexpected pronouncement. It virtually echoed the set of principles previously adopted by the Party's radical auxiliary — Americans for Democratic Action.

The Fair Deal - New Deal program foreshadows an intraparty battle that should match the feud flaring between the Eisenhower - Nixon and the Knowland - Bridges wings of the GOP. The nominal Democratic leaders in effect, read important Southerners out of the national organization, including such distinguished men as Senators Byrd of Virginia, Russell of Georgia, McClellan of Arkansas and Ellender of Louisiana.

It was considered significant that neither Speaker Sam Rayburn nor Senate Majority Leader Lyndon B. Johnson attended the meeting of National Chairman Paul M. Butler's Advisory Committee. And 26 of the 91 members of the Democratic National Committee, by formal vote, declared that the Butler group was not entitled to speak or resolve for the Party between national conventions. That has been the Rayburn-Johnson contention.

HOPE TO WIN BACK LOST VOTING ELEMENTS The Truman-Stevenson document was pitched to win back all the voting elements which kept the Democrats in power for 20 years — the farmers, labor, small business, racial minorities, "little people" in general. It was distinctly anti-business and anti-corporation. It condemned the Administration for weakening the Western Alliance by opposing the Anglo-French-Israeli attack on Egypt.

Besides indirectly urging greatly increased foreign aid, it seemed to criticize Secretary Dulles for refusing to finance Nasser's Aswan Dam. Yet it also assailed his "rebuke" to Israel.

ONLY PASSING NOTICE TO BUDGET The statement gave only a passing notice to the Byrd-Russell-Ellender efforts to reduce the $71.8 billion budget, although it urged tax relief for low income groups. Indeed, in proposing greater assistance to "little fellows" everywhere as well as expanded school and home building programs, it envisaged an era of even heavier spending.

It specifically hit at Senator McClellan and his Southern-colleagues for their sponsorship of a "right to work" amendment. The A.D.A. damned the Arkansas Senator with faint praise by upbraiding him for his tender treatment of lobbyists caught

Dinner Fetes ECC Honor Students

East Carolina's highest ranking students in academic work were honored Wednesday night at a dinner in the East Dining Room on the campus.

Approximately 90 men and women who are included on the Dean's List of students with excellent scholastic records were guests of the Guaranty Bank and Trust Co.

John A. Wilkinson, Washington lawyer and business man, as principal speaker of the occasion, urged the students to continue their education. "Your education," he said, "should continue throughout your lives."

Dean of Instruction Leo W. Jenkins, vice president of the college, acted as master of ceremonies. East Carolina President John D. Messick introduced Mr. Wilkinson to his audience of students, members of the faculty representing departments of instruction, and others. Alumni Secretary James W. Butler gave the invocation.

Miss Anne Mayo of Plymouth, senior majoring in the department of foreign languages, was recognized as the East Carolina student having the highest academic record at the college. Miss Mayo recently received a scholarship from the Greenville Branch of the American Association of University Women for study abroad and this summer will take courses at the Sorbonne, University of Paris.

Seated at the speaker's table, in addition to those named, were Dr. Orval L. Phillips, college registrar; Vice President and Business Manager F. D. Duncan of East Carolina College; J. Herbert Waldrop and F. D. Atkinson of the Guaranty Bank and Trust Co.; Dr. Kenneth N. Cuthbert, director of the department of music; and Dr. W. E. Marshall, who has been appointed director of the department of social studies.

Principals in East Carolina College first annual Honors Dinner, held Wednesday evening in the college cafeteria, seated, left to right, are Hon. John A. Wilkinson, Washington, N. C., who was speaker at the dinner; ECC President John D. Messick, who introduced Wilkinson; Dr. Leo W. Jenkins, vice president and dean, who presided; F. D. Duncan, vice president and business manager; standing, left to right, F. R. Atkinson, Guaranty Bank and Trust Company vice president; Miss Ann Mayo, Plymouth, ECC honor student and highest academic rating; J. Herbert Waldrop, Guaranty Bank and Trust Company executive vice president, host at the dinner. (Photo by ECC News Photographer J. D. Henry).

Dottie Jo James of Wilmington and George Knight of Rocky Mount, students of music at the college, accompanied by Martha Sue Pond of Hamlet, gave a program of songs for the entertainment of those present.

Mr. Wilkinson, addressing the honor students, stressed the idea that education is a continuing process. He affirmed his belief that "the benefits of education should be made available to everyone who desires it" in a democracy such as ours.

Cat Rescued By A Dog-Fancier

YOUNGSTOWN, Ohio (AP)—William D. Timmins, line serviceman for Ohio Edison Co., admits he's soft-hearted.

Timmins braved wintry weather and the wrath of a weather-beaten tomcat to rescue the animal, straddled atop a high voltage pole for five days.

