Baby Sitting Provides Freedom For Parents And Money For Youngsters Willing To Work

By MARTHA PIERCE
An industry in itself, baby sitting provides more freedom for young mothers and money for thousands of teen-agers all over the nation.

Patience, resourcefulness, and a definite like for children are qualities needed to have a part in this thriving industry. To be a good baby sitter, it takes the ability to come up with solutions to the many situations that can be created by children.

Naomi Gibbs and Rebecca Highsmith are only two of the Greenville girls who have a part in this boon to mothers and teens.

Rebecca is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. K. Highsmith of 1601 E. 3rd Street. She baby sits for Kim Wooten, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. H. Wooten. Naomi is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Gibbs of 2818 Sunset Avenue. She is sitting for Cindy Justice, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Justice.

Baby sitting rates differ in different regions and under varying conditions. Naomi states, "I feel that 50c an hour is a reasonable rate. In some cases, such as for one child, the rate could be lower. And I think that the rates should be higher for each hour after midnight."

"The biggest fault I've found in parents is their failure to return at the promised hour. This is not always true, but some of them return one to two hours later than they have stated. When our parents are expecting us at home at a certain time and we are late, they begin to worry. I realize that sometimes it is impossible for the parents to return exactly on time," reports Rebecca.

The girls have this to say about whether snacks should be left by the parents for them, and whether they should be allowed to have guests while baby sitting: "We feel that if you are baby sitting for a long time, being able to have a Coke or something to eat certainly is nice. If you have been sitting for this family for a long time, and they know the person you invite over, and give their permission for them to come, we think that it is all right to have a guest."

The following rules were suggested by the girls to help the parents make baby sitting an easier job.

- Rules For Parents
1. Allow time for the sitter to become acquainted with the children either by coming over one afternoon or coming early on the night they are to baby sit.
 2. Prepare the children by telling them that you are going to be gone, but that the sitter will be there.
 3. If the sitter is to put the child to bed, give them instructions as to the child's bedtime and where clothing is located.
 4. For daytime sitting, parents should tell sitter about naps, feedings, whether child should have snacks—if so, what kinds—type of play allowed by parents, and whether other children should be allowed in the house to play with child.
 5. Leave phone number and place where parent can be reached, doctor's phone number, and the name of a neighbor for emergency consultation or transportation.
 6. Tell sitter whether she may have a Coke, play television, radio.
 7. Find out sitter's rates and, unless special rates are arranged, pay sitter her rates.

Sometimes Father Has To Do The Babysitting

By DOROTHY V. WHIPPLE, M.D.
AP Newsfeatures

Daddy was left in charge of his 3-year-old son one Sunday morning. Burt was playing with some trucks on the living room floor. Dad was reading the newspaper nearby. Burt pushed the cars about, making appropriate sound effects as the trucks climbed a hill or dumped a load. After a time he stopped, looked at the newspaper covering Dad from view. Burt began making louder and louder noises. Dad never budged. Soon Burt stopped all pretense of playing with his trucks and just started yelling. He wasn't crying, he was just making a big racket. Dad never turned a hair, he was absorbed in the news of the world. Burt yelled at the very top of his voice. After a time he stopped.

Dad Makes Good
"Daddy, Daddy," he called.
"Yes, son," said Dad remotely.
"Daddy, you don't mind noise, do you? Mommy doesn't like it."
Dad put down his paper and guffawed with laughter.
"So that's what you were up to, you little schemer, you!"

Dad got down on the floor and played with Burt and the trucks until Mother came home. He told her the story with great glee.
"Yes," she said, "I probably couldn't have stood the racket and likely as not I would have told him to stop with a good bit of irritation."

When children want adult attention they find ways of getting it. Sometimes a polite "Come play with me" works. But more often than not the busy adult ignores a peaceable request and it's only when the child intrudes his demand on the adult's occupation that he gets results. Children have a genius for finding the soft spot in an adult's armor.

Attention Devices
A little child gets bored with solitary play after a time and he wants and needs Mother or Daddy to do something with him. This is a legitimate need of childhood, but one we all too often try to push off.

The child likes best pleasant play with his family. However, if he fails in getting this, he prefers any kind of notice to being ignored.

If he cannot find a way to get someone to play pleasantly with him, he may resort to behavior likely to bring unpleasant reprimands. To the child's mind a scolding or even a mild punishment is better than nothing. He doesn't like punishment, but at least then the adult is noticing him.

Have you ever seen a little child reach for something he knows he shouldn't touch. Look over his shoulder to see if he is being watched? If he is being watched he grabs for it, knowing something will happen. If no one is there he passes it up—it's not the

Simple Rules Can Keep The Boss Content

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures

If that summer job in the office is one you'd like to have on a permanent basis after you are graduated from school, better be prepared to put your best self forward. How? By making the boss happy he hired you, instead of rueing the day. Many a summer job has led to a wonderful career because the student put so much into the temporary employment that the employer was anxious to have her back.

These are ways you can make a hit on the job, further your chances of advancement and increase your take-home pay, say girls who've held summer jobs:

1. Plan to observe all rules and regulations of your firm. The fact that older employees abuse privileges doesn't mean they are fooling anyone.
2. Be reliable. Develop a sense of responsibility to the job so that you may be depended upon by the employer. Arrive promptly at your desk, barring unavoidable and unforeseen delays.
3. Let the "mice play when the cat's away." If your boss takes a day off to go to the ball game, it doesn't mean that the entire office should go on strike. He'll know what your work output should be, no doubt, so if you slacken off it'll catch up with you.
4. An "I hate the boss, too" attitude will get you no place if you are following the example set by dissatisfied employees. There are always people who have a chip on their shoulder, and resent anyone in authority, justifying anyway that comes to mind. If you don't like your boss for one reason or another, resign from your job rather than make yourself miserable and your boss an unfair target of your criticisms.
5. Dress properly for work—avoid wearing dungarees and sloppy dress to an office. Perk up for an office job, avoiding fancy clothes and accessories such as tight apparel, too-short skirts, revealing necklines, dangling earrings, too-high heels, heavy makeup. Eyeshadow and mascara will not make you look older if that is what you are trying to achieve.
6. Desk hopping is the mark of a slacker. Before you stamp yourself as a water-cooler lingerer, quick on the coffee-break uptake, consider that you are being paid for so many hours work, and your boss has every reason to expect you to be on the job when he looks for you. Any firm recognizes that brief respites are necessary, but don't run a good thing into the ground.
7. Even if you are the femme fatale of your class, don't try to work your feminine wiles on your boss to hold your job. If he isn't getting the work out of you, he won't have you back anyway, so it'll be a waste of time to expend so much effort to charm him. Be pleasant without being overly exuberant to your employers.
8. If you want to establish a good work record, avoid taking a day off for every little thing. Any working girl owes it to her job to get a good night's rest so she can appear bright-eyed and alert each day. If she is compelled to take time off because of her late hours, the employer will soon catch up with the idea.

Designer Adele Simpson Has Space Travel Scheme For Fall

By DOROTHY ROE
AP Women's Editor

NEW YORK (AP)—Adele Simpson prepares for space travel in her fall 1957 collection, looking toward the year when America will launch the first earth satellite. She shows "constellation suits" traveling in a "new orbit" and planned for a "visit to a smart planet."

Colors include meteor red, atmosphere green, comet blue, rocket gray and ultra violet. Customers are worn with her own jewelry designs in star, moon and constellation motifs. And as if this were not enough, the diminutive designer with the big ideas shows a whole collection of furs coordinated with her coats, suits and dresses.

Suits and ensembles are furnished in the Simpson collection, with particular emphasis on Adele's new favorite, Somali leopard, which she imports from the new African state of Ghana. She uses it in hats, muffs, scarfs, handbags, belts, jackets and full length coats, to provide accent and drama for her smooth, urbane and effortless suits and costumes in featherweight wools and subtle colors.

Jackets of leopard, broadtail, seal and mink are coordinated with slender dresses for costumes, that would be at home on any planet. When suits or ensembles are untrimmed, they are worn with fur hats and handbags.

For after-5 wear, Mrs. Simpson believes in misty, cloud-like chiffon skirts swirling below jeweled or sequined tops. Prime example and grand finale of the show is an evening gown called "Universe" in white chiffon with jeweled constellations embroidered on the bodice.

Engagement Announced
Mr. and Mrs. Nollie Wilbourne Shelton of Camden announce the engagement and approaching marriage of their daughter Elizabeth Anne to Mr. James Walter Briley of Greenville. Mr. Briley is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Raleigh Briley, also of Greenville.

The wedding is planned for four o'clock Sunday, August 4, in the Immanuel Baptist Church, Greenville, N. C. No invitations have been mailed; friends and relatives of the couple are invited.

Stage A Summer Pantry Raid

QUICK AND CONVENIENT casserole dishes take the fuss and bother out of summer meal preparation.

