

Warm tonight, Sunday continued hot with scattered afternoon and evening thundershowers.

Find 'Headaches' Bolt Knocks Out Local Transformer

Lightning knocked out an interconnection transformer at the Greenville Utilities plant here last night plunging a large part of Greenville and rural areas to the south and east into darkness for a period ranging from 20 minutes to an hour.

Utilities Superintendent Leonard Bloxam said this morning damage from the bolt of lightning during the thunder storm was the most serious suffered at the power plant in several years. It left Greenville electric power system operating today on its narrowest margin in more than three and one-half years.

The damage, he said, may run as high as $15,000. The electrical bolt at 8:21 last night struck the interconnection transformer which ties the local power plant with lines of Virginia Electric Power Company.

Service in the southern part of the city was restored in approximately one-half hour, but for the eastern part of Greenville lights were out for almost an hour. Utilities officials said they also received 35 to 40 reports from rural areas where the thunder storm had knocked out service at individual homes.

Loss of the 2,500 KVA transformer at the power plant left the only interconnection between Greenville lines and VEPCO lines at the southside power substation which feeds the southern part of the city and rural areas to the east and south which include the Winterville and Ayden systems.

Another boiler was put into operation at the local generation plant this morning to help carry the load on the city's electric system. Bloxam pointed out the loss of the interconnection transformer has in part crippled the capacity of the city's electrical system.

Reports said insurgent forces of Fidel Castro had come down from their mountain hideouts and engaged elements of Batista's army. A military headquarters spokesman said army units encountered a rebel band near Uberos on the south coast of Oriente Province yesterday, killing 10 insurgents and capturing several others.

Resistance To Batista Stiffens

HAVANA (AP)—Resistance to President Fulgencio Batista's regime stiffened in eastern Cuba today as antigovernment strikes and rebel flare ups threatened to spread throughout the area.

Reports said insurgent forces of Fidel Castro had come down from their mountain hideouts and engaged elements of Batista's army. A military headquarters spokesman said army units encountered a rebel band near Uberos on the south coast of Oriente Province yesterday, killing 10 insurgents and capturing several others.

Censorship was in effect on local and incoming foreign newspapers and radio stations and on outgoing news dispatches and details were limited. Local newspapers refrained from giving any news about the political situation.

In the pro-Rebel center of Santiago a group of men forced attendants at a service station to turn on their gasoline pumps last night, then set the place on fire and fled. Sketchy reports from the trouble spots indicated the strike which has gripped Santiago may spread to Manzanillo, Bayamo and Palma Soriano De Holguin in Oriente Province and to Camaguey Province west of Oriente.

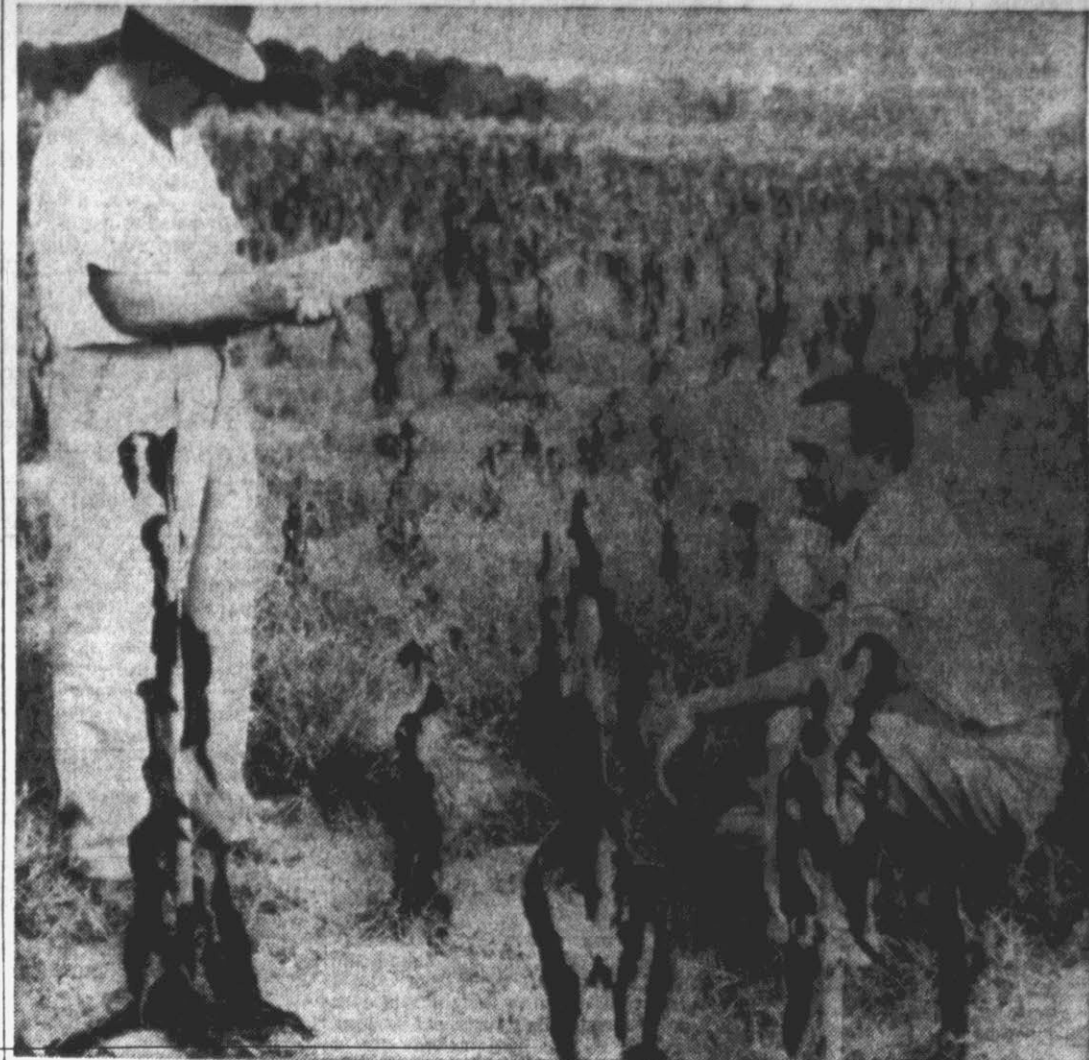

A general work stoppage was called in Santiago. Recently appointed U.S. Ambassador Earl E.T. Smith was in the city when a party of demonstrators, mostly women were set upon by police with fire hoses and arrested many.

The Cuban government received one report that Smith had commented that "any form of excessive police action is repugnant to me," and expressed hope the arrested women would be freed. The report prompted several Cuban officials to label the envoy's remarks improper. A resolution demanding Smith's removal as ambassador was placed before a joint session of Congress last night, but action was deferred indefinitely.

Informed sources said the Batista government had no intention of asking Washington to recall Smith. The State Department ordered the U.S. embassy to send in a full report on the incident and said it was asking a hands-off attitude towards Cuba's internal political situation.

Plans have been completed for the Jaycees' scrap paper collection in Greenville tomorrow. Drive chairman Leland Flanagan said this morning that 12 members of the Junior Chamber of Commerce would participate in the city-wide collection. He said that pick-up operations would begin at 1:30 p.m. and continue until all sections of the city have been covered.

Tobacco Plague Spread Like Wildfire

INSPECTING BLACK SHANK LOSS . . . Field is "worst in county" this year

Two Months Ago, A Fine Crop; Now It's Wiped Out

Now entire rows of tobacco stalks have been wiped out. Spots covering about half an acre can be readily seen with not more than two or three green stalks of tobacco standing.

The Bethel farmer reported there had never been any disease in the field. "Once the Black Shank got started, it didn't take long to spread all over", he said. "Two years ago I planted Coker's 139 here and got on the average of 2,000 pounds an acre."

He went on to say that he had grown cotton in the same field last year. "Had a good crop too." This year Beverly planted McNair's VG-2, a non-resistant variety. His granddaughter's husband planted the same variety on a nearby farm and has gotten excellent results with no traces of Black Shank.

Bud Forrest, loss adjuster for the Federal Crop Insurance Corporation, said the field "is the worst of its size that I have seen this year." Forrest has made several visits to the field since the Black Shank struck. He is presently making adjustments for the FCIC set up to protect the farmer against various hazards evolving around the planting of tobacco.

The Bethel farmer stated that the FCIC would save most of his initial investment in planting the crop. He has carried the insurance, sponsored by the U.S. Department of Agriculture, since 1949. This is the first year he has collected since taking out the protective policy.

Mercury Soared To 102 In City

A severe thunderstorm broke over Greenville early last night dumping more rain on the city than it had during the entire month of July, and affording residents at least temporary relief from the 102 degree temperature which was recorded a few hours earlier.

The Greenville Utilities Commission weather station reported 1.28 inches of rain fell during the storm—almost a quarter inch more rain than was recorded at the station during the 31 days of July. Rainfall here for the entire month of July was only 1.07 inches.

In Greenville yesterday the temperature at the weather station reached 102 degrees at 4 o'clock, during the hot, dry month of July setting a new all-time record for the city. The thermometer at the weather station reported 102 degrees at 4 o'clock, during the hot, dry month of July setting a new all-time record for the city.

Another Infant Victim Of Polio

An eight-month-old Greenville white boy has become Pitt County's second polio victim this year. The child contracted a non-paralytic strain of polio, made "a good recovery," and has been returned home, according to Pitt County Health Department Director Dr. Walter C. Humbert.

The county's first polio case was reported by the Health Department last week. That case involved a seven-year-old white boy from Winterville who also recovered fully from a non-paralytic type of polio.

Dr. Humbert also said today that parents of children who will be entering school this fall should take their children to either family physicians or the Health Department for polio immunizations. The immunizations are required now under terms of a regulation passed this week by the Pitt County Board of Health.

The Pitt County Board of Education will hold its August meeting Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock instead of Monday. The meeting was postponed until Thursday when bids will be opened for the Bethel High School gymnasium.

Dr. Fred G. Pegg, Forsyth County health officer says he thinks so. The doctor said blood samples and throat washing in three or four cases who "all recovered eventually" after three or four health labs for identification of virus.

Scrap Paper Will Be Collected In City Tomorrow

Tobacco Marketing Problem Of Discounted Varieties Is Reviewed By Panel

Two attorneys, each with an interest in the 1957 tobacco marketing program, exchanged diverse opinions last night on a television panel discussion of tobacco problems.

"At the present time," he said "independent companies cannot buy and pack any mixed varieties."

support tobacco according to variety. "We believe," Jones said, "that marketing thus far has not been a legal sale of blue-card discounted tobacco."

Godfrey had opened the program by reviewing ASC work on discovering and identifying discounted varieties. He said, however, that his organization "was not discounting, but merely certifying, varieties by saying, 'We have been led to believe it would aid the program not to buy the discounted types. If we did, we think it would encourage farmers to grow discounted varieties and if that happened, 85 per cent of the 1958 crop would be 139. That would kill the market.'"

