Rackets Probers Run Into Another Silent Witness

WASHINGTON (AP)—Norman Gessert, cousin of Teamsters Union President Dave Beck's wife, today invoked the Fifth Amendment 40 times in 10 minutes in refusing to say whether he realized more than $100,000 from the Teamsters Union.

Gessert, a graying, nervous man, nabbed as a witness after a two-month search, monotonously intoned the Fifth Amendment to a long list of questions by Robert P. Kennedy, counsel to the Senate Rackets Investigating Committee.

Kennedy said Gessert drew more than $50,000 in salary and expenses from the Teamsters Union from April, 1954, to March 31, 1957—a period in which Kennedy said he spent most of his time doing chores for Beck.

Before that, Kennedy said, Gessert was on the payroll of a local of the Retail Clerks Union which had its headquarters in the Teamsters Building in Seattle. Kennedy said the clerks local was a "captivity" group beholden to the Teamsters.

In addition, Kennedy said, Gessert received about $51,000 in "profits" through the Union Merchandising Co., a firm he said specialized in selling things to the Teamsters, including a batch of toy trucks to Teamsters locals all over the country.

The company also sold the union the furnishings for the Teamsters palatial headquarters building here.

Gessert's appearance before the senators was a sort of anticlimax to a go-round yesterday with Beck.

They had planned to question Gessert before their new try at getting information from Beck. But Gessert asked for a day's delay because he had just retained an attorney.

Beck took the Fifth Amendment to all questions about his financial affairs, and the session wound up with Chairman McClellan (D-Ark) urging that the Teamsters Union conduct its own probe to see for itself whether Beck should be booted out as the union's president.

McClellan said the situation calls for immediate action on the part of the Teamsters Union to pursue it and make an early determination whether Mr. Beck is worthy to continue to serve in the position of trust and responsibility he holds.

He said Beck has "flagrantly betrayed" that trust, if sworn testimony to the committee is true "and I have no reason as of now to doubt it."

Other Teamsters officials have given no indication that ouster proceedings or even an investigation will be initiated. However, the AFL-CIO has launched probes of both Beck and the union, temporarily suspending Beck as an AFL-CIO officer.

Beck himself avoided answering questions from Sen. Goldwater (R-Ariz) during yesterday's hearing as to whether he might quit.

Before taking the witness stand, he told newsmen variously (1) he had "no intention in the world" of quitting, but (2) would give "my serious consideration" to any demand by the union's Executive Board that he step aside for the good of the union.

Beck also gave the committee no information on any of the deals about which it called him for questioning. Instead, he ran to more than 200 his string of Fifth Amendment pleas, replying that answers might tend to incriminate him.

His face redder than usual from recent sunburn that was peeling, Beck specifically refused to answer each of 52 questions handed to him in typewritten form.

They represented a summary of instances brought out in earlier testimony in which the committee said he "misused his authority, position and trust" to profit himself, his family or his friends.

Air Discrepancies In Ballot-Counting

ASHEVILLE (AP)—The government pressed its case here today against 10 Madison County Democrats charged with vote fraud in connection with the 1954 elections. An FBI agent testified yesterday about discrepancies between the ballot box count and the official count.

"Charged with conspiring to 'fix' the election are Zeno Ponder, former chairman of the Madison board of elections; Sheriff E. Y. Ponder, B. K. Meadows, Arthur E. Cantrell, Leroy Shelton, W. T. Moore, Roy Freeman, Merit and Jeff Whitt and James W. Baldwin.

Special FBI Agent Girard Anino testified yesterday that a ballot box count in Township 7 gave R. R. Ramsey, the Republican congressional candidate, 196 votes to 98 for Democrat Woodrow Jones.

But, said Anino, when Madison County officials turned in their official returns, Jones had 10 more votes to 27 less for Ramsey in that precinct. Jones carried the county.

Seven other witnesses testified concerning absentee ballots turned in under their names.

One man told the all-Democratic jury that an absentee ballot was cast for his son, a soldier in Korea. He said his son did not vote and that his son's name was spelled wrong on the ballot.

Testimony by the other witnesses was that the signatures on the ballots were not theirs; that they did not apply for an absentee ballot; that they didn't vote and that they weren't legal residents of the wards in which their ballots were cast.

Two persons said they lived in Detroit and burned the absentee ballots sent to them, but found later that ballots had been cast in their names.

Agent Anino testified that an accurate count of the entire county vote was impossible because in Marshall, the county's largest precinct, ballot boxes, ballots, absentee ballots and polling and registration books were "missing."

The trial was to adjourn at noon for the weekend.

Judge Wilson Warlick, a Democrat who is hearing the case, interrupted the trial yesterday to say, "I'm getting fed up with the statements that have been made that indicated that I have some interest in this case."

He added, "I want to see that this law suit is tried right, and I don't care who the ax falls."

The case was thrown out of court last May by Warlick after he ruled that an order he had signed authorizing seizure of Madison County election materials was not a proper procedure. The U. S. Court of Appeals ruled Judge Warlick erred in his decision.

Judge Warlick said statements had been made indicating he had an "interest" in the case "because I ruled once and my ruling was overturned."

Conservatives Win Confidence Vote In Parliament Over Suez

LONDON (AP)—The House of Commons gave the Conservative government a 308-259 vote of confidence last night on its Suez policies.

The vote, winding up a two-day debate on the British-French attack on Egypt, defeated a Labor motion to censure the government for "damaging Britain's prestige and economic interests."

Had it not been for the other witnesses' testimony that the signatures on the ballots were not theirs; that they have drawn closer together as a result of the Suez troubles.

Lloyd told Commons that Britain supports the request from France for another U. N. Security Council debate on the Suez issue.

A council meeting has been set for Monday to take up the French proposal that Egypt be "invited" to comply with the council's six principles for operation of the canal. The six principles, which include freedom of passage for all ships and insulation of the operation from the politics of any one nation, were adopted by the council last October.

At U. N. headquarters in New York, an Egyptian source declared Egypt is complying with the six principles and professed to be mystified as to what France wants. Egypt endorsed the principles last fall but he recently announced plan for operating the canal does not spell them out specifically.

U. N. Secretary General Dag Hammarskjold was polite but cool about the French move.

"A decision by the Security Council always stands unless and until it is revoked," Hammarskjold told a news conference. "For that reason, some people may have doubts about the necessity to repeat something which already has been said."

Henry Cabot Lodge, chief U. S. delegate, called the council meeting in his capacity as council president for May, but gave no hint of the stand the United States would take. The United States opposed any action when the council met April 26 to discuss the Egyptian plan of operation, saying the plan was not entirely acceptable but should be given a trial.

Other members of the council said privately they felt it was a bad time to bring up the canal issue. Presumably Russia will veto any resolution the French may introduce if Egyptian President Nasser is opposed to it.

Britain's Field Marshal Viscount Montgomery arrives at Montgomery, Ala. to lecture at Maxwell Air Force Base. "Have you forgiven me?" he asked. He referred to remarks made earlier at Gettysburg, Pa., about the conduct of the Civil War and the "sacking" of General Lee. He said Lee was a "great soldier" but had a bad day at Gettysburg. Again Vote 'No' To Pay Hike Plea

RALEIGH (AP)—Another attempt to boost the pay increase for school teachers to 19.31 per cent was defeated today by the Joint Appropriations subcommittee.

Only four members held up their hands to vote for a motion that would have added sufficient funds to the public school budget for the biennium to give the teachers a 19.31 per cent raise instead of the 15 per cent proposed by Gov. Hodges.

In another action, the subcommittee approved the allocation of an 11 per cent pay raise to state employees under a formula drawn up by the State Personnel Department and backed by Gov. Hodges.

Under the pay formula, the pay ranges of various salary brackets would be adjusted upward and the greater pay increases would go to employees in the lower salary brackets.

The formula has been bitterly opposed by the State Employees Assn. and the State Highway Employees Assn. They have called for an "across the board" percentage raise for all workers.

Meanwhile, the Senate Elections Committee killed, by postponing indefinitely, a resolution by Sen. Seavy Carroll of Cumberland County dealing with the touchy legislative reapportionment issue.

Carroll's resolution called on the General Assembly to remain in session until it had acted on reapportionment.

However, the assembly has defeated measures to change the reapportionment provisions of the state constitution and measures to reapportion legislative membership under the present constitutional provisions. One other reapportionment proposal is still pending.

EXTENDED WEATHER FORECAST FOR N. C. Temperatures averaging near normal through Wednesday. Warmer Saturday, cooler Monday and warm again Wednesday. Rainfall for the period will average one-quarter inch in coastal plains, occurring in scattered thundershowers during the weekend and about Monday.

Subcommittee Kills License Tax Plans

RALEIGH (AP)—The Senate Finance subcommittee has nailed down the defeat of a proposed gross receipts license tax.

The subcommittee voted unanimously yesterday against the State Tax Study Commission's recommendation that license taxes be placed on the basis of gross receipts. The House Finance subcommittee already had taken similar action.

The Senate group, following the lead of the House subcommittee, also voted against additional taxing powers for cities.

Senate Finance Chairman Nelson Woodson of Rowan suggested that "it might be well to continue the Tax Study Commission" and let it have another crack at revising the state's license taxes.

Revenue Commissioner Eugene Shaw agreed that changes are needed in the license tax schedule. He told the group "several months of study" would be needed to develop revisions. Shaw pointed out that there are some 24 different bases on which approximately 225,000 licenses are issued under the schedule.

The subcommittee agreed to strike out a provision recommended by the study commission in figuring income taxes of railroads, telephone companies and some other utilities. The change would cost the state some $350,000 in revenue annually.