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor
Even though fresh foods are abundant in summer, there come those mealtimes in every cook's life when it's easy and convenient to concoct a main dish from the pantry shelf. At one of those times you might like to run up these individual casseroles, using canned tuna and tomato sauce plus ever-present eggs. Here's the recipe:

TUNA-STUFFED EGG CASSEROLES
Ingredients: 6 hard-cooked eggs, 1 can (6½ ounces) chunk-style tuna (drained), 3 tablespoons chopped green pepper, 2 tablespoons mayonnaise, ½ teaspoon Worcestershire sauce, 2 cans (8 ounces each) tomato sauce, 1 teaspoon onion salt.

Method: Cut eggs in half lengthwise; remove egg yolks. Mix tuna, green pepper, mayonnaise and Worcestershire sauce. Fill egg whites with tuna mixture. Stir together the tomato sauce and onion salt; spoon into 4 greased individual casseroles or shirred egg dishes. Arrange stuffed egg whites in tomato sauce. Bake in moderate (350 degrees) oven 20 minutes, or until thoroughly heated. Remove from oven; sieve egg yolks; sprinkle over eggs and tomato sauce, serve at once. Makes 4 servings. Note: If you have parsley on hand, you may mince some of it and sprinkle it over the sieved egg yolks.

Period Of Economic Adjustment

Latest estimates of production of the 1957 tobacco crop points up in vivid terms the fact that Eastern North Carolina will face a more acute period of economic adjustment during the next 12 months than has been the case in the past 12 months.

Though there is no reason for great alarm over the prospects for the area's economic situation during the next year, the facts should be faced squarely and dealt with accordingly.

In our opinion the area can, if it will, turn what appears a rather gloomy outlook into one of the most significant periods of development Eastern Carolina has ever experienced.

With the mainstay of the area's agricultural economy—tobacco—cut in production an estimated 32 to 35 per cent, it is apparent that income from this crop will be considerably less than last year. It should not, however, be 32 or 35 per cent less. Along with predictions of a short tobacco crop have also come predictions of a price average for this year's crop some 20 per cent above that of last year. The price average may be even higher than that, and thus in dollars paid the farmers, will to some degree at least help offset the loss due to restricted acreage and lower per acre yields. Total production cost for the farmer, because of fewer acres of tobacco and less pounds of leaf to be harvested and cured, should also be less than last year.

There is also another bright spot in the cloud. The short 1957 tobacco crop should cause the disappearance of much of the staggering surplus of tobacco which in recent years has helped depress prices for tobacco crops. This could hold the promise of both higher production and higher prices for the crop in future years.

In spite of these factors, the short crop will make itself felt not only on the farm but in terms of man-hours involved in handling the tobacco after it is sold. Fewer man-hours will be required to process this 1957 crop in tobacco factories throughout this area. That, of course, will mean fewer jobs, or a shorter duration of employment in this seasonal, yet vitally important industry.

The situation Eastern Carolina faces points up vividly two urgent needs of the area:

1. The need for still greater diversification on the farm to produce more income from supplemental crops; and

2. The need for much more industrial development to provide jobs for those who are being forced off the farms or out of other employment because of the drastic reductions in the tobacco crop.

A great economic challenge faces Eastern North Carolina. With its natural resources, vast pool of surplus labor, abundance of electricity and transportation facilities, and excellent potential industrial sites, the area has before it almost unlimited economic potential if it will be seized upon the opportunity to develop industrially.

The agricultural situation this year should incite a greater fervor throughout the area for industrial development to supplement the agricultural economy. It should stimulate people of every community to take more forceful and more fruitful steps to produce their own industrial and economic development.

The end result could and should be a higher economic level for the entire area through an aggressive economy with a better balance between agriculture and industry.

Though the goal may sound ambitious, it can be achieved if the citizens of this part of the state will take advantage of the opportunities which are before them.

100th Birthday Of Bible Group

By LYNN NISBET

BIBLE SOCIETY — On the last Saturday in July of 1857 a group of people met at Tirzah Presbyterian church, almost on the line between North and South Carolina, but in Union county some 35 miles south of Charlotte, and organized a Bible Society.

On the last Saturday in July this year that society will observe its one hundredth birthday. Only one year since its organization has the Tirzah Bible Society failed to meet on the last Saturday in July. That was in 1868. A history of the society prepared for the semi-centennial meeting in 1907 by your reporter's father, a charter member and for more than 30 years secretary of the society, has this explanation: "The war was still raging, and our country was draped in mourning. Many of our noble sons had fallen in battle, some were pining away in hospitals, far from home and friends. Fathers and mothers, wives and sisters, weeping for loved ones because they were not!"

Meetings were held through the other war years — 1861, '63 and '64. At the second meeting in 1858 the Tirzah Society had affiliated with the American Bible Society of New York. This connection was broken in 1861 and the local group joined the newly formed Confederate States Bible Society. Connection with the American Society was re-established in 1867. During the war contributions were skimpy, except in 1863 when $179.98 was raised to provide Bibles for Confederate soldiers.

During its first 50 years the society raised almost an average of $100 a year. Contributions in later years have been more generous and the total is estimated at more than $15,000 made available for the purchase of Bibles for free distribution to armed forces and mission fields through the world.

BROAD SCOPE — Preamble to the constitution set out that the people of the Tirzah community were "impressed with the unspeakable importance of the gratuitous distribution of the Holy Scriptures among the destitute of our own country and in heathen lands." The society was "not denominational or sectarian, but her doors were open, and the invitation like that in the gospels, was to all and whosoever will come."

Although the date was eight years before the end of the War between the States and effective freedom of the slaves, it is noted that original signers of the Tirzah Bible Society constitution consisted of sixty five white persons and fifteen colored. The minutes show that in 1862 a contribution of $6 was sent by Rev. D. P. Robinson, a former pastor of Tirzah, to "constitute Alex Coffee (colored) a life member of this Society."

For many years one of the most faithful attendants and loyal members of Tirzah church was Aunt Belle Watts, a former slave, who walked three miles every Sunday and never failed to have a small coin for the collection plate.

An important feature of the annual meetings is an address by an able speaker on the Bible and its place in enlightened society. In 1875 the speaker was Rev. Calvin H. Wiley and in 1893 it was Prof. McIver of Monroe, according to the historic sketch. No further identification is given. It appears certain, however, that the "Wiley" referred to was Calvin H. Wiley, who was the first State superintendent of public instruction in North Carolina, and at the time of his address at Tirzah was southern representative for the American Bible Society. Almost certainly the "Prof. McIver" was Charles Duncan McIver, who a few years later founded the institution that is how the Womans College of the University of North Carolina at Greensboro. Listed among the speakers are many others whose names are high on the honor roll of educational and religious leaders.

STEADFAST — Meetings of Tirzah Bible Society are not as significant now as social events for family reunions as they used to be. Nobody comes now in buggies to spend the night with kinfolks. The hitching posts and the mounting blocks from which the ladies stepped upon their side saddles have long since been moved to provide parking space for automobiles.

The old clapboard church building in which the society was organized gave place some 30 years later to a large and better frame church house, and that had been superseded by a modern brick structure more accessible from the "big road" and with built-in facilities for Sunday School classes and meetings of the "session" — the ruling elders who constitute the governing body of a Presbyterian congregation.

Despite the hustle and bustle of the motorized age the meetings of the Bible Society are still a day affair, with a picnic dinner between morning and afternoon sessions. Even though store-bought meats, factory-canned pickles, bakery pies and ice-box dainties have been substituted for the country baked hams, fresh leg of lamb and the high-stacked layer cakes of other years, the picnic period is still a high spot in the day's program.

Through the vicissitudes of wars at home and abroad, through periods of depression and receipts were meager and times of plenty when collections were liberal, from the horse and buggy age into the common use of automobiles and airplanes, from the era when night services were set "at early candle light" into the confusion of standard or daylight time, Tirzah Bible Society has held steadfastly to the objective set out in its original constitution adopted 100 years ago, "the gratuitous distribution of the Holy Scriptures among the destitute in our own country and in heathen lands."

Lower Interest Rates In U.S.

By ELMER ROESSNER

Money is scarce and interest rates are high, as any business man or homeowner who has tried to borrow recently will tell you. But a business firm with the highest credit rating has to pay 16 per cent for unsecured loans in Bolivia. On top of that there are taxes and other charges of 9 per cent, for a total of 25 per cent.

In fact, interest rates in the United States are the lowest of 54 countries checked by the First National City Bank of New York. The lowest American rate for unsecured loans to firms with top credit ratings is 4 per cent. However, this rate has been subject to upward pressure in recent weeks and many sound companies have had to pay considerably more.

SEVEN OVER 10 PER CENT. In addition to Bolivia, the prime loan rate is above 10 per cent in six other countries, the bank reports in its July monthly letter. They are: Korea, 12 to 15 per cent; Chile, 12 to 14 per cent; Greece and Brazil, 12 per cent; Israel and Peru, 11 per cent. The rate in Ecuador is 10 per cent.

