

Little Rock Negroes Slip Into School As Mob Fights

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP)—Eight Negro students slipped into a side door at Central High School today while a diversionary group of Negro adults fought with an angry crowd of whites to divert their attention. Fights broke out immediately and State Police joined city patrolmen to battle the surging whites.

Reporters who caught just a glimpse of the students as they were rushed into the building through a side door said nine had entered but the school office said the number was eight.

The well-executed plan of diversion held the crowd's attention long enough for the Negro students to be driven onto the campus and whisked through the side door.

One of the Negro adults was knocked down, beaten and kicked. Women screamed and men cursed and tried to breach the line of officers thrown around the huge school ground.

The violent action started just as the bell rang for classes to begin at 8:45 a.m. The crowd had been kept in hand and was fairly docile up to this time.

Suddenly at the end of the tree-lined block in front of the school building about five Negroes appeared and the crowd rushed toward them and a fight started.

As police swarmed toward this action the Negro students made their move and got inside.

About 20 white men tried to break through when one of them shouted "let's get them" but officers swinging billy clubs knocked the man down and grabbed a second. The line held.

State Police and ambulances arrived about the same time and went into action against the fights that had "broken out all over the place."

While students started filing out shortly after the Negro students entered and someone shouted: "Come on out. Don't stay in there with the niggers."

The melee continued about 40 minutes.

The diversionary fight started when one white man jumped on a Negro's back and hit him and kicked him. The Negro had a small camera.

The calm of the crowd was broken when a woman saw the diversionary group and shouted: "Niggers are coming." She was crying.

Another white woman, screaming and crying, had to be dragged to a patrol car. Apparently she was not arrested, but ordered to go home.

An Arkansas Democrat photographer returning to his office said he witnessed an "extremely brutal" beating of a Negro man.

He said the man had accompanied a Negro youth—apparently a student who possibly was the ninth student, who did not enter. The youth managed to flee, but the white men began beating the Negro man with their fists and kicking him. He got up several times and was again knocked and kicked down.

Finally, someone shouted: "Don't kill him, give him three minutes."

At this, the mauling of the Negro was stopped and he hurried away.

Lt. Mack Thompson of the state troopers said his men "will act as peace officers, preserving peace and order."

He assigned 50 troopers to the school.

Another 35 Little Rock city policemen were ordered there by Mayor Woodrow Wilson Mann and the mayor said their orders were to permit the Negro students to enter if they appear.

Conflicting reports came from the Negro students on whether they would enter. Some said earlier they intended to appear but later told reporters they were not sure what they would do.

A Negro newspaper publisher, L. C. Bates, said none of the nine who were originally screened and accepted for enrollment by the Little Rock Board of Education would try to enter.

Gov. Orval Faubus, in Sea Island, Ga., said, "I am apprehensive of disorder and violence. I hope calmness and tolerance will prevail."

Faubus, who brought on the clash between the U.S. government and the state by calling out the National Guard to block the Negroes, was in Georgia attending the Southern Governors Conference.

He said it is always possible that he will again station guardsmen around Central High School if violence flares there.

Last Friday, a U.S. District Court put Faubus under injunction not to interfere further with the enrollment of Negroes at Central High.

Officers of the state troopers told their men to prepare for two or three days duty.

The mayor issued a formal statement as the hour for opening classes approached. He said: "A strong police detail will be on hand at Little Rock Central High School to deal with any effort by mob leaders to breach the peace of this community. Arrangements have been made for additional assistance if that becomes necessary."

"Violations of city ordinances and state laws will be dealt with firmly. I have advised that violations of the pending federal injunctions will meet the full weight of the U.S. government."

"I feel confident that city authorities have the complete support of this community on the issue of mob rule as opposed to law and order."

Mrs. Margaret Jackson, vice president of the League of Central High Mothers, said: "We hope to have a big demonstration to show that the people of Little Rock are still against integration."

"I hope they (the Negroes) won't get in."

A number of clergymen in Little Rock offered prayers yesterday for peaceful integration. Some devoted sermons to the integration issue.

Gnats Bothering You Too? Wait For A Cold Snap

By ALVIN TAYLOR
Reflector City Editor

Friend, you say the gnats are giving you a fit and they fly around your head every time you step out the door?

You say they're giving your kids a terrible time and you have to shoot them with the fly spray before you can bring them in to supper?

You say they eat up the insect repellent as if it were free soup at the mission headquarters and they crawl in your eyes, ears and nose?

Well, buck up, friend. The first cold snap should get rid of the pesky little insects.

Besides, doctors, school authorities, college students and even the painters are in the same boat. The tiny flying things have been causing everyone trouble for the last few weeks. The gnats have been worse this year than for the past several years.

An eye, ear, nose and throat specialist said this morning eye infections had increased "very markedly" during recent weeks.

There are also some ear infections, he said, but "eye infections are terrific."

The physician termed the disease caused by the gnats as a "simple infection of the eye."

"The eyes get red and puffed," he declared. "People who have it should be treated for it. It goes on and on."

Home remedies don't seem to help.

"The worst cases we see are those treated at home for several days," he said.

Persons who pick up such an infection can pass it on to others.

"It happens every year," the physician said, "but I believe this year is the worst I've ever seen it."

However, he noted, there was a bad siege of the gnat-caused infections three years ago.

Schools Have Problem

The schools also have reported considerable trouble with gnats during recent weeks.

"We've had a lot of trouble over here," Principal O. E. Dowd of the new J. H. Rose High School said this morning.

On certain days "we have had to keep some doors and windows closed to try to keep them out of the building," he declared.

"Some of the teachers and children have been using insect repellent."

At times, the principal reported, doors to the cafeteria were kept closed because the tiny insects were so troublesome.

Dowd said the gnat problem was less today, however.

"It is much better now," he said. "We made out somehow."

From East Carolina College also came reports of gnat problems.

Vice President F. D. Duncan said the insects have bothered classes considerably.

"I don't know that any classes have been dismissed," he noted. "They have been a nuisance and they have interfered with the students' studying, of course."

He said the college requested that the city send its fogging machine through the campus which was done.

"We believe that helped a little."

Hodges Suggests Majority Has Also Right To Political Support

SEA ISLAND, Ga. (AP)—"It is high time that more of our political leaders came out for the majority in this country," Gov. Luther Hodges of North Carolina said today. "Instead of persisting in an unsightly scramble to appease minorities."

There certainly can be such a thing as tyranny by majority rule, Hodges declared, "but what we are faced with today is, in my opinion, exactly the reverse."

Speaking on "The Southern Point of View" to the 23rd annual Southern Governors Conference, Hodges said it "is not necessarily political, nor does it mean that I propose we leave our traditional political party."

He said he felt that that the Southern point of view "means the kind of independence and freedom that make for growth in either an individual, a community, a state or a region."

Hodges and the other governors attending the conference said before it began that school integration was not on the agenda and would not necessarily be discussed.

However, Hodges devoted a great deal of his talk to the U.S. Supreme Court, civil rights and segregation.

He stated that the Southern point of view "means we do not hastily take up fanciful new theories, and that we do not like undue concentration of governmental power nor an exaggerated and seemingly influence of minority pressure groups."

It was well illustrated in the civil rights debate, he said, when Sens. Richard Russell (D-Ga.) and Sam Ervin (D-N.C.) "and other outstanding Southern senators and supported by distinguished senators from all sections of the nation, carefully, painstakingly and earnestly pointed out to the nation what could happen if the Congress . . . allowed casual emotion, half-baked information and partisan politics to dictate dangerous legislation."

Hodges said he thought that if the South differs from other sections in its approaches to solution of major problems "it is mainly because our problems are really different."

He pointed out that in his own state of North Carolina the Negro population varies from three-tenths of 1 per cent in one county to 67 per cent in another. "Obviously," he said, "the race problem varies among our 100 counties as it can and does vary among the several states represented in this conference from Delaware to Oklahoma."

But the variance, he said, "does not mean that our people do not have the same basic personal convictions and attitudes."

"As a matter of fact, I believe, if the truth were really known, the basic attitudes and feelings of the average person in those states outside the South, with respect to racial relations, is not a great deal different from that of the Southern citizen."

Hodges said he thought the attitude of Americans is changing, "not only about the school segregation problem, but about other things on which the U.S. Supreme Court has recently ruled."

The average man, he said, "is concerned that in our seeming desire to protect individual liberties we are often throwing to the wind individual responsibility."

He said he did not think that it is "in the national interest for minority groups, of whatever race, color or belief, to be used as political pawns" by either political party.

Effort To Sell Atomic Secrets Laid To Poker

MOUNT VERNON, N. Y. (AP)—George A. French, Air Force captain sentenced to life imprisonment for trying to sell secret information to the Soviet Union, over thousands of dollars in gambling debts, according to his wife and an Air Force spokesman.

Mrs. Dorothy G. French, who married the airman in 1941, said yesterday: "George was a gambler, not the racetrack type, but a devoted poker player. He loved the game. I never knew the extent of his poker playing until a month ago, when a mutual friend told me I'd better have a talk with him."

"I was told he was deep in debt, well into the thousands of dollars."

In Washington, an Air Force spokesman said French had contracted a string of loans in connection with the gambling debts.

French's court-martial and life sentence were disclosed last Saturday with an announcement that he had asked the Russians to buy atomic secrets.

CAPT. G. A. FRENCH

spokesman said French had contracted a string of loans in connection with the gambling debts.

French's court-martial and life sentence were disclosed last Saturday with an announcement that he had asked the Russians to buy atomic secrets.

The Air Force said French had been tried in secret at Barksdale Air Force Base, near Shreveport, La., by a seven-man court-martial. His family here heard of the trial after the conviction was announced.

Mrs. French said she wrote to her husband about the gambling but that he denied it.

"All he told me," she said, "was 'stick by me. I am in trouble and I will need you.'"

Mrs. John French, the captain's stepmother, said his father knew he was in trouble over gambling.

"Two and a half years ago he borrowed $2,000 from my husband to pay gambling debts, and paid back only part," she said.

"In March he asked for $1,800 from his father, but his father didn't have it. Then in April, I think it was, a letter came from the Bank of Puerto Rico saying he'd taken out a loan of $1,200 and hadn't made any payment."

Grimes Tired, Uncertain On Plans After Acquittal

WASHINGTON, N.C. (AP)—Attorney J. D. Grimes Jr. was free today to pick up the threads of his life following his acquittal by a jury in the slaying of a farmer he accused of having an affair with his wife.

Grimes, 42, visibly tired after the four-day trial, said yesterday "I just can't say right now" what his future plans are. "It's been so short since the trial that I'm unable to say."

A jury of fathers summoned from Nash County deliberated only 48 minutes Saturday before acquitting Grimes in the slaying of Haywood C. Paul, 47, a tenant farmer.

Grimes admitted shooting Paul, but pleaded innocent on grounds of temporary insanity. He said he felt like he went crazy when he shot his wife and Paul having sexual relations under a tobacco barn.

Plans have been made to make the fall Camporee activity an annual event. The Camporee ran from 4 p.m. Friday until 4 p.m. Saturday.

