Korean Agriculturalists Inspecting Pitt Farm Ponds

By ALVIN TAYLOR Reflector City Editor

Hyun Kuk Chae and Yong-Chil Cho live about as far from Pitt County as is possible but nevertheless they have an interest in the farm ponds of this area.

The pair are agricultural specialists from Korea where reservoirs similar to this area's farm ponds are necessary to provide water for the rice crop.

Chae and Cho have been working with L. D. Hunnings of the Soil Conservation Service Office here for the past few weeks studying the construction of farm ponds in Pitt and surrounding counties.

It is part of a nation-wide six-months tour taken by the two to become acquainted with American methods of irrigation. The tour is sponsored by the International Cooperation Administration, a U.S. government bureau.

"This is the last state we will visit," says Chae. "We have been to most of the western states. They are leaving Pitt County today and from here they go to Washington, D.C. for ten days. Then they return to Korea to make use of their new-found knowledge.

In each state visited, the pair has studied with Soil Conservation officers except in Colorado and Mississippi.

In Colorado they visited a government research laboratory and in Mississippi they worked with the Army Corps of Engineers.

In Korea, the pair say, one water reservoir serves several farms. One reservoir will irrigate a minimum of 700 acres and a reservoir might serve as many as 30,000 acres.

Canals carry the water supply from the reservoirs to individual farms.

"Farming in our country is quite different from here," said Chae. "In our country each farm has only five or six acres. However, farmers own their land. In fact only the farmer can have farm land in Korea. Thus there can be no absentee ownership of land.

Due to the smallness of the farms, little equipment such as that used on American farms can be used in Korea.

Chae says the land is mountains and the farms small.

"We can't adapt to equipment such as you use," he declares. "Due to the rugged terrain and big population 'we don't have any wasteland or any crop rotation.'" Chae notes.

Miss U. S. A. Married, Bounced From Contest To Pick Miss Universe

LONG BEACH, Calif. (AP)—The stately, stunning Miss United States in the Miss Universe contest was disqualified today for being married.

The Maryland girl who gave her name as Miss Leona Gage but actually is the wife of an airman and mother of two sons, will be stripped of her title and prizes worth thousands.

Heir to the crown as fairest in the land is beautiful Miss Utah, runnerup in the Miss United States finale last Wednesday night. However, Charlotte Sheffield, 20, of Salt Lake City, can't be among the 15 finalists in Miss Universe judging tonight.

Contest officials said this is because she did not compete against 32 foreign beauties in the preliminaries last night, and thus could not be compared with them in official judging.

Leona was one of the 15 to enter the finals. Her place will be taken by the girl who was 16th. Officials were meeting this morning to determine which girl.

Leona denied tearfully last night and again this morning that she was married—even in the face of reports from relatives and friends that she was.

Finally, this morning, she broke down and sobbed out the story to contest officials. Then she went into seclusion.

This is the first year contest rules have required that entrants be single.

Leona, who gave her age as 21, actually is 18. She was married in Wichita Falls, Tex., Feb. 3, 1954, to Gene Norris Ennis, 28, Air Force sergeant now stationed at Friendship International airport at Baltimore. They have two children, David Nathan, 2, and Gene Jr., 3.

Her winnings would have included a $1,000 wardrobe, an $1,100 trailer, a $2,900 contract with a cosmetics firm and a trip to Europe.

Miss Utah inherits all these, with the possible exception of the wardrobe, which Leona already has picked up.

"We don't know what to do about that," a contest official said.

Another official added: "She's young and pretty and once she got into this thing, one thing just led to another."

Washington (AP)—The defense today rested its case in the Clinton segregation trial without calling further witnesses.

Chief Defense Counsel Robert L. Dobbs, Memphis, told U. S. Dist. Judge Robert L. Taylor after two witnesses testified briefly this morning that "in order to avoid consuming any more time, the defense for the 10 defendants rest their case."

Northern segregationist John Kasper's lawyer J. Benjamin Simmons, said he concurred. He represents only Kasper.

U. S. Dist. Atty. John C. Crawford Jr. rose and said, "that's all for the government, too."

The only defense witnesses to testify were Ted White, a Clinton fireman, and Guy M. Jones, foreman in a knitting mill at Clinton.

White's testimony was that the restraining order, prohibiting interference with integration of Clinton High School, was not fully read by U. S. Marshal Frank Jones.

Quares testified that everything was quiet around the high school prior to Dec. 4. That was the day when the Rev. Paul Turner escorted six Negro students to school and was beaten immediately afterward.

Crawford, however, brought out the fact that Jones began work every day at 7 a.m. Jones said he was on vacation Dec. 4, a Tuesday.

Top Georgia-Florida Sales Up $4.50 Over Last Year

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The first 1957 flue-cured tobacco sales averaged $4.50 a hundred above the 1956 opening in a relatively light turnover on the 28 Georgia-Florida markets yesterday.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture reported opening sales of $921,696 gross for $4,775,063, an average of $53.32 a hundred.

For last season the comparative figures were 11,332,728 pounds for $5,555,276, an average of $49.02.

Volume thus was off nearly 2 1/2 million pounds. Despite the hefty increases in prices, cash returns were down around three quarters of a million dollars.

Observers suggested that yesterday's bellwedge price average probably was a new record. They noted that last year's season's gross average of $48.01 was only about $3 under the old 1953 record peak — a somewhat smaller margin than the jump in the opening day average this season compared with last.

The 1953 opening figures were not available for comparison. Many of the growers are expecting even higher prices. Scattered reports from the belt indicated they were still holding back somewhat today in their offerings on a chance that prices would rise.

Sales as light or perhaps lighter than yesterday's opening were in prospect. A full volume turnover is expected Monday, start of the markets first full week.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture said opening day prices Thursday were $1 to $10 per hundred pounds above first day prices last year.

Best demand was centered on leaf, lower quality grades of lugs and better primings, mostly up $4 to $6. Only in one instance did a grade show a decline. Best thin nondescript lost $1.

The bulk of sales brought from $30 to $63 per hundred. The estimated general average at several markets ranged from $53 to $57.

Three Georgia markets reflected the general average but showed a drop in volume from opening day last year.

At Tifton, Supervisor Carl Harris reported 660,260 pounds were sold for $353,173 at an average of $53.21. Last year 668,926 pounds were sold for $342,480 at an average of $51.20.

Douglas Supervisor Page Loftis listed sales of 511,650 pounds for $267,327 at an average of $52.25. Last year 713,780 pounds were sold for $368,354 at an average of $51.61.

