

Armed Services Flex Muscles In Annual Display For Carolinians

Civilians By The Thousands Flocking To Service Installations For Look

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS The Army, Navy, Marines and Air Force in North Carolina flexed their strong right arms of war today as Tar Heels observed Armed Forces Day—a day of peace with an exhibition of might.

Civilians flocked to service installations throughout the state for a close up inspection of the new look in war weapons and the men who man them.

Other Tar Heels watched from their backyards as the latest in jet planes flashed over many cities.

The biggest display of might was scheduled at Ft. Bragg, one of the nation's largest military posts. Airborne troops were to drop with heavy equipment and two public firings of the Honest John rocket were scheduled.

Bleachers seating 2,000 to 5,000 persons were set up for the firing of the Honest John in the morning and again in the afternoon.

The open house at Seymour Johnson Air Force Base at Goldsboro was to include morning and afternoon flights of F86 Sabre Jets over North Carolina cities.

Warsaw, Wilmington, New Bern, Washington, Greenville, Rocky Mount, Kinston and Goldsboro were to receive a salute from the jets during the morning.

The latest in ground equipment—Mores units—to catch and halt landing planes was demonstrated by Marines at the Naval Auxiliary Air Station at Edenton.

At the Cherry Point Marine Air Station, the open house included a guided tour of the naval jet aircraft overhaul and repair plant.

National Guard and reserve units held open house in Charlotte where at a ball last night, State Sen. Claude Currie, president pro tempore of the State Senate, was presented a North Carolina flag flown across the South Pole during Operation Deep Freeze.

Making the presentation was Lt. Col. Cicero Ellen, commander of the C124 transport which made the flight.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Congressman Herbert C. Bonner announced today that he has nominated John O'Neill Turnage, son of Col. and Mrs. Benjamin O. Turnage of Farmville, N. C., as a First Alternate Candidate for appointment to the United States Military Academy.

Wins ECC Alumni Award

Mrs. L. W. Bowman

Outstanding ECC Graduate Chosen

Mrs. L. W. Bowman, chief of the sterility testing section, Division of Antibiotics, Food and Drug Administration, Washington, D. C., received today at East Carolina College the annual Alumni Award to an Outstanding Graduate of the college.

Dr. Charles W. Reynolds, director of the East Carolina department of science, presented the award this morning at a meeting of the college Alumni Association. Mrs. Bowman is the eighteenth graduate and the twelfth woman to receive the honor.

Formerly Frances Willard of Greenville, N. C., Mrs. Bowman attended East Carolina College as a major in the departments of science and English. She was graduated in 1940 with the degree of bachelor of arts.

After her graduation, she taught for a year at Buxton high school, Buxton, N. C., and then entered Garfield Memorial Hospital in Washington, D. C., for further training. She was certified in 1942 as a registered medical technologist by the American Society of Clinical Pathologists.

From 1942 through 1946 she directed the clinical laboratory at Soldiers' Home Hospital, Washington, D. C., and in 1943 was married to Lieutenant L. W. Bowman, a dental surgeon stationed there.

In 1948 she studied bacteriology in the graduate school of Catholic University in Washington, D. C.

When Lieutenant Bowman opened an office in Washington and resumed the private practice of dentistry, Mrs. Bowman joined the Division of Antibiotics with the Food and Drug Administration. She first served as supervisor in the laboratory conducting potency testing of penicillin and other antibiotics by cup-plate methods.

Later she was transferred to the turbidimetric assay section, which engaged in certifying dihydrostreptomycin, streptomycin, and the tetracyclines.

While with the Food and Drug Administration, Mrs. Bowman has done research on the stability of various antibiotics and has also developed new assays for antibiotic testing. In collaboration with other bacteriologists in her laboratory she has worked on the stability of antibiotics in various media.

Her six-year-old sister, Wendy, his paternal grandmother, Mrs. Nettie Hooper, and his uncle, Ronald A. Hooper, were permitted to visit him briefly this morning.

"He's doing fine," said the boy's father, Benjamin Hooper, Hooper and his wife, Borghild, kept a vigil at their son's bedside. "Mommy" was his first word and then he called "Daddy."

"The boy's condition is good," said Dr. J. H. Kris, the attending physician. "He is able to talk and asked for food. He has taken some food. Everything is on the up and up."

Doctors learned he had suffered a shoulder injury in his ordeal in the backyard well he tumbled into while at play.

"Ouch," he said when Dr. J.H. Kris touched it. He was to be X-rayed later to determine whether there was a fracture.

Boy In Good Shape After Ordeal In Well

By RELMAN MORIN MANORVILLE, N. Y.—The 7-year-old boy rescued last night after 24 hours of entrapment in a dry well was reported in good condition today. He took his first solid food—cereal.

Lying under an oxygen tent in a hospital, Benjamin Hooper Jr. was able to recognize his parents and to ask for a toy automobile for his birthday in July.

Doctors learned he had suffered a shoulder injury in his ordeal in the backyard well he tumbled into while at play.

"Ouch," he said when Dr. J.H. Kris touched it. He was to be X-rayed later to determine whether there was a fracture.

"His condition is good," said Kris. The doctor said the boy was not yet "out of danger" of getting pneumonia and that his condition would be watched closely several days.

The boy's mother, Borghild, also called Betty, 30, spent the night in the boy's hospital room under sedation. She awoke at 9:30 a.m., walked to the boy's bed and smiled and said:

"This is mommy," "Hello, mommy," replied the boy.

"Hello, baby," she said. She told newsmen later that during the long wait for the boy's rescue she had tried to prepare herself for word that he was dead.

"I was trying to picture him as being dead and to build myself up to the fact that he was, and how to cope with it," she said.

The father, a 33-year-old Highway Department truck driver, spent the night at the hospital also, but was too overjoyed and excited to get much sleep.

He was sent home after daybreak to get some rest. The boy was pulled alive from a depth of 24 feet below the surface after even the rescue workers had despaired of finding him alive.

Efforts to tunnel horizontally to him proved futile until atomic scientists from the Brookhaven National Laboratory arrived late yesterday with gamma ray shields.

The shields, shaped like cylinders, were about four feet in diameter but of graduated sizes that one could fit inside another.

First one was pushed horizontally into the sandy soil, the sand was scooped out, and then another would be pushed through it until a tunnel was formed to the boy from a neighboring vertical shaft that had been dug hastily.

The cylinders were driven into the soil by jacks in a horizontal position.

Until then, sand slides had blocked all efforts of scores of rescue workers to reach the boy.

Sam Woodson, 39, a Negro employed by a construction firm, was the first to reach the boy. The boy was carried out and within 15 minutes was on his way to the hospital.

His six-year-old sister, Wendy, his paternal grandmother, Mrs. Nettie Hooper, and his uncle, Ronald A. Hooper, were permitted to visit him briefly this morning.

"He's doing fine," said the boy's father, Benjamin Hooper, Hooper and his wife, Borghild, kept a vigil at their son's bedside.

WASHINGTON (AP)—Senate rackets probes said today future public hearings on dealings of a Chicago consultant to employers will involve "other labor leaders" besides Teamsters President Dave Beck.

The Senate committee already has announced it will ask the consultant, Nathan Shefferman, about testimony that he paid Beck $8,000 out of a $12,000 commission he allegedly received when the Teamsters Union bought the site for its palatial headquarters at the foot of Capitol Hill.

Chairman McClellan (D - Ark) and some of his aides on the special investigating committee said the group will look into coast to coast operations of Shefferman, who gets fees for advising employers on their problems with organized labor.

Robert F. Kennedy, committee counsel, said the probes hoped to start the hearings about mid-June. He said the hearings will involve officials of "at least two unions in addition to the Teamsters." He declined to name them, but said New York is one city the hearings will cover.

The committee recessed its inquiry yesterday. McClellan and Kennedy said it has not yet been decided whether to hold any further hearings before early June.

The committee said previously it would look deeper into Shefferman's own testimony last March that he received from Beck some $85,000 in Teamsters Union funds to pay for luxury goods and services for other labor leaders and members of the Beck family.

Shefferman said he thought at the time that Beck was paying for these things out of his own funds.

In connection with the pending hearings on Shefferman, committee counsel Kennedy refused to discuss reports that the investigators would try to find out why the Teamsters Union allegedly refused on occasion to support efforts by the Retail Clerks Union to get collective bargaining contracts with firms which hired Shefferman.

Kennedy had said previously the Clerks Union rarely could win a labor dispute without Teamster backing to the extent of refusing to cross picket lines.