YOU CAN DIE LAUGHING

By A.A. FAIR (ERLE STANLEY GARDNER)

CHAPTER 18
Cornig tossed his key to the clerk at the desk and said, 'I'll be out for a couple of hours.'
We went out to Cornig's car. He was a good traffic driver. I saw that he didn't want to give me any information, and I certainly didn't want to give him any. I settled back and let him do the driving.
We turned off into Frostmere Road, ran up to the Wells house. He slammed on the brakes and I got out of the car.
'I'll want to talk with Mrs. Wells privately for a few minutes, Lam.' he said, 'then I'll want you as a witness.'
'Okay,' I told him. 'You go on in and meet her. I'll go over to talk with Mrs. Raleigh.'
He went on up the steps to the porch, and I moved over to the Raleigh house. Mrs. Raleigh was waiting at the door for me.
'Well, there you are, Mr. Lam! You know I'm worried half sick. People have been out here asking a lot of questions.'
'Tell me about it,' I said.
'Well, it's a story. Two women came out here. They told me Wells had filed some sort of court action against you.'
'Anything else?'
'Some lawyer came out. He had a stenographer with him. They got a statement from me. They didn't leave me a copy of that statement. The stenographer had a notepad and a typewriter with her and she typed the thing out. I read it over hastily, but it seemed to be all right. I signed it and then that girl reached down into a brief case and pulled out a little notarial seal, and said, 'Hold up your right hand.'
'I held up my right hand and she said, 'Do you solemnly swear this is true?' I did. Then this girl said, 'You solemnly swear,' and clamped a seal on it. She signed it as a notary public and handed it to the attorney. He didn't wait for me to say a word. He was out of that door like a shot."
'What did you tell him in the affidavit?' I asked her.
'Just the truth. That's all.'
'Let's get this thing straight, Mrs. Raleigh. You remember I came out here and asked you about the people who were there?'
'That's right.'
'And you told me that you had heard a fight over there and the sound of a blow, and then he had come out carrying what could have been a body on his shoulder, loaded it into the automobile, gone back of the garage, got a pick and shovel and taken off, that he came back two hours and forty-five minutes later and was in the kitchen for a short time, then turned off the light in the kitchen, went into the bedroom, was in there with the light on long enough to undress, then turned the light out and apparently went right to bed and you me you felt satisfied that he's killed her?'
'Killed her!' she exclaimed.
'What's what you said?'
'Why, I never told you any such thing, Mister Lam!' she said.
'What on earth are you talking about? You asked me about the people over there, and you asked me how they got on and I told you I thought they got on all right, except they had had one pretty bad fight one night and I'd heard the sound of angry voices, but I couldn't hear the words. I said that he'd gone out for a while, but I didn't say anything about his carrying a body over his shoulder. What are you trying to do, put words right in my mouth?'
'Not a body,' I said patiently. 'You told me it was something wrapped up in a rug or a blanket, and that it swayed and wiggled just like a body.'
'Why the very idea! I never told you any such thing! I told you that I saw him come out of the house, but it was dark and I couldn't see well. He had something over his shoulder. I guess it could have been almost anything. But what I told you was it was either a blanket or a rug.'
'The doorbell rang impatiently. She was up out of the chair like a shot. She flung the door open and a moment later Cornig came striding into the room.

Cat's Curiosity Enacted Proverb

MAGNOLIA, Ark. (AP)—A cat's curiosity plunged an area from its south central Arkansas town to the Louisiana border into darkness one night.
The cat crawled atop a main electric power circuit breaker here. Power company officials said a charge of 13,800 volts killed the cat.
Power workers were stumped by the electric failure until someone spotted the dead cat.
A nursery is provided for babies.

Preventive Step Includes Flying

MIDDLETOWN, Pa. (AP)—Charles J. and Charles A. Zito, father and son, say one way to keep young people out of hotbeds is to get them up in the air.
'I got Charles interested in flying so he wouldn't go roaring around the highways in hotbeds and motorcycles,' said the father, a private pilot since 1935.
The two built a plane themselves and Charles A. soloed at 16. 'It beats hot-budding every time and isn't nearly as dangerous,' the younger Zito said.

Meet The Deb Who Loves Teaching

DEB MARGARET MOYE . . . practicing future stairway entrance while sister, Lillian, watches.

By PEGGY SMITH
(Reflector Staff Writer)

(Editor's Note: This is the fourth in a series of glimpses into the lives of Pitt County debutantes.)
Our last Greenville debutante, Margaret Moye, will be taking time out from teacher's training in September to make her debut to society.

Education

East Carolina College is the scene where Margaret spends much of her time since she is attending summer school. "I've always wanted to work with little children," said the debutante, "and that's why I majored in primary education."

"College is quite different from high school and you're really on your own," she replied with the cute way of smiling she has. Planning to be a sophomore counselor in a freshman dormitory in September, she is kept busy with studies and activities. Margaret is a member of the Association of Childhood Education which helps with school subjects and puts interest in them.

When the question of what is your biggest ambition was put before her, she answered by saying, "I've always wanted to teach in outdoor schools in Florida, but I know I'll never do it."

Summer Doings

Margaret's summer life has been full of fun-packed events. Besides attending summer school, she has been a camp counselor at Camp Hardee which she enjoyed very much since it gave her a chance to help with children. Small trips and going to the beach have also occupied her time.

"When I have time, I like to play bridge," she pointed out; but her mother replied, "She never has time because she studies all the time." This seems to show how industrious Margaret must be to study instead of partying like most girls her age.

Dates, Clothes

Dating occupies some of Margaret's life just like most girls. When asked what she preferred to do on dates she exclaimed, "Go to the show, I reckon, because it's about all you can do around here."

Clothes are an outstanding interest of Margaret's because she only likes one style, sheath. It is not hard for her to have cute clothes since she has a good knowledge of what colors look best on her.

Tan and beige are her favorite colors which blend in with her brownish-blond hair and impressive blue eyes. Most people like to change in their styles of clothing which makes them feel it improves their looks, but sheaths make Margaret look even more petite and cute.

Future Deb Schemes

Having made reservations at the Sir Walter Hotel in Raleigh, the deb has almost completed her plans. She traveled to Richmond, Va., to buy her weekend fashions.

Stepping into the social spotlight, she will be wearing a white taffeta and lace ball gown which has a pointed waist line that accents her tiny waist. For the second big night a green taffeta dress will adorn the debutante. She likes it the most of her weekend wardrobe collection because it "is so unusual in style." It's new to this time of fashion, but it reveals a style of the past.

Escorting her both nights will be David Lane, chief marshal. Bob Thompson and Donald Conley, marshalls, assisting.

When she attends the tea and cocktail dances, she will wear winter cottons, the governor's tea and luncheon will be attended by the debutante wearing a dressy sheath. Mrs. Jesse R. Moye, Jr. will accompany her daughter to the gala event.

Five Girls Redecorate 'Junky' Garage

By MARTHA PIERCE
Reflector Teen Writer
Summertime is a good time to redecorate, as Carol Tadlock, Margaret Ruffin, Ginger Lang, Marietta Northrup, and Stuart Bost have proved by turning a junk-filled garage into a den for themselves and their friends.

Inspired by the movie "Bernadine," these girls spent the past few days sanding and painting furniture and sewing ruffled curtains to adorn the den window.

Starting with a large room in Marietta's garage, the girls had pine-paneled walls and a cement floor to work with. They added a glider to the room; and by making a green cover and cushion they changed an old trunk into a second sofa.

The warm brown walls, the captain's chair that they sanded and refinished and the yellow cafe curtains lend an early American charm to the room. Multi-colored and green and yellow cushions add splashes of color on the chairs and sofas.

Bringing in a touch of brightness, a metal coffee table and a small chest are painted sunshine yellow. Two chairs painted black match a black drop-leaf table on one side of the room.

Entertain Here
For entertainment, a portable radio and phonograph have been placed in the corner between the sofa. Avid bridge fans, the girls have a card table nearby.

Floral prints, pictures of the girls in the cheerleader squad, and scatter rugs make the den into a finished product.

No grown-ups are allowed in this room, except occasionally. A mother and daughter party initiated the room and the girls entertained their dates here after a hamburger fry last week.

In the near future the girls are planning to have a telephone installed. A decorative screen in one corner was given to the girls by Mrs. B. B. Sugg.

"Mr. Senator," a light green autograph board, will hold the names of all the guests who visit the room. He was bought by Carol and Stuart when they were in Washington, D. C.
"We are proud of the results, especially since we did the work ourselves," mentioned Ginger and Margaret. Adding, "We did get a little help from our parents."

Margaret Ruffin, Marietta Northrup, Ginger Lang, Stuart Bost, Carol Tadlock . . . relax in their new den, a redecorated garage.

Carol, Marietta, Stuart, and Ginger have produced a room that will give them many hours of enjoyment during the remaining summer month and their senior year in high school.

Carol is the daughter of Mrs. A. C. Tadlock and the late Mr. Tadlock. Mr. and Mrs. Sam Northrup are the parents of Marietta.

Stuart is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Bost. Margaret is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Ruffin. Mr. and Mrs. R. G. Lang are the parents of Ginger.

Five Persons From Pitt To Participate In Raleigh

Mrs. Albert Bell, Mrs. Alton Chapman, Miss Lois Jones, and Mrs. B. L. Tyson . . . study Pitt County Publicity Book which they will carry with them to the Farm and Home Week in Raleigh next week.

By ANNE SINGLETON
Reflector Woman's Editor
Farm and Home Week—a week of inspiration and education—will be held in Raleigh Monday through Thursday at North Carolina State College.

Approximately eight delegates will represent Pitt County during the week. Mrs. Lillie Little, home agent, mentions, "During the week persons from Pitt County with an interest in special portions of the program will also be in Raleigh."

Formal delegates attending from Pitt County home demonstration clubs are Mrs. Albert Bell of the Fountain club, Mrs. Alton Chapman of the St. John club, Mrs. Obed Castelleo of the Renston-Nobles club, Mrs. Robert Starling of the Red Banks club, Mrs. B. L. Tyson of the Red Oak club, and Mrs. John Whichard, Mrs. A. C. Barnhill, and Mrs. D. N. Nobles of the Sweet Gum Grove club.

Five Participants
Five of Pitt County's delegates will actively participate in the week's programs. Mrs. Bell will serve as a hostess at the Garden Party given on the campus in front of Holiday Hall Thursday afternoon honoring past presidents and their guests. Mrs. Chapman and Mrs. Cas-telleo both serve on the State Council. Mrs. Castelleo will give the Building Fund report.

One of the week's highlights will be a report given by Mrs. Starling on her recent ACWW Convention trip to Ceylon.
Mrs. Tyson, accordionist, will appear in the Talent Show Wednesday night.