The Waycross market reported 226,400 pounds sold for $124,875 at an average of $55.03. Last year 307,132 pounds were sold for $156,204 at an average of $50.86.

Sales last year on the first day grossed 11,332,728 pounds and averaged $49.02.

Averages on heavy volume grades were from $2 to $23 above their respective support levels.

Several markets reported stabilization corp. Receipts under the government loan program at less than an estimated one per cent of sales.

WASHINGTON (AP)—A surplus of $1,645,000,000 was recorded by the federal government for the fiscal year which ended June 30.

The Treasury and the Budget Bureau reported the amount today.

The balance for fiscal 1957 was the second successive black-ink showing. A third balanced budget recommended by President Eisenhower now is pending before Congress.

The statement issued by Secretary of the Treasury Humphrey and Director Percival Brundage of the Budget Bureau showed federal receipts of $9,989,000,000 and expenditures of $9,344,000,000 for the 12 months ending June 30.

Expenditures were 44 million dollars higher than were estimated in January when the fiscal year was half over, while receipts were 361 million dollars higher than the January estimate.

Commissioners To Set Vacation, Sick Leave

Pitt County Commissioners will meet with heads of the county's departments tonight to discuss a uniform policy of vacation and sick leaves for all county employees under jurisdiction of the Commissioners.

The meeting stems from legislation passed by the 1957 General Assembly giving Boards of Commissioners of the counties full authority to set vacations and sick leaves for county employees who are under the state merit system and for county employees under the State Extension Service.

Prior to this year the commissioners had authority to set vacations and sick leaves only for its employees who were not part of either of those systems. Vacation and sick leave for merit system employees of the county were set by the state Merit System Council and vacation and sick leave for extension service employees were also set by the state.

As a result, one group of regulations governed the county's employees in the Health and Welfare Departments and Mental Health Clinic who are under the state merit system, and another the employees of the Farm and Home Agents offices who are under the Extension Service. A third set of regulations set by the County Commissioners governed the county employees who were not included in either of the other two groups.

In the past, vacations of employees of the County Board of Education have been set by that board and the County ABC Board has set vacation regulations for its employees. A county official said this morning these two boards probably will continue to set the vacation policies for their employees.

H. R. Gray, county auditor, said tonight's meeting probably will be a discussion of the problem between the Commissioners and the department heads. Final announcement of the overall policy by the Commissioners is not expected until later.

In the past, regular employees of the county other than those under the Extension Service or merit system, have been receiving two weeks vacation each year, non-accumulative. Sick leave has been established by the Board of Commissioners in individual cases.

County employees under the extension service and merit system have been receiving three weeks vacation annually and permitted to carry over as much as 30 days accumulated vacation from one year to the next. They have also received sick leave of approximately 12 days a year which may be accumulated over an indefinite period of time.

At the present time there are approximately 14 county employees who are under the extension service regulations, 43 under the merit system program and approximately 46 other permanent employees of the county exclusive of the Board of Education and ABC Board.

Tonight's meeting will be held at 7:30 in the Commissioners' room at the courthouse.

Clinton Segregation Trial Closes Defense Testimony

WASHINGTON (AP)—Sen. Knowland (R-Calif.) said today he plans to offer "further clarifying amendments" to the controversial Section 3 of the civil rights bill before the Senate recesses tonight.

He said "no specific language has been worked out as yet" but that he expected this to be done during the course of his day in consultation with Northern Democratic leaders.

The Senate Republican leader gave this word to reporters after a meeting of GOP senators which he said was given over to "general discussion" of the bill.

There were indications, however, that there had been some warm words in the closed-door session.

Sen. Aiken (R-Vt.) left it in an obviously irritated mood; and told reporters: "Some of these people don't want a civil rights bill. They want a campaign issue for 1958 and 1960."

Aiken has joined with Sen. Russell D-Ga., leader of the Southern opposition, in an effort to amend the House-passed bill so it would be limited to assuring voting rights for Negroes and other minority groups.

"If they really want a civil rights bill they could get one in three days—by the middle of next week," Aiken said. "But some of them don't want a reasonable bill."

Aiken said some civil rights sponsors are "asking powers for the attorney general that even Franklin D. Roosevelt never even thought of asking."

"They are not satisfied with something that could be approved," he said. "They want to go into the whole field of human relations."

WASHINGTON (AP)—The House voted 155-74 today to slash a third off the economic aid fund President Eisenhower asked to support defense programs of America's allies.

The standing vote, subject to a later roll call, amounted to a reversal in a see-saw battle as the House began a day of showdown voting on Eisenhower's multibillion-dollar bill.

The House action would slash a ceiling of 600 million dollars on the defense support fund for the current year. Eisenhower originally sought 900 million for this fund which he says is needed to shore up economies of poor, anti-Communist countries like Korea and Formosa which border the Iron Curtain.

Foreign Aid Cut By House Vote

Eisenhower originally sought 900 million for this fund which he says is needed to shore up economies of poor, anti-Communist countries like Korea and Formosa which border the Iron Curtain.

At one point, the House had cut the figure to 500 million.

Then on an earlier vote today it voted to add 300 million, bringing the fund up to 800 million dollars. This action was taken on a 172-154 teller vote.

ABC Officer Goes Up Wrong Trail

NEW BERN, N.C. (AP)—A State Alcoholic Beverage Control Board agent, Albert Russell of New Bern, was poking around a swampy area near Cherry Point looking for moonshiners.

He saw a trail which looked as if it had been made by a boat. He cautiously guided his own motorboat into the swamp grass.

It wasn't moonshiners. It was alligators — a mother and her young ones.

Russell retreated.

Memories Of 50 Years Of Medical Practice Recalled By Doctor

They wanted me to practice as close to home as possible.

The 78-year-old doctor, with a twinkle in his eye, went on to say, "Why I can remember coming back here as if it were yesterday."

It was on a Sunday morning in 1907 when I got into town and everything was very quiet, making it seem that I was the only person alive in the vicinity.

"This illusion didn't last for long," he related with a thoughtful smile.

Since Dr. Frizzelle began his practice he has delivered an estimated 6,000 babies, many of whom are grown men and women living in Ayden now. Due to sickness seven years ago, he no longer does maternity work.

He has maintained the same office all during his 50 years of practice, although the building he now occupies was built in 1913.

While taking a post graduate course in New York in 1913, the four room structure serving as his office burned along with four other nearby buildings on Railroad St.

