Hoffa Opening Bribery Defense

WASHINGTON (AP)—James T. Hoffa starts presenting his defense today against bribery and conspiracy charges, but his attorney kept his plans secret.

A thunderstorm dumped .63 of an inch rainfall in Greenville yesterday afternoon but the rain was apparently scattered in the rural areas.

Assistant County Agent C. J. Goodman said this morning that he had heard reports of a "good general rain" in the Simpson area.

Knowledge talked with reporters after he and other GOP congressional leaders held their regular Tuesday morning conference with Eisenhower.

The Senate was to vote later on Knowland's motion to bring the House-approved civil rights bill officially before it.

Knowledge predicted that motion will be approved "by a substantially heavy margin."

Opponents also have contended that the bill goes much further than the President's stated objective of protecting the right to vote.

Asked specifically whether Eisenhower favors enactment of Section 3, the senator replied that in his opinion "it would be fair to say that the administration would not have recommended the four parts" if the President "had not felt that all are highly desirable and part of the program."

Wanted: New Look For Home

By EDWARD S. KITCH
CHICAGO (AP) — Undecided about the type of house to build or the style of furniture to put in it.

Think nothing of it. You're in the company of architects and designers of furniture who have reached a sort of crossroads in their search for a new look.

In fact, it seems they don't know which road to take because they confess they don't know what YOU want.

This appeared evident during the international summer furniture market where designers, manufacturers and buyers of home furnishings gathered and discussed today's discerning homemakers.

They find that the homemaker is budgeting her desires because she wants to be sure she's up with the fashions and the Joneses.

Gen. Lawrence H. Whiting, president of the American Furniture Mart, says that one-third of all women in the United States are now employed and well over half of them are married women, not single or widowed.

"They work for that extra money for clothes, car, furniture and they want style," he says.

What Next?

This is the area that stumps the artisans. They don't know which road style will take, so they have created a sort of contemporary design that is a blend of many cultures.

The furniture designer looks to the architect for inspiration for new creations. The architect looks everywhere for his theme.

Both agree that we live in a machine age of steel, glass and automation. We've lived with these cold things for so long that our furnishings are beginning to reflect this influence.

Edward Wormley, furniture designer, says that there is a noticeable questioning of the square and geometric in what is known as international architecture, which originated in Germany in the early '30s.

The designers feel that it now is cold and unfriendly. They seek new viewpoints for American creations. They want a new American design based on the American tradition and its amalgamation of peoples and cultures.

Wormley says the American idea began to flower at the turn of the 19th century.

NEW DESIGN . . . This room setting is an example of Edward Wormley's efforts for something different. The black iron fireplace of original design—"I just made it up"—is the center of interest. A sofa bed rests on the raised hearth and low occasional tables in the foreground show Oriental influence.

The ranch house of the west, the Newport "cottages," early Frank Lloyd Wright and the bungalow of the Midwest have influenced home designs.

"The risk in this country is the monotonous look. People are groping for some decorative idiom, striving for a good decorative style," Larry Peabody, designer, suggests that the sculptured look from Denmark is highly adaptable to American tastes. His formula for home furnishings selection is the use of half antique and half modern pieces.

This seems to be the essence of the new look revealed in terms such as the new humanism, the new romanticism, the new individualism.

But Designer Forest Wilson's approach is more simple. He finds that it's more effective not to follow a distinct style or trend but to devise his own style from contemporary influences to create an appealing design for a mass market.

Still confused?

Evolution of Design
Victorian, early American and Swedish modern furniture have steadily experienced an evolution of design into what now is known as contemporary.

Contemporary furniture has many forms and is scaled to fit into today's small family home. In some cases it is a modification of Colonial, French Provincial, and traditional furniture.

Designer John Van Koert takes exception.

"We are suffering from too much Ivy League look," he says. "There's too much predictability. Although we've produced nicely constructed, utilitarian, light and crisp designs, we've grown a little tired of it."

Here Is A Portrait Of An Honest-To-Goodness Fishwife

By JOSE SHERCLIFF
LISBON (AP)—A Lisbon fishwife or "varina" is not a mere seller of fish. She has been part of the picturesque and virile life of the city for centuries, a symbol, and a person to be respected.

You can see her early in the morning marching up the hill from the "lota" or dockside fish auction, easily balancing 30 pounds or so of fish on her head in a huge flat basket or "canastra." She has bought it herself, rising at dawn and battling in the almost incomprehensible Dutch auction. In which the auctioneer begins at a top price and like lightning descends the scale until someone shouts "XUI!" and the fish is hers.

As she climbs up one of the seven steep hills of Lisbon with her basket, the varina will probably be knitting, and at the same time crying her wares. They are anything from glittering lengths of swordfish, coral crayfish like monstrous glowing flowers, turbot, whiting, exotic cuttlefish, or soles fresh from the sea behind her. She may have her baby costily tucked in a shawl on top of the fish. Her footwear will be there most of the time.

The varina has her traditional dress—shortish full skirt under a flowered or embroidered apron, heavy brown shawl as often as not knotted round her hips, a coloured wool kerchief over her hair. She sometimes wears the "segra" (mother-in-law), a felt ring which she puts on top of her head to balance her basket on. Sometimes a little round hard hat serves the purpose just as well. Her high-necked blouse often hides most of her fortune in the form of heavy gold chains. Solid gold earrings dangle from her ears, and she wears an old-fashioned gold brooch. Traditionally, she will never wear shoes if she can get out of it.

This is not so easy now-a-days. A law was passed some years ago making it illegal for anyone to walk barefoot through the streets of Lisbon. Police enforce the law with sharp eyes and ready fines. They are not so quick as their fishwife prey, however, for the barefoot woman will whip a pair of mules or clogs out of her basket and slip them on to her feet in less time than it takes a police-

Church Ceremony Unites Miss Coburn, Mr. Butler

White gladioli in tall baskets and high candelabra with burning tapers against a background of palms and fern formed the chancel in the Gold Point Christian Church for the marriage on Sunday afternoon of Miss Peggy Coburn and David Lee Butler.

Preceding the ceremony Miss Dot Moore, accompanied by Miss Peggy Ward, pianist sang "Because," "I Love You Truly" and the soloist used "The Lord's Prayer" for the benediction.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Coburn of Robertsonville. The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Joe Butler of Scotland Neck.

The bride given in marriage by her father wore a dress of white lace and tulle over bridal satin. The bodice was fashioned with a sweetheart neckline and short sleeves. Her fingertip veil of silk illusion was attached to a coronet of lace and seed pearls. She carried a white Bible topped with an orchid with gypsophila fastened to a shower of white ribbon.

Miss Janice Coburn, her sister's maid of honor, had a dress of blue tulle over taffeta with a matching headpiece. Her Colonial bouquet was of feathered carnations.

The bridesmaids were: Miss Nancy Roberson of Scotland Neck, Cousing of the groom, Miss Mary Alice Griffin, Miss Jennie White and Mrs. Alphonso Perry of Williamston.

Their pink tulle dresses were identical in design to that of the honor attendant and they held pink bouquets of the same style.

Little Kay Coburn sister of the bride was the flower girl. She was dressed in white tulle and lace over satin and carried a basket of pink flowers.

The bridegroom's father was the best man.

Jerry Coburn, brother of the bride and Joseph Butler, brother of the bridegroom served as ushers.

Mrs. Coburn the bride's mother wore beige linen with matching accessories and a white carnation corsage.

The bridegroom's mother chose a navy blue dress with navy accessories and a corsage of white rosebuds.

Immediately following the ceremony the bridal couple, their parents and the bride's grandmother, Mrs. Lola Coburn of Greenville received in the vestibule of the church.

For the wedding trip the bride selected a yellow ensemble with white accessories. They will make their home in Scotland Neck.

Women Can Take Make-Up Tips 30 Years Ago From Britain's Queen Elizabeth Today

By DOROTHY ROE
AP Women's Editor

Women interested in skillful makeup could take some tips from Britain's Queen Elizabeth, says Thelma Holland, globetrotting beauty authority who supervised the makeup of the Queen and her ladies-in-waiting at the time of her coronation.

Elizabeth follows the rule of understatement in makeup, says Mrs. Holland — a safe rule for everyone. She has a flawless skin and doesn't need to plaster it with heavy foundation tints. In general she likes pinky tones in lipstick and cosmetics, having learned early in life that pink is the most flattering tone for practically all women.

She does not go in for heavy eye makeup, since her lashes and brows are naturally dark and well shaped, and her blue eyes are one of her most attractive features.