Rates in the other countries reported are: Austria, Mexico, 9 1/2 per cent; Germany, Japan, 9 per cent; Finland, 8 to 8 1/2 per cent; Argentina, Uruguay, 8 per cent; Iran, 7 1/2 to 8 1/2 per cent; Italy, 7 1/2 per cent; Turkey, 7 to 9 per cent; Denmark, Syria, 7 to 8 per cent; Costa Rica, France, Honduras, Lebanon, Nicaragua, 7 per cent; Sweden, 6 1/2 to 7 per cent; Ireland, 6 1/4 per cent; Iraq, Singapore, 6 to 7 per cent; Spain, 6 to 6 1/2.

6 PER CENT AND UNDER. Columbia, Dominican Republic, El Salvador, Guatemala, Liberia, South Africa, Venezuela, 6 per cent; India, 5 1/2 to 6 1/2 per cent; Egypt, Hongkong, 5 1/2 to 6 per cent; Australia, Canada, Netherlands, 5 1/2 per cent; Great Britain, 5 1/4 to 5 1/2 per cent; Philippines, 5 to 7 per cent; Belgium, Portugal, 5 to 5 1/2 per cent; Cuba, New Zealand, Panama, 5 per cent; Norway, 4 1/2 per cent; Switzerland, 4 1/4 per cent; and Puerto Rico, 4 1/4 per cent. The rates for Australia and New Zealand are trading bank averages.

The fact that rates are so high in other countries tends, in a measure, to make borrowable money scarcer here. A company with a prime credit rating abroad is likely to sound out the American money market if it needs a loan, or to offer it securities for dollars either here or abroad, either action mopping up some of the available money. SCOFFS AT "CONSPIRACY." "One often hears expressed the idea that the high interest rates and shortage of loan funds are the result of some sort of 'conspiracy' among lenders," says the First National City letter says. "The answer is not so simple as that. There are too many lending institutions—beyond 40,000—competing with one another in the United States."

"If there were any conspiracy, it would be one in which tens of millions of saving depositors also share, for they are getting higher rates on their savings than have been paid in more than 20 years. The biggest single recipient of interest is the government's own old-age insurance trust fund which this year will collect more than $500,000,000 interest from the U.S. Treasury."

OUR OMNIUM—GATHERUM OF BUSINESS NEWS American experts are roaming the Japanese islands in search of ornamental shrubs, trees and plants for introduction into the United States. More than 700 species have been collected so far, the U.S. Department of Agriculture reports. Colorado, planning a campaign to lure new industries to that state, hired William Kostra, Leonard S. Smith and George A. Price to do the job. All are expatriate New Yorkers. "The typical family clothing store netted 2.7 cents of each $1 in sales, before taxes, last year, Dun & Bradstreet reports. In 1951 the average was 3.4 cents."

The first American supermarket in a Communist country will be seen when the National Association of Food Chains and the Government sets up one in the U. S. exhibit at the Grand Fair at Zagreb, Yugoslavia, in September. A Massachusetts policy holder likes his insurance company so much he made it the beneficiary of his policy. The company, Mutual of New York, persuaded him to make its employees' association the beneficiary instead.

Opinions In Brief

"It requires no argument to show that the right to work for a living in the common occupations of the community is of the very essence of the personal freedom and opportunity that it was the purpose of the (Fourteenth) Amendment to secure." —Chief Justice Hughes.

Strength For Today

By EARL L. DOUGLASS
GREATNESS OF SPIRIT
 A few days ago I stopped in at the office of a friend to transact some business. As I was leaving, I inquired about his wife's health, which I knew to be usually extremely precarious, and also asked to what extent she was continuing her writing career. I was amazed to hear that in spite of a chronic health condition which keeps her bedfast almost all the time, she writes poems, and with little difficulty sells them to the largest magazines in the country. She has in recent years had eight accepted by magazine, which numbers its subscribers in the millions. Only recently one of her poems appeared on the editorial page of one of the most important papers in this country. How easy it would have been for this woman to have spent her life plying herself. Put yourself in her place and imagine what you would have done. Could you and I have taken it as she has—and still is—taking it? I can only speak for myself, and at this point I have grave doubts. But does she worry? No, she writes poetry. Several years ago she bought two books on painting. Now she puts an easel across her knees as she sits in bed and produces some excellent oil paintings. People do not achieve greatness if they have the real thing within them; they reveal it.

About Those Hot Dogs--

Say you like orange hot dogs? You're off the beam around these parts, pardner. Folks in the south prefer their weiners a bright red.

If you like the things (ugh) orange you probably ought to be classified an Easterner.

That startling piece of information comes from somebody who is sponsoring National Hog Dog month. That, for those who haven't heard, continues all through July.

And just what makes a hot dog bright red or orange? According to folks who know the coloring comes from a vegetable dye used on cellulose casings.

The casing imparts most of the color to the hot dog and the smoke does the rest.

Actually the color makers have six lovely shades with which to turn out hot dogs. They range from deep red to light orange.

In the southwest red and dark orange hot dogs are most popular and on the West Coast, where people come from all parts of the country, all shades are popular.

Information coming from the weiner interest shows that the American public will consume 11,101,000,000 hot dogs during 1957. That, presumably is all colors. In weight it amounts to 1,110,000,000 pounds to be consumed during the year. That, presumably is the actual weight of the hot dogs, not the pounds they will add to the eaters.

But the old familiar name of "hot dog" was hung on the delicacy in 1915. A sports cartoonist named Tad Dorgan devoted a humorous cartoon to the "hot dog" and the name stuck.

There is some confusion as to where the thing was born. There are claims that its origin is Austrian. Some point to the wien wienner as proof. Since "Wien" is the Austrian word for Vienna.

Others feel the origin is German and many authorities pin it down to Frankfurt where the alleged birthplace of the first hot dog, a 16th Century butcher shop, recently was rebuilt.

Here is how hot dogs are made: The raw ground meat is placed in large cylinder and forced by a piston through a stainless steel tube slightly larger than a pencil. The cellulose casing which is anywhere from 40 to 55 feet in actual length—but is pleated and compressed into one foot lengths—is placed over the tube. As the meat comes through the tube, it fills the casings and stretches it out smoothly to its full length.

The long casings full of meat are then automatically linked either by twisting the casing or tying a piece of twine around the casings full of raw hot dogs are taken into the smokehouse for cooking. After cooking, the casings are automatically peeled from the hot dogs to produce the skinless frank.

While such variables as frankfurter formulae and pressure under which the casing is stuffed are important as far as the quality of the finished product is concerned, the really vital factor in hot dog production is smoking. A wiener maker's biggest secret is the length of time and the conditions of smoking.

That's the story of the hot dog. I'll take mine with onions.

Other Editors Saying-- Leaving A Vaccuum

(Henderson Dispatch)

Americans generally would be highly gratified if all the nation's troops on foreign soil could be brought home and remain here forever, provided there would be no further need for maintaining a defense beyond these shores. After all, too, it has been twelve years since World War II ended, and no one at that time dreamed that it could be necessary to maintain armed forces abroad for this long as one means of defense against a nation which once fought with the free world against tyranny.

Plans announced by the Defense Department call for withdrawal of one-third of this country's armed forces from Japan by the end of this year. That operation would leave some 50,000 U.S. airmen and about 20,000 U.S. naval personnel in that country. They also will be gradually pulled out to leave Japan again a sovereign and independent nation.

Very probably also negotiations now in progress at the disarmament conference in London will result in a cutback not too long hence in military units in various parts of Europe. A natural sequence of such a move would be an equivalent curtailment in the nation's armed personnel, at home or abroad. In other words, just that many fewer men under arms. The purpose is to bring home all forces not actually needed at their present stations.

The speculation is justified as to whether Washington now is convinced that there is no long-

Americans have a number of names for the old familiar hot dog, my confidants tell me. Among them are: frankfurters, franks, weiners, red hots, pups, hot pups, Viennas and weinies.

Hot dogs covered with chili sauce are known as "Chihuah-uas" in some areas, and in other regions "poodies" are hot dogs smothered in onions. A "chorizo" is a highly spiced type sold either fresh or dried in the southwest.

There is some confusion as to where the thing was born. There are claims that its origin is Austrian. Some point to the wien wienner as proof. Since "Wien" is the Austrian word for Vienna.

Uncertainty Of Law Enforcers

By RAY TUCKER
WASHINGTON The Supreme Court's failure to spell out its recent new and strange decisions has caused a slowdown in the law enforcement machinery throughout the nation, according to complaints beginning to reach Washington.