A friend wired him the unfortunate news and while he was on his way home he personally designed plans for a new building to be constructed with five rooms.

Built shortly afterward his structure still serves as his office.

Dr. Frizzelle recalled that he was one of the first Ayden residents to get a "horseless carriage." At the time he purchased the two-cylinder Maxwell convertible, he had been practicing medicine for a little more than five years.

When he bought the vehicle, the automobile company sent a New York chauffeur down to help him learn how to operate "the thing."

"We sure had some funny experiences before I learned how to drive the car," he related.

"Coming down the road, you could hear us coming two or three miles away."

Since that time the old Ayden physician has seen many changes ranging from better roads to an established County Health Department to many new faces, many of which he brought into the world.

He married Frances H. Hardy, a girl reared in his neighborhood. The two have no children.

"Thoughtfully he stated, 'I think my Lord that I have been blessed to be able to practice medicine here for 50 years, years filled with happiness and personal satisfaction.'

When asked when he planned to retire he said, "Not now."

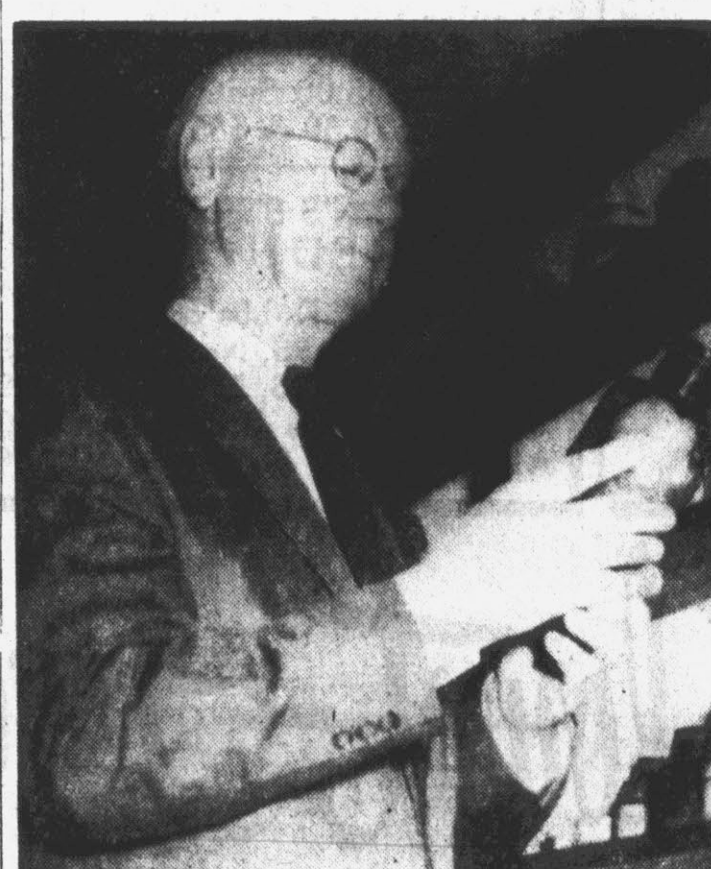

While he continued to talk a patient came into the outer office.

"I'll be with you in just a minute," the old doctor spoke out as the man sat down in the waiting room.

Pushing his chair back from his desk and getting up to serve his fellow man, Dr. Frizzelle said, "You know you cannot die right unless you live right."

"I feel that my last 50 years have been well spent."

Memories Of 50 Years Of Medical Practice Recalled By Doctor

50 YEARS OF SERVICE ... "Doesn't regret a minute of it"

By EVERETTE PARKER Reflector Staff Writer

AYDEN — The genial old doctor leaned back in his chair and began to relate a number of his many experiences in and around Ayden and Pitt County.

He should and did know what he was talking about since he has been around for "quite a spell."

Dr. M. T. Frizzelle celebrated his Golden Anniversary of medical practice here on the first day of July.

"You know," he said, "I have seen good times and hard times but never have I regretted a minute of my practice."

"My work has been hard at times, but anything is hard when you go at it diligently."

"I have put my heart and soul into practicing medicine."

Dr. Frizzelle was born and reared on a farm near what is now known as Maury. The oldest of four boys, he graduated from high school near the turn of the century and went on to Trinity College in Durham (now known as Duke University), graduating with an A.B. Degree in 1903.

After obtaining a degree at Trinity he entered the Medical College of Virginia at Richmond and graduated in May of 1907.

Shortly after passing the State Board, Dr. Frizzelle came to Ayden to set up his practice in a four-room building on Railroad St.

"I came back home to work thereby yielding to the wishes of my parents," he said.

"They wanted me to practice as close to home as possible."

The 78-year-old doctor, with a twinkle in his eye, went on to say, "Why I can remember coming back here as if it were yesterday."

Give Your Baby Sound Footwork

FASTIDIOUS BABY . . . Mom shines baby's shoes with a good polish that doesn't rub off, keeps her in leather shoes with uppers until she gets proper control of her feet.

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures Writer

The baby who is going through a first summer wearing shoes needs careful supervision of feet.

Sound feet are very important to those first steps. It takes about 20 years for the foot to be fully formed, we are told, and in each stage of growth the child needs a shoe that helps the foot to grow without too much restraint.

A small child's feet will grow more rapidly than Mom anticipates. She must be alert to the need for checking the child's feet to make sure that the shoes are not too tight. They may not show any wear and still be too short, too narrow or too small.

Experts say that if soles curl at the tip, shoes are getting too short. If edges of soles look straggly it may indicate that shoes are too narrow. An in-step-side edge of the heel that is especially worn may reveal ankle weakness. If the lining is worn, the shoe may be too small.

First shoes should be training shoes with supple leather uppers. These give a small child's toes space to spread. The sturdy leather soles, too, give him a stable base on which to stand, protecting tiny feet. Avoid putting the toddler in sneakers or sandals, no matter how hot the weather. Let him go barefoot on beach or at home if you like, but avoid shoes that do not protect the feet.

Baby will outgrow that first pair of shoes in four to six weeks. He'll need another pair of shoes about two months later, and about every three months until he is 10. If a child's toes are to grow straight, be sure that each pair of new shoes gives him growing space at the tip of the shoe equal to the width of your thumb, and discard them before his toes have begun to crowd it.

It's a good idea to wipe baby's shoes clean with a damp cloth and a little soap before applying polish to the shoes. For white shoes, choose a good white polish that doesn't rub off.