Woodson announced that the Senate and House Finance subcommittees will meet jointly Monday to exchange ideas on the big tax bill before reporting to their full committees.

Meanwhile, the Joint Appropriations subcommittee moved nearer an end to its work on the budget bill for the next biennium. It voted to restore $500,000 for a vocational technical training program. The subcommittee had cut out one million dollars proposed for the program during the next biennium.

Members who had helped vote against the original appropriation said they didn't realize the value of the program to the industrial development of the state.

Representatives of state workers appeared before the subcommittee and put in a last-minute plea that a proposed 11 per cent pay raise for state employees be distributed on an across-the-board basis and not on a formula proposed by the state personnel department.

The subcommittee has recommended an 11 per cent pay boost for state employees and a 15 per cent raise for teachers as advocated by Gov. Hodges.

Other legislative highlights yesterday included: 1. Senate Judiciary 1 Committee approved two bills dealing with rewriting of the state constitution. One calls for an election next year on the question of whether a convention shall be held to rewrite the constitution. Another calls for creation of a commission to study the issue of amending the constitution.

2. The House passed and sent to the Senate a bill providing for the creation of community colleges in the state.

3. A House Judiciary Committee put its approval on a bill to provide stiff punishment for persons involved in highway racing.

4. The Senate Agriculture Committee put to death a bill requiring mandatory inspection of meat processing plants in the state. Then it began a study of a bill to provide for a voluntary inspection program. This bill was introduced in the Senate later in the day.

Summer School To Open June 7

Greenville High School Principal O. E. Dowd announced today that the high school's summer session would begin June 7 at 9 a. m.

Attendance at the summer school will be limited, Dowd said, to students who are retarded in work; students who are required to lighten their courses for next year in order to get in band, music and journalism or other classes; and students who wish to graduate early for some particular purpose.

The third category, Dowd explained, applies to students who are going into such careers as nursing or medicine that require a long period of training. Attendance at summer sessions permits such students to finish high school in three years.

Courses to be offered this summer include English, Math and History in grades nine through twelve. The term will last from six to ten weeks, depending on the courses taken and speed with which the individual students work. Regular members of the high school faculty will direct the summer classes.

"Students interested in attending summer school should contact the high school office within the next days to receive full information and proper entrance blanks," Dowd stated.

"Nominal fees will be charged for each course, and students outside the Greenville School District who plan to attend summer school must have a letter of recommendation from their high school principals before they will be permitted to enroll," the principal added.

Will Quit Seat If Unsuccessful

RALEIGH (AP)—A Macon County legislator has threatened to quit his legislative seat if he is unsuccessful in his efforts to kill a Senate bill.

Rep. G. L. Houk told the Senate Wildlife Committee yesterday he resents "bitterly" a bill introduced by Sens. James Stikleleather of Buncombe and Kelly Bennett of Swain.

Under the measure, fish-tight dams or weirs could be put across the Nantahala River in one township of Macon County and two townships of Clay County.

Houk contended the bill is sponsored by a club composed of "men of considerable means" who own 1,900 acres of land along the river in his section. He said the group is headed by Don Elias of Asheville, whom he termed "the daddy of this bill."

Houk told the committee "they want to make themselves a private fish pond on one of the best trout streams in North Carolina."

"What gripes me is a bunch of birds in my county and try to tell me whether I can have a weir in my river or not."

Houk will have a chance to kill the bill on the House floor. The committee approved the measure.

Workers who had dug a wide parallel vertical shaft attempted to work horizontally toward the boy by installing a tunnel of culvert pipe. But sandslides held up progress toward the boy.

Dr. J. H. Kris, supervising the pumping of oxygen into the well, said "it's possible but very improbable that the boy is still alive."

For hours after he tumbled into the shaft while playing at 7.30 last night, he talked with his father and rescue crews. Then at 2 o'clock this morning came silence that could have meant sleep—or suffocation.

Hundreds of persons gathered in this central Long Island village to lend a hand in whatever way possible.

The well shaft was too narrow—three feet in diameter at the top and tapering to a few inches at the bottom—to permit rescuers to descend.

A parallel shaft was dug and then a horizontal connecting tunnel was started.

Hopes Dim For Boy In Well

MANORVILLE, N. Y. (AP)—Hopes of saving a boy trapped more than 16 hours at the bottom of a 24-foot-deep dry well virtually flickered out today.

A fireman said the boy, alive for hours after he fell in, appeared to be entirely covered with sand.

Rescue workers trying to reach the boy by digging a horizontal tunnel were blocked constantly by sand slides.

"I could only see something that looks like a root," said J. H. Warner, an Eastport fireman, after peering into the well with a searchlight.

"That's the only thing that shows. There was only a clean layer of sand otherwise."

Warner, one of the hundreds of rescue workers who had been on the job through the night, said he had looked into the well last night and could see the red jacket of the boy, Benjamin Hooper, 7.

The Jaycee officers installed in addition to the club sponsored and promoted the ECC-Richmond game, which reported, and presented awards to the outstanding 4-H boy and girl in Pitt County during the year.

Finally, he said, the Jaycees adopted a resolution calling for a better school program in the city with detailed long range planning and a rotation of membership on the School Board of Trustees.

J. B. Kittrell conducted the passing-out ceremony which saw John Lautesars, Norman Little, Ford McGowan, Charles Horne, Ashley Hudson, C. E. Williams and Tom Chaplin retire from the club because they had reached the 36-year-old age limit.

The Jay-cettes report of the year's activities was given by Mrs. W. M. Scales Jr., outgoing president.

Chairman of arrangements for the banquet was John Ray Hardy. Toastmaster was Charles O'H. Horne Jr.

The invocation was pronounced by the Rev. John Drake and the paper drives netted some 15 tons of paper. At Christmas almost a thousand bags of light bulbs were sold with proceeds used to provide Christmas baskets for 25 needy families.

Wants Inquiry

RALEIGH (AP)—A former state accountant has requested a federal investigation of what he termed faulty bookkeeping records of the State Health Department.

William C. Hall said yesterday he has written U. S. Atty. Gen. Herbert Brownell, Hall, who was fired May 3 by the State Board of Health, has charged in a letter to Gov. Hodges that the state lost $58,000 in federal funds in the past year because of faulty bookkeeping in the Health Department.

Hall said that in his letter to Brownell he expressed the belief federal laws have been violated. He charged that Health Department officials have failed to deduct Social Security and federal income tax from salaries of "over 300 employees" for several years.

Hall also contends the Health Department has failed to report wages earned by these employees to the federal or state revenue offices.

He declared that unused federal funds have been returned to Washington because the Health Department has made it a practice to spend all of its state appropriations before using federal funds. In his letter to the governor, Hall reported $25,000 was returned to Washington last November and $33,526 this year "because of inaccurate accounting."

Paul Johnston, administrative assistant to Gov. Hodges, said that on orders from the governor, the state auditor's office is making a check on the Health Department's records.

Senators Expect Retain Soil Bank

By EDWIN B. HAAKINSON WASHINGTON (AP)—Sens. Aiken (R-Vt) and Young (R-ND) said today they expect the Senate to reject a house effort to kill off the soil bank farm plan.

And Sen. Russell (D-Ga), chairman of the Senate subcommittee which will handle the House-passed Agriculture Department money bill, commented that "I am not going to rush this bill to the Senate." The House, by a 192-107 vote, wrote into the measure a ban on money for acreage reserve payments to farmers after this year.

Aiken, a strong supporter of most administration farm policies, said he doubts that the Senate would want "to kill the soil bank by cutting off its funds after a congressional commitment."

"The acreage reserve was intended as a temporary four-year experiment to reduce surplus production," he said in an interview. "The House move to end it before a real trial was on a very close vote."

Young, a frequent critic of Benson's policies, said, "I think the Senate will restore at least a modified program for 1958, and it is my opinion the House will go along."

He expressed the view that "the leaders of both the Republicans and the Democrats in the Senate will work together to continue the acreage reserve program."

Left intact but also cut back on funds was the longer range conservation reserve part of the soil bank.

It can operate for as long as 10 years under a program of encouraging farmers to put poor lands into grass cover, trees, wildlife refuges, ponds and similar uses.

Last year Congress authorized spending of up to 750 million dollars for each of four years on the acreage reserve and up to 450 million annually for as long as 10 years on the conservation reserve.

The House knocked out the acreage reserve funds after complaints that it wasted millions without reducing production.

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP)—Flooding described as "very serious" is expected today along the middle and lower reaches of the Cimarron River in Oklahoma.

Showers are forecast in the area this afternoon and night. Seven deaths have been attributed to floods and the toll may go even higher as the Cimarron recedes in northwest Oklahoma.

The river forecasting station at Tulsa said the Cimarron will crest at noon today at Perkins in central Oklahoma and "will recede in serious flooding."

The river empties into the Arkansas River near Tulsa. Residents in lowlands there are preparing for the deluge, anticipated tomorrow afternoon.

Rains Wednesday night, ranging up to an official 13.07 inches, set off the floods. Many areas were under 12 feet of water. Rain was measured unofficially at 20 inches west of Dover.

Other streams in southern and western Oklahoma also overflowed.

Near Erick, the north fork of the Canadian River washed away bridges and closed roads.

Woman Is Held Pending Autopsy

ELIZABETHTOWN, N. C. (AP)—A woman was being held here today pending the outcome of an autopsy on an Elizabethtown insurance man whose body was found near here yesterday.

Bladen County Sheriff John B. Allen said John P. Collins, had been missing from his home since Monday morning.

Sheriff Allen said Mrs. Fulton Thompson, who admitted being with Collins Monday, was being held for investigation.