In three appearances before the committee, Beck has invoked the Fifth Amendment more than 200 times in refusing to answer questions about his finances and his conduct of the union presidency. He said his answers might tend to incriminate him.

Beck has said he plans to seek another five-year term, but he told newsmen Thursday he would give "serious consideration" to any demand by the union's executive board that he step down for the good of the organization.

Busy Schedule Is Set For Crusade

Evangelist Jimmie Johnson will arrive in Greenville after an unexpected delay to lead the United Crusade for Christ.

Johnson received a note of encouragement this morning in a telegram from an old friend, Evangelist Billy Graham, and Grady Wilson, who are holding a crusade in New York City.

The telegram stated, "Praying for you as you open your crusade there. May God grant you a great harvest."

The Rev. Merrill Dunlop, organizer of the Johnson team, and song leader-soloist Ralph McGilvra are arriving at different hours—Dunlop from Chicago and McGilvra from Battle Creek, Michigan.

All three are to lead the United Crusade, sponsored by the Greenville Ministerial Association, which is to begin here with a 7:30 service Sunday night at Wright auditorium on the campus of East Carolina College.

Leonard W. Topping, Crusade Central Committee chairman, and Robert B. Crawford, Ministerial Association president, expressed confidence that "We stand on the threshold of a great spiritual awakening in our area, one in which men, women, boys, and girls will find peace with God through Jesus Christ."

Every night for the next two weeks Dr. Johnson will preach in Wright auditorium. Each morning during the scheduled period at 8:45 the team will be seen and heard on television station WNCN.

"Morning Meditations" for 15 minutes. On radio station WGTC the team will originate daily "Morning Meditations" from the Eighth Street Christian Church at 9:40 a.m. Monday through Saturday.

Tomorrow's schedule includes a Union Prayer meeting at the First Presbyterian Church at 8:30 a.m. and a sermon by Dr. Johnson at 11 a.m. at the Eighth Street Christian Church, with the Rev. McGilvra singing.

The Rev. Merrill Dunlop is to preach at 11 a.m. at the St. James (Continued on Page 6)

Commencement Principals

Governor Luther H. Hodges of North Carolina and other principals at East Carolina College's Forty-eighth Annual Commencement Exercises who will participate in graduation exercises tomorrow are pictured above. Governor Hodges will address graduates at exercises Sunday morning at 11 in the Wright auditorium. President John D. Messick of the college will confer degrees on more than 600 students receiving the master of arts, the bachelor of arts, and the bachelor of science degrees. S. David Carson of Williamston, is president of the senior class. Elizabeth Ann Bowman of Liberty, chief marshal, and other marshals will lead divisions of the academic procession.

Polls Attitude On Choosing A Mayor

State Rep. Frank Wooten is seeking to determine local sentiment on the matter in which Greenville's mayor is elected.

Wooten said this morning that he had sent out letters to a number of persons asking the following questions concerning the election of mayor:

- 1. Should it be the person receiving the highest number of votes in the election?
2. A separate vote for mayor?
3. Remain as it is for the Council to decide?

The representative said he would be glad to hear from others in addition to those to whom he sent letters.

"Several persons talked to me about it last weekend and I'm trying to find out how much interest there is," Wooten said this morning.

There has been no petition received on the matter.

However, Wooten said he told those who had discussed the manner in which the mayor is elected with him that "if they presented a petition with an adequate number of names I would take some steps to carry it out."

He emphasized that he was not attempting to initiate a change in the election of the mayor.

If there is enough sentiment for a change an enabling act from the Legislature would be required to allow local citizens to vote on the new plans. Such a bill would have to be introduced by Wooten and passed by the General Assembly before the state's governing body adjourns, probably in early June.

Self-Starter, Putter-Outer

CLEARWATER, Fla. (AP)—The fire department reported a fire started in a storage way at the home of F. B. Cole—and was put out in even stranger fashion.

The report said the sun's rays shining through a clear bottle yesterday set a piece of canvas on fire on the back porch. The canvas covered a case of bottled soft drinks.

The bottles got too hot, the beverage exploded and put out the blaze.

Growers To Talk Own Corporation

FLORENCE, S.C. (AP)—A group of South Carolina tobacco growers meet in Florence today to consider setting up a tobacco stabilization Corp. for South Carolina.

The session was called by B. A. Graham of Olaneta.

The corporation would administer the price support program.

Boy Burned By Gasoline Blaze

A 10-year-old boy was severely burned on the leg yesterday evening when gasoline exploded in the garage where he and a friend were playing.

Billy Respass, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Respass, was treated at Pitt Memorial Hospital for the burns last night and returned to his home.

The boy's father said this morning that Billy and a friend were apparently playing with matches in the garage when gasoline in a container caught fire. The accident occurred at the Respass home, 1205 E. Second St., around 7 p.m.

Billy's clothing caught fire and Respass and a neighbor, Cecil Harris, caught the child to extinguish the blaze.

The garage and the Respass auto inside were in flames by that time and another neighbor, James Howard Hudson, fought the blaze with a garden hose.

Firemen who were called to the scene reported that the fire was practically extinguished when they arrived.

A doctor at the scene gave first aid to young Billy and the fire department's rescue ambulance was called to take the injured boy to the hospital.

There, he was treated for the leg burns and returned home last night.

Respass said damage to his car would run several hundred dollars. There was also considerable damage to the garage.

Voluntary Safety Check Slated May 22, 23 For Local Vehicles

The annual 10 Point Volunteer Vehicle Safety Check is to take place on Wednesday, May 22, beginning at 2 p.m. Then all day Thursday, May 23.

Headed by Badger Johnson, the Pitt County Safety Council will again act as coordinator for this volunteer activity. Working in conjunction with the council will be members of various Greenville civic clubs, the City Police Department and the State Highway Patrol.

In addition to Greenville, Johnson announced yesterday that Ayden, under the auspices of the Junior Chamber of Commerce and Farmville will also stage safety checks. The Check will be held also a half day Wednesday and all day Thursday.

The Pitt County Automotive Association will supply the mechanics who will be stationed at each one of the three lanes to be located here.

Safety Check lanes will be located near the ECC Gymnasium on 10th St., on Dickinson Avenue at the New Carolina Warehouse and at the Farmers Warehouse on the Greene St. Extension.

Johnson, in a statement this morning, said, "Our 1957 traffic record at present is an improvement over last year's record, the worst in many years. It is the sincere hope of the Pitt Safety Council that the citizens of Greenville and surrounding areas will take advantage of this opportunity to have their vehicles checked. By doing this, possibly in the future a life might be saved."

Tuesday night, May 21, has been set for a final meeting in order that volunteer workers from local civic clubs might be briefed on all procedures of the operation. The indoctrination meeting will be held in the City Courtroom commencing at 7:30 p.m.

Willie Pate will serve as vice-chairman for the project. Final plans for the 10 point safety check were made at the May 2 meeting of the Pitt Safety Council.

Officials state that the safety check lanes will be opened at 8 a.m. Thursday morning in order to check as many commercial vehicles and automobiles as possible before the work day begins. The general feeling is that a large number of vehicles will be checked Wednesday afternoon from 2 p.m. until 6 p.m.

After the owner or operator has his or her vehicle checked, mechanics or one of the lane workers will request that any defect be corrected. If the defects are corrected and the driver returns to the lane before closing time Thursday afternoon, he will be given a safety sticker designating that his vehicle has been checked and in a safe driving condition.

The Pepsi Cola Bottling Company here will furnish refreshments for each lane, its workers and drivers of vehicles being inspected.

RICHMOND, Va. (AP)—Postmaster FERGUS McREE was ordered by his physician to reduce his waistline and was placed on a 1,200-calorie-per-day diet last Monday. McREE says he has gained a pound since starting the diet.

A Masterpiece in the Flower Kingdom. The orchid is a flower of great beauty! It is recognized by horticulturists as a masterpiece in the flower kingdom, and reaches maturity only after seven years cultivation. Physical beauty is the only requirement the orchid must fulfill to assume its place in the world. It is otherwise a soulless botanical specimen. The botanist who cultivated this flower also possessed a son, and as the orchid approached maturity so also grew the child. The flower and the child were the objects of his greatest pride and affection. While his success with the orchid was certain, he failed in the greatest responsibility of his life—the training of his son. The father's failure was caused by his inability to see the all important difference between the soulless flower and the immortal soul of his son. He thought only of the physical and mental prowess of his boy and thus neglected the child's greatest potential heritage—spiritual development. He had forgotten there was a Church! He had forgotten God! The Church offers guidance and help to parents in the training of their children. Every parent and every child needs the sustaining strength of the Church.