If baby's shoes get rained on, keep them away from the radiator. Stuff them with paper and let them dry away from the heat. Baby should have an alternate pair of shoes so that one can get a day's airing after a day of wear.

WACs Keep In Step In New Green Uniform

Women are usually the leaders in the world of fashion, but in the Army there has been a turnaround.

A future change in the Hattie Carnegie styled uniform for women in the Army has just won the approval of the Secretary of the Army. The reason for the coming change-over is so that women in the Army—including WACs, nurses and other medical personnel—can keep in step with the new green service uniform, already adopted by their male counterparts.

The new uniform has met with approval at Fort McPherson. Lt. Col. Cora M. Foster, WAC Staff Advisor for the Third U. S. Army, says the Army Secretary's approval was in accordance with the concept that the family of uniforms for Army women should parallel as closely as possible that of the men. It is believed that this will achieve a marked improvement in appearance and will identify Army personnel as a unit.

The change also will eliminate some of the less wearable features of the present tange uniform, which could be changed only through the experience of wear over an extended period of time. She says, "a woman's dress blue uniform, similar in color and styling to that of the men, also has been introduced for off-duty wear and plans are now being made for transition to the new green uniform, however, the change-over will not be initiated immediately."

It will depend upon the length of time necessary to make practical and economical utilization of stock now on hand. Indications are that final transition may not be completed until 1961.

The new uniform is grey-green in color and is the same design as the present optional purchase summer taupe with a few modifications in cut for better fit. It has a fitted single breasted coat and matching six gore skirt. The hat retains the rolling half brim and the crown has been moulded to fit the head following the rounded detail of the brim, the upper portion of the lapel and the pocket detail. Leather accessories will be black.

By DR. ED HIRSHBERG

Being an unblushing Clardi fan, we are here to advise you to take a look at "The Shock Reaction to Poetry," in the latest "Accent on Poetry" edition of The Saturday Review. John Clardi is himself a "modern" poet who has distinguished himself by making some of the best English translations of Dante's works ever written. In "The Shock Reaction," he defends modern poets who sometimes are hard to understand, claiming that their unintelligibility isn't always their fault, but that the modern reader too often isn't equipped or isn't willing to work hard enough to understand—obscure but worthwhile meanings in modern poetry.

HIRSHBERG

"Obscurity," concludes Clardi, "is what happens when the writer under-takes a theme and method for which the reader is not sufficiently prepared." In other words, if you don't understand a modern poem, maybe it's your ignorance, and not the poet's lack of ability to write clearly, that's to blame. We second Clardi's motion—and recommend highly the whole issue of The Saturday Review in which his provocative and thoughtful piece appears.

When World War II broke out, Dan was sent to France; his knowledge of the wireless helped the troops to capture and uncover many prisoners. After the war, Dan founded a radio station in his home town. This was a great occasion, because it was Dan's dream, also because a radio station in this small town encouraged others to begin them.

This story is the same as stories of many people during this time who helped to benefit future generations of mankind. I enjoyed this book and learned many interesting points from it.

Burden Of Proof Again On Gov. Hodges

Governor Hodges has stirred up a busy hornets nest with his appointment of Capus Waynick as adjutant general, chief of the state's National Guard. And to add insult to injury, the Budget Bureau announced only yesterday that the salary attached to the post has been raised $2,000 to $11,000.

Capus Waynick is a capable administrator and has proved himself an able government official over a long period of years. He has served well the state of North Carolina in various capacities and he has also served with credit in several federal appointments.

But his public career has been political, not military. That, in a nutshell, seems to be the major objection of retired National Guard leaders who feel free to express their opinion on the appointment by Gov. Hodges. Previously governors of the state have chosen men with military background for the post of adjutant general. Gov. Hodges has chosen a man with a political background whose military experience is confined to a year or so during World War I.

We can understand the concern voiced by members of the North Carolina National Guard over the departure from precedent in this appointment. Certainly we share with the retired Guard officers the hope that North Carolina's National Guard will not be drawn into partisan politics or any other kind of politics for that matter. Such an eventuality could seriously reduce the effectiveness and efficiency of the state's outstanding National Guard organization.

Gov. Hodges has indicated he will have chores other than military for his new adjutant general. We trust that does not mean the National Guard will be relegated to a secondary position by the governor while the new adjutant general is assigned additional duties which will take time which should be devoted to the state's military organization.

Like other of Gov. Hodges' decisions which shocked many North Carolinians, this departure from tradition may prove advantageous to the state. In the meantime, however, Gov. Hodges should not delude himself by thinking his appointment of Waynick as adjutant general has caused more favorable than unfavorable reaction among citizens of the state. As on previous occasions the burden of proof is on Gov. Hodges to show the people he has done the best thing for all of North Carolina.

Opening Prices Offer Brighter Prospects

Opening prices on Georgia tobacco markets offer encouragement to the rest of the flue-cured tobacco region which still has most of its crop in the field.

If the trend of past years on the Georgia belt holds true, the $5 to $6 increase over last year's opening day prices will strengthen considerably before the selling season is over. It would suggest that predictions of an average price of $60 or better on the Eastern Belt are not far-fetched figures.

There is another feature of the Georgia opening sales which indicates that prices for the 1957 tobacco crop may be pushed to higher levels by the time the market opens in this section. On opening day sales in Georgia an estimated one per cent of the offerings went under government loan to the Stabilization Corporation. That figure is far lower than was the case during 1956 and points to the fact that domestic and export companies will be competing for every possible pound of leaf they can use from the offerings of the new crop.

To go one step further, if the Stabilization Corporation receives only a small part of the 1957 tobacco crop, its stocks of surplus tobacco will be sharply reduced before the 1958 selling season. With the depletion of the stockpile of tobacco will also go the depressing affect this large surplus has had on tobacco prices.

Though the tobacco region will not receive for its 1957 crop nearly as much as it did for last year's crop, first impressions from the Georgia market opening present a brighter outlook for tobacco farmers than was painted a few weeks ago when estimates were made on the poundage of this year's crop.

Opening of the Georgia markets, in short, has given rise to more optimism over the 1957 crop than any other development in recent months.

Revenue Choice Stirs Interest

(By LYNN NISBET)

REVENUE — Many people outside of North Carolina are manifesting interest in Governor Hodges' selection of a Commissioner of Revenue. The Revenue Department has a lot of dealings with nonresident taxpayers.

Other State agencies with out of state responsibility are the Secretary of State, who handles papers in chartering and domesticating corporations; the Department of Insurance, which has substantial quasi-judicial powers in fixing premium rates and business practices; and the Utilities Commission, which regulates communication, transportation and utility services.