Actually, says Mrs. Holland, Queen Elizabeth doesn't need much advice in how to make up. The problems of the coronation were different, because at that time the questions of correct makeup for television, newsreel and still cameras had to be considered, and a makeup had to be chosen which would be right both in outdoor daylight and inside Westminster Abbey.

In this dilemma, pink won again. A medium tone of Rose Rachel foundation and powder was used, with a pink-toned lipstick.

One of the few times the Queen has deviated from her pink preference was during her visit to Denmark last spring, when she chose a coral lipstick to harmonize with a flame-colored dress.

Taylor-Griffin United In Candlelight Ceremony

A candlelight ceremony held in the First Christian Church Belhaven at four o'clock Sunday afternoon united Miss Geraldine Roberson Griffin and the Reverend William Fred Taylor in marriage.

The Reverend Wilbur T. Wallace of Robertsonville officiated in the double ring service.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James H. Griffin of Belhaven. She was a member of the 1957 graduating class of the John A. Wilkinson High School.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown of chantilly lace and net over satin. Her fingertip veil of illusion was attached to a half hat of illusion and lace trimmed with seed pearls. She carried a white Bible topped with an orchid.

Mrs. Axon Smith was her niece's matron of honor. Her waltz-length dress of pale blue organza had a matching bandeau and she held a Colonial bouquet of pink flowers.

Miss Flora Belle Griffin, the bride's sister was the Maid of honor. She had an ankle length dress of pink taffeta and a headpiece of the same material. Her Colonial bouquet was blue.

The bridesmaids were: Miss Betty Jean Griffin, sister of the bride, Miss Elizabeth Ann Everett of Robertsonville, cousin of the bridegroom. Their two tone blue dresses were of the same design as that of the Maid of honor and they carried pink flowers.

Floyd Lupton of Belhaven was the best man.

Dennis Warren of Greenville, Gene Purvis of Belhaven, John L. Roberson and Irving Smith of Robertsonville served as ushers.

School Togs Can Go Together

COORDINATED WARDROBE . . . These clothes for the small glamor girl all go together, part of one of Helen Lee's coordinated wardrobes for small fry. Small scholars will go back to school in style this year, with planned wardrobes just like Mom's. Helen Lee, a designer who started rescuing little girls from the dress doldrums when her own daughters were pigtails age, has come up with a new idea to solve mother's shopping problems and daughters' clothes problems this fall.

"I decided it was high time the youngest set had a coordinated wardrobe," says she. "I remember how my children were always changing outfits a half dozen times trying to find things to go together. So now I have worked out a group of coats, hats, dresses and petticoats in coordinated colors, so that a little girl can have a complete wardrobe with everything matching or harmonizing."

Miss Martin Feted At Surprise Party

ROBERSONVILLE—Miss Penney Lee Martin was honored at a surprise party Monday night at the home of Miss Helen Everett on North Main Street.

Mrs. Leo Everett, Mrs. E Stewart McArthur and Mrs. Herbert Highsmith assisted the hostess in serving weiners, potato chips, pickles, chocolate cup cakes and cold drinks to the 25 guests.

After the refreshments each person was given a stunt to perform. Miss Martin's slip of paper directed her to the car where she found a large bag containing going away gifts. The peddler's sack had a note telling her "keep your words."

The young people danced until the good byes were said.

Each group consists of a coat, hat and five dresses. There are even shoes to match, which Miss Lee also designed for Capezio. And there are special petticoats that go with each outfit. With a tailored little camel hair coat, for instance, the dresses are in various combinations of gold, beige and brown, and there is a petticoat trimmed with brown baby rickrack braid. Brown patent leather Mary Jane pumps with beige bands complete the picture.

Long Stay In Hospital Affects Child's Morale

By DOROTHY V. WHIPPLE, M.D.
AP Newsfeatures

Jean was 2 when she became very sick and had to be rushed to the hospital. Both her parents took her to the hospital, but Jean was unconscious when they had to leave her. She didn't know anything about that frantic drive and she couldn't say goodbye when her parents left. Jean had meningitis, a serious and very communicable disease. She was put in strict isolation in the hospital and her parents were not allowed to visit her.

In the hospital a staff of doctors and nurses worked over the limp little body. They stuck needles into her, poked a tube down her throat, did all sorts of most unpleasant things. At first Jean didn't know what was happening but after a while she began to get a little better and regained consciousness. Then she found herself in a completely strange place, with strange white-coated creatures hurting her.

There wasn't a soul around whom she had ever seen before. The nurses were kind, they tried to talk to the little girl, they picked her up and loved and cuddled her, but no one was Mommy. She was utterly lost and lonely. In her baby mind she had been abandoned by everyone and everything that had meant life and comfort and security in the world.

Lonely Baby
Poor little Jean, had she only been aware of the many, many phone calls that kept her desperately worried parents posted on every change in her condition, she would have known that she hadn't been abandoned. But Jean was too young to know about this. All she knew was she had been left, that she hurt, that all the joy was gone from life.

Her body got better. Through the miracle of modern medicine, the battle with the germs was won. But Jean was a different child.

Before the sudden illness Jean had been a lively, talkative, happy child, full of cute remarks and adorable tricks. Now, not only was she thin, and wan, but she was completely withdrawn. She didn't talk at all, she wouldn't even walk (though she was physically able) she didn't play, she didn't laugh, she wouldn't even smile.

Jean had regressed to the level of a small infant in her behavior. No one knows exactly what goes on in the mind of such a little child, but it seemed as though she was trying to get back and act as she did in early infancy, hoping perhaps that at some place she could make life be what it once had been. If she acted as she used to act maybe the world would be as it used to be too.

Long Road Back
We had cured Jean's body, could we now cure her mind? There were long talks with Jean's parents. Jean had to be reassured that life could be good again, that she would not be again abandoned.

Jean's mother did a wonderful job. No words could really prepare her for that pale weak sad-faced little girl she took home from the hospital. For weeks Jean's mother never left the child, night and day, mother was there, warm, tender and loving, and it wasn't easy because as Jean did begin to respond she was very demanding and irritable. As time went on Jean again smiled, laughed and ran about. Eventually she could stand short separations from her mother without the ghostly fear that she'd never come back.

Jean ultimately made a complete recovery, not only physically but mentally and emotionally as well.

The story of Jean makes one wonder if the hospital regulation of complete isolation even for dangerously communicable disease is worth the risk of such dangerous hospitalitis as Jean contracted.

Nursing School: A Need, A Challenge

Though the 1957 General Assembly failed to appropriate funds for a state-supported school of nursing in Eastern North Carolina, it is encouraging that legislators from this part of the state have not forgotten the desperately needed facility.

The situation offers the hope that newer and stronger—and this time successful—efforts will be made by legislators from this part of the state to have funds appropriated for the school of nursing when the 1959 General Assembly convenes.

Speaking before a Washington civic club last week, Sen. L. H. Ross of Beaufort County asserted the proposed school of nursing at East Carolina College would provide an answer to the critical shortage of nurses in this part of the state. He also declared that the cost of training nurses at a school in conjunction with ECC would be less expensive than at the University of North Carolina.

To top off his remarks, Sen. Ross expressed the opinion that the 1959 General Assembly will provide funds to establish the school of nursing at East Carolina College.

That is the kind of confidence we like to see in the legislators from this part of the state. It is not hollow boasting. For if a member of the General Assembly looks two years ahead toward the passage of a particular piece of legislation, chances are he is going to do some work before the legislature meets to gain support for the measure.

The fact Eastern North Carolina failed this year

Rumor Persists ACL Won't Move

By LYNN NISBET

RAILROADS — Rumor persists that the Atlantic Coast Line has reconsidered its decision to move general headquarters of lines away from Wilmington, as least within the next three or four years. There is nothing official about these reports. They have gained currency because it is the kind of thing the people in that community like to hear.

A prominent Wilmingtonian had this cryptic comment the other day: "Whether or not the railroad moves out, the threat of moving has been worth more to this section than was the original location of the offices here." He had reference to the aroused activity in promoting other payrolls to replace loss by railroad removal.

There are rumors, too, that the Southern Railway is more interested in taking over the A&EC between Goldsboro and Morehead City than its actions might indicate. Governor Hodges told newsmen at his latest conference that he writes some Southern official almost every week needing them to act. The Governor suggested one reason for delay may be the desire to develop rate schedules and other administrative matters before actually taking over the road. It is known that the Southern officials are not too happy over some of the restrictions in the ICC order authorizing the merger.

