Sixteen Survivors Of Navy Blimp Crash Into Pamlico Sound Are Rescued Unhurt

ELIZABETH CITY, N. C. (AP)—A fishing boat rescued the survivors of a Navy blimp which crashed last night in Pamlico Sound. The Coast Guard said apparently all 16 members of the crew escaped injury.

ELIZABETH CITY, N. C. (AP)—The Public Health Service said today there were only 78 paralytic cases of poliomyelitis among the 356 cases reported last week. This compared with 369 paralytic cases alone in the comparative 1956 week, in which a total of 876 cases of all kinds of poliomyelitis were listed.

Fleet Airship Wing 1 at Elizabeth City, N. C., command reported that the blimp was on route from Glynco, near Brunswick, Ga., to Lakehurst, N. J. The 5th District Naval Headquarters said no details of the blimp's trouble or location were immediately available.

Greenville Tobacco Mart Opening Sees $48 Average

Belt's Opening Fails High Hopes

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS Both total sales and prices were below expectations on Eastern Belt tobacco markets opening sales yesterday. The Federal-State Market News Service reported today that the Eastern sales yesterday totaled 5,959,952 pounds and that growers receive an average of $49.46 a hundredweight for their leaf.

non-descript. Volume was light to heavy by market. The Stabilization Corp. took between 3 to 8 per cent of sales, compared to 25 per cent taken on opening day last year under the government price support program.

Greenville's tobacco market averaged $48 per hundred pounds yesterday, below morning estimates but above last year's opening day average. The market sold 652,078 pounds of tobacco for $312,929.90. Offerings yesterday consisted mainly of low and fair grade primings with a large volume of non-descript tobacco in the sales.

Very little discounted variety tobacco appeared on the warehouse floors yesterday and the same appeared true today. The discounted varieties which carry only 50 per cent of support prices were passed up by buyers. Discounted varieties carry five red stripes across the warehouse ticket for quick identification.

Rayburn Expects Congress Will Vote Civil Rights Bill

WASHINGTON (AP)—Speaker of the House Rayburn (D-Tex.) predicted today civil rights bill will be enacted before Congress adjourns, and hinted that House action on the bill would come next week.

making a strategic retreat from an all-or-nothing stand for the kind of measure President Eisenhower has asked. Shortly afterward Rep. Leo Allen of Illinois, senior Republican on the Rules Committee and one of the strategists, said differences blocking House action appeared pretty well ironed out.

has been blocking action. But with the four Republican members and four Northern Democrats voting together as a majority of the 12-member committee, the bill could be sent to the floor. Just before Allen talked with newsmen, Republican civil rights leaders in the House put off a strategy conference.

Fall Short Of Early Estimate For Day's Sales

FARMVILLE—Opening day sales and prices fell far short of estimates on the Farmville Tobacco Market. Sales Supervisor Charles S. Edwards said this morning the market's 12 warehouses moved 244,724 pounds of tobacco yesterday at an average of $46.02 per hundred pounds. Total sales for the day were $112,617.70.

The Market News Service reported that prices by grades were $2 to $6 higher yesterday than on opening day last year. Meanwhile, yesterday's sales saw a new high average for the season on the South Carolina North Carolina Border Belt. Sales totaled 10,335,609 and averaged $60.34 per 100.

Border Belt volume was heavy yesterday with quality of offerings improved. Auction bid averages on a limited number of Eastern Belt grades yesterday. Leaf — Fair lemon $63, up 5 over last year's opening average; low orange $59, up 5.

Rains Prove Help To Fire Fighters

MANN'S HARBOR, N. C. (AP)—Rains yesterday lasting until early this morning gave a boost to efforts of firefighters trying to bring under control the forest fire that has ravaged woodlands more than two weeks.

Along with the showers, aid came to firefighters with the arrival of 180 Marines, a detachment of about 33 National Guardsmen, and additional men and equipment from other points.

Senator Knowland Reports Foreign Aid Bill 'Hopes'

WASHINGTON (AP)—Sen. Knowland (R-Calif.) held a last-minute strategy session with President Eisenhower today and reported later they both hope to get back in the Senate a substantial part of the $809,650,000 House chopped out of foreign aid funds.

may do if the foreign aid funds voted at this time are inadequate. Knowland said he thought a special session call would depend on world conditions at the time—that is, that the President might find it possible to get along with existing foreign aid funds until Congress can wind up the present session at the end of next week.

Father Planning Aid Accused Son

DUNN, N. C. (AP)—A distraught father who has not seen his eldest son in about 10 years planned today to go to the assistance of the boy who is being held in California on suspicion of murder.

Clean-Up Man Is Said Pro-Hoffa

WASHINGTON (AP)—Well-posted labor sources say that John P. English—the man picked by the AFL-CIO to clean up the Teamsters' dirty linen—is supporting James R. Hoffa for Teamsters president, otherwise in the union's president and executive board.

proposed, and adopted, at the Teamsters convention. These changes in teamsters constitutional laws were reported to vest complete control over finances in English and more central power, otherwise in the union's president and executive board.

State administrative forester James B. Hubbard said the area had been doused by an "excellent rain" and that it had been a tremendous help toward halting the fire.

In addition to the Marines from Camp Lejeune and the National Guardsmen from Elizabeth City, a tank truck and fire truck arrived from the Fifth Naval District at Norfolk, three fire trucks from the Cherry Point Marine Air Base, and two pumps from the Naval Shipyard at Portsmouth, Va. The State Wildlife Resources Commission sent in a plane to help in spotting and made its 19 game protectors in the area available for fire fighting. Twenty forest rangers from throughout the state were flown in by the State Forest Service.

'Nature Girl' Reaches Big City For Good Look

NEW YORK (AP)—Dorothy Brown, 16-year-old North Carolina "nature girl," arrived today to take a look at New York—and for New York to take a look at her.

seeing, news conferences, television appearances and other activities scheduled ahead. "I don't know what all I will be doing here," she said, but expressed eagerness to see all the usual tourist sights.

She acknowledged she spent part of her time on the train trip from Charlotte, N.C., reading fan mail inspired by newspaper accounts of her beauty.

When the AFL-CIO ousted Barker as vice president and Executive Council member last May, English was chosen to replace him. George Meany, AFL-CIO president, reported English assured the Executive Council at that time: "We're going to wash our own dirty linen. You and the rest of American labor are going to be proud of us again."

Needle Points Way To Inexpensive Wardrobe

By ANNE SINGLETON
Reflector Woman's Editor

A color chart is the key to college and high school wardrobe happiness, according to Lois and Betty Tunnell.

And they should know—each works with clothes very carefully and is now making nearly all of those they will wear to Junius H. Rose High School and East Carolina College this fall.

"We have to have a color chart since we budget our clothes and the chart is a good guide," Lois explains. Betty adds that she tries to plan the skirts she makes so that the colors will blend with the sweaters and blouses she already has.

"I find that by making gray, black, dark tweed, navy and dark green winter skirts, I can easily match them with bright and pastel accessories, sweaters, and blouses and have many outfits from a few basic changes," Betty comments.

Sewing Only Few Years

Lois, who will be a sophomore at Junius H. Rose High School, began sewing in the high school home economics class last year and "hopes to learn even more this year." Betty, who will major in primary education at college, has been sewing four years.

But their mother, Mrs. R. E. Tunnell, readily admits, "I can't sew at all, though I'm so glad my daughters can."

Betty, who has brown hair, has already finished making a cotton skirt and several boatneck blouses this summer and is now beginning to make her winter skirts.

As a special touch for her black cotton skirt, she made a reversible belt which is black on one side and a gay plaid on the other to match one of her new blouses for back-to-school.

Sometimes Use Two Machines.

One sister never gets too far ahead of the other. There are times when both sewing machines are running at full speed at the Tunnell home on Ward Street.

Blonde Lois now has several cotton dresses, blouses, a pair of Bermudas, and a shortie pajama set to add to her wardrobe as a result of an industrious summer. Plais are already forming for several winter skirts and dark cottons she will make for this fall.

Working together, they pin the hems of each other's skirts and measure and fit one another's outfits. Being the same size, the sisters also share patterns.

"With the wide variety and good selection of material that can now be found it is easy to make clothes that have an individual air to them," Lois points out.

"Since I am tall and slender, I find the skirts I make fit better and I can make a winter skirt for less than $3.50, so I have more clothes that way," says Betty.

Another bargain the girls indulge in is remnants. "By saving our money on material, we can buy more sweaters and accessories," they explain.

While they enjoy sewing, the attractive sisters both agree that selecting accessories to team with their clothes is just as much fun as choosing patterns and fabrics.

Redecorating, Too

When asked if sewing takes up all their time, they quickly answer, "No, we paint, too." The girls recently finished painting five rooms in their home, shellacking their bedroom floors, and making drapes for the living room.

Betty, who was tired of her room always looking so dark, painted the doors and her desk white and made pink ruffles for the bed pillows and vanity stool.

Then she bought some airy pink curtains and dresser scarfs. Now the room has a soft, pink frosted effect.

"This summer has been a busy one for these teen-agers, but next month when they return to school they will have a well-planned wardrobe . . . and they won't have to worry about meeting themselves every time they turn a corner."

BETTY AND LOIS TUNNELL . . . surrounded by summer clothes they have made, are now planning their winter wardrobe with care.

Deb Doings

Wearing a light blue summer dress, Mary Will Long was honored Monday evening in Wilson at a dinner party.

Mary Will was a house guest of the hostess, Miss Suzanne Daught-ridge, who is also a schoolmate.

Parties Being Planned

A gala series of parties are being planned now for deb in Eastern North Carolina and Greenville. Kin-four debs are making plans to attend.

Miss Sarah Adams and Miss Mary Will Long will attend a tea in Kinston on August 27 at 4:30 p.m. honoring Kinston debutantes and two Goldsboro debs. Hostesses will be Miss Jane Copeland and Miss Anne Landner.

Miss Margaret Moya will be escorted to the buffet table to be given at the Hilda Country Club in Tarboro on August 21 by Donald Conley. This party will be given in honor of the Bethel debs.

Coffee Hour

Mrs. J. B. James will honor Greenville deb, Miss Mary Will Long, at a coffee hour August 30 from 11 a.m. to noon at her home on Fifth Street, Greenville. Kinston and Bethel debs are invited.

New Short Hairdo Does Quick Change

DAYTIME . . . Nymph hairdo is center-parted, dipped at temples, turned into loops. Nape hair twisted into loop curl at top of center back.

EVENING GLAMOR . . . Nymph coif is brushed high and back. Nape hair is pinned securely to support side and top hair. Change-about hairdo by Ruel.

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newfeatures Beauty Editor

New hairdos are short, cool and collected.

The latest coiffures are designed to keep hair off that hot spot, the nape of the neck.

"But if you wear the new hairdos," cautions Ruel, stylist for Coiffures American salons, "avoid the scraped tight look, harsh and unappealing, resorted to by girls trying to look and feel cool."

Ruel has designed "nymph" hairdos, coiffed in wide shadowy waves that give dignity and allure to statuesque types in particular. These fall simply and sculpturally with no curls, tightness or fussy detail.

It's not the only hairdo Ruel advises, but it is typical of the gentle hairdos that may be given full play without cluttering the back of the head.

For daytime wear, the nymph hairdo is center-parted, deeply dipped on the temples, and is combed downward into two whipper waves, turned under at ear length. To achieve this effect the hair is fluffed at the sides and then brushed under. The nape hair is picked up and cleverly twisted into a big looped curl at the top of the center back.

For evening the hair may be swooped up into a high coif that leaves the neck gracefully free. The nape hair is turned over and pinned to support side and top hair which rests about it. The effect is real cool.

Christian Science Announcements

Scientific healing—healing through the power of God, Soul—will be a topic dealt with at Christian Science services Sunday.

Matthew's account of Christ Jesus' healing of the two blind men (9:27-31) will be included in the readings from the King James Version of the Bible. The subject of the Lesson-Sermon is "Soul."

From "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy the following will be read (210:11-16): "Knowing that Soul and its attributes were forever manifested through man, the Master healed the sick, gave sight to the blind, hearing to the deaf, feet to the lame, thus bringing to light the scientific action of the divine Mind on human minds and bodies and giving a better understanding of Soul and salvation."

QUICK CLAM CHOWDER

Ingredients: 2 slices bacon, 1 medium-sized onion (finely chopped), 1 can (10 1-4 ounces) frozen condensed cream of potato soup, 1 can (8 ounces) minced clams, milk, 2 whole allspice, ground coriander, cummin seed, pepper.

Method: Dice bacon; place in saucepan (about 1 quart) with chopped onion. Cook over low heat, stirring often, until bacon is cooked and onion is lightly browned. Remove frozen soup according to directions on can and add to bacon-onion mixture. Drain clams and reserve; pour clam juice into potato soup can; add enough milk to fill can; pour into saucepan; add 1/2 cup more milk along with allspice, a few pinches of ground coriander, cummin seed and pepper to taste. Heat slowly, stirring occasionally, until soup defrosts and boils. Add reserved drained clams; reheat but do not boil. Makes 4 servings.

SHOULDER PADS

When making nylon dresses, make the shoulder pads out of the same material, stuffing them with the scraps of nylon left over from the dress. Shoulder pads made in this way are almost as quick to dry when laundered as the dress itself.

Fresh minced dill makes a wonderful addition to a hard-cooked egg sandwich filling or an egg salad.

Paris Booms Small Hats

PIXIE CAP . . . Typical of the new small, head-hugging Paris hats is this pointed cap in dark green and white printed jersey, velvet trim.

PUSSY-WILLOW BONNET
Achille of Paris makes a free-form helmet in silky gray pussy-willow buds, part of "Shootin' Star" group.