Did he do it because he likes cats? No, says Timmins, "I don't particularly care for cats. I like dogs better."

In achieving this aim, he continued and failed to neglect the maximum potential of those who will be our leaders. He congratulated the students on their fine record in academic work and told them that the recognition and encouragement given them should be an inspiration to them to build upon the education which they have received.

Canal Users Bow To Egypt's Rules

LONDON (AP)—Bowing to the inevitable, 14 of the 15 nations in the Suez Canal Users' Assn. are ready to let their shippers use the Egyptian waterway again.

Only France held out at a SCUA meeting here, last night. The French said they find it impossible "in present circumstances to recommend the use of the canal to member states."

The other 14 nations indicated they had no power to keep private shipping out of the canal. They made plain their ships probably will begin using the Suez soon.

The association, which Western nations formed last summer in an effort to bring Egyptian President Nasser to terms by unified action, agreed its members could resume freedom of action with regard to the canal.

The SCUA nations previously had advised their shippers to avoid using the waterway until they could see Nasser's plan for its operation. The plan, announced last week, calls for Egyptian operation of the canal, arbitration of disputes, unrestricted use of the canal in accordance with the 1888 Constantinople Convention, no more than 1 percent a year increase in canal tolls, cooperation between Egypt and the shippers (though SCUA was not mentioned specifically) and dedication of 25 per cent of the canal's income to improvements.

Taking the lead for the West, the United States told the Security Council there was plenty about the plan it didn't like but the Egyptians should be given a trial.

Except for France, the SCUA members took much the same attitude. They issued a communique saying they "reserve existing legal rights" under the 1888 convention.

About 20 per cent of the world's 850,000 doctors are in the United States.

HEAVY SUBJECT CARBONDALE, Ill. (AP)—On campus, Southern Illinois University geology students are known as soreheads. There department is housed in a basement. Maximum clearance is six feet. Pipes in some places dip lower than four. But staff and students have kept their heads and will be moved to roomier quarters next fall.

Abraham and His God

ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By Alfred J. Buescher

Scripture—Genesis 12; 15—17; 22.

The Lord commanded Abraham to leave his home in Ur and go to a new land...

When Abraham was 99 years old, the Lord appeared to him saying He would make a covenant between them...

Abraham's wife was childless, but Jehovah promised that she would bear a son and he should be named Isaac...

Ordered by Jehovah to sacrifice Isaac on the altar, Abraham prepared to obey. As he was going to slay the boy, an angel stopped him...

HE FAITHFULLY OBEYED THE LORD'S COMMANDS

child. She was a maid in Abram's house named Hagar. When Hagar knew she was to have a child she "despised" her mistress, which angered Sarah, and she was so unkind to Hagar that Hagar fled...

The older ones could have it pointed out that Israel claims its right to Palestine because it was assigned to them by God. No other land was given so to any people.

Now when Abram was 99 the Lord appeared to him and made a covenant with him. His name was thenceforth to be Abraham, "for a father of many nations have I made thee."

Abram, son of Terah, lived in the land of Ur of the Chaldees where his father and other relatives lived. But the Lord commanded Abram to leave his kin and go to a new land which He showed him, and there he would become a great nation. Abram obeyed without question, and taking his wife, Sarah or Sarai, and his entire household, he began his journey to Canaan.

Tonight's Game 'Isn't Free'—Say Officials

Tickets for the ECC-Elon North State Conference championship ball game tonight at Guy Smith Stadium, are being given away at the College View Cleaners and Laundry.

The firm, which purchased a total of 5,000 tickets for the expected purpose of giving them away to interested fans, has already disposed of 3,000.

A spokesman for the firm stated this morning that there has been talk "that fans do not have to have tickets to get into the game."

Coach Jim Mallory of East Carolina said this morning that "it is absolutely necessary that tickets be presented at the gate. The ball game is not free and those who come without tickets will be charged for admission."