The A&EC franchise is said to be more desirable since a big shipping line has scheduled regular monthly calls at the Morehead City port. One of chief handicaps for developing business at the North Carolina ports has been uncertainty in shipping facilities. Now both Morehead City and Wilmington have regular scheduled sailings to European ports.

DIFFERENT JOBS — With no further appointments of consequence scheduled until Governor Hodges returns from a vacation trip the last of this month, and with a number of other top flight executives on vacation, business is dull around Capitol Square. Most of the administrative posts have been filled. Yet to be named is a commissioner of revenue in place of Eugene Shaw, who is going back to law practice. Also an administrative assistant to the Governor, replacing Paul Johnston, who becomes Director of Administration, heading up a new department.

In some respects these positions will be less important than they have been. The new tax laws spell out a good deal of the procedure and regulations which have been handled through administrative rulings of the commissioner. The new man will collect perhaps as much money as from more taxpayers, but will have less burden of policy decisions.

in its effort to get a state-supported school of nursing is no reason to give up the fight for it. On the contrary, it is a sound reason to intensify efforts to make sure the school is provided two years from now.

Those members of the 1957 legislature who worked for the school of nursing against heavy odds cannot do the job by themselves. They need the support of many clubs, professional groups and individual citizens to carry out a campaign for the school of nursing during the next two years. With concerted effort on the part of the people in this part of the state, Eastern North Carolina can have a state-supported school of nursing which it must have if its demand for nurses is to be met.

Unless a drastic change takes place, this area's critical need for nurses will be more acute two years from now than it is today. The situation should present a challenge to every citizen of this section to do what he can to see that the school of nursing is provided.

Necessary Knowledge For The Nuclear Age

What would the United States do in case of atomic attack?

Few people really have a good idea. Some make carefully calculated guesses, but most of us have to admit we can only vaguely imagine what chaotic conditions would exist if an actual attack came.

For the fourth consecutive year, the federal government is spending millions of dollars for Operation Alert, a gigantic exercise of mock atomic attacks on American cities. To some citizens, this annual hypothetical attack is a flagrant waste of taxpayers money. We are convinced, however, that in the modern nuclear age, it is as vital for the civilian population to be trained to carry out its responsibilities if this nation is attacked as it is for us to support strong military forces.

It is to be hoped that the United States and its people will never have to put into actual practice what they are learning from these annual exercises. At the same time, if the fateful day of attack does come, the knowledge gained from these exercises will mean the difference between survival and death for millions of people, and perhaps the nation.

There is little fun in playing war when there is no war. There is little concrete by which to measure one's knowledge if he has no actual situation in which he can put his skills to the acid test. Be that as it may, this nation today is much better prepared to deal with H-bomb attacks than it was four years ago. It will be much better prepared four years from now than it is today.

Throughout the Eastern states government employees are gathered at 30-odd emergency relocation centers from which their important work would be carried on should this nation come under attack. Thousand of civil defense workers have participated in the exercises, learning more about the problems of evacuation and the handling of refugees if a catastrophe should strike.

God forbid that the knowledge gained from these exercises should ever have to be put to use in this country. At the same time we should be thankful for officials and rank and file citizens who are willing to prepare themselves for a horrible emergency all of us hope will never really happen.

Another Trip In Land Of Tax

By ELMER ROESSNER

Let's take another trip through the Wonderland of Taxes—one journey to which the Federal transportation tax does not apply.

The heavy sock of corporation taxes is dramatized by a recent ruling in New York State. The state has set up a fund to pay for the improvement of harness race tracks. The state is not altruistic in this. It hopes that if the tracks are more attractive, more people bet their money and that the state will get more in pari-mutuel taxes.

Isn't that a slick idea; the sovereign state playing shell to increase its total of sucker money?

The state gave $386,263 to one track to pay for improvements. But the corporation owning the track thereupon became liable for the corporate income tax on that amount, a neat 52 per cent. State officials proposed paying the tax—around $200,000. But if it paid that, it would be income to the corporation, and that would be taxed 52 per cent, or $104,000 more. And in turn would be subject to tax, about $54,000. And if the state paid that, there would be another tax of about $28,000 and so on endlessly.

JOKE ON CORPORATION
State officials finally decided to give the track corporation $400,000 over the $386,263. Now the State Attorney General, Louis J. Lefkowitz, has ruled that the law doesn't permit giving tax money as well as improvement money, and the track operators have to blow back with the $400,000.

And did the improvements increase the state's take? Not yet, children. Horse owners have been striking for fatter prizes and betting has declined.

Meanwhile, a tax authority—as has many before him—has pointed out that the wealthy can't increase their tax income by giving money to charity.

It is done by giving the funds or property to an irrevocable trust with directions that the donor receive income from the trust during his life, and that the proceeds be paid over to the charity at his death. There are many conditions that have to be met but, as the expert points out, the deductions are large and the donor's income is increased by half the deduction and, if his income is in the 70 per cent bracket, his cash savings will be $19,800.

NOT HOW MUCH BUT WHEN.
Meanwhile, the experts say the quiz show programs that offer to pay prizes in future annual installments are saving fancy tax money for the lucky and smart. But, they point out, the deferred payment must be a prior condition. A winner can't just say "I'll take $64 now and some more later when I need it."

The top television prize is now a possible $256,000. A married man would pay about $184,000 if he won that much in a single year. But if it was awarded over three years, he would pay only $116,000.

What of the $68,000 difference? The government doesn't get it, so it will have to fire a few experts, or go without a few guns. Or it can make it up from the taxes of other people.

GOVERNMENT PARK SUITES DOWN TO $27 A DAY.
It may be that the tide of inflation has turned. Rentals on beachfront cottages and suites at Caneel Bay Plantation in the new Virgin Islands National Park, have been reduced from $35-to-$46 a day to $27-to-$35 a day.

However, they may be increased when the winter tourist season rolls around.

The Administration's insistence on immediate action on the Civil Rights Bill, as well as the South's stubborn opposition to it, has dammed up three measures designed, partially at least, to maintain this nation's economic superiority over the Communist world. They figure in all the Pentagon's plans.

They are the proposals giving a final green light to Federal or private construction of Hells Canyon Dam in Idaho; to development of power now going to waste on the Niagara River in New York; and to TVA's self-financing of badly needed expansion in the Tennessee Valley.

I'm Wanting Your Backing

By JIMMY ELLIS

Memories And A Sergeant

Sunday was a sort of memorable occasion for me.

The day marked the third anniversary of my induction into the Army. I do not have particularly fond memories of the day, although it was the starting point of a completely different two years in my life.

I try to forget unpleasant memories I have now, but I was reminded of my "draft day" last week in a conversation with Sergeant-first-class Thomas D. Thigpen. The good sergeant is an Army recruiter for this area.

Thigpen and I have been trading insults for several months now. He tells me how lousy I must have been as a soldier and I remind him of the racket he must have as a recruiter. Actually, neither of us are completely right. There are bound to be some good things in my military record, and Thigpen has a few rough spots in his present duty. For instance, the sergeant has to fight the old stories that he (1) gets paid for every man he enlists and (2) that he is a part of the Selective Service System. Neither of the two ideas is correct.

There was a time in the history of the Army when a man was paid a certain amount for each enlistment. The idea behind such a plan was that a Regular Army man would work harder to get recruits if he were paid to do so. The situation is not true any more and hasn't been since prior to World War II. Thigpen's job as an Army recruiter now is a regular duty assignment — which means that it's just another job.

The other point, about being tied up with the draft board, never has been true. Thigpen, or any other Army recruiter, has no influence at all with draft boards.

He maintains close contact with the boards, but Thigpen has no control over who is drafted unless he can enlist a man before the draft board gets around to him.

Actually, Thigpen's assignment boils down to one thing: He is here to help young people who want to get in military service, or other folks who just want information. He is limited in what he can and can't do by Army Regulations, but he's always available when somebody needs help.

Recruiting has been reduced to some rather fine points by the regulations. Thigpen, and his colleagues, have to be selective in the people he enlists. He can't enlist people who can't pass mental and physical qualification tests, and he can't "horse trade" to get any individual into military service.

Thigpen has to be honest in his dealings with prospective enlistees. The regulations demand that he be such, and, perhaps equally important, a satisfied customer is the best fried he has.

While I personally don't want any more of what Thigpen is selling, I have a great respect for the way he sells it. He does a good job.

Other Editors Saying-- Press Agent Government

(The Raleigh Times)

The State Highway Commission has expanded its public relations set-up.