As forecast, prosecution and conviction of Communists and even common criminals have been handicapped. The criticism comes from judges, police officers, district attorneys and officials only remotely connected with detective and judicial agencies. It falls on receptive ears because so many members of Congress are lawyers, or have had experience on the bench or as prosecutors. AFOLU LAW A similar lag has taken place in the economic field as a result of the anti-trust ruling in the du Pont-General Motors litigation. It is reported that numerous corporations have had to halt important mergers for fear of running afoul of the law as newly interpreted.

Many of the contemplated mergers were of the borderline type. They involved possible acquisition of "vertical" firms—that is, a customer or supplier—and they might have fallen into the illegal category.

The Court did not specify what percentage of control of a related company constituted an unlawful union. In fact, it referred the du Pont-General Motors matter to the Federal District Court in Detroit to rule on that question. It may be years before all the complex details can be straightened out. Lawyers are surprised that the Warren tribunal did not deal with this knotty problem. POLICE OFFICERS BAFFLED. Similarly, police officers do not know how to handle prisoners after an arrest. The Court failed to answer the simple and natural question of how long prisoners may be held and questioned before arraignment. Since the decision on this subject, both Communists and criminals have been prompt to take advantage of the loopholes afforded them.

Local jurists and inferior Federal judges are also bewildered. Since none wants to invite a reversal, thereby marring their chances of promotion or election, taking their cue from the Supreme Court's strong civil rights philosophy, they are "passing the buck."

Inasmuch as the members of the nation's court of last resort have adjourned and scattered to faraway places until the October session, there will be no opportunity to remedy this legal and industrial slowdown during the summer. Even then, cases testing these puzzling and vague interpretations will clutter the docket to such an extent that specific and guiding rules may not be handed down for many months. Meanwhile, confusion prevails in a realm once justly proud of the patness and precision of the law and its application to human conflicts. UP TO SUPREME COURT. Several Senate and House Judiciary Subcommittees have written leg-

Hobby In Old Autos

By HAL BOYLE

MARYVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Hunting out and restoring antique autos has become the hobby of thousands of Americans who seek to revive the windblown joys of the days when motoring was young.

Charles and Kenneth Coulter, brothers who operate a florist business here, have traveled more than 10,000 miles in the last few years to build up one of the largest collections of old model Fords in the South.

There was one car the brothers didn't get to buy — for an unusual reason.

Learning that a woman in a small town had a 1922 Ford, Charlie went to see her about it. She willingly led him out to her barn and showed him the cobweb-covered vehicle, but balked at selling.

"But rats are already nesting in the upholstery," pointed out Coulter. "Soon they'll destroy it completely."

"Oh, that's all right," replied the aging lady, confidently. "Daddy will fix it when he comes back. He'd never forgive me if I sold his car while he was away."

Charlie silently closed the door and left the car and faithful daughter.

"I happened to know," he recalled, "that her father had been dead 15 years."

Charlie, whose arm was shattered by a Japanese bullet after 119 days of combat in the Pacific, became interested in vintage vehicles after his return from World War II. He and Kenneth, his younger brother, now have more than 20. They include seven Model T Fords and three Model A Fords; a 104-year-old, horse-drawn, glass-paneled funeral coach, and a 1948 Lincoln which they bought because President Eisenhower rode in it during his first campaign.

Their goal is to obtain an open air version of each model T turned out by Henry Ford between 1908 and 1927.

"During that period he built 15,007,033 cars," said Charlie. "A survey a few years ago showed only about 6,000 were left. Now there are even fewer."

The brothers at first were able to buy the old cars as junk. Now they pay from $100 to $500 up, depending on its condition, may spend $2,000 more restoring it. One of their best bargains was a fully restored 1909 model T which the Ford factory sold when new for $850. They paid $950 for it.

"This is no way to get rich—it's purely a hobby," said Charlie. "But on the other hand a restored antique car is like money in the bank. If you take care of it, its value won't deteriorate."

Antique car collectors know no class lines. Other local hobbyists in this field include three Oak Ridge atomic scientists, two lawyers, schoolteachers, students, farmers and factory workers.

Behind the rusting hulk of a car in the Coulter yard waiting to be restored lies a pathetic story.

A farmer who never learned to drive himself bought the car in 1927 to surprise his young daughter. A few months later she fell ill and died.

The father refused to sell the car, said, "I couldn't stand to see a stranger drive that car past this road. Every time he did I'd think of my daughter."

He put the car in a shed. Snow collapsed its roof, and over the years the rain did its work. When Charlie learned about the car and told the farmer he wanted to restore it, the old man would take only $200 for it.

"When I started to haul it away, he broke into tears," said Charlie. "I offered to let him have it back, but he shook his head and said, 'No, take it. But when you get it fixed, won't you drive it back here and take me for just one ride in it—like my daughter did?'"

Charlie usually likes to take his time restoring his old cars. "This is one he wants to get back on the road as soon as possible—to make an old man happy."

Jethro, a Practical Counselor ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By Alfred J. Buescher

Scripture—Exodus 2:15b-22; 4:18-20; 18:1-27.

Moses, fleeing from Egypt after he had killed an Egyptian, sat by a well. Seven daughters of Jethro, priest of Midian, came to water their flocks, but were driven away by Egyptian shepherds. Moses helped them to water the animals.

When his daughters returned home, their father asked why they were so early. They said an Egyptian delivered them from the shepherds. Jethro asked where this man was, and told them to bring him home to eat with them.

Moses married one of Jethro's daughters. God appeared to him saying his people in Egypt were suffering, and he must go back there and aid them to leave the country. Moses told Jethro that he must go to Egypt, and Jethro said, "Go in peace."

When Jethro brought Moses' wife and sons to him, he found Moses overworked by hearing his people's complaints. Jethro counseled him to appoint able men to help him, and Moses took his advice.

MOSES' FATHER-IN-LAW IS KIND AND HELPFUL

Scripture—Exodus 2:15b-22; 4:18-20; 18:1-27.

By NEWMAN CAMPBELL THIS LESSON deals with a little known, but very fine character, in the Old Testament, who was the father-in-law of the great Hebrew lawgiver, Moses. Moses is 40 years old at the time our lesson begins. He has been brought up in Pharaoh's palace, enjoying many privileges, although he is a member of the then despised race of Hebrews. He loved his own people, however, and when he saw an Egyptian mistreat an Israelite, his anger was such that he killed the Egyptian. The Jews were treated as slaves in the building of Egypt's great temples and palaces.

God, however, called Moses, told him of his people's tragic condition in Egypt, and ordered him to go there and He would help him to get his people out of Egypt and into the land of Canaan.

Moses told Jethro what the Lord had said, and he said, "Go in peace," so Moses took his wife and returned to Egypt. The Pharaoh who would have killed Moses was dead, and another reigned in his place.

Now after Moses had led his people out of Egypt, with the Lord's help, and they had crossed the Red Sea and were wandering in the wilderness, the people began to murmur against Moses, and they came to him with all their troubles. To hear them all he listened to their complaints and settled their problems for many hours each day. Jethro came to the wilderness,

When his deed became known to Pharaoh, Moses fled to Midian to save his life. Coming to a well, he sat down to rest. It happened that the seven daughters of the priest of Midian, Jethro, came to the well to water their father's flocks, but were driven away by Egyptian shepherds. Moses took their part, drove the shepherds away and helped the young women water their flocks.

bringing Zipporah and the sons, who had been living with Jethro. Moses greeted Jethro warmly and told him all that the Lord had done to bring his people out of the land of Egypt, and Jethro "rejoiced for all the Lord had done to Israel."

Then Jethro, seeing on the morning how the people came to Moses, wearying him, (now 80 years old) with their complaints, he advised Moses to choose capable men from among his people, and let them share his work, making them rulers, some over thousands, some over hundreds, some over fifties and some over ten.

And Moses listened to the wise counsel of his father-in-law, and did as he advised. What a kindly, helpful man was this Jethro, the Midian priest—truly a God-fearing man!

Lowered Figure On Stolen Check

LONDON, Ky. (AP) — It's not often a dishonest person will deliberately lower the amount of a check he has stolen. A check for $805.80, taken from a mailbox here, was altered to read $8.05. The thief apparently thought he would never get by if he tried to cash it for the original amount. He cashed the check at a grocery and the store, in turn, presented it to a produce house in payment for $8.05 in vegetables. Somebody at the produce house finally noticed the discrepancy and notified police and postal authorities. They arrested the culprit.

Admits Murder, Sawdust Burial

STATESVILLE, N. C. (AP)—Sheriff Charlie Rumble said today a Negro sawmill worker signed a statement saying he killed Albert

C. Mills Dec. 30, 1955, and hid the body in a sawdust pile where the skeleton was recovered Tuesday.

The sheriff said that in the statement signed by E. Banks White, 43, of R. L. Moore'sville, White accused Mills of taking $3 from a table in his home.