CHINCHILLA ELEGANCE . . . Paris hatter Orceel shapes priceless chinchilla like a page-boy hairdo, over gold cap centered with diamond.

By NADEANE WALKER
PARIS (AP)—So you don't wear a hat?

Paris hatters are out to change that.

This season they have come up with something to please every woman. The big hats frankly never caught on madly, so without making a hullabaloo about it, the milliners have brought back the small hat.

You can have it squatting on the eyebrows or shooting up backwards like an Egyptian bonnet, pixie pointed or slouching over one ear in the form of a beret.

Please, ma'am, take your choice—just so you wear a hat.

By bringing out hats in printed jerseys and brilliant hues—beetle-wing blue, vivid green, coral and rose-red—hatters are fearlessly predicting a dark season in dresses and coats. Do they know what they're doing?

Says Achille, boldest of Paris hatters:

"I don't know a thing, except that the customers tell me they want hats to flatter them, to make them look younger instead of older."

England goes in for soft draped shapes that can be folded up, as well as profiled-backwards bonnets that recall Queen Nefertite. Sloppy berets slouch low on the neck. They come in flowered jersey for daytime and in jeweled tulle, with fantails down the back, for bare-backed evening wear. Detachable veils are colored like madame's mascara.

Pixie Caps

Albony favors high-crowned, crushed-looking models with a flattering peak over the eyes. Spider-web veiling is frazzled out in a wispy fringe all around. There are pixie-peaked caps and draped turbans, floppy-brimmed models with brim and crown in contrasting colors and materials.

Heim-Svend call some of their creations "monkey caps." They vary them with small-curved toques, backward-soaring bonnets and evening hats like oversized mink buttons or cut-out velvet whirligigs. All Svend's hats have bird names. Brimmed models turn sherry back in front, and some are made of draped kidskin.

"Troika toques" contribute to the Russian look of Gilbert Orceel's furry and feathery collection. A chinchilla and gold velvet turban is centered with a 35-carat canary diamond on a golden wire. There's a sheep dog look about a saad-colored model in shaggy, uncurled ostrich plumes.

Alexandre, who creates coiffures for evening and special occasions, has also gone in for swansdown and ostrich feathers, intertwined in pinned-on chignons and decorated with diamond jewels.

Grace F. W. B. Announcements

Sunday School begins at 9:45 with a general assembly in the church auditorium. If you do not already attend some other school we invite and urge upon you to come and be with us. There are classes for each age group from the tiny tots to the oldest person alive. You are welcome.

The morning worship service starts at 11:00 o'clock. During this service the pastor, Rev. Rashie Kennedy, will continue his messages of the Gospel according to John. You are welcome to come and worship with us.

The League begins at 7:00 p.m. Sunday. If you are a Christian you are in need of training for greater service for the Master. Be sure to come.

The evening services begin at 8:00. There will be singing of the Gospel songs that are everybody's favorites. The pastor will bring the message of the hour.

Monday evening the Sunday School Council meets at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Jimmie Spain. Each teacher, officer, and others interested in the Sunday School are invited.

Tuesday evening at 7:30 the Official Board of the church meets for their regular monthly meeting.

Wednesday evening the church will meet in the monthly business session. Each member of the church should feel it is his duty to be present.

Thursday evening is set aside for visitation. Those interested should meet at the church at 7:30.

Friday evening the Woman's Auxiliary will meet at the church. A Study course will be taught by Mrs. Herman Cannon. Each member please make a special effort to be there.

Revival services begin August 25-31. The Musical Messengers will be in charge.

Greenville F. W. B. Announcements

New and renewed interest is being shown in the Greenville Free Will Baptist Sunday school. All members and visitors are urged to be present this Sunday morning at 9:45. At the 11 a.m. worship the choir will sing the anthem "Lead Me, Lord," McKinney. The pastor's sermon topic will be "Don't Dispute God's Word" (Rom. 9:20). The Leagues will meet at 7 p.m. under the direction of Mr. Mark Case. At the 8 p.m. worship Mrs. Bill Nelson and Mr. Dallas Clark will sing as a duet the hymn "I'll Go Where You Want Me To Go" and the pastor's sermon topic will be "A Joyous Witnessing People" (Acts 8:8).

Monday at 8 p.m. the Sunday School Council will meet with Mr. and Mrs. Mark Case, 904-A Cottage St.

Wednesday at 7:30 p.m. there will be prayer service and the study of the doctrine of Repentance. Classes in evangelism will be held the same hour and at 8:15 p.m. the Senior Choir will meet for a rehearsal.

Thursday at 5:30 p.m. the B.A.'s and G.T.A.'s will meet at the Sunday School Annex. Thursday at 7 p.m. the Willing Workers Sunday School Class will meet at Respass-James.

Sunday at the 11 a.m. worship service the Nursery will be in charge of Mrs. James F. Crawford and Mrs. J. W. Allen.

There was a great spiritual impact made upon the church congregation the past Wednesday night when 172 persons attended different prayer services. God has heard and already answered some prayers that were prayed at these services.

Christian Church Announcements

At the worship service of the Eighth Street Christian Church Sunday morning, Mr. Robert S. Moya, chairman of the board of officers of the church, will preside through the Communion Hour. The choir under the direction of Mrs. H. L. Carter will sing an anthem entitled "Tis The Blessed Hour of Prayer" by Doane. After the anthem, the service will then be turned over to the youth of the church. Roy Martin Jr., president of the Christian Youth Fellowship, will bring a summary of "Summer Youth Activities of the Christian Church." Joyce Sutton, "Life at a CYP Conference", and Brenda Bowden, "Activities at the Ch-Rio Camp." The church is very glad to have young people take part in the service and bring all up-to-date on the activities of the youth of the Christian Church.

Sunday morning, August 25, Mr. James W. Butler of East Carolina College will be guest speaker at the morning worship hour.

All members of the church and visiting worshippers are most cordially invited to attend each and every service at the Eighth Street Church. Sunday school each Sunday morning is from 9:45 to 10:30 and worship service from 10:45 to 11:30.

Live Happily On $200 A Month

By DOROTHY ROE
AP Women's Editor
Charles Allen Smart and his wife Peggy, formerly of Chillicothe, Ohio, are a middle-aged couple who spent most of their lives in the somewhat stuffy atmosphere of university faculty circles until one day they decided to heck with it and took off for Mexico.
For the last four years they have lived in their own private paradise in San Miguel, painting, puttering and writing, never having to rush for the 8:03, doing what they liked when they chose to do it—and spending never more than $200 a month.
Charles, a former college professor, tells about it in his new book "At Home in Mexico," just published by Doubleday. And the way he tells it, we should expect a major American exodus for Mexico any day.
"We simply rented our Ohio house and left," says Peggy, a smiling, happy woman with smartly coiffured gray hair and an air of knowing the right thing to do in any situation. "We bought our home in San Miguel — 18th century stone house, patio, walled garden and all, for not much more than it would take to buy a new car here.
"We have a cook and a gardener, each of whom are paid $8 a month, on which they live in comparative luxury. We have our choice of wonderful fresh vegetables, fruits and exotic flowers. We live in comfort, have the companionship of a colony of about 150 Americans and Canadians, talk books and art and music, have time to do the things we always wanted to do, and enjoy life."
Of course, there are some drawbacks. You don't have television in the living room. You don't shop at a supermarket. The cost of American plumbing and refrigeration is likely to be pretty high, but it is available. You have to be careful about purifying drinking water and such things. But the advantages outweigh any such minor inconveniences.

When Cathy was 4 she was taken to her grandmother's—a two-day auto trip. She had never seen her grandmother; the place, the people were all strange. When she woke up in the morning, Mother and Daddy were gone. She was terrified and lonely. All she wanted to do was sit and suck her thumb.
The grandmother did her best, but the child did not warm up. She was no special trouble, she just sat most of the time. After a while the older woman more or less let her alone. At the end of two weeks, Mother and Daddy came back and took Cathy home. She made the trip home without trouble, but never again could she get into a car without feeling sick at her stomach.
This is a clear case of emotional car sickness. The fear that gripped Cathy when she found herself in a car was the fear that her parents would disappear and the fear expressed itself by an upset stomach.
Slowly we brought Cathy back to confidence. Many short trips

Car-Sick Children Can Spoil Vacation

By DOROTHY V. WHIPPLE, M.D.
Motion sickness can certainly wreck family life. Especially is this true of the family taking a vacation trip by car.
Motion sickness is a peculiar illness. A few people are disturbed by any kind of a moving vehicle all their lives. Others are troubled in childhood and outgrow it. For some any kind of motion makes them ill—automobile, streetcar, boat or plane. Others can take a good deal of jouncing under most circumstances but certain kinds of motion spell their doom. It may be so specific that it is only in one automobile that the unpleasant symptoms occur.
Without doubt there is a difference in people, and some unfortunate souls have an uneasy stomach that doesn't do well when it gets joggled about. However, there is a big emotional element in car sickness. If we are going to do something about it we must tackle it from both the physical and the emotional sides.
Cathy was 6. For the past two years she'd been violently sick every time she rode in the family car. This summer the family had had to give up even afternoon picnics away from home, and as for the much desired trip to the beach for vacation—they just couldn't face the day-long agony of getting there.
When Cathy was 4 she was taken to her grandmother's—a two-day auto trip. She had never seen her grandmother; the place, the people were all strange. When she woke up in the morning, Mother and Daddy were gone. She was terrified and lonely. All she wanted to do was sit and suck her thumb.
The grandmother did her best, but the child did not warm up. She was no special trouble, she just sat most of the time. After a while the older woman more or less let her alone. At the end of two weeks, Mother and Daddy came back and took Cathy home. She made the trip home without trouble, but never again could she get into a car without feeling sick at her stomach.
This is a clear case of emotional car sickness. The fear that gripped Cathy when she found herself in a car was the fear that her parents would disappear and the fear expressed itself by an upset stomach.
Slowly we brought Cathy back to confidence. Many short trips with one or both parents, with much assurance that they would all come back together, was combined with as casual an attitude as possible toward occasional lapses of car sickness. When she was sick, the mess was cleaned up, and there was talk about what we'd do when we all got wherever we were going. After about six months Cathy no longer feared that a trip meant the disappearance of her parents and she stopped being car sick.

It's not always possible to put your finger on what makes a child uneasy about a trip, but it's well worth a very careful search. What happened the first time the child was sick? Or what happened that could be tied up in the child's mind with a trip?
In the meantime a few physical things help keep an uneasy stomach as quiet as possible. First plenty of fresh air and a minimum of jouncing. Let the child ride in the front seat and near an open window. A small meal before a trip is better than either a big one or an empty stomach. Munching a few soda crackers keeps a little bit of easily digested food in the stomach and seems to quiet it. If a child will sleep during a trip he can often get to his destination without distress, but just lying awake on the back seat is more likely than not to induce trouble.
There are some excellent medicines available that help with motion sickness. Ask your doctor about them. But if the car sickness is due to some emotional disturbance related to traveling no amount of medicine will help.

Books & Stuff

By DR. ED HIRSHBERG
Major—and somewhat sensational—literary event of the week is the publication of "The New Class: An Analysis of the Communist System," by Milovan Djilas. The book is sensational because it is a frank discussion of Communism by a real live Communist—Djilas, until recently, was a high officer in Tito's government in Yugoslavia, and now is serving a prison term there for writing a strong criticism of Tito's endorsement of Russia's suppression of the revolt in Hungary last year. His book was written in his native Serbo-Croatian, smuggled out of prison and over here to an obscure American publishing house, Frederick Praeger. It was translated into English and now promises to be a prime document here and in western Europe in the ideological campaign against Communism. Three cheers for Praeger and some more for Djilas—and we'll tell you more about his book when we get our copy. . . .
On Donkeys
We had never heard of Juan Ramon Jimenez until last year, when he won the Nobel Prize in literature for his poetry, which he has been writing for many years. He's Spanish and lives in Porto Rico, and two translations of an early book of his children's poetry have just come out. It's called "Platero and I," and the poems in it are about a donkey—sometimes called an ass—named Platero, which is about all we know about him. . . . We just came across another item about a donkey, also Spanish and also associated with a poet. This particular donkey, who was not named Platero, walked into the poet's room where he was boarding while on vacation at Valencia Bay in Spain. With great indignation, the donkey ate up sev-

Little Girls Like Pretty, Gay Bathrobes

Small sleepy-time gals like to look appealing and feminine at bedtime, just like their big sisters. If a pint-size glamor girl has a pretty, cuddly bathrobe to wear, she may not fight off bedtime so energetically.
You don't need to wreck the budget buying an expensive robe. All you need is some fabric and a sewing machine. Local sewing center experts suggest making a little girl's robe out of flower-sprigged washable white cool challis, trimmed with pink yarn dolls and accented with decorative stitching.

The stitching that borders collar and pockets is easy to do with one of the new automatic slant-needle sewing machines, or with the automatic zigzag attachment on a standard machine. Buttonholes are made the same way, and even the blind-stitched hem can be done on the machine.
Use a standard pattern for a child's robe, and add the decorations according to your own imagination. You'll find your small charmer will enjoy looking glamorous for her bedtime story.

A few weeks ago we told you about the shameful deeds that are on the verge of being perpetrated on the shores of Walden Pond, immortalized by Henry Thoreau's classic book. Bulldozers are about to destroy the woodland peace of the area by laying it out for roads, picnic tables, refreshment stands and bath houses, and the Thoreau Society of Concord apparently is fighting a losing battle to keep Walden Pond inviolate. We would like to encourage you to add your protest against this action, if you're interested, by writing to Mr. Truman Nelson of the Thoreau Society, whose address is 20 Beckford Street, Salem, Mass. . . .
On Colleges
We've just received a copy of its "Second Report to the President," prepared by President Eisenhower's Committee on Education Beyond the High School, issued late in July. It is a review of the situation in our colleges as it is now and probably will be for the next ten years, and recommends vigorous governmental action to cope with the rocketing enrollments and increasing needs of higher education. We think the Report is important reading for everyone interested in the nation's colleges—teachers, students, and the folks who are going to pay their tuition—which could be almost anybody. . . .