In that expansion, it has employed Sam Beard, a WPTF newsmen and announcer, to head the office. News stories note that the job will pay up to $10,000 a year.

In picking Sam Beard, the Highway Commission got a capable man. If such a man is needed, Sam Beard can do the job as well as most anybody, and a lot better than most people.

But, the word that the job pays $10,000 brings up the question of how much the State is now spending on press agency of one sort or another. It also brings up the point as to how deep the State should get into the press agency business, and whether it is not already too deep in that field.

There are half dozen or so press agents scattered around Capitol Square now. Their effectiveness varies, of course, as does the amount of work they do. Whether all of them are necessary is a matter which could be argued easily.

A press agent, of course, is going to see to it that the most favorable side of his boss and of his boss' program is presented to the public. That is not what the public is entitled to know about a public official and about his program. The public must know both sides of the boss, his bad side as well as his good side, and it must know all about the program, bad as well as good.

If the Hodges-Babcock highway program is good, the public will know about it without the services of a $10,000 press agent. If the program isn't good, the public should know that — and will know that.

The highway appointment, of course, brought some immediate comments in politically minded Raleigh that the new roads press agent also would be in position to keep the name of Hodges before the public, just in the event that Hodges does decide to run for the Senate against the man who built more roads in North Carolina than any other man, Kerr Scott.

One of the big complaints directed against Washington that it is a town containing a government which is run by press agents. The folks who operate the government in a town called Raleigh must guard against being guilty of that same thing.

It is imperative, of course, that there be an informed public. Whether it is imperative for the public to pay salaries to have itself informed on one side of things is another thing.

Recruiting has been reduced to some rather fine points by the regulations. Thigpen, and his colleagues, have to be selective in the people he enlists. He can't enlist people who can't pass mental and physical qualification tests, and he can't "horse trade" to get any individual into military service.

Basie Never Bored

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK (AP) — William Basie, a man upon whom immortality has smiled in his own lifetime, believes in living every day as if it were Saturday night. "I've never been bored," said Bill, better known as Count Basie, dean of "jump swing," who will be 53 next month and has been pounding a piano longer than he can remember.

Basie, a genius at his type of music, is the son of a Red Bank, N. J., caretaker. He took only a few 25-cent lessons as a boy, rocketed to the top of the jazz world more than two decades ago, and stayed there ever since.

His band, named as "the best," four years in a row in a poll of critics made by Downbeat Magazine, has made three transatlantic tours. It recently completed an extended engagement at the Waldorf-Astoria, the first Negro band to be featured at that swank hostelry.

Basie has survived the post-war jinx that struck down many big name bands, but if you ask him how he has remained on top for so long, he replies as if surprised.

"The top? That's the place we're scuffling to reach. The big problem is to hold on to what you've got."

He likes his gin straight and takes life the same way. He expresses himself best in rhythm, not in words, and he speaks with a cautious modesty and courtesy.

"I've learned one thing," he remarked, "it's this: Don't forget people. If you pass them going up, they're going to be still around, remembering, when you pass them going the other way."

Basie, composer of several hits, started as a $3 a night tune pounder in a Chinese restaurant on the Jersey coast. He began to reach the big time in 1935 when he took over Benny Moten's band at the old Reno Club on 12th St. in Kansas City.

Basie loves to recall those vanished days when 12th St. was a nationally famous jazz lane, and every other door opened into a cabaret where dance hostesses drank "catfish cocktails" and entertained the customers.

"In those days when they opened a club," said Basie, "they took the key to the door and handed it with a $5 bill to a cab driver and told him, 'Ride as far as that'll take you, then turn the key away.'"

Many old-time jazz men think the musicians they played with in their youth — the fabulous players of the fabulous 1920s — have never been equaled. Not Basie.

"The kids today think much better," he said. "They're better technicians. Their brains are well advanced. They think faster."

"But the old song writers did seem to put more into their songs than you find in many songs written today. They wrote them on the wall to stay — and we're still going back to them."

He believes the greatest figures in jazz in his lifetime have been Duke Ellington, Satchmo Armstrong, Tommy Dorsey and Benny Goodman.

And the greatest jazz tunes? "Well, 'St. Louis Blues' is the all-time tune. That's the national anthem as far as I'm concerned. And 'Some of These Days' and 'Twelfth Street Rag,' and — I think I'll stop with them."

Strength For Today

By EARL L. DOUGLASS
SERVICE REQUIRES HUMILITY

As Abercrombie, the great English general, lay dying after a battle, the surgeon who was attending him took a blanket from a nearby soldier and put it under Abercrombie's head. The sufferings of the wounded man were evidently relieved by this little act of kindness, and he opened his eyes and asked the doctor what he had done. The doctor told him that he had taken a blanket from a soldier and made a pillow to ease his commander's pain. Abercrombie then asked, "What was the soldier's name?" "Duncan Roy," replied the surgeon. Then with his last breath Abercrombie said, "See that Private Duncan Roy gets his blanket back before sunset. He will need it when night falls."

vate Duncan Roy gets his blanket back before sunset. He will need it when night falls."

The greatness of a man is largely indicated by his attitude toward persons, and particularly his attitude toward those in humble station. There are some people who can be mighty nice with men and women in their own social circle but who regard the rest of mankind as so many pests, or perhaps as dust under their feet. The bigger a man is of mind and soul, the more disposed he will always be to put himself out for the welfare of others.

The Lord of Heaven came down that He might serve needy man, and no one serves in His name who does not have His humble spirit.

Both Sides Playing Politics With Bills

By RAY TUCKER

WASHINGTON — Both the Democrats and Republicans are playing poker politics of the 1958-1960 variety with two extremely important issues of the day—Civil Rights and the acute shortage of electric power for national defense plants and great peacetime industries in several key sections of the country.

The Administration's insistence on immediate action on the Civil Rights Bill, as well as the South's stubborn opposition to it, has dammed up three measures designed, partially at least, to maintain this nation's economic superiority over the Communist world. They figure in all the Pentagon's plans.

They are the proposals giving a final green light to Federal or private construction of Hells Canyon Dam in Idaho; to development of power now going to waste on the Niagara River in New York; and to TVA's self-financing of badly needed expansion in the Tennessee Valley.

Regardless of the merits of private or public treatment, it is agreed that their completion is a national necessity.

CIVIL RIGHTS COME FIRST No action on any of these essential contributions to our economic and industrial resources can be taken until after the Civil Rights struggle is settled one way or another. And the political probability is that neither problem will be solved at this session.

Many Republicans would like to see the Civil Rights Bill fail of passage before an August or September adjournment. They would then bring it up again at the January session in a Congressional election year. Another Southern "illustrious" successful or not, would be fresh in the voters' minds when they go to the polls in November, 1958. An anti-Democratic reaction could tip over many states and Congressional districts.

ELECTION POSSIBILITIES In fact, such a scheme might help to elect a Republican House, if not an Administration Senate, in the off-year voting. It might defeat several Democratic governors and senators who have been mentioned prominently as 1960 Presidential possibilities.

It might conceivably elect Senator William F. Knowland as governor of California, despite Governor Knight's recent fulminations against a Knowland candidacy. Knowland may need that boost in order to be available for a 1960 Presidential tap.

DEMOCRATS RESORT TO DELAYING ACTION Democrats are equally guilty in the resort to delaying tactics on an issue which may benefit them politically. The same members who favor the Civil Rights program also want extension of a public (Federal or state) power system at Hells Canyon, on the Niagara River and in the Tennessee Valley. But they are quite willing to sacrifice or subordinate these projects for the party-splitting Right-to-Vote Bill.

In fact, they would prefer to preserve the public power issue for the 1958-1960 elections than to solve this basic problem now. In their opinion, although there is statistical evidence to the contrary, it was their public power philosophy which enable them to win both House and Senate in last fall's contests, despite the Eisenhower sweep.

SHOULD NOT BE POLITICAL FOOTBALL—A by-product of this intrigue, which is centered chiefly in the Senate, is that it strengthens the presidential nomination chances of politicians several Governors and Vice President, Nixon. Unlike Senators Johnson, Knowland, Humphrey, Kennedy, Gore and Symington, they can remain aloof from the combat, and possibly remain unscathed.

But it regarded as unfortunate that such grave questions, which have international as well as national implications, should become partisan, political footballs.

Opinions In Brief

"The hen is the only thing we know of that can lay around and make money." —Plattsburgh, Neb. Journalist

The Twentieth Century Fund says increase of leisure time is bringing the United States to a new stage of civilization. It is predicted the five-day working week will be shortened to four, daily hours shortened and vacations lengthened in the next two decades.