Rumble quoted White as saying Mills, 32, picked up a butcher knife and started toward him. "I reached in my right hip pocket, got my .38 pistol out and shoved it against his chest and shot two times," White said in the statement.

Rumble said the body was hidden in a nearby gully for two days before White moved it to the sawdust pile.

In the statement, White said he dug a grave in the sawdust, then returned for the body. White's statement said he picked up Mills and carried him up the hill to the sawdust pile. His body was cold and stiff and I carried him in my arms."

White said in the statement that nothing was said about the shooting afterwards, adding "The only time I ever thought about me killing Albert was when I'd be at the sawmill pile loading slabs and think about him being buried in the sawdust pile beside the slabs."

White's wife went to officers with the story Monday. She told Rumble she "just couldn't stand it any longer."

Push-Button Carwasher Officially Opened

Wild Fighting Opens Second Half Of Season

By ED WILKS The Associated Press Think that was a torrid first half of the season in the National League? Well, you ain't seen nothing yet, pal...

Winning Is The Goal; No-Hitter Is Secondary

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Winning the ball game is the thing; the no-hitter is secondary. So philosophized the Philadelphia Phillies' Jack Sanford and the Chicago Cubs' Bob Rush...

Sanford won his game; Rush didn't. Sanford, the National League's top winner with a 11-2 record, retired the first 22 Cubs he faced until Dale Long got a broken bat...

Rush pitched hitless ball for seven innings. Chico Fernandez, lead off man in the eighth, got a solid opposite field hit to spoil Bob's attempt. Rush, finally relieved in the 11th inning, lost a 1-0 pitching duel with the Phillies' Harvey Haddix in that frame.

"I wasn't particularly disappointed when Long got that hit," Sanford said after the game. "Maybe I'll feel worse when I get to thinking about it later."

"I don't think I'm that kind of pitcher," Jack said. "They were hitting some good shots but they were hitting them right at somebody. I felt pretty lucky out there."

"All I wanted to do was win the game. I thought I was going to need help out there in the ninth (when the Cubs got three more hits and one run before Jack got revenge on Long by striking him out to end the game)."

Incidentally both pitchers said they knew they had no-hitters going although their superstitious teammates didn't say anything about it. Sanford said he was aware of the perfect game by the batting order. Rush said: "Any pitcher knows when he has a no-hitter going."

A Giant Among The Midgets

Jimmy Tumlin, 16 years old and 6 feet, 6 inches tall, is the ace pitcher for the baseball team of East Point, Ga., in the Babe Ruth League for small boys. Behind him is one of his teammates, Gordon Burnett, an average size on the team. Gordon is 5 feet, 2 inches. Jimmy weighs 167 and is still growing. He has pitched eight games this season and won seven of them. He has given up only 29 hits and has fanned 87 batters in 55 innings (AP Wirephoto).

Graniteers Take Another Triumph

Carolina Dairy bowed to the powerful Graniteers last night, in Industrial Softball League play, 4-0, as Dan Gordon collected another win on his pitching record and Harold Ingram picked up another home run.

Gordon, the undefeated Graniteer pitcher, dealt only three baseknocks to the Dairy in picking up the victory. The Graniteers are undefeated in Industrial play thus far and Gordon has pitched every game.

Ingram, the muscular Graniteer second-baseman who clouted three home runs right before last against the Greenville Parts and Metals club, smashed another last night in the second inning. Ingram's blast put the Graniteers ahead 1-0.

In the fourth inning, Riddick, Ingram and Hardee scored again for the winners to wrap up the game.

Losing pitcher for the Dairy was Charlie Yates, who went the full seven innings.

The first game of the night, a match between the Carolina Telephone and Telegraph team and the Greenville Parts and Metals club, was forfeited by the P&M outfit. It marked the first time the T&T team has won a game.

Softball Action Set For August By Ed Turnley

ROCKY MOUNT — The Northeast District Commissioner of the North Carolina Amateur Softball Association has announced that the District Tourney will be held in Roanoke Rapids, August 1-10.

Ed Turnley, District Commissioner, stated in a release that entries for the tournament are being accepted now through 12:00 noon, July 25. The entry fee is twelve dollars and should be made payable to the North Carolina Amateur Softball Association. The entry fee, along with a roster of 17 players, should be mailed to Ed Turnley, P.O. Box 335, Rocky Mount, North Carolina.

The tournament will be a double elimination affair and all games will be played at night unless the number of entries should require some late afternoon games. Trophies will be awarded to the winning team, the runner-up team and the most valuable player.

Last year 11 teams entered the tourney with the Roanoke Rapids Romancos emerging the winner. Greenville's Carolina Dairy was among the teams participating.

Tourney Begins

ROBERSONVILLE — Maurice Everette and 15 other top-flight Eastern North Carolina tennis players opened play this afternoon in the second annual Robersonville Invitational Tennis Tourney.

Everette, the defending champion and also an outstanding net product of East Carolina College, was top-seeded. Joe Burk, Walter Conner and Walter Burgess were next in the seedings, in that order.

Play started this afternoon at 1:00 and was slated to continue until all eight scheduled matches were finished. The tourney will wind up on Sunday, July 14.

Brown Tops In Any Sport

By ROBERT POWELL SYRACUSE, N. Y. (AP) — They're going to miss Jimmy Brown at Syracuse University, especially when it comes to football and lacrosse.

The Manhasset, N. Y., Negro who made All-America in both sports within seven months undoubtedly is the greatest athlete ever to wear the Orange colors.

Brown won 10 letters at Syracuse — three each in football and lacrosse and two each in basketball and track.

Track coach Bob Grieve says that Brown could have been greater in track than in football and lacrosse has he concentrated on the sport.

Brown, who came from the other side of the tracks, is a 220-pounder at 6-foot-2. Many football experts believe this 22-year-old athletic superman will make his presence felt in the National Football League next fall. He will play with the Cleveland Browns.

Against Colgate last fall he scored 43 points in football. Against the same school last spring he tallied 13 points in track. Colgate is glad to see him get his diploma.

During the lacrosse season Brown scored 43 goals. Being named most valuable player after getting five goals in the North-South lacrosse game was nothing new for the modest Brown. He won most valuable player award last Jan. 1st in the Cotton Bowl football classic to become the first Negro so honored. And the Orange lost to Texas Christian, 28-7.

One tipoff on Brown's speed in football came last fall against Boston University. Jimmy intercepted a pass and ran all over the field to escape would-be tacklers.

After he had scored and Referee Len Dobbins got close to him, the official said: "Why don't you run straight?"

Injuries Piling Up In Pro Ball

Injuries continued to pile up in major league baseball today with bruises and strains again sidelining key men in the pennant races.

The Milwaukee Braves, already hurt in their fight for the National League flag by a host of injuries that include slugging Joe Adcock's fractured leg, lost center fielder Billy Bruton and shortstop Felix Mantilla last night in a fielding collision.

And the Philadelphia Phillies, a point ahead of the Braves in second place, lost catcher Stan Lopata, who wrenched a knee.

In the American, Cleveland's veteran righthander Bob Lemon, came up with a strained elbow. And Rookie Tony Kubek of the first place New York Yankees was hit on the right knee by a pitch.

Catcher Hank Folles of the Pittsburgh Pirates was another National League casualty. He caught a foul tip on the middle finger of his throwing hand.

ALL-AMERICA EVERYTHING—Jimmy Brown, who is going from Syracuse to the Cleveland Browns, could have been tops in most any sport he picked. (AP Photo).

Scorekeepers, Pitchers Had A Good Time Of It

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS The scorekeepers—and pitchers—had a time of it last night as Greensboro took a loose, free-scoring game from Wilson, 12-9. Durham beat Winston-Salem 8-2, and the Hi-Toms routed Danville 15-4.

Eight pitchers gave up a total of 21 walks and 18 hits in the marathon battle at Wilson which lasted 3 hours and 14 minutes. Trailing by 8-7, Greensboro came up with five runs in the eighth to win. The big blow was a two-run triple by Dan Long.

Greensboro's Dell DeSylva banged a home run on the first pitch of the game. Wilson's Jim Hubbard homered in the fifth, and Bill Dickey, pinch-hitting for Wilson in the ninth, also homered.

Meanwhile, the revived Durham Bulls defeated Winston-Salem 8-2 at Durham before 3,542 fans, the largest crowd of the Carolina League season. Bubba Morton was the batting star and Alan Dwyer the pitching hero. Dwyer gave up five hits. Morton drove in five runs with a triple and single.

The Hi-Toms routed Danville at Thomasville behind the pitching and batting of Dallas Green, who

No-Hitter Was Bynum's Second Of The Season

By BILLY ARNOLD Reflector Sports Editor Merrill Bynum threw another no-hitter last night.

The husky Home Builders' righthander came through with a no-hit, no-run 7-0 victory over the College View Cleaners Teen-er League team at Guy Smith Stadium, before a fine Thursday night crowd.