Greenville Garden Club Wins Third Highest State Award

Mrs. J. H. B. Moore, president of the Greenville Garden Club, accepted the state award presented to the Greenville Garden Club by the Garden Clubs of North Carolina, Inc. at the awards banquet held in Winston-Salem Tuesday night.

"This is the third highest award given by the state garden club," explained Mrs. S. H. Mitchell, director of the tenth district.

She added that, "It is the first time that this district has won a state award and it is the first state award that our club has ever earned."

The award, a Powell Bowl, was given to the club in recognition of their "two years or more beautification program of Sheppard Memorial Library grounds."

The beautification program began in 1954 when a permanent committee was appointed to serve continuously through changing Garden Club administrations. A term of five years was set for completion of this project. Serving on the committee are Mrs. H. R. Rogers, chairman; Mrs. P. E. Wells, co-chairman; Mrs. Henry Rivers, Mrs. Ralph Garrett and Mrs. S. H. Mitchell, advisory committee.

The first project of the club was a plant sale in 1954 with the proceeds being used for new foundation planting. Later the club met with a Landscape Architect who drew up plans for the grounds.

The City Council agreed to do the heavy grading, remove old stumps and other debris and also to pave the new driveway and Bookmobile area. The city responded to the request of the Garden Club committee and repaired the wall, put in extra faucets and an underground water line to the future Memorial Garden, graded the lawn, and sowed grass.

In January 1956, 160 evergreens and 10 trees were planted under the supervision of the Garden Club. Only broad leaved evergreens were used because of their adaptability to this climate, ease of maintenance, and year around beauty.

In front of the building, but on the library property, water oaks and live oaks have been planted.

This beautification project is incomplete. The Greenville Garden Club still has future plans that they hope to have realized in the next few years.

According to Mrs. J. H. B. Moore, "We won this award certainly with the help of the Library Board, the City Council, newspaper, and the many other contributing persons and organizations who have helped us in many ways."

The Greenville Garden Club also received a Certificate of Honor for outstanding service from the Garden Clubs of North Carolina, Inc.

Members who attended the two-day convention in Winston-Salem were Mrs. J. H. B. Moore, Mrs. S. H. Mitchell, Mrs. M. L. Wright, and Mrs. H. G. Williams.

Waldrop, Watts Families Honored At Dinner Party

Dinner was served to the Waldrop and Watts families Thursday evening in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Luther D. Moore. Mr. and Mrs. Moore honored the families prior to the marriage of Mary Ann Waldrop and Lawrence Watts, which will be held in the St. James Methodist Church tonight.

Throughout the house there were arrangements of fresh spring flowers.

In the dining room the table was covered with an embroidered cutwork and Venetian lace cloth over green. The centerpiece was a tiered nosegay arrangement of tiny pink roses with pink and green Baby's Breath bordered with a ruffle of flesh tulle. On the server was Madonna lilies and double pink larkspur.

Tomato juice cocktails preceded the dinner which was served to the guests as they arrived. Mr. Moore and his daughter, Ann, served the fruit molded salad made up of fresh strawberries, melon balls and other fruits. Hot casseroles of asparagus and peas, parsley, potatoes, watermelon rind pickles and hot rolls were passed.

For dessert the hostess served green meringues filled with strawberry ice cream and demitasse coffee.

'Hypnotism Is Art' Explains Gus Manos

The Sappho Book Club held its regular meeting at the home of Mrs. W. T. Smith on Tuesday afternoon.

Upon arrival the members and guest were served a sweet course. Mrs. Smith's home was decorated with mixed spring flowers.

After the business meeting Mrs. E. K. Willis introduced Gus Manos, East Carolina student, who gave a program on Hypnotism.

Manos briefly explained this art and stated that it had been in existence since the beginning of time, but records have been kept on it since the 17th century.

"The word hypnotism comes from a Greek word meaning sleep. The art is used in medicine by doctors, dentists and psychiatrists. It can be used to break bad habits and also to help a person lose or gain weight," he noted. Manos used a subject to demonstrate the art of Hypnotism.

In closing, the speaker mentioned that "Hypnotism was definitely a scientific art."

Books were exchanged before adjournment.

Short End Of The Stick.... Again

Taxpayers in cities and towns of North Carolina are again getting the short end of the stick from the hands of the legislature. In the words of some veteran observers, these taxpayers who live within the corporate limits of municipalities have again been "sold down the river" by the boys who gather in Raleigh every two years.

The important tax revision plan of the study commission and Governor Hodges had the approval and

A 'Bootstrap Effort' Denied To Tar Heels

There is little hope now that 60,000 workers in North Carolina will get the benefit of a 75-cent an hour minimum wage law—at least so far as this legislative session is concerned.

There can be little hope that the state will appreciably raise its per capita income unless and until the General Assembly sees fit to adopt a realistic minimum wage law. There is little hope that the people of the state can benefit from a better economic position until their elected representatives in the legislature are willing to shoulder the responsibility to provide means whereby this better economic status can be had.

If members of the legislature are conscientiously interested in the welfare of the people of North Carolina, they will not allow the rare maneuver employed by the House Committee on Manufacturing and Labor to spell death to the important minimum wage bill. Opponents of the bill succeeded in virtually killing the bill in this committee by tabling it. The only way it can be revived is by a two-thirds vote in the House to bring the bill to the floor.

The two-thirds vote should be forthcoming to bring the bill before the House. Members of that body should debate the measure and then enact the 75-cent-an-hour minimum wage bill into law without riddling it with exceptions.

Unless and until North Carolina's General Assembly takes a realistic view of the state's economic needs, and is willing to enact legislation which will help meet those needs, the state cannot expect to realize its economic potential. The people of the state cannot expect to enjoy a per capita income on a par with the citizens of other states.

The 75 cents minimum wage is a major step toward raising the economic status of the people of North Carolina by our own bootstraps. Members of the legislature unfortunately have not risen to meet the challenge which is before them and before the people of the state.

They still have time to do so if they will. But will they?

Lesson: Don't Rely On Looks

By ELMER ROESSNER

The young man who had just driven across the country with his wife and two children said he was going to establish a highway restaurant and motel. "I figure that if some of the joints we stopped at can get by, one properly managed could make a fortune."

We asked him to explain. "One restaurant we stopped at for lunch had about one hundred tables, but there was only one other party there," he said. "It had a big menu, but the only thing ready was spaghetti. With some advertising and service, it could do ten times as much business."

"Another place looked swell, but it had only four tables, although there was a big vacant room in back where the owners could put a dozen more. We stopped at a tourist home one night and the rooms were jammed with old furniture. If the owners threw out most of that junk and put in a few comfortable, modern beds it could be full every night."

NO ROOM AT THE INN.

"We stopped at another motel one night and the manager said they had no room. I pointed out that half the apartments were vacant and he said he hadn't had time to clean them. Can you imagine that? If that's the way the highway business is run in this country, there's a wonderful opportunity for a smart fellow like me."

"Son," I said, "maybe you aren't as smart as you'd like to be. I've traveled around a bit and I recognize those types of places."

"That empty restaurant is probably a night-time joint, probably packed to the ventilators after dark. It may go through the motions of opening for lunch because of some provision in its lease or license, because it gets an occasional club meet at noon, or because it gets a crowd on Saturdays and Sundays.

"I can't be sure about the swell place with the big vacant room, but my guess is that it is just outside of town, or just across some county line and that at night the room is filled with crap and card tables and eager players."

SUSPECT ACCOMMODATIONS

"That place with all the old futulure sounds like a rural version of the stuffed flat. If you had asked the owners about the furniture they would have told you it had been in their family for generations. If you thought you had discovered some rare antique, they would have sold it to you—with seeming reluctance and at about twice what it was worth."

"That other place—that too, was just outside a big city, wasn't it? It never has room for couples with children. They are only for city playboys who will pay big prices for places for parties out where there is no chance they'll run into their wives or their ministers. Son, each of those places probably makes more money than you could by working sixteen hours a day running a nice quiet motel and coffee shop."

12,000,000 DWELLINGS FOUND TO NEED PAINT

The "spruce UP-It's Spring" campaigners have come up with a disturbing fact: a survey shows that 12,000,000 or more American homes have not been painted on the outside in from six to 12 years.

endorsement of the N. C. League of Municipalities. Under initial recommendations the full amount of intangible tax collections would go back to counties and cities-towns. The base change in schedule B taxes would give municipalities a larger share in those tax revenues. There were also the proposals for allowing municipalities to charge up to $10 for license tags and levy a $10 right to work tax on each person employed within their corporate limits.