Week's Purpose
According to Mrs. Little, the purpose of Farm and Home Week is to educate. She pointed out, "This will be a week when men and women can come together to be informed. They can take advantage of exhibits, classes, and demonstrations that will bring them up-to-date knowledge and techniques which they can use in their everyday life both in the home and on the farm."

A varied, well-planned program will be offered with a host of outstanding speakers scheduled for each day. The 17 classes offered will range from "Children and Money" to "Farm Pond and Water Safety."

Planned recreation is scheduled for each night and a tour of the North Carolina Museum of Art will be a highlight of the week.
Miss Lois Jones, assistant home demonstration agent, will accompany the group to Raleigh.

Smith-McLawnhorn Feted

The Smith-McLawnhorn wedding party and out-of-town guests were entertained last night at an after-rehearsal dinner party at the Greenville Woman's Club.
Hostesses and hosts for the evening were Mrs. Gertrude Speir, Miss Anne Speir, Mrs. Roy T. Cox and Mr. and Mrs. Ruel W. Tyson.
Mrs. Gertrude Speir and Mrs. Cox greeted the 40 guests, and directed them to Mr. and Mrs. Tyson who invited them into the dining room where a green and yellow color scheme was used.
Upon arrival guests were served fruit juice by Miss Anne Speir from a silver punch bowl encircled with ivy and bunches of green grapes.
Dinner was served buffet from an appointed table centered with an arrangement of yellow gladioli and roses and flanked by crystal candelabras holding burning yellow tapers. Mrs. Cox and Mrs. Gertrude Speir served.
Guests found their places at the dinner table covered with a white cloth and centered with a massive arrangement of summer flowers.

Diets Can Be Carried To An Extreme

By DOROTHY ROE
Associated Press Women's Editor
Things have gone far enough in the diet merry-go-round, it seems to me, when a little girl writes her mother from summer camp: "Dear Mummy: Please send me some sunflower seeds and wheat germ. All they give you here for breakfast is gooey sweet rolls."

This product of our modern age is Pamela Stark, 11-year-old daughter of Wilbur Stark and Kathi Norris, TV producing-editing team currently involved with a Saturday show called True Story. Mummy Kathi is a lissome Irish colleen with a 21-inch waist who looks like a debutante despite the fact that she has three children — 5-year-old Bradley and year-old Kitty, in addition to Pamela. All three have been raised on such things as raw vegetables and molasses, which they prefer to marshmallow fudge sundaes.
There is no doubt that the Stark children, as well as Mom and Pop, are all healthy and handsome examples of the ideal young American family — the kind you see looking fondly at an insurance policy or piling into a new car in four-color slick-paper magazine ads. The question that worries me is—are they missing any fun?
There are others, it seems, who have a similar feeling of panic when confronted with some of the currently fashionable facets of modern living. Take Jean Kerr, for instance, who has a piece in the current issue of Harper's Magazine entitled "Aunt Jean's Marshmallow Fudge Diet," in which she issues a personal declaration of independence against all fad diets, including the latest one consisting of mother's milk.
Mrs. Kerr, author, playwright and wife of New York drama critic Walter Kerr, says she has noted

Step Toward Better Public Health

Pitt County's Board of Education showed wisdom in approving the recommendation of the county Board of Health in requiring that all children admitted to Pitt County schools must be vaccinated against polio.

We view the new policy as another step toward better public health in Pitt County.

By its action the county Board of Education has put polio on a par with diphtheria, whooping cough and small pox. It has gone one step further than the state law which requires that a child be immunized against only the last three diseases before he can enter public schools in North Carolina.

In our estimation it is only a matter of time before the state will follow suit in requiring all children entering public schools be vaccinated against polio. The proposal was made some time ago, but it was turned down at the state level. Next time it is seriously considered, it should be adopted on the state level.

Compared with other counties in North Carolina, Pitt has made favorable progress in the percentage of its young people who have been vaccinated against polio. The epidemic of the diseases last year was, in our opinion a major factor in the number of youngsters who began their series of shots. Efforts by members of the Pitt County Medical Society and those of the Pitt County Health Department also contributed in a large measure to getting Pitt County's children immunized against the disease.

Governor And His Appointee

By LYNN NISBET

WAYNICK — Governor Hodges took cognizance of the criticism of his appointment of Capus Waynick to be Adjutant General at his first session in the state capitol building before reporters could ask questions. He paid high tribute to General Waynick for distinguished service in many areas, particularly as an administrator. He feels that the post of adjutant general is largely administrative, with the military tactics to be handled by specialists in the field.

The Governor confessed two "mistakes" in connection with the announcement of Waynick's appointment. He made it the eve of his leaving for a three-week vacation and earlier than he had intended because news "leaked" that Waynick had been selected. The statement that he expected the new adjutant general to be an "aide to the Governor" was unfortunate. He meant it, he said, in the broad sense of having the great capabilities of Capus Waynick in State service. It was generally interpreted in the sense of an aide-de-camp or a high class flunky. That was not the intent.

Appointment of an assistant adjutant general, authorized by the recent Legislature, will not be made until after General Waynick has familiarized himself with department routine. No further assignment of duties is contemplated for the present. Long range possibilities include combining the civil defense set up with the adjutant general's office. The hurricane relief program may be more closely integrated with civil defense and the national guard.

NO POLITICS — There is no basis at all for the suggestion that Waynick was a political appointment. It was completely the opposite, said the Governor. "Politics did not cross my mind in considering the matter," he said.

When a reporter later asked if the complete lack of political consideration here means that Hodges is not interested in running for the U.S. Senate, the Governor gave out with a cryptic "No comment." He added that he doesn't use that expression often. Reporters could not recall another instance in which he used it just two words. There have been numerous times when he said he preferred not to discuss a matter, or that a statement from him at the time would not be appropriate. During the same news conference he several times declined to answer questions about school integration and the doctor-hospital controversy, by explaining that comment by him might be inappropriate under the circumstances. His short "no comment" on his senatorial aspirations indicated he was slightly peeved at the question. Complete ignoring of political aspects in the Waynick appointment perhaps strengthened his position in that case. It also added fuel to the smoldering resentment among local Democratic leaders that Governor Hodges is not doing anything to help them in their efforts for the Democratic party. What's the use, they argue, for us to spend time and money and energy in behalf of a party or a faction in the party if our efforts are not appreciated or rewarded by the officials who benefit from them?

These party workers concede that in picking a private secretary and his intimate office staff any official ought to be governed entirely by personal feeling. It is recalled that President Grover Cleveland had a Republican as his private secretary. But in filling other offices which had dealings with the public, North Carolinians generally follow the Andrew Jackson dictum that "To the victors belong the spoils."

POW-WOW — Speaking of politics reminds that Paul Butler, national Democratic chairman, is planning a regional southeastern pow-wow of party leaders in Raleigh sometime this fall. Rumors are that the North Carolina capital city was chosen for the meeting for several reasons. Most significant influence probably is the fact that all of the southern eastern states North Carolina has adopted a more reasonable attitude in dealing with the national committee and the national Democratic platform, still without yielding on matters of principle. This attitude has been manifested by the stand taken in national conventions by Governors Gregg Cherry and Luther Hodges, and more lately in the Senate by Senator Sam Ervin.

Further fact that North Carolina, despite differences with national committee policy, is one of only three or four states to meet the assessment quota for the national campaign fund.

Chairman Butler's request to have the regional conference in Raleigh was first made to Mrs. B.B. Everett, national Democratic committee-woman and a member of the powerful executive committee. Mrs. Everett passed it along to State Chairman John Larkins, National Committee member Everett Jordan and Governor Hodges. These top level party officials are considering now the time and the agenda to be considered.

A similar southeastern regional conference held here several years ago when Jonathan Daniels was national committeeman didn't accomplish much for the party or the state. The big folks aren't sure the proposed 1957 meeting will do any real good.

immunized. The new policy adopted by the Pitt Board of Education will, in time, assure that every child in the county who attends school will have completed the series of shots.

The policy recommended by the Pitt County Board of Health and now adopted by the Pitt County Board of Education should also be adopted by the Board of Trustees of the Greenville City Schools.

The sooner all of Pitt County's youngsters are vaccinated against polio, the sooner the county can consider itself practically out of danger so far as fatal or crippling cases of polio are concerned.

Compromise Appears To Resolve A Problem

Compromise of the dispute over foreign doctors between the State Board of Medical Examiners and the State Hospitals Board of Control appears to us a reasonable solution to the problem of assuring the state a sufficient number of qualified doctors to care for patients in state hospitals.

According to the limited information on the compromise so far released by the two boards, a provision has been made whereby qualified foreign doctors would be granted permanent license to practice medicine in North Carolina. Temporary licenses for foreign doctors, such as now issued for them to practice in State institutions, would be limited by the board to three years. Presumably qualified doctors from other nations could be granted permanent licenses after the temporary period.

Though the announcement of compromise between the two state boards still leaves questions unanswered, apparently the boards have worked out satisfactory arrangements which will assure that only qualified doctors are allowed to practice in state institutions and will further assure that a sufficient number of doctors — domestic or foreign-educated — will be available to staff the state's hospitals.

As soon as possible the two boards should report in detail the arrangements to which they have mutually agreed in settling this dispute. The people of North Carolina are interested in the details as well as general information about the settlement. They want to know to their own satisfaction as well as that of the two boards that the state's hospitals will be well staffed both from the standpoint of quality as well as quantity of doctors.

On the basis of the information so far available, it appears the two boards have, as they should, placed the welfare of the patients in state institutions at the forefront of their considerations.

Out of the controversy there will come, in all probability, better care for the patients in state hospitals.

Turbulence In The Auto Mart

By EL'ER ROESSNER

There will be turbulence in the auto market this fall. There will be — in case you haven't heard — a big new contender for buyers' favor: the Edsel. About $10,000,000 will be spent this year and next to promote it.

Other manufacturers are not idly sitting by. Without exception, they have been planning arresting new designs, devising startling new improvements and mapping saturation advertising campaigns. You are going to see more about new mobile wonders and hear more about the arrival of the world of tomorrow than ever before. You are going to be plastered with so many layers of automobile claims, solicitations, comparisons, challenges, contests and other promotions that, in the end, you may decide to go by train.

A similar situation, on a smaller scale, is developing in the food field. General Foods is preparing to introduce a line of gourmet foods. The items won't include birds' nest soup, smoked bear meat or canned lobster, but oyster sauce — heavens, nothing as gourmet as that! But they will include items somewhere between cake mixes and canned muskrat meat. Objectives are to tap the growing luxury food market, to enhance GF prestige, and perhaps hit upon products that can be switched to the mass market.

Since GF's plan has been announced, its competitors have been busy. Objectives, to limit GF's advantage, to get a free ride on the interest GF will whip up, and to fatten profits. Again, you'll see and hear endless advertising.