Saturday morning the U. S. Soil Conservation Service and the North Carolina Forestry Department gave demonstrations. Demonstrations were also given in Second Class and First Class rank advancement requirements.

Owners Presume Sailing Ship Is Lost To Storm

LONDON (AP)—The Hamburg owners of the German sailing ship Pamir said today they presumed the four-masted bark had been lost in the storm-lashed Atlantic.

The owners held out hope, however, that some survivors of 86 aboard might still be found.

The sailing vessel vanished Saturday after radiating that she had lost all her sails about 550 miles southwest of the Azores.

The owners said 62 cadets, of whom 25 were on their first trip, were aboard the vessel. There were 17 regular crew men and 7 officers. This made a total of 86 persons aboard.

The finding of two empty lifeboats and a raft previously had raised fears the vessel had gone down.

Rescue planes and ships crisscrossed the mid-Atlantic without finding a trace of the four-master that had weathered many a storm in her 52 years at sea.

Her operators held out hope that the Pamir had survived the storm kicked up by Hurricane Carrie. It was pointed out the lifeboats and raft could have been ripped from their lashings.

The Pamir, carrying barley from Buenos Aires to Hamburg, radioed Saturday night that she was sinking about 600 miles west of the Azores.

The ship was listing at 45 degrees and all sails had been stripped away.

U.S. Air Force planes reported last night that they had spotted two lifeboats and a raft, all empty.

One battered lifeboat bore the name "Luebeck," the West German city where the 3,102-ton was registered.

The ship was operated by Zersen and Co. of Luebeck as a grain carrier and training ship for the German shipping industry. It carried a number of maritime cadets.

Lo, Autumn Once Again In The Land

Gentle Autumn, unburied but on time, quietly laid claim to the land this morning.

It tip-toed across the countryside in the stillness and quiet of 2:27 a.m. to begin an official period residence that will continue until December 21.

Despite the stillness and quiet of the early hours, Autumn found itself sharing the day with warm weather that refused to recognize Summer's eviction. The summerlike heat, cooled to 73 degrees during the night, climbed to 77 at 8 a.m. today and was threatening at noon to match yesterday's high of 91 degrees.

The area between the Rockies and the Great Lakes, southward to the southern plains, had no such problems. The season brought with it a mass of cool air that sent temperatures in North Dakota and northern Minnesota skidding into the 30s. Readings were generally 10 to 20 degrees lower than yesterday morning from northern New England southwestward through the lower Great Lakes region and the Ohio Valley.

Summerlike weather prevailed in the Southeast and northward into New England. It was also hot in the Southwest desert region and fair and warm in other parts of the Far West.

Widely scattered showers were reported in the south Atlantic Coast region yesterday, although Pitt County's most recent rain came Saturday when 46 inches were recorded by the Utilities Commission's weather station.

Troops Moving Within Syria

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP)—Reports of Syrian troop movements and fear of subversion have prompted Syria's pro-Western neighbors to tighten their border defenses.

Maj. Gen. Abdi Bishry, Syria's chief of staff, said Syria is "carrying out certain defense maneuvers."

But in an interview in Damascus last night with William L. Ryan, Associated Press foreign news analyst, he declared the movements were only to prepare against surprise.

A report circulated in Beirut said Syrian troops and Soviet-supplied equipment were moving across Syria under cover of darkness toward the Turkish border.

Bishry denied this. He told Ryan only national police and customs guards are on the Turkish frontier. He said he does not intend to send reinforcements.

Bishry said Syria has canceled officers' leaves. Garrison troops in Damascus are confined to barracks. Some reserves have been called up.

Bishry denied Western reports he is Communist or pro-Communist, telling Ryan: "I assure you, I never was affiliated with or was a member of that party."

Bishry said he and the government are willing to talk directly with anyone from the United States on American-Syrian relations.

Northern Lights Are Again Seen In South

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Northern lights paid a rare visit to the South last night.

The shimmering lights of the aurora borealis in the northern sky were seen by many persons who flooded Weather Bureau and newspaper offices with calls in Tennessee, Alabama, Georgia, Florida and South Carolina.

Dave Miller, meteorologist at the Atlanta weather bureau, said the northern lights were last seen vividly in the South in the 1930s.

A pilot flying over Stone Mountain near Atlanta told the Weather Bureau he saw the streamers of light flickering against the background of blue.

The bureau estimated the lights were visible for about 40 minutes, starting at about 11:30 p.m.

Residents in Macon, Memphis, Birmingham, Montgomery, Columbia, Orangeburg, Jacksonville, Cross City, Marianna and Orlando, Fla., also sighted the unusual lights.

The Weather Bureau at Jacksonville said there were reports of northern lights in many parts of the eastern United States.

A Weather Bureau observer said the lights were of "fluctuating intensity" and seemed to move northwest to northeast across the sky.

The aurora borealis is usually seen in northern latitudes on winter nights and is most vivid in the polar region. Such lights are often visible in Northern states during periods of sun spot activity.

The display of aurora borealis, blood red and covering a large area of the sky, had Columbia newspapers and the Weather Bureau swamped with telephone calls for an explanation.

The sky was clear and some stars could be seen through the red color. The lights varied in size, color and position during the night.

Boy Confesses He Lied About Being Set Afire

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP)—A seriously burned 11-year-old white boy admitted today he made up a story that a gang of Negro youths had set him afire, police reported.

The boy, John Somma, was burned yesterday while fooling with matches around a barrel containing flammable liquid, police said.

He said at first that four or five youths had pinned him to the ground in front of the Capitol, poured a flammable liquid on his head and lit it.

Today, in Albany Hospital, the boy said he had "wanted to get the kids in trouble."

He said he had been punished several times for playing with matches and did not want his family to know what he had done.

He suffered second- and third-degree burns of the face and the hospital said his eyesight might be impaired. However, his condition was described as good.

Tropical Storm Heads Westward Toward Florida

MIAMI, Fla. (AP)—Tropical storm Frieda moved slowly westward over the Atlantic today toward Florida, some 500 miles away.

The season's sixth tropical storm was traveling 10 miles an hour and showed signs of gathering strength. If it continued west at 10 miles an hour it would hit Florida's southeast coast Wednesday morning.

The 5 a.m. advisory said little change in direction or rate of forward movement was expected in the next 12 hours.

Forecasters at the U. S. Weather Bureau in Miami said there was no immediate cause for alarm. They said it was entirely possible the storm would change course as it did Saturday night.

AAUW-Little Theater To Give Agatha Christie Mystery Play

The Greenville Little Theatre and the Greenville Branch of the American Association of University Women have announced that they will present Nov. 19-20 two performances of "The Mouse Trap," by the famous whodunit author Agatha Christie.

The play will benefit the fund established some years ago by the local AAUW to provide foreign-study scholarships for students at East Carolina College. Performances will take place in the McGinnis Auditorium on the campus at 8 p.m.

Annual plays sponsored by the Greenville AAUW and presented with casts of East Carolina faculty members have attracted large audiences in past years. The first student to benefit from the scholarship fund established with proceeds of these performances was Ann L. Mayo of Plymouth, who during the past summer studied foreign languages at the Sorbonne in Paris.

Robert Forney Will Direct
Robert Forney of the Greenville Little Theatre will direct the Christie mystery. He has had a varied experience as actor and director in various amateur theatrical productions. Last year he played the Melancholy Jacques in the spring production of Shakespeare's "As You Like It" at East Carolina. He has directed plays for the Greenville, the Kingston, and other little theatres.

Tryouts for parts in "The Mouse Trap" have been announced for Wednesday and Thursday, September 25-26, at 8 p.m. in the Flanagan auditorium on the campus. The cast will be selected from members of the college faculty and those associated with the Greenville Little Theatre.

Mrs. Austin Perry of the East Carolina foreign languages department is chairman of the Foreign Study Committee of the local AAUW. Dr. Elizabeth Utterback and Dr. Edgar Hirschberg, also of the college faculty, presidents, respectively, of the AAUW and the Little Theatre here, will work with committees from the two organizations in presenting "The Mouse Trap."

Miss Stokes Honored

Miss Helen Stokes, bride of October 5, was honored at a coffee hour held at the home of Mrs. W. L. Harrington Saturday morning.

Greeting the 30 guests were the hostess and Miss Stokes who invited them into the dining room where coffee was poured by Mrs. R. C. Stokes Jr., mother of the honoree.

Of local interest in the dining room was a miniature garden scene placed on a silver platter that centered the appointed table. A doll dressed in taffeta was placed in the garden where a variety of flowers and a bird bath with miniature birds added to the quaint setting.

Mrs. Edward Stuart Flanagan and Mrs. T. I. Wagner assisted Mrs. Stokes in serving the party delights.

Varied shades of roses were placed throughout the home.

Following a social hour, good-byes were said to Mrs. Harrington and Miss Stokes.

Reception, Skit, Discussion Open Family Life Conference

Two of America's distinguished leaders in the field of human relations and Annual Family Life Conference of Mental Health, Harry A. Overstreet and Bonaro W. Overstreet, spoke to the Tenth Annual Family Life Conference of the North Carolina Family Life Council this morning with a colloquy on "Learning To Live With Ourselves."

The conference, which is being held at East Carolina College, has attracted 120 people ranging from Asheville to Beaufort.

Last night an informal reception was held in the Flanagan auditorium where a skit was presented by college students under the direction of Dr. Edgar W. Hirschberg. A discussion followed using the conference theme — "Making Family Life Make Sense" — under the direction of Dr. Frank Fuller of the college faculty.

This morning Dr. John Messick welcomed the visitors to the conference on behalf of the college. Welcomes were also given by J. H. Rose on behalf of the city schools and Dr. Woodrow Flanary on behalf of the city PTAs.

The colloquy presented by the Overstreets this morning was typical of the form of team-lecture they present which is a spontaneous give-and-take method.

Tonight the team will give another colloquy entitled "The Home As A Place For Maturing" at Austin Auditorium at 7:30 p.m.

Baby's Not Crazy If He Bangs Head

By DOROTHY V. WHIPPLE, M.D.
AP Newsfeatures
"Doctor, Tom does the craziest thing." That Mrs. Edgerton was really very worried was clear to see. "He bangs his head against anything hard he can find. He bangs it so hard he makes bruises on his forehead. Is there something wrong with his mind, doctor?"

It does seem a crazy thing to do, all right, but plenty of perfectly normal children do it. Sometimes a child bangs his head when he is angry, the way another child would throw something. But sometimes he seems just to enjoy it. If you will notice, the banging is always rhythmic — you can count a regular beat. Often, too, the child will accustom this beat with his voice, he makes a grunting or a humming sound each time his head hits the floor, or the wall.

Don't Worry
Like many of the peculiar habits children develop, if the banging is only occasional you have no cause to worry. He may give himself a black and blue welt on his head, but aside from this he will do himself no harm. And in the course of time he will abandon this type of behavior with no special help from you.

However, if a child keeps himself awake at night with his banging, or if he prefers to bang himself instead of playing, it's time to look into the reasons.

How satisfactory is the child's life to him? Is he bored? Does he need some new toys, more play equipment? Does he need children his age to play with? Maybe he needs warmer, friendlier adult attention. He needs something that will interest him more than his own rhythmic activity.