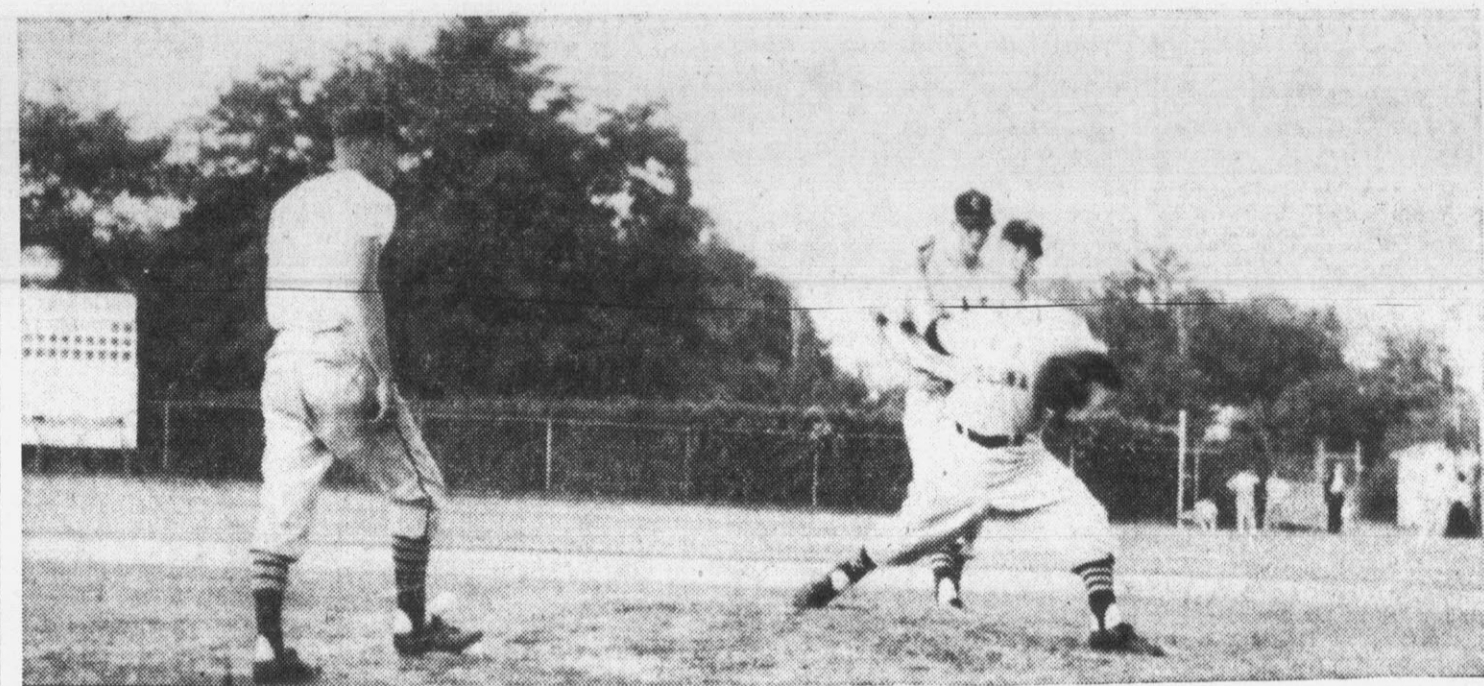

He stressed again the point that the game is not free and that only through the generosity of College View Cleaners and Laundry are tickets being given away—and at that firm's expense.

All who plan to attend the game are urged to secure their tickets either from College View or any of the local Jaycees. Otherwise, it will cost at the gate.

Chisox Tie For Lead, But Lopez Knows Team Weak

By JOE REICHLER The Associated Press

The Chicago White Sox were back in first place today tied with the New York Yankees—but manager Al Lopez isn't kidding himself. He knows the team, the way it stands, is not of championship calibre.

He knew before he even consented to take over the club that it had speed, defense and pretty good pitching. What concerned him was the hitting—or lack of it.

Nothing has happened to allay the manager's fears... despite the team's lofty status. In fact, it's even worse than Lopez thought.

Including yesterday's game, won from Boston 2-0, the White Sox have a team batting average of .233 lowest in the American League.

It took a sterling pitching exhibition by Jim Wilson to snap the White Sox' five-game losing streak.

In the only other major league game played yesterday, the Washington Senators broke their 10-game losing streak, battering last year's 21-game winner Frank Lary for nine of their 13 hits to defeat the Detroit Tigers 8-5.

Wilson permitted only five hits and struck out nine to snap Boston's four-game winning streak. The big righthander also cooled off Ted Williams, preventing him from getting the ball out of the infield in four trips to the plate.

Williams dropped 21 percentage points, but retained the American League batting lead at .443.

The loser was Dean Stone, who was nicked for both White Sox runs and all five hits in the 5-2-3 innings he pitched.

Pamilo Pascual went all the way in Washington's first triumph in almost two weeks although he yielded 11 hits. The Cuban righthander received good batting support from his mates, especially Eddie Yost and Roy Sievers. Yost rapped four singles in four times at bat. Sievers drove in three runs with a double and a home run. He now has hit six of his team's nine four-baggers. The trio of RBIs increased Roy's league leading total to 24.

Buc Track Team Leaving Tonight

The ECC track team, defending North State Conference champions, leave tonight for Burlington and the loop meet, Saturday.

The meet, which is expected to last most of the day, will decide the conference championship for 1957.

Coach J. O. Miller, whose East Carolina club has had four matches for this season, has stated that his boys are at their most improved stage at the present time. "We should do well," Miller has said, but he would not make any predictions as to the outcome of the meet.