New Jaycee, Jay-cette Officers Are Installed

A former highway patrolman was installed as the Junior Chamber of Commerce president for 1957-58 last night.

James W. Boykin, now Liggett and Myers sales representative, assumed his new office at the Jaycee installation and Ladies' Night program.

Installing Boykin, along with other Jaycee and Jay-cette officers, was Bob Cox, immediate past state president.

Mrs. M. W. Aldridge was installed as Jay-cette president for the coming year.

Mrs. Floyd Rowe was presented the Jay-cette of the Year award at last night's banquet. The award was presented by Edgar Gurganus of Williamston, a past Jaycee state president.

Outgoing President David J. Whichard outlined the club projects of the past year.

In June, he reported, the local club was host for the State Teen-Age Road-e-o which attracted more than 60 contestants from all over the state.

Efforts to provide a Greenville High School bus were completed in December. There was a Little Theatre production sponsored by the Jaycees last year and two scrap paper drives netted some 15 tons of paper. At Christmas almost a thousand bags of light bulbs were sold with proceeds used to provide Christmas baskets for 25 needy families.

Also there was a birthday calendar and card project, a get-out-the

Mrs. Rowe, as a director of the Jay-c-ettes, attended all of the board of directors meetings, giving suggestions and recommendations. She also served as chairman of the Flowers and Visitation Committee. As co-chairman of the Greenville Red Cross Campaign she canvassed a large section of Greenville alone for this project.

Other accomplishments of Miss Rowe's during the year were service on the "Clean Up Campaign" committee, attendance of meetings and forums in the name of the Jay-c-ettes, working on the "Lily Tag Sale," serving on parties for all Jaycee wives, ushering at performances of the play "My Sister Eileen," sponsored by the Jaycees, and attending all regular club meetings.

Besides this record, Gurganus pointed out that "she was recognized for her many fine qualities, her enthusiastic spirit, willingness and dependability in any job she

BEAUTY HINTS

From ...
Harrell's Beauty Salon

Time was, you know, when a lady lifted her morale by choosing a new hat. Now she goes a step further, gets volumes more in personal satisfaction by choosing a new hair colour.

If you haven't yet discovered what the exciting difference of colour can make in your life, chances are you'll want to try it soon. The change need not be drastic, of course. Just a new warmth and sparkle, to brighten brown. Or a bit of dazzle to make dishwater hair really blonde.

Nobody need wait till the hair is grey before changing its shade any more. Now the beauty authorities tell us hair colour is fast becoming as easily selected as lipstick and nail polish. It's even more becoming, gathers dozens more compliments, because it's like finding a whole new you!

No time to shower before the party? Sponge yourself with your favorite cologne. Use a big foamy sponge. Mix your own special fluid—one part cologne, two parts clear water—if you'd rather not use up quite so much fragrance. This refreshing trick is extra-nice in hot weather, especially when you use ice cubes with your cologne.

Lots of liquids make for a pretty skin. Girls whose complexions are clear and glowing recommend at least a pint of fruit juice per day—preferably orange or grapefruit. Never drink less than three tumblers of water each day.

Do your curls droop between settings? Hair Spray is the miracle that will keep them in place. Try inserting a few carefully-placed clips at bedtime, to preserve your salon set. Then spray ever so lightly, before you put on your hairnet and hit the pillow.

Family Unity Important, Notes Mr. Goodman

Mrs. P. L. Pair was hostess to the Delphian Book Club Tuesday afternoon. Guests were greeted at the door by Mrs. Pair and introduced to Gordon Goodman, guest speaker.

Mrs. Craven Hughes presided over a brief business meeting when a report was made on a picnic supper planned by the entertainment committee for the club members and their families.

Goodman spoke on family recreation and juvenile delinquency, noting that there would be fewer delinquents among our children if more families would work and play together as a family unit.

He suggested a night should be set aside for the family to do some recreation together. Instead of sending your children away from home for recreation, plan it so they stay at home and entertain their friends there," he concluded.

Mrs. Pair served a congealed salad molded in grapefruit halves, cheese balls, crackers and iced tea. For the occasion the hostess decorated her home with white gladioli.

Grifton PTA Has Fashion Show

GRIFTON—A fashion show was presented by Mrs. Don Casey's freshman class in home economics on Tuesday night at the regular PTA session.

LouRaye Mewborn acted as narrator for the students as they appeared in their dresses made in the home economics classes. Modeling were Edna Adams, Sherry Alcox, Pat Bennett, Sandra Price, Patsy Cole, Dorothy Groat, Brenda Rose, Carolyn Hart, Mabel Jones, Barbara Wilson, Barbara Mitchell, Sue Odham, Elizabeth Phillips, Olga Reel, Betty Lou Roach, Sharon Stone and Mary Turnage.

Several of the ladies of the adult sewing class, which is conducted by Mrs. Casey, showed their dresses. Those participating were Mrs. Becky Worthington, Mrs. H. L. Owens, Mrs. David Parker and Mrs. Joe Speight. A child's dress made by Mrs. Conrad Hart was modeled by her daughter Claudia.

Each year the Grifton Toastmasters Club gives an award to students for their speech writing and presentation. Mr. L. O. Vanneman introduced the speakers for the evening. Emily Nelson spoke on "Trials and Tribulations of Writing a Speech" and Peggy Parker's topic was "Juvenile Delinquency." The judges, Bruce Garis, John Coward and Doug Boone, named Emily as first place winner and Peggy Parker second.

Mr. J. H. Coward, of the local school board, installed officers for the coming school term as follows: president, W. M. January; first vice president, L. O. Vanneman; second vice president, W. L. Burkette; secretary, Mrs. James Hudson; and treasurer, Mrs. Charles Stone.

Jack Calvert spoke on behalf of the safety committee. He commended Paul Bradley and the school authorities for the excellent condition of the workshop in regards to safety measures.

Mr. Vanneman, of the ways and means committee, discussed whether the PTA should continue to stage the annual carnival in the fall or ask for a donation per child to take care of the extra needs that are a part of the PTA budget.

Attendance awards went to Mrs. Radford's sixth grade and Mrs. Bunch's ninth grade.

The principal announced that the school baccalaureate sermon for Sunday night would be at 8 o'clock with the guest speaker for the evening being Rev. Ralph Epps of the Methodist Church.

Mrs. D. L. Moore Traces History, Culture Of Fruit

On Tuesday afternoon Mrs. J. W. Higgs entertained the members of the Round Table Book Club at her home on Dickinson Avenue. Mrs. Nettie Purser and Mrs. Helene Kirkpatrick were guests for the meeting.

The president, Mrs. Royce Hunsucker, welcomed Mrs. H. T. Patterson as a new member of the club. The new programs for 1957-58 were distributed by the program committee.

The club voted to make a contribution to the North Carolina Art Museum to buy a reference book. The book was given in honor of Robert Lee Humber of Greenville.

Mrs. D. L. Moore was the program leader for the meeting. Her topic was "How Fruit Came To America." Mrs. Moore traced the history and culture of fruit from early time to our "fruit salad bowl" of today. Mrs. Moore concluded her program with the statement that "each person consumes two hundred pounds of fruit each year."

Mrs. Daniel Taylor read a definition of an atom for the short subject.

Mrs. Higgs invited her guests into the dining room for refreshments. Mrs. J. E. Winslow and Mrs. Charles O'H. Horne served chicken salad and tea.

Need Some Life In Our Dead Wood

A citizen may not get around to exercising his privilege of voting, but once every five or ten years. But mention the fact that he may be deprived that fundamental right of participation in government and he'll be up in arms against you in five minutes.

Why are people that way?
No one knows for sure. For lack of a better ex-

Good Tribute For Our Congressman Bonner

There are few higher tributes that can be paid to a man in public office than the assertion by his colleagues that he is a man who "doesn't talk too much."

On Capitol Hill particularly it often appears that elected officials spend more time trying to steal top billing from each other by making provocative statements than they do attending to the affairs of the country.

It was a most fitting tribute that House Speaker Sam Rayburn paid to Congressman Herbert C. Bonner of North Carolina's first district, at the presentation of a portrait of Rep. Bonner to the House Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee.

In the words of Mr. Democrat, "Herbert Bonner doesn't talk too much. So when he does talk he challenges the attention of the House because he knows what he's talking about."

This area of North Carolina is fortunate to be represented in Congress by such a man. Herbert Bonner hasn't made a lot of national headlines during his 17 years in Congress. He hasn't been a controversial figure on Capitol Hill. Yet, he hasn't failed to speak his piece forcefully and effectively when the occasion arose in committee work or on the floor of the House.

He has played his role in helping afford the House sound, stable leadership without fanfare and without an abundance of speechmaking.

A "Congressman who does not talk too much" is indeed a rare item, and a valuable item as well.

planation it's referred to as human nature.

Sen. Seavy Carroll's bill which would remove the names of inactive voters from registration books of the state has little if any chance of passing in this legislature. The idea has as much chance as a snowball in July of getting sufficient support to be written into law.

Under Sen. Carroll's proposal a registered voter who failed to cast a ballot in two consecutive elections would no longer be considered a registered voter. In order to regain his privilege of voting, he would have to re-register and show a good reason for not discharging his responsibility as a voter while he was registered.

Throughout North Carolina, in every county and every community, more emphasis needs to be placed on the importance of voting. When as many as half the registered voters go to the polls in any election, it makes headlines. The citizenry is elated and yet amazed by the usually large turnout for the election.