A child who discovers comfort and satisfaction in rhythmic motion and sound is often highly sensitive to sounds of all kinds. As a tiny baby he may scream out at a noise another child would ignore. As he begins to learn to talk you will hear him playing with his voice. He will make a high-pitched squeaky sound, then a low guttural one. You can watch him hear the difference, maybe laugh out loud and then try it again. All children do this to some extent, but some youngsters are more aware of sounds and their variation than others.

Maybe He's a Genius
This gives us a clue about the interests of a head-banger. Many such children are musical. A head-banger may stop his banging to listen to you sing. He will love music on the record-player or radio. Do your best to interest him in rhythm and music other than that which he makes with his own head. If you try to stop his banging with your singing, be sure to catch his beat in your rhythm. If your music is off his rhythm you may make him frustrated and angry. It's not as hard to do as you might think. Just him, accustoming his beat, then as he stops to listen to you, you can change to a real melody or hard-cooked egg as usual.

Furs Making News On Both Sides Of Atlantic

PARIS . . . Designer Jean Desses revives interest in astrakan, using it in this overcoat with belt tied in front, collar edged in blond mink. Easy cut in typical of new season.

NEW YORK . . . The lady wears a Chesterfield in the newest shade of Alaska seal, a midnight gray called Kitovi. Carrying out the vogue for contrasting furs in the shawl collar of mink.

By DOROTHY ROE
Associated Press Women's Editor

On both sides of the Atlantic, people are talking about furs this fall. Fur hats, fur trimmings on dresses and suits, fur bags, belts, and even shoes perk up the seasonal fashion picture. And, as usual, new fur coats give women all over the world something to yearn for.

Since furs were the first garments worn by human beings, back in the days of the cavemen, it's little wonder that they continue to be of primary interest to fashion-conscious women today. You might say it's a basic human trait, this emotional feeling about furs.

This year new pelts and new colors are making news. In Paris designer Jean Desses has brought back that old standby, astrakan, in high fashion. He shows a series of short and long coats in South-west African astrakan in chestnut or black, often with contrasting fur trimming, such as mink collars.

In New York there's much excitement over a new sandy tone in mink mutations, called Tourmaline, and a new midnight gray Alaska seal called Kitovi. Brazilian otter, Somali leopard, black mink and all the foxes also are enjoying fashion favor, both in complete coats and in combination with other furs.

The prevailing silhouette is slender but easy, with coats taking on an oval look, narrower at the hemline. New techniques make furs as light and supple as fabrics, and they are handled accordingly in the new coats, which go in for much detail such as draping, shirring, pleats and tucks.

Top designers this fall also have turned their attention to the so-called budget furs, such as American broadtail, raccoon, squirrel, muskrat and even rabbit, so that even if she can't afford mink, a woman can have a fashionable and flattering fur coat.

'See Zoo In Small Doses' Says Dr. Theodore Reed

By JANE EADS

WASHINGTON—Dr. Theodore H. Reed, acting director of the National Zoological Gardens, urges parents to give their children zoo experiences in small doses at least once a month.

"It's impossible for a child under 12 to absorb all there is to be seen in one trip," he says. "Even for persons over 12, to go to a major zoo and expect to see everything is impossible."

Young Dr. Reed, who became acting director of the Washington zoo in November, 1956, upon the retirement of Dr. William Mann, first started thinking about age levels after taking numerous groups of youngsters on guided tours through the gardens.

"They came through the front gate with high enthusiasm and were intensely interested in all they saw and heard—at first," he said. "But after an hour and a half, anything they saw was just another hunk of fur and all they wanted was to be fed and to chase each other."

"To properly visit a zoo," he continued, "one should plan to bring youngsters to see one building, or group of exhibits at a time, feed them, take them home and bring them again. Small but frequent doses, with encouragement by the parents, will give them a supplementary knowledge that will be invaluable."

The zoo, which during the fiscal year just ended, has enjoyed a record four million visitors, boasts some 794 species of animals, birds and reptiles and some 3,157 zoo occupants. Dr. Reed believes that zoologically it is one of the best in the country, though architecturally "there is much to be desired." Quarters for the antelope, for instance, he says, were built in 1898 and cost $3,500.

The zoo was started as a collection of live models for artists and taxidermists at the Smithsonian Institution, April 30, 1890. There were bison, antelope, mountain sheep and goats and an elk. It is still under the Smithsonian and is supported by congressional appropriations. Dr. Reed, married and father of Mark, 7, and Mary Alyce, 5, first came to the zoo as a veterinarian in July, 1955.

"The purpose of the zoo," he says, "is to exhibit in the best manner possible the various forms of life to increase the knowledge of the people and also furnish them a great amount of entertainment."

Beauty Alone Does Not Win Queen Titles

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures Writer

Times have changed in the beauty contest world, and you need not worry about wolves if you become a contestant, says lovely tall, slim, brown-eyed 19-year-old Imogene Allen, who is 'Miss Mississippi'.

"I guess it used to pose a problem," she says. "I've heard that parents worried about their daughters being in beauty contests, and that it just wasn't considered dignified. But it isn't that way any more. You must have talent and intelligence in addition to beauty in order to win a contest today, so you really do not owe thanks to anybody else if you win."

Since most of the girls are chaperoned and intelligent, there aren't any wolves to cope with, but if there were, they'd know how to handle them.

Imogene hasn't seen one to date, she says. Not the kind that plagued the girls in beauty pageants in days gone by, anyway.

"I get a few post cards, of course, from soldiers and other young men admirers," she says. "But that is all normal correspondence. They're just from young men who enjoy being pen pals."

Imogene's chaperone in New York where she has been seeing the sights in connection with the big Miss America contest at Atlantic City is Catherine O'Cain, who was 'Miss Mississippi' in 1949.

A chic soap-and-water type (although she uses a little liquid cream occasionally), she brushes and sets her hair every night, wears it in a page boy or bun hairstyle which she considers lady-like styles. She loves orange juice, garden vegetables and fruits, although she goes on an eating binge occasionally for those Southern specialties — hot biscuits, corn bread and pecan pie.

Imogene is a good cook and loves to whip up those male favorites—lemon ice box pie, fried chicken and corn bread. And she doesn't depend on a packaged mix, either. She tries to keep her weight to 120 with dieting and exercise.

She can draw and would like to be a fashion illustrator. She works with tempera and water colors and has done a number of landscapes. One of her reasons for entering the Miss America contest was to try to win the scholarship money so that she could attend a good art school.

She's already had one year at Mississippi State College for Women where she is majoring in art.

Leather Now Blossoming On Campus

By DOROTHY ROE
Associated Press Women's Editor

Along with raccoon coats and Bermuda shorts, leather coats and jackets in all colors will blossom on college campuses this fall. Now that new techniques of tanning and dyeing have made leather garments easily cleanable, girls have discovered they are among the most useful items of campus wear — at home with skirts or dresses, slacks or shorts.

Fireman red is the favorite college color this fall, with brown and russet tones also prominent in the lineup. Some of the coats are lined in washable orlon fleece, others gay striped jersey or plaid wool. A beige suede polo coat with a low back belt is proving one of the most popular styles with the campus crowd, clear across the country.

The car coat in rust suede with a white orlon fleece lining rates high with girls in northern colleges, where a sturdy, warm coat is important.

And for casual wear with either shorts or skirts there is a red kidskin fireman's shirt with a drawstring bottom and nailhead straps.

The raccoon craze also is present and accounted for, in a bright red car coat with removable raccoon collar.

In the high-style category is a white kid reversible car coat with detachable hood, with a bold red and black blanket lining in nylon fleece.

Civic Association Plans Concerts

The Raleigh Civic Music Association's president, Dr. H. Royster Chambliss, announced today that there will be six OUTSTANDING concerts for the 1957-'58 series.

"In keeping with our inimitable standards, the Raleigh Civic Music Association has the enviable opportunity to present the NATIONAL BALLET OF CANADA; this young, exciting, and brilliant company will bring to you individually, the quintessence of ballet expression," Dr. Chambliss added.

"Inasmuch as millions have thrilled to the dulcet tones of Fred Waring and HIS HI-PI HOLIDAY with all the Pennsylvanians, for almost four decades, those of you of the rollicking '20's or those of you of our present day-and-age 'rock and roll' will LOVE this 'old smoothie'!"

Brilliant, beautiful, powerful are the words used by the great Ponselle to describe her successor at the Metropolitan in the '30's. Who else but the one and only ZINKA MILANOVI!

Present Cavalcade of Song
A quick change of pace, and Raleigh Civic Music Association will present the CAVALCADE OF SONG—famed for its interpretation of music from Bach to the Blues.

Raleigh Civic Music Association is presenting a series of "true loves"—for the beloved Gina Bachauer, one of the most stimulating artists of our times, will be presented for the third time.

For the Raleigh Civic Music Association's final concert, world famous Carroll Glenn and Eugene List have been engaged. This favorite musical couple, man and wife, have thrilled audiences here and abroad; traveling in the Orient, they were quickly labeled "true American virtuoso—America's Favorite Ambassadors"—for their harmony of tone, Glenn with her violin and List with his piano are individually, and at once, collectively, a true marriage of beauty of tone with an extremely fine sensibility.

North Carolinians from our immediate community as well as all surrounding areas will be pleased to know that the headquarters are located in the Raleigh Room of the Sir Walter Hotel; special telephones have been installed; the number to call is Temple 4-0478! An adequate staff is on hand from 9 a.m.-6 p.m. to assist you in becoming a member. Despite rising costs, the entire series can be attended by adults for only $6 or $4 for students.

Membership may be either mailed, or if you so desire, a representative will call upon you—but remember, membership week is this week only! No one may attend individual concerts unless a membership card is presented. Your membership card entitles you to hear concerts in other cities (or which there are over 300).

COED MOTHER

POMONA, Calif. (AP)—After 13 years of marriage and three children, Mrs. Corinne Black has decided to become a high school coed.

"Now that my youngest child, Leslie, has started school I find I have time to complete my education," said the pretty housewife. She married while in her second year at Trumansburg, N. Y., Central High School.

Her goal: She wants to become an elementary teacher.

WOMAN SCORPED

DAYTON, Ohio (AP)—Aaron Jones, 44, of Dayton sadly viewed the remains of his auto and reflected upon the fury of a woman scorned.

Jones told police a young woman became angry at a party he was giving and upon leaving went to work on his car.

Police said she had sprung both doors, tore up the front seat, smashed both headlights, tail lights and back-up lights; snapped the right windshield wiper, broke the horn ring, smashed the electric clock, broke both sunvisors, tore off the accelerator and bent the gear shift lever.

You Can't Ignore $800,000 Extra

The increased number of recipients of social security benefits in Pitt County during the past nine months has added to the county's income at an annual rate of approximately $800,000.

Though this increase in income among citizens of Pitt County may not be entirely due to the program inaugurated last January by the County Commissioners, it is safe to say that a major part of this increase would not have come about had not Pitt made a special effort to inform its people of the benefits of the social security program for which they were eligible but were not taking advantage.