The Reflector opposed these latter two measures and we think the state as a whole is better off that they have been killed. But the legislature likewise voted down the change in the base for privilege licenses and reduced the local government share of intangible tax revenues.

When cities and towns sought to recoup their losses by asking a larger share in highway funds under the Powell Bill they were given a flat "No."

So instead of getting more by the overall tax revision, municipalities will be getting less. At the same time the taxpayers who live in municipalities will continue paying for rural roads with their gasoline tax. But only such part of this revenue as the legislature sees fit will be returned to cities and towns to help maintain public roads within corporate limits.

Municipal taxpayers will continue to pay general funds taxes to the state to provide school bus transportation for children in rural areas—but their own children are ineligible for transportation to school because they live within the corporate limits of a city or town.

If industrial development is to come in North Carolina, taxpayers of cities and towns will have to foot the bill for extending water and sewer lines to these plants. They will have to pay taxes to provide recreation areas and other facilities which will help attract industries.

These things must be done in spite of the fact that most municipalities already are finding themselves close to the end of their financial rope. Municipal tax rates have moved upward to provide more services for more citizens while sources of municipal revenues are being reduced rather than expanded.

The legislature should give more consideration to the difficult financial situation which is confronting the vast majority of North Carolina's cities and towns.

No Half-Steps Appear Wanted

By LYNN NISBET

SEX CRIMES—The only thing the House State Government committee did not like about Rep. Frank Snepp's bill calling for a study of sex crimes, was that it probably did not go far enough. As explained by Rep. Snepp the primary purpose of the commission would be to study conditions, make recommendations for improving the laws dealing with crimes against nature and other sex deviations.

He said there had been no material change in the North Carolina laws on this problem since 1869, when the death penalty was removed and a maximum 60 year sentence substituted. Comparison with other states disclose that penalties range all the way from a 90-day maximum down to a one-day maximum in New York.

Members of the committee indicated by questions and statements they thought the base of study should be broadened to include such matters as whether medical or psychiatric treatment is worth while, whether incarceration of offenders should be in special prisons or in mental institutions, and related problems.

The incidence of this type of offense against society has grown and is becoming more perplexing every day, the committee was told. The tragic feature is that many of the offenders come from the highest levels of intelligence and culture.

Bills introduced last session by Rep. Arthur Goodman of Mecklenburg designed to curb the crimes were defeated, largely because of the tremendous coast involved in providing treatment facilities which he proposed. That is another feature the present committee thinks should be studied—whether the State can or should go all out in efforts to deal with this problem on humanitarian and scientific bases.

PUBLICITY—Admittedly one of the handicaps in reaching a solution of the problem is the reluctance of "nice" people to recognize it or talk about it in public. There are many people who believed the first step toward control of any problem is full publicity about it. Fifty years ago it was common practice if a member of a family developed "consumption" (only the highly educated then called it tuberculosis) the family went to almost desperate lengths to keep the secret.

Within a few years after publicity brought the tubercle germs into the sunlight there was definite urn toward victory in the war on the Great White Plague.

The almost phenomenal progress in control of venereal disease dates from the time the word "syphilis" was taken from the back pages of the dictionary and put on the front pages of newspapers some 30 years ago. When publicity is given to the incidents of sex deviation and to the fact that present laws dealing with the problem have not been materially changed since the Elizabethan era 300 years back, the public may be aroused to the point of taking intelligent action.

MORE PUBLICITY—The same legislative committee which discussed the sex crime study devoted a good bit of time to a reorganization commission bill revamping the Building Code Council set-up. Most of the argument was whether to authorize publication and distribution of the 1953 Building Code, which was designated as the law until the new Council adopts another code. Several members thought the expense of printing not justified. Rep. Ed Yarborough of Franklin insisted that "if it is the law enacted by the General Assembly, it ought to be available in State offices, county courthouses and city halls throughout the state."

IN THE DARK—The fact is that many public officials and thousands of law-abiding citizens often violate the laws because they are not aware that new laws or regulations have been adopted. Majority of the laws enacted by the General Assembly read that they shall be in full force and effect from and after ratification. That means the act becomes law the minute it has been signed by the presiding officer in the House and Senate. It further means that many acts which are legal at 10:30 on a given day are illegal by 10:40 of that same day.

All laws enacted by the General Assembly eventually are published in a gib book, but in most instances the laws have been in effect months before they are published. Then the Legislature delegates law making powers to about a dozen commissions—Agriculture, Conservation, Education, Health, Highway, Motor Vehicles, Revenue, Wildlife, etc. Ordinances adopted by these boards have the force and effect of law. Until five or six years ago there was no requirement that any of these ordinances be published or filed in county courthouses. There is requirement for filing and posting now.

The dictum of Rep. Yarborough that "if it is the law, it ought to be available in public places" for the guidance of citizens seems to make good sense.

Strength For Today

By EARL L. DOUGLASS
THE MCGUFFY READERS

Everyone knows the influence the McGuffey Readers had on a whole generation of boys and girls now grown to maturity and beyond. There is no moral force in modern life which can compare with the influence these readers exerted over the minds of boys and girls a few years ago.

The story is told that when McGuffey was a youngster, he was by no means a paragon of virtue. One day he heard a venerable minister praying for boys and girls. In fact, young McGuffey, for some reason or another, happened to be in the clergyman's yard, and through an open window could hear the old gentleman's sonorous voice as he prayed earnestly that the boys and girls of that generation would grow up a credit to God and their country. It greatly impressed the mischievous young McGuffey. He was suddenly awakened to the realization that the older people are not always ogres and that there was one man at least who was actually concerned lest bad boys grow to be bad men.

Great issues hang on small details. The venerable clergyman, praying that boys and girls be strengthened in the living of a good life, did not know that right outside his window God had placed a small boy who knew by experience the things which were upon the minister's heart. God was later to use that boy for the answering of the old man's prayer.

No Nickel; Shoe-Retriever

A press car was parked in front of the Reflector office the other day, two fresh copies of the newspaper on its front seat.

A respectable looking gentleman happened along. He peered into the locked front door and then turned to leave.

Then he spotted the newspapers on the front seat of the car. He reached through the window, picked them up and read the headlines. He separated the two papers, tossed one back in the auto, tucked the other one under his arm. The stranger then walked to his car and drove off. The press car, incidentally, was mine. My friend didn't even leave a nickel for the paper.

Officer J. L. Kerr was pondering his beat around Five Points yesterday.

"Hey," a feminine voice said as he prepared to cross the street.

Officer Kerr looked around. There stood a sweet young thing delicately balanced on one foot. "Did you say 'hey' to me?" the officer asked.

"Yes," said the young lady, who, Kerr noticed by this time, was missing one shoe.

"I lost a shoe down the storm drain," she said.

Kerr went to a nearby store obtained a clothes hanger and retrieved the shoe from the catch basin.

The young lady quickly donned the shoe, smilingly thanked the officer and was on her way.

Remember that metal box just outside the front door of the new telephone building?

Got a telephone call from someone at the telephone office whose name and phone number I've lost.

"If you learn something on your own you'll remember it longer," my caller said. "Take another look in that box and then if you don't know what it is call me and I'll tell you."

I hot footed it on down to the telephone building and breathlessly opened the little metal door.

Those of you who read this column twice in a row remember that last time I looked, there was nothing inside. This time—surprise—a wall type telephone was mounted within.

In the office some of the employees explained that the phone will be used when telephone operators are moved to the new building.

It seems the front door is locked after a certain hour in the evening. When an operator comes on duty she will pick up the phone give her name and a certain code number to the powers that be within and the door will be unlocked automatically.

An amazing world.

Other Editors Saying--- Dilemma of GOP

(Barnesville, Ohio, Enterprise)

Barney Eisenhower's older brother, Edgar, a Tacoma lawyer, added his voice last week to the swelling chorus against the $17.8 billion budget, that was handed to Congress. Expressing concern over the "tremendous expenditures" of government which he thinks are strifling ambition. Lawyer Eisenhower remarked: "I'd sure like to discover what influences are at work on my brother in view of the fact that his campaign promises and speeches were for decreased government spending."

Within a few days, according to reports, Washington lapels which once displayed "I Like Ike" buttons broke out with a revised version. The buttons read: "I Like Edgar."

The humorous incident is one of many that illustrate the dilemma in which many who call themselves Republican find themselves today.

It is similar to the dilemma that many Democrats faced during the New Deal days when FDR took off in exactly the opposite direction from his campaign speeches and much of his party platform.