ROBERTA E. LEE, By Burke Davis. Illustrated by John Opper. Winston-Salem: John F. Blair, 1956. $2.75.
"Roberta E. Lee" is the name of a "juvenile" published by John F. Blair of Winston-Salem. The author is Burke Davis of Durham, the artist John Opper of Greensboro. I had hoped to find the book a happy product of Tar Heel talent but was disappointed. The story lacked the spontaneous humor of Carl Sandburg's "Rutabaga Stories" or the timeless wisdom of the Uncle Remus tales. I found the author's genial satire on Southern customs a bit labored. There was also something inconsistent about combining Marilyn Monroe, persimmon juleps, animal beauty contests and Scarlett O'Hara in the same story.
There were good points—fascinating names of characters and places, interesting plot, and refreshing similes. Perhaps the author attempted too much in appealing to adult juveniles. This is a difficult field. Not many Lewis Carrolls have turned up through the years, and even a very simple story like "Peter Rabbit" has produced many imitators but only one Beatrix Potter.
Writing a juvenile isn't easy, and maybe I expect too much. But

Chilled Tomato Juice
Scrambled Eggs and Bacon
Orange Blueberry Muffins
Beverage

ORANGE BLUEBERRY MUFFINS

Ingredients: 12 teaspoons honey, 1 seedless orange, 1 1/2 cups sifted flour, 2 teaspoons double-acting baking powder, 1/2 teaspoon salt, 1-3 cup sugar, 1 egg, 1/2 cup milk, 1-4 cup butter or margarine (melted and cooled), 3-4 cup blueberries.
Method: This recipe just fills a 12-well muffin pan whose wells each hold about 1-3 cup. Butter muffin pans generously; put 1 teaspoon honey in the bottom of each well. Cut ends from orange; do not peel; slice 12 very thin rounds from orange. Arrange an orange slice (cut into quarters) in the bottom of each well over the honey. Sift together the flour, baking powder, salt and sugar. Beat egg with rotary beater (hand or electric) until thick and almost white in color; add milk and beat enough to combine. Add sifted dry ingredients and melted butter. Stir until flour is moistened, but do not try to beat out all lumps. Fold in blueberries. Spoon batter over orange. Muffin wells will be about 3-4 full. Bake in hot (400 degrees) oven about 25 minutes or until cake tester inserted in center comes out clean. Serve at once or re-heat. Makes 12 medium-sized muffins.
Did you know there are two sorts of scallops on the market? One variety is the small bay scallop, the other the large sea scallop.

A Challenge Waiting To Be Taken Up

Eastern North Carolina needs more of the "do it ourselves" attitude as it faces up to the problem of raising the economic level of this area through industrial and commercial development.

Speaking before the Greenville Rotary Club a few evenings ago A. Hartwell Campbell, manager of television station WNCT, declared that if Eastern North Carolina is to have adequate air service, "we are going to have to do it ourselves."

In view of unsuccessful efforts to establish a joint air facility in this part of the state to attract adequate air service, it appears that the "do it ourselves" approach offers the only solution.

And why not?

Eastern North Carolinians have been doing for themselves for generations. They have developed here one of the foremost agricultural areas of the nation. And they have done so by relying on their own resources and own initiative. These same resources and this same initiative can pave the way for a thriving industrial development. Eastern North Carolina has the natural resources for industrial development. It has a vast pool of labor; it has transportation facilities over which it can move products readily to the major markets of the East and Midwest; and as has been shown in recent years, it has the capital with which to establish industries.

There is a great deal of merit in the proposal that a feeder airline be established in this area to afford the area the air service which it needs and has not been able to get from large airlines. At first the idea may seem too great a challenge, but it is a challenge which can be successfully met if the people are willing to meet it.

The more Eastern North Carolina does for itself in the way of enhancing its own commercial, industrial and transportation development, the more attention it will attract from major corporations which are looking for progressive, fruitful areas in which to locate new plants and new enterprises of their own.

In terms of its potential, this area has just begun to scratch the surface in realizing its economic possibilities through the "do it ourselves approach." It is time we apply the "do it ourselves" formula more frequently to more challenging tasks.

Their Joy Ride Puts U.S. In A Bad Light

What is the State Department to do with American citizens like the 41 youths who defied a government order and set out from Moscow on a trip to Red China?

The Reflector previously has voiced its opinion that the State Department's policy toward visits of Americans to Red China needs revamping and in some instances radical changes. At the same time, the fact that the regulation needs change does not afford every American license to violate the order.

We seriously doubt those 41 youths who openly defied the State Department order intended to become tools of Communist propaganda against this country. Yet by their act of defiance, they have allowed themselves to be used by the Communist against their native land. They failed to recognize the reasoning behind the State Department's attitude toward their proposed visit to Red China. They failed to heed the warning issued by the State Department especially for them.

Their joy ride has placed the government of the United States in a delicate position. For the government to mete out any punishment to them on their return home, no matter how insignificant the penalty, would be for the United States to afford the Communists more propaganda ammunition with which to poison the minds of their imprisoned people. For the United States to ignore the violation of its regulations by these 41 youths would be to encourage others to defy the regulations in the future.

To satisfy their own selfish desires, these 41 American youths have allowed themselves to contribute in some small way to a gigantic effort to destroy the way of life of their native land. It is an accomplishment in which they will find little personal satisfaction in years to come. We trust that other American youths, confronted with a similar decision in the future, will exercise greater discretion than that shown by these 41.

Rum Troubles Of Puerto Rico

By ELMER ROESSNER
A high Puerto Rican official has been ordered to fly to the mainland to try to end the ruckus over women in liquor advertisements. Governor Luis Munoz Marin has instructed Teodoro Moscoso, Secretary of Economic Development, to try to make peace with the Distilled Spirits Institute in Washington.

This is how it all began:
To conserve its own tourist advertising funds, the island government asked Rums of Puerto Rico to put a dash of tourist appeal in its advertising. The rummaker's advertising agency came up with a series of Puerto Rican scenes, with a tourist and his wife in the foreground. Both held rum drinks. The wife was brought in because men alone do not make good tourist ad copy.

Then the Distilled Spirits Institute cried foul. Its members have long been bound by an unwritten rule against women in hard-stuff advertising. The rum series, the Institute said, should be dropped.

PASSING THE BUCK
The agency decided the decision was up to its client. Rums bucked the decision to Governor Munoz. He, somewhat surprised that a pleasant picture should cause so much commotion, told Senator Moscoso to straighten things out.

Senator Moscoso may not have much trouble with the Institute. Many members think the no-woman rule is outdated and a needless concession to the dregs. They, too, would like to see pictures of women in their advertisements. They would like to see Rums of Puerto Rico break down the old taboo.

They recall that there once was a similar interdiction against using pictures of women in cigarette ads. A few daring agencies defied the ban. The world did not come to an end, and now almost every cigarette manufacturer pictures women. Some even forget the men.

The same thing, they say, could happen in hard-liquor advertising.

When Senator Moscoso gets to Washington—he's been delayed by a fight against an increase in steamship rates between Puerto Rico and the mainland—his reception may not be unpleasant.

DISTILLERS' TROUBLES
He'll probably be told that the Institute regrets the advertising campaign but, since art work and other expenses are involved, it won't be able to have it withdrawn. Perhaps he'll be told that the real court of last resort is the public, and the public will determine if Puerto Rican rum manufacturers have offended its sensibilities. Then everyone will have a drink of apricot juice and shake hands.

The public, of course, likes women in all its advertising so there will be no rum boycott. Then, little by little, other distillers will experiment with feminine touches and soon liquor advertisements will look much like cigarette advertisements—where permitted.

That's right: where permitted. Liquor advertising is the biggest headache on Madison Avenue. Every state has different rules, and many publications impose their own rules on top of them.

Some states prohibit all illustrations except a bottle. Some permit a bottle and a glass, but won't allow liquor being poured into the glass. (In those states, it may be assumed, people drink only from the bottle.)

Some states prohibit price advertisements in newspapers; some allow it in newspapers but prohibit it in store windows. Because taxes and regulations differ from state to state, endless variations of each advertisement must be prepared for newspaper use.

The media rules differ almost as much. Some newspapers have turned down Northwestern Airlines' ads for its Champagne Flight.

Strength For Today

By EARL L. DOUGLASS
THE ART OF UNDERSTANDING
There has been said that to know all is to forgive all.

Such an expression simply means that no one is in a position to judge the motives of another person. We see people do certain things and we may like or dislike them decidedly. But we are not in any position to say for certain why they have done these things. Actions have their sources at levels too deep for the human eye to see and the mind to comprehend.

If we think about these things there is a lot of determinism and predestination in life whether we like to admit it or not. We do certain things because of the kind of people we are. Perhaps some little event in our childhood turned the course of our lives in a direction against which we strove later with great difficulty. Discipline which is too firm or not firm enough, distinctions made between children, the loss of respect for one or both parents which children sometimes develop, the withholding of love—all these things make channels in our lives over which in later years our energy flows in a predisposed course.

If we think about these things it will soften our judgment of others. If we knew all, undoubtedly we would understand and forgive all.

High Level Conversation

The two boys were sitting there in the booth when in walks another one of their cohorts staggered into the air conditioned room from out in the hot sun.

"Boy its hot out there", the third party said.

"Getting so hot down here it don't pay a man to drink while the sun is still up."

Everybody seemed to get a big charge out of his profound findings as he slumped into the booth.

They laughed for awhile but this didn't last long.

Back to drinking as the fattest of the three killed his beer in three swallows. He promptly called for another one saying, "Come on you guys follow the leader."

They matched for the next beer and Jim, the nervous skinny one lost.

"Never seen it fail, the poorest drinker in the crowd always loses", he said.

"A poor man just ain't got no place in the world."

"If there is anything I hate it is poor folks, body odor and flies."

Again everybody laughed as the waitress brought up the next round. Right away it was evident that "evil drink" was ruling the roost again.

"I don't know how much longer I can stand this wild liquor drinking. Seems I've been drunk for the past week and I just started drinking day before yesterday."

Taking the glass down from his mouth the Yankee said, "Always knew the stuff would get the best of you."

"Why don't you drink like me sometime."

"Naw you got to go out and get drunk, throw a liquor stroke and jump off a bridge."

Angered by his friend's criticism Jim said, "At least I don't get so drunk that I pass out everytime I drink."

"I know of at least four times you have left your date without a ride home."

The Yankee came back with, "Mister Big hometown boy. How about that story about your beach escapade in the newspaper."

"Sounded just like you and the crowd you run around with sometime."

For a few minutes all were silent then Jim cursed loud. "If I ever get my hands on that stinking newspaperman who wrote that story I break him into with my bare hands."

"Imagine him writing about me right here in my own hometown newspaper."

"My mother got four calls asking her about it."

"Now I can't go home in peace."

Everybody laughed but didn't take too much time at the

He Sells 'Dead' Music

By LEE LINDER

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Is there a market for songs that date back to 1797?

Is anybody interested in copies of the original sheet music of "Yankee Doodle," "I Wish I Was in Dixie Land" or baseball songs like "Tally One for Me" and "Home Run Polka?"

Harry Dichter thinks so. And for more than 20 years he has tried to exploit the songs that background American history from the days of its Revolutionary War beginnings.

Dichter is no musician but he loves beginnings. He's a waiter by profession, working at that job mostly at night. The bulk of his earnings — after providing for his family — he puts into a music publishing company called "Musical Americana," of which he is owner, editor and chief consultant.

"My wife used to ask me years ago when I'm going to make money out of it," he says. "She's stopped asking that now."

Dichter, at 58 with two married sons and a 16-year-old daughter, realizes he can't keep pushing "dead" music without some profit. But he still hopes "someone will see the light" — libraries, universities, foundations — and rekindle the interest in American historical music.

"America has always committed its history to music and people would know about it more fully if they could see and play these old songs," he adds.

"America sang songs of the Revolutionary War while the fighting was going on. It had its choice of 50 or more dirges to sing over the assassination of Lincoln.

"American sheet music is far more than a nostalgic remnant of the past. Today it is probably the only medium through which we can recapture the human side of the happenings of the nation of yesterday."

"The whole gamut of the emotions of a people are contained in the lyrics and music of thousands of writers and composers, some now long forgotten."

Since then his "Musical Americana" firm has published various assortments of old music ranging from "Federal Overture," a conglomeration of tunes popular in colonial times, to "Baseball Music & Song," which contains 14 songs about the nation's national sport.

The music Dichter publishes must be 56 years old or more, because it takes that long for the original copyrights to expire.

He says he's the only man in the world publishing these old songs — "It's really a labor of love."

Opinions In Brief

JEFFERSON, GA., HERALD:
"Time was when everyone looked for a pay raise to buy something extra—now a pay raise is to pay for rising prices of everything else."

MILLER, S. D. PRESS:
"... aren't you glad you live in an age of push buttons, packaged mixes, and paper plates? Wonder what Mrs. Navajo told her warrior when he came home and wanted to know why in heck dinner wasn't ready. Probably she told him if he would get her one of those new-fangled corn grinders like that snooty Laughing Water down the street had, she wouldn't have to spend a whole day bent over a hot grindstone, and anyway, what was he doing at home so early?"