Last year when the Commissioners were considering hiring a fulltime employee to acquaint citizens of the county—particularly farmers—with the social security program, it was estimated that in one year's time the county might increase its annual income by a million dollars. With three months remaining in this year, it appears quite probable that this goal in increased income through social security payments to people of Pitt County will be reached.

At the same time it is evident that a great many people in Pitt County who are nearing the age of 65 will not be eligible for social security benefits unless they meet the requirements for assuring their eligibility. With each passing year many people, otherwise eligible actually throw away any possibility of receiving social security benefits at a later date simply because they do not make the necessary reports to assure their eligibility.

Through the information program being carried on by Pitt County, the income of many old people is being increased through social security. In many cases it means that the county is able to reduce its welfare rolls as social security payments provide income for people who otherwise would be dependent on the county for funds with which to buy the necessities of life. During its first nine months of operation, this program of Pitt County has been successful. But there is a great deal of work to be done.

The county's program aimed at increasing the number of recipients of social security payments needs and must have the cooperation of more of the people of the county.

Eastern Counties Are Demo Party Insurance

Party leaders in North Carolina have voiced the opinion that in spite of gains made by Republicans in this state in recent years, North Carolina will stick by the Democratic party in future national elections.

While The Reflector shares that view, we are keenly aware that the margin of victory for North Carolina's Democrats in national elections has been afforded by the Eastern part of the state. In the Piedmont, where a large percentage of the state's population is located, there has been a pronounced swing to the Republican party in national elections.

Had it not been for the heavy majorities the Democratic presidential nominee in Eastern counties in 1956, North Carolina would have been in the Republican column.

With that in mind, it is evident that the Democratic party needs to concentrate on keeping its vast majority of votes in the East while it tries to gain converts in the Piedmont section of the state. It would indeed be a mistake for the party organization on either the state or national level to neglect the Eastern counties which have assured party victory in North Carolina and give all its attention to other areas of the state.

Confidence Not Shared By All

By LYNN NISBET

TWO-PARTY — North Carolina isn't likely to go along with any third party plan in 1960. Many people, however, do not share the optimism voiced by Governor Hodges at his latest news conference that the State will stand by the Democratic party. So far as the national ticket is concerned North Carolina is definitely a two-party State. A switch of less than one per cent of the total vote cast for President in 1956 would have given the State's electoral vote to Eisenhower instead of to Stevenson. The margin between the Democratic and Republican votes for President had been narrowing each election since 1936. It will take a direct reversal of the 20 year trend to keep the State Democratic in 1960.

It appears fairly certain that if it strays from the Democratic fold it will wind up in the regular Republican camp. Leaders of both these parties are unfriendly to third party suggestions. Governor Hodges and State Chairman John Larkin have indicated that if a proposed meeting is held to discuss formation of a third party, North Carolina might be represented as an "observer," but without likelihood of actively participating in such a movement.

Through all the vicissitudes of the Populist, Bull Moose, Progressive and Dixiecrat upheavals, North Carolina has always stayed with one of the major parties — and except for 1976 and 1928 that has been the Democratic party. Although candidates of other parties have come to see a possible presidential candidate has been elected President in all the history of the United States.

FARM FREIGHT — L. Y. Ballentine, commissioner of agriculture, is attending the National Association of Commissioners, Secretaries and Directors of Agriculture in New Hampshire. As chairman of the transportation committee of that body, he will seek to get better cooperation among the States on matters of freight rates on agricultural products.

North Carolina is believed to be the only State which employs a rate expert solely for the purpose of handling matters of freight charges on farm products. Result is that when farm folks go into hearings before ICC and other regulatory bodies, they are opposed by batteries of highly trained experts for railroads, ship and truck lines, as well as representatives of manufacturers and processors.

Ballentine suggests that other States employ rate specialists and that the national association maintain a full time office in Washington to represent the interest of farmer shippers in freight rate structure. There

Spending Survey To Change Plans

By ELMER ROESSNER

Advertising and selling plans will be sharply revised after a new $1,500,000 study of consumer spending is unveiled within the next 48 hours.

The study has been under way for three years and involves 93,000 interviews. It is expected to be much more detailed than government studies; in fact, it may lead to changes in government statistical procedures.

It is expected to show that family spending is much higher than many believe and it may indicate that the old city-rural differences in family spending no longer exist. There may be evidence that spending for some products is much larger than many supposed.

Those who have been preliminary reports hint there will be some amazing surprises as to the relation between education and the purchases of appliances and liquor. The disclosure of what really are America's two major leisure activities will be startling, and many revise many advertising budgets.

FLU THEMES, SUPERJUICE — Here are more predictions of business changes, based on analyses of developing trends and highlighted with a few bits of inside information:

More Asiatic flu themes in advertising are coming. One Western dealer has already advertised that his line of dishwashers kills germs that survive hand-washing; other dealers may copy the theme. Drugists and others probably will launch "build up your resistance" advertising promotions; dairy and other food processing interests may join in.

"Super concentrated orange juice" is on the way. Two canners are racing to get it to market. One will test 100,000 gallons in two Midwestern cities later this year. Super concentrates take five parts of water instead of the usual three.

An upswing in farm real estate prices is certain. Recent crop reports throw new light on the fertility of good farmland. Even though part is put in soil banks, intensive cultivation can make the rest produce normal crops.

NEW PLASTIC, COSTLIER EARTHWARE — You'll hear more about Fortiflex, it's a polyolefin plastic and is expected to be competitive with vinyls in housewares, toys and many other plastic products and components.

Pottery prices will rise. A

Other Editors Saying... Butler's Defiance

(Henderson Dispatch)

Paul Butler, chairman of the Democratic National Committee, came into the South to thumb his nose and breathe defiance at this section on the question of segregation and civil rights. And withal his brazen attitude elicited not the first public utterance of resentment from any source that we have observed.

Butler admitted there was possibility that the segregation issue might result in a third party movement, but in effect if not in so many words, said the South could go jump into the lake and the party nationally would continue to fight for civil rights and an even stronger law than was enacted by Congress last month. In other words, the Democratic party will tolerate the South within its fold if it wishes to stay anyhow, but that it will be ignored on this or any other question where policy might conflict.

At least the chairman was frank. He minced no words and pulled no punches. Southern Democrats now should know what their national organization thinks of them. No matter that this part of the country kept the party alive through long, lean decades when a majority of the States habitually voted Republican. The idea now is that they are no longer vital and perhaps not needed.

Butler's frankness at least put the South on guard as to what its status is, or what a large element in the party would have it become.

It is not so much a question of the right or wrong of civil rights or segregation, but rather a nose thumbing and employment, in effect, of force to whip the South into line or of cutting it loose to go its own way politically. Such a thought is repulsive to liberty loving people who feel that their rights are being denied them. However, they are helpless to do anything else than yield.

Butler's frankness at least put the South on guard as to what its status is, or what a large element in the party would have it become.

Rivalry Will Be Strong

By ROGER BABSON

BABSON PARK, Mass. — Competition will increase constantly and severely during the next few years. This "few years" probably means until a severe business depression comes which will wipe out the weak concerns and leave the field only to the strong.

REASONS FOR SEVERE COMPETITION

The basic reason is that manufacturers — in order to counteract increased wage demands — are constantly reducing their other costs of production. Although the retail prices of most goods have gone up, yet, except for labor, the cost of actual manufacturing has declined. New machinery, electronics, automation, and other new developments are seeking to overcome the effects of higher wages. As a result, there is a constant struggle between the labor-leader and the inventor. This results in increased production and a surplus of goods. Manufacturers then are forced to create more customers and sell more goods in order to keep their plants running at full volume. Only as a manufacturer is running at full capacity is he able to pay higher wages and produce goods at lower cost.

Certainly if farmers — who are really manufacturers — receive subsidies and other helps from Congress, many manufacturers are entitled to the same help. All of this, however, results in severe competition which is profitable to no one. To keep labor employed and the factory working at full volume, manufacturers have encouraged installment sales and other means of coaxing people to buy more goods than they really need, or to buy them before they need them. This means that when unemployment begins, housewives will be so stocked with new furniture, electric utilities, and clothes that they will be able to stop buying almost everything other than food. Furthermore, the food bill can be greatly cut, probably resulting in better health for the family.

The future of employment is therefore in the hands of the consumers. As long as consumers continue to increase their purchases, conservative manufacturers will get on satisfactorily. When, however, consumers begin to economize, then unemployment will follow and most manufacturers will be headed for trouble. This means that retailers have a great responsibility. Although retailers are dependent on the consumers, who are the source of real power, yet consumer buying is largely influenced by the attitude of retailers.

Most retailers are now not doing their part to prolong prosperity. Golf courses, luncheon dates, bowling alleys, boating, and automobile racing are taking the time of retailers who ought to be in their stores. Customers are not being given the individual attention which they like. Merchants are making it harder to buy through self-service, poorly arranged stock, and careless advertising.

WHAT RETAILERS SHOULD DO

The next depression will be brought on by automobile congestion or by the fear of Fall-out due to a threatened Russian "testis." Parking meters are helpful in preventing all-day parkers from hogging the streets; but parking meters may reduce the amount of merchandise sold. After I drop my coin into a parking meter, I cannot forget the meter. I have it constantly in mind while shopping. This worry about the parking meter causes me to buy fewer goods than I would buy if it were not for my parking meter worry. All of this means that downtown retailing is in a chaotic condition. Evening shopping may be an answer to the parking problem.

Strength For Today

BUT FEW THINGS COUNT

Wealth and education are great assets in anyone's life, but in the day of trouble neither stands out in any substantial stead. If we lose a loved one, a big bank account makes no difference. If the doctor tells us we have an incurable disease, fifty diplomas on the wall will not take the sting out of that announcement. It makes little difference in the dark hour of trouble what we have in our heads or in our pockets, but it makes a great deal of difference what we have in our hearts.

One of the most cultured and wealthy men of his time said,

Experts See 'Tragic Situation'

By RAY TUCKER

WASHINGTON — Pentagon secrecy and shortsighted politics prevent the American Congress and public from realizing how far the United States lags behind Russia in preparing for a possible World War III. Although they dare not speak out publicly for fear of a court-martial, experts confide that the situation is "tragic."

In a farewell order, since he leaves office soon, Defense Secretary Wilson instructed Army, Navy and Air aides to hold down over-all national defense spending to $38 billion. Only two months ago, members of the Joint Chiefs of Staff told Congressional Committees that they would need at least $45 billion to $50 billion to build an adequate defense force.

In early July, Wilson sent directives to all research laboratories and shops to accelerate every program then under way. These involved every military weapon and development from radar to rockets — in fact, almost all the devices which have come into play since World War II.

CANCELS ORDERS SUDDENLY

LY—In early September, he cut back or cancelled the work which he had regarded as so essential only two months before. The only reason was the Administration's anxiety to set a reputation for economy, to balance the budget a third time, to keep from increasing the public debt beyond $275 billion, and to make possible a tax cut for the 1958 Congressional reductions.

Wilson has also rescinded millions of dollars in contracts for new planes. Most dangerous of all his economies, he has forced the elimination of the two D. E.W. warning systems designed to signal a sneak Russian attack on the Western continent across the top of the world — the Polar wastes.