Out of states have peculiar interest in the tax collecting set-up under the new revenue act, designed to encourage the development of industry in the state. While the new law spells out the application of tax levies to greater degree than the old statute, there is still a good deal of discretion left to the Revenue Commissioner for interpretation and administrative rulings.

It is no secret that a large part of the protest against the old law was occasioned by administrative regulations and quasi-judicial rulings of the commissioner. Admittedly the old law was bad, the new version much better, from viewpoint of out of states contemplating locations here. Application of the old law could have been made less harsh by lenient regulations within statutory limits. The new law can be made less attractive to industry by restricting rules.

That is why so many people who have shown interest in establishing or expanding business in North Carolina are concerned about administration of the tax laws.

QUALIFICATIONS — Out of states are concerned only with the attitude of the man chosen to head the tax collecting agency, without regard to his name or political affiliations. Home folks, who know the individuals and their political connections, are interested also in personalities. With that complex situation facing him, it is easy to understand why Governor Hodges postponed the appointment for seven months after Eugene Shaw, incumbent commissioner, resigned at the first of the year.

If the new tax law is to bring in the additional business which its sponsors anticipate, the tax administrator must have the confidence of the men who are responsible for locating industrial plants. But—these out of state folks do not vote here, and the exigencies of practical politics require that this major appointment must please a large number of North Carolinians. It will be very difficult, but it is possible, to get a man who meets both sets of specifications. Governor

Hodges has said he will announce the appointment soon after his return on July 30 from a combination vacation and business trip to Canada, New York and the West Coast.

PERSONALITIES — Two men whose names had figured in speculation about this job have been eliminated. Ben C. Trotter, Leaksville attorney, was named chairman of the State Board of elections; and Capus M. Waynick, High Point politico-statesman, was appointed Adjutant General.

Capitol Square gossip is that James Currie, director of tax research, would like to have the revenue post. It is rumored that the Governor would like to have Edwin Gill, State Treasurer as administrator of the new revenue program, because of his previous experience in that and as chief of the U.S. Internal Revenue office at Greensboro. Those suggestions make both sense and nonsense.

RELATIVITY — There is growing belief that in the new scheme of things tax research may be more important than tax collecting. Jim Currie has demonstrated his worth in the field of tax research, and many people want him to stay there—at a salary equal to or above that of the chief tax collector.

The post of Revenue Commissioner carries a higher salary and perhaps more prestige than the office of State Treasurer, per se. But the statutory ex-officio appendages of the treasurer as chairman of the Local Government Commission, both State and local government retirement systems, as a member of the State Board of Education and half a dozen other boards and commissions, give that office importance second only to the Governor. Gill is loath to swap places with anybody.

During the past few days there have been rumors that the Governor might ask Commissioner Shaw to hold on for a few months more. It is believed that Shaw would be very happy to stay on permanent basis, but perhaps not for a short uncertain tenure. He has sold his home in Raleigh and has moved most of his personal effects back to Greensboro, where he has been holding a law office since January.

Opinion rather freely expressed by spokesmen for some big taxpayers is that continuing uncertainty about a permanent Commissioner of Revenue is retarding the industrialization program which the new tax laws were designed to speed up. It is hoped that Governor Hodges can find a man within a short time in whom the business interests both in and out of the state will have confidence, thus removing doubts about the equitable administration of the revenue act.

rest, and prosecutions. New York and several other states have found it necessary to enact tough commercial bribery laws.

CONFIRMATION IN WASHINGTON — Recent Congressional inquiries, while exposing something less than honorable practices of labor leaders, also uncovered several lax practices by business organizations. No one questions the rights of business firms to pay commissions or "finders' fees" for new business, but when these payments take on the coloration of graft, there is cause for public concern. Incidentally, why hasn't the Federal Trade Commission taken action against some of those concerns whose restraint of trade was disclosed in the Dave Beck inquiry?

Business organizations, collectively and individually, have an obligation to the community — if not to their stockholders — to crack down on those who luxuriate in payolas.

Sometimes management itself is to blame. In one case, a purchasing agent received a new car each year from a principal supplier. The management knew about it and did nothing. If it prohibited the "gift" it would have to raise the purchaser's salary $4,000 or $5,000 a year. And it figured it couldn't get that much of a price reduction from the supplier.

TOAST, N.C. MAY BE HOME OF TOASTER FACTORY — If you manufacture toasters, it would be fitting — and profitable — to have your plant in a town called Toast.

Everybody who heard about it would say, "Gee! What do you know!" and soon you would be as famous as Kohler, of Kohler, Wis.

One toaster manufacturer may enjoy that distinction. It has erected a $1,000,000 plant in a suburb of Mt. Airy, N.C., known as Toast. Now the manufacturer is trying to get the government to recognize the name and to use it in post office cancellations. The Post Office Department is said to be willing.

LIVE LIFE TO ITS FULL — Nothing is colder than an empty house. I stood shivering in one some months ago and when I came out into the open air, although the temperature was not high, it seemed that I was suddenly enveloped in a blanket of warmth and comfort.

In like manner, there is nothing colder than an empty life—a life devoid of high purpose, generous thoughts, friendship, affectionate relationships with members of the family. People who have no religion, who never go to church, who blather about believing in a supreme being and trying to live up to the Golden Rule — these people for the most part live empty lives.

By RAY TUCKER
WASHINGTON — An economy managed and engineered by Uncle Sam underlies the thinking of numerous Democrats now investigating and attacking the Administration's monetary and financial policies. They would have the Federal government "administer" production, prices and wages as it did during part of the Roosevelt-Truman years.

Nothing has developed before the Byrd Monetary or Kefauver Antitrust Committees to justify this theory, although voluntary changes are envisaged even by President Eisenhower. Despite a profusion of testimony by the so-called experts, no satisfactory explanation for the current inflationary trend has been vouchsafed.

The knowledgeable gentlemen have agreed to disagree, without regard to ideologies and political affiliations, on one of the most important problems confronting the American people today. It has been, in a sense, a painful exhibition. LIKE COUNSELS SELF-CONTROL There has, however, been a generally accepted thesis stemming from these surveys. It is that the nation's industrial, business and economic structure has become so big that it is not responsive to the controls over money and credit now exercised by the Treasury, Federal Reserve System and other governmental agencies.

President Eisenhower, in accord with his philosophy, counsels self-control by management, labor and consumers. The concurrent increases of steel prices and wages suggest that his request has been disregarded. But the White House feels that the $6-a-ton boost for steel would have been much greater save for his warning.