BARTOW, FLA., DEMOCRAT:
"Reading is not a completely universal habit, but fortunately for those who publish and edit newspapers the habit is so general that there are few homes today where one or more members of each family do not find it a pleasure. It is a habit that helps to keep up with what is going on in their home community and in the nation and the world at large through the simple process of reading their newspapers."

BEAVER FALLS, PA., NEWS-TRIBUNE:
"How many of our forefathers who fled from old world tyrannies anticipated the day would come in this land of liberty when their sons would have to pay tribute to a labor union in order to hold a job?"

activity. Afterall drinking was the main issue of the day, not idle conversation.

In a few minutes another group came in and the party was on for the rest of the night. "Let's all have another drink" was the cry.

The waitress served them and came back to the counter for a brief rest.

"Looks like another hard night for me," she exclaimed.

"There's never no rest for the weary."

Congress Seeking Retrieve Power

By RAY TUCKER
WASHINGTON—The underlying and historical significance of this closing Congressional session lies in the fact that it has tried to retrieve the political and legislative power which it had surrendered to the Executive and Judicial arms of the government in the last quarter of a century—in fact, since the lusty and heroic days of Theodore Roosevelt.

With the exception of Calvin Coolidge and Herbert Hoover, headstrong, ambitious and determined men have sat in the White House since the turn of the century. It is true that Warren G. Harding does not fall into this category, but such Cabinet ministers as Hughes, Mellon and Hoover offset the supineness of "the man whose chief fault was that he couldn't say 'no'" to quote Harry Daugherty.

Congress did not fork over its prerogatives because of weakness alone. The legislators were the victims of circumstances. They abdicated authority under the pressures of two global wars and a world-wide depression in which the United States became the bulwark of western civilization. A strong government was a world necessity.

OVERPOWERING STRUCTURE. Whatever the reason, the President and the branch he heads have grown into an overtowering and overpowering structure, with billions in folding money to fortify and expand their position. And no Chief Justice since John Marshall has trampled so ruthlessly on the jurisdiction of Congress and the 48 commonwealths, in Capitol Hill's considered conclusion.

As a result, and although the counteroffensive has generally escaped comment, Congress has set out to cut the White House and the Supreme Court down to what it regards as constitutional measurements.

It should be noted, too, that this has been a bipartisan movement, although three Democratic Presidents — Wilson, Roosevelt and Truman — were most responsible for upsetting the balance of powers. On the other hand, two Republican Chief Justices — Hughes and Warren — asserted judicial authority which, in Congressional belief, the Supreme Court does not possess.

CONGRESS HAS REBELLED Remembering Yalta, Potsdam, the Korean "police action" and other alleged usurpations, Congress has rebelled against the Executive's handling of foreign problems as if that field were a Presidential preserve.

It has made sharp cuts in foreign aid and overseas military funds, with warnings that the end is in sight. It curtailed Eisenhower's proposal for a three-year and expensive loan fund of a vast sum to our Allies. It insists on such a complete and continuous check on foreign spending that this restriction will inevitably affect basic policy.

It killed the School Construction Bill for various reasons. But a principal factor was the suspicion that it might lead to greater Federal influence on educational personnel, policies and even classroom instruction. It killed the Administration's plan to finance roadbuilding from sale of bonds — an operation which would have bypassed Congressional control.

Jonathan, Noble in Friendship ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON By Alfred J. Buescher

Scripture—I Samuel 14:1-15, 24-45; 17:55-18-5; 19:1-7; 20:1-42; 23:15-18; 31:1-3; II Samuel 1:17-27.

After David had slain the giant Goliath and overcome the Philistines, King Saul ordered him brought before him to discover who he was. Jonathan, the king's son, saw David there and he "loved him as his own soul."

David and Jonathan made a covenant of friendship. Jonathan stripped off his robe and put it on David, and gave him his sword and his bow and girdle because he loved this friend so much.

King Saul, thinking the people admired David more than they did him, became jealous, and would have had him slain. Jonathan talked to his father, praising David, so Saul promised he would not kill him.

Later Saul's enmity drove David into hiding in a wood in fear of his life. Jonathan found him, however, and told him not to fear, for Saul would not find him.

Scripture—I Samuel 14:1-15, 24-45; 17:55-18-5; 19:1-7; 20:1-42; 23:15-18; 31:1-2; II Samuel 1:17-27.

By NEWMAN CAMPBELL THIS IS another lesson in which we are given so much material to cover, that it may be difficult to do it in the time allotted for teaching. In our space we will have to condense it, covering the principal events in the friendship of the two fine men who are the principal characters in the lesson.

Jonathan was the eldest son of King Saul, the first king of Israel, and he had conquered the enemies of his country, the Philistines. His people loved and admired him so much that when he unknowingly disobeyed his father, they saved him from threatened death.

The beginning of the deep and lasting friendship between Jonathan and David began when David, so of Jesse, went out against the Philistines and slew the giant Goliath. Saul ordered the young man to be brought before him, and when he stood before the king holding the head of Jonathan told David to hide in a field, and he would bring his father there and try to reconcile the two. As Jonathan spoke in praise of his friend, Saul said, "As the Lord liveth, he shall not be slain."

Saul's vow did not last, and David was forced to flee into hiding, not knowing what his iniquity was. He asked Jonathan what sin of his made Saul seek his life? Jonathan comforted him, saying, "God forbid; thou shalt not die; behold, my father will do nothing either great or small, but that he will show it me; and why should my father hide this thing from me?"

Again the two made a covenant and Jonathan suggested a trial of his father's feeling for David. David was to absent himself from the court of Saul and hide in a field. If Jonathan found that his father's feelings against him were kinder, he would let David know by the flight of arrows he would fore the king holding the head of the giant, and had answered the king's questions about his family. Jonathan who was present, "loved David as he loved his own soul."

Saul told David he was not to return to his home, but was to remain at court. David and Jonathan made a covenant of friendship. Jonathan gave David his robe, his apparel, even his sword and his bow and girdle.

"David went out whithersoever Saul sent him, and behaved himself wisely." He was set over men of war and accepted by the people, but this did not last. After the slaughter of the Philistines the women came out of their homes, singing and dancing to meet the king, but they said: "Saul hath slain his thousands, and David his ten thousands."—I Sam. 18:7.

Saul became very angry at this, and grew to hate David and fear him. He even tried to kill him, and told his servants and Jonathan, too, that they should slay him.

The verdict was that David was still in the ill graces of the king and in danger of his life. Again David fled and hid in a wood. His faithful friend found him and told him: "Fear not; for the hand of Saul my father shall not find thee," and he prophesied that David would become king of Israel. Then David lived on in the wood, and Jonathan went home.

What was the end of this friendship between these two fine men and the hatred of the king? In fighting again with the Philistines, Saul and his hosts were overcome and Saul "took his sword and fell upon it," and Jonathan was slain in battle.

And David mourned greatly for his friend Jonathan, and even for Saul, seemingly forgetting the king's cruel and ungrateful treatment of himself, saying, "Saul and Jonathan were lovely and pleasant in their lives, and in their death they were not divided." And, as we know, David did become king of Israel as his loyal friend Jonathan had prophesied.

Another Gadget On Way To Crowd Living Rooms

By WILLIAM GLOVER NEW YORK (AP)—If the living room looks crowded already, mom, brace yourself. Another gadget is on the way. Right now it is a sleeky gray, foot-square box that looks like a cross between an underized air conditioner and a stunted slot machine.

Within five years, fond backers envision, the device will key a revolution in television viewing, movie going and cultural pattern of the populace at large. The machine, accompanied by a corps of articulate technicians and stalwart showmen, has just been unveiled here, to give New Yorkers for the next three weeks their first peep at pay-as-you-see television.

The sample showcase comprises Don Larsen's epic World Series no-hitter, some snapshots of a brand-new Hollywood Western, and for living contrast, as they call it, an engineer scratching his ear forlornly in pose before a robot-controlled studio camera. "Think of it!" exclaims Barney Balaban, surveying Larsen's windup. "Box-office in millions of homes."

Balaban is president of Paramount Pictures which holds a 90 per cent interest in the pay-see television process that is the brainchild of International Telemeter Corp. In addition to Telemeter, other systems for toll video under development include Phonovision and Subscribvision. Both of these propose some sort of billing system. Telemeter, which will rely on cash-in-advance for each show, believes it is well in the van as an accomplished reality.

Contractors have already been drawn for a regular telemeter circuit in Los Angeles, and company officials say a dozen other installations are in negotiation for cities big and small. Operations may be conducted on wire circuits or over the air. If the FCC decides the latter is feasible, a discussion has been set by the government agency for Sept. 17 on subscription telecasting.

The heart of the telemeter process is the living room gadget, which hooks onto a regular TV set and doesn't interfere with pickup of regular video programs. A complex contraption, the gadget will announce a choice of three programs, the price of each (any thing from a nickel to two bucks), automatically ring up coins, and electronically clear the signal of the selected show.

Senators Debate Authorizing AEC Program For New Power Reactors

By JOE HALL
 WASHINGTON (AP)—The Senate today debates a $39-million-dollar Atomic Energy Commission authorization bill which includes a disputed program of government-built power reactors.

Democrats expressed confidence they can keep the power program in the bill, but Eisenhower administration forces were ready to try to knock it out.

The House already has rejected most of the power provisions, which are strongly opposed by AEC Chairman Lewis L. Strauss.

The biggest part of the bill would authorize AEC construction projects for both military and peaceful uses. There is no dispute over most of the items.

Sen. Gore (D-Tenn.), a member of the Senate Atomic Energy Committee, told a reporter in advance of the debate "I believe we can keep the bill in good shape without crippling amendments."

Senators Hickenlooper (R-Iowa), Bricker (R-Ohio) and Knowland (R-Calif.), all members of the committee, offered amendments to knock out the Democratic-sponsored provisions for 58 million dollars worth of experimental power reactors.

The bill also would direct the AEC to build reactors for five municipal power groups and rural cooperatives, then sell them steam at a price based on that from the use of conventional fuels. The House has rejected this.

Hickenlooper said in an interview the fight over these proposals was "a straight private vs. public power issue." He said the controversial provisions seek to put AEC "into a field it does not want to be in and in which it has no business."

Democrats dispute this GOP contention. They say they are not advocating reactors which will compete with private industry but experimental projects which will enable the American atomic energy industry to get off the ground.

Sen. Jackson (D-Wash.) said in a speech prepared for the debate that Great Britain has tripled its original plans for atomic development.

At the same time, he said, the U. S. Atomic Energy Commission, "which in 1955 was forecasting two million electrical kilowatts of nuclear energy (in this country) by 1960, is now talking of one million by 1962."

The three big reactor projects the Republicans will seek to knock out are:

A natural uranium gas-cooled reactor costing 40 millions to be built at the AEC plant in Idaho. It would be similar to Great Britain's Calder Hall plant.

A plutonium recycle reactor costing 15 millions to be built at the Hanford, Wash., AEC plant.

A single or dual-purpose plutonium reactor to be built at Hanford. Hickenlooper said this eventually could cost about 100 million dollars, but the bill would authorize three millions for preliminary studies.

The House knocked out the first two of these projects, but kept the third one in the bill.

Jackson said in his speech the dual-purpose reactor could be highly useful in boosting plutonium production with electric power as a secondary product. He said the joint committee had received much secret testimony that more plutonium is needed for defense.

As for the plutonium recycle reactor, he said this might solve the problem of how plutonium could be used as a fuel in addition to its weapons use.

The five projects covered by the provision on municipal power groups and rural coops are: Consumers Public Power District, Columbus, Neb.; Chugach Electric Assn., Anchorage, Alaska; Rural Cooperative Power Assn., Elk River, Minn.; Wolverine Electric Cooperative Assn., Hersey, Mich.; City of Piqua, Ohio.

Movie Giant MGM In Serious Trouble

By BOB THOMAS
 HOLLYWOOD (AP)—What's the matter with MGM?

There's more to the illness than meets the eye. Of course, the major symptom now has been the life-or-death struggle among Eastern money men for control of the onetime giant of the film industry.

The proxy battle has had a withering effect on the studio. Good movies require a strong, forceful studio control, directed by a single, hard-driving man.

The bosses at the Culver City lot have no such direction. They look to New York for direction and find only bitter financial wrangles.

What made MGM (or rather its parent, Loew's) so susceptible to raiding and stockholder discontent? The answer is in the annual nets:

1946—$18,600,000.
 1956—$4,840,000.

But the real story is not in figures, but in the human operation of the massive studio. It is the story of three men: Irving Thalberg, Louis B. Mayer, Dore Schary.

MGM climbed to greatness under Thalberg, perhaps the most creative producer the films have known. His death in 1936 left a void that has never been filled.

Mayer took over complete control of production. His great talent was as a discoverer of stars. Under him, MGM collected the greatest galaxy in film history. Profits rose with the output of glamorous, over-stuffed movies during World War II.

But glamor wasn't enough after the war. Nor were stars. A confirmed sentimentalist, Mayer seemed unable to gear to the need for realism in postwar films.

Schary had quit as production boss at RKO after a dispute with Howard Hughes. He was chosen to bolster MGM's sagging fortunes.

His regime put forth some big grossers. But Schary was faced with some tough situations:

1. The government had forced the studios to get rid of their theaters. Thus MGM lacked that financial cushion.
2. Schary was faced with a monstrous overhead. Included was the Mayer galaxy of stars, many of them past their prime.
3. Schary said he was prevented by New York from making enough pictures a year to absorb the great overhead.
4. MGM adopted a head-in-the-sand attitude toward TV.

Schary was ousted to please the irate stockholders. Some more new blood has been injected and MGM has sallied into TV. But the problem of making the quality pictures that Thalberg used to produce remains the same.

Claim Anti-Red Move Wiped Out

TOKYO (AP)—Communist China says it has wiped out a large-scale, anti-revolutionary organization that was plotting to overthrow the Red government.