Expected to pace the Bucs tomorrow at Burlington are Jim Henderson, Bob Ruck, Charlie Bishop, Dennis O'Brien, Foster Morse, Bob Maynard, Cliff Buck, Lynn Barnett, Eddie Dennis and Bobby Patterson.

Last year Henderson was the top point man in the meet and paced his club to a decisive victory. The Pirates copped seven North State records in securing the title.

Club To Wilson

WILSON (AP) — Professional baseball is returning to Wilson. It was announced today that the Kingston team of the Class B Carolina League is moving its franchise here and will play its first game against Greensboro Monday night.

The announcement came from Paul Caldwell, business manager of the Kingston Eagles. It followed a meeting of the Wilson city commissioners last night at which the board agreed to lease the municipal stadium for the remainder of the season.

Wilson was a member of the Carolina League last season but did not field an entry this year. The Kingston team, now in the cellar, is on a four-day road trip and will return to its new home Monday for a four night stand, first against Greensboro and later Durham.

GHS Linksmen Play Conference Teams Today

KINSTON — Greenville High School's golfers, boasting a 6-1 record for the season, meets the six other teams of the Northeastern Conference today in the NEAC Golf Tournament here.

Coach Boley Farley's four-man team has been one of the loop's top outfits this season and has lost only one match—that one to New Bern which is favored to win the tournament.

Represented in the tourney will be Kinston, Greenville, New Bern, Washington, Roanoke Rapids, Elizabeth City, Jacksonville.

Carrying the banners for Greenville will be Louis Phelps, Buddy Murray, Lucian Bryan Jr. and Wesley Topping.

This year's club has been called "one of our best," by Farley. GHS is regarded the top threat to New Bern.

Yesterday's Stars

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS BATTING Roy Sievers, Senators—Drove in three runs with a double and his sixth home run to help the Senators snap a 10-game losing streak with an 8-5 victory over Detroit.

PITCHING Jim Wilson, White Sox—Pitched the White Sox into a first place tie with New York, permitting only five singles and striking out nine as Chicago broke a five-game losing streak with a 2-0 victory over Boston.

East Carolina meets Elon at Guy Smith Stadium tonight for the North State Conference title.

This is virtually the situation, surprisingly enough, for recent developments in the North State standings have placed both teams in such a position that the winner of tonight's game is practically assured of the conference championship.

Elon, with an 11-2 mark two days ago, was pacing the league and seemed almost the sure winner of this season's title. Also, two days ago, no one gave ECC much chance to go into the race. But Appalachian defeated the Christians 2-0 Wednesday.

The defeat puts Elon's mark back to 11-3. East Carolina now has a 9-3 mark. Should the Pirates win tonight, their record will move to 10-4 and another victory against Guilford tomorrow afternoon at College Field would wrap up the crown for the third season in a row. Should Elon win tonight, it will give them the title.

Coach Jim Mallory, ECC mentor, stated this morning that he intends to "stick with George Williams as my starting pitcher." He added that he has Ben Baker, Leonard Lilley and the rest of his staff ready if needed. "This is the big one," he said, "and we'll have every one of our boys ready to go in if we have to use them."

Williams is 2-0. Williams, perhaps the top relief man on the Pirate pitching staff, has also taken two games as a starter. He has not yet been beaten this year. One of the outstanding high school prospects of this past season, he was sought after by many colleges. Coach Jim Mallory has called him "one of our best pitchers."

A righthander, Williams is expected to be at his strongest tonight against a predominantly right-handed batting power. Elon, currently pacing North State play with a 12-2 record, boasts a collection of power hitters.

In the earlier encounter of the two clubs, Elon blasted the Bucs 6-0 at Burlington. At that time, however, ECC only ranked fourth in the conference. Since then, Coach Mallory's team has won five games, lost two and grabbed the number two slot.

A victory over the Elon team tonight would help ECC's chances of getting into the race for top honors, which they have won for the past two seasons.

Should the Elon batters get to Williams tonight, Mallory will probably use Leonard Lilley or Charlie Russell in relief.

Guilford Tomorrow Tomorrow afternoon at College Field, the Bucs wrap up their 1957 season against Guilford.

The Guilford contest will begin at 2:30. Mallory has not yet named his starting pitcher for that game.

Students Complete Their Annual Tour

By ANNE HARRIS
Belvoir-Falkland Reporter

Thirty-two students at Belvoir-Falkland High School have returned from their annual trip to Washington, D. C., and New York City.

The group, accompanied by chaperones, left the school by bus on Thursday, April 25. Mount Vernon, the home of George Washington, was the first stop on the students' tour. While there they toured the gardens and lawns, and had a picnic lunch before continuing the trip to the nation's capital.