Oh, That Dreaded Needle

This sad tale of woe began when I was nothing more than a mere existence clinging to my mother's arm.

Most stories, or whatever name you choose to distinguish them by, have a general theme or title so you might say this column is to be entitled "Needles."

Ever since I was small my mother has told me time and time again about the "shines" I used to kick up when she took me to have my annual shot or miscellaneous inoculations.

Truthfully I never was able to figure out how in the world time passed so fast or why it was necessary for me, of all people, to have to take "that thing". But . . . all in all I guess I made out fairly well because I would not go to the doctor unless my parents would first give me some loot.

By loot (I learned about good business and percentages early in life) I mean money. Some folks might call this a bribe.

I remember very well on one of the most horrible experiences of my life. It was almost as bad as going to bed without supper, having to bathe or spending a whole week without allowance money.

By (The Nashville Tennessean) On page one of this newspaper last Saturday, there appeared a picture of a 17-year-old girl lying amid the wreckage of a car in which she and three young companions had just met instant death. Now comes a letter, signed by "A Parent", protesting our use of the photo and asking, "Why is it necessary to make such a picture of a dead person?"

Because this is a question that is asked from time to time, we take this opportunity to answer it publicly.

First, the pictures of accident victims are used because they help fulfill the primary function of a newspaper, which is to report the news. It is our aim that readers who pick up The Nashville Tennessean each morning will find in it a complete and balanced account of major news events of the preceding 24 hours. An important part of this account, of course, is pictures. And if these pictures are not always pleasant, neither are the happenings which make up a day's news. To suppress the un-

A group of my little friends and myself were playing ball of some kind I got a hit and slid into second base. During the process my leg was badly cut and I was taken to the doctor.

It just so happened at the time another youngster had been hit by an automobile and was all broken up. He was cut all over, had three or four broken ribs and bones, and was in very critical condition.

He was being treated in a room near the front of the doctor's office while I was in a room near the back of the building. After all, I had only a small flesh wound.

Despite that fact, when the old boy gave it to me with that needle I out-screamed, out-hollered and out-begged my young friend two or three doors up. At least that is what the men and women in the waiting room said. In fact, they predicted I would make a good first sergeant in the Army when I got of age, provided my voice did not change to a higher pitch.

About eight years later my journalism class in school was preparing to leave for New York and I got sick. In a panic I was faced with either taking a shot of penicillin or staying home.

After many hours of sweat and thought I finally decided to take the shot.

I walked into the doctor's office and on back to the back room and rolled up my sleeve without saying a word, even to my mother who probably at the time thought her son had lost his fear of the dreaded needle.

Shortly the nurse, a hard woman if I have ever seen one, came in and, without batting an eye, said, "Drop your pants."

I looked at her, blushed and said that I would not do any such thing under any circumstances.

"Well," she said, "we will be more than glad to give it to you in the arm, but you will be sorry."

The old so-and-so knew what she was talking about. She hit me with that needle, giving it everything she had. That cotton pickin' thing went all the way up to the hilt.

I watched slowly and then I passed out. The next thing I knew I was lying on a sofa about an hour later.

To make a long story short, since I see our News Editor peering over my shoulder and saying with his eyes, "cut that thing short", I have, to this day, the same old fear of the needle.

That dreaded needle.

Pinning Down Ike

By JAMES MARLOW
WASHINGTON (AP) — Trying to pin President Eisenhower down at his news conferences—on precisely what he wants or doesn't want in his administration's civil rights bill—is not only tough. It has been unsuccessful.

He has been asked about that bill at nine of his 17 news conferences this year — the last time was yesterday — and he hasn't been specific once.

For example, he was asked yesterday for the benefit of his thinking on enforcement of the 14th Amendment, which promises equal protection under the laws, and the 15th, which protects voting rights.

It appeared, when he started out that he was going to get down to cases and answer like a lawyer. But it didn't turn out that way. He said:

"Well, you are asking me to become something of a lawyer in a very short order here, but I will.

"As for the moment, I have announced time and again the objectives I am seeking in civil rights, and the means that I want from the legislature in order that everybody will know where they stand, and it can proceed in an orderly manner.

"I issued a little statement last evening, republishing of what the objectives are. Now, the matter is now, as you know, under debate in the Senate, and I think that for the moment, I don't think to do is for most of us to let them do the debating, and we will see what comes out. I am very hopeful that a reasonable, acceptable bill will come out."

The statement he issued Tuesday night was the most specific, even though limited, thing he has said in or out of his news conferences. He said he favored trial by jury, without a jury, or disobedience of a court order in a case involving voting rights. And he backed, in general terms, all of the bill's four sections.

But at his news conference, the answer he gave to a question about section No. 3 angered Northern Democrats who are helping his Republicans fight for the bill.

Under that section the attorney general — without request from anyone — could move in through court orders to force public school integration. Eisenhower was asked if he favored this. His first word was "no," and he added not without a request from "local authorities."

But he quickly backed away from that, saying he didn't want to go further than the "little memorandum I published last evening."

Sen. Douglas (D-Ill.) one of the Northerners fighting for the bill, told the Senate after he heard what Eisenhower said: "It's a very embarrassing position if the President has pulled the rug out from under us."

But Douglas said he wasn't sure what Eisenhower's position was.

At the very start of his news conference he was asked if he was "aware" that this bill, by linking itself up with the Civil War law, would authorize him to call out the troops to back up a court order in civil rights.

"There may be that kind of authority resting somewhere," he replied, "but certainly I am not seeking any additional authority of that kind."

Shortly afterward the leader of his Senate Republicans, Sen. Knowland of California, and one of the leaders of the Northern Democrats, Sen. Humphrey of Minnesota, proposed in the Senate that the old post-Civil War law be abolished.

That use-of-troops tie-up with Eisenhower's civil rights bill has been one of the points the Southern Democrats have hit hardest in their fight against the entire bill.

pleasant, no matter how tragic and regrettable it may be, would not produce a realistic account.

Beyond that, it is our conviction that the pictures of traffic accident victims have a sobering effect on other drivers. All of the written and spoken safety admonitions in the world may be lost on a careless driver, but it is something else again to see—either first-hand or through the medium of photography — the grim results of recklessness. And even the possibility that other lives can be saved by showing how one life was lost cannot be discounted in this age when growing numbers of people are driving more powerful cars at faster speeds on increasingly crowded streets and highways.