A Peiping radio broadcast last night identified the dissident group as the China Justice Salvation Army and said it had operated in Shensi province west of Sian.

The broadcast said the organization was made up of "bandits and reactionary local bosses" who had been holding secret meetings and trying to build up their numbers. It added that security troops arrested the leader of the group and captured all its weapons and documents.

Missing Pilot Found On Raft

NORFOLK, Va. (AP)—A Navy jet pilot missing since yesterday afternoon on a training flight was plucked unhurt from a life raft early today after a night in the Atlantic Ocean.

The merchant tanker Western Sun discovered Lt. Cmdr. Waldo A. Atkins, 33, of Virginia Beach about 5:30 a.m.

Based on the time of Atkins emergency message, picked up by another jet at 2 p.m. yesterday, he had been in the ocean 15 or 16 hours. The exact location of the raft at the time he was picked up was not known. However it was reported to be in the general area of an air-surface search pattern, extending from Cape Henry, Va., to Elizabeth City, N.C.

The Western Sun, en route to Beaumont, Tex., reported Atkins uninjured and in good condition.

The flyer is executive officer of a fighter squadron based at the Oceana Naval Air Station. He was flying an F3H-2 Demon Jet on a routine training mission.

Over-Estimated His Resistance

BALTIMORE (AP)—William H. Dawson, Jr., fined $10 for disorderly conduct on a street corner, had boasted to Patrolman Joseph Hudgins:

"If you lock me up it will take three policemen."

The magistrate asked later how many officers made the arrest. Patrolman Hudgins, about four inches shorter than the 6-3, 190-pound defendant, replied:

"Just one, your honor."

FIRE PREVENTION
 REVENNA, Ohio (AP)—A 17-year-old boy, accused of setting 35 fires including a $900,000 church blaze, complained in Portage County Jail that he had no way to light his cigarettes.

"They won't let me have matches here, you know," he told a reporter.

Prison Inmates Proud Of Their Blood Donations

Editor's Note — Inmates of the world's largest walled prison at Jackson, Mich., are proud of their record of donating blood to the Red Cross. In this article for The Associated Press, Don Lowry, editor of the Southern Michigan Prison newspaper, The Spectator, outlines the blood program.

By DON LOWRY
 JACKSON, Mich. (AP)—How did you do at the blood bank in the past year?

A survey at Southern Michigan Prison shows that inmates of some prisons gave up to two pints or more a year. The Red Cross, without giving figures, says that this is considerably higher than the rest of the population. The Spectator, weekly prison newspaper, made the survey.

From prison inmates in the United States and Canada, 58,555 pints of blood were donated to the blood donor program between July 1, 1956, and June 30 this year.

"Prisoners are the most faithful donors," says the Red Cross. The survey shows the 1956-57 volume champions to be the 3,272 inmates of Jefferson City's Missouri State Penitentiary. They gave 6,516 pints to the Red Cross Midwestern area donor program. That's more than two pints per prisoner per year.

That area, with headquarters in St. Louis, led the national Red Cross areas with 22,001 pints from regional prisons.

The nation's second highest prison donor total came from Southern Michigan Prison, where 3,924 pints were given by the 5,922 inmates of the world's largest walled prison.

Young inmates from the Ohio State Reformatory at Mansfield, Ohio, won third place honors with 3,032 pints. The reformatory population is 2,924.

Gordon Fuller, director of individual treatment at Southern Michigan Prison, has this explanation for the enthusiasm of prison inmates in donating blood: "The opportunity to perform a community service, in the form of blood donations, provides these men with a feeling that they are still a part of society.

"You can't prepare a man for a place in the community when he is deprived of participating in the good works of that society. Being a blood donor helps prison inmates feel that they still 'belong.'"

In some prisons donors are rewarded with entertainment programs, movies and stage shows for their support of the program.

Some states give donors five days extra "good time" as a remission of sentence. In other prisons there is no incentive, other than a feeling of having helped.

All-Night Search For Lost Child

STEVENSON, Wash. (AP)—Sheriff's deputies with bloodhounds searched through the night on the chilly western slopes of Mt. Adams for 5½-year-old Rickie Craig, who became separated from his parents yesterday on a huckleberry picking trip.

"It's cool up there when the sun goes down," said Deputy Myron Goodrich, "especially when you get near the snowfields."

Rickie is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Craig of Harrah, Wash.

The search is in the Trout Lake area 65 miles northeast of this Columbia River town.

Dead Duck

WASHINGTON (AP)—A special Senate postal subcommittee opens hearings today on a proposed postal rate increase amid indications the Senate will not act on the House-passed bill this year.

Chairman Olin D. Johnston (D-SC) virtually ended any hopes for action before adjournment, which may come this month, when he told the Senate yesterday he thought the measure needed thorough subcommittee study in public hearings.

As passed by the House, the bill would raise first-class letter rates from 3 to 4 cents, boost airmail from 6 to 7 cents, and provide increases on other classes of mail.

What Happened To The Cards?

Was One-Man Bench Cause Of St. Louis Slump?

By JIM VAN VALKENBURG ST. LOUIS (P)—Did a "one-man bench" cause the sudden and almost total collapse of the St. Louis Cardinals?

Stunned by a nine-game losing streak, fans and newsmen looking for the reason have nominated Manager Fred Hutchinson's Joe Cunningham as the "one-man bench."

Cunningham, a left-handed batter from New Jersey, has been just about the only man Hutch could rely on for help. Hutchinson has two catchers — Hal Smith and Hobie Landrith, but otherwise it has been a case of Seven Iron Horses and Cunningham.

The iron horses simply have run out of gas.

Ten days ago the Redbirds led both leagues in team hitting and more runs than any club except Cincinnati, and led the National League.

This same team has scored only 13 runs in nine games since then and only once did it come close to victory. That was in a 4-3 defeat to the seventh-place Chicago Cubs, who have taken six of the nine games in the St. Louis losing streak.

On Aug. 6, Cardinal fans were trying to find ways of getting tickets to the first St. Louis World Series in 11 years. Now the club is 8 1/2 games out as it opens a four-game series at Milwaukee and a lot of folks won't even talk about them.

The collapse isn't as sudden as it sounds. The present hitting slump actually is 25 games old. Some observers, aware the iron horses were wearing thin, saw it coming. While winning 12 of 16 prior to the nosedive, the Redbirds were scoring barely four runs a game and winning on great pitching.

How did the bench get that way? Some fans blame General Manager Frank Lane's dealings. Others criticize club owner August A. Busch Jr. for holding onto first baseman Tom Alston because he cost $100,000. Others, including Lane himself, blast Hutchinson for using aging Walker Cooper.

Somewhat overlooked as a reason is the Milwaukee team's great pressure on the Cards. St. Louis won eight straight in its recent home stand, yet gained only a half-game on the Braves in that span.

Seeded Players See First Action In Tennis Meet

SOUTHERN PINES, N.C. (P)—The seeded players, including No. 1 pick Sam Daniel of Leaksville, were to see action for the first time today in the Sandhills Invitation tennis tournament.

The first round byes and rain curtailed opening day play yesterday, with Norman Jarrard of Chapel Hill, seeded No. 3, the only top-ranked player to see action. Jarrard eliminated Harry Lee Brown of Southern Pines, 6-1, 6-3.

In other men's action yesterday, Ray Schilling of Southern Pines advanced with a 6-2, 6-4 victory over Gil Stacy of Charlotte. A.M. Jordan Jr. of Chapel Hill defeated Lem Tew of Southern Pines, 6-0, 6-0; and Kenneth Tew of Southern Pines defeated Lloyd Dillon of Thomasville, 6-3, 7-5.

Julia Ann Holt of Charlotte, No. 3 seeded among the women, won the only ladies match played yesterday—a 6-2, 6-0 victory over Sylvia Wilkinson of Durham.

Crocker Favored In $5,000 Open At Jackson

JACKSON, Miss. (P)—Durable Fay Crocker, a heart-breaking runnerup in the rich Tam O'Shanter earlier this week, was a confident favorite today as some of golf's top women professionals invaded the deep South for the first annual $5,000 Jackson Ladies Open.

The stocky Miss Crocker, a native of Montevideo, Uruguay, gained the favorite's role on the basis of her close finish to Patty Berg in the Chicago tournament that ended Monday.

Long-hitting Jackie Pung of Honolulu, Hawaii, 1956 National Open champion Kathy Cornelius of Lake Worth, Fla., and Marle Bauer Hage of Del Ray Beach, Fla., leading 1956 money winner, shared the spot-light with Miss Crocker.

The 54-hole tournament opened at the Jackson Country Club today with entries shooting at the 38-38-76 women's par. Most of the other entries were among leading money winners in the Tam O'Shanter tournament. Lorraine Crapp of Front Royal, Va., against Owensboro, Ky., at 3 p.m. Memphis, Tenn., will face Shelby in the nightcap.

The winner of Saturday night's finals will represent the region in the sectional playoffs opening at Sumter, S.C., Aug. 28.

With the coming of a new football season at Greenville high school, it appears that a completely new Athletic Era may be approaching.

For the first time in the history of GHS athletics, the school will operate with five coaches. The new number of coaches is a part of the expansion policy that accompanies a brand new school site and new buildings.

The new coaches are Bud Phillips, head football coach; Odell Wellborne, assistant football coach; Milton Reese and Robert Youngblood, who will also work with the GHS footballers.

Boley Farley, Athletic Director, will also assist in football and will handle basketball and baseball duties.

On the opening day of football drills for the school (Thursday) Booster's Club letters and tickets were issued to fans of Greenville. The Booster's club, too, is expected to be a major part of the new era in GHS sports.

Expansion along the coaching lines is a new thing for Greenville and plenty of help from the fans and Boosters is expected, according to word from Farley. "We will need the fans' support more than ever this season," Farley said recently.

Farley pointed out that for the first time, Greenville will be able to offer athletics on a full scale to the younger high school boys. "With more coaches," he stated, "a complete junior varsity program is possible."

Under the new plan, there will be room for three completely separate football teams at Greenville high school: The varsity, junior varsity, and junior high school.

Farley said that three separate schedules have been suggested for the clubs. Plans are not complete, as of yet, but school officials are working on them.

Field Limited In Asheville

ASHEVILLE, N.C. (P)—Defending Champion Jimmy McCoy and Medalist Gene Ochsenreiter headed the dueling field into a double round here today in the Country Club of Asheville Invitation Golf tourney.

The final round will be played tomorrow.

McCoy, of Lake Worth, Fla., a student and golfer star at Florida State University, edged Brad Anderson of Greensboro 1-up on the 18th hole yesterday to remain in the running. He meets J. C. Hyatt of Asheville in today's first round.

Hyatt was 5 under par in beating Woody Weaver of St. Petersburg, Fla., 6 and 5 yesterday.

Ochsenreiter, of Asheville, who set a new two-day qualifying record to grab the medal, swatted past Walter Wallace of Newberry, S.C., yesterday and today meets Curtis Wagner of Lake Lure, 6 and 4 victor over Weldon Doe Jr. of Montgomery, Ala.

Mason Rankin, who yesterday eliminated Gene Lookabill of Charlotte, recent winner of the Billmore Forest tourney, meets veteran Al Dowlin today. Dowlin scored 3 and 2 over Harold Wilburn of Asheville.

Patriots Lose On 9th-Inning Pitch

CAROLINA LEAGUE By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS A ninth inning wild pitch cost the ball game last night as Durham edged Greensboro 9-8 in the only Carolina League contest.

Rain postponed the other two outings and set up doubleheaders tonight for High Point-Thomasville at Winston-Salem and Danville at Wilson (2).

The Luckless Patriots, losing ground in their bid to challenge the Hi-Toms for first place, staged a four-run rally in the top of the ninth to tie Durham, 8-8.

But relief pitcher Bill Lore threw over the catcher's head when he attempted to hand out an intentional base on balls. Johnny Schroder scampered home with the winning run for Durham.

Durham batters nicked two Greensboro hurlers for 14 hits, while the Patriots picked up nine off three Durham pitchers.

Greensboro failed to use to advantage 10 free passes, and 12 runners were left stranded on base.

The games tonight: Greensboro at Durham; High Point-Thomasville at Winston-Salem (2); and Danville at Wilson (2).

Gibson Center Of Attraction

MANCHESTER, Mass. (P)—Wimbledon champion Althea Gibson was the center of attraction today as two quarterfinal matches were scheduled in the 30th annual Essex County Club Women's Invitation tennis tournament.

Louise Brough of Beverly Hills, Calif., and Darlene Hard of Montebello, Calif., already had reached the semifinals on the strength of victories yesterday.

Miss Gibson, the talented New Yorker, was set to meet Mimi Arnold of Redwood City, Calif., 17-year-old National Girls' champion.

The other quarterfinal sent England's Shirley Bloomer, top foreign seed, against Mrs. Dorothy Head Knode of Forest Hills, N.Y.

The games tonight: Greensboro at Durham; High Point-Thomasville at Winston-Salem (2); and Danville at Wilson (2).

Milwaukee Still Recalls Last Year's Letdown

By ED WILKS The Associated Press With 41 games to go and an 8 1/2-game lead, Milwaukee's Braves have nothing to fear but fear itself.

And maybe, the Chicago Cubs. All the Braves have to worry about, now that they've won 10 in a row after last night's 8-1 victory at Cincinnati, is the haunting 1956 season, when they won 11 straight, had a 5 1/2-game edge—and then blew it in the last week as Brooklyn won the pennant by one game.

And they also must be remembering the 1951 season, when even Brooklyn's old pros couldn't hold a 1 1/2-game August lead and were beaten in a pennant playoff by the New York Giants.