These extended from Alaska to Hawaii, and from Eastern Canada to Greenland. With cooperation from Ottawa, they were built and manned at tremendous cost. They were our only assurance of an advance notice — perhaps three or four hours — of a hostile atomic or ballistic missile bombardment.

ECONOMY — POLITICS CAUSE OF ABANDONMENT These services were not abandoned because the Communist menace has diminished or vanished. They were withdrawn simply for the sake of economy and the sister reason — politics.

Meanwhile, Pentagon experts admit privately — they remember the court-martial and demotion of the Redstone Arsenal officer who tried to break through the curtain of Wilsonian secrecy — that we have fallen far behind Russia in the development of the 1,500 and 5,000-mile missiles. They have known of Communist progress in this field, but they dared not reveal the truth, as they do when Moscow fires an atomic shot, because of our own failures with this ultimate weapon.

There is no longer, it appears, an Admiral Mahan, an Admiral Sims or a "Billy" Mitchell to defy bureaucratic regulations and warn the American people that they may be walking down a road to a losing and ruinous war.

DEFICIENCIES COULD BE DISASTROUS Finally, since we have no operational missile of this kind or caliber, we have barely begun development of anti-missile missiles. Less than $50,000,000 has been appropriated for this program and only part of it actually spent. There has been a complete lack of initiative and imagination here.

These deficiencies, of course, would be disastrous in a global conflict. But we are equally helpless in situations such as local "brush fires," such as those in Korea, Indo-China and Egypt.

We have aerial equipment to transport less than one fully armed division to remote trouble spots. And that is why, amidst the general criticism of Allies, neutrals and enemies, we have had to start an arms race in the Middle East by shipping military hardware to Jordan, Iran and Iraq.

Senator Stuart Symington, Missouri Democrat and former Air Force Secretary, has tried to publicize the tragic seriousness of our military plight. But his has been a lonely voice in a bleak political wilderness. His colleagues have been too concerned with other issues to heed him, such as the racial problem, inflation, farm price supports, public power and other questions not nearly so vital as long-range national security.

New Atomic 'Ghost Town'

Odd Shapes Rise In Nevada Desert

The Nevada desert, site of many an abandoned settlement, has sired a 20th century "ghost town."

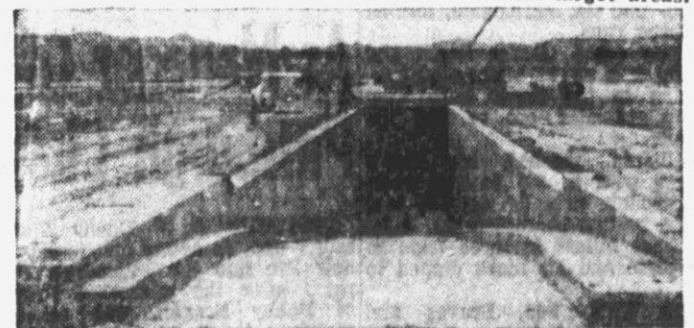

No one lives there. And yet it is a town of the present and future—complete with modern underground parking garages without cars, huge doors leading to nowhere, and futuristic domes emerging from a landscape almost as barren as the moon.

This is "Survival Town"—a community dedicated to its own destruction as a test site for atomic blast effects on various shelter-type structures.

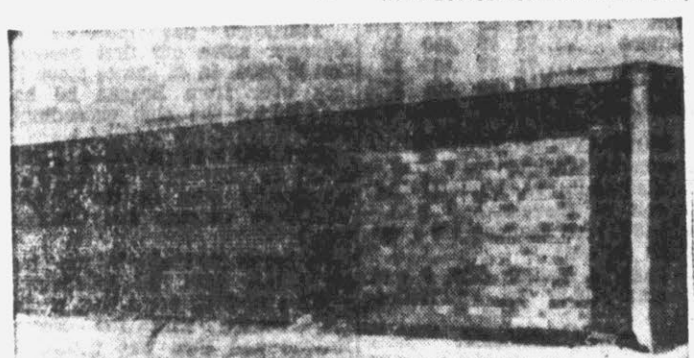

Constructed by the Federal Civil Defense Administration in cooperation with the Atomic Energy Commission and other private and public agencies, "Survival Town" includes underground home shelters and large urban shelters, new dome-type shelters being considered because they are easily built and cost relatively little, a small blast-resistant "school" building, various types of doors and valves to close shelter openings against a nuclear blast wave, and even a complete bank vault.

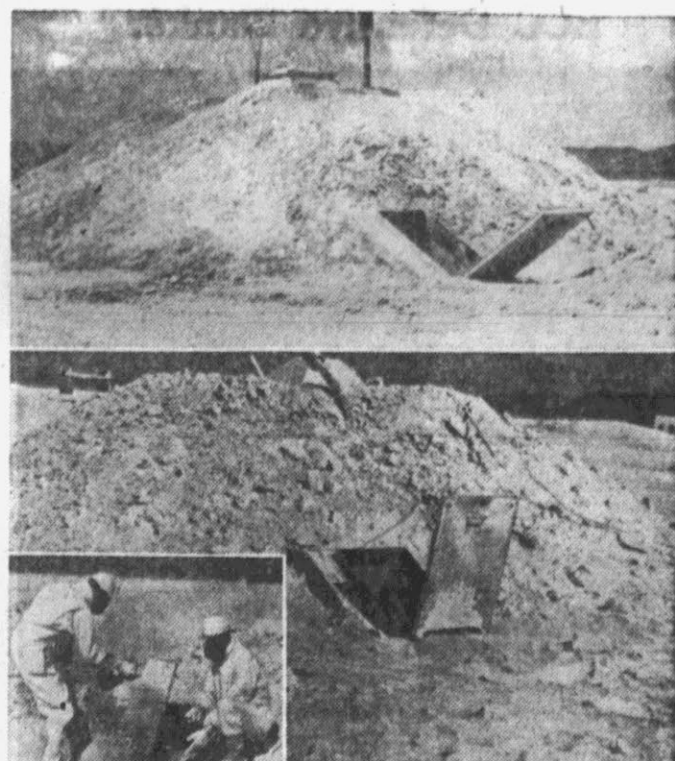

ATOMIC BLAST churns the Nevada desert and rises skyward as "Priscilla" shot of Operation Plumbbob, the current series of atomic tests, hurls tremendous forces against a new "ghost town" of shelter structures built as possible prototypes for future blast-resistant buildings and shelters in the more vital target areas.

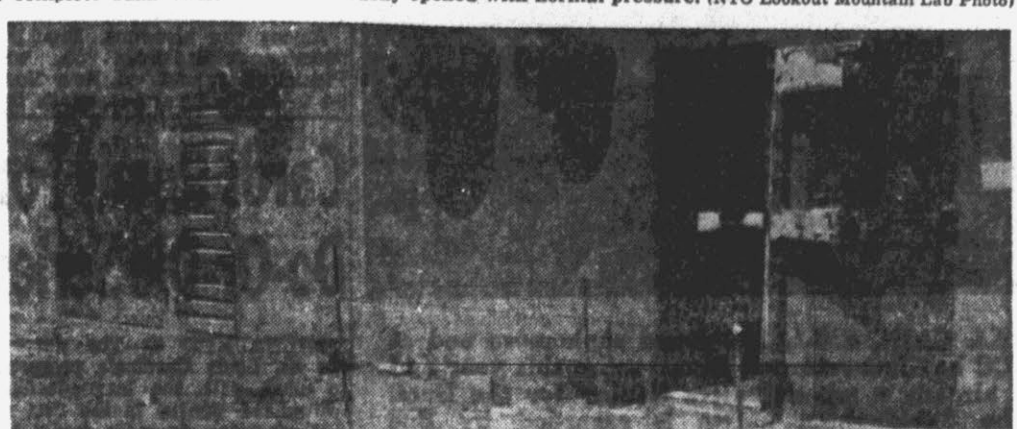

AUTO ENTRANCE ramp burrows inconspicuously into the desert as it leads down to a dual-purpose underground shelter and garage at the Operation Plumbbob atomic tests in Nevada. Lower photo shows how the A-bomb blast crumbled part of the concrete retaining wall but failed to block the entrance. To the right of the crumbled wall is the entrance, closed by a 100-ton, four-foot-thick reinforced concrete blast door (inset), which was undamaged.

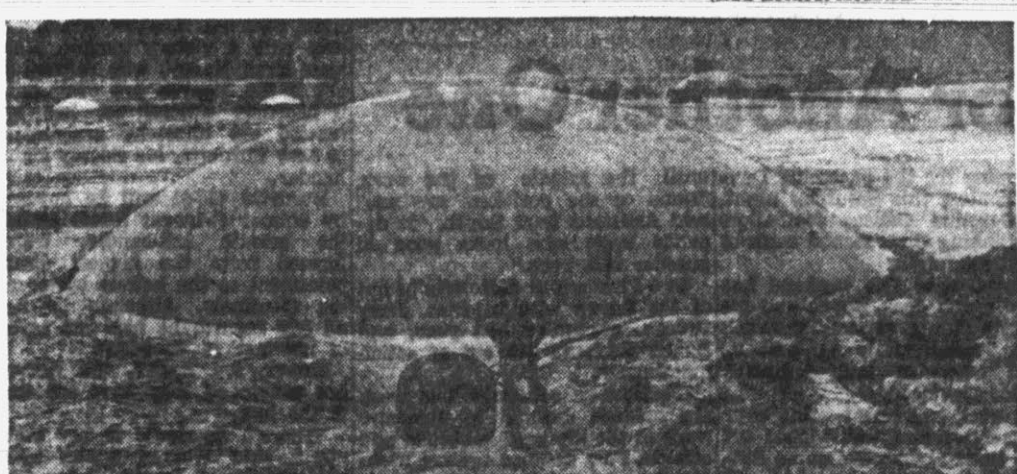

EFFECTS OF STEEL reinforcement are shown clearly in these wall panels tested under high pressure during the current atomic tests in Nevada. The eight-inch brick wall at left was unreinforced, while the other brick and tile walls of the same thickness were reinforced with quarter-inch steel rods, and survived the atomic blast intact. A 26 x 32-foot windowless brick structure, adaptable as a school or utility shelter, also was undamaged even though it was exposed to blast pressures five times those for which a house is normally built.

HOME SHELTER of reinforced concrete (top) at the Operation Plumbbob atomic tests in Nevada withstood a blast pressure of some 65 pounds per square inch (bottom) with damage only to vent pipes (the average house can withstand a pressure of about one pound per square inch). The shelter, which could accommodate about six persons, was covered with 5 1/2 feet of earth for near-complete protection against initial radiation in blast areas. When specially-dressed radiological monitors (inset) entered the area after the A-blast, they found the steel plate door undamaged and easily opened with normal pressure. (ATO Lookout Mountain Lab Photo)

FIVE DOORS to nowhere are set in a test structure at the Nevada atomic test site to measure the blast resistance of various kinds of common building materials. Only the hollow plywood door (second from right) was blasted from its frame at high pressure. Other doors (left to right) were made of solid plywood, wood planking, and two kinds of steel shapes. Circular objects on the wall are anti-blast valves for automatically closing ventilation openings in case of a nuclear blast. (ATO Lookout Mountain Lab Photo)

DOMES SHELTERS, a new design whose low cost and easy construction would adapt it to mass production, were tested at the Operation Plumbbob atomic tests in Nevada at pressures from 20 to 70 times those which a house is normally built to withstand. The 50-foot-diameter shelters may be seen before the blast in the upper photo. The lower photo shows one of the domes which was deliberately tested at a pressure so great that it would fail, so its weaker points could be studied. (ATO Lookout Mountain Lab Photo)

Tense Haiti Awaits Count Of Nat'l Election Ballots

PORT AU PRINCE, Haiti (AP)—Haiti today tensely awaited the counting of ballots in yesterday's national election, hopeful that whoever becomes president can bring peace to this land of turmoil.