Here are some more forecasts, similarly based on information and analyses of trends and situations:

Graters will be hot items. There's a rising interest in kitchen grater-shredder choppers, both hand- and electric-powered. Not to be confused with meat choppers, they are light and do wonders for salad and cooking vegetables. Several new models have been introduced and since relatively few homes have them, national and local efforts will be made to spur sales this fall. Platinum will be cheaper. The metal has weakened in price recently because of the rise in Russian production and the decline in industrial demand; since there are no prospects for change in these conditions, the price will fade a little more.

Other nonferrous metals will decline. Government stock-piling purchases are being cut back. Magnesium and silicon carbide are off the buying list, and purchases of chromium, lead and zinc will drop. With no rise in industrial demand in sight, prices are destined to dip.

The weather will make new millionaires. The size of soybean and corn crops are highly uncertain. The weather in the next few weeks is controlling. Speculators who guess right will make fortunes; the others will lose heavily.

TOO BAD OLD PROMOTER DIDN'T THINK OF IT FIRST!

"Here's an interesting case," the Old Promoter remarked, pulling some notes out of his pocket. "The Federal Trade Commission has issued a complaint against a Los Angeles firm that sells sheets of plastic tinted blue on top, orange in the middle and green on the bottom. When put over a television screen, they are supposed to give you color television."

"This is a bite, the FTC says, because it won't produce the same effects as color TV and it won't show objects on the screen in their natural colors."

"That's right," we said. "Look!" said the old one. "If a person buys one of these sheets knowing he will only get an illusion of color, and then only on outdoor scenes, he isn't being cheated, is he?"

"No," we conceded. "But if he believes that a plastic sheet put in front of a screen will make it a real color set, then the FTC ought to be proceeding against the buyer. He is simple-minded and a menace to the community." The older man grinned. "The defense rests."

Strength For Today

By EARL L. DOUGLASS

Civilization And Uselessness A recent writer has defined civilization as the necessary adjustment of rights and duties, and the harmonizing of the interests of the individual and of the group.

That may appear a rather long way around to say a simple thing, namely, that the more civilized we become, the more unselfish we become. In fact, civilization is just the process whereby we are made unselfish. In this process, we learn how to put ourselves aside in the interests of others — and to put aside also individual rights and decisions in order that others may have a fair chance to have their rights and desires fulfilled.

It was almost fifty years ago that the New York City papers flamed editorially with indignation because a traffic officer had been stationed at the intersection of Fifth Avenue and 42nd Street. This man actually presumed to tell the drivers of carriages, surveys, wagons, and the half dozen automobiles which would pass the spot in a day when to cross and when not to cross the street.

"What are we coming to?" cried the editors. "This is an incredible invasion of personal liberty." If they had suspected the restrictions which would later arise, and if they could have known about income taxes which sometimes go to ninety-seven cents on the dollar, they would probably have asked the governor to call out the militia.

Permanent Summer Vacation

by DON SCHLIENZ

Time Of Big Headlines

I hadn't planned to spend an hour perusing old issues of The Reflector yesterday afternoon, but I did, and it turned out to be an interesting bit of reading.

Readers had their share of bold black headlines during August 1927; and maybe this will serve to refresh memories of a time that throbbed with dramatic day-to-day stories.

August was a month of the Geneva Naval Conference, and Coolidge claiming he wasn't going to run again (but observers wondered aloud); Admiral Richard E. Byrd announced plans for his first Antarctic expedition, and Coast Guardsmen fought a brief battle with rumrunners off the Florida coast, killing two.

Mobs, bombings, demonstrations, protests and appeals marked the climax of the famous Sacco-Vanzetti case which had stretched out for seven years . . . they were executed August 23.

With the first non-stop Atlantic flights under their belts, airplane pilots were daily announcing new record attempts and distance flights. Four planes raced to Hawaii, two were lost . . . one carried a young woman as a passenger. A search plane and its Army pilot were later victims of the unfolding story.

Arthur Brisbane, one of the early air power enthusiasts, was beating the drums almost daily for the government to step up emphasis on the airplane as a military arm.

This was the month Charlie Chaplin paid a million dollars for a divorce from Lita Gray. Paul Redfern took off for a flight to Brazil, and was lost . . . you still sometimes read of "clues" to his fate in the Amazon jungle.

Sixty-five-year-old Princes Loewenstein-Wertheim financed a trans-Atlantic flight and went along as a passenger. The plane never made it.

Here, at home, a big bootleg still capable of distilling between 200-300 gallons of booze in one operation was captured. Reorganization of the dormant Boy Scout program was undertaken; contracts were awarded for a $50,000 paving contract (the winning bid was $2.03 a square yard).

Sylvester Pierce, 20, was run over by a truck, and killed, a short distance from Cox's Mill. A tobacco warehouse on McKinstry and Church streets, almost totally wrecked by a February snowstorm, was rebuilt and stood ready for the coming season. (It was one of 7 warehouses in the city. The market's opening was set for September 6, and four sets of buyers would be on hand.)

Fifty men and three officers of Battery E paraded in Washington for the annual convention of the N. C. Dept. of the American Legion.

A merchant campaign to raise $3,000 to advertise Greenville had reached the $2,500 mark. And a familiar tragedy marked August 1927, Frank T. Jones, 21, drowned in Tar River while swimming.

As mentioned previously, I hadn't really intended to resort to the files yesterday; but now it seems as though that period of 31 days was well worth reviewing. I'm glad I did.

Other Editors Saying--- The Adaptable Female

(The Cheraw (S.C.) Chronicle)

Publication of a recent survey has forced us, despite a freely acknowledged sex antagonism, to the reluctant conclusion that women are better adjusted to life than men.

Contrary to the popular belief, women are, furthermore, much the stronger sex. They live longer, they're less susceptible to disease, they're much more adaptable. When and if the third world war comes and our civilization is obliterated we believe almost all the survivors will be female, since the history of the evolution has proved that only the most adaptable manage to survive.

These comments are inspired by a survey, taken of representative men and women, to find out what period of life is the happiest. Men unanimously decided that their best years of life have already been spent.

Youth was the time in which they were happiest — a time without aging, burdensome responsibilities, when idealism and hope abounded. Most men indicated that by the time they had reached 35, they had given up their youthful ambitions with cynical, resentful resignation. Their happiest times were behind them.

Women, on the other hand, replied that their happiest years came in their 40's and 50's, when they had raised their families and could look back upon their accomplishments with satisfaction and look forward happily to leisure time and pursuit of new interests.

Men, therefore, staked their youthful happiness on dreams which remain unfulfilled. Their happiness, consequently, is an illusion. Women, bless their practical souls, are happy in solid, if commonplace, achievement; they make their peace with the past and look hopefully toward the future.

Men worship youth, cherish dreams, honor vigor and restless pursuit. Women accommodate themselves to the irrevocable march of time, compromise with their hopes and dreams and make the best of what they determinedly regard as the "best of all possible worlds."

The results of these divergent attitudes may be found in the mortality rates of any insurance company. Women live about seven years longer than men. The feminine sex is less subject to insanity and alcoholism, and their suicide rate is smaller. They're less subject to heart attacks, hypertension, high blood pressure and other symptoms of malhumour.

Women are the conservers, the preservers and civilizers. Men are the creators, the builders and the originators, they're also the destroyers. We're certain it was a man who first conceived the idea of the wheel, just as in most instances it was man who pioneered in almost all invention. It's the woman, however, who puts such invention to positive and constructive use.

If masculine hands first invented atomic energy, we may be sure it will be masculine hands which also will push the button to destroy all that he's managed to build up.

Whatever may occur, we suspect that somehow the women will manage to adapt to it, survive it and, somehow, to be happy with it. That's the feminine genius.

Left Out Of Civil Rights Plea

By RAY TUCKER

WASHINGTON — "Thirty-six Senators, including nine former Governors, twenty-nine Republicans and seven Democrats," writes Dr. N.J.C. of Las Lomitas, Calif., "were co-authors of Senate Joint Resolution 80, which provides for a constitutional amendment giving women enjoyment of equal benefits of our laws."

"A number of other countries, including Japan, Germany, Cuba and Israel have such a provision in their constitutions . . . Why, then, when purporting to report on Civil Rights legislation, do columnists systematically omit mention of legislation which would extend equal civil rights to women and men?"

ANSWER: Dr. N.J.C.'s letter poses such an important problem, and it is so newsworthy, that I have quoted it at length. Her communication serves to emphasize the fact that this whole question of civil rights is an extremely muddled and misunderstood question. Many people besides the colored in the South and elsewhere are deprived of their civil rights.

VOTING QUALIFICATIONS Residential voting qualifications in almost every state deprive thousands of citizens of their vote every year. I once wrote a magazine article on this subject, although I do not have the exact statistics available now. But almost every state requires a certain period of residence, not only in the state but in the citizen's immediate voting area (county). The required residence ranges from three months to a year for a newcomer. People over a certain age cannot obtain employment, not because they are unqualified or incapacitated, but because of an arbitrary decision of policy. Private schools, churches, fraternities and many other organizations, although dedicated to noble ideals, bar certain classes of people from entrance or membership.

Although it may not add any light to this political problem (for it is mainly a political rather than a social or economic or even humanitarian problem), I would like to quote some editorial comment from the New Ulm (Minn.) Daily Journal. It is as rational an analysis as I have seen, and also novel.

EDITORIAL SUGGESTION "We may set up an Old Soldiers Home," writes Editor Walter Mickelson, "and deny admittance to anyone who is not an old soldier. We may organize a lodge, hold meetings and exclude those who do not belong. The 'Sons of Norway' may exclude Swedes and Hibernians from admittance as well as many others, non-Norse . . ."

Suave Boss Of Rackets

By ARTHUR W. EVERETT NEW YORK (AP) — A few weeks ago in a General Sessions court-room in lower Manhattan a jury listened to wiretapped details of a telephone conversation by Johnny Dio. One of the words they heard was an unprintable obscenity.

When court recessed, Dio, convicted later by the jury, rose from his chair and approached the press table.

Singling out the two women reporters covering the trial, he explained how the obscenity happened to enter his conversation, apologized for it and said he was sorry it had beset the ladies' ears.

It was a typical display of graciousness by this suavest of all the big-time racketeers. Johnny Dio wears the veneer of a gallant. Affable, of medium height, he has a dark, virile masculinity to match his grace.

Authorities have estimated that he makes as much as a million dollars a year in the rackets. But he is not ostentatious.

He lives in a comfortable but not pretentious ranch-type home at Point Lookout, on a spit of land in the Atlantic Ocean off Long Island's south shore.

Dio has been married to the same woman for 20 years and their teen-age children, a boy and a girl, attend a parochial school. He is regarded as a family man and a good neighbor to those who live nearby.

But underneath this urbane mask is a man hard as steel, ruthless when it comes to shaking down a victim or discouraging an enemy.

Right now in Washington, Dio is the target of the Senate Rackets Committee. The committee has said it intends to call him as a witness. It probably will be a waste of time. Johnny Dio, for all his affability, is not in the habit of exchanging confidences with investigative bodies. He's proved that on more than one occasion.