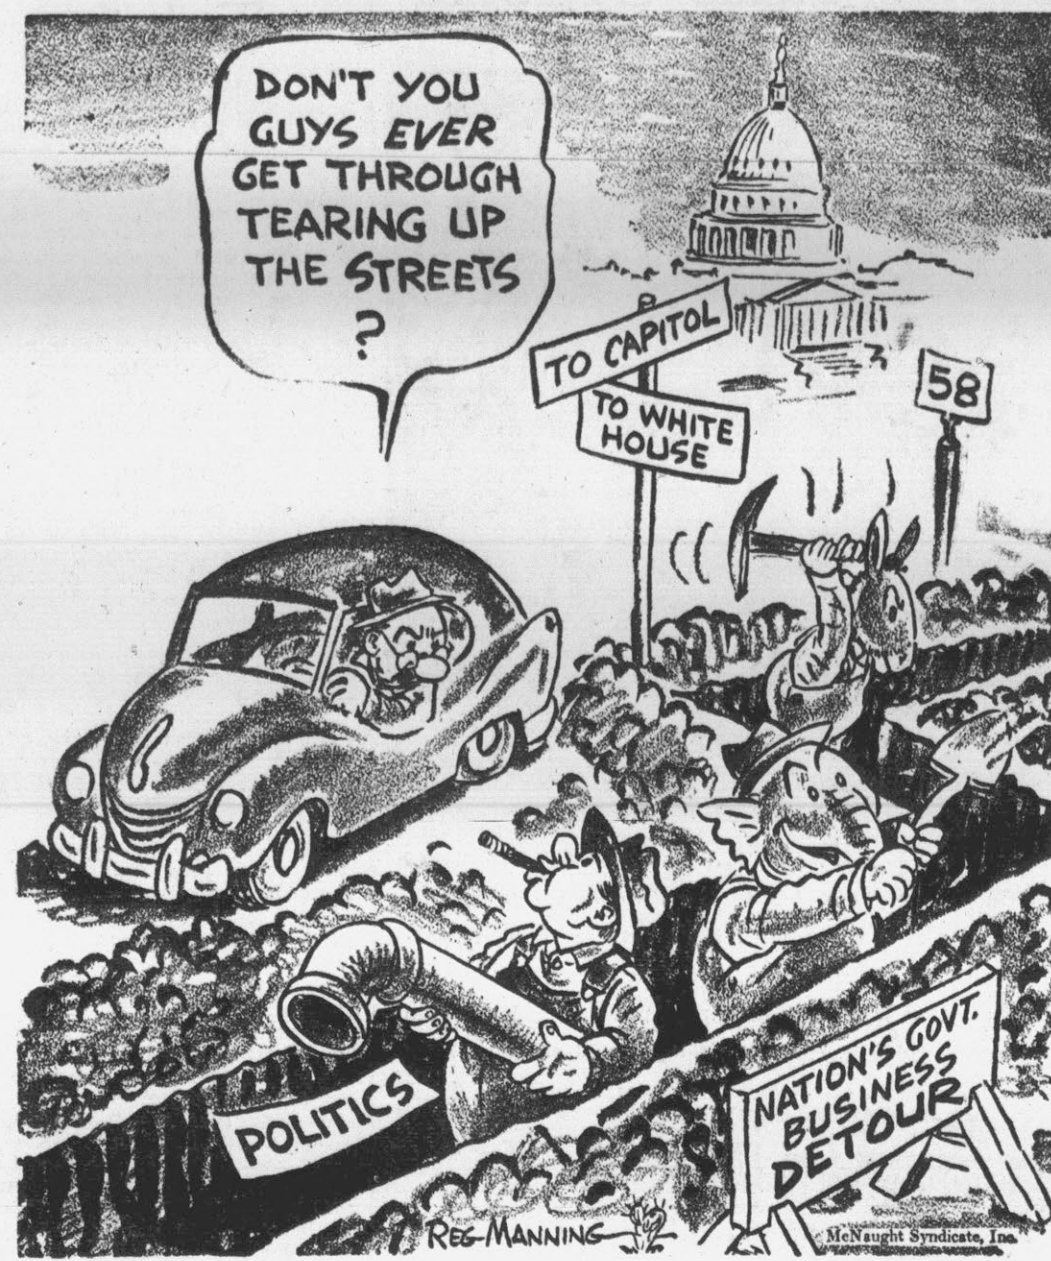

When you get right down to it, however, every community and every county should be voting 70, 80 or 90 per cent of its registration number in every election. As it is now 30 or 40—and on rare occasions 50—per cent of the voters get to the polls on election day. That means somewhere between 15 and 25 per cent of the registered voters can determine the important issues and offices at stake in the election. Such a situation cannot make for the best calibre of government on any level.

North Carolina's problem is not of getting the dead wood off the registration books. It's a matter of putting a little life into that dead wood to get them to the polls.

Maybe the state should reward the citizen who is concerned enough about his civic responsibility and the welfare of his neighbors to take time to vote. Unfortunately as it is, better government which would be possible if more people voted isn't sufficient reward in itself in the mind of too many registered citizens who should be voting.

What will it take to get voters to the polls in this new era? Green stamps? Special consideration on income tax? Or maybe a new car for everyone who casts a ballot?

Example Of Speed Age

We hear so often about how the world has shriveled up that the comment hardly fazes us anymore.

However, a piece of publicity about Armed Forces Day has thrown new fuel on the fire. I, for one, didn't realize that I lived so close to other points in Eastern North Carolina.

Elsewhere in today's paper is a little item about a "fly-over" of six F-86H Sabre jets from Seymour Johnson Air Force Base in Goldsboro. A fly-over, in itself, is not particularly spectacular. It's just a passage of aircraft over a particular point.

What is spectacular is the time schedule worked out for the aircraft. In addition to Greenville, they will pass over seven other Eastern North Carolina towns.

From Seymour Johnson (departure time was not noted), the planes will go to Warsaw, where they will be at 9:14. From there they travel to Wilmington, where they have a date at 9:24.

New Bern is scheduled to see the planes at 9:39 and Washington will see them six minutes later. The Air Force has allowed the planes five minutes to make the trip to Greenville and, after leaving here, they are scheduled to be over Rocky Mount at 9:56.

Kinston citizens will have a chance to see the planes at 10:06 before they travel to Goldsboro for a fly-over at 10:12. After zippering over Goldsboroland for a few minutes they will return to Seymour Johnson.

According to our amateur math, the total trip involves about 300 miles. The Air Force has allowed 58 minutes for the total trip, including time for buzzing around the particular towns included in the trip.

Actually, I suppose covering 300 miles in 58 minutes isn't too fast in this day and age. After all, the aircraft which are scheduled to fly over Greenville tomorrow are said to be able to hit speeds up to 650 miles-per-hour, or considerably faster than they will be traveling tomorrow.

However, the more I think about the ground those Air Force boys will cover in less than an hour, I have to think about the time it takes me to go places. For instance, I usually allow 20 to 25 minutes for a one-way trip to Farmville.

When I consider that, even allowing differences for aircraft and automobiles, I wonder if time hasn't just passed me by. I never thought of the idea of going from Goldsboro to Wilmington to Washington to Rocky Mount to Kinston and back to Goldsboro in less than an hour.

I suppose, to be honest, I'll have to ponder these things a little bit more, preferably in the rocking chair we had heretofore reserved for putting youngsters to sleep.

And maybe if I rock fast enough I'll soon get the idea that I'm living in a new age.

British Driving Data

By HAL BOYLE
NEW YORK (AP)—If you plan to motor in Great Britain this summer, you will be glad to note one driving restriction from the Victorian past has been relaxed.

It is no longer necessary to hire a man with a red flag to walk before your car if you drive faster than two miles an hour.

Another thing you won't have to fear is police speed traps. As a matter of fact, on the open highway the only speed limit is that provided by common sense.

We have all this on the word of two unusual envoys from the land of the Union Jack.

They are representatives of Britain's two automotive organizations — Inspector Leslie Hockaday of the Automobile Assn., and Inspector Roderick Gibbons of the Royal Automobile Club.

The two smartly uniformed inspectors are members of the 3,000-man corps of English "road scouts," hired by the two auto clubs to patrol British highways and help club motorists.

The road scouts give a stiff-armed military salute to all vehicles bearing the club insignia. Strangers on occasion mistake them for traffic cops.

"Now the highway police and road scouts assist each other," said Hockaday. "If we see a fire, we notify them, and if a member car has broken down they often help us fix it."

"Yes," said Gibbons, who has a proud walrus mustache. "We also keep an eye out for stolen cars and smash-and-grab men."

A bit of questioning established that smash-and-grab men are petty dastards who paste a piece of paper to a jeweler's window with treacle, then break the glass noiselessly, grab the gems and run. Awful people. Non-English to the core.

The two inspectors agreed that American motorists abroad behave well and observe the rules of the road. They said they never had personally come across an American-driven car involved in an accident in their country.

Other points of polite mutual agreement: London traffic is denser than that of any American city they had seen, and American women drivers are as able at the wheel as men.

Since there are certain language barriers, here is a guide they offer to handle the difference in terminology in the two countries, the English and the American:

Windscreens—windshield; reculosed—reupholstered; components—parts; demister—defroster; gear-box—transmission; bonnet—hood; spanner—wrench; petrol—gas.

One other difference: "I understand there is a saying over here that you can't fight City," said Hockaday, smiling. "Back home you can. You can go into court in a traffic offense case, and, if you've got a good story, get away with it. "But if your story isn't really good they charge you even more."

And among the nuggets found in the mail, are these:

That it takes up to four hours to boil an ostrich egg properly. A lobster will live about 50 years if you'll just let it alone. The fur seal goes ashore only once a year. And it is unwise to pet a strange elephant suffering from the hives.