But even as the counting began, partisans of ex-Sen. Louis Duvalier threatened to burn down Port au Prince if he is defeated for the presidency.

Both Dejeu and his bitter political enemy Dr. Francois Duvalier claimed victory in the election of a president for the next six years.

A third candidate, Clement Jumeau, called on voters to boycott the election. He charged there was fraud.

The Ministry of Justice announced from a million to 1,300,000 of Haiti's 1,600,000 eligible voters cast ballots. This would indicate few heeded Jumeau's call.

Women were eligible to vote for the first time.

For all the violence that has plagued Haiti since last December, when the first of a succession of five governments was heaved out, the voting was peaceful.

Provisional President Antonio Kebreau said there was only one fatality. A soldier shot down a voter who attacked him in the southern town of Jacmel. Minor incidents were reported at two other points.

Kebreau, who seized power June 14 as head of a three-man military junta, maintained order with 2,500 well-armed soldiers and police.

First results are expected to be known this afternoon. No definite trend will be available before Wednesday due to long delays in reporting tabulations to Port au Prince.

Duvalier, 48, a Negro doctor, pledged honesty in government. He said he would seek U.S. and U.N. aid in developing the nation's agricultural and nat al resources if elected.

Duvalier charged that supporters of Dejeu were using "the sum of money to buy votes."

Partisans of Dejeu reiterated charges that the military junta had rigged the election for Duvalier.

Dejeu, 61, is a mulatto plantation owner. He promised economic and industrial progress. He said he already had "lined up" 50 million dollars in U.S. capital to aid this impoverished country.

The election was unique in that its result in fact is being decided by fingerprints. Seventy-six per cent of eligible voters were illiterate.

ng clerks clipped the nails of the little finger of the right hand of each voter after he dipped the finger in indelible ink and marked his ballot. This was to prevent anyone from voting twice.

One Man Dies In Plane Accident

ALAMEDA, Calif. (AP)—One crew man was killed and two others injured yesterday when a Navy twin-engine patrol bomber, searching for a downed jet plane, crashed near the top of 9,977-foot Mt. Desatoya in central Nevada.

The P2V bomber with nine men aboard was looking for Lt. Richard Lee Clement of Atlanta, Ga., who vanished Thursday in the same area in an F2H Banshee jet fighter.

The Navy said the bomber pilot thought he saw a cloth on a bush near U.S. Highway 50—perhaps a parachute—and dropped low to leave a flare so 70 other planes could locate the spot. He pulled over the nearest ridge only to be confronted with a still higher crest.

The Navy said he made a skid crash landing just short of the brink of a 300-foot cliff. The eight survivors climbed out and discovered one man missing. They were dashing back to the crumpled plane when it exploded and burned.

The cloth on the bush turned out to be just an old rag, the Navy said.

The names of the crewmen were withheld.

Unruly Children May Have Injury

DALLAS (AP)—Dr. Fred M. Taylor, a Houston, Tex., child specialist, said yesterday parents should be sure unruly children don't have subtle brain injuries before they reach for the rod. "An outstanding inability to be quiet, impulsive loudness, short attention span and striking shifts are typical behavior manifestations of the injured children," he said in an interview.

He said the injury could have been inflicted by a bad trauma in the head, premature birth, a brain infection or other ways.

Survives Shock Of 7,600 Volts

DENVER (AP)—Gretta Bohlmann, 9, got up and walked away yesterday from a 7,600-volt shock, three times that used in electric chairs. She is under treatment at Porter Hospital today for burns of the left hand and arm, chest, stomach and thigh.

Restaurant operator Phillip Frye said he found Gretta walking away after she suffered the jolt in a high-voltage shed at a shopping center where she brushed against a transformer. Frye went to investigate after the electricity went off at his cafe.

Traffic Dispute Ends In Gunfire

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP)—A traffic right-of-way argument ended in gunfire in a shopping center parking lot yesterday.

Larry Souza, 20, was shot in the leg. Edwin Merle Smith, 36, was arrested on a charge of assault with a deadly weapon.

Smith, an electronics engineer, told police he was backing out of a parking space when Souza drove by. The two cars narrowly missed colliding, and the dispute was on. Charles D. Davis, a witness, faintly when he saw the shooting. He was taken to Emergency Hospital for treatment of a bump on the head.

FILIBUSTER ENDED LYNCHBURG, Va. (AP)—Shortly before morning services a bluejay flew into Memorial Methodist Church here, perched on a chandelier and noisily awaited the sermon. Fearing a vocal contest between bird and minister, church members called police. Officer N. C. Dowdy knocked the bird from his perch with a 22 without damaging the chandelier.

Maurice Chevalier At Last Looks To Retiring

By BOB THOMAS HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Maurice Chevalier announced details today of his plan to stage a farewell tour and then end his career.

Here for his first Hollywood movie in 22 years, the famed Frenchman said this is how he'll do it.

"As soon as I finish making 'Gai,' I will prepare for a farewell tour. This will be the epitome of the one-man show. I will have no orchestra, not even a piano on the stage. I will sing my songs with tape recordings for the background."

"I have already tried this show out in Switzerland in the French language. Now I will put it into English and break in the show in Scandinavia."

"If the show is well received, then I would take it to London for a stand. If people like it there, I would like to bring it to Hollywood to play just for the pros, perhaps in a little theater off Vine Street. Then I would play it in San Francisco and Boston and a few weeks in New York."

"That would be the end of my career as a live entertainer."

He said he would then make a few pictures in Hollywood and then retire.

I reminded him that Sir Harry

Lauder and other great stars had many farewell tours.

"Ah, yes," he said, "but Harry could not appear before live audiences. He had no other field. I do."

"I think it is time I quit. After 33 years. Now I am 69 years old—not far from 70. I am pretty far along. Either I will have to keep topping myself or I have to start doing something new."

He is quitting as a live entertainer, he said, because he can no longer top himself. What can he do beyond an absolutely one-man show?

But films are another matter, and he hopes to show something new to the movie makers. His first big step was "Love in the Afternoon," in which the straw hat, just underlip and others Chevalier trade marks were missing. He sang no songs and played the father of a full-grown girl, Audrey Hepburn.

"I hope this will open up a whole new field for me," said Chevalier.

His last film in Hollywood was "Polies Bergeres" which he made on a loanout to Darryl Zanuck in 1935.

North and South Dakota separated in 1889, each becoming a state.

WEST END CIRCLE GREENVILLE, N. C.

The Sports Reflector

By BILLY ARNOLD

This past weekend was chock full of upsets on the football scene. State made it rough for Jim Tatum fans by running over his UNC gridders, 7-0. Lenoir Rhyne, undefeated for two years finally got whipped, 13-6, by Wofford. On the local scene, Ayden trampled a highly-favored Robersonville 19-0 and winless Greenville defeated Kinston, 6-0.

Of course, it wasn't a complete bust for the odds-makers; Oklahoma made them look good with a 26-0 job of crushing Pittsburgh and Duke came through with a 26-14 win over South Carolina and Texas and Florida State won as scheduled.

DESIRES IS PAYING OFF
Close to home, here, one can find a sort of connection between the two local upsets this weekend. The Greenville-Kinston upset and the Ayden-Robersonville game are on different levels and many, many factors make them alien to each other by comparison, but there is one main thread that ties them together.

Both Ayden and Greenville, picked to lose this weekend, attribute their success to one thing: love of the game and the sheer desire to play. At the first of the season, Ayden Coach Stuart Tripp was not enthusiastic about the outlook for his Tornadoes. But he did seem pleased with the aspect of having a crew that enjoyed playing football for football's sake. They were a young, green, but enthusiastic group and that—it seems—is what paid off Friday night against Robersonville.

Of course, Tommy Edwards helped a heck of a lot. The stocky Ayden fullback did all the Tornado scoring, three touchdowns and an extra point. But sheer determination and love of the game was a big factor.

PHILLIPS IS HAPPY, TOO
Coach Bud Phillips was delighted with his Greenville Phantoms, too. He placed all the credit for his club's 6-0 win over Kinston on the fact that "the boys played their hearts out all the way through the game." Just how a coach can instill that desire and love of football in a team is something that is wanted by every coach and achieved by few. Phillips has managed to put that new life into Greenville football.

The change in apparent. Followers of Phantom football have noticed it. Perhaps it does not assure victory in each battle, but the obvious fact that there is a new life, a new spirit at GHS is a beautiful thing to watch.

Against Goldsboro, three weeks ago, the G-Men had it. They were whipped 25-0, but the steam and drive was present and Phillips was happy. Two weeks ago, the desire to play led the Phantoms to a clean-cut and decisive victory over Jacksonville—even though they came out on the short end of a 13-6 score. Friday night, it paid off. Greenville fans who would normally shrug off at the not-too-good 1-2 Phantom record are happy with the team's play. There is something about a team of scrappy youngsters, no matter how small and outclassed they may be, that captures the imagination and respect of the fans.

That old adage "It's no who wins but how you play the game," always seemed a little hollow to us before. Now, it's beginning to make sense.

Setback Handed To Lenoir Rhyne
By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
"O' well. The thing is . . . we got beaten by a fine ball club. We played well, and we have nothing to be ashamed of."
That was how Clarence Stasavich, Lenoir Rhyne football coach, took his first defeat in a 21-game streak that stretched over three seasons.

The Bears' handsome record was splintered 13-6 Saturday by the Wofford Terriers, the kings of South Carolina's Little Three. The saddened Bears have a crack at another South Carolina team this weekend when they play Presbyterian at Rock Hill, S.C.

In other North State Conference games, East Tennessee defeated Appalachian 20-7 and Western Carolina lost to Carson-Newman 19-6 on Saturday night. Davidson trimmed Catawba 26-7 Friday.

Games coming on this weekend match Elon and Guilford at Greensboro Saturday. Western Carolina goes to Boone to meet Appalachian. Catawba goes to Newberry, S.C. and East Carolina plays host to Davidson.

The feature game of the conference last weekend was definitely the Wofford-Lenoir-Rhyne scrap, touted as a battle between the two top small-college powers of the Carolinas.

The Bears started off with a bang. Tailback Bill Ackard grabbed the opening kick-off and ran 79 yards to the Terrier 10 before Charlie Bradshaw nailed from behind.

But the Wofford line dug in and yielded only four yards in as many downs.