If Republicans today, notably Senator Barry Goldwater of Arizona, are saying about their party what Republicans were saying 20 years ago about the Democrats, there is plenty of reason.

Except for seeking to make political apital out of the dangerous issue of "class hatred," there isn't a great deal of difference between the "Modern Republicanism" of 1957 and the "New Deal" of 1937.

Many who welcomed the "modern Republicanism" first outlined by the President in his acceptance speech at San Francisco last year as progressive conservatism, now find that it is so much like New Dealism that, like brother Edgar, they are wondering "what influences are at work" on a Republican president.

Senator Goldwater, warm friend of the President and chairman of the Senatorial Campaign Committee last time, also mentioned a "strange and mysterious force" as having gripped the Eisenhower administration which he thinks is headed toward "squadster government."

The Democrats found that their donkey was a two-headed animal headed in different directions. Now Republicans find that the elephant is the same kind of monstrosity.

Back in the New Deal days, a former Democratic chief justice, Hugh Nichols, congratulated Republican Governor John Bricker on making what Justice Nichols called "a good Democratic speech." Bricker's reply was: "Somebody has to do it."

The lack of meaning of party tags such as "Republican" and "Democrat" was in evidence that far back. Such issues as the tariff and sound money, which once differentiated the two major parties, were dead and buried.

Henry Hopkins blurted out the new idea: "Tax and tax, spend and spend, elect and elect." Hopkins is dead, but his blurt goes marching on.

Most Republicans and a great many Democrats didn't like it then. And they don't like it now.

Opinions In Brief

"When the taxpayer read the other day that the government is now paying only $10 each for wastebaskets for executives, instead of $27 which it paid last year, he was so pathetically grateful for this consideration of him that he broke down and wept a little."—Nanty-Glo (Pa.) Journal.

BASSETT, NEBR., LEADER: "At the present time with the greatest prosperity our nation has ever known nothing is being done to reduce our national debt, but rather the spending is at an accelerated rate. It is said the high rate of taxation is a curb to inflation. Perhaps it is, but for our money we would prefer to see some of that money used to retire the national debt rather than spend on 'programs'."

Away From It All

By W. G. ROGERS

NEW YORK (AP)—Renata Tebaldi repeated my question: "What will I do on vacation?" and then answered: "I will not think of newspapers or be bothered by newspapermen."

But she smiled when she said it, and went on: "It will be fun not to have a telephone to answer, not to have to keep appointments with dressmaker or lawyer, or for rehearsals."

"I will not have to be on trains. I will not have to water the watch" tapping her wrist where at the moment, in the hotel apartment in which she lives during the New York season, she had no watch at all.

It is nearly vacation time for singers, though not quite for Miss Tebaldi. Now on tour with the Metropolitan, her first cross-country trip with it too, she appears in 13 performances, mostly before audiences that have not heard her famous voice before.

Isn't 13 unlucky? "Not for me," she said. "I don't like 17, though. I am of course superstitious."

She travels with a basketful of stuffed animals and dolls, made by Lenci in her native Italy, and usually strings a dozen of them up across the top of her dressing room at the opera house.

She is always accompanied by her mother, here and in other American cities, at her home in Milan, at her place in the country, on vacation, on shopping trips. On tour Miss Tebaldi's mother spends much of her time hunting through local markets for the foods she knows her daughter likes, and whenever they can manage, even if it is only on a hotplate, she cooks for the singer.

Will Miss Tebaldi read? Not on vacation.

Will she sew or knit? No time for that.

Go to dances? She likes to watch, and according to her pretty secretary and companion, Linda Barone, "she is a very good dancer," but she doesn't indulge in it much now.

Go for walks? Yes.

Lie abed in the morning? Ah, that, yes!

A couple of years ago when I first talked to her, she had hardly mastered a "yes" or "no" in English, but now, "learning by ear," she said, she understands most of what she hears and can speak for herself on most occasions. For sticklers Miss Barone, who learned her fluent English in Florence, is always at hand to help.

"When I sing, I see people all the time, at the opera, at parties, and so when vacation comes I like to be by myself."

"I love to go to department stores," she said, "even when I can't buy anything. I am too big. The sizes are not right."

Miss Tebaldi is in fact a lot of woman, as audiences see almost as quickly as they hear, she is a lot of voice. Her fingers are long, pointed, expressive, graceful. Her jet black hair brings out the pallor of her face, as though she needed a vacation.

In repose her features, though they are as beautiful as her singing, never relax or seem severe. It is as if she never really got her mind off such serious and hallowed things as her music. Yet when she does relax, and break into a smile, it's as lively and interested as a child's.

"I'm tired after I sing," she said. "I'd like to go home and have a small supper and get into bed. But on tour there will be parties, and here there are always a dozen or more gathered around my dressing room after the last curtain, and then perhaps 50, or several times as many asking for autographs on the walk outside. I like to sign for them."

After her summer in the mountains when her work will be only to prepare two recordings for the fall, she will be back here to open the Chicago season, and then come to the Met for the rest of the calendar year.

After that there will be Spain, Austria, Florence, Maggio Musicale, another restful summer and then Caracas—that accounts for her next 15 months.

Miss Tebaldi made her Met debut as Desdemona in January, 1955. Perhaps her most popular interpretations have been in "Traviata," "Boheme" and "Tosca."

Businessmen's Cabinet On Trial

By RAY TUCKER

WASHINGTON—"Why are so many businessmen planning to resign from the Cabinet?" inquires Mrs. T.G. of Sandusky, O. "Won't their departure hurt President Eisenhower in his second term, which has not started out too well because of opposition to his program among so many Republicans in Congress and elsewhere?"

Answer: Yes, Ike's Administration will suffer, if men like Humphrey, Wilson, Dulles and Benson carry out reported plans to resign at the end of the current session of Congress. Although they have incurred considerable criticism on and off Capitol Hill, satisfactory replacements will be hard to find.

BUSINESSMEN, INDUSTRIALISTS REFUSE HIGH GOVERNMENT JOBS In fact, the President has received many refusals from prominent businessmen and industrialists in his effort to find substitutes. As a result, he has had to shift and promote men in a musical chairs sort of manner.

AN ASPECT THAT HAS BEEN OVERLOOKED There is an aspect to these possible resignations which has been generally overlooked. Namely, it is not Ike or his Administration which are on trial so much as the members of his so-called "businessmen's Cabinet." Compelling reasons may force some of them to retire after five years of public service, but in a certain sense they are throwing up their hands and their responsibilities.

A principal criticism brought by businessmen against Roosevelt and Truman were that they were nothing but politicians, and that, with only a few exceptions, they filled important posts with politicians. It was pointed out constantly that only a few of them had ever managed a private business, met a payroll or had to worry over profits and losses.

There are demands that the operation of the government be turned over to hard-headed, sensible and practical men, men who had demonstrated their business acumen in the economic, executive and managerial fields.

Ike accepted this challenge, and he has frequently boasted that he chose "the brains of the nation" as his advisers. He gave them the chance that has been demanded. In a way, he placed businessmen on trial and probation.

Now, it appears that they are running out on him, and on the responsibilities they assumed. It may be accepted that the politicians they criticized and scorned are better equipped for public service than they are.

ASSETS OF POLITICIAN Having observed both kinds for many years, the politician does possess certain assets which men like Dulles, Wilson, Humphrey and Benson lack.

Business executives are usually minor czars in their firms. When they give an order, it must be obeyed, or the offender can be fired. On major policies, he has only to convince a small board of directors. He has laboratories in which he can experiment without causing great damage, if his theories are erroneous.

In politics, however, he must yield, he must compromise, he must "suffer fools gladly." He cannot chastise; he can simply criticize. He must sell his wares and theories to the vast American public and to an always sensitive Congress. He must bear up under insults. He must be tough, patient, good-natured, sometimes spectacular, and at all times an extravert.

It may be that successful businessmen do not—cannot—make successful managers of government. And that's the public verdict.

Phants Whip Kinston 7-1 To Finish Second In Loop

Staton Pitches Four-Hit Ball To Beat Red Devils

KINSTON — Greenville high school trounced number-one-ranked Kinston 7-1 here last night to earn a second-place tie with New Bern in the final Northeastern Conference standings.

Charles Staton, a chunky fireball artist, hurled four-hit ball for the Phants to receive credit for the victory. He went the full seven innings, struck out three and walked three. Coach Boley Farley called it, "his best performance of the year."

The 7-1 victory last night finished the season for the G-Men and gave them a final 8-4 Northeastern Conference record. New Bern defeated Roanoke Rapids 7-3 yesterday also to give the Bears a 8-4 mark also. Both Greenville and New Bern are tied for the position.