It is our observation that workers are interested in shorter work days, shorter work weeks and longer vacations, not because of a desire for more leisure time but so they can labor at a part-time or side job in order to meet the cost of living increases this new stage of civilization has brought upon us. (The Macon, Ga., News)

Era Of Free-Wheeling Investigations Of Communism Apparently At End

By JAMES MARLOW
Associated Press News Analyst
WASHINGTON (AP)—The era of free-wheeling congressional investigations of communism apparently is at an end.

Twice in this century, each time after a world war, this country has gone through an emotional Red-hunting phase. The first petered out. The second was slowing down and the courts put a further brake on it.

Atty. Gen. A. Mitchell Palmer led the Red raids after World War I, when this country was worried about the spread of communism. That was also a period of anti-Negro, anti-Jewish, anti-Roman Catholic feeling.

Congressional committees resumed the Red hunting on a big scale after World War II. They got public support and added impetus through their disclosures that Communists, past or present or suspected, had gotten into the government.

The committees became increasingly free-wheeling: in the ground they covered, the questions they asked, and in their disregard for individuals and their rights to privacy, thought and association.

The Red-hunting began to recede after the Senate condemned some actions of the late Sen. McCarthy (R-Wis) although not specifically his tactics in Red-hunting. The censure motion was based largely on the way he treated senators.

Last month the Supreme Court said whoa to the committees. Taking his cue from this, Federal Dist. Judge Luther A. Youngdahl said the same thing last week.

The high court threw out the contempt of Congress conviction of John T. Watkins, who told the House Committee on Un-American Activities he had never been a Communist but, for a while, cooperated with Communists.

He talked freely about himself but balked at questions about people he knew who might have been Communists. Youngdahl threw out the same kind of conviction against Seymour Peck, New York newspaperman.

He told the Senate Internal Security subcommittee he once had been a Communist but he refused to discuss past associates.

Neither man claimed the protection of the Fifth Amendment against self-incrimination. Both relied on the First Amendment's protection of free speech, opinion and association. Boiled down, their position was this: the committees' questions about people they knew in the past were fishing expeditions, serving no public purpose.

The rulings of the Supreme Court and of Youngdahl said in effect: If such committees in the future expect to get people convicted for contempt of Congress, because they refuse to answer questions, then:

1. Congress must say precisely what the committees are supposed to be investigating. Right now the authorization given them is so broad it's like a hunting license for shooting in any direction.
2. When the committees ask questions — and want a witness convicted for not answering — they must ask questions pertinent to the inquiry they're making. That is, they must have a purpose that is clearly in the public interest and not be just a fishing expedition.

Youngdahl further made the point that refusal to answer under the First Amendment questions which seem to intrude on privacy is not an absolute right. For instance, it must be weighed against national security, when that security is really involved.

But congressional investigations that violate the protection of the First Amendment, when national security or the public welfare is not involved, are something else again.

Congress may do nothing to comply with the Supreme Court's ruling. The court has no power to make it comply. But, unless it does, its ability to get answers from witnesses, under threat of conviction for contempt, is seriously limited.

And if Congress doesn't comply, future witnesses, fully aware of what the courts have now said, no doubt will refuse to answer in cases like those of Watkins and Peck. They can do that with pretty good confidence nothing will happen to them.

Knowland Using Civil Rights Bill As Springboard

By JACK BELL
WASHINGTON (AP)—Sen. Knowland (R-Calif) apparently has seized on the civil rights controversy in the Senate as offering an issue that might make him the Republican presidential nominee in 1960.

Knowland, the Senate Republican leader, said last night he will announce next fall whether he intends to seek the Republican nomination for governor of California. He had announced previously he would not run for re-election to the Senate next year.

Knowland said he has arranged tentatively to make 45 speeches in all sections of California after Congress quits. He said his schedule for those speeches would depend upon the adjournment date, which is uncertain because of the battle over the administration's civil rights bill.

Although Knowland declined to say whether he had made any decision, friends think he already has made up his mind to take on Republican Gov. Goodwin J. Knight for the GOP nomination for governor in next year's California primary.

Knowland said he would have some announcement after he has traveled over California for about 30 days next fall. If he runs for the governorship, the supposition is that he will be attempting to place himself in a position to bid for the presidential nomination two years later.

Perhaps with this in mind, Knowland has taken the leadership in efforts to get the House-passed civil rights bill before the Senate. His motion to bring the measure up officially is scheduled for a vote late tomorrow, with every indication that it will be carried.

By stepping into the civil rights fight, Knowland is identifying himself with an issue that comes home to the voters in politically vital sections of the country.

Knowland was in the position last year of trying to run for the nomination without any widely appealing issue behind him. His strength lay primarily with conservative Southern and Midwestern Republican delegations.

Now he has seized the leadership on an issue that is bound to bring his name to the attention of minority groups in New York, Ohio, Michigan, Illinois and California.

By his civil rights stand, he probably sacrificed the prospective convention support of Southern GOP delegates.

He would be gambling, however, on more than offsetting this in increased strength among Northern and Western delegations interested in having a candidate who would appeal to the possibly decisive minority vote in their states.

Canada Needs Dollars But It Isn't Entirely Happy

By SAM DAWSON
NEW YORK (AP)—Canada needs U.S. dollars to develop its vast resources and growing industries. It also likes and buys many U.S. products — more in fact than it sells us. It's less than entirely happy about either of these things.

The new regime in Canada—the Conservatives coming in after 20 years of Liberal rule—is reminding Washington that it plans to oppose some practices both by the U.S. government and by U.S. businessmen.

Prime Minister John Diefenbaker proposes to trade more with the British and less with us—about 600 million dollars a year less, in fact. He also squawks about our ways of selling farm surpluses abroad, which he says is unfair to Canadian farmers.

Since American investors have big stakes in Canada and are constantly adding to them, Secretary of State Dulles is going there to talk things over with the new boss men in Ottawa.

The squabble over farm surpluses grows out of Washington's attempt to squirm out from under the huge farm commodity stores by selling them abroad at the world price, which is considerably less than the U.S. government spent on them.

At first glance that would seem to hurt only the American taxpayer.

But Canada points out that Washington is selling its surplus wheat abroad for the currency of the purchasing nation. Canada sells its wheat only for the Canadian dollar—which is worth five cents more than the U.S. dollar.

Canada calls the U.S. practice a bargain basement tactic that is shutting Canadian wheat out of many foreign markets.

The trouble over trade between the U.S. and Canada is that we have been selling them well over one billion dollars more a year than we have been buying from them. And the deficit is growing. In the first five months of this year the gap was 670 million dollars.

The difference has been more than made up by American investors, who have bought Canadian securities and poured investment capital into our northern neighbor at so great a rate that the Canadian dollar is scarce in comparison with the Yankee dollar.

But the Conservative regime is happy about neither the trade gap nor the control that American corporations are getting over Canadian industries.

Americans, for example, control 70 per cent of Canada's gas and oil industry.

Canadians propose that U.S. corporations with Canadian subsidiaries admit Canadian investors to these firms, put more Canadians on the boards of directors and operate practically as Canadian concerns.

They aren't saying, "Yankee dollar go home." They just want to reduce the weight it throws around.

Jimsey Somers' Debut In TV Was Back In '43

By CHARLES MERCER
NEW YORK (AP)—One of the distinctions of Jimsey Somers is that she made her television dramatic debut in 1943. That's right, 1943, starring in the first televised NBC-TV drama, "Miracle of Alice Lorraine."

The other day when a man questioned how many TV sets were in existence then, Miss Somers said, "Quite a few. They were in bars somewhere. I played a French war orphan, Frances Dee was my mother. Fred Coe (who became a distinguished TV producer) moved the furniture around the floor."

As a matter of fact, if old-time viewers will think back, Jimsey Somers was the first and best-known child star of television, a Shirley Temple of the pioneer home screen.

Currently she is playing the 17-year-old daughter of Madeline Carroll in "The Affairs of Dr. Gentry" series on NBC radio (weekdays, 2:45 p.m., EDT). She also has frequent dramatic roles in TV dramas—as a teen-ager, to her regret.

Well Jimsey has grown up. She is, as the French say, "petite," and also, as the French say, "tres belle."

"Just between us," she asked the other day, "don't I look 21?"

"Just between us," said this man who is approaching middle age, "no. You look 18."

"You depress me," she said.