Many observers thought that took the heart out of the Bears. Wofford Coach Conley Sndow said:

"I thought that was very important. It was a crucial series of downs, but we held them. It had a direct bearing on the game."

Lenoir Rhyne coach Stasavich did not agree. He said:

"I don't think so. They're too good a ball club to let one touchdown bother them."

"I have been watching Wofford clubs for five years, and I believe this one is the finest."

The Bears did score first anyhow, but the Terriers roared back and evened the score just 11 seconds before the half ended. The touchdown was thanks to the Terrier passing pair, quarterback Charlie Bradshaw and end Jerry Richardson. The two combined again to make a final touchdown on a 39-yard play in the last two minutes of the game.

That's the right word, class. Those boys have been up against teams like Navy and Georgia Tech and Pitt and it shows all over them.

"We played the first half according to plan, but we failed to cash our opportunities in the second half, and that's all Duke needed. They put the pressure on us immediately and their power grew and grew and grew."

"We're pulling for them to go the way," Giese continued.

Both teams scored in the second period. South Carolina first on an 80-yard drive climaxed with halfback King Dixon's three-yard scoring burst. Duke recovered a South Carolina fumble on the Gamecock 25 with quarterback Pryor Miller going over from the one seven plays later.

Duke went ahead in the third period on George Outrow's seven-yard run, then added two more TD's in the last period when quarterback Bob Brodhead plunged over from the one and speedy Wray Carlton went 12 yards for the last.

South Carolina scored in the final period when halfback Heyward King passed to Carroll McClain on a play covering 55 yards.

Duke Coach Bill Murray said the Blue Devils won "because we outgrew South Carolina and I feel we will be better by next year."

Quarterback Frank Cackovic turned in a brilliant 50-yard run before he was pulled down on North Carolina's 22. A 15 yard penalty against the Tar Heels moved the ball to the five and half-back Dick Hunter dashed over from there to give North Carolina State its winning margin.

Earle Edwards, the Wolfpack coach, commented, "Our line beat their line and I thought that was it. The game was not well played. Our defense was better than last year but we still made a lot of errors."

"We lost to a fine football team," said North Carolina Coach Jim Tatum. He said he thought the Tar Heels played too cautiously.

"That was my reason for telling them to run the ball three times on fourth down. I knew if we made it that it would give them confidence and open up our offense."

For the Tar Heels it was their 12th straight defeat during a three-season span, including three forfeited games last year because of an ineligible player.

"We've got to get encouraged for the future. I feel we will be better by next mid-season if the morale of the team doesn't falter," Tatum observed.

Despite a poor 2-7-1 season last year, Maryland gained some measure of respect in its loss to powerful Texas A & M. Coach Tommy Mont predicted Maryland "will be a good team before the season is over."

Jackie Lewis scored one Terp touchdown and Howie Dare the other, but the Aggies, who scored early, blocked one Terp conversion try and got two last quarter touchdowns, proved too much.

West Virginia used a 62-yard pass play from quarterback Mickey Trimark to halfback Ralph Anastasio to jump ahead of Virginia.

But the Cavaliers came back strong in the final quarter, driving 80 yards in 10 plays with quarterback Nelson Yarbrough going over from the half-foot line.

Virginia didn't let up, and had pushed to the West Virginia two when the game ended.

Clemson Coach Frank Howard said he was disappointed in the Tigers' rout of Presbyterian. "It wasn't even a good workout," he moaned. "Soph's scored six of the 10 touchdowns and the Tigers scored every time they got the ball, with two exceptions. The game was the last of the series."

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Vic Seixas and Althea Gibson won their final matches handily to become the singles champions of the 31st annual Pacific Southwest tennis tournament.

Seixas, 34-year-old Davis Cupper from Philadelphia, downed Gilbert Shea, unseeded Los Angeles player, 9-7, 6-3, 6-4 yesterday.

Miss Gibson, of New York City, won from Louise Brough, Beverly Hills, Calif., 6-3, 6-1. It was like a replay of their recent U.S. National finals at Forest Hills, when Miss Gibson won.

It was his third Southwest title for Seixas, who won previously in 1952 and 1954.

BANK-LOOTER
SPARTANBURG, S.C. (AP)—Police were suspicious of a man who showed up here loaded with pennies to pay a $100 fine. Desk Sgt. Bill Green asked, "did you rob a piggy bank?" "No sir," came the reply. "Robbed two piggy banks."

from Joey Jay after walking a couple of pinch hitters with one out.

The Braves were behind right up to the ninth when Eddie Mathews hit a home run to tie it. Then Hurricane Bob Hazle bashed another homer in the 10th and the ball game was over.

It took a six-run uprising in the seventh by the Cards to cut down Cincinnati. Still, the Redlegs weren't finished and they began to wake up again in the eighth, only to have relief pitcher Bill Muffett choke them off.

Murtaugh Signs As Manager Of Pittsburgh Club

PITTSBURGH (AP)—Danny Murtaugh who, as acting manager put new life into the Pittsburgh Pirates after the midseason firing of Bobby Bragan, was named manager today for the 1958 season.

The announcement of Murtaugh's appointment was made at a morning news conference called by the general manager, Joe L. Brown. Terms of the one-year contract were not disclosed.

Murtaugh succeeded Bragan Aug. 3 after Brown dismissed the fiery skipper for what he called the "general welfare of the club."

The genial 39-year-old Irishman accepted the managerial post for the balance of the season with the understanding it was only temporary.

Since Bragan's dismissal, the Pirates have been playing nearly 500 ball and the pitching corps, especially Bob Friend and Ronnie Kline, seemed to gain new confidence after a dismal start.

"Someone suggested to me that Danny Murtaugh should get a chance to manage the 1958 club. The thought never entered my mind," Brown said. "I had no thought he would be manager in 1958. He will be."

"Murtaugh has matured as manager since our first association in 1954. In 45 games since he took over from Bragan he has handled the club exceedingly well."

Murtaugh was named a Pirate coach in 1956 after a four-year managerial stint in the minors with New Orleans and Charleston.

He began his major league playing career with the Philadelphia Phillies in 1941, spent part of the 1947 season with the Boston Braves and then was traded to the Pirates.

Murtaugh lives in Chester, Pa., during the off season. He started his baseball career in 1937 with Cambridge, Md., in the Eastern Shore League with stops at Rochester, Columbus and Houston before breaking into the majors.

Only Formality Remains For Crowning Yankees As Braves Face Last Hurdle

By ED CORRIGAN
The Associated Press
Only the formalities of crowning the New York Yankees kingpins of the American League and the Milwaukee Braves rulers of the National League remained to be taken care of today.

These details could be settled to-night when the Chicago White Sox play Kansas City and the Braves meet St. Louis.

The Yankees assured themselves of at least a tie for the AL flag yesterday when they whipped the Boston Red Sox.

If the Cards lose one of the three-game set with the Braves, they can start counting their second-place money.

The White Sox kept their faint hope alive yesterday by stopping the Cleveland Indians 9-5.

The Braves clubbed the Chicago Cubs 9-7, but the Cards stayed with them by halting Cincinnati 7-5.

Among the also-rans, Brooklyn defeated Philadelphia 7-3, and Pittsburgh vanquished New York 5-1 in the National League. In the American, Baltimore edged Washington 6-5, and Kansas City won a double-header from Detroit 4-3 and 2-1.

The Yanks walked to their victory over Boston. Four of their five runs were forced in through walks. Until the sixth inning, it was a close ball game.

Ted Williams had hit a home run in the fourth—the first hit of the game—and the Yanks had tied it in the fifth. Then, with two out in the sixth, Tony Kubek and Jerry Lumpe singled.

Red Sox starter Dave Sisler—who had a 5-0 lifetime record against the Yanks—suddenly lost all semblance of control. He walked in succession, Enos Slaughter, Joe Collins, Hank Bauer and Gil McDougald, forcing in three runs.

Along came George Susce and issued a pass to Mickey Mantle, forcing in the fourth run. Yogi Berra grounded out to end the parade.

Williams finished his day's chores with a 383 batting average, which virtually assures him of the batting championship. Mantle went hitless in three trips to the plate and his mark dipped to .365.

The White Sox, Braves and Cards won their games the hard way.

The Sox presented Billy Pierce with his 20th victory, but the little left-hander slipped in the back door. He was behind 3-2 when he was lifted for a pinch hitter in the sixth. The Sox went on to score four runs in that inning, so Pierce got credit for the game.

The Braves employed half a dozen pitchers against the pesky Cubs and had to overcome deficits of four and three runs. Rookie Don McMahon, fifth of the parade, got credit for the triumph, although he needed help from Joey Jay after walking a couple of pinch hitters with one out.

The Braves were behind right up to the ninth when Eddie Mathews hit a home run to tie it. Then Hurricane Bob Hazle bashed another homer in the 10th and the ball game was over.

It took a six-run uprising in the seventh by the Cards to cut down Cincinnati. Still, the Redlegs weren't finished and they began to wake up again in the eighth, only to have relief pitcher Bill Muffett choke them off.

Murtaugh Signs As Manager Of Pittsburgh Club

PITTSBURGH (AP)—Danny Murtaugh who, as acting manager put new life into the Pittsburgh Pirates after the midseason firing of Bobby Bragan, was named manager today for the 1958 season.

The announcement of Murtaugh's appointment was made at a morning news conference called by the general manager, Joe L. Brown. Terms of the one-year contract were not disclosed.

Murtaugh succeeded Bragan Aug. 3 after Brown dismissed the fiery skipper for what he called the "general welfare of the club."

The genial 39-year-old Irishman accepted the managerial post for the balance of the season with the understanding it was only temporary.

Since Bragan's dismissal, the Pirates have been playing nearly 500 ball and the pitching corps, especially Bob Friend and Ronnie Kline, seemed to gain new confidence after a dismal start.

"Someone suggested to me that Danny Murtaugh should get a chance to manage the 1958 club. The thought never entered my mind," Brown said. "I had no thought he would be manager in 1958. He will be."

"Murtaugh has matured as manager since our first association in 1954. In 45 games since he took over from Bragan he has handled the club exceedingly well."

Murtaugh was named a Pirate coach in 1956 after a four-year managerial stint in the minors with New Orleans and Charleston.

He began his major league playing career with the Philadelphia Phillies in 1941, spent part of the 1947 season with the Boston Braves and then was traded to the Pirates.

Murtaugh lives in Chester, Pa., during the off season. He started his baseball career in 1937 with Cambridge, Md., in the Eastern Shore League with stops at Rochester, Columbus and Houston before breaking into the majors.

The Lonely Man

Deborah Vail felt sick and dizzy, unable to hold up her head. She thought she was going to faint. By the time the vertigo passed and she could see and think again, Scobie was lying on the ground and Andrew Garvin stood over him, livid with fury. Staggering up, Deborah walked unsteadily to Andrew and clutched his arm.

"Take me away!" she begged. "I've got to get away from here." They could hear the frenzied barking of the black dog chained to Scobie's shack. Andrew glowered at Scobie lying supine at his feet. Deborah was afraid that if he grappled with the brute again he would not stop short of killing him.

"By God, I ought to—" "Don't hit him again," said Deborah brokenly. "He hasn't hurt me. I'm only frightened."