Coach Farley stated today, "This has been our most successful season in about five years. Our boys have played good ball, even though I have been a little disappointed in the hitting."

Early GHS Lead
Greenville grabbed an early lead in the game in the second inning, pushing across three runs. Kinston was unable to score until the fourth stanza.

Joe Wingate led off in the second inning, getting on first on an error by the first baseman. He then stole second. Dick Evans singled sharply into shallow centerfield. Angus Duff cracked one at the pitcher, who picked up the ball and threw wildly into rightfield. Wingate and Evans scored and Duff went into third. A single by Charlie Smith scored Duff. Greenville was ahead 3-1.

Before the Phants could score again, Kinston tallied their only run of the game. Dave Adkins punched out a single and scored on a double by third baseman Cutler. Staton had no more trouble from the host team after that.

More Scores
In the sixth inning, Greenville racked up another run on two hits and a pass ball. In the seventh and last frame, Duff went to first on a walk and pitcher Staton followed on an error by the third baseman. Charlie Smith loaded the bases with an infield single. Kinston hurler Taylor walked on one run. Walker Allen got on on a fielder's choice, when Staton was thrown out at home. A hit by Billy Cox brought in Smith and Edwards.

In 12 games, Greenville lost only to Kinston, Washington, Roanoke Rapids and Elizabeth City this season. Farley, who blames bad hitting as cause of three of those losses, states "We should have won all of our games this year except one. Elizabeth City beat us thoroughly."

Only four boys from this year's squad will be lost by graduation and Farley is already looking forward to another good year in 1958. Those leaving will be Hudson Miller, Joe Wingate, Charlie Smith and Angus Duff.

Would Like To See Giardello Fight Robinson

CLEVELAND (AP)—Middleweight champion Ray Robinson's manager would "like to see Giardello in the ring with Sugar Ray."

George Gainford, Robinson's manager, said that last night in the arena dressing room of Joey Giardello minutes after the Brooklyn Italian had beaten Rory Calhoun on a split decision in a 10-rounder.

With welterweight king Carmen Basilio in line for a crack at Robinson next, there probably will be at least a six-month interval before the opportunity Giardello made for himself last night will materialize.

It was an opportunity that the Georgia-born Calhoun of White Plains, N. Y., had been nurturing for some months.

Accumulating a point edge in the early rounds, Giardello staved off the powerful Calhoun's bid for a knockout in the closing stanzas to become the second fighter who has vanquished Calhoun. The 22-year-old slugger had won 14 of 27 previous fights by knockouts and been set back only once in his three-year career.

Giardello, who will be 27 in July and has been fighting professionally since 1948, used his experience to good advantage against the harder punching Calhoun. At 160, Joey had a two-pound weight advantage.

"Maybe I should have boxed him a little more than I did," Joey said afterward. He thought he had won seven rounds.

Referee Lou Parker scored it for Calhoun 46-45, with five rounds for Calhoun, four for Giardello and one even. Judge Charlie Bill had it favoring Joey 46-45, with the rounds 5-4-1, and Judge Herb Williams saw Giardello ahead 47-45 and the rounds 5-3-2. The AP's 47-43 for Giardello gave him seven rounds to Calhoun's three.

There were no knockdowns, although Calhoun lost his balance and went down in the first and third rounds. Giardello missed with a hard punch in the 10th and went tumbling.

Both fighters were bleeding from face cuts before it was over.

Kiwanis Team Takes 3-0 Victory Friday

In yesterday's North State Little League baseball game at Elm Street Park, the Kiwanis Club topped the Jaycees 3-0 in a tight contest that went scoreless until the fifth inning.

Conway hurled one-hit ball for the winning Kiwanis outfit, striking out eight batters, walking two pitchers. The Jaycees used two pitchers. Hardee started and went for the greater part of five innings, until he was relieved by Vincent. Vincent came in with the bases loaded and nobody out. It was Hardee's loss.

The Kiwanis crew rapped out four hits, two of them being instrumental in scoring the winning runs.

After four scoreless innings, the Kiwanis pushed across three runs for the victory. Nobles walked and moved to second on a single by Ross. Manning then walked, loading the bases. All three scored on a hit by Hemby and an error by the Jaycee first baseman.

NEW YORK (AP)—Posted on the bulletin board in the Detroit Tigers' dressing room at Yankee Stadium last night was the following notice:

"All those who wish to attend Hoeft's birthday party tonight at the Copa sign below. Special curfew 4 a.m. Bring brass knuckles." This, of course, was anything but a subtle reference to the Yankee party for Billy Martin which wound up Thursday morning with Hank Bauer allegedly punching a heckler from an adjoining table.

Tiger Manager Still Waiting
NEW YORK (AP)—After one month as a major league manager, Jack Tighe of Detroit still is waiting for his Tiger pitching staff to straighten out.

"Our pitching has been holding us back, despite some great work by young fellows like Duke Maas and Jim Bunning. The infield is fine and we're hitting okay but the pitching has me a little worried. If our second line pitching holds up, we'll be tough. Otherwise we're in trouble."

Belgium, Denmark, France and Mexico also were only one match each away from victory and a third round berth in the European Zone, in which Italy is favored to repeat as champion. The Italians meet the Netherlands in the second round.

Belgium won both singles matches from Hungary yesterday as did Denmark against South Africa, France over Czechoslovakia and Mexico against West Germany.

French Aircraft Aid Diplomacy

BORDEAUX, FRANCE (AP)—France is using her booming aircraft industry as a weapon of diplomacy.

Through shrewd sales, industry leaders in this manufacturing center believe France has won several victories. They assert that Indian opposition to French actions in Suez and North Africa has softened as a result of aviation deals.

Officials of the Marcel Dassault factory received word this week that the first 24 of a 100 plane order of near-supersonic Mystere IV fighters have gone into service in India.

India paid $257,000 apiece for these planes, used in combat during the Israeli-Sinai campaign. The Indian government, France's largest customer, had already bought 150 Mystere IV's, and 100 Ouragans, the first jet fighter built in France.

The Mystere IV's now flying in India can climb to 40,000 feet from a standstill in 11 minutes; the "supers" do it in 5.

Company officials are negotiating to sell the super - Mystere to South Africa. Circumstances there are somewhat similar to those which helped facilitate the sale to India — both countries want to minimize dependence on Britain.

Child Clinic Has Answers For Parents And Teachers

Why can't lively, bright-eyed child's difficulties and ways of the college "fully trained to pro- Sam read as well as his class- helping him meet or overcome vide the services needed by the exceptional child." Dr. Adams stated this week. Six Greenville physicians—three pediatricians and three specialists in disorders of ear, eye, nose, and throat—months as details of organization operate with the college teachers and procedure have been worked in out. It is now ready for full-scale operations.

AT CLINIC—Those working in East Carolina College's Child Clinic give the youngster, who is brought to them for help and advice the benefit of their training and experience as psychologists and educators. Dr. Clinton Prewett of the psychology department and a student exercise their powers of concentration as the young man takes an intelligence test.

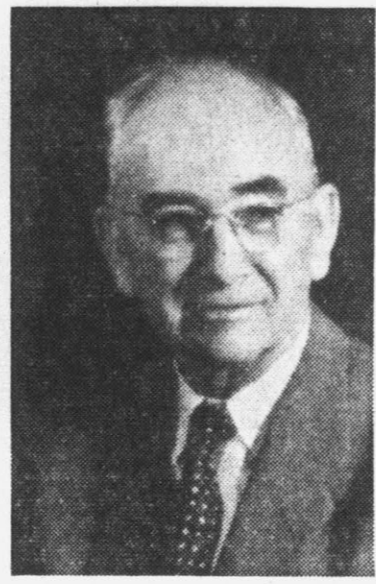

HEARING—The little girl in the photograph takes a hearing test. Dr. Frances V. Henry, professor of special education at East Carolina College, is at the audiometer. Hearing tests are given to children who visit the college Child Care Clinic.

INTELLIGENCE TEST—Dr. Hazel Taylor of the East Carolina department of psychology looks on as a child works on the form board in taking an intelligence test. Dr. Taylor, director of testing at the college, administers intelligence tests at the East Carolina Child Clinic.

ial education; and Dr. Woodrow Flanary, who is associated with the East Carolina College Reading Laboratory and Clinic. Cooperating specialists in Greenville include Dr. Malene Irons, Dr. G. Earl Trevathan, Jr., and Dr. F.B. Haar, pediatricians; and Dr. W.M.B. Brown, Dr. E.W. Larkin, Jr., and Dr. M.P. Hoot, ear, eye, nose and throat specialists. "The purpose of the clinic," Dr. Adams stated, "is, in educational terminology, to provide 'maximum development of the child under optimum conditions' or, in layman's phrase, to help the child with his problems." So far, he said, work has been mainly with children in elementary schools, but the clinic is prepared to assist both younger and older children. The child and the clinicians meet each other by appointment and through the efforts largely of parents or teachers, or both, he explained. Preliminary information indicating the problems involved comes from these adults seeking help for the child. The work of the clinic then begins.