"Why is she in a hurry to grow old?"

"I'm not," she said. "I just want to play roles other than teen-agers."

She feels that her teen-age role in "The Affairs of Dr. Gentry" is intelligently developed. But she believes that TV dramas are tending to develop a cliché type of character in teen-age roles: Pony-tail half-do, a squeaky voice, a jittery manner.

Jimsey took a long vacation from television and the stage after a truck knocked her off a bicycle when she was 13. For five years she attended the Brearley School and then studied acting for a time. "I was a has-been at 18," she says.

For a "has-been" however, she's doing very well at the advanced age of 21.

Cops Burned Up Over Car Coolers

PHOENIX (AP)—Police officers are pretty burned up at air-cooling systems in automobiles.

The reason: Motorists can't hear the sirens.

One officer complained, "On a hot car nowadays, you might as well blow your whistle as your siren."

"They roll up the car windows, turn on the refrigeration, switch on the radio and ride along in heat-proof comfort. But they can't hear a thing."

Ambulance and fire truck drivers' voice the same complaint. They say Phoenicians "never were good at heeding emergency sirens, but now the situation is getting awful."

Naval Officer Is New Jap Advisor

TOKYO (AP)—Rear Adm. J. M. Higgins look over today as chief of the U.S. Military Assistance Advisory Group in Japan.

Higgins, who ordered the first navy shot fired in the Korean War, relieves Maj. Gen. William S. Biddle. Biddle becomes commanding general of the Army's 3rd Corps at Ft. Hood, Tex.

Higgins was formerly commandant of the 8th Naval District at New Orleans.

Bethel Commissioners Approve $55,257 Tentative Budget

BETHEL—Commissioners have adopted a $55,257 tentative budget for the fiscal year 1957-58 and at the same time reduced the tax rate from $1.70 to $1.60, Mayor Clifton Everette announced today.

The budget provides $28,783 for current fund expenses, $975 for library fund, $800 for the cemetery fund, $1,075 for capital outlay, $2,206 for general fund debt service, $15,750 for the Water Department, and $5,668.73 in Powell Bill funds.

From the current fund Bethel will spend $5,600 for administrative activities during the coming fiscal year. Estimated expenditures for the Police Department are $8,900; Street Department, $11,690; garbage collection, $3,000; Fire Department, $1,500. There would be a surplus of $103 under the budget estimates.

The funds would come from the following sources: ad valorem taxes, valuation $1,567,620 at $1.3012 per $100, $20,398; poll taxes, $205; dog taxes, $65; franchise, intangible and beer and wine receipts from the state, $3,300; privilege license, $1,630; Pitt ABC Board, $950; auto tags, $295; other general fund $3,000.

It is estimated that there will be $1,060 in uncollectable taxes. Estimated revenue for the library fund would come from .0658 per $100 property tax and would amount to $1,032. That, less $57 in uncollectable taxes leaves $975 for the library fund.

For the cemetery fund a tax of .014 per $100 would yield $220, according to estimates. Sale of lots would bring in $600 for a total of $820.

That, less $20 uncollectable taxes leaves a revenue of $800. From the cemetery fund $775 would be spent for upkeep and labor and $25 for material and supplies.

For capital outlay, ad valorem taxes would bring in $1,128 at the rate of .072 per $100 evaluation. Less $53 uncollectable taxes the town would have $1,075 for capital outlay. Of that amount $75 would be spent for office equipment and $1,000 for the Street Department.

General fund debt service would receive $2,304 from ad valorem taxes at the rate of .147 per $100. Less $99 uncollectable taxes that would leave $2,206 for the debt service.

From that amount would go

$2,000 for street bond retirement and $206 for interest and handling charges.

Water sales would bring $12,500 into the Water Department fund and miscellaneous water receipts would bring in an additional $3,250 for a total estimated revenue of $15,750. Some $8,200 would be spent for operation of the plant and equipment, $4,200 for capital outlay, and $3,312 for debt service leaving an estimated surplus of $338.

Powell Bill funds amounting to $5,668.73 would come from the state. The funds are to be used for street work.

First Picture Completed By Female Producer

By JACK LEFLER
HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Bernice Block, the newest of less than half a dozen women producers in Hollywood, has just completed her first production—"Dino," a down-to-earth story of the rehabilitation of a juvenile delinquent.

Looking down from the cloud she's been riding since release of her picture, she recalled today the struggle before she reached her goal.

Without any formal theatrical training but with a strong interest in sociology and psychology, the strikingly pretty Miss Block started trying to edge into the highly competitive producing field four years ago.

Her first venture was a television series. She had money of her own for financing and a good story but the project failed to come off.

All she got out of two years work was experience in the ways an independent producer must operate.

She learned how to acquire a story and line up a good screen writer, director and cast. With that package under her arm, she goes to a studio to persuade it that her story is worth financing.

filming and distributing.

"That's what she did with "Dino" and that's what she intends to do with her new undertakings.

The young producer's first picture stars Sal Mineo, who has had a quick rise to popularity; Brian Keith; and Susan Kohner. It is being distributed by Allied Artists.

"Dino" cost $300,000 to produce. Miss Block says she'll make money and be satisfied with a 1 1/2-million-dollar gross, but feels it will go higher.

She already is deep in future production plans. She has acquired two screen plays, a biography and a novel about which she is truly excited.

End adv for PMs July 16.

Nothing Wrong With Revival

MOUNT CLEMENS, Mich. (AP)—You might laugh when Norman Scheck sits down at his harpsichord.

Cigarette dangling from his lips, wearing a loud striped sport shirt, he looks more like a rock 'n' roll fan than an enthusiast of 18th century music.

But Scheck, an organ builder by trade, not only plays the harpsichord skillfully, he builds them as well.

He sees nothing incongruous about the current revival of the harpsichord's popularity.

The 37-year-old Scheck lives in a modernistic studio-apartment two miles north of Romeo that in itself contrasts sharply with the old world atmosphere of the harpsichord in his den.

"It is our compact living of today that accounts for rekindled interest in the harpsichord," he says.

"The instrument is small enough to fit into any room without bulkiness. It provides the music of a piano without taking up half the space. People like its tinkling sound, adaptable to both classical and modern music."

Scheck has built eight harpsichords, spending about three months of spare-time labor on each.

He builds three models, ranging from 44 to 49 notes. Unlike the piano, the harpsichord is voiced at one pitch made louder by rapid manipulation of the keys rather than by harder pounding.

360 High School Music Students At ECC Camp

With 360 high school students from six states in attendance, East Carolina College's 1957 Summer Music Camp began a busy round of activities yesterday. Students enrolled for the annual two-week event come from North Carolina, Virginia, Kentucky, New Jersey, and Massachusetts.

Under the guidance of 34 instructors from the college music faculty and from high schools outstanding for their music programs, three bands, a chorus, an orchestra, a corps of majorettes and drum majors, a group of piano students, and several ensembles are participating in class work and rehearsals. Fifteen teachers are enrolled in a graduate course in "Problems in Music Education", and others are attending classes as auditors.

Boys Scout Trade Wasn't Too Good

ALLEY FORGE, Pa. (AP)—David Eiseman thought he had made a good trade for a pair of handcuffs at the Boy Scout Jamboree here until he tried to get them off. The bent key wouldn't work.

Six policemen tried their own keys, hairpins and paper clips for an hour without success. Finally someone thought of bending the key back into shape and the handcuffs parted.

Eiseman, 14, hasn't said whether he plans to swap the handcuffs off immediately.

Expect Ruling In July On Merger Injunction

FAYETTEVILLE (AP)—A ruling is expected before the end of the month on a request for a permanent injunction halting a proposed merger of three Presbyterian Colleges.

Superior Court Q. K. Nimocks Jr. heard both sides of the case here yesterday in a day-long hearing.

The injunction is being sought by four trustees of Flora Macdonald College at Red Springs. They contend the school was chartered to be a school for women.

The four said also that Peace Junior College at Raleigh was under control of five presbyteries and the First Presbyterian Church of Raleigh, but was changed in 1953 to come under the control of the Presbyterian Synod of North Carolina with the provision it would revert to the presbyteries and the Raleigh church in the event of change.

The other school involved in the proposed merger is Presbyterian Junior College at Maxton.

The merger was voted recently by the North Carolina Synod.

Opposing the merger are trustees Dr. C. T. Johnson and Mrs. Mary McEachern of Red Springs, Mrs. Raymond Adams of Chapel Hill and H. D. Jones of Graham.