It was Bynum's second no-hitter of the Teen-er League season. Earlier in the year, the Greenville high school sophomore pitched a no-hitter against the State Bankers and came out on the short end of a 6-1 score.

The no-hit game was the second this week in that newly-formed league. Randy Bass, of the State Bankers, dealt this same College View club a 3-0 no-hit loss on July 9.

Fanned 12 Last night, Bynum thrilled the large turn-out with superb control that netted him 12 strikeouts. He walked only one man.

The 185-pounder was never in trouble throughout the seven-inning affair.

Bynum himself collected one hit and scored twice to help his own cause.

The Home Builders collected five hits against Batts, the College View hurler. Joyner, Daniels, Roberts and Adams, along with Bynum, got the baseknocks.

The only extra-base hit was Adams' double in the sixth. Home Builders scored twice in the first inning of play to jump to an early lead. They wrapped up the rest of their runs in the sixth frame, bringing their total to seven runs.

Tonight's game at Guy Smith will feature the State Bankers against the Guaranty Bank club. Game time will be at 7:45. College View . . . 000 000 0 0 4 Home Builders 200 005 x-7 5 0

American Pros Dominating Open

KITCHENER, Ont. (AP) — The American professionals are dominating the 48th Canadian Open Golf Tournament, just as they have for years.

Going into today's third round of the $25,000 test, Doug Ford, Fred Hawkins and Henry Ransom held a one-stroke advantage.

The three Americans had two-day totals of 136, six strokes under par. There were just three Canadians among the 21 professionals in the fight for the $3,500 top prize. Only one Canadian — Pat Fletcher of Montreal — has been able to win Canada's top tournament since 1914.

Competition Is Getting Stronger

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Competition stiffened today in the Western Open tennis tournament for top-seeded stars Vic Seixas and Darlene Hard who swept into the quarterfinals on a series of easy singles triumphs.

Seixas, of Philadelphia, continued in form yesterday as he dispatched Bob Stuckert of Milwaukee, 6-1, 6-2, with a fast paced back court and net game.

In today's quarterfinals he was matched against unrated Roger Werksman of Los Angeles, who ousted seventh-seeded Crawford Henry of Atlanta, 6-3, 2-6, 6-3.

Miss Hard, of Montebello, Calif., easily measured Margareta Bonstrom, a Swedish miss now living in New York City, 6-0, 6-3. Her opponent today was Judy Hazan, Middletown, Ohio, who beat Chicago's Nancy O'Connell, 6-4, 3-6, 6-4.

An Expert In Liquidation Deposed, His Life Intact

By WILLIAM L. RYAN
AP Foreign News Analyst

For more than 20 years Georgi Maximilianovich Malenkov was an expert at liquidation.

Now in the rapid swirl of Kremlin events, he apparently has escaped with his life after becoming the most likely candidate to be liquidated of the deposed "anti-party" group. He is being hustled out of Moscow to run a hydroelectric plant in East Kazakhstan—1,800 miles away.

In the crazy quilt of Soviet politics, Malenkov has been both protege and enemy of his partners in disgrace, Lazar Kaganovich and V. M. Molotov. He has been allied with Nikita Khrushchev, and now Khrushchev has pulled the rug out from under him.

Molotov and Kaganovich, now in the same leaky boat with Malenkov, have reason to hate him. Years ago Malenkov was responsible for bouncing Molotov's wife and Kaganovich's brother out of big and comfortable jobs.

But Khrushchev says all three men are allies in intrigue. Malenkov was Stalin's "apparatchik"—a man who lived and breathed the politics of the party apparatus.

This 5-foot-7, 250-pound mass of Russian paradox could be courtly in presenting bouquets to a lady, or ruthless enough to purge his own grandmother if it happened to be necessary.

As Stalin's man Friday he kept a steel grip on the party organization, populating it with "Malenkovs"—Malenkov men. He laced Lavrenty Beria's secret police with his party spies.

Malenkov made a career of being a mystery man. Little is known of his private life. He married a Central Committee typist who bore him a son, and later a party worker.

Malenkov's frequent sneers at those who boasted proletarian origins indicated he came from middle-class background. Likely his father was a railway official deported by the Czar to Orenburg (now Chkalov) in the Urals. There Georgi was born Jan. 8, 1902.

At 17, two years after the Bolshevik Revolution, Malenkov joined the Red army. In 1920 he went to Moscow to study and joined the Communist party. A prodigious organizer, he whipped up student demonstrations for Stalin and against Trotsky in the first power struggle after Lenin died. Kaganovich called him to Stalin's attention.

With his card-index brain, Malenkov was a master of intrigue. He worked his way into the inner councils. He was Stalin's catalogue for the purges of the 1930s. As Communists died before firing squads or moved into exile, Malenkov peopled key positions with those who could do him the most good.

In 1939 Beria liquidated the purgers and Malenkov joined him in the alliance. Malenkov, then only 37, was a member of the Orgburo, which controlled key party network appointments. By 1941 he was an alternate in the ruling Politburo and obviously a Stalin favorite.

He was one of five (with Stalin, Molotov, Beria and Marshal Klement Voroshilov) on the top directorate for World War II.

In charge of reconstruction after the war, Malenkov did the impossible. As a reward he climbed to full Politburo membership along with Beria, in 1946.

By October 1952 and the 19th party Congress, it was clear Malenkov would succeed Stalin as premier. Others, including Khrushchev, hitched their wagons to his star.

When Stalin died in 1953 Beria and Khrushchev joined Malenkov in power. But Beria apparently wanted it all. Unluckily for him, his MVD ranks were full of "Malenkovs." Boxed in by a com-

Played It Safe, Stepped Inside

WENATCHEE, Wash. (AP)—Kenneth L. Hooper, owner of a gun and machine shop next door to a bank, played it safe.

He had just finished repairing a gun and was going outside to test it when the bank's burglar alarm sounded.

Gun in hand, halfway out the door, it occurred suddenly to him that police rushing to the scene might misunderstand. He stepped back inside quickly.

"Even then, I felt kind of conspicuous," he said.

Hollywood Figures End Of Bosom Cycle Is Near

By JAMES BACON

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Hollywood's longtime worship of the bosom is showing signs of a bust-up. And that's no pun.

One studio topper sums it up this way:

"Like every other cycle in this town, this one's on the way out. . . . Sex appeal always has come from concealing, not revealing."

Oscar-winning designer Edith Head, whose job keeps her in touch with such trends of dress and undress, comments:

"Hollywood has too long been serving bosom on the half-shell. Even the men are tiring of it."

Miss Head and the Paramount publicity department recently were asked by producer Hal Wallis to come up with a new way to exploit French ballerina Liliane Montevecchi, who co-stars with Jerry Lewis in "Sad Sack."

Two years ago, the amply en-

She suggested that much of the information be consolidated on separate 150-inch tapes. The Army said her idea would save $9,000 a year in tape.

At the first preview of the movie, the censors ordered a good chunk of her role deleted. It was just too sexy.

New Complaint For Newspaper

ASHLAND, Ky. (AP)—A subscriber to the Ashland, Ky. Independent tried to get the newspaper to pay the towing charge for his automobile.

combination of party leaders and army generals, Beria was shot as an "imperialist spy."

Khrushchev already was moving against Malenkov. First he had forced him to give up one of his jobs—head of the party secretariat. That job meant power. Eventually Khrushchev obliged Malenkov to step down as premier with a confession of failure. He became minister of electric power stations.

When Stalin died in 1953 Beria and Khrushchev joined Malenkov in power. But Beria apparently wanted it all. Unluckily for him, his MVD ranks were full of "Malenkovs." Boxed in by a com-

Everybody Has Something To Blame For Price Spiral

By SAM DAWSON
NEW YORK — A Boston homemaker finds that on average beef costs 5 cents more a pound today than last year. A Seattle man spends more for cigarettes. If you ride the Chicago subway it costs you a quarter today. A month ago you could do it for two dimes.

Most people call that inflation and ask why it came about.

A Kansas City couple who have been saving to put their son through college find that this fall it will cost them more in many schools — maybe more than the sum they saved.

A Richmond doctor may send you a bigger bill today than he did last year for the same service. He explains his expenses are up.

Politicians are exchanging angry words about who is doing what to whom. Labor and management are accusing each other.

Bankers say the disease started when money was cheap—that present high interest rates are just what the doctor ordered.

Economists differ as to whether today's rising spiral of wages and prices is breeding new inflation, or is just the aftereffect of earlier inflation.

A prominent insurance official says the current spiral isn't the cause of inflation but one of the consequences of the inflation born during World War II and the Korean War. In those years the supply of money and credit was increased sharply, and in between the wars the policy of full employment means keeping money easy and credit abundant.

Failure to deflate this supply has generated the wage-price spiral that today pinches everyone in many little ways and adds up to a big bite on the pocketbook.