DR. CARL L. ADAMS . . . heads clinic

Making an inventory of the child, the first step, is handled by Dr. Adams. Personal data giving an idea of the child's home background, his experiences, and his difficulties in school are supplied by teacher or parents. Testing of the child then begins. The procedure is thorough. Intelligence tests; tests of emotional balance; reading tests; tests of dominance and laterality; and tests of hearing, speech, and vision are included among those providing necessary information. "Suppose," he said, "testing indicates that the child has a defect of hearing. The suggestion is made to those who brought the child to the clinic that examination by a competent physician is needed. Whether or not the suggestion is taken and what physician is consulted is left, of course, entirely to the judgment of those in charge of the child." A staff conference of the East Carolina clinicians follows. Dr. Adams explained, "This meeting gives us a well-rounded picture of the child and his difficulties," he continued, "and provides opportunity for discussion of what help should be provided." Conferences with teacher or parents follows. Here results of testing and medical examination are presented. Suggestions of ways in which the child may receive help in attaining "maximum development under optimum conditions" are made. New insight into the child's difficulties and their causes and practical suggestions of ways to help him meet or overcome his problems are the aim of these talks. Modern education, Dr. Adams stated, places emphasis on the child and his development into a happy and useful member of society. For some children few problems are involved, he said; for other, the difficulties are great. "It is to help these others, the exceptional children, that East Carolina College has established its child clinic. Each child should have the opportunity of realizing his full capabilities. All of us who are associated with the clinic wish to use our specialized training and our experience to make better lives for young people."

By WILLIAM B. HARWOOD BALTIMORE, May 18 (AP)—The public got a look today at a model of a portable atomic power plant scheduled for production after final tests late this year. Developed over the past two years by the Martin Co., the Martin Power Reactor (MPR) model was shown off at an Armed Forces Week open house at the firm's Middle River plant. Total cost of the MPR will be 2 1/2 million dollars. It will come in eight packages easily transportable by plane, ship or train to any place in the world. Thomas Sisk, operations manager for MPR, said delivery will be guaranteed 18 to 24 months after the final tests are completed, probably in the fall. The portable power plant will produce eight megawatts of heat and turn out 1,300 kilowatts—enough electricity to supply a military installation or a town of 2,500 people for 18 months without refueling. Over that period of time, the MPR will burn 5 1/2 kilograms—about 12 pounds—of enriched uranium. That's the heat equivalent of 2 1/2 million gallons of oil in a conventional power plant of comparable output. Although similar—in its intended use—to the U. S. Army package power reactor (APPR) put into operation at Ft. Belvoir, Va., last month, the Martin power plant will be about one fifth the size and weight of the APPR, which totals about 560 tons without the heavy shielding required at its present installation. The Belvoir unit, however, is a pilot operation designed primarily for training purposes. Total weight of the MPR would be about 100 tons. Minimum shipping weight of any one of the eight packages would be about 30,000 pounds, within the 35,000-pound load-carrying capacity of currently operating C124 or C130 Air Force cargo planes. The advantage of this portable nuclear power plant is that it can be transported easily—eight airplanes would carry the complete works—to any remote, power-starved area of the world.

Another Nationwide Alert Test For July

BATTLE CREEK, Mich. — The fourth nationwide civil defense Operation Alert will be held in mid-July this year. Operation Alert 1957 differs from the three previous annual training exercises in that details of the simulated attack on the United States will become known at the national civil defense level only as they are reported from local offices. Civil defense directors in target cities will each receive a sealed envelop on the morning of the "attack," giving them for the first time the number, size and ground-zeros of the simulated bomb strikes in their localities. In past years, the exact attack pattern was known months in advance. The change was made to stimulate more realistically the situation that would exist in an actual attack. The 1957 Alert, involving simulated nuclear bombs from 20,000 to 20,000,000 tons TNT equivalent, is scheduled in three phases as follows: July 8-12 — Preparation and rehearsing of local civil defense "survival" measures to be taken later. July 12-14 — Assumed nuclear attacks on the United States beginning at 11 a.m. (EST) on July 12. A period of attack reports and reports of local survival measures taken will continue until 6 p.m. (EST) on July 14. July 15-19 — Federal agencies will follow through to meet demands for help reported during and after the attack period, starting at 8 a.m. (EST) July 15 until noon (EST) of July 19. Operation Alert 1957 also will differ from last year's exercise by putting on an emergency footing only those Federal agencies which would be directly concerned with national survival. Last year all Federal agencies were involved. Federal Civil Defense Administration officials emphasize that, as in the past, targets chosen for the hypothetical nuclear attack do not represent either an estimate of enemy capability or a likely national attack pattern. Stolen Chickens Just Accumulate PARIS, TEX. (AP) — Officers had a problem after arresting six juveniles and recovering 30 stolen chickens. "They sold them, swapped them and gave them away," said Deputy Sheriff Bud Street. "We keep finding more stolen chickens and we can't tell who they belong to." Bureaucracy Has A Devious Way DAYTON, Ohio (AP) — Here's one for those who like to ponder the devious ways of bureaucracy: On a Dayton street corner stand two mail boxes, one sternly labeled "out of town mail" the other "local mail." Three times daily a mail truck pulls up and the driver casually empties both boxes into the same bag.

RORSCHACK TEST—Dr. Judson White, member of the faculty of the East Carolina College psychology department, administers the Rorschach Test for Personality Adjustment to a child. The test is one of those used in studying the needs of children at the East Carolina College Child Clinic.

TELEBINOCULAR TEST— If a child visiting the East Carolina Child Clinic has reading difficulties, an effort is made to determine why. Here Dr. Woodrow Flanary of the Clinic staff, professor of education at the college, gives a youngster a telebinocular test.

Sandhills Section Boasts Big Share Of Tar Heel Tourist And Vacation Allures

(Editor's Note: Another in the series of articles on North Carolina vacation spots.) By PEGGY SMITH Reflector Staff Writer In the fragrant long leaf pine country of North Carolina, Southern Pines is as inviting a vacationland as it is a friendly community. The famous Sandhills section is a unique little paradise—an outcropping of white sandy soil studded with pine forests, with mild climate and dry invigorating air. There one will find every opportunity for enjoying healthful outdoor living, year-round sports, pleasant relaxation and a wide variety of cultural and social activities. Many visitors have also discovered that Southern Pines is the ideal spot for retirement living. Golf is a favorite year-round sport at Southern Pines and its neighbor Pinehurst. There are eight golf courses between the two cities which were designed by Donald Ross, who came to Pinehurst from his native Scotland in 1895 and lived to become the country's greatest golf course architect. Sporty velvety greens, smart country clubs and fine driving ranges are part of the golfing picture in the beautiful Sandhills. Southern Pines is famous for its riding horses and fine stables, and the Sandhills have become the winter horse training capital of America. Riders enjoy miles of bridle paths through forests of pine and fox hunting is an exciting sport throughout the winter. The season is started with horse events including shows, gymkhana and the annual Stonebrook Steeplechase every March. What To See THE SHAW HOUSE, at the southern city limit, is an early 19th century cottage. Noteworthy are its old-fashioned herb garden and 200-year-old log cabin "weave-house." "HOUSE IN THE HORSESHOE," scene of a dramatic Revolutionary incident, is slated to become a historical shrine of the State. The home of an early Governor, Benjamin Williams, who is buried nearby, is well worth the journey of about 20 miles. JUGTOWN, also about 20 miles north, is the home of the renowned Jugtown pottery, made by the old hand methods, using the potter's wheel. OLD BETHESDA, ancient church and cemetery founded by Scottish pioneers. There lies buried Walter Hines Page, World War I ambasador to England. Clarendon Gardens has been host to the Holly Society of America and the names of many of this country's best known horticulturists will be found on its guest roll. But, to its owner and those who worked with him to make it "America's Holly Land", the greatest reward is the pleasure so enthusiastically expressed by thousands of people from all walks of every-day life. Unanimously, they claim Clarendon Gardens, "a world set apart". In spring, the Sandhills reach their peak of perfection—they become a great blossoming garden of azaleas, dogwood and other blooms against a background of stately longleaf pines; visitors come flocking from every state, and "the season" goes into full floral settings and mirrors the tall, sentinel pines that rim its gently rising shores. CAROLINA ORCHIDS, INC., on the Midland Road to Southern Pines city limits. Over 40,000 orchid plants may be viewed in vast greenhouses at all stages of their growth. CLARENDON GARDENS PINEHURST. For natural beauty in traditional rustic style, Clarendon Gardens knows no peer. There, in a lush perennial setting, man has added artfully to the handiwork of Nature. These are no formal gardens patterned along stern lines. Rather, one is immediately conscious of their primeval state. Rambling paths through shaded woodlands beckon invitingly to all visitors. The azure lake rests like a priceless gem in the richest of Jewel-bright, floral settings and mirrors the tall, sentinel pines that rim its gently rising shores. # HOLLYWOOD'S NEWEST IMPORT Carrying script, Gia leaves North Hollywood home for studio.