It's a tangled skein the committee is trying to unravel, this career of Johnny Dio.

It began April 29, 1914, when Dio was born John Dioguardi in Manhattan's lower East Side. An FBI dossier on him speaks of an arrest for illegal operation of a distillery, indicating that his illicit activities began during prohibition.

Dio was a protege of Louis (LePke) Buchalter and Jake (Gurrah) Shapiro, the "Murder, Inc." overlords of commercialized death in the garment district.

In 1937, Dewey brought Dio and his uncle Jimmy Doyle to trial for extortion and assault. The pair shook down truckers $500 apiece per month to operate. They also levied tribute on every coat and suit turned out in the garment district.

It was in this racket that Dio gained a reputation for threatening bodily harm to recalcitrant clients and meaning it. The state called his activities a "reign of terror."

Dio and Doyle eventually interrupted the 1937 extortion trial to plead guilty. They went upriver for three to five years each.

After serving his time, Dio turned his attention to organized labor.

In 1951, Dio muscled his way into Local 102 of the old AFL, United Auto Workers. He led a 1952 taxcab strike called by the catch-all local. He became the union's director for the entire New York metropolitan area and the boss of six UAW-AFL locals.

These were the first of Dio's so-called "paper" locals. There was no evidence that they were anything more than a one-man device to put pressure on employers to pay protection money.

The UAW-AFL expelled Dio in 1954 and withdrew the charters of his six paper locals. He was doing a 60-day stretch in a city work-house at the time for evasion of state income taxes.

Dio's next move was in the direction of Jimmy Hoffa, the though Midwest boss of the powerful Teamsters Union and currently a good bet to succeed Dave Beck, Teamsters' president. This union is particularly interesting. (Continued On Page 9)

Gastonia Whips Greenville 20-2 In Teen-er Play

GASTONIA, N.C. (AP)—The youngsters on Gastonia's Teener League team have one-track minds. They swarmed all over Greenville, Tenn., 20-2 yesterday in the first game of the regional Teener League baseball playoffs.

Gastonia, undefeated in season play, went to the national Teener League finals last year and the year before—and the boys intend to go again this year.

If they win 2-out-of-three with Greenville, they must face Lafayette, Ga., Monday. The winner of that best-of-three series goes to Hershey, Pa., for the finals.

Yesterday's win went to right-hander Bill Nolan who topped his 2-hitter with four runs of his own. A 14-year-old with a sneaky curve, he worked only two innings, retiring six batters in order with four strikeouts. He alternated between the mound and the outfield, batting two singles, a double and a triple. He was walked on his other turn at the plate.

Two singles by Bill Wampler and Tommy Graham joined with a walk and an error produced Greenville's two hits.

CHICAGO (AP)—Brash Bobby Bragan today was fired as manager of the Pittsburgh Pirates. Coach Danny Murtaugh was named to carry on for the balance of the season.

Pirate General Manager Joe L. Brown said Bragan, in his second season, was dismissed for the "General welfare" of the club. He did not elaborate.

A club spokesman said Clyde Sukeforth, veteran Pirate coach, was first offered the job but turned it down in Murtaugh's favor.

The spokesman said Murtaugh accepted the post with the "full understanding" that it was only to be temporary.

Murtaugh, 39, became a Pirate coach in 1956 after four years of managing in the minor leagues. He broke into the major leagues as an infielder with the Philadelphia Phillies in 1951, spent part of the 1947 season with the then Boston Braves and then was traded to the Pirates.

Brown said Bragan's dismissal was "by far the most difficult decision" he ever had to make.

Bragan said he was neither surprised or shocked at the news. The fiery manager said he lost his job for many reasons but primarily because his team was losing. The Pirates are in seventh place in the National League. They finished in seventh last year.

"It's been a series of things," he said, "primarily losing, and Brown felt it was time to make a change."

Referring to Brown, Bragan said "we're the same age you know, both the aggressive type and both like to have our own way. We didn't see eye to eye on a number of things."

He said he didn't want to go into the other "things."

Bragan was hired as Pirate manager in November 1955 and was re-hired last November.

Travel To Fayetteville Monday For State Series

By BILLY ARNOLD
Reflector Sports Editor

A determined club of Greenville Tar Heels with visions of a State Little League crown on their heads, played cool, deadly ball yesterday to cut High Point 7-0 and earn a berth in the State Tournament.

In a game at Elm Street park which was to decide which of the two clubs would represent this district, the locals whittled down the visiting All-Stars with the same ease that they displayed in capturing the local tournament.

Greenville's Tar Heel march to the State Tournament was accomplished in three games, against the toughest competition in this section of North Carolina. And they won them by overwhelming scores. They dumped the North Staters 15-2, trimmed Havelock 11-0, and walloped High Point yesterday 7-0.

At Fayetteville
Coach Charlie Bland's club will now journey to Fayetteville to participate in the four-team State Tournament. Greenville will face an unnamed foe Monday afternoon at 5:00, at Port Brasg.

The tourney will be a two-day series. All four clubs will play Monday and the winners will square off on Tuesday for the State title. Tuesday's game is set for 4:00.

The winner of the State Tournament will then advance to the Regionals at Rome, Georgia, to compete against the state champions of several other states.

Left-hander Kenneth Joyner parlayed a good fast ball and pinpoint control in a three-hit victory for the Tar Heels. He went the full distance for Greenville, struck out eight and did not walk a man. He scattered the three hits well and never allowed the visiting club to threaten.

Coltraine Starred
The Tar Heels backed Joyner up well at the plate, whacking out 10 hits to account for most of the seven runs. Dixie Coltraine, who has been perhaps the most phenomenal hitter of the post-season tourney, paced the local batters with a home run and two singles for three trips to the plate.

Coltraine, Tar Heel first baseman, has batted almost 1000 during the three games that earned Greenville a berth in the State Tournament. In eight trips to the plate, he has collected seven hits, including a home run and six singles.

Yesterday he accounted for Greenville's first three runs. His home run in the first inning with one on base scored two runs and a single in the third scored another.

Play By Play
By the third, Coltraine's hitting had given the Tar Heels a quick 3-0 lead. J. G. Proctor singled behind Coltraine to put two on base. Joe Harper then fled out to right field, but the outfielder erred the ball, allowing two runs to score. It was 5-0.

The final two runs tallied in the fifth inning. Coltraine and Proctor also scored those runs.

Along with Coltraine's three hits, Proctor and Frank Harper collected two each. Joyner, Johnnie Reynolds and Jimmy Smith had singles.

Odd Proceedings At Baltimore Twin Bill

BALTIMORE (AP)—The beaming of Brooks Robinson, rookie Baltimore third baseman, added a sombre note to last night's weird doubleheader between the Orioles and the Kansas City Athletics.

Robinson, 20-year-old rookie from Little Rock, Ark., was struck by a pitch thrown by veteran Ned Garver in the fourth inning of the second game.

Ten stitches were required to close a gash on the left side of Robinson's head, but doctors said X-rays disclosed no fracture. He remained at Union Memorial Hospital today for observation.

It marked the second trip to the hospital for the hard-luck infielder. He was operated on there May 4 for a torn knee cartilage suffered in a game against Washington a week earlier.

The Robinson incident threw a hush over the 12,126 fans who earlier had whooped it up as the Orioles worked toward a 5-4, 10-2 sweep of the doubleheader.

Besides marking Kansas City's drop to last place in the American League for the first time this year, the evening also saw:

1. Mickey McDermott make his debut as Kansas City first baseman after 10 years as a Major League pitcher.
 2. The Orioles pull a rare double play—pitcher to third baseman to shortstop to third baseman to center fielder.
 3. Hector Lopez, A's third baseman, tie a major league record by accepting 13 chances.
- The unusual double play came in the 11th inning of the 13-inning first game after Hal Smith doubled for the A's.
- When Billy Hunter followed with a bunt, O'Dell fielded it and threw to third baseman George Kell, trapping Smith between second and third. As Kell and shortstop Jim Bridewiser tried to run him down, Smith was called out for veering out of the baseline.
- Hunter, meanwhile, had rounded second base without noticing that center fielder Jim Busby had raced in to protect the bag. Kell threw to Busby, who put the tag on Hunter.

Amateur Fistics In Final Stages Today

SEATTLE (AP)—The hard hitting American entries, Hawaii's happy clouters and a well drilled crew of Cubans were dominating the divisions as the international amateur boxing tournament moved toward its climax today.

The Canadian team, aided by byes, sent only one fighter into the ring. Willie Noel, Canadian soldier, lost a decision to Paul Fujii of Hawaii at 147 pounds.

Two U.S. AAU champs turned in triumphs. Alex Ford of Youngstown, Ohio, beat Lo-Pu Chang of China on a technical knockout 12 seconds before the final bell of their 156-pound fracas. Don Hurlinger of Lima, Ohio, 147, handily defeated Osumo Takahashi of Japan.

CAROLINA LEAGUE
By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
Greensboro's big push paid off last night and the Patriots eased into the Carolina League lead, a bare five percentage points ahead of High Point-Thomasville.

The Pats moved ahead on the strength of a 14-0 win over Wilson, while Danville humbled the Hi-Toms for the second night in a row, this time by 4-3.

Winston-Salem cooled off the Durham Bulls, 7-1, in the night's other contest.

Trooper Lost A Race To Death

COLUMBIA (AP)—A South Carolina trooper lost a race to death last night as he chased two brothers in separate cars down highway 76 about three miles east of here.

Before Patrolman J. E. Vargas could reach the two cars, one of the brothers crashed into a culvert, went rolling end over end in his car a number of times, and ended up dying in the wreckage 100 feet off the highway.

The dead man was identified as Gene Patrick Lynch, 34, a Columbia millwright formerly of Goldsboro, N.C.

Vargas said Lynch and his brother, Billy Mack Lynch of Goldsboro, were not aware they were being pursued.

Vargas gave this account: He saw the two cars traveling at high speed and started after them, determined to halt them. At the top of a hill, before he could overtake them, Gene Lynch, in a 1950 Buick, tried to pass his brother, then hit the culvert.

He was dead on arrival at Columbia Hospital.

Coroner Cecil Wiles said Billy Mack Lynch is being held for investigation. A passenger in his car was identified as Kenneth Ray Thomas.

Third Teen-Age Slaying In City

NEW YORK (AP)—A Bronx youth was stabbed to death last night—the third boy in a week to be killed in New York at the hands of fellow teen-agers.

The killing of George Marshall, 18, a Negro, came only hours after police had begun a special drive against a juvenile terrorism. Extra detectives were patrolling the streets.

Police picked up three other Negro youths and said they had admitted being involved in Marshall's death. Police called it a "wanton killing."

One of those picked up was 17, another was 16, and the third being 16 only today.

Police said the three youths were flirting with two girls on a street corner and that they thought Marshall and a companion nearby were laughing at them. Words developed and Marshall was stabbed several times in the neck.

His companion, Richard Vaughan, 17, a Negro, escaped serious injury.