We print such pictures, therefore, because we believe they serve a double purpose. To omit them would be easy enough and would relieve us of a task that we do not enjoy. But it would not be in keeping with our conception of a newspaper's responsibility to the public.

By RAY TUCKER
WASHINGTON — An economy managed and engineered by Uncle Sam underlies the thinking of numerous Democrats now investigating and attacking the Administration's monetary and financial policies. They would have the Federal government "administer" production, prices and wages as it did during part of the Roosevelt-Truman years.

Nothing has developed before the Byrd Monetary or Kefauver Antitrust Committees to justify this theory, although voluntary changes are envisaged even by President Eisenhower. Despite a profusion of testimony by the so-called experts, no satisfactory explanation for the current inflationary trend has been vouchsafed.

The knowledgeable gentlemen have agreed to disagree, without regard to ideologies and political affiliations, on one of the most important problems confronting the American people today. It has been, in a sense, a painful exhibition. LIKE COUNSELS SELF-CONTROL There has, however, been a generally accepted thesis stemming from these surveys. It is that the nation's industrial, business and economic structure has become so big that it is not responsive to the controls over money and credit now exercised by the Treasury, Federal Reserve System and other governmental agencies.

President Eisenhower, in accord with his philosophy, counsels self-control by management, labor and consumers. The concurrent increases of steel prices and wages suggest that his request has been disregarded. But the White House feels that the $6-a-ton boost for steel would have been much greater save for his warning.

"Well," she said, "we will be more than glad to give it to you in the arm, but you will be sorry."

The old so-and-so knew what she was talking about. She hit me with that needle, giving it everything she had. That cotton pickin' thing went all the way up to the hilt.

I watched slowly and then I passed out. The next thing I knew I was lying on a sofa about an hour later.

To make a long story short, since I see our News Editor peering over my shoulder and saying with his eyes, "cut that thing short", I have, to this day, the same old fear of the needle.

That dreaded needle.

Caleb, Man of Faith, Courage ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON By Alfred J. Buescher

Scripture—Numbers 13; 14:1-10, 24, 30, 38; Joshua 14:6-15; 15:13-19; Judges 1:14-15.

The Lord told Moses to send men into the land of Canaan to look over the land and people and bring back a report.

The spies came back bringing a great bunch of grapes, and pomegranates and figs.

The people became discouraged. They began to murmur against Moses and Aaron.

When Caleb was 85 years old, he told Joshua that the Lord had kept him strong and well.

Then an angry God appeared in the tabernacle of the congregation before all the children of Israel. He said that none of the faithless, rebellious people should see the land that He had promised them.

Oil Industry Seeks Funds To Meet Demand Increase

By SAM DAWSON
 NEW YORK (AP)—The oil industry is looking for 115 billion dollars. That is what oilmen estimate it will cost to find and develop enough new oil sources to supply the increasing demands of the economy of the non-Communist world in the next 10 years.

At present oilmen count as obtainable reserves only 40 per cent of the oil in known fields. This long-range planning is going on despite today's chief immediate problem: oversupply and an unexpected lag in domestic demand.

Both world and U.S. demand continues to grow each year—in Western Europe much faster than here. But at the start of 1957 most oilmen were predicting that domestic demand would increase by 5 per cent this year. At the half year point the increase has been only 1.4 per cent.

Maryland Police Offering Apology To Tar Heel Man

BALTIMORE (AP)—Col. Elmer F. Munshower, superintendent of Maryland's State Police, has apologized to a North Carolina optician for the way he was treated when arrested on two minor traffic violations.

Oilmen are most surprised by the failure of demand for gasoline to spur as usual with the start of the vacation rush.

Domestic demand for crude oil—from which come some 2,000 other end products besides gasoline—is currently running between eight and nine million barrels a day.

Economists at the Chase Manhattan Bank who keep a sharp eye on the oil industry now estimate that by 1967 domestic demand will have risen to more than 14 1/2 million barrels a day, and demand in the rest of the non-Communist world will be almost as high.

The API study of the problem of producing 28 million barrels a day 10 years hence predicts that most of the 115 billion dollars needed will be raised within the oil industry itself.

The API study of the problem of producing 28 million barrels a day 10 years hence predicts that most of the 115 billion dollars needed will be raised within the oil industry itself.

The bank's economists expect the U.S. sources will be supplying 11 million barrels a day and foreign sources 17 million a day. It will cost, industry men estimate, 115 billion dollars to finance that big expansion.

American oilmen are confident they will be able to produce the vast new amount of oil they forecast.

Arthur Miller's Motion For Reversal To Be Heard

By KARL R. BAUMAN
 WASHINGTON (AP)—The judge who convicted playwright Arthur Miller of contempt of Congress hears argument today on a new motion asking a reversal of Miller's conviction.

After the court of appeals upset Singer's conviction, Miller's lawyers for a second time asked McLaughlin to reconsider. They said Singer, in refusing to name persons with whom he attended Communist meetings while he was on the Harvard faculty in the 1940's, did not raise the issue of pertinency.

If the motion is denied, Federal District Judge Charles F. McLaughlin indicated he would impose sentence on the 41-year-old New York writer, husband of actress Marilyn Monroe.

The motion asking for a verdict of acquittal is based on the June 28 action of the U.S. Court of Appeals here in reversing the contempt of congress conviction of Marcus Singer, Cornell University zoology professor.

In overturning Singer's conviction, the Appellate Court merely cited the Supreme Court's June 17 decision striking down the contempt of congress conviction of John T. Watkins, a labor organizer of Rock Island, Ill. That opinion put limits on the questions that can be asked by Congressional committees.

McLaughlin convicted Miller May 31 of unlawfully refusing to answer two questions before a House subcommittee on un-American activities in June 1956. The questions dealt with the identity of persons with whom Miller said he attended meetings of Communist writers in New York in 1947.

On June 28, McLaughlin, acting on the basis of the Watkins decision, threw out one of the two counts upon which he had convinced Miller. He rejected Miller's plea for acquittal on the other count on the ground Miller failed to question the pertinency of the question.

After the court of appeals upset Singer's conviction, Miller's lawyers for a second time asked McLaughlin to reconsider. They said Singer, in refusing to name persons with whom he attended Communist meetings while he was on the Harvard faculty in the 1940's, did not raise the issue of pertinency.

Regulations were adopted yesterday at a board meeting which also saw two new members sworn into office.