Grant that the wartime credit inflation trend has never been seriously reversed, while the demand for new plants and equipment and for skilled labor is at a record high, with many of these capital goods and skills in short or tight supply—and you have one of the aspects of "classic inflation."

But other things are also blamed. There is the endless circle, wages pushing up prices and prices pushing up wages, which neither management nor labor seem eager to break so long as boom times and almost full employment continue.

High taxes at the federal level and rising taxes at the state and local levels raise the cost of doing business and put pressure on prices.

Some say that everyone is to blame for this "new type of inflation."

All too many, including the government, have been living beyond their means for several years now, living on debt and credit—counting on tomorrow's good times to bail them out. High prices flower when they count for less than one's own desires.

Building Crane Becomes Postwar German Symbol

By WARREN ROGERS JR.
COLOGNE, Germany — The building crane has become the symbol of postwar Germany.

Wherever you go in West Germany, the building crane is never far from sight.

It is the symbol of the digging out of destruction. It tidies and removes mountains of rubble, helps erect schools and hotels and apartment houses and parking lots and even American-type skyscrapers.

The skyscrapers themselves are a symbol, perhaps, of German faith and hope that the bombs will never fall again.

They tell a story in Frankfurt about the man who came back after the war to his once lucrative hotel, the Savoy, just near the railroad depot.

He found only a heap of rubble. He gathered together what scrap there was and, with his own hands, he built a one-room apartment and rented it out. With the money and his hands again he built another room and rented it out. And so on.

When the currency reform and American dollar aid came in 1949, the bankers were happy to lend money to so good a risk. He rebuilt the Savoy and it thrives.

Few cities in Germany were so thoroughly pulverized as Cologne. Even its gorgeous cathedral, deliberately spared, suffered 40 per cent destruction. The city itself was 70 per cent destroyed.

This reporter, in Germany on a tour of North Atlantic Treaty country newspapermen, extended his stay to talk here with the rebuilders.

Eduard Pecks, a courteous and precise man, is in charge. One of his top aides is an English-speaking redhead, Kurt Jatho, an engineer who does the planning for the heart of Cologne. Altogether, Pecks has about 50 persons on his staff.

These are the startling statistics they produced 12 years after the war's end:

Prewar population of 768,352 reduced to 40,000 in March 1945 and today standing at 732,729 — a 95 per cent recovery.

Prewar dwellings of 2,524,000 reduced to 630,000 and now at 1,895,000—a 75 per cent comeback.

Five Rhine River bridges destroyed; all restored plus a new one built and three more a-building.

In the general election in Denmark in 1957, the Communists polled only 72,312 votes opposed to a vote cast of 2,137,545 for all opposition parties.

This is a capsule of the way it is in all of West Germany.

Greenville's two National Guard units will be among units of the 295th Field Artillery Battalion which will be featured in the September issue of Tar Heel Guardsman.

Tar Heel Guardsman is a monthly publication for members of North Carolina's Army and Air National Guard units.

History of the National Guard in this area will be featured in the special edition. Persons who have pictures or information about any of Greenville's National Guard units have been asked to make the material available to the magazine. Warrant Officer Mayo E. Allen of Service Battery and Master Sergeant Paul L. Jewett of "C" Battery are serving as local collectors for such material.

Material which is made available for use in the magazine will be returned to the owners, Allen and Jewett said today.

In addition to the two Greenville units, other organizations in the 295th Field Artillery Battalion are located in Washington and Kinston. Headquarters for the Battalion, commanded by Lieutenant Colonel Joe T. Korngay of Washington, is located in Washington.

CHAPTER 35

I didn't wake until nearly noon, when Red and Curly slammed in, cursing the cold and pounding circulation back into their legs and arms.

"No fire," Curly said disgustedly.

I sat up and rubbed my face, feeling as if I had not slept at all. I said, "I shot, and killed, Gene Dillingham last night."

They stood rigid then Red muttered, "By God, it was a long time coming, Will."

I told them how it had been.

Red got the fire going, and the three of us stood around the stove. Then we heard Maria pounding on the door, announcing dinner.

As we left the bunkhouse Red said, "Ben Sawhill came back with us. He was in a hurry to get here this morning."

We went into the warm kitchen and I asked about Sarah. Maria said she was in the front room with Sawhill.

When we finished eating, I said, "I hate to send you boys back into the cold, but there's a couple of chores that's got to be done. One of you will have to take Dillingham's body to town. The other one has to go to Canon City and tell the sheriff."

With that settled, they left the house, and I went into the front room. Sarah and Sawhill were sitting in rocking chairs in front of the fireplace holding hands. The wheel chair was not in the room. Sawhill rose when he heard me come in, and nodded gravely.

"We were waiting for you, Will," he said. "I'll eat my dinner while Sarah talks to you."

Sarah sat with her head bowed, her hands clasped in her lap. Then, very slowly, she lifted her head and stared at me, and I was shocked by the haggard expression on her face.

"It's not easy for me to say I'm whipped," she said, "but I am. I've never understood how some people can live for such simple things. Joe—happy as long as she kept settlers out of the valley."

John—with his silly colony. But you." She shook her head. "You aren't simple-minded."

I expected her to try to explain how she had been able to walk the night before, but that apparently wasn't in her mind at all. She would ignore it, I thought, just as she had ignored so many other things. There was only one world to Sarah Pardee: her world as she wanted to see it.

"I said, 'I don't know how simple-minded I am, but I can tell you what I want. I want to live on the Box P. It's home to me. I'm that much like Joe. I can't go off and leave it the way you've told me to. Once I started feeling that half the ranch was mine, I couldn't keep from making plans. Changes that I think would be improvements—"

"Will." She held up a hand. "Will. I should have told you this first. Beh explained it and I understand. You love the Box P. I don't. Besides, you saved my life last night. I'll sell my half to you. Talk to Ben about it. Any price that he agrees to will satisfy me. Is that all you want? Are you as single-mind as Joe was?"

"You know what else I want," I said. "I want to bring Nela here as my wife and raise a family and . . ."

"Yes, Will, I know," she said passionately. "Maybe there was a time when Joe felt that way, too, but he began growing in the wrong direction. Don't let it happen to you. I'm going to marry Ben. Give me until tomorrow noon. Then bring your wife here. Grip and hold tight what you want, Will, and never let it go."

Her hands closed into hard little fists on her lap. "I wrote to Nela last winter, you know," she said, "and Nela wrote to me, but all that time it never occurred to me you'd fall in love with her. I encouraged her to come with John. Isn't it funny, Will, how you help to bring about the very thing you don't want to happen?"

She got up and walked to me and put her hands on my shoulders, the old softness and beauty returning for a moment to her face. "You did something for me no one else had ever done. You filled a place in my heart that had been empty for as long as I could remember. I bought you with my love, Will. You never knew, but that's the way it was. I owned you, and then when I saw how you felt toward Nela and how she felt toward you," She swallowed. "No use to try to tell you what it did to me."

I backed away a step, but she followed me. "It will be different with Ben," she went on. "He loves me. Maybe he'll be able to give me what I've needed." She put a hand up to the back of my head and tipped it forward. "As long as you've been here, Will, you've never kissed me."

So I kissed her, her hands holding me with possessive strength, and all the time I was afraid Ben Sawhill would come through the door. Then she wheeled and walked toward the kitchen door, heels clicking sharply on the floor. I turned and went out through the front door, feeling sorry for Ben Sawhill.

I got Dillingham's money belt and saddlebags from the bunkhouse. When I started toward the barn, Red was loading Dillingham's body into the wagon. He stepped into the seat and took the lines. When I reached him, he said: "There was something I aimed to say, Will, but you got to telling how you plugged Dillingham and I plumb forgot. Costello and Brahm and some more—six of 'em, all told—was in Alton's place last night with me and Curly and Sawhill. They'd chased some settlers down ahead of us, you know. They claimed they was gonna clean the West Fork of every clodbuster—"

I started to swear at him, and then I stopped. He said, "Well, now, you've got no call to—"

"I'm sorry, Red." I started toward the corral, on the run. I called back, "I wished you'd told me when you first got here."

He sat there while I threw the saddle on my bay. When I rode out of the yard, he was still sitting there. Then he yelled, "Will, I'll come along if you're gonna

Rules Secondary Boycott End At Poultry Plant

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — Holly Farms Poultry Co. of Winston-Salem, N.C. won a temporary restraining order in U.S. District Court yesterday against a secondary boycott by the Eastern Teamsters Conference and Teamsters Local 863, Newark.

The firm contended local unions have refused to unload its poultry products here because it is involved in a dispute with Teamsters Local 391 in Winston-Salem.

The order was issued by Federal Judge William F. Smith on application of the National Labor Relations Board. The Teamsters agreed to the temporary order.

Judge Smith continued until July 23 an application by the NLRB for a preliminary injunction.

Holly Farms has sued several Teamsters unions for nine million dollars damages. The case is pending.