Police said Samuel Montgomery, the Bronx, marking his 16th birthday today, but a juvenile at the time of the slaying, did the actual stabbing. They said they found a hunting knife on him.

Picked up with him were Russell Riley, 17, Bronx, and Robert May, 16, Bronx.

Police said Montgomery and Corley went home after the slaying, changed their clothes, and returned to the scene, where police picked them up. May was taken into custody later.

East Carolina College today moved into a high gear with a plan for television instruction for a portion of its students.

The State Board of Higher Education gave formal approval to the plan yesterday at a meeting at Raleigh. The Board also approved an appropriation of $75,000 to finance the experiment which will cover an initial period of two years.

With the Higher Education group's approval behind it, the college today set the middle of the Fall quarter as target date for installing the program. Inability to obtain necessary equipment will delay the program until that time and possibly until the beginning of the Winter quarter.

Present plans for the instruction program call for 12 rooms in Austin and Flanagan buildings to be tied into a network originating in the college's radio and TV studios in Joyner Library. Use of the television equipment will permit one instructor to conduct the 12 classes simultaneously although other faculty members will be in each of the classrooms.

Dr. Leo W. Jenkins, vice-president of the college and supervisor of the TV instruction, said this morning that one man will lecture to the classes three days a week. On the other two days in each week the classroom instructors will discuss the lectures with students.

A two-way system will be installed in each of the classrooms so that students can address questions directly to the instructor during the televised lecture. In addition, a television receiver will be installed in the Student Union so that students not enrolled in the televised courses may sit in on them.

Courses to be offered at the outset include English composition, American History and Basic Math. General Science will be added in the Spring Quarter and other courses will be added as they are needed.

Dr. Jenkins and ECC President Dr. John D. Messick said this morning, "We are anticipating great success with the program. It has been under study and preparation for the past year, and will mark the first time the program has been installed in a general college program."

The money appropriated yesterday by the Board of Higher Education includes $45,000 for equipment and $15,000 for operating expenses for each of the two years the program has been authorized. Courses offered on the television series will also be offered under regular classroom conditions. The two systems will be under constant observation and study, the Board of Higher Education said.

Approval for the plan was given after a report was made to the board by Dallas Herring, chairman of a committee which gave preliminary approval to the plan.

Although regular faculty members will be used to conduct the program, Dr. Messick said today that the college would have to employ an engineer and general program director before the televised lectures could be initiated.

Dr. Jenkins said this morning that when the program is started, it will be open to teachers and other members of the general public who wish to observe it in operation.

Teamsters Indicate Challenge In Offing

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Teamsters Union, apparently threatening to lead building trades unions out of the AFL-CIO, has endorsed a Detroit labor group's position challenging the big labor federation.

The Teamsters' action was regarded as an early step by James R. Hoffa, a rising power in the Union, to try to get his own way in the AFL-CIO, or else pull the teamsters and possibly other unions out of the labor organization.

But in San Francisco last night, Hoffa said the reported threat "isn't really serious." He added: "We'll be able to work everything out all right."

Building and construction trades unions have about three million members. The Teamsters have about 1 1/2 millions.

The teamsters' move was made yesterday. In a statement of the union expressed support for the position taken by the Detroit Building and Construction Trades Council concerning jurisdictional disputes.

The council adopted a resolution saying it favored the merger of the CIO and AFL, but that "we are not prepared to pay the high price tag that the ultimate product apparently now carries."

The resolution added that the former CIO industrial unions have consistently negotiated contracts discouraging use of outside contractors employing members of former AFL building trades unions.

Several weeks ago, AFL-CIO President George Meany announced a trial plan to submit jurisdictional disputes to a regional arbitration system, with final authority resting in the AFL-CIO Executive Council.

He also indicated yesterday that new cutbacks may be made in such units in the United States.

In a speech to the Air Force Assn., while said the nation will rely more in the future, in non-atomic fields, upon the air strength of allies, particularly those in the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO).

"I think it logical that we recognize the military potential and plan accordingly," White added.

"We have pared the tactical air forces," he said. "We may have to pare them farther."

Giving Up Hope Outraged Over Tobacco Prices

VIENNA, Ga. (AP)—Former Sen. Walter F. George's heart is giving out and he is not expected to live many more hours.

Dr. M. L. Malloy, the George family physician, made the statement late last night.

The doctor said the 79-year-old statesman "is running a high fever. His pulse is becoming more rapid and weaker. His heart is giving out."

Malloy said that President Eisenhower's special ambassador to NATO has lost too much strength to battle further against the effects of a heart ailment.

"We no longer have any hope that he will rally," he said, "and it's very difficult to give up hope, his condition is deteriorating rapidly."

Relatives said that George's son, Edward George, had accepted the fact that the diplomat's death is imminent. George's wife, known to her friends as "Miss Lucy" has not given up hope, however.

The man who represented Georgia in the U. S. Senate for 34 years and twice headed the powerful Senate Foreign Relations Committee has been gravely ill since Sunday.

Aims At Producing 400,000 Eggs Each Year

LAYING HOUSE . . . two-thirds the length of a football field.

INVESTMENT PAYS OFF . . . Tyre gathers some of first eggs.

By LEWIS LAWRENCE (With Reflector Photos) It's sort of hard to frame an egg and hang it on the wall, but that's what a Falkland man felt like doing recently. Although he finally ate the egg, it was still a special one for him. It represented the first return on his investment in 1,600 laying hens.

Charlie Tyer will see a lot more eggs in the next year, and a lot of Pitt Countians will be eating them, since they will be sold to Greenville stores through the local FCX. He is aiming for a minimum production of 400,000 annually — that's about half a dozen for every person in the county.

Behind that production will be his three sons, time to keep their freezer full from the garden, and time to take an active part in church and community affairs.

"It's a good life," says Tyer, "but unless I do something here to enjoy it." He has seen acreage cuts and controls force his four brothers away from home into non-farm work. He believes his chicken business, if expanded later, will let all his sons remain, if they wish to.

He also thinks it is a simple matter of survival. "The small farmer in this section," he says, "has got to diversify, or quit and let big company-owned farms take over." In his opinion raising layers would be profitable for many farmers in this section, provided they treat it as an important part of their farm operation, not just as a side-line to bring in a little extra cash. He points out that the climate is good, the markets are here, and most farmers have land that could be used for growing feed.

The manager of the Greenville FCX, which is looking for more egg suppliers such as Tyer, agrees. "The field is still wide open," he says.

Tyer's laying house, two thirds the length of a football field, is a pole-type structure roofed with heat-reflecting aluminum. Partly open sides permit a free flow of air through the building in summer, and can be easily covered with plastic in winter.

In this "egg factory" Tyer's hens face a monotonous future — eating, drinking, and laying. Hatchlings absolutely accurate culling of non-layers. No eggs on the laying house floor at five weeks. At sixteen weeks they went into the individual wire cages where they will remain until they stop laying or die. At one end of the cage they get feed, at the other end water, and the eggs they lay automatically roll out to a collection ramp.

These cages, which are suspended in six long banks three feet above the floor, offer many advantages. Egg gathering is simplified, and confining the hens assures that all their energy goes into producing eggs. Their main value, however, is that they allow absolutely accurate culling of non-layers. No eggs on the collection ramp, and off the hen goes to a Sunday dinner table.

Tyer's operation will be on a "constant cull" basis. Every nine days, he estimates, he will replace about fifteen per cent of his birds with new hens just reaching laying age. By this method he can maintain a constant production level throughout the year, with no seasonal drops. His hens are De Kabs 101, a breed which has the low body weight the cages require.

Feeding the 1,600 layers will require about forty acres of grain a year. Of this, thirty-two will be corn, and the other eight oats.

Tyer's $7,000 investment breaks down as follows: $2,500 for the building, $2,000 for the cages and other equipment, and $2,500 to buy Tyer, "have to like chickens."

In the first year of full operation, he expects to make a profit of about two dollars per hen, or a total of some $3,200. Thus his initial outlay would be repaid in something over two years.