At Arlington National Cemetery, the group visited the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier and watched the changing of the guard at the tomb. After leaving Arlington, the students visited the statue depicting the flag raising on Iwo Jima, the Lincoln Memorial and Jefferson Memorial.

On Friday, second day of the tour, the group visited the Department of Printing and Engraving where they saw paper being printed and counted. They also were shown the printing process used in production of postage stamps.

The Federal Bureau of Investigation was next stop on the tour. A guide took the group through the department, pointing out a collection of guns taken from notorious criminals captured by department personnel. They also visited many of the FBI laboratories where scientific analyses are made of clues.

A few of the more daring students (those with strong lungs) made the long climb up the stairs to the top of the Washington Monument. None of those who made the climb missed the elevator or the return trip.

The last place visited in Washington by the Seniors was the Capitol building. There they saw the rotunda, Senate chamber, lower corridors, statuary hall and House chamber. Guides explained all of the points in the Capitol, revealing history of the statues and art work in the building.

After the tour of the Capitol, the students boarded their bus and resumed the trip to New York City. The group arrived in New York City Friday night and went to the Hotel Bristol. Some of the more energetic ones walked around the city that night but most of the group waited until Saturday morning when a visit to the United Nations opened the formal tour.

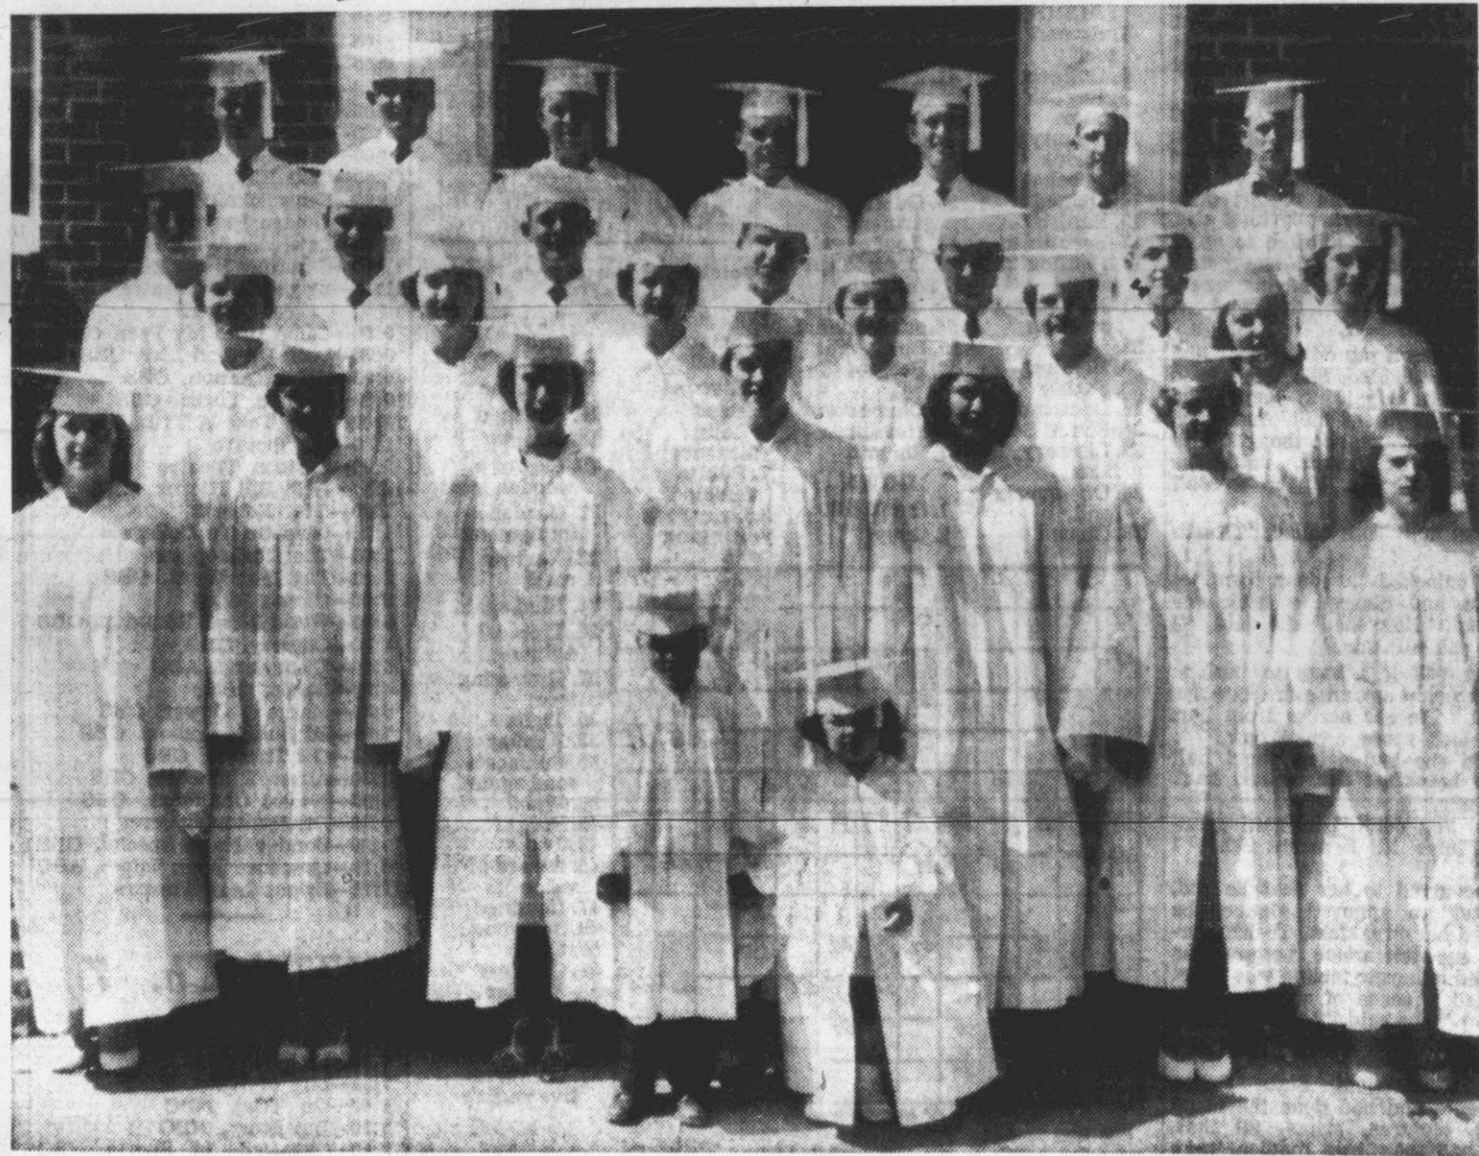

A guide from Colombia, South America, led the students on the tour of the U. N. building, explaining various points along the way. Of special interest to most of the group were the council chambers, each of which was decorated and furnished by a different country.

Saturday afternoon was set aside as free time for the students. Most of the girls went on shopping trips while the boys accompanied Principal O. H. Forrest to Yankee Stadium where they saw the Boston Red Sox beat the Yankees, 2-1. After the game, the boys with Mr. Forrest went to Jersey City and the remainder of the students went to the Cinerama Theater to see "Seven Wonders of the World."