That you're safer at work because 68 per cent of accidents happen off the job.

That it was poet Robert Frost who observed, "The brain is a wonderful organ; it starts working the moment you get up in the morning and does not stop until you get into the office."

Opinions In Brief

The driver's license examiner who comes to Post every other Tuesday tells this one:

He was taking a test ride with an applicant when a woman driving the car ahead put her hand out the window.

"See that?" asked the examiner. "What does that mean?"

"Only one thing for sure," said the applicant. "The window's open."—Post (Texas) Dispatch.

"Who can be serious and swear at the high budget or lament the high accident rate or fret about the foreign policy when the birds are tweeting and the sun is shining and the flowers just bursting through the buds with color and spring fragrance?"—Mansfield (Pa.) Advertiser.

"Where were the leaders of the U. S. trade union movement while all this racketeering, bribery and brutality took place?"—Eglin (Ill.) Courier-News.

Other Editors Saying --- 'Saving' Viet Nam

(Wall Street Journal)

Intentionally or not, the presence in the United States of the President of South Viet Nam is a timely boost for foreign aid. For here, it is suggested, is the outstanding example of American help actually "saving" a nation.

This is supposed to be an unanswerable answer to the so-called meat-axers on Capitol Hill who are portrayed as blithely preparing to chop the foreign aid program to pieces. As it happens, though, there are some answers to the argument.

In the first place, no one seriously supposes that the lawmakers are about to end foreign aid. It will be surprising if they so much as halve the nearly $4 billion the Administration now wants. Even if they do, some $2 billion (not to mention the billions the foreign-aiders have from previous appropriations) is still a lot of money.

As for American aid having "saved" Viet Nam, that is, to say the least, debatable. It cannot be proved that without it the country would have fallen to the Communists after being partitioned from Red-ruled northern Indo-China. The fact that it did not fall is attributable in no small measure to President Diem himself, who appears to be a gifted national leader and also an astute politician. The way he cleaned up the various factions threatening him was skillful, but it was hardly the doing of United States dollars.

Still, American aid probably did help stabilize a chaotic situation in this case. That does not prove that it is useful everywhere. In some countries it is plainly harmful—encouraging governments to engage in uneconomic enterprises, fostering statism, inviting waste and corruption and an unhealthy sense of dependence, feeding inflation.

The trouble with our foreign aid programs is that they have lost almost all relation to common-sense principles. The United States might properly consider a request to help a particular nation in an emergency—provided the help would clearly be helpful, would serve the interests of the United States as well as of the recipient, would be for a limited time and would not become a fantastic burden on the taxpayer's back.

Instead, the foreign-aiders proceed on the assumption that all the non-Communist nations in the world must have American help, whether or not they want it or need it or know how to use it, and that they must have it forever. Because it is unrealistic, this approach is bound to be self-defeating.

If our aid has been of some use—so far, at any rate—in Viet Nam, that's fine. But it is nonsense to try to generalize this particular case into a justification of foreign aid everywhere and for all time.

Liberals Trapped By Own Webs

By RAY TUCKER

WASHINGTON Regional rivalries that overlap Party lines will affect Congressional action on such pending issues as public power, labor controls born of the McClellan-Beck clash and the Civil Rights program. Rarely has there been so marked a spirit of balkanization on Capitol Hill between North and South, East and Far West.

Senator McClellan himself has responded to regional pressures by tacking a Right-to-Work Amendment to the Civil Rights Bill. He offered his proposal as part of the Southern bloc's strategy to kill the measure.

In addition, his deep disgust over Dave Beck's avaricious and greedy handling of Teamster Union funds motivated him. But another factor behind his action is undoubtedly his desire to attract industry to the South generally, and especially to his home State of Arkansas.

RIGHT-TO-WORK LAW IN 17 STATES Most of the 17 states having a Right-to-Work law are below the Mason and Dixon Line, with a few in the Middle West. According to official statistics, industries seeking an escape from labor difficulties and Beck's kind of domination are moving into these anti-union areas.

The only heavily industrialized State outside the South to adopt a Right-to-Work Act is Indiana. It did so as a measure of economic self-defense. It found that numerous Hoosier firms had moved or were planning to pull up stakes and settle in the Right-to-Work section of the country.

Senator McClellan's current prominence as Beck's nemesis naturally attracted attention to his invitation, as he expected. There is no expectation that Congress will enact a Federal law on this question, thereby giving an advantage to those states where such a statute is on the books.

Oddy, the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, which provided two stalwart McClellan supporters—Counsel Robert Kennedy and Senator John Kennedy, a committee member—has been a victim of this sort of industrial migration. So have many other New England and Northern states.

ADMINISTRATION Sectional interests—or selfishness—will influence Congressional voting on such power problems as Hell's Canyon and the Tennessee Valley Authority. Public power advocates seek to annul by Congressional action the contract which the Federal Power Commission has given to the Idaho Power Company, and which has been upheld by the Supreme Court.

The New Deal liberals want the Federal government to construct, own and operate the power system that will be based on Hell's Canyon. They also want to permit TVA to finance future steam expansion by selling its own revenue bonds instead of obtaining future construction authority and funds from annual Congressional appropriations. Both proposals are opposed by the Administration.

STATES FEAR INDUSTRIAL EXODUS Regional resentment is counted on to kill both the Hell's Canyon and the TVA schemes, although the issues are still in doubt. Members from other areas, especially the North and Middle West, fear that these sprawling agencies, if Federally financed at low interest rates and tax-free, will lead to an even greater industrial exodus from their states. Thus, they would suffer even more severely from losses of employment, wages, purchasing power, taxes, etc.

Incidentally, President Eisenhower now has his first chance to place a conservative management in charge of TVA, which has been controlled by Roosevelt-Truman appointees since its birth. The term of Commissioner Harry A. Curtis expires at midnight tonight.

Ike's only appointee, Chairman Herbert D. Vogel, a retired Army engineer, has been criticized in "the valley" as antipublic power and TVA growth.

It is expected that Ike, who once referred to TVA as "creeping socialism," will name a man satisfactory to Vogel, possibly thwarting the liberal program to enlarge the TVA's arm of stream-gated construction of stream-generated power facilities. It was started as only a water-power venture.

Dog Bites Man, And It Is News

By ELMER ROESSNER

Among clichés with the longest beards is the one to the effect that it's not news if a dog bites a man or if a rich man complains about taxes.

Nonsense. A friend's dog bit a postman and got into the papers all right. The postman is suing for $250,000. And once in a while a rich man's complaint about taxes is so challenging that it is worth news space.

Take Crawford H. Greenwell for instance. He's president of du Pont and while he may not be as rich as they come, he's doing pretty good and some day they may name a bracket after him. In a recent speech he made some quotable points about taxation and the American economy.

THE TAX PARADOX

He pointed out that under the reward system in American free enterprise, the last 17 years had been the most productive in the history of the world, but we have made curious changes.

"We set high standards of achievement yet, when the rewards of achievement are won, we reclaim most of them in the guise of taxation so that achievement becomes not only financially unattractive but an actual burden. We admire success but penalize the successful; we admire talent but penalize the talented; we admire initiative, yet penalize the initiator; we admire philanthropy, yet penalize the philanthropist; we admire leadership, yet we penalize and harass our leaders."

He said we abrogate the "minority rights" of the talented and successful and added, "I am afraid that too little thought has been given to the moral implications of taxing away 90 per cent of one man's earnings so that another's tax might seem less unpalatable."

A proposal to graduate corporation income taxes as personal income taxes are, he said, "is based on the same kind of tortured 'ability to pay' reasoning which seems to have become well established even though we might argue, with equal logic, that you or I should pay a dollar to ride in the subway, presumably filled out a form, under oath, while doing so. Or that parking meters should be fitted with slots of different denominations for each make of car."

TAXES PASSED ON

Mr. Greenwell said that regardless of the progression of taxes levied on corporations, no one will give up the products that can be manufactured only by large corporations. "Progressive taxes or no, we will have automobiles and the tax that comes with them will be a penalty paid by the consumer for transportation. We will certainly continue to have cellophane, whatever the tax consequences, and the added cost will be paid, not by du Pont, but by the housewife as she buys her cellophane-wrapped loaf of bread."

He concluded: "I see no reason to believe that financial gain is any less desirable than prestige or recognition, and it is certainly less stultifying than the lust for power or of mere social distinction."

Mr. Greenwell ought to be brought up on one statement. While it is true that the personal income tax goes up to 91 per cent of income in excess of $200,000 for single taxpayers, and of $400,000 for those filing joint returns, the government has never taxed away 90 per cent of anyone's income.

Mr. Greenwell, being married, can take advantage of the joint return but since his wife's income is with a du Pont income of her own, the benefit may be slight or non-existent. So he may pay 90 or 91 on top slice of his income. But if he's paying anywhere near that, he sure needs tax help.

Dog Bites Man, Conflict Between Two Basic Rights

By LYNN NISBET

CONFLICT — The age-long conflict between human rights and property rights (dollars) was highlighted in the debate on Sen. Wilbur Jolly's sterilization bill. The same conflict was noted in less degree during debate on the minimum wage bill, and in connection with numerous appropriations and tax measures.

It was paramount in the sterilization argument because the human right jeopardized was inherent and natural urge to perpetuate the race. In the other instances the rights were artificial and sometimes questionable.

The avowed propose of the Jolly bill is to save welfare funds from being paid to unwed mothers for care of their illegitimate children. It provided for the sterilization of any woman who twice bore children out of wedlock if they were or were likely to become recipient of welfare aid to dependent children. It would not apply to unmarried mothers who were financially able to care for their broods.