The majority of the trustees rejected yesterday that Flora Macdonald trustees have no moral right to ask a civil court to intervene in the internal problems of the church. The majority contended that the plaintiffs have no legal or moral right or standing to ask for an injunction because they have not and can not show they would suffer any personal loss.

Concerning Peace College, the majority said the school is controlled by the synod and the trustees of the college can not refuse to carry out the synod's wishes.

Two Glib Talkers Wind Up With Car

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP)—Two young men with glib tongues and neat suits started out with nothing but nerve and wound up with an expensive 1956 model car.

Police, who still were looking for them, gave this account:

They went to a car lot, tried out a 1955 model, said they didn't like it, then tried another. When the salesman got out to guide them through the lot, they drove away.

They went to a second lot, told the salesman they wanted to trade their car in for a newer one, then drove off while "trying it out."

They pulled the trick at two other car lots, making off with successively better models until they found the one they liked best.

Charlotte Votes For Annexation

CHARLOTTE (AP)—Charlotte residents yesterday voted to annex a 31-square mile area surrounding the city, a move opposed by a majority of citizens living in the fringe area.

The total unofficial count was 16,580 for annexation and 5,223 against.

The unofficial breakdown was 15,139 city residents for the extension of the city limits to 963 against. The count in the fringe area involved was 4,260 against annexation to 1,443 for.

The annexation will go into effect Jan. 1, 1960, when residents of the new area will pay their first city taxes. The annexation probably will push the city's population to more than 200,000 in 1960.

Charlotte's estimated population now is 161,000. There are about 32,000 people living in the 31-square mile area annexed by yesterday's election. The annexation will double the city's physical size.

The vote in the city yesterday was heavy with more than 3,000 votes reported than were cast in the last municipal election.

Elders At Scout Jamboree Philosophical About Outing

By RUSSELL LANDSTROM
VALLEY FORGE, Pa. (AP)—"If you want to know how I really feel," said the tidy little man with the scholarly ways, "I'm rather sorry these boys can't stay as they are, with their joys, their vitality, their dreams."

The fine July night was getting on and over the 1,500 acres of the Boy Scouts' Jamboree City campfire lights were winking out. Most of the more than 53,000 Scouts were asleep, replenishing for today's round of sports, demonstrations, sightseeing tours and the less formal activities.

But some of their elders were still wakeful, pleasantly philosophical and a bit sentimental too. "I suppose there are times when we are all pretty much fed up with the adult world," the little man went on. "It's not only that we seem to make a mess of things again and again, never learning our lessons, but that we appear dismally disillusioned and not, as a rule, quite sincere."

"What I'm trying to say is that these boys have something we all need in our lives. You can't be in this camp a half hour without sensing it. Immature many of the Scouts may be, but they are all superbly alive, just as we all ought to be."

"I'm not cynical," said a newspaperman, "yet I shudder to think what the grownup way of doing things is going to do to some of these kids. Come to think of it, maybe I was like this once."

The professional man spoke gently: "That put me in mind of what Andre Gide said: 'If we could recapture the uncompromising spirit of youth our greatest indignation would be at what we have become.'"

A scoutmaster had his say: "Some of the people back home often needle me about scouting. They can't understand why a business or professional man wants to go in for this sort of thing. Their idea of helping the boys is to donate a few dollars every

Says Air Pollution Could Be Worse

DALLAS (AP)—Dr. William G. Frederik, an industrial hygiene director, said yesterday air pollution is potentially more dangerous than nuclear fallout.

Frederik, of Detroit, said more than 200 chemical compounds which can contribute to bad health and disease are much more common in the air over the nation's big cities than radioactive particles from atom bomb tests.

Frederik told the American Osteopathic Assn. the 200 irritants which city dwellers get in their air come from incomplete burning.

year. There's no way of getting across to them what they're missing."

Yesterday was rallying day for the Scouts and their leaders of many of the Eastern states. Men in high places came and spoke to the boys, shared their chow, sat down with them and tried to close the gap of the years.

One of the speakers, Maj. Gen. Anthony J. Drexel Biddle, adjutant general of Pennsylvania, said: "I consider this jamboree the cradle of decency and of the kind of Americanism which forms the basic philosophy of this country."

"I urge you Scouts to take the opportunity to exert your influence and to help mold the pattern of tomorrow's world. . . ."

3 Trains Collide In Grand Central

NEW YORK (AP)—Three trains collided in Grand Central Terminal, injuring a score of passengers and delaying an estimated 20,000 commuters during the rush hour late yesterday.

Although many passengers were thrown off their feet, only one was treated at a hospital. The other injured received first aid at the terminal.

Thousands of persons milled around the terminal as 23 New York Central Railroad and nine New Haven Railroad trains were delayed up to an hour.

On the lower level of the terminal, used for commuter trains, all 18 tracks were put out of commission by a short circuit in the accident at 4:50 p.m.

The terminal reported all tracks clear and arrivals and departures back to normal at 8:15 p.m.

One of the three trains involved in the accident was a New York Central train scheduled to leave for White Plains, N.Y., at 4:52 p.m. It had loaded about 600 passengers when an empty New Haven Railroad train, scheduled to leave for Stamford, Conn., rolled down an incline and rammed into it at an angle from the side.

The impact drove the Central train along the track several yards until it hit a second Central train.

Railroad spokesman blamed braking failure for the collision.

Judge Almost Late To His First Case

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP)—Judge Samuel Wiesenthal, appointed last week to hear traffic violation cases, was almost late for his first day on the bench yesterday.

He was trying to settle a speeding ticket given him last October. Notations showed the case was reset four times.

Wiesenthal asserted the delays were not his fault. He said he tried twice to pay the fine, but clerks couldn't find the complaint. He said he didn't get it paid yesterday either.

Typhoon Floods Kill At Least 10

MANILA (AP)—Ten persons were reported dead and 160 missing today in Pangasinan province north of Manila as the result of a flood caused by typhoon Wendy.

A dispatch from Lingayen, capital of Pangasinan, said the Agno River flooded at Mabini, in the northwestern section of the province.

Red Cross workers were combing the area but police officials expressed fear that all the missing persons had perished.

'20 Presidential Nominee, James M. Cox, Dies In Ohio

DAYTON, Ohio (AP)—James M. Cox, whose long and varied career carried him from a small Ohio farm to the threshold of the presidency, died in his home here last night at the age of 87.

Cox, three-time Ohio governor and a newspaper publisher for more than half a century, was Democratic presidential candidate in 1920 with Franklin D. Roosevelt has his running mate. Warren G. Harding, another Ohio publisher, won the election by more than seven million votes.

Cox's death came after several years of falling health. Thursday afternoon he stumbled and fell while working at the Dayton Daily News, one of his newspapers, and that night suffered a stroke. He went into a coma the next day and never regained consciousness.

Although James Cox Jr. was chief executive officer of the newspapers, the elder Cox remained active in publishing the Dayton Daily News, the Dayton Journal Herald, the Springfield (Ohio) Sun, the Springfield (Ohio) News, The Miami (Fla.) Daily News, the Atlanta Journal and the Atlanta Constitution. Cox also operated stations WHO and WHO-TV in Dayton, WSB and WSB-TV in Atlanta and WCKT and WCKR radio and TV in Miami, Fla.

Cox was born March 31, 1870, on a farm near Jacksonburg in southwestern Ohio. His formal education ended after two years of high school, but at 16 he took a

Fuses Blew As Democrat Spoke

BURBANK, Calif. (AP)—Some things, Mayor Edward Olson said yesterday, just can't be explained. Introducing Gov. Goodwin Knight to a Republican meeting the night before, Mayor Olson affably told the assemblage:

"You know, I'm probably the only Democrat here." A fuse blew, the public address microphone went dead and the hall was plunged into darkness.

Negroes To Use Public Libraries

GREENSBORO (AP)—Negroes officially could use Greensboro city libraries on a desegregated basis today, but not swimming pools.

The City Council yesterday agreed officially to drop integration barriers concerning the use of libraries, answering a petition by Negroes presented June 27.

Chairman C. C. Fordham Jr. of the Board of Library Managers called the action "a minor change in policy. Negroes have in the past been able to use reference works at the local library and to borrow books on an inter-library loan basis."

Negroes have been able to use the white libraries in the past by presenting library cards from the Negro Carnegie Library. Fordham said now Negroes will be issued cards for the white library.