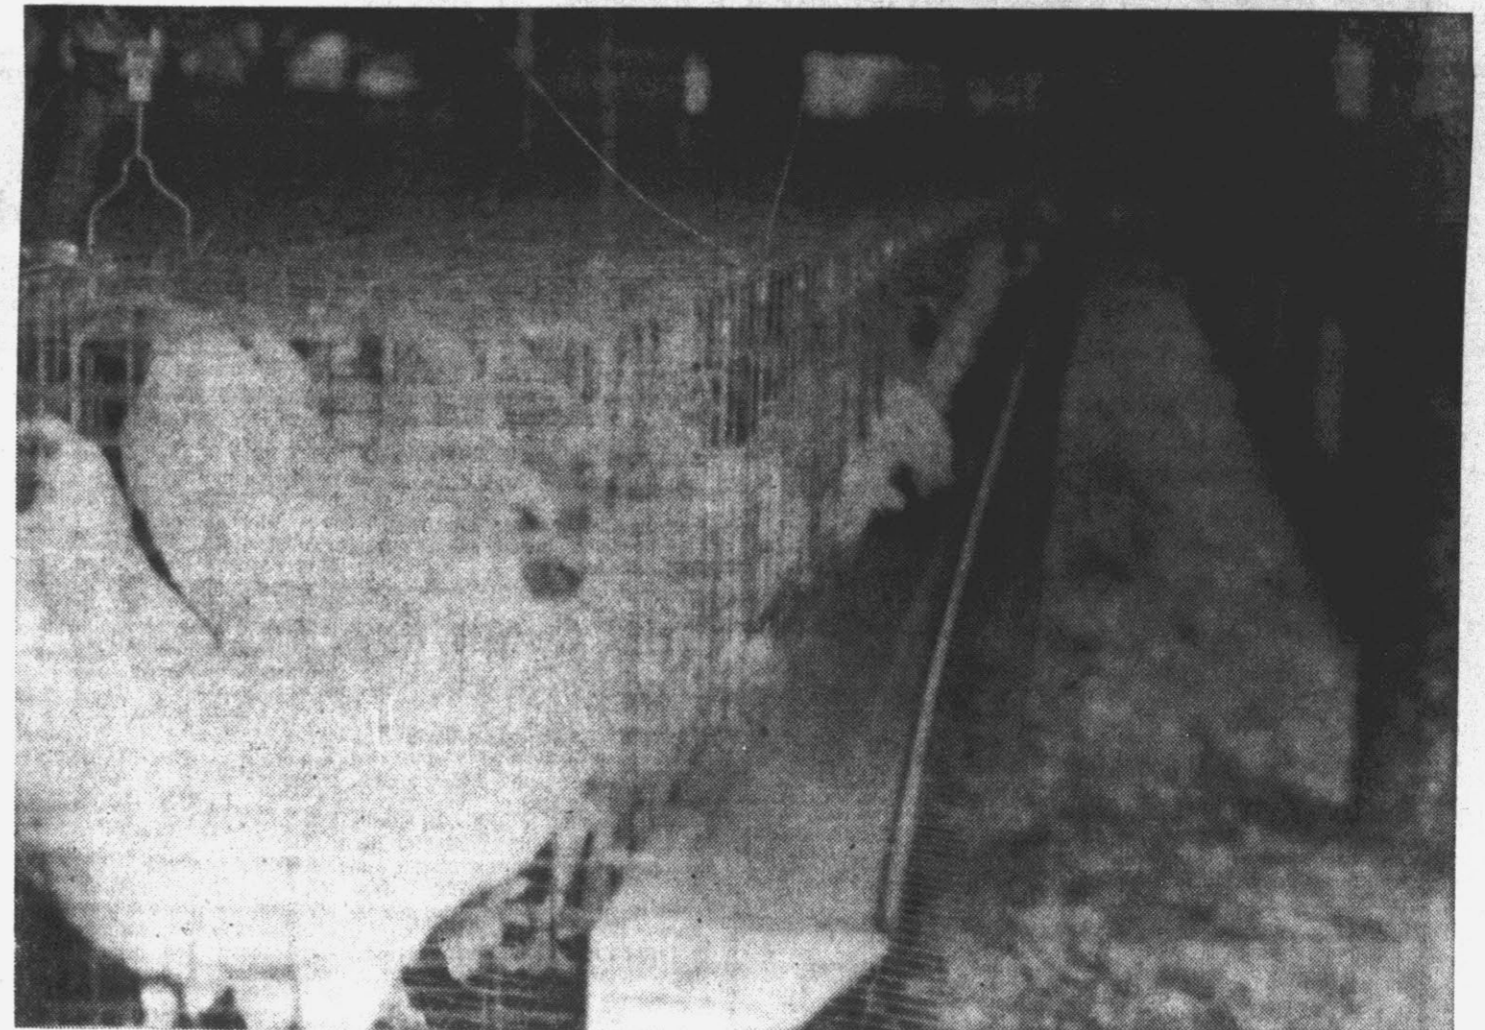

His venture, he believes, will be the most profitable way he can use the grain he produces. "Corn whiskey might pay better, he says, "but that isn't legal."

He has only one word of warning for those who might be thinking of getting a few thousand layers of their own. And it sounds logical.

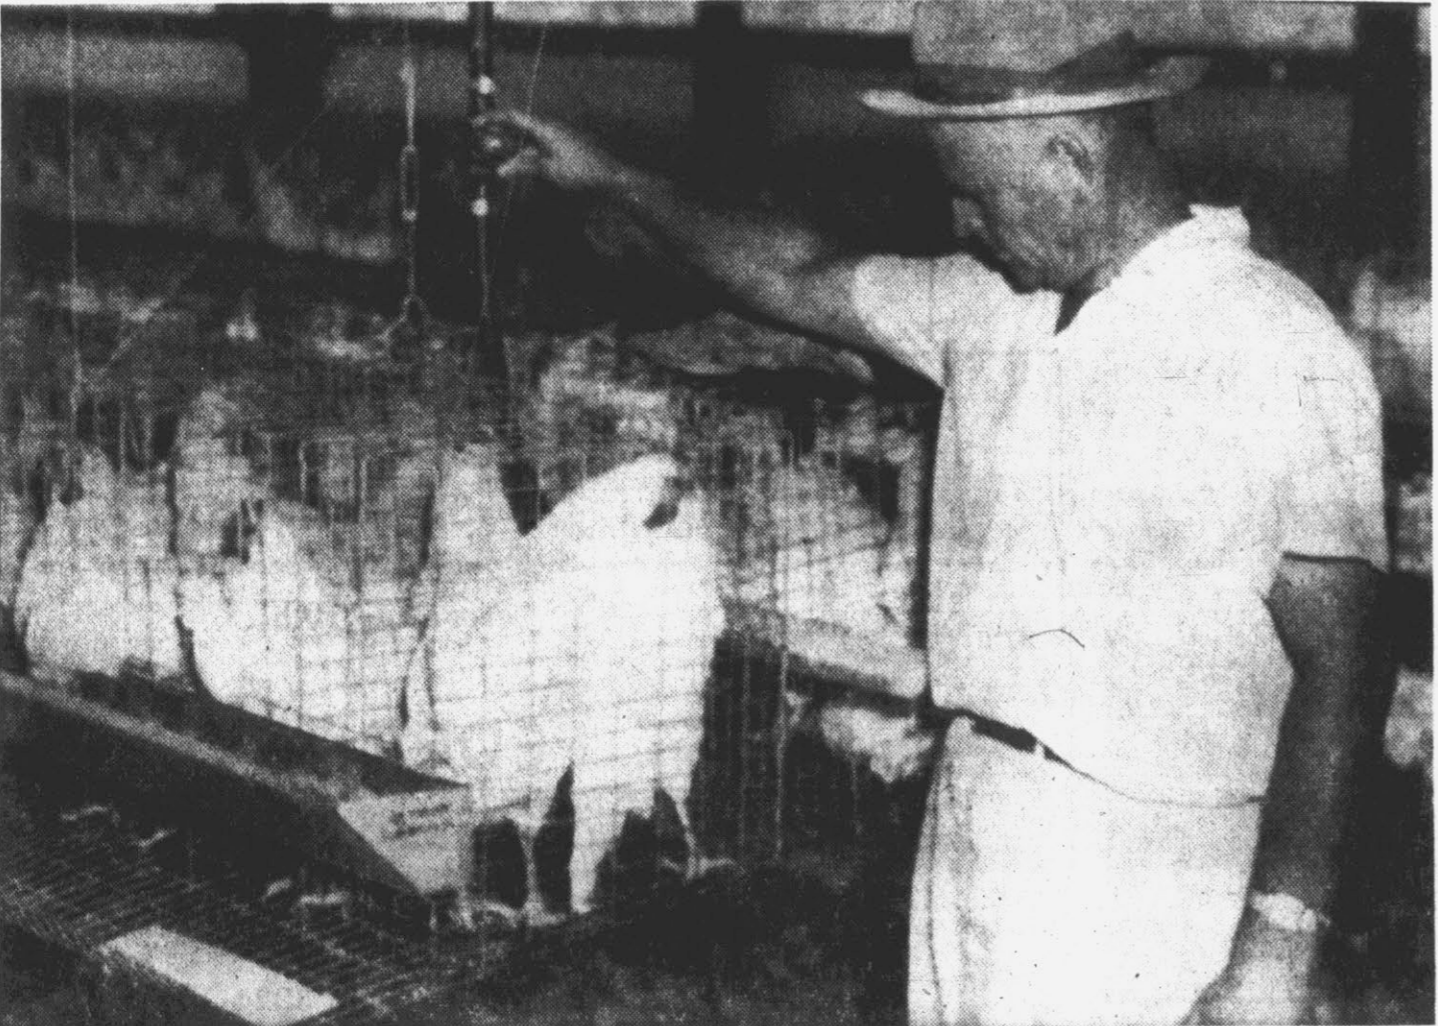

"You absolutely," says Charlie Tyer, "have to like chickens."

Artful Cop Is Very Quick On Draw

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Thugs in this city are beginning to learn accuracy of the sketch was attested to by the fact a newspaper reader recognized the criminal and tipped off police.

Patrolman William M. Needles, 30, isn't any world beater at unlimbering his service revolver, but the "bad guys" are finding out that he's a whiz with pencil and charcoal.

Needles is a police artist and he has developed a knack of drawing fast and remarkably accurate pictures of criminals from word-of-mouth descriptions furnished by witnesses.

Needles started this kind of sketching in 1953 with remarkably good fortune. His first two sketches resulted in arrests.

The second attempt of the young police artist was particularly noteworthy. Just two hours after Needles' sketch appeared in a Columbus newspaper, a youthful gunman who had robbed a number of places was in police custody. The accuracy of the sketch was attested to by the fact a newspaper reader recognized the criminal and tipped off police.

Sgt. Robert Gloekner, head of the robbery squad, puts a lot of faith in Needles' "composites" — a term applied to such sketches in police circles.

A policeman since 1950, except for 18 months' active duty with the Navy during the Korean conflict, Needles paints in oil on his own time.

Once, when called on to sketch two men involved in a $3,600 hold-up, he recalls he worked with seven witnesses from 3 p.m. until 3 a. m. He has turned out a finished composite in only five minutes.

How does he do it? Needles explains: "I start out with an egg shape and then gradually add details of the nose, eyes, ears and other appurtenances from descriptions given by witnesses."

The more witnesses of various ages he has to help him, the more accurate his drawing, Needles points out, adding: "An older person will remember quite a bit about clothes and physical characteristics, but a young kid will remember a lot that adults don't notice."

Reporting Group Records History...As It Happens

By GAVIN SCOTT
NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP)—The unfolding drama of the emotion-packed school desegregation story is being quietly compiled here in a tree-shaded house built in an era when integration was just a dictionary word.

Into this grey Victorian brick building flow daily reports on racial developments affecting over 9,000 school districts in 17 Southern and border states and the District of Columbia.

From this voluminous file, a fact-finding agency called the Southern Education Reporting Service is trying to tell the historic desegregation story straight down the middle.

"We're not advocating integration or segregation," says Canadian-born Don Shoemaker, the service's pipe-smoking executive director. "We just report the story as objectively as we can."

Started Early
SERS was formed by a group of leading Southern newspaper editors and educators on July 15, 1954, just two months after the Supreme Court's decisions strik-relating to the subject. "Library" Cross-indexed, this "library" forms a ready reference on various aspects of the issue and should provide a valuable source for future historians.

Maintains Field Staff
Another major source of information is SERS' field staff of 19 paid correspondents. Each holds down a regular news job in his home state and does a comprehensive monthly roundup of desegregation developments in his area.

These state-by-state roundups are published in the "News."

"All shades of opinion are represented by these reporters," says Shoemaker, former editor of the Asheville (N.C.) Citizen. "All were chosen for their ability to report factually and objectively on one of the great stories of our time."

Shoemaker became executive director of this unique operation two years ago, succeeding C. A. (Pete) McKnight, now editor of the Charlotte Observer. Frank Ahlgren, editor of the Memphis Commercial Appeal, is the present chairman of the SERS board, having been elected in March to succeed Virginius Dabney, editor of the Richmond Times-Dispatch and the board's first chairman.

Veiled Threats Heard On Phone

ROCK HILL, S.C. (AP)—A Negro minister, leader of a boycott by Negroes of city-franchised buses here, said he received a night, one saying that the caller "wanted to be sure you're there before it goes off."

The minister, the Rev. C. A. Ivory, replied calmly to a question by saying "You might call them threatening calls." But he added that the caller did not specifically mention a bomb or otherwise explain the remark.

Ivory said he had notified police, who still were in the area of his home today.

The first caller, Ivory said, asked, "Are you the nigger preacher?" On the second call, apparently from the same person, Ivory added, the same question as asked and then the voice said, "I want to be sure you're there before it goes off."