Therefore, argued opponents of the bill, it is not a moral or a religious matter, but solely one of saving tax dollars. It was further argued that since many illegitimate children have developed into influential and useful citizens, even achieving positions of high leadership in society, this bill had none of the merit attributed to the reasons for sterilization of congenital feeble-minded, epileptics or victims of mental disease diagnosed as incurable.

Laws on the statute books now are fairly adequate to protect society at large by legalized sterilization, after careful study by competent professionally trained experts, or persons in these categories.

ARGUMENTS — Proponents of the bill, mostly from the Eastern counties where the problem of Negro illegitimacy is acute and too many of the meager welfare dollars are being dissipated by irresponsible mothers instead of being applied to care of the children, argued that the best to stop such waste was to render unwed mothers incapable of bearing other children.

Opponents of the plan argued that it was like locking the door after the horse has been stolen, that it gave to a small body of men and women god-like authority over their fellow humans.

Most telling argument against the bill was offered by Sen. Dave Rose of Wayne, a retired physician and surgeon, and a life member of the American College of Surgeons. Although he used many medical and anatomical terms which his colleagues could not understand, they got what he meant when he said the whole thing was like going on a safari to shoot elephants with bird shot, that no reputable surgeon would perform the required operation under the conditions set out in the bill, and that it smacked of the most vicious type of police state.

The debate was mostly serious although there were humorous quips, such as suggestion that if the Senate were composed of a majority of women they would vote to sterilize men as well as women. Finally Senator Jolly made the motion to table his own bill. That ended one debate on one bill. It by no means solved the problem which occasioned the bill. Nor did it end the continuing conflict between human rights, many of which are inherent, and dollar rights, all of which are artificial.

COME BACKS — The real estate bill which had passed the Senate was amended in the House committee to require an applicant for license as a real estate broker or salesman to certify he had not been convicted of a felony, or a misdemeanor involving moral turpitude, within the past five years.

Many State and Federal laws are written so as to preclude persons who have been convicted — sometimes even those who only have been accused — of violating the law from holding positions of public trust. These laws are intended to protect the public from immoral or amoral officials. The intent is good, but the application sometimes works great injustice unless there is full recognition of the human element.

For example: Three members of the House of Representatives in 1949 had served time in prison after conviction of violating the banking laws during the depression.

Thomas E. Cooper of New Hanover, who had been one of the youngest presidents in history of the North Carolina Bankers Association, went to the Federal prison in Atlanta for alleged illegal manipulation of accounts in a national bank at Wilmington.

Ralph Fisher of Transylvania and Junius K. Powell of Columbus had done time in North Carolina State prison for alleged violation of State banking laws in desperate efforts to keep their banks open in the early depression years.

Before and after the 1949 session these men rendered outstanding service to North Carolina in the General Assembly. An arbitrary ban against them on account of earlier convictions would have denied to the State the benefit of their judgment and wisdom in legislation.

Strength For Today

By EARL L. DOUGLASS

RELIGION IS PRACTICAL. Religion to have any value must be practical. No matter what we may think about God and His relationship to the world, it does us no good whatsoever unless we trust Him in our personal lives and adhere to His principles in our dealings with our fellows.

Some people keep their religion in a tight compartment separated from all the practical circumstances of their lives. They regard religion as one of life's embellishments. It is something to which they give their attention on Sunday. It is associated with a book written thousands of years ago and called the Bible. But it has nothing to do, apparently, with their business dealings, their social life, their friendships, or their politics. It was said of one great religious leader who organized the political and social life of his community, that he was as much interested in plumbing as he was in preaching. He believed that religious precession which did not eventuate in better living conditions for the people was a false and hollow shell. He was interested in plumbing as well as preaching; sanitation, as well as spiritual culture; politics as well as prayer.

Sound and sincere Christianity makes a man a better citizen, a better neighbor, a better husband, father, friend, club member, employer or employee. The object of all true religion is to honor God, and the fruit of this reverence is better life and a better world.

Killed Trying To Be Good Burglar

SANTA ANA, Calif. (AP)—A 15-year-old boy shot to death during a burglary attempt was trying to make good as a thief to surprise his ex-convict uncle, say police.

The youth, Andy Ecord of Palm Dale, was killed by the owner of a poolroom he was trying to enter. "When Andy came to live with me a month ago he kept begging me to teach him how to be a burglar," police said Floyd Hudson, 32, who has spent more than half his life in jail, told them.

Hudson was booked on suspicion of burglary. "We planned to do the poolroom job together," he added tearfully. "But the boy wanted to prove to me he could handle it himself."

Sid Caesar And NBC Separate

NEW YORK (AP)—Television comedian Sid Caesar and the National Broadcasting Co. announced jointly yesterday that Caesar had terminated his 10-year contract with the network. The agreement had seven years to run.

The contract was signed in 1954, with Caesar guaranteed an income of about $100,000 a year. The comedian will finish out the current season of Caesar's Hour which ends May 25.

Caesar, 34, said he requested a release from his contract after the network declined to assure him that he would star in 20 one-hour shows during the 1957-58 season.

NBC said it had not been able to obtain sponsors for the Caesar show next year and could not afford to sustain it. Production costs for Caesar's current shows were estimated at more than $110,000 each. The network said Caesar asked for no financial settlement.

NBC said Caesar had turned down a suggestion that he curtail his regular program series and star in a minimum and two and possibly four special shows next season.

Caesar was reported planning to join Sylvester J. Weaver, former chairman of NBC, in a producing venture involving motion pictures, night clubs, theaters and television.

Redlegs Again Stand Alone At Top Of National League

By JOE REICHLER The Associated Press Cincinnati was back as sole occupant of first place in the National League today and the streaking Chicago White Sox were still leading the American League.

Stengel, the master juggler, proved again last night that he apparently can't do anything wrong on a ball field. He outdid himself as the Yankees inflicted the second straight 3-0 shutout upon the Kansas City Athletics.

cracked a home run and Johnny Logan and Bill Bruton followed with singles. Friend escaped further damage by getting Del Crandall to hit into a double play and the next batter to fly out.

Despite their fourth straight triumph, the Yankees remained half a game behind the White Sox, who conquered Washington 8-3.

Frank Bolling's leadoff homer gave Detroit's Jim Bunning a lead he never relinquished as he tamed the Red Sox with five hits for his second victory.

Haney Confesses He Figured Wrong

MILWAUKEE (AP)—Last winter they used to say Manager Fred Haney of the Milwaukee Braves was "bunt crazy." Today they're saying he was crazy not to bunt last night against the Pittsburgh Pirates.

swung on by Tanner. The result was a double play grounder to Mazeroski.

Eddie Mathews led off the last half of the ninth with a homer off Buc starter Bob Friend to shove the Pirates' lead to 2-1.

Why didn't Haney, whose club led the league hands down in sacrifices last year with 142, have Tanner bunt?

The first pitch was wide for a ball, but the next one described win. I figured if he could hit one through there we'd win. I figured wrong.

Why didn't Haney, whose club led the league hands down in sacrifices last year with 142, have Tanner bunt?

Calhoun Plans Show Middleweight Class

CLEVELAND (AP)—Rory Calhoun, Georgia-born slugger now of White Plains, N.Y., will be out to demonstrate against Joey Giardello to-night in 10 rounds at the arena that there was no need to go into the welterweight class to find an opponent for Ray Robinson.

"It's all wrong for the International Boxing Club, to bypass a fine group of present middleweights to put Carmen Basilio (welterweight champ) in for a title shot against Sugar Ray Robinson," complains Calhoun's manager, Fred Bachman.

"In Calhoun, Giardello, Gene Fullmer, Spider Webb, Tiger Jones, Charles Humez and others, the 160-pound class has the best fighters in the ring today. Why should Basilio get a title match without proving himself first?"

The 22-year-old Calhoun has been fighting professionally since late 1954 and has a string of 27 victories, 14 by knockouts, and a lone defeat, a close decision to Spider Webb in Chicago last August.

Giardello, a Brooklyn-born Philadelphiaan who will be 27 next month, has six more years of ring experience than Calhoun and has won 70-23 of them by kayoes—against 13 losses.

The fight, nationally televised by NBC at 10 p.m. (EDT) will be scored on the basis of a mandatory five points for each round won.

They tied the game in the fifth with two more runs, bringing them across on three hits and a sacrifice. In the top of the sixth and final frame, Joyner's long homerun put the Moose in front 8-7.

Deac Freshman Coach Promoted WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP)—Wake Forest Athletic Director Gibson announced here yesterday that freshman basketball Coach Al Deporter has been elevated to assistant varsity coach.

Deporter, 25, fills the vacancy created when Horace (Bones) McKinney was named basketball coach succeeding Murray Greaser, who was named assistant athletic director.

Deporter's freshmen team last season had a 13-9 record. Deporter, who also is varsity tennis coach, was captain of the Wake Forest basketball team in 1954.

Exchangers Top Moose By 9-8

The Exchange Club walloped the Moose 9-8 yesterday afternoon in a free-scoring, hard-hitting contest at Elm Street Park. The game marked the beginning of the season for the Tar Heel Little League.

Morris was given credit for the victory. A regular shortstop, he came in to relieve starter Ange in the sixth inning, with the game tied 7-7.

Coltraine went the full six innings for the Moose and was charged with the loss.

Coltraine went the full six innings for the Moose and was charged with the loss.

Though the game was not primarily a pitcher's duel, hurries in both sides turned in fine performances, statistics-wise. Ange struck out nine batters, walked two and gave up seven hits. Morris fanned three, walked two and allowed one hit. Coltraine sent six down swinging, walked four and gave up eight hits.