A new Hollywood importation from abroad is Italy's Gia Scala. The 20-year-old brown-haired beauty from Rome aims to find film success without depending on the physical elements that have helped her countrywomen. "I'd rather act from the neck up," she says. But she can't escape it: her form is one of her assets.

Gia (short for Giovanna) is the daughter of an Irish mother and an Italian father. She was one of a quartet of foreign beauties brought to Hollywood on a talent search. Winning a film part, she stayed on, obtained the feminine lead in "Garment Jungle."

Gia lives in a North Hollywood duplex with her mother. Swimming is one of her principal sports. Her mother is a painter, and Gia shares this interest, keeping an easel and oils always at hand. She makes her own hats. Right now she insists she isn't thinking of marriage. Partial to deep discussions, her friends call her "little philosopher."

Gia Scala reveals more than what she terms "acting from the neck up." But it's at home, not the studio, so she's really not acting. It's a dance exercise.

At studio, Gia has her makeup applied by Clay Campbell, studio makeup head.

Gia eats lunch on set while waiting for call to go on. Her stand-in, Troy Antaky, right, joins her.

Gia and Robert Loggia in scene from "Garment Jungle." She portrays wife of garment union organizer.

At home, Gia likes to paint. She puts finishing touches on one of her paintings.

She prides herself on her cooking. For dinner, it's a pot of real Italian spaghetti.

No matter how busy she is, Gia always finds time to wash her sports car.

Familiar Words Easy For Johnny

WOODRUFF, S.C. (AP) — Why Johnny reads the way he does: To a first grade pupil baffled by the new expression, "Dear me," the teacher said, "Doesn't your mother ever say that when she's worried?"

"Oh, yes, ma'am," was the enlightened reply. Next day, same lesson, same pupil. But no hesitation in reading the new expression: "Lor'dy me! Lor'dy me!"

that the book contains 40—pages of pictures—40... Stripped down, it sounds good to us...

Today's Review We give a little more space than usual to "Anne Boleyn," this month's selection of The Literary Guild, because our reviewer, who is Art Supervisor of the Greenville colored schools, says it is a real humdinger.

ANNE BOLEYN, by Evelyn Anthony, New York: Thomas Y. Crowell Company, 1957.

Beautiful, ruthless, red haired Anne Boleyn knew enough to keep a king waiting seven years for the consummation of his desire. Yet, after marriage, she lost him in seven months, and lost her head on the block in two years.

Through the pages of "Anne Boleyn" by Evelyn Anthony walk many of England's noblest men and women: Catherine of Aragon, who refused to bastardize her daughter; Mary Tudor so that Henry VIII could annul his marriage to her and marry Anne; Cardinal Wolsey, hated and envied because of his power between the church and the crown, who hated Anne bitterly and openly; Thomas Cromwell, the forerunner of the great reformers, who knew when to agree and when to suggest disagreement; Sir Thomas Moore, the only one whose death the king regretted.

There were the letters to Rome for an annulment of Catherine's marriage. The visits and the pleadings that came to nought, and the final parting of England from the Catholic church. The intrigues, fears, suspicions, and open spyings that were carried on in those courts of England and in Europe make one wonder if the Thromes were worth them. To be king or queen was the most coveted prize, yet no position in the world was more unsafe or insecure. Men fought, lied, cheated, and rolled heads to stay in the favor of the ruling house.

In Anne Boleyn, Henry VIII did not get the son he so desperately wanted. After the birth of Elizabeth, Anne was soon to see Jane Seymour come on the scene and take the spotlight she had so long held. Not long after, Anne found herself a prisoner and doomed to death. She stood accused just as she had helped accuse Catherine of Aragon.

Evelyn Anthony, authoress of "Anne Boleyn," has written a most interesting period novel. It moves easily, it is absorbing, and it is fully alive; and it is deep enough for the heavy reader and fascinating enough for the light reader.

Very fortunately all characters have been on the "departed" list long enough so that their lives can be delved into and the truth be told.

Christian Church Announcements

Dr. Jimmie Johnson, who will lead an evangelistic program in Greenville under the banner "A Crusade For Christ" beginning Sunday evening at 7:30, will be the guest minister at the Eighth Street Christian Church Sunday morning at 11 o'clock. At this service we are to have two special musical numbers, one by Mr. Ralph McGilvra, the song leader of the Crusade, and also a special number by the choir, "My God and I" by Serel.

The intermediate work project is being continued for this Saturday due to the heavy rain of two weeks ago. The young people will do any odd job around the homes in order to raise the funds for their missionary goals for the year ending June 30. Anyone interested in helping these young people can call J. G. Proctor Jr., 2638.

A dozen adult volunteers are called for to distribute invitations to the United Crusade for Christ meeting on Sunday afternoon. This will take but one hour and will be a very valuable piece of service in the evangelistic program.

The mid-week daily devotions will be conducted each morning for the next two weeks from the sanctuary of the Eighth Street Christian Church when Dr. Jimmie Johnson or some member of his team will lead the devotionals at 9:40 a.m.

The pastor of the church, Dr. H. G. Haney, will preach the baccalaureate sermon for the Richards High School on Sunday evening at 8 o'clock.

ECC Grad Sees First Juvenile Book Published

A three-time graduate of East Carolina College has published her first juvenile, "Taffy of Torpedo Junction," this month. Nell Wise Wechter first completed the two-year normal course at East Carolina College and later returned to study for both B.S. and M.A. degrees.

Mrs. Wechter's book is for teenagers, a true-to-life adventure story set on Cape Hatteras Island during the early days of World War II. There are shipwrecks and war dogs and walkie-talkies carried in other states. One year she taught four grades and edited a weekly newspaper on Saturdays besides. During the past years she has been the recipient of many writing awards. In 1950 she received a Freedoms Foundation award for a project she wrote about. Because of this school project, her little elementary school at Stumpy Point received a $500 library. In 1955 and 1956, after moving to Greensboro, she received the Franklin McNitt Award in the City of Greensboro for her outstanding essay on how she uses her science teaching to advance the American Way of Life. She was awarded one of the three teacher's medals given in North Carolina.

Mrs. Wechter is a teacher in Central Junior High School in Greensboro and her husband, Robert W. Wechter, teaches industrial art at Lindley Junior High. The Wechters have a thirteen-year-old daughter, Marcia, in the eighth grade.

Singing Convention In Wilson May Draw Over 10,000 People To Event

WILSON — More than 10,000 persons from three states are expected to attend the seventeenth annual Eastern North Carolina Singing Convention here Sunday, May 26.

The day-long song fest will be held at Allie W. Fleming Memorial Stadium, according to L. A. Hagwood of Middlesex, convention president. It begins at 10 a.m.

Hagwood also points out that some 30 singing groups have indicated they will participate in the event. They will include the Old Dominion Quartet of Richmond, Va.; the Air Lanes Quartet of Norfolk, Va.; the Gospelaires Quartet of Norfolk, Va.; the Piedmont Quartet of Mt. Airy; the Calvary Quartet of Rocky Mount; the Melody Masters of Four Oaks; and the Harmony Trio of Goldsboro.

The singing convention is co-sponsored by the Wilson Junior Chamber of Commerce.

It was started in 1940 as a non-profit organization to promote better singing. Any group may enter, and inquiries should be sent to the Wilson Junior Chamber of Commerce, Wilson.

Attendance has grown steadily from about 1,500 persons to more than 10,000. Many families come prepared with box lunches, and some of them arrive here as much as a day in advance.

Officials said the singing convention is open to the public. There will be no admission charge. The convention features Folk Songs and Spirituals.