The new members are Dr. Zeno L. Edwards Sr. of Washington, N.C., and Dr. Charles R. Bugb of Raleigh. In addition, oaths for new terms were administered to Dr. John R. Bender of Winston-Salem and Dr. Roger Morrison of Asheville.

Counties were divided into three zones for the mosquito control program. Coastal counties in Zone I, where a salt marsh mosquito problem exists, will be eligible for 75 per cent of available state funds on a matching basis.

In Zone II, counties must match the first $1,000 in state aid and put up 75 cents for each 30 cents in further state funds. A maximum allocation of $2,000 would be available to any one county.

Zone III counties would match state funds and would be eligible for a maximum of $500 per year.

The health board met jointly with the Executive Committee of the Stream Sanitation Committee, but failed to reach agreement on elimination of overlapping functions.

The last Legislature left policy decisions in the stream sanitation field to the committee, but shifted administrative authority to the Board of Health. It left to the two agencies the task of working out the details.

Ex-Game Warden Is Turned Loose After Third Trial

NEWLAND, N.C. (AP)—J. Wall Ellis, 64, former Mitchell county game warden twice convicted of manslaughter, was acquitted by a jury yesterday, bringing an end to his third trial.

Ellis was tried on a flexible charge of second degree murder or manslaughter in the shooting of Charlie Young, 47, of Bakersville.

The prosecution sought conviction on either one as the evidence warranted.

The jury deliberated an hour. Ellis was convicted of manslaughter in December, 1954, and sentenced to 4 1/2 years in prison.

Stealing A Still Nets Six Months

BRYSON CITY, N.C. (AP)—Willard Lloyd Dorsey, 23, of Bryson City, received a six-month suspended sentence after pleading guilty to stealing a moonshine still from the county jail.

Police said Dorsey took the still, which had been confiscated in a raid, as he was leaving the building after visiting a friend.

New Weekly Variety Shows Going After Good Talent

By CHARLES MERCER
 NEW YORK (AP)—Tune up your zither, if you play one, and prepare to become a television guest star. The competition for talented guests for next season already is murderous.

It's the result of an interesting development in nighttime programming for the 1957-58 season. We've heard a lot about the "trends" toward Westerns and fairy tales and away from comedians and anthology dramatic shows.

But did you realize that there will be more regular weekly variety shows, basically dependent on professional guests and music, than any other type of program on the three networks?

At least count 12 of these nighttime weekly programs are set for the season. Two others are virtually certain to appear on the home screen. And these don't include shows which seek the relatively unknown zither players such as Ted Mack's "Amateur Hour" and Lawrence Welk's new talent program. They don't include "Your Hit Parade" and the Arthur Godfrey show which does not generally go after the big names.

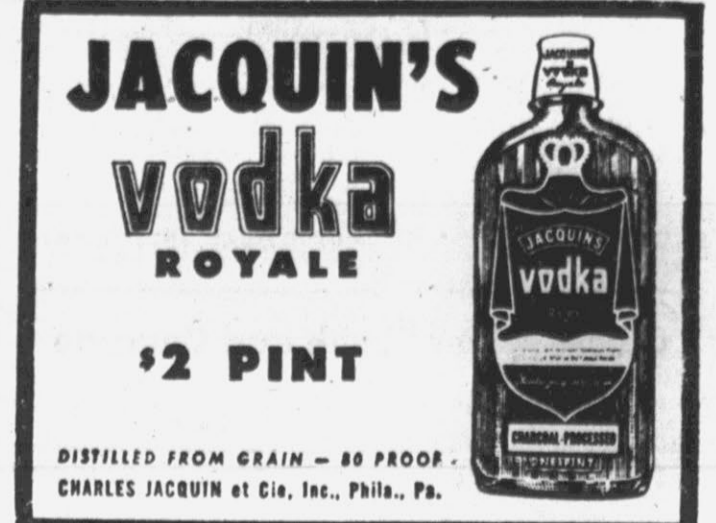

There will indeed be music on all channels at all hours.

NBC-TV leads the field in the number of musical variety shows with Perry Como, Steve Allen, Tennessee Ernie Ford, Gisele MacKenzie, Dinah Shore, and the combination of Eddie Fisher and George Gobel, plus two other weekly variety programs which are expected to be announced soon.

ABC-TV is jumping into the musical variety pond with a big splash too by presenting new weekly programs each featuring Frank Sinatra, Pat Boone, Guy Mitchell and Patrice Munsel. CBS-TV, interestingly, has only two entries at the moment: Ed Sulli-

Kiwanis Outfit Whips Lions In Playoff Contest

Gary Conway and the Kiwanis club dumped the Lions, 7-2, yesterday in the first of a three-game playoff at Little League Park.

The series will decide the overall season champion for the North State Little League. The Lions took first-half honors and the Kiwanis deadlocked it by taking the second-half crown.

Today and tomorrow, the two teams will battle again, unless the Kiwanis take today's game. Game time for each contest is set for 4:30.

Conway went the full distance for the Kiwanis club and held the Lions to three baseknocks. The Lions didn't score until the final inning.

Ernest Larkin and Bobby Smith pitched for the losers. Smith came on in the fifth and it was Larkin's loss.

Kiwanis batters knocked out eight hits. Conway and Bobby Leftwick collected two each to pace the team at bat.

Attack Injures Liberace's Mom

HOLLYWOOD (AP) The mother of Liberace was brutally beaten and kicked by two hooded men who attacked her last night in the garage of the Liberace home in nearby Sherman Oaks.

Police said that Mrs. Frances Liberace, 65, went on an errand into the garage adjoining the home she shares with her pianist son. She tried to return to the house when she saw two men in the garage.

Mrs. Liberace said they pushed her to the floor and began kicking her.

"Hit her again, we'll have something to laugh about," she quoted one of the men as saying.

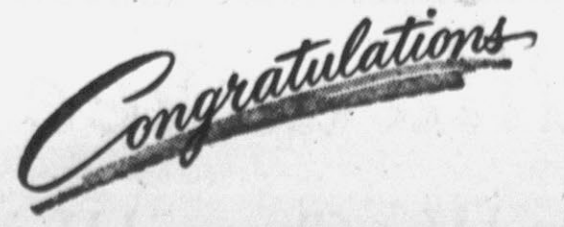

After they left she crawled into the house and telephoned a friend before she lost consciousness.

A physician treated her for multiple bruises and a possible back injury.

Liberace was not home when the attack occurred.

Police said there was no apparent motive for the attack.

The costs of all accidents in the United States in 1956 were enough to provide three shots of Salk vaccine for every person in the world.