The Braves are back home tonight for the first of a four-game series with the St. Louis Cardinals whose slump is every bit as surprising and sudden as Milwaukee's surge. The Redbirds lost their ninth in a row—their longest skid since 1947—with a 4-1 setback at Chicago. The seventh place Cubs now are 9-7 over the Cards — and have beaten the Braves in 7 of 13.

Brooklyn stayed in third place, also 8 1/2 back and within one percentage point of St. Louis, as the Dodgers twice blew leads and lost to the Giants 9-4 in the only other NL game scheduled.

In the American, the New York Yankees went 5 1/2 ahead again, defeating Boston 6-3, although Ted Williams pushed his average to .393, while the second-place Chicago White Sox gave up five unearned runs and lost to Cleveland 5-4. Kansas City whipped Detroit 7-2 in the only other game.

Hank Aaron, the NL's bat leader, hammered across five runs with a pair of homers as the Braves swung for 12 hits. Eddie Mathews, and ex-Redder Bob Hazle also homered for Milwaukee.

Warren Spahn won his 13th with an eight-hitter, losing a shutout on an unearned run in the second. Spahn got a four-run cushion in the first that chased Hal Jeffcoat.

Bob Turley won his fifth in a row for a 10-3 record, but needed Bob Grim's relief when Frank Malzone's home run junked his shutout in the eighth. Loser Willard Nixon held the Yankees to three hits, one of them Elston Howard's home run, for six frames. Gil McDougald drove in three runs, and hit a two-run homer in the eighth to clinch it.

The Indians shook their six-game losing string in the sixth when southpaw Jack Harshman walked one run home, then gave up a grand-slammer to Chico Carrasquel that wiped out a 3-0 White Sox lead. Don Mossi went all the way to win his ninth.

Dale Long's home run and Bob Speake's two-run single nailed the Cubs ninth victory in 12 games in the second as Sam Jones lost his seventh. Rookie Moe Drabowsky won his ninth with a six-hitter.

Rookie Valmy Thomas drove in four runs with a triple and homer for the Giants as Ramon Montant, third of four pitchers, won his first. Three runs in the sixth, two unearned, did it. Don Drysdale, Brooklyn's top winner with 10, lost his seventh.

Woody Held, Billy Martin and Hec Lopez homered for the A's as Jack Urban won his second. Jim Bunning, who has won 14, lost his fifth, second to Kansas City.

Tom Emerson and H. L. Buckley of Margate, N.J. formed a racing stable in 1956 and it is called the Buck 'Em Stable.

Local Hosiery Mill Plans For Business Expansion

(Editor's note: This is another in a series on industries in Pitt County.)

By BILLY ARNOLD
Reflector Staff Writer

There is, in Greenville, a hosiery mill that turns out approximately 100 dozen pairs of stockings per day, does a thriving wholesale and retail business, and supplies dealers in almost half of the 48 states with their products.

And the Greenville Full-Fashioned Hosiery Mill, located on 14th and Forbes streets, is just getting started. R. H. Scheller, owner and manager, is now in the process of expanding his business.

Just this week, Scheller has received two new Kallio machines, weighing 40,000 pounds each, with approximately 180-200,000 movable parts, which will double the company's production in half the time, turning out a finer quality stocking in the process.

The Full-Fashioned Hosiery Mill, as such, has been in operation since 1940, when Scheller and his brother Felix bought out the old Davis Mill. The partnership was dissolved in 1952 and R. H. Scheller has since become sole owner of the establishment.

When the Schellers first moved into the business, the mills were operated on seven 42-gauge machines. In 1945-46-47, the Schellers modernized their equipment, making them 51-gauge machines. The new equipment now being installed is 60-gauge, a still finer quality.

Scheller explains the term "gauge" in this manner: "Fifty-one gauge simply means that there are 51 loops per inch and a half in the stocking. Sixty-gauge means that there are 60 loops per inch and a half."

The Full-Fashioned Mill, with the installation of the new machinery, will produce stockings of both gauges. The 51- and 60-gauge hose are currently far in front of other gauges in demand.

Scheller stated that "as soon as the machines are installed and ready for operation, we will begin working them. They should be ready for operation in four or five weeks."

The Process
Stockings at Scheller's Full-Fashioned Mill are made of 100% nylon from Du Pont and Full-Fashioned are the only stockings made that are knit flat to fit the shape of the leg. Not only are they sized proportionately but the fabric is more evenly textured, with greater elasticity, because all loops are of uniform length and width throughout the main fabric.

The process by which the stockings are made is an involved one. First, the nylon is knitted flat, to fit the shape of the leg. Scheller's operation develops stockings from size 8 1/2 to 11. Each stocking is knitted from Welt (top) to toe in one operation.

After the stocking is completely knitted, the material is then placed in a steam box, where it is submitted to steam at 180 degrees and dry heat at 200 degrees. This process lasts for 1 1/2 hours, and gives the stockings resistance to pulls and picks.

The stockings are then turned over to the seamers, to be seamed. There are currently three seamers employed by Scheller. "We will have to increase that number with the new machines in operation," he said.

After they are seamed, the stockings are inspected.

Following the inspection, they are sent to Charlotte to go through a dyeing and finishing process, the only step of the process which Scheller does not handle at his plant.

After the stockings are finished at Charlotte, they are shipped back to Greenville and packaged for sale.

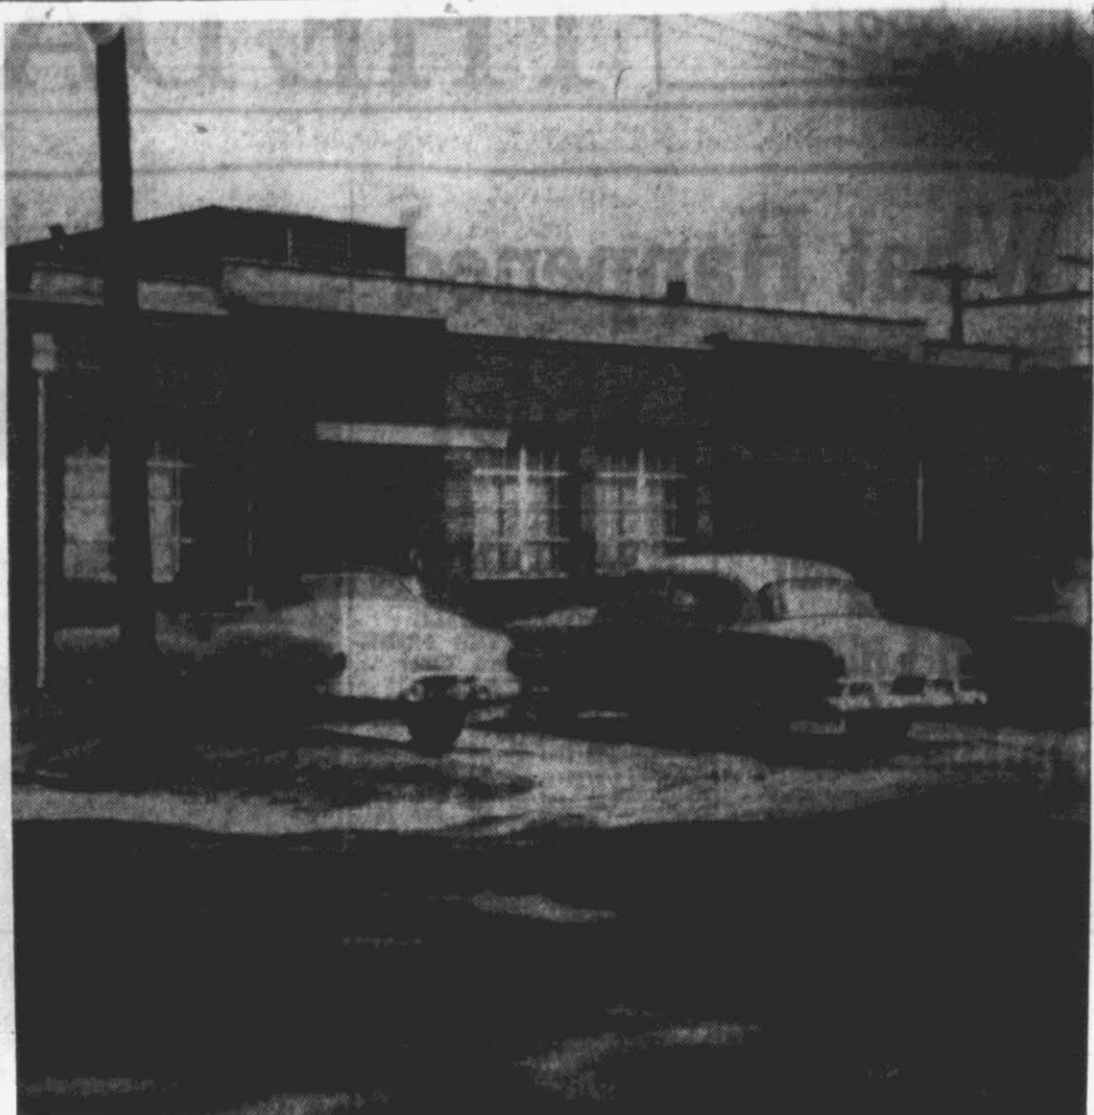

Scheller's Sales
Most of Greenville Full-Fashioned Hosiery's output is sold to large companies in the north. These companies add their name brands and distribute them throughout the United States.

Most of Scheller's sales to the larger companies are made "in the grey," which means that the stockings are complete except for the finishing process.

The Full-Fashioned plant also does small retail selling in various states. Scheller also sells hose locally, which will be known in the future under the brand name, Scheller's Sheers.

THE OLD MACHINES are being checked here by a Scheller employee as they put the nylon through the knitting process. The entire stocking-making process is completed at the Full-Fashioned Mill, except for dyeing and finishing.

GREENVILLE PLANT—Pictured above is the Greenville Full-Fashioned Hosiery Mill, of 14th and Forbes streets. This plant supplies almost half of the 48 states with their nylon products.

New Manpower Cuts In Defense Forces Slated

WASHINGTON (AP)—Current military planning calls for further manpower cuts to offset the rising cost of weapons.

Secretary of Defense Wilson told his news conference yesterday a force of 2 1/2 million men, 300,000 below the present level, is a possibility by July 1959. He called that a minimum planning figure. But he said limited drafting of men will have to be continued to maintain a force of that size.

Wilson, resigning the post he has held for 4 1/2 years, will be succeeded in October by Neil H. McElroy. Procter & Gamble Co. president whose nomination was approved yesterday by the Senate Armed Services Committee. Senate confirmation is expected next week.

Wilson said he had projected guidelines for his successor for military spending and new appropriations for the next fiscal year starting July 1, 1958.

Wilson left no doubt that he is advising his successor that because of the rising cost trend of military hardware, defense planning must look to manpower as the only major field in which money can be saved.

Wilson has already ordered the services to trim 100,000 military manpower by the end of this calendar year. He also has ordered cuts in the civilian payroll of the armed services and taken other actions to slow spending.

But he said the economy campaign as it affects new missiles, aircraft and weapons has been carried about as far as it can go for the time being.

He stressed his belief that continued manpower cuts can be made without substantially weakening national defense.

He said U.S. fighting units in Europe will be maintained, although there is still room to reduce the number of men overseas.

'Breakthrough' In Missile Task

NEW YORK (AP)—The New York Herald Tribune said today the Army has scored a major technological breakthrough in long-range ballistic missile development with the first conquest of the "re-entry" problem.

A Washington dispatch to the newspaper also said: "That problem has centered on fabrication of a material which would survive the friction heat generated by a long-range missile in its roaring ascent to heights of over 600 miles and its gravity-tugged descent to earth at speeds estimated at 15,000 miles an hour."

The heat caused by friction on materials traveling at that velocity has been thought to be destructive, the story noted.

The Herald Tribune said it learned yesterday that the major breakthrough was achieved last week when the Army fired a Jupiter intermediate range ballistic missile and succeeded in bringing back to earth intact the missile's nose cone.

"That means," the story continued, "the Army has fabricated a material which will withstand the fantastic heat caused by friction with air as the missile vaults beyond the atmosphere and then plunges back to earth."

Thus, the dispatch added, an atomic or hydrogen warhead can be encased in that material and fired through the atmosphere with the certainty that it will return to the earth's surface without disintegrating because of friction heat.

"There was no indication of what material the Army used in its friction-defying nose cone," the story said.

Refuses Compete With A Cricket

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP)—Violinist Isaac Stern suddenly interrupted his playing of a Brahms concerto to announce he couldn't compete with a cricket.

A five-minute search located the sound in a potted palm. Cricket and palm were carted out. Stern and the orchestra returned and the concert was concluded.

Oh Well, Maybe Another Time

MAYSVILLE Ky. (AP)—Mrs. James Williams, a mother-to-be, couldn't attend a shower in her honor.

An hour before the party, she was rushed to the hospital where she became a mother—s-of-now.

NEW EQUIPMENT—R. H. Scheller, owner of the Greenville plant, had two new Kallio machines installed this week. Shown above are trucks in the process of loading one of the tremendous machines into Scheller's building. The new machines will double the plants production in less time and turn out a finer product.

British Guiana Communist Leader To Ask Free Hand

GEORGETOWN, British Guiana (AP)—A dentist whose Communist-line party won control of this British colony's Legislative Council on a minority of votes prepared today to ask the governor for a virtually free hand in running the government.

Dr. Cheddi Jagan was called yesterday to meet with the British governor, Sir Patrick Renison. Jagan said he is "fully prepared to cooperate" with Renison. The leader of the colony's residents of East Indian descent warned, however, that "much depends upon how the governor uses his elastic powers."