Trading Post, I saw that a band of horsemen had come up the canyon and turned west. I felt certain Costello would go after Mathers, knowing that if Mathers left, the other settlers would follow.

I kept on, driven by the knowledge that this was the last job to be done and the most important one. Our future depended upon it. If we could not live in peace with other cowmen, neighbors we had known for years, there was no hope for the valley.

When I reached Mathers' cabin, I still had no idea what I would find. Six horses were in front, four with men mounted and two with saddles empty . . .

"You were wrong," I said. "Sarah's alive, but Dillingham's dead." I threw the heavy saddlebags on the couch. "There's your money!"

She grabbed the saddlebags and hugged them to her breasts. "Poor Gene," she whimpered, and began to cry.

"You've got your money, Kathy," I said slowly. "Sarah is leaving the valley. You can't hurt her any more. Now you're getting out. I'll give you twenty-four hours. If you're not gone . . ."

"I'll be gone," she said. "Nothing to stay for now. Get out of here, Will—get out and leave me alone."

I obeyed. Mounting, I rode across the bridge. When I reached the junction of the creek from Alton's

Neighbors Brave Fire In Rescue

SHELBY, N.C. (AP)—Brave neighbors of an aged man broke into his five-room dwelling, boiling with smoke and crackling with flame, and carried him, badly burned, outside to safety yesterday afternoon.

Lucion V. Blanton, 66, burned about head and body, lay in serious condition today in Cleveland Memorial Hospital, where physicians said his injuries had not been fully assessed.

Blanton's frame home southwest of Shelby in the Flint Hill community blazed up suddenly and the smoke attracted neighbors Claude Anthony, Elmer Earls, Carl Blanton and Lee Church. They broke out windows to let out smoke and let them in. They groped into the smoke-darkened kitchen and found the aged farmer unconscious on the floor, flames eating around him. They picked up the helpless form, kicked down a locked door and carried him beyond the fire and smoke.

Mrs. Blanton, visiting at the time at the home of a daughter nearby, said she believed her husband was trying to start a fire in a wood stove with kerosene when the conflagration broke out.

Made The Most Of A Bad Break

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Nine-year-old Robin Richter suffered a broken ankle the afternoon before she was to wear her Brownie Scout uniform and pin the first time. She was in tears.

Her parents put her in the car and took her to the meeting. Two chairs were put together to form a couch and she read the troop history, and took the pledge. Then all troop members autographed the cast on her ankle.

Neighbors Brave Fire In Rescue

SHELBY, N.C. (AP)—Brave neighbors of an aged man broke into his five-room dwelling, boiling with smoke and crackling with flame, and carried him, badly burned, outside to safety yesterday afternoon.

Lucion V. Blanton, 66, burned about head and body, lay in serious condition today in Cleveland Memorial Hospital, where physicians said his injuries had not been fully assessed.

WALL STREET
NEW YORK (AP)—Motor shares rose but aircraft fell in an irregular stock market early this afternoon. Trading was moderate. Key stocks showed plus or minus signs ranging from fractions to a point or so. Specialties continued active and fluctuated more widely. Boeing and Douglas Aircraft also were down about a point and United Aircraft's loss was a bit more than that. Chrysler posted a 2-point gain in the active trading while General Motors, Ford and Studebaker-

Replicas Of Old Warplanes Will Be Seen In Skies

WASHINGTON (AP) — A sight strange to this jet age will be seen in the skies over three cities in the Carolinas, as well as cities across the nation, next week. The strange objects will be replicas of two World War I airplanes—an Allied Neuport and a German Fokker—which were to leave Van Nuys, Calif. today for Washington. The pilots, Frank Tallman and Cliff Anderson, movie stunt fliers, will be dressed in authentic uniforms of World War I. They are making the trip for the Air Force Assn. convention here July 30 through Aug. 4. They are scheduled to reach Augusta, Ga. and Columbia, S.C. next Wednesday and then fly on to Charlotte to spend Wednesday night. They are to leave Charlotte Thursday for Greensboro.

Targets Await H-Bomb 'Attack'

RALEIGH (AP)—North Carolina awaited a simulated H-bomb attack today on one of its cities. The scheduled bomb "strike" was in conjunction with a nationwide Civil Defense readiness test, Operation Alert, 1957. Officials were not to be informed until the moment of the attack where it will come. Asheville, Charlotte, Durham, Raleigh, Winston-Salem and the Greensboro-High Point area were designated as target areas. Prior to touching off the simulated bomb, State Civil Defense Director Edward W. Griffin planned to brief the Council of State, the Civil Defense Council and heads of state departments and federal agencies on the exercise. The purpose of this, Griffin said, was "to point out to them the responsibilities and problems they would be required to solve in the event of enemy attack or other grave emergency." The Civil Defense operation will continue until 6 p.m. Sunday. Officials said special emphasis will be on hazards of radioactive fallout and problems of evacuating people.

Barnes Again To Head N.C. Negro Volunteers

The North Carolina Negro Volunteer Firemen's Association, in convention at Wake Forest this week, re-elected Leroy R. Barnes of Greenville state president for another two years. The next convention will be held at East Spencer next July. Greenville's Ruff and Ready Fire Company won four prizes in the fire drill contests. They were second in the grab race, $20; second in the truck race, $25; third in the 100-yard race, $15, and second in the foot race, $5. Heber Green, captain of the Greenville company and 20 members represented Greenville in the contests. State officers in addition to President Barnes are: L. L. Truck, Wake Forest, vice-president; J. N. Lines, Enfield, financial secretary; John H. Bizzell, Greenville, recording secretary; L. H. Haw, Salisbury, treasurer; O. C. Smith, Wake Forest, and McCall Austin, Warrenton, financial officers; L. H. Haw, Salisbury, treasurer; Cleveland Anderson, Warrenton, statistician; Harvey Brown, Warrenton, chief marshal, and Rev. D. A. Willis, Oxford, chaplain.

Controversy Explodes In Clinton Trial Over Photos

By RELMAN MORIN
KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP)—A bitter controversy exploded in U. S. District Court today over pictures taken by Time and Life magazine photographers of the Clinton desegregation disturbances last fall. Defense attorneys, questioning a photographer, said: "They (the magazines) slanted their pictures to lower and degrade these people." Grover S. McLeod of Birmingham, Ala., the defense lawyer, gestured toward the 15 Tennesseeans and John Kasper. They are on trial for alleged criminal contempt of court. The witness was A. Y. Owen, 41, a free-lance photographer from Oklahoma City. He said he is employed by Time and Life. When McLeod made the statement about the pictures, U. S. Dist. Atty. John C. Crawford Jr. jumped to his feet, shouting objections. Judge Robert L. Taylor sustained him. "I can appreciate the government's apprehension about Time and Life magazines," interjected Robert L. Dobbs of Memphis, spokesman for the defense battery. Crawford was instantly on his feet again. His face was flushed and he shouted, "That is a most improper statement and it should not be said in the presence of this jury." The judge agreed and said, "Mr. Dobbs, do not do that any more." When the noise died down, Dobbs asked Owen if he had any special instructions from the magazines when he came to Clinton. "I had no instructions to slant the story one way or another," Owen said. "Didn't you have any bias when you came to Clinton?" Dobbs asked. Owen replied, "I tried to shoot both sides as fairly as possible." "Why didn't you go into these people's homes and show them as they really are?" Dobbs asked. "We tried that with some and got negative answers," Owen replied. "Was that after you had smeared them in the magazine?" Dobbs asked. Crawford jumped to his feet again, roaring objections. The judge sustained him and said, "Mr. Dobbs, do not do that." The defense contended that the photographers showed the defendants in an unfair light during the disturbances last Nov. 29 and 30. The government introduced the pictures in evidence to identify some of the 15 defendants. The outburst came as Crawford moved into the heart of the case—the government's effort to prove conspiracy between Kasper and the "Clinton 15." A few minutes earlier, in an effort to speed up the trial, both government and defense attorneys had agreed not to call scores of news media representatives to testify. Attorneys said 2nd grad. ta89. Attorneys said this would shorten the trial "by several days." Before today's session opened in U. S. District Court, the lawyers jointly worked out and signed the following: "It is stipulated that wide publicity by newspapers, radio and television was given the injunctive writ by all the local stations, newspapers, etc., for 10 days after its issuance." The statement referred to an injunction issued last September by Federal Judge Robert L. Taylor forbidding interference with orderly integration of Clinton High School. With this phase of the evidence cleared, U. S. Dist. Atty. John C. Crawford Jr. prepared to move directly to the heart of the case—whether the 15 Tennessee men and women defendants conspired with Northern segregationist John Kasper to flout the injunction. "We are getting to the 'acting in concert' part of the story now," Crawford said. "It is a story, etc., third grad. ta17 deleting penultimate graf. ta18. Crawford said x x x injunction."