On Saturday night, the group took a guided tour of Rockefeller Center. They visited the roof gardens, the underground restaurants and shopping center, but perhaps the most outstanding point of the whole visit was riding on the elevators which travel two floors per second.

Sunday was perhaps the busiest day of the entire trip. By means of a sight-seeing bus, they visited Chinatown, the Bowery and Skid Row. They later took the ferry to the Statue of Liberty and then visited the Empire State Building.

After lunch, an afternoon tour was made of Central Park, "Millionaire Road," and St. John's Cathedral. The final guided tour was of National Broadcasting Company studios where the students learned how radio and television shows are produced.

Final stop for all of the students was Radio City Music Hall where the group took in a three-hour show. Included in the performance was the movie "Funny Face" and the precision dancing of the Music Hall "Rockettes."

Monday morning was the day of departure for the group and there were varying emotions when the bus pulled out on the return trip.

Chaperones for the tour were Principal Forrest, Senior Class advisor Mrs. Thelma Switzer and Mrs. Dorothy Simmons. Bus driver was Bob Jackson.

New Device May Solve Canals Of Mars Mystery

By ALTON L. BLAKESLEE
AP Science Reporter

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP)—A "tranquillizer" for telescopes is getting clearer pictures of our neighbor planets, and may solve the mystery of Mars' so-called canals.

It's a TV device that stops the nervous jumping-about of a planet when viewed through a telescope. The earth's shimmering blanket of air causes this whirling dervish effect.

The television device steadies or tranquilizes the dancing image picked up by a telescope. Snapshot or time-exposure photographs of the TV screen then can be taken to see better how the planet really looks.

This promising new technique was described today to the American Astronomical Society by John H. DeWitt, Robert H. Hardie and Dr. Carl K. Seyfert of the Dyer Observatory, Vanderbilt University, Nashville, Tenn.

The image seen by the telescope is picked up by a TV tube. An ingenious electronic arrangement keeps the image centered and steadied, correcting for nervous shimmering when light rays from the planet pass through the earth's air.

The device was not ready when Mars made a very close visit last summer. Astronomers hoped then to solve the puzzle of its faint lines sometimes seen visually by telescope. The lines gave rise to popular speculation they might be "canals."