Looking her up and down, Andrew saw that she could stand no more of this. Putting an arm around her, he led her to where his car stood by the gate he had smashed down in his haste to come to her aid.

He helped her in, climbed in beside her and drove off. But Deborah would not let him drive her home.

"I don't want to frighten Joyce," she said. "My car is not far off down this lane. If you'll take me to it and park there for a little while, and let me smoke a cigarette, I'll get my nerve back. I'll be all right."

"What on earth were you doing at Scobie's place?" asked Andrew. "Didn't I warn you?"

"Do you mind if we don't talk?" "I try to explain myself. I'll burst into tears. Tell yourself I'm a stubborn fool and ought to be locked up for my own good. It's perfectly true but please don't say it out loud. All I want to do is sit, breathe, and realize that I'm alive."

"If I hadn't happened to be passing," said Andrew, shaking his head. Deborah refused to think what might have occurred if he hadn't happened to be passing. It was too dreadful to contemplate. Now that the danger was past she was thinking that Scobie held the answer to the murder of Andrew's wife. Judging by Scobie's savage resentment, the secret he was hiding must be a tremendous one.

Next morning, the Monteiths were breakfasting early to enjoy the meal on their own. While fond of their visitor, the pleasure they took in her company somehow added spice to their moments alone. Joyce helped herself to a crisp wafer of bacon from her husband's plate. In her other hand was a triangular wedge of his hot buttered toast. She nibbled alternately on the two. In theory, she was on a diet and never took anything except coffee in the morning. In practice, she cooked Ewan rather more breakfast than he could eat and saw that none of it was wasted.

"I'm worried about Deborah," said Joyce.

Ewan glanced up from the headlines of his morning newspaper with a humorous lift of an eyebrow.

"You've been worried about her since the day she came."

"I wish she had come some other time," Joyce responded.

"Not now. Oh, I know I couldn't wait to see her. I looked forward for weeks to her coming. She isn't a bit of trouble and I do love her."

There was no need to go on. They both knew what she meant. It worried her to know that her cousin was becoming more and more deeply involved with Andrew Garvin. To her mind it made little difference whether Andrew was tried and convicted, tried and acquitted, or left forever under suspicion. Whatever happened, she could not see a future in which he could lead a normal life. She felt that involvement with him must spell unhappiness for any woman.

If only Deborah had come on her visit before the murder; or long enough after so that it had ceased to be an avid topic of conversation. If only Deborah hadn't met Andrew on the very first night. Joyce sighed, wishing it were possible to keep Deborah from seeing the man, thinking of him, hearing about him.

But wherever the two of them went they heard him spoken of. Only yesterday, over mid-morning coffee at the cafe, Joyce had sensed Deborah stiffening when they overheard a woman at a nearby table talking volubly to her friend. The other day, she was saying, she had driven over to a local beauty spot, a hillside with a celebrated view and, would you believe it?—there was Andrew Garvin, large as life and bold as brass, with his easel and his paints. You'd think he'd keep out of the way of decent folk...

Joyce was reminded of something.

"Deborah came in yesterday with a torn stocking," Joyce said to Ewan, reaching for another scrap of bacon.

"Well, you're always saying how quickly they wear out."

"This wasn't a run. It was a gaping hole in the knee. Something had happened but she wouldn't tell me what. It's worrying me."

Her husband offered her no comfort.

"I won't be home for tea," Ewan said, rising and folding the newspaper. "Henderson is ill and I've promised to pop up and see him."

He was speaking of a fellow teacher at the school. "I'm borrowing David's car since he won't be using it."

"I wish you wouldn't," said Joyce, in a curiously fretful tone. Ewan stared at her. "Why not? You know I always drive carefully."

"It isn't that."

"Then what is it?"

"I don't know," said Joyce. "But she knew very well. Later, she felt disturbed and uneasy every time she saw Ewan, in a tweed jacket and slacks, getting in or out of the M.G.A."

"Nerves, I suppose," she said. He patted her shoulder, kissed her cheek, gathered up an armful of books, and went out through the back door. Why did her heart sink momentarily, hearing him backing the car out of the coach-house and revving it in the drive? It was only an ordinary sports car. There were thousands of them.

Soon afterwards Joyce's cheek was kissed again, this time by Deborah who came down looking young and fresh, in a gray suit with a flamboyant foulard scarf. A letter postmarked "Glasgow" lay by her plate.

"From a London friend," she explained after skimming through it. "She's playing second lead in a touring company of 'One More Spring.' She wants me to come up and see her. I suppose I could go today. We haven't anything on, have we?"

"I hadn't planned anything," said Joyce, pondering briefly whether it would be a good idea for Deborah to go off on her own to Glasgow, and deciding quickly that it would.

"Supposing I take a small case and stay overnight? I'll be back about tea-time tomorrow."

Joyce nodded emphatically. It would do Deborah good to get out of Garnock, if only for a day and a night. In Glasgow there would be no nagging reminders of Andrew Garvin, no reason for her to risk getting into trouble...

Deborah is going to find that a duplicate of the murder weapon can be dangerous in more than one way. Continue The Lonely Man here tomorrow.

Flu Has Reached Epidemic Stage

TUSCALOOSA, Ala. (AP)—An outbreak of flu has reached epidemic proportions at the University of Alabama.

Dr. James B. McLester, director of the Student Health Service, yesterday said tests are being conducted to determine whether it is Asian flu.

McLester said 56 patients were admitted to the university hospital at the peak last week. Many more students were treated.

A drop in the number of cases was reported over the weekend.

Crippled Prince Is Now Improved

LAUSANNE, Switzerland (AP) — Remember Prince Masbur, the little Saudi Arabian who touched the hearts of many Americans last winter?

An aide to his father King Saud says the 4-year-old prince has greatly improved under treatment for partial paralysis.

The solemn boy, crippled in an arm and a leg, went with King Saud to Washington last February and had diagnostic checks at Walter Reed Hospital. Later President Eisenhower sent three Army men, experts in physical therapy, to Saudi Arabia. After 28 days in Saud's kingdom they reported Masbur definitely improved. Now a spokesman for Saud says: "Thanks to his excellent treatment, the prince has shown a tremendous improvement."

King Saud has been taking medical treatments and vacationing in Germany and Switzerland. Prince Masbur is now with him on this trip. Two other young sons are along.

Basel, Switzerland, which is 500 miles from the sea up the Rhine River, takes in and moves out about 4 million tons of overseas ship cargo each year.

Principal Held After Paddlings

DECATUR, Ill. (AP)—The principal of Lakeview High School was held briefly in Macon County Jail yesterday on assault and battery charges in connection with the paddling of two students.

The principal, David W. Beggs III, was released on two sheriff's bonds totaling $2,000 and ordered to appear before Justice of the Peace Wayne E. Ellis today.

Mothers of the two students, Mrs. Bertha Kwasny and Mrs. Gladys Lindsey, charged Beggs, 36, with administering undue punishment. Mrs. Kwasny said her son told her the reason for the punishment was that they had taken clothing from another boy's school locker without permission.

Police said Mrs. Kwasny told them her son Walter, 13, had been hit eight times with a wooden paddle. Ellis, uncle of Larry Lindsey, 15, said the Lindsey boy had been hit 18 times with the same paddle.

Neither parent objected to the punishment, and both boys said they agreed the punishment was justified. However, the boys and their mothers objected to the way in which the punishment was administered and said it was too severe.

Beggs, who was hired as principal at the Decatur school June 11, declined to discuss the nature of the offense. However, he said: "Their actions were obviously serious enough to demand forceful and unquestionable punishment. In the best interest of general school discipline and to reprimand the students in question I took disciplinary action."

He said both boys had previously agreed punishment was justified.

Wolves Beware: Women Armed

BIRMINGHAM, England (AP)—The wolves on Birmingham's dark roads had better beware while the bawling's good.

Female vigilantes are after them.

Mrs. Kelly Osborne, organizer of the unofficial female protective association, says she and her friends got tired of being accosted by arrogant male motorists at night. Here's how she fixes 'em.

"I bought a water pistol last week and have already used it once. One motorist stopped me three times so I whipped out the pistol and let him have it. He shot off like a startled rabbit."

No wonder. The gals' pistols are loaded with a harmless but powerful smelling disinfectant.

Question Nine Marines In Slaying Of Husband

WILMINGTON (AP)—Police were questioning nine Camp Lejeune marines today in the death of Charles E. Sullivan, 23, who died Friday night apparently while defending his wife from a molesting band of 15 men.

Officers, withholding the marines' names, held them in the New Hanover County jail on a technical vagrancy charge as an autopsy got under way to fix the manner of Sullivan's death.

Police were awaiting sufficient improvement in the condition of Mrs. Shirley Hinson Sullivan, reported under doctor's care, to question her.

The sheriff's office, meanwhile, gave this initial account of Sullivan's death at a restaurant between here and Wrightsville Beach.

Sullivan was escorting his wife to an outside restroom when someone grabbed at her dress. The couple fled to their nearby car and Sullivan seized a .22 cal. rifle to hold 15 pursuing men at bay. He apparently was jumped from behind and severely beaten. Someone seized the rifle and fired three or four shots.

The shooting attracted Deputy Sheriff W. B. Bass and Deputy Charles Goodman, who had just stopped their car to investigate why a crowd was milling about the restaurant.

Goodman said he saw several men run from the direction of the shooting across a jammed parking lot.

The deputies also saw a man breaking a rifle against a telephone pole, but he disappeared through the growing crowd as the deputies approached.

Meanwhile, the crowd of 50 to 60 persons stampeded, almost trampling the deputies.

Goodman and Bass then came upon Sullivan's body. It was believed the nine marines had been taken into custody following tips to the police.

Violence Mars Vote In Honduras Sunday

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras (AP)—The Liberals of Dr. Ramon Villeda Morales, the popular "Little Bird" of Honduras' masses, today appeared a landslide winner in yesterday's violence-marred elections.

At least four killings were reported in clashes between political partisans in two provincial towns. Elsewhere voting was orderly and the military junta's promise of a free election appeared fulfilled.

A constitutional assembly chosen in the balloting will meet Oct. 21 to form a new government replacing the junta that has ruled for a year.

The assembly can declare itself a national congress and elect a president. If the Liberals win two thirds of the seats they could hand the presidency to Villeda Morales, former ambassador to Washington. He missed election by a slim margin in 1954.

On the other hand, the assembly could call instead for congressional and presidential elections. Villeda Morales says he prefers this course.

There has been dissension in the Liberal party. Apparently Villeda Morales counts on the people to elect him over any other Liberal who might enter the race.

On the basis of early returns, the Liberals were expected to win about 40 of the assembly's 58 seats.

A Liberal party victory had been expected. Abraham Williams National Reformist leader, and Gen. Tiburcio Carias, former dictator and head of the Nationalists, privately conceded the Liberals would win.

Williams is a presidential aspirant. Carias wants the presidency for his son Gonzalo.

Official reports said four men were killed and nine persons wounded in outbreaks at two small towns.

Two men died and seven persons were wounded in fighting at Vado Ancho, near the Nicaraguan frontier. Liberals, barred from the polls, took control and locked