Jagan was ousted from power four years ago when the British accused his government of communism. A new colonial constitution written by Renison now gives the governor powers to control or dismiss the Council.

Jagan made it clear that he intends to initiate steps to change the constitution of this South

American colony. He called it "mostly unsatisfactory to the people of British Guiana."

Complete returns from Monday's election showed Jagan's Red-dominated Peoples Progressive party received 48 per cent of the 117,000 votes cast out of 212,000 eligible voters. Supporters of anti-Communist Linden Forbes Burnham, a 1953 ally of Jagan who later split with him, received 24 per cent of the vote.

Jaganites won 9 of the 14 elective Council seats, Burnhamites 3 and United Democrats and National Labor Front 1 each. Renison can appoint up to 11 councilmen and three of his ministers serve in the Council, enabling the governor to control enough votes to block Jagan.

Jagan said British Guiana should decide in a referendum whether to join the West Indies Federation now being formed of British possessions, once the federation is independent.

The fight for British Guiana's independence will continue, Jagan said, but he was agreeable to having it remain in the commonwealth.

Describes Five-Hour Ordeal Seeking Help

EL PASO, Tex. (AP)—"It was a long, long time before I saw the lights, but I knew I had to get help. My buddy was back there dying. Pfc. Wayne D. Hooks of White Sands proving ground described a five-hour ordeal Tuesday night in the middle of the New Mexico desert. The 23-year-old Goldsboro, N.C., soldier, suffering from back injuries, struggled nine miles through the darkness to seek help after a jeep accident in the middle of nowhere. Sp.3C. Oscar A. Ellefson, 20, Wesby, Wis., was dead when help arrived. "After the jeep overturned, I guess I must have been sort of unconscious," said Hooks. "I looked over and saw my buddy lying there, bleeding from the face, and I knew I had to do something. "I felt for a pulse — and didn't get any. I tried the radio of the jeep. It didn't work. "I knew I had to do something, so I got up and started walking. I didn't know what direction I was going, but I was lucky. I went the right way. "I walked a long, long time, and it was really dark, but finally I saw a light in the distance. I couldn't think of anything but my buddy back there dying, and I knew I had to get help. "Finally, I got to a security guard shack and told the guard to call an ambulance. I fell on the floor of the shack then, and I don't remember much else. "They took me to the base, took some X-rays and then brought me

ARMS CACHE SEIZED IN MIAMI.—Alfredo C. Z. Gonzales (left), former top-ranking Cuban government official, was arrested at Miami, Fla., after 100 boxes of anti-tank rifles, machine guns and ammunition were seized in the Miami home of a kinsman of Gonzales. Charged with violating the U. S. Neutrality Act, Gonzales pleaded innocent. He said he believed the boxes contained farm equipment. Officials said the arms were destined for Cuba. Report Teamsters 'Failed' Polish Tarnished Record

CHICAGO (AP)—The president of the AFL-CIO yesterday said the Teamsters Union has failed to polish its tarnished record, but cautioned against any restrictive labor legislation that might result from Senate rackets investigations. In the closing session of the four-day AFL-CIO Executive Council meeting, President George Meany told newsmen he doesn't think the Teamsters' linen is any cleaner now than it has been. Meany was critical of proposals for restrictive labor legislation in the wake of the Senate Rackets Committee hearings. "I feel a great many of the things that have come before the committee are covered by laws now on the books," he said. If laws against thievery had been enforced, he said, "a lot of these men wouldn't be on the witness stand, but in the jailhouse." The Teamsters' executive board is expected to meet Aug. 26 to consider possible action on AFL-CIO charges of corrupt influences against the union. The accusation was leveled in May after Teamster President Dave Beck was accused of misusing some $400,000 in Teamster funds.

The AFL-CIO Ethical Practices Committee will submit a report on the case to be presented at an Executive Council meeting Sept. 24 and 25 in New York City. Council recommendations will be laid before the Teamsters convention Sept. 30 in Miami Beach. The recommendations will outline steps the union must take to stay in the AFL-CIO. Meany said he has "no opinion" on the possibility James R. Hoffa, Midwest Teamster boss, will succeed Beck as president. Hoffa recently was acquitted of charges he planted a spy on the staff of the Rackets Committee to supply information about investigations to him. The Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, biggest of the operating rail unions, has applied for AFL-CIO membership. Meany said it has 160,000 members. He said jurisdictional and constitutional adjustments are necessary on behalf of the large independent before it can be admitted. One of these is a ban on Negro membership in the brotherhood's constitution. Before concluding business, the council also authorized the construction of an eight-story addition to the AFL-CIO headquarters in Washington.

Combing Army Files For Man

MAGNOLIA, N.C. (AP)—Red Cross workers searching Army files today hoped to find the father of a little 6-year-old girl who needs a heart operation to live. The father, Johnny W. Whaley, has been missing since June 17, 1956. The mother is ill and cannot sign an order authorizing the operation. Dr. C. F. Hawes said here yesterday Elizabeth Ann Whaley's condition is growing worse. The operation would close a duct in her heart. Sgt. A. B. Fountain, an Army recruiting sergeant at Goldsboro, said a man giving the name of John W. Whaley enlisted in October of last year. Magnolia, in southeastern North Carolina, is about 35 miles south of Goldsboro. The child has lived with Mr. and Mrs. Troy Horne since she was six months old. They are not her legal guardians and cannot sign the papers which must be done before doctors will perform the operation. Dr. Hawes said Elizabeth Ann has developed a cough and cannot exercise.

Rites Saturday For John Thomas Carson

BETHEL—John Thomas Carson, 84, died at his home near Bethel last night after several years of declining health. Funeral services will be held at the home Saturday at 4 p.m. Rev. C. P. Womack, pastor of Bethel Methodist Church, will officiate. Burial will be in the Bethel cemetery. Mr. Carson was a son of the late Thomas and Jane Taylor Carson of Martin county. He was a member of Bethel Methodist Church. Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Lizzie Edmondson of Bethel; two sons, J. Royal Carson and J. Alton Carson; two brothers, W. J. and W. H. Carson of Bethel; three grandchildren and six great-grandchildren.

Difficult Time Explaining Case

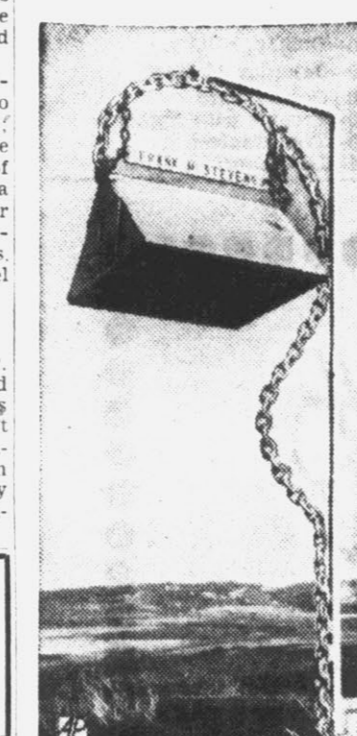

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP)—Juan Alicea tried to tell the cops they were all wrong when they arrested him on a drunk charge. But Alicea, a Puerto Rican who speaks very little English, couldn't get the point across. Finally an interpreter was called to the city jail. Only then was Alicea able to explain he was not drunk but had been slugged on the head by a robber who stole $50 from him, took his car and dumped him on a street where officers found him. He was a free man today. Yale University has courses in Thai, Indonesian and Southeast Asian languages.

Funeral Saturday For L. E. Vainright

Loren Edward Vainright, 56, farmer, was accidentally electrocuted at his home near Ham's Crossroads at 6:30 a.m. Friday. Funeral services will be held at the Wilkerson Chapel Saturday at 4 p.m. by his pastor, Rev. Floyd Cherry, assisted by a former pastor, Rev. J. C. Griffith of New Bern. Burial will be in Greenwood Cemetery. Mr. Vainright, son of the late Mack and Melissa Corbett Vainright, spent all his life in the community in which he died. He was a member of the Black Jack Free Will Baptist Church and the Red Men Tribe of Grimesland. Surviving are his wife, the former Emma Hunt of Pitt county, to whom he was married to in 1918; a daughter, Mrs. Buren Cox of the home; a son, Dalton Vainright of Greenville; two grandchildren; a brother, Johnnie Vainright of near Ham's Crossroads; and three sisters, Mrs. Kenneth Whichard, Mrs. Isaac Williams, and Mrs. Vernel Elks, all of Ham's Crossroads.

WAYSIDE MEAL—Mr. and Mrs. Urban Kallhaug, told at the U.S.-Canadian custom's gate yesterday they couldn't bring U.S. bacon into Canada, unpacked a gas stove, the bacon and a dozen eggs. After a hearty meal, they continued their trip into Canada.

Mapping Plans For 'Play School'

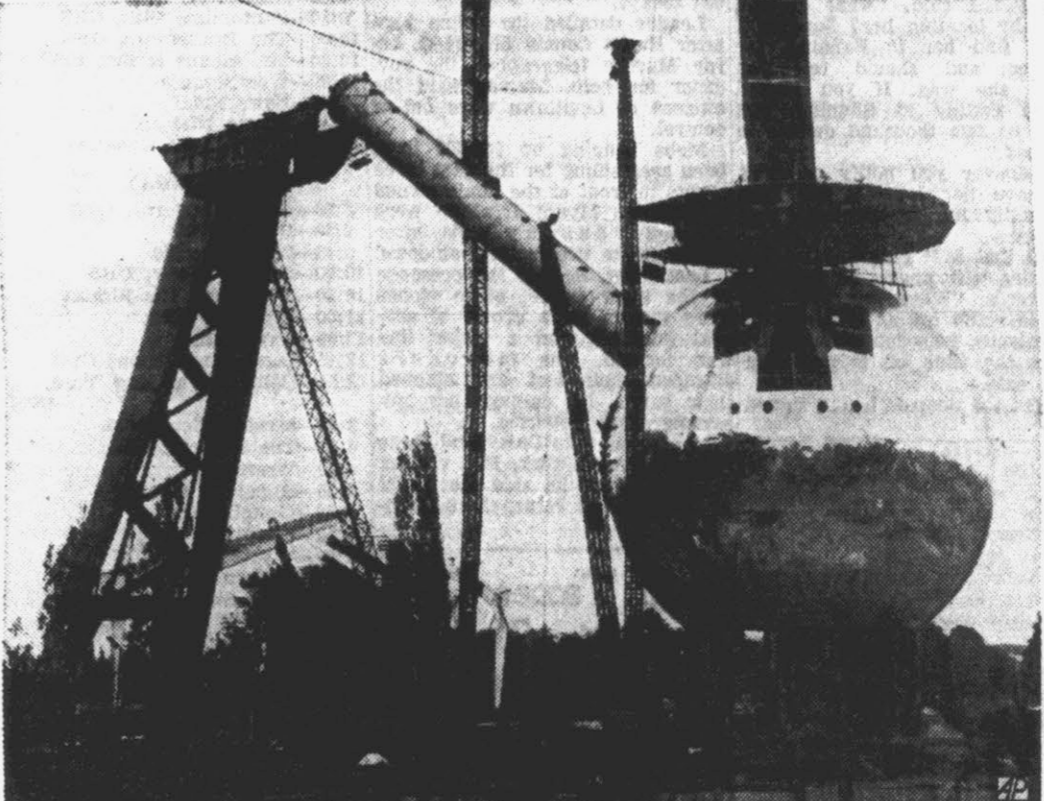

The Recreation Department has announced that applications for "Play School" will be accepted from August 17 through August 24. "Play School" is designed for children between the ages of three and five years. Its primary purpose is to provide companionship and supervised play for pre-school age children. There are two separate groups of children. One group meets on Tuesday and the other on Friday from 10:00 a.m. until 12:00 noon. Present equipment and space limit each group to an enrollment of 24 children. Names will be drawn from the applications received. These children will attend "Play School" for 12 mornings, or one term. At the end of this term, another group of names will be drawn from applications received after August 30

Believes Life On Other Planets

LAS CRUCES, N.M. (AP)—The man who discovered the planet Pluto says many astronomers agree, purely on the basis of the laws of chance, that life may exist elsewhere in the universe. Clyde Tombaugh, a member of the staff of New Mexico A&M College, said in an interview that our planet is one of several revolving about one of billions of stars. "It is sheerest egotism," he said, "for man to believe that the universe was created for his special benefit, or even for life at all."

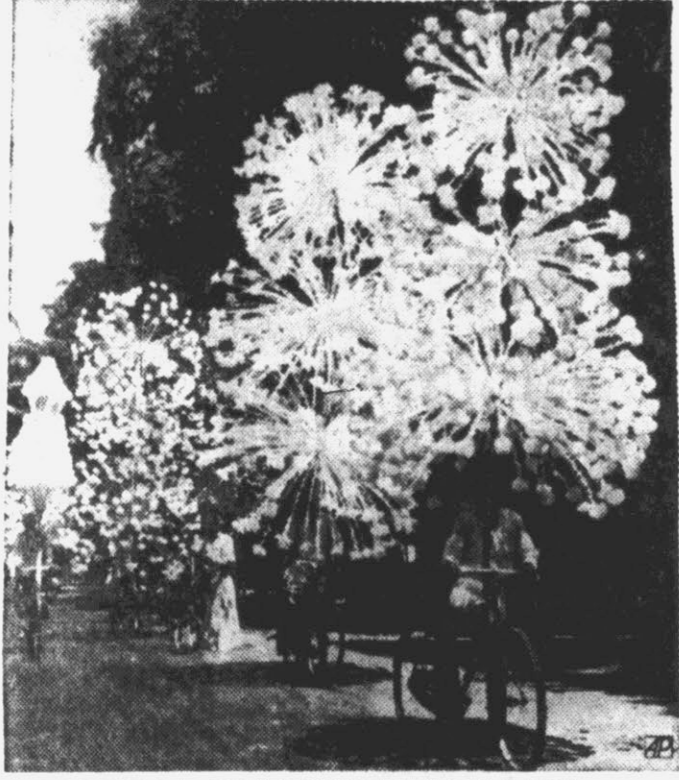

Solemn Ruling Against Slingshot

LANSING, Mich. (AP) Makers forgot about the slingshot in declaring numerous mechanical devices illegal for killing game. But they specifically banned the arbalet — a device used in the Middle Ages to throw arrows or shot. Asked for an official ruling on the slingshot, Michigan's attorney general declared it was just as illegal as an arbalet.