Mars comes pretty close again this summer, and if the canals can be photographed, the Nashville team hopes to pick them up, Dr. Seyfert said.

The TV stabilizer is being used on a 24-inch telescope. Adapted to larger telescopes, it might reveal more detail of "tranquilized" planets.

Rae Foley's new mystery novel RUN FOR YOUR LIFE

CHAPTER 18

The poker clanged against the tongs and Nora opened her eyes. The room was sunlit. Outside the window there were crimson maple leaves, golden oak. It was a beautiful day.

Her lids closed. A log dropped on the fire and she opened them again with an effort. She felt drugged and yet she had not taken a sleeping pill. She was sure of that. Then what — she remembered then the sharp prick as the needle had gone into her arm and Garry rubbing the muscle briskly before going to sterilize the hypodermic.

Someone moved and she sat up in bed. Tom Jones, who had thrust a piece of pitch pine under the log, got to his feet and strolled over to the bed. Conscious of the sheer nightgown, Nora slipped down and pulled the sheet over her bare shoulders.

"What on earth are you doing here?" she asked.

"Making up the fire," he said. "The police are talking to your nurse."

She remembered then the high-pitched scream, the crash as Olive Riddle had fallen to her death. Wearing the blue velvet robe that was Nora's. Everyone would have assumed that the woman in blue was Nora. Everyone but Garry, who knew Mrs. Riddle had made another of her raids on Nora's wardrobe to save buying her own clothes.

"I'm a monster, Nora thought. I should be grieving for Aunt Olive and I can't grieve for her. I'm afraid."

"I'm sorry you were bothered," she said to the tall man who scowled down at her. "The fire seems to be doing nicely."

The words of polite dismissal had no effect. He did not go away. "The idea," he said, "seems to be that someone should stay with you."

"Whose idea?"

"Your physician's, for one. Finley Black sent for him last night and he flew down here from Boston. Arrived about four-thirty in the morning."

"Dr. Ruysdahl came here? But why? There's nothing wrong with me." Nora's face was as white as the pillow. "Or is there? O God, is there? Tell me the truth, Tom."

"I don't know the truth," he said soberly, "except that you're not crazy, if that's what is worrying you."

"Then why send for the doctor? There's nothing the matter with me physically."

"What theory your lawyer has I can't figure out. My own theory was that you were the darnest liar I'd ever encountered, but now I'm not so sure." Tom looked down at her. Abruptly he put out a hand, reached her cheek with unexpected gentleness. "I'm going down to get you some coffee. Lock the door after me."

He went out without a word and she got out of bed and walked slowly to the door. She turned the key. Only then did he go down the hall toward the stairs.

She dressed in dark slacks and white shirt and blue cardigan. Then she ripped it off. If only she had some other color. Since Stuart had told her he preferred it, she had never worn anything else. The day she was allowed to go to New York or Boston, she determined, she'd go on a buying spree, get all the colors in the rainbow. Except blue.

There was a tap on the door and her heart thudded. She was afraid to open it. Afraid to know who was waiting in the hall. And she'd be afraid always, she thought with a stirring of horror, until she killed who it was. If she weren't killed first.

"Open up," Tom called. "Breakfast."

She unlocked the door then, let him in and cleared a table for the tray. "Heavens," she said, "I can't eat all this."

"You will if I have to push it in. I brought up an extra cup for myself." He sat across from her. "You look more awake now."

"When she had eaten about half of the breakfast she pushed back her chair.

"No, you don't," he said calmly. "Finish it. I meant what I said."

It occurred to her that he did, so after an annoyed glance she finished her breakfast. To her surprise she felt much better. The drugged lethargic feeling was gone. She had a sense of well being.

"Now," she said, "tell me what's been happening since Garry put me to bed."

The Connecticut State Police had come and had done the usual things, pictures, prints, all that. They had their own medical man along. It was a broken neck, all right. They had taken the body away.

"Your lawyer made a good job of it," Tom said. "He had a nice straightforward story. The trailing skirt, the high heels, everything added up to an accident."

He stopped to light a cigarette. "But then your friend Potter put in his car, cornered Captain Foote and had a private conversation with him. After that, the police got a different view of proceedings and started to question us all in earnest."

"Hiram said it was murder, didn't he?"

"Are you sorry you sent for him?"

"No, I'm glad. We have to know the truth. We have to — stop it."

He watched her curiously. "Well," he said, "at least you are all set for a nice passive role."

"What do you mean by that?"

"You'd be a mighty nice girl, Nora, if you weren't so suspicious."

"In my position would you be trusting?"

"Perhaps not, though I'm not clear as to just what your position is. Anyway, as I was about to explain, your physician came before dawn, looked you over, and gave instructions to your nurse. She gave you a hypodermic and told the police you could not be questioned." He added smoothly, "But that must be an old story to you."