The minister declared that another person called a couple of hours later and told him, "If you don't call off the boycott, there won't be a nigger working in town in three weeks."

The boycott, two weeks old, started after Alene Austin, 23-year-old Negro woman, allegedly was ordered by a bus driver to leave a seat she had taken by a white woman. The Negro said that seat was the only vacant one on the bus and that the white woman had invited her to take it.

Ivory said he and other Negro leaders have set up a private transportation system to make the boycott effective. He said that a check of morning runs on the three small buses today showed only 11 Negroes riding. On weekdays, he said, these runs usually are filled and there are standees.

Ivory said his group didn't want to put anyone out of business, but "We'd rather walk than be insulted."

Paul Knight, owner of the eStar Cab Co. which operates the buses, said "There's little money" anyway in the business and that he operates the buses as a public convenience.

Parents Appeal School Decision

CHARLOTTE (AP)—Five white parents are asking Superior Court here to keep the Whites Only sign up on this city's traditionally segregated public schools.

The parents are appealing the local school board's July 23 decision to admit five Negro children to two high schools and two junior high schools—previously all-white—this September. The appellants all have youngsters in these schools.

The parents filed their appeal yesterday under a section of North Carolina's 1955 pupil assignment law stating:

"Any person aggrieved by the final order of a county or city board of education may at any time within 10 days from the date of such order appeal therefrom to the Superior Court . . ."

Under the law the case would be heard before a jury.

School board attorney Brock Barkley said the law provides for the appeal of Negroes who are refused assignment to white schools and for white parents whose requests for reassignment of their children from an integrated school are refused.

White parents whose requests for reassignment are denied may request tuition supplements to help send their children to private schools.

The appellants here as "citizens and taxpayers aggrieved by the order of the school board" filed their appeal today in their own names and on behalf of "all other parents and taxpayers similarly situated."

Coldbloodedly Emptied Gun At His Sweetheart

MOORESVILLE, N.C. (AP)—A man who police say emptied his gun at his sweetheart to "put her out of her misery" is being held in jail today on a charge of assault with a deadly weapon with intent to kill.

Sheriff Charlie Rumble said the shooting was one of the most brutal he had ever seen.

The sheriff said Jerry Cornell Garrison, 30, of Rt. 2, Mooresville, shot 28-year-old Nellie Virginia Shoemaker of Statesville in the head and shoulder Wednesday. He quoted Garrison as giving this account:

"The two drove to what Garrison called their 'love nest,' a wooded area near Mooresville. As they were leaving, the girl pointed to a tree and said:

"That's a hickory tree."

"No, it's a walnut," said Garrison.

She reached for a limb and he pulled out a .32 caliber pistol, shooting her in the head.

She fell, crying "Help," Garrison shot three more times, hitting her once in the shoulder.

"We had not had any argument and I was not mad at her," he reportedly told police.

Thinking her dead, Garrison took her wrist watch and pawned it in Statesville for $5 to buy gasoline.

At 11:15 p.m., eleven hours after the shooting, he went to the home of Dept. Sheriff Tom Thompson, gave him the pistol and told him where to find the girl.

Despite the shooting and the hours on the ground, the girl was reportedly in satisfactory condition and doctors were considering an operation to remove the slugs.

Visitor Caught Up In Busy Swirl

MILWAUKEE (AP)—Dick Foy, second cook on the English freighter Manchester Vanguard, stepped ashore here for a brief leave and found himself caught up in the swirl of Commercial music.

Foy, 21, who plays the guitar and sings, stopped at a pub and soon was entertaining the customers. One of the patrons thought he had something extra and took him to booking agent Tony Murmek who agreed.

After stops at a barber and haberdasher, Dick found himself at a recording studio where he cut half a dozen records.

"Only in America could this happen," said the excited Foy as he returned to his ship to wait and see what will happen.

Too Curious For Mere Bystander

EUGENE, Ore. (AP)—The curiosity of a 13-year-old boy led to his arrest on burglary charges.

The boy asked Mrs. Ross Mitty whether police had found any fingerprints on an envelope containing three small diamonds taken from her home.

Suspicious, Mrs. Mitty notified police. They asked the boy for his fingerprints to compare with those left by the burglar. The boy confessed — which made things easier for police who had found no fingerprints at the scene.

ON THE HOUSE

AP Newsfeatures
Are you a home owner with growing pains? Then you usually have but one of two choices: move to a bigger house or remodel and expand your present house.

The first choice presents only one problem — can you afford it? If you can, it's only a question of time until you find the house that suits you. And if you can't wait, you can have it built to order.

The second choice, remodeling to fill the needs of a growing family, can be a bit tricky, since there are other factors involved besides money, although the latter still remains high on the priority list. Here are six things to take into account before you plunge into remodeling:

Plan Well
1. Where can you expand? The best bet, and the least expensive, is in an unfinished attic or basement. Next is the garage, breezeway or carport, all of which already are at least partially enclosed. And if you're adding a new wing, make sure that your lot is large enough so that building codes in your community won't restrict you. You'd be amazed how many homeowners have to take down house extensions when the authorities . . . and local regulations . . . catch up with them.

2. What's the expansion for? The trend today is toward an extra bedroom and bath, followed by playroom or den. An enclosed porch or a place for a workshop follow in that order. It is important, incidentally, not to eat up storage space with expansion. Make provision to maintain your old storage space or include some in the expansion.

3. What will it cost? This depends on the choice of room and where it goes, as well as the kind of materials chosen and how much of the work, if any, you can do yourself. You'll have to find out whether you can expand your present heating and/or cooling system to serve the addition. The Better Heating-Cooling Council has a reminder in this connection: If you have a forced hot water heating system, the chances are you can expand your heating without adding a new plant. That's because most hot water boilers are sized to take care of a new heating plant. If you have some other type of heating or cooling system, you'd be smart to get in an expert to advise you what can be done and what it will cost.

4. Who will do the job right? A reputable remodeling contractor will give you a cost estimate, but you should get at least three estimates, check the bank of each and, where possible, talk with neighbors who have had similar jobs done in the past. Beware of the contractor who offers you a low price for so-called "display" use. After you select your contractor, be sure the contract spells out clearly what is to be done and what guarantee goes with it. And be certain the payment terms are exact.

5. How do you finance it? There are several ways to do this. An "open-end" mortgage means that the homeowner can borrow money he has already paid in on the present mortgage at the same interest rate. In other words, the homeowner extends his regular mortgage. A "second" mortgage is one that is available on top of the first mortgage if the homeowner has a good credit rating. On both mortgage arrangements, additional fees are required for revisions.

Additional Methods
A conventional "property improvement loan" is another source. Some banks and agencies will allow loans up to $3,000 for remodeling, with payments up to three years. An FHA "Title I home improvement loan" is one on which the FHA will insure a low-interest rate loan by qualified lending agencies. For a single-family house, the loan insurance limit is $3,000, with payments up to five years. A "VA-insured loan" means veterans can set aside part of the $10,000 GI mortgage for home improvements. The loan is insured by the VA, but obtained through private banks, with payments up to 30 years. A "direct VA loan" is one in which the VA itself will offer loans in some 2,500 counties where the usual financial loans are difficult to obtain because of the scarcity of lending agencies. These loans are available mostly in rural areas and usually are given at relatively low-interest rates.

Fall Pickup Of Business Slated Keep Prices Up

By SAM DAWSON
NEW YORK (AP)—The dog days may be taking some of the zip out of the consumer but they aren't taking much out of the steady rise of prices and costs here and there in the economy. Food, apparel and a multitude of gadgets and services are being pressured upward by the latest increases.

And the shadow of more to come falls across the news columns today. Industrial leaders appear to be counting on a big fall pickup in business activity to make these price increases stick. If the new boom doesn't come along on schedule to put idle industrial facilities to work, some of the latest price hikes may be rescinded.

But the belief in built-in inflation seems to be growing, a self-perpetuating spiral of wages and prices which only a balky public could halt. The threat of higher prices to come at the stores and in the commodity markets lies in these things:

Wholesale prices of food have climbed to the highest point since June 1953 and are now 5 per cent above a year ago. Retail food prices seem sure to make another advance soon in sympathy. Manufacturers ordering materials for fall production will be paying higher prices for steel and aluminum products.

Prices of some other metals that have fallen in recent weeks could be bolstered and rise again as the result of congressional action. Hearings on a proposed hike in the tariff on lead and zinc are under way in Washington with the object of aiding those faltering industries.

It's a long path from the mine to the car dealer's showroom or the appliance store, but in time the price increases in industrial materials will have their effect on retail prices.

Price increases in woolen fabrics and in acetate staple which goes into clothing and home furnishings may send the cost of apparel higher this fall and next spring.

The cost of travel and of moving freight may go up.

Living Example Of Big Misconception

By JAMES BACON
HOLLYWOOD (AP)—A sexy blonde made an awful liar out of Bob Mathias the other day. Mathias is the handsome ex-Olympic decathlon champ who recently was signed to an acting career by John Wayne.

Bob, a six-foot-four hunk of man, was discoursing with a reporter about women athletes. Said he: "Women, if they are smart, will keep out of athletics. First, they're no good at it compared with European women and, secondly, it tends to make them muscular and ugly."

Confused As To Departments
HUNTINGTON, W. Va. (AP)—A man who called at the vital statistics office in the county courthouse got a bit confused. What he wanted was a birth certificate. What he said was, "I want the birth control department."

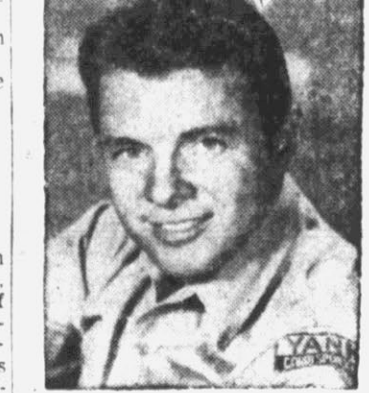

Shoe Approach To A New Job
CORONADO, Calif. (AP)—On leaving the navy as a lieutenant, John E. Hermann, formerly of Nashville, Tenn., wrote to prospective employers: "Ah'm from Tennessee, but I've put on my shoes and I'm ready for work in California."

She said nothing. Then the reporter started questioning her, asking her what she had done before she tried for a movie career. All at the table expected her to give the usual answer—model, or beauty contest winner or little theater. Instead she replied demurely: "I was a golf pro."

"We had an act where we would get some volunteer from the audience to lie down and hold a teed-up golf ball in his mouth. Then the pro would ask me to hit the ball off the volunteer's mouth. "I used to fake an amateurish swing and then the pro would ask: 'Have you ever swung a golf club before?' Then, if the volunteer hadn't fainted by this time, I answered 'no' and smacked the ball right out of his mouth."

What did she think about Mathias' comments on women athletes? "I think he's been around too many women shot putters," she answered. Mathias allowed as how he might have been.