The petition, signed by 26 persons, asked the library and swimming pools be desegregated. The council vetoed the use of white swimming pools saying it would "be the policy of the City Council to maintain and operate the public swimming pools of the city for the remainder of the 1957 season in the same manner as they are presently being used; provided, however, that the city will, before the 1958 season, give earnest consideration to the problems raised in the petition."

Warren's Chapel Church Being Rebuilt By Members

FUNDS DEPLETED . . . sun shines on partially completed structure.

By ALVIN TAYLOR
Reflector City Editor

Warren's Chapel is a church without a roof.

The Negro church does have its brick walls, floors and much other construction work completed, however, and that's more than the congregation had on the morning of Feb. 17, 1951.

For it was during the early morning hours last Feb. 17 that flames struck at the little frame church which had served the congregation for many years.

Fire trucks were called to the scene but the building's tin roof settled to the ground despite firemen's efforts.

Before the structure burned plans had been made for building a new church and a foundation was already at hand alongside the ashes of the old building.

Work had been halted on the new structure for some time but plans for reconstruction were begun after the fire.

Construction of the building was started on May 13 under the supervision of the Rev. E. L. Hardy, a contractor of Kinston who is also pastor of the church.

WARRENS CHAPEL CHURCH . . . new building rises beside burned church.

Male members and friends worked at night and without pay on the structure to help cut building costs. Donations swelled the building fund to approximately $8,000 and there was an additional $3,000 in insurance money.

As the walls rose the building funds were depleted, however, and now the congregation finds itself with the four walls but no roof on the brick structure.

Members of the congregation are conducting fund raising projects and appealing to friends for assistance in completing their church. They need an additional $5,000 to make the building ready for occupancy.

Even though their building burned on a Sunday morning the church never missed a service. After the fire, deacons made arrangements for holding services at Warren's Chapel School which is located next door.

Services have been held in the school regularly since that first Sunday.

The new church, which is located about six miles from Greenville on U.S. 264, will have a basement and a main floor.

The basement will have a dining room, rest rooms and storage areas. The sanctuary a pastor's study, choir room and usher room will be located on the main floor.

R. L. Carmon is chairman of the Board of Deacons and Luke Best of Greenville is chairman of the Board of Trustees. M. C. Telford is superintendent of Sunday School and Mrs. C. V. Bess is secretary of the building fund.

Flowers Enters Not Guilty Plea

RALEIGH (AP)—The trial of Percy Flowers of Clayton, who the Internal Revenue Service claims filed false income tax reports from 1948-1953, opened here in the U.S. Eastern Dist. Court yesterday.

Flowers pleaded not guilty to charges made by U.S. Dist. Atty. Julian Gaskill. Gaskill also contended Flowers had refused to make his records available to the federal government.

According to the Internal Revenue Service, Flowers owes a total of $285,357 in back taxes for this three-year period. The charge is for only $18,600, however.

The Johnston County merchant figured in the news recently when his store was padlocked under an order of the district solicitor.

Officers raided the store on July 6 and said they found small quantities of tax paid and non tax-paid liquor. A safe containing between $50,000 and $100,000 also was located and federal agents filed a claim on the money.

Propose Changes In Juvenile Law

BOSTON (AP)—Juveniles carrying switch knives or brass knuckles would face five years in prison under proposed changes in Massachusetts laws regarding possession of weapons.

State Sen. John F. Paker of the Public Safety Committee said: "These would-be imitators of movie tough guys will find their careers cut short by mandatory sentences if they decide to continue carrying such favorite juvenile delinquent accessories as brass knuckles and switch knives. We intend to take the thrill out of it."

State Government Operations To Be Cooler Business

RALEIGH (AP)—The business of government is going to be accomplished under cooler circumstances at the state capital.

Cherry said about $100,000 would be used to install units in the Senate chamber and the hall of the House and another $70,000 to complete air conditioning of the Health Building.

Tar Heels Drink Less Than Others

NEW YORK (AP)—North Carolinians drink less beer and ale than the residents of any other state. Wisconsin, famed for its breweries, consumes more on the average than any other state.

Per capita consumption of malt beverages in Wisconsin last year was 25.5 gallons. Nevada ranked next with 22.3 gallons and Michigan third with 22.2.

North Carolinians consumed only 4.4 gallons per capita. Next lowest were: Mississippi, 4.5; Alabama, 4.8; Georgia 5.2, and South Carolina 5.2.

The U.S. national average at 15.7 gallons was 10th among nations. Belgium was the leader at 37.0 gallons.

AWARD CONTRACT

There's extra protection for your family in a CONCRETE HOUSE

...it affords protection from FIRE. Concrete can't burn! That's important because every two minutes someone's house goes up in flames. Don't take chances! Protect your family and prized possessions—build with firesafe concrete.

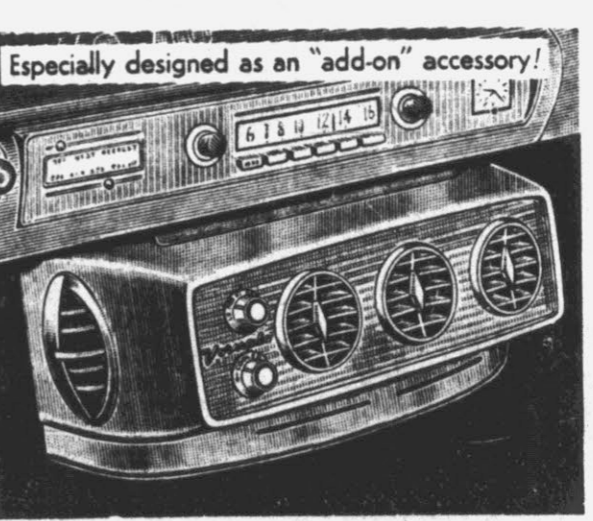

STORMS. Sturdy, durable concrete is weather-resistant. It turns back wind, rain, hail, storms and twisters. You'll enjoy security and peace of mind in a concrete house that gives lifelong protection.

TERMITES. They can't penetrate concrete. Guard against this insect that can literally eat your house from under you. Build with concrete foundations, walls and subfloors and free yourself from worry.

HIGH UPKEEP. Being durable and weather-tight, a concrete house costs far less to own over the years because: Moderate first cost + low maintenance expense = long years of worry-free service = low annual cost.

NEW YORK (NCD)—John McDowell Gowan, 27-year-old, McDowell County registrar of deeds, was placed on the missing persons list today, two weeks after he left for a few days vacation.

Neither Gowan's parents nor county officials have heard from him since he told associates on July 2 that he was taking a few days off.

Gowan, who was stricken with polio when he was 14 years old, walked with crutches. He was described as weighing around 200 pounds, 6 feet 2 inches tall, with dark brown hair, brown eyes, a ruddy complexion and a crew cut.

Gowan was driving a 1952 Chevrolet two-door sedan with North Carolina license ZD721.

His father, Tom Gowan, is a former McDowell County commissioner.

Doctrine Should Be Emphasized

LAKE JUNALUSKA, N.C.—A Methodist bishop says "It is good for preachers to use real life situations in their sermons but it is also important to emphasize basic christian beliefs and Methodist doctrine."

Methodist ministers should give more attention to the demonstration of the articles of religion, Bishop Nolan B. Harmon of Charlotte told the annual conference of Methodist Pastors and District Superintendents here last night.

Bishop Harmon, addressing the opening of the four-day conference, said the articles specify Methodist beliefs about the Holy Trinity, the Divinity of Christ, the original sin, the Sacrament, church ceremonies and the principle of separation of church and state.

Speaking today was Bishop Marvin A. Franklin of Jackson, Miss. Bishop Roy H. Short of Nashville, Tenn., will speak tonight.

Continue Charge Shortages Deter Highway Work

DURHAM (AP)—A case against a Negro college student facing three charges stemming from his use of a white tennis court was expected to be continued until next Tuesday.

City Manager R. W. Flack said yesterday he asked that the trial of Joseph Gilbert Riley, 23, be continued at the request of Durham Negro leaders.

Riley, a student at North Carolina College, was charged with trespassing, using the Forest Hills tennis court without a permit, and violating the rules and regulations of the City Recreation Department by mixing races on city playgrounds.

Flack said John H. Wheeler, Durham Negro banker, asked the continuance so that a conference might be held. Flack said he wrote the court asking it be continued to next Tuesday "to have our attorney in the picture."

City Recreation Director C. R. Wood said he pressed the charges after Riley and a Negro companion, John Henry Williams, 15, refused to leave the white tennis court last Thursday.

Williams was turned over to juvenile authorities.

Flack said the "arrest was not made after any conference with me."