Big hitters for the afternoon were Aycock and Forbes of the Moose and Reynolds of the winners. All three connected for two hits.

Boys who contributed one hit each were Morris, Johnson, Medlin and Boone of the Exchange, and Joyner, Coltraine, Smith and Webb of the Moose.

Coltraine cracked the only two-base hit of the game, and teammate Joyner smashed the first homerun of the year.

The Exchange Club jumped to an early lead in the first inning by blasting across seven big runs in their first time at bat. The Moose came back to score four in the second and picked up another in the third.

They tied the game in the fifth with two more runs, bringing them across on three hits and a sacrifice. In the top of the sixth and final frame, Joyner's long homerun put the Moose in front 8-7.

The Exchangers came back in their half of the inning and pushed across two runs to win the game, 9-8. The winning runs came in via the walk and wild pitch celebrate his birthday. Stengel added: "I'm not mad enough to take a chance on losing a ball game and possibly the pennant."

Mantle showed no ill effects. He came up with a homer, a single and two walks. Bauer, dropped to eighth in the batting lineup, drove in the final Yankee run with a single.

Kucks is scheduled to pitch tonight against Detroit and Martin has been out of action due to a lame leg.

Meantime, the club stood behind the players. In a statement, the club said: "The Yankees have made a preliminary examination of the facts surrounding Billy Martin's birthday party which was attended by certain players—all with their wives, with the exception of Martin, who is a bachelor—and are convinced that neither Bauer nor any Yankee players struck anyone. Mr. Bauer has engaged counsel of his own and the legal aspects of the matter are in the hands of said counsel."

The 40-year-old Jones, a Yankee fan, claims he suffered a fractured nose, broken jaw and arm and body bruises.

"I love Bauer, Martin and all the Yankees," said Jones. "I've been a Yankee fan for years and this incident has disappointed me."

Jones said he would proceed with a civil suit and, if X-rays showed more serious injuries, with criminal action against Bauer, known to his teammates as the Bruiser.

Phantoms, Kinston In Final Tilt

Tomorrow night at Kinston, Greenville high school will finish its baseball season against the Northeastern Conference's number one team.

Kinston, undefeated in Conference play, has virtually sewed up the league championship. Greenville, sporting a 7-4 mark now, is currently ranked in second place.

In an earlier meeting between the two clubs at Greenville's Brookgreen Field, the Red Devils pulled a 7-6 victory out of the fire. Kinston's hard-hitting aggregation cracked out eight hits in the victory, while Devil pitchers Hill and Gardner limited Greenville to five.

Probable pitcher for the Phantoms in the contest will be Charles Staton. Coach Boley Farley will have righthander Hudson Miller and lefty Ronnie Finch ready for relief work, if needed.

The starting lineup in the field will be Dick Evans at first base; Mack Roebuck at second; Billy Cox at shortstop; Walker Lee Allen at third; Joe Wingate, Bobby Edwards and Charlie Smith at the outfield posts; Angus Duff catching.

Expected to start for Kinston will be Hearn catching; Cummings at first base; Baldree at second; Adkins at third base; Cutler at shortstop; Lewis, Laws and Croom in the outfield. The pitcher is unknown as of now.

Game time is scheduled for 8:00 at the Kinston Baseball Park.

Abraham and His World

ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By Alfred J. Duescher

Scripture—Genesis 18; 18:1-19:29.

Abraham left Egypt with his family and all his belongings. Lot, his brother's son, went with him. Both men were very rich with flocks, herds and tents, so that the land could not contain them all, and their herdsmen fought one another.

Abraham begged Lot not to allow strife between them. The best thing to do was to separate, going different ways and choosing new lands. Lot looked over the land and chose the plain of Jordan, which was "well watered everywhere."

As Abraham sat at the door of his tent one day, he saw three men coming toward him. He ran to welcome them, offering water to wash their feet. He had food prepared and served to them under a tree.

The wicked cities of Sodom and Gomorrah were to be destroyed, said the Lord. Angels warned Lot and his wife to flee and not look back. The wife did turn and became a pillar of salt. MEMORY VERSE—Leviticus 19:18,

Abraham and His World

A RICH MAN, BUT WITH GREAT FAITH AND GENEROUS NATURE

Scripture—Genesis 18; 18:1-19:29.

By NEWMAN CAMPBELL IN LAST WEEK'S lesson, Abraham was ordered out of Egypt because he deceived the Pharaoh. So he took his wife, Sarah, and all his belongings and went south. His nephew, his brother Haran's son, Lot, with his possessions, was with him.

Abraham went to Bethel, where he had pitched his tent and set up an altar to God. He was a very rich man, having numerous flocks, herds and tents, and so had Lot. It was not long before they found that the land on which they were living would not accommodate the possessions of both, and they found their herdsmen fighting with one another.

Abraham showed his unselfish character when he begged Lot not to let hard feelings come between them, as "we be brethren." He suggested that as the whole land lay before them, they should separate. "If thou wilt take the left hand, then I will go to the right; or if thou depart to the right hand, I will go to the left," he said.

Lot was quick to take advantage of this most generous offer, and looking over the plain of Jordan and seeing that it was "well watered everywhere," he chose it as his land. So Abraham dwelled in the land of Canaan, and Lot dwelt in "the cities of the plain."

We all know people like these two: the one generous and unselfish, ready to do anything for others, and the one who takes advantage of them, thinking only of his own interests.

Another proof of Abraham's fine character was when, as he was sitting in front of his tent in the heat of the day, he saw three men approaching. He ran to meet them, bowed to the ground and prayed them to let him bring water to wash their dusty feet and to partake of food. He called to Sarah to make some cakes in a hurry, and he prepared some tender meat for their meal. He probably did not know that they were angels in disguise, but saw three weary travelers. Then he served food under a tree and consumed in the iniquity of the city.

As Lot still lingered, the angels took him and his family by the hand and led them out of the city, saying, "Escape for thy life; look not behind thee, neither stay thou in all the plain; escape to the mountain lest thou be consumed." Lot refused to go to the mountains, but begged the angels to let him stay in a small town and the angels agreed to that and said the Lord would spare that place, which was then called Zoar. As the sun rose, the Lord rained brimstone and fire upon Sodom and Gomorrah, and overthrew the cities and all the plain. But Lot's wife could not refrain from looking back to the destruction, and she was turned into a pillar of salt.

The lesson really is an example of the man who was faithful to his God, and, although rich, never forgot to treat others as he would that they should treat him.

stood by to see the men refresh themselves. Sodom and Gomorrah were very wicked cities, and the Lord planned to destroy them. Abraham asked, "Wilt Thou destroy the righteous with the wicked?" If there were 50 good people in the cities, the Lord said He would not destroy them. Then Abraham begged the Lord not to be angry with him, but if there were 45 could they be spared? then 40, then down to 10, and the Lord promised that if even 10 were found righteous, He would spare the cities for their sakes.

Lot, however, seemed not to be troubled about the wickedness of the cities. When two angels were sent to Sodom to warn Lot to flee with his wife, he insisted upon taking them into his house and keeping them overnight. Before they lay down, however, wicked men of Sodom surrounded the house, threatening the angels, who made the intruders blind. In the morning the angels took Lot by the hand and said, "Arise, take thy wife, and thy two daughters, which are here; lest thou be consumed in the iniquity of the city."

As Lot still lingered, the angels took him and his family by the hand and led them out of the city, saying, "Escape for thy life; look not behind thee, neither stay thou in all the plain; escape to the mountain lest thou be consumed."

Farmers Reminded To Stay Within Allotment

Each year, some farmers in the state are greatly inconvenienced by having planted in excess of their allotment on one of the basic crops.

H. D. Godfrey, administrative officer for the State ASC, issued a reminder today to all Tar Heel farmers that it is definitely their responsibility to plant within their acreage allotment.

Every year a few farmers over the State on having their acreage measured by ASC personnel, find that they have overplanted. Many of these farmers, according to Godfrey, pay additional money out of their pockets to have a representative of the ASC County Committee witness disposition of the excess acreage.

Other farmers make a deposit with the ASC office to have officials revisit and re-measure the acreage. In just about every case, this is an unnecessary drain on the farmer's pocket-book, and in every case, the time lost by these revisits to the farm is a great inconvenience to the farmer.

"That's just one of the reasons the farmer should remember that it is his responsibility to plant within his acreage allotment," Godfrey said. Another reason is that every time a farmer plants over his allotment, he is wasting seed or plants, fertilizer and labor.

Flue-cured tobacco farmers in this State have an additional responsibility this year, according to Godfrey. Because of the greatly reduced demand, both at home and abroad, for certain types of flue-cured tobacco, the Department of Agriculture this year is supporting the price of these "discounted" tobacco varieties at one-half of the normal support rate.

The responsibility for identification of tobacco grown on the farm rests with the farmer, Godfrey explained. Every farmer will be required to sign a certificate to the effect that he has or has not planted one of the discounted varieties.

"ASC will take extensive steps to identify any tobacco of the discounted varieties that might be grown in this State. However, that does not alter the fact that the responsibility actually rests with the farmer growing the tobacco," Godfrey said.

Student Teachers Of ECC Conclude Work

East Carolina College seniors who are completing this week their work as student teachers in public school classrooms in the eastern counties of the state number 166 men and women, according to a report by Dr. J. L. Oppelt, director of student teaching and placement at the college.

Seventy-one men and ninety-five women are teaching this term in the Coates-Wahl Laboratory school on the campus, in city schools here and in 24 schools located outside of Greenville. Dr. Oppelt stated. Their work includes teaching in primary and grammar grades and in eleven departments of instruction in secondary schools.