Nora lifted a teaspoon up and down with the tip of her finger. "Go on," she said.

"So we come to the question of alibis. That," he added with a hint of laughter in his eyes, "is where it pays off to be married. The Hegers allied each other. All the rest of us claimed to have been asleep, except for your cousin Frank, who said he'd been reading late and was just starting to

Star-Spangled Idea For Mother's Day

The spotlight's on mothers Sunday, and you'll be thinking of a special present. How about giving your wife or mother a camera of her own as a Mother's Day gift?

We have the new Brownie Starflash and Starflex cameras, and either of them is sure to put a twinkle in her eye. With a camera of her own, Mom can snap Junior in one of his more endearing moments or sister Suzie bathing her "baby"—she'll love it!

The Brownie Starflash is a small, fits-in-the-hand camera with a flashholder built right in. And the marvelous thing is that it takes color slides as well as black-and-white and Kodachrome snapshots. Gets 12 color slides on one roll of Kodak 127 Ektachrome film. Will buy one, flatten your wallet? Indeed not—because it's very giftably priced.

The Starflex has a big, bright preview viewer that lets you look at the picture just as it will be in the final print. The camera is all preset and timed—you just click the shutter. And it takes color slides and prints just like the Starflash.

We carry a complete line of gift cameras. Come in, and we think you'll find one you'd like to give on Mother's Day.

undress when he heard Mrs. Riddle scream. Oh, and your nurse. Seems she had been out with Ives, though I doubt if she'd have mentioned it without some prompting from your friend Potter."

There was a footstep in the hall and Tom got up. "Your nurse seems to be back from the wars," he said. "I wish I had some other color."

"I've a nice bright crimson pull-over," he suggested. "Miles too big for you, of course, but a cheerful color."

"Thanks, I'd like to wear it." He reached out and took her chin in his hand. "Darned if I know why it is that people want to take care of you. That could get to be a habit. I'll say this, Nora. You're the sweetest little liar I've ever met."

Mr. Potter traps a sullen suspect. "You've talked yourself into this," he says. "Now you'd better talk yourself out." Continue "Run For Your Life," Chapter 19, in tomorrow's paper.

NEW YORK — (Oils, aircrafts, motors and other industrials) paced the stock market into high ground early this afternoon. Trading was active as blue chips took over the market leadership once more.

Gains among pivotal stocks ranged from fractions to well over a point.

Having touched a new 1957 high in the average yesterday, the market was irregular at the opening today and jockeyed uncertainly in subsequent trading.

As some of the better quality stocks retained their firmness, however, the market seemed to regain confidence and good progress to the upside was made. Wall Street analysts said the performance was based mainly on technical factors.

Rails were off, however, as they were influenced by carloadings lower than a year ago. The non-ferrous metals were adversely affected by soft prices for their products.

Gulf Oil resumed its rise of yesterday, adding close to 4 today. The stock has been subject to continual rumors of a possible stock split or merger. Getty added around a point in its continued run-up on excellent earnings. Amerasia added around 2.

Johns-Manville made an unusual rise of 2. American Telephone and General Motors were both up fractionally and Du Pont gained about a point.

U. S. Steel, Bethlehem and Republic Steel were all ahead fractions while Lukens added a point. Youngstown rose a major fraction.

Boeing was up around a point and North American Aviation more than that. Douglas Aircraft rose slightly.

General Tire, which has risen sensationally on prospects for its rocket-making subsidiary, Aerojet, advanced more than 2. Rubber shares, generally, were well ahead with gains of more than a point by Goodyear and Goodrich and a good fraction by U. S. Rubber.

Aluminums were an exception in the declining nonferrous metals group as plans were pushed to get into the can business. Alum-

The Euterpe Club of Greensboro won the choir convocation award. Forty-two clubs rated 100 per cent at the convention.

Mrs. Clifton J. Muir addressed the one hundred delegates attending the convention on "Federation Values" at the North Carolina Banquet held last night at the Moose Lodge.

Mrs. Muir of Coral Gables, Fla. is Southeastern Regional vice-president. In discussing the Federation values she said, "Music brings a true balance between the present day advances in science and industry and those in the cultural areas of life."

Among the values to be found for those who are federated members of the national Federation are personal gains and satisfaction, extension and growth of the national organization, valuable assistance to young artists, an intensive scholarship program, a program to encourage young composers, a marked general increase in music interest in the nation in which local clubs are a focal point of power."

She concluded, "All one's life is music if one but strike notes right and in tune."

This morning delegates met for an Extension breakfast at the First Presbyterian Church where Mrs. G. Ernest Moore, extension chairman, presided. The theme of the morning was "The Step of Opportunity."

Presentations, introduction of new members and a musical program was followed by a general business meeting at the church.