WALL STREET — Gains in air-traffic were about the only feature to an irregular stock market in the early afternoon today.

The market showed slightly higher tendencies but some major sections were mixed to a shade lower.

Gains ranged from fractions to almost 2 points. Losses were generally small.

Trading was quiet, and below the pace of the past two days. Boeing rose more than a point. Douglas and United Aircraft advanced a point. There appeared to be no particular news development to bolster the division. On the contrary, most Washington reports have told of a stretching out of Defense Department spending.

U.S. Gypsum gained almost 2 following word that housing starts were up in July. Allied Chemical was up more than a point.

Anaconda dropped more than 2 on a sharp reduction in earnings. St. Joseph Lead was off about a point after directors declared a dividend of 37 1/2 cents on the common, compared with th. 50 cents paid in June.

Steels were a little higher at the start, then became unchanged to lower. Chemicals and rails tended higher. Motors, oils and metals were irregular.

Rising fractions to a point were Chrysler, Goodyear, Caterpillar, RCA, Kennecott, Sunshine Mining, Air Reduction, International Paper, Illinois Central, Northern Pacific, Royal Dutch, Texas Co., and Eastern Airlines.

Small losers included U.S. Steel, Bethlehem, General Motors, Goodrich, Phelps Dodge, American Smelting, General Electric, Standard Oil (New Jersey) and Gulf Oil.

The market was putting on a performance much the same as yesterday. It was trying to advance after the overall decline of the past month, but was finding the going rough.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks at noon was up 40 cents at $178.40, with industrials up 60 cents, rails up 50 cents and utilities up 10 cents.

Orville Hodge Feels A Year In Prison Has Been Enough

By CHARLES WHALEN

CHESTER, Ill. (AP) — Orville Hodge took a long look back today on his first year in prison and observed plaintively, "I've been punished enough."

"This year has seemed like 10 years," said Hodge, choking back the tears. "There's only one thing I think about in here—getting out. It's been awful and sometimes I get so lonesome."

The once flamboyant Illinois state auditor shook his head and said, "I still don't know what happened" in the mammoth state check cashing swindle which crashed down on him and sent him to Menard Penitentiary for 12 to 15 years.

"I'm not blaming anyone for my troubles," he added.

Hodge won't be eligible for parole consideration for another six years and three months, leaving executive clemency as the only avenue to freedom before that time. He said, however, he hasn't seriously considered asking the governor for leniency.

Hodge holds a $750-a-month job running the prison's radio system.

When he first came to prison.

preparing and showing films, and recording a weekly radio program put on by the inmates.

In disk jockey fashion, he also spins records to meet requests of the 2,300 convicts. Occasionally, he has done some announcing at prison ball games.

"Adjustment to prison routine has come hard for the luxury-loving Hodge, but he said he began to acquire a new outlook on life after receiving his present assignment 11 weeks ago.

"Before that, I thought I'd go crazy," he said. "If it hadn't been for the Catholic chaplain, I believe I would have come out of my mind. The inmates and the warden tell me I'm doing good work now."

Warden Ross Randolph agreed. "He gets a lot of compliments and the inmates say he's the best radio man we ever had here."

Interviewed in the third floor radio room where he works alone, Hodge, even in drab prison garb, retained traces of the fastidious silk-suited appearance that marked his days as a prominent and free-spending Republican politician. His black shoes bore a bright polish and his brown wavy hair, gray at the temples, was neatly combed.

He was reluctant to talk about the embezzlement which landed him in prison. He uttered harsh criticism of newspaper stories concerning the scandal and disputed reports on the amount he stole.

"Where do you get that 2 1/2 million dollars?" he asked bitterly. "I was sent here for $650,000 and they're getting that back." The $650,000 figure was the approximate amount involved in the indictment to which he pleaded guilty.

"If I ever get out," he went on, "I won't have a dime left. They've taken all my property. But I could get a job. Maybe in Florida."

When he first came to prison.

Colored News

Miss Barbara Ann Wilson is ill at Pitt Memorial Hospital—Room 151.

Rev. P. M. Mumford, pastor of York Memorial A. M. E. Zion Church, announces that at the 11 o'clock worship service Sunday he will speak on "How, When and Where Christian Fellowship Shall Prevail." Music will be by the church choir. Holy Communion will be observed, and there will be special effort for conference assessment. Evening worship will be at 8 o'clock The Gospel Chorus will rehearse Tuesday night, and the Senior Choir on Thursday night. Prayer meeting will be held Wednesday night. The District Conference and Annual Conference is just three months away, so each member is asked to play his or her part to meet these demands. The public is invited to worship with York Memorial.

Usher Boards Nos. 1 and 2 of York Memorial Church will meet Sunday at 5 p.m. at the home of Mrs. Helen Rodgers, 416 Ford street.

The Senior Choir of Sycamore Chapel Baptist Church, Route 5, Greenville, will meet at the church for rehearsal tonight at 8 o'clock.

The United Daughters Club of Mount Calvary F.W.B. Church will meet Sunday at 5 p.m. at the home of Mrs. Helen Rodgers, 416 Ford street.

A chartered bus will leave Greenville the afternoon of August 26 to attend the Grand Lodge of Elks Convention in Philadelphia on August 28. Those desiring to attend the convention may make reservations with the Convention Transportation Committee. They are: Sylvester Tyson, Peyton Atkinson, Charles Shiver, Grant Bell, Sr., and Ed Murphy.

Mrs. Marlan H. Freeman, announces the marriage of her daughter, Miss Marlan Freeman, to Mr. Ernest W. Pitts of Greenville at the home, 1501 West Fourth street, Greenville, N. C., on Saturday evening, August 17, 1957. Mr. Pitts is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Ned P. Pitts, 905 Imperial street, Greenville. He is employed by the rehabilitation department of the Department of Education, Atlanta, Ga., as dean of boys in the Vacation School, Cave Spring, Ga. He will leave for the regular session August 23.

Mrs. Martha House Graham, 512 Vance street, died in Pitt Memorial Hospital Thursday after long illness. Funeral services will be held Sunday at 2:30 p.m. in the Corner Stone Baptist Church. Rev. Richard Anderson will officiate. Burial will be in Brown Hill Cemetery. Surviving are her husband, Willis Graham of the home; two sisters, Mrs. George Rodgers of Greenville and Mrs. Willette Croom of Greenville and one brother, Henry House of Greenville.

Hodge was the target of inmates' jibes about "What did you do with the 2 1/2 million, Orville?" Later on as they accepted him, the taunts ended.

"I'd tell them, you do your time and I'll do mine and I'll help you all."

Hodge said he goes to church every Sunday, often reads the Bible in his cell, but can't sleep well.

His world now centers almost exclusively on the small radio quarters overlooking the main prison yard. The desk was crammed with canned food and oranges purchased at the commissary from his earnings. Neatly stacked in a drawer was a sheaf of letters from relatives and friends.

Each day, the job keeps him out of his cell 16 hours.

When he runs out of something to do, he takes the prison tape recorder apart and puts it back together, "just to keep mind and hands busy."

Hodge was proud of the fact he has added 350 records to the prison library, gifts from the outside.

"I get a lot of requests for certain records and I try to satisfy the boys," he said. "Some of them like jazz or Western tunes and others want the classical music."

It is Hodge who also decides from a master control board which three outside radio stations are piped to the convicts' cells. Randolph said there had been no complaints about Hodge's selections.

The year behind prison walls appeared to have little effect upon Hodge physically, although his weight has dropped 10 pounds from his normal 195. He has measured off the distance in the prison yard and keeps in trim by walking three to five miles four days a week.

For a calmate, Hodge has an old-timer in for murder. Randolph said he is 10 years younger than Hodge, "but will be 53 in October, but has been a good influence on the former state official.

Cub Scout Pack Fall Plans Are Being Made

Fall plans for Cub Scout Pack 330 of the Jarvis Memorial Church are currently being made.

This pack is made up of 10 dens of six to eight boys between the ages of 8-11. Charles D. Cobb is the cubmaster.

A Webelos Den for boys who are preparing to enter Boy Scouting has been added and is under the direction of Mr. Jack Skinner. Mr. Skinner was one of the first Boy Scouts to receive the Eagle Award in Greenville.

Two new den mothers joining the pack are Mrs. Keith Holmes and Mrs. Billy Utey. Den mothers who are returning from last year are Mrs. Clinton Joyner, Mrs. Hugo Williams, Mrs. Wyatt Brown, Mrs. Joe Taft, Mrs. Charles Cobb, Mrs. Joe Blalock, Mrs. James Tucker, and Mrs. Aaron Baxter.

In the last meeting it was pointed out that Cub Scouting is a family affair and is aimed at bringing the parents and children closer together. The parent is the only person who can certify that the work for a badge has been successfully passed.

Anyone who has boys between the ages of 8-11 and wishes them to have benefit from this developmental program of the Boy Scouts of America should contact Mr. Cobb at 2698 for details on joining the Cub Scouts.

Juvenile Held In Larceny Cases

An unidentified 14-year-old Negro boy has been arrested in connection with larcenies from several homes in the College View section.

City police picked up the youngster earlier in the week following an extensive investigation. Several complaints were received involving stolen articles, officers said.

The investigation has not been completed.

Student Congress Aiming Thrash Out Big Problems

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP)—American students, using free and honest argument as their only weapon, meet next week to thrash out the problems that stump their elders: civil rights in the United States and help for the Communist-ridden people of Eastern Europe.

The occasion is the 10th congress of the U.S. National Student Assn., opening Tuesday for 10 days.

On the University of Michigan campus in Ann Arbor, 900 delegates, chosen by the students or student governments of 350 U.S. colleges and universities, meet as representatives of more than 800,000 American college youths.

The U.S. National Student Congress comes on the heels of the World Youth Congress in Moscow. Between the two there is more than 5,000 miles difference. Their methods and objectives are a world apart.

While the World Youth Congress was designed as a platform for Soviet propaganda, the U.S. congress likely will turn up disputes and controversies that to the Soviet eye would be interpreted as weakness and division.

But a look at the action in last year's congress at the University of Chicago indicates that, despite the hot debate over civil rights, the students were able to form their own official stands.

The tough floor fight on segregation concluded on the principle that "segregation in education is unethical and unwise." At the same time the congress took no specific action to encourage desegregation, and a move to have the student congress' Educational

Local Firm Wins State Contract

C. E. Williams Plumbing and Heating Co. was awarded the air conditioning installation project at the Division office of the N. C. Highway and Public Works Commission yesterday.

The local firm was awarded the contract following a low bid of $5,995. A total of 11 firms, six out-of-town, bid for the project.

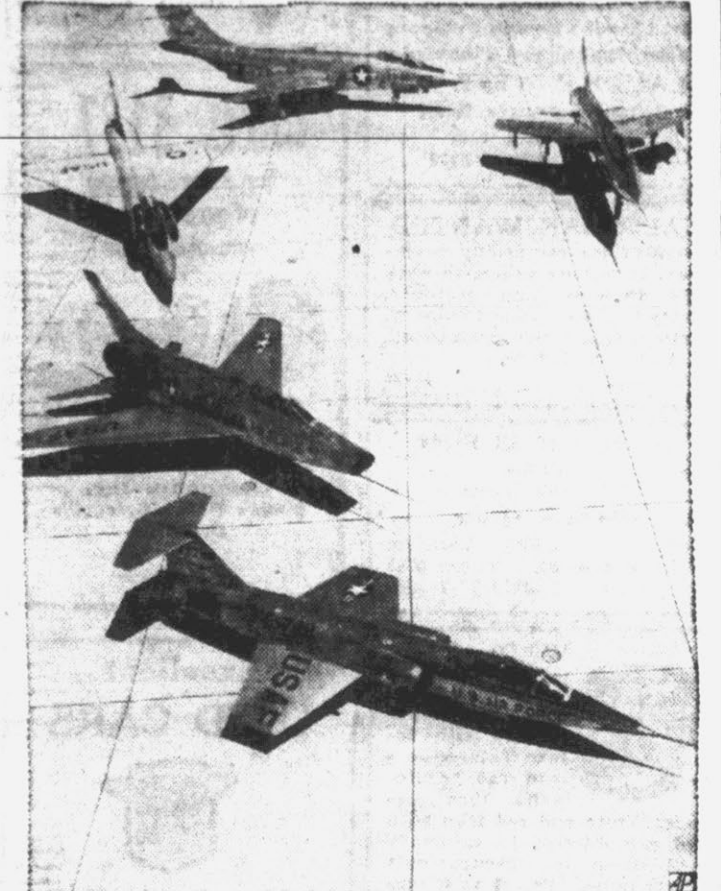

Next low bid was submitted by Coastal Refrigeration Co. for $6,025. Riddle Brothers Heating and Air Conditioning Co. followed closely with a bid of $6,385.

Two other Greenville firms also submitted certified bids.

FIRE WAS OUT WHEN FIREMEN ARRIVED

Damage was light when firemen were called to Sears-Roebuck Co. on Evans St. yesterday afternoon.

The fire was in a light fixture and was out when firemen arrived.