The largest number of seniors to do their student teaching in the lower grades in any one quarter at the college to date is now working in the field of elementary education. Of the total of 49 student teachers, 27 are conducting classes in the primary grades and 22 in the grammar grades, Dr. Oppelt's report indicates.

Subjects being taught by the East Carolina seniors include art, business education, English, home economics, industrial arts, mathematics, music, health and physical education, science, foreign languages, and the social studies.

Schools in addition to those on the campus and in Greenville, where East Carolina seniors are teaching include Bethel, Belvoir, Rocky Mount, Ayden, Farmville, Chicod, Winterville, Tarboro, Robersonville, LaGrange, Kinston, Williamston, Grifton, West Edgecombe, Washington, Contentnea, Grimesland, Snow Hill, Stokes, Luccama, Plymouth, New Bern, Bear Grass, and Rock Ridge.

Cheap Nuclear Power Sought In New Research

By RENNIE TAYLOR AP Science Reporter

IDAHO FALLS, Idaho (AP)—Two new turns in research aimed at producing low-cost atomic power came to light today as the Atomic Energy Commission opened several of its reactor testing projects here to inspection by newsmen.

One is the building of a 45-million-dollar plant for recovering "second-hand" uranium from experimental reactors.

The other is a reactor which will use a chemical that looks something like white sponge rubber as a cooling medium for reactors.

Possible ways of streamlining future power piles also are in the works as the result of still another reactor which is operated up to the danger point and then shut down in a split second, but only after a battery of electronic instruments has recorded its pre-explosive behavior characteristics.

These and other types of reactors, some of which had been in operation for 14 years, were put on display for the first time yesterday. They are scattered over a 600-square-mile expanse of Idaho wilderness called the National Reactor Testing Station. It is operated for the AEC by the Phillips Petroleum Co., but several other firms have projects under way.

The uranium recovery program is designed to salvage atomic fuel which reactors leave unburned. It is in the form of plates or slugs made usually of uranium and aluminum mixed together. Most reactors burn up less than 25 percent of the uranium in these fuel elements.

The slugs and plates are very "hot" with radiation when taken out of a reactor and can be handled only by remote control, so the cost of separating their uranium from the "ashes" in them is very high.

The new chemical separation plant—a fantastic layout of concrete cells, glass windows five feet thick and thousands of valves, manipulating tools and recording instruments—was designed to do the recovery job with a maximum of safety and a minimum of cost, said Don Reid, plant superintendent.

Dorsey underwent surgery at the hospital last January for removal from a lung of a growth said to be nonmalignant.

Zanuck Cites Qualities That Make A Film Star

By BOB THOMAS MEXICO CITY (AP)—What makes a movie star?

The question has been asked over and over, and I have never heard a satisfactory answer — until now.

It came from Darryl F. Zanuck, one of Hollywood's great starmakers. The producer had just watched a scene with Tyrone Power and Ava Gardner for his "The Sun Also Rises" at Churubusco Studios.

"Film stars aren't a breed apart," said Zanuck, puffing on his eternal cigar. "You'll find they are different types. Just as you find different types in every walk of life. But to be successful, stars must have two qualities: 'They must have pleasing personalities and photograph well.' 'They must be able to project.'"

Do they need to know how to act? It helps, he said. "The day has passed when a star could get by on looks and personality alone," Zanuck remarked. "A star must have some degree of talent."

"Some get their training from handle with care."

the stage, like Clark Gable, Spencer Tracy and Ty. Others learned how to act in pictures; Gary Cooper is a self-made star like that. Today television is giving young players some semblance of the training they need.

"But acting isn't everything. Some of our best actors can never be movie stars because they are not pleasing personalities or can't project."

In 30 years of dealing with actors, Zanuck has seen his share of temperament (recent example: Marilyn Monroe). But he doesn't seem alarmed by it.

"I don't know of any actress without some share of temperament," he said. "But you find that in any creative field. Writers might think I'm temperamental when I change a scene 50 times."

Are there enough stars today? "There are never enough. The fault lies with the distributors and exhibitors. They are always screaming for new faces. But when you're casting a picture, they say 'get so-and-so,' always an established name."

Re-Elected For Five-Year Term

CIUDAD TRUJILLO, Dominican Republic (AP)—Gen. Hector B. Trujillo, brother of dictator Rafael Trujillo, has been re-elected president of the Dominican Republic without opposition.

This is Trujillo's second five-year term. No incidents were reported during the balloting.

Less Time Out For The Fourth

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—Five years ago optician Robert S. Valenti put a sign in the window of his office. It read "Closed for Day —

Wife has Twins." Two years ago another sign appeared — "Closed for Half a Day — Wife has Only One Baby This Time."

The other day the latest message appeared — "Closed for an extra hour at lunch time to see wife and baby. Can't afford to close for any longer with four children to maintain."

THOROUGH JOB

CINCINNATI (AP)—A man drove into a filling station here and was startled to see the agitated attendant poke his head through the car window and ask for a dime. Seems a thorough-going holdup man had stopped for five minutes previously and walked off with all the cash—including the dime the attendant needed to call police.

Rae Foley's new mystery novel RUN FOR YOUR LIFE

CHAPTER 24

"Frankly," Finn was saying when Nora came into the living room, "I'm staggered. I'd never have believed it of Charles. That he was mistaken — granted; but that he would commit perjury, to protect that worthless whelp of his —"

He eyed Nora in surprise. "Better go back to your room, honey, and stay there. The police will be here any minute."

"And I'm going to talk to them when they come," she said gravely. "This time you can't stop me, Finn. But there's something else." She told him about the Huggers' blackmail attempt.

Stuart said, "Want me to beat the guy up, Finn? I'm spoiling for a fight."

"I'm aware of that," Finn said dryly. He walked up and down the room, lost in thought, and stopped at last beside Nora. "Your nurse would choose that one evening to be away from you, fooling around with a druggist. Of all the putrid luck."

"I'm aware of that," she asked directly, "that the police are going to think I pushed Aunt Olive?"

"No, no. Of course not. But I think I'll have a talk with the Huggers and put the fear of God in them. Meanwhile, keep out of this. I've got plenty to keep Captain Foote interested, what with Frank's alibi blowing up and one thing and another." Stay in your room. Understand?" the lawyer tipped up his chin and stared.

"Good God! Did Bert strike you?"

"No," Nora said hastily. "Garry was turning the mattress and — her hand slipped. Don't mention it to her, please, because she feels badly enough."

Finn examined her searchingly, looked at the red welts on her cheek. There was a puzzled expression on his face. Then he went out to the kitchen.

Stuart gathered her close, kissing her.

"Darling," she said at last, pushing him away from her so that she could speak, "that day at the picnic — where was I?"

He looked at her in perplexity. "What do you mean — where were you?"

"I just don't understand why Aunt Olive didn't see me. Where was I?"

"Huddled up in front of the fire, lying on a blanket, don't you remember?"

"I remember being chilly," Nora said slowly. "I suppose I was already coming down with a cold because of that — crazy thing I'd done the day before."

"Remember," Stuart told her, "we decided to forget about that. He cradled her in his arms and she rested against his chest, glad that for a moment she could not see the look of brooding worry on his face. Reassure her as he might, she knew that he, too, had not forgotten.

He released her with an exclamation. He was smiling again. "You know, Nora, with all that undergrowth, it's possible she couldn't see you at that. The only reason she saw me was because I was standing up, collecting sticks for the fire."

She sighed with relief. "Of course. Don't be impatient with me, dear. I seem to be an awful fool."

"I love you and I'll never be impatient with you." Stuart turned as the outside door opened and Frank paused for a moment in the lobby, looking into the living room. Nora could feel Stuart's muscles tense.

Frank came awkwardly into the room. "Look here," he began, "you must be thinking—"

Stuart brushed past him without a word and a moment later Nora saw him striding across the lawn toward the woods.

"Sit down for a minute, will you, Nora?" Frank said and she curled up on one of the love seats, watching him gravely. He dropped a log on the fire and then sat down on the rug at her feet, staring into the blaze.

"It about Candy," Frank said at last, still looking into the fire, his head turned away from her. "I should have brought the whole thing out in the open as soon as she died but — honestly, Nora, I wasn't thinking of keeping myself in the clear. It never entered my head I could be suspected of killing her."

"You did it for Cousin Charles," Nora said.

It had, he agreed, been because of his father. He had to be careful, make his dates on the sly and provide himself with an alibi that would satisfy his father. So lying had become second nature.

Bert had been renting horses to Candy Kendrick for several weeks by the time the Demings reached the inn and Bert, knowing the setup, had tipped Frank off about Candy. He told Frank which bridle paths she usually took.

So, Frank said, he'd ridden that way. It was a couple of days before he encountered her. She was prettier even than Bert had indicated. Sweet and unspoiled and self-conscious. She was good company. So he had arranged to meet her, now and then, although she refused all his invitations, and never asked him to call at her cottage.

"Those last few weeks," he went on slowly, "she changed a lot. She didn't talk much. If she hadn't been so darned attractive I'd have given up. But I kept asking her to let me see her stuff. Finally, she said I could come by some afternoon."

"Well, the day I went was the day she was killed. I hung around the cottage quite a while before I gave up. Then I rode back here strong?

I'll say it's strong!

The Gastobac burner is covered by a strong wire cage. Stand on it! You can use it as a step-up to climb to tier poles. The flame is thoroughly enclosed to give best protection against falling leaves and sticks. There's little danger of leaves being ignited even when they fall directly on the stove unit.

When you have a Gastobac curing system, you can leave your barn untended and know that it's safe!
