

Jubilant Russia Says U.S. Must Revamp Policies

By STERLING SLAPPEY

MOSCOW (AP)—As Russia's earth satellite whirled toward its 40th circuit of the globe today, Pravda predicted the Soviet scientific success will force the United States to revamp some of its foreign policies.

Already, the Soviet Communist party newspaper said, some U.S. senators "are showing signs of hysteria."

In a dispatch from New York, Pravda said the success of the satellite puts before U.S. leaders "the inexorable necessity of peaceful coexistence, cessation of the arms race and renunciation of their cold war policy."

It said U.S. newspapers are showing reluctant but substantial recognition that "in numerous spheres of scientific research the Soviet Union is often equal and sometimes superior to the United States."

Pravda's Monday morning edition carried column after column of reports and comments from abroad on the flight of the first earth satellite. There were dispatches from China, Poland, Bulgaria, West Germany, Czechoslovakia, Romania, Yugoslavia, Britain, France and the United States.

The Soviet newspaper reported with pride that the satellite sped from New York to Moscow in 16 minutes early today (Moscow time). It said the satellite was functioning perfectly. A heavy overcast over the Soviet capital blotted out any chances for the Russians to see the satellite as it passed.

Moscow was jubilant over the scientific success. But it came as no surprise to the Soviet masses.

The Russian people believe Soviet science leads the world. They do not see Western newspapers and magazines, and know little or nothing about scientific development outside the Communist world.

Amid the jubilant newspaper and radio accounts of the first man-made moon circling the earth the Soviet government newspaper Izvestia and several leading scientists announced the next targets in the satellite program.

Soon, they said, will come bigger satellites than the 184-pound sphere now aloft.

In time—the Russians didn't say when—a satellite will be sent up which can be brought back to earth intact and will not burn up when it re-enters denser atmosphere as the Sputnik will.

And then, the statements added, the Russians will dispatch a satellite that will go around the moon before returning to the earth.

The Soviet people generally expect that program will be carried out.

Presumably Soviet scientists already are hard at work on these targets, quietly and in almost complete secrecy, as they worked on the 184-pounder.

Only scant advance information was given out on the first baby moon. The launching came as a surprise.

Every Moscow newspaper now is printing columns of comment from all over the world on the satellite and timetables of the little ball's flight over the cities of the world.

Moscow radio has quoted some details of the mechanism from rocket and jet experts, but performance figures are still a deep secret. There has not been one picture of the orb or of its launching.

Local HD Club Stand Supported

By JIMMY ELLIS
Reflector Staff Writer

Pitt County commissioners voted this morning to give their support to local Home Demonstration Club members who are casting a wary eye at proposed changes in the arrangement of North Carolina's Extension Service.

The commissioners' action came after a visit from a three-woman delegation representing the Pitt County Council of Home Demonstration Clubs. It was the major item of business handled by the commissioners in the morning session of their regular monthly meeting.

Drawing the attention, and subsequent recommendations, from the women and the commissioners, were nine recommendations made by a nine-member advisory committee appointed last fall to study North Carolina's extension service program.

The commissioners' recommendations include:

A protest against the plan to have counties' cash contributions to the Extension Service paid into a central fund;

A protest against changing the title of the Home Demonstration Agent to "Home Economics Agent";

Approval of an idea to change the Farm Agent's title to "Agricultural Agent";

A protest against changing the title of 4-H Club work with boys and girls from "4-H Organization" to "Youth Work";

A protest against cutting down participation of Home Demonstration Agents in club work;

A protest against the committee's questioning of a plan to hire 16 home economics specialists to assist in home demonstration work;

A protest against a proposed reorganization of Extension Service programs on the state, district and county levels;

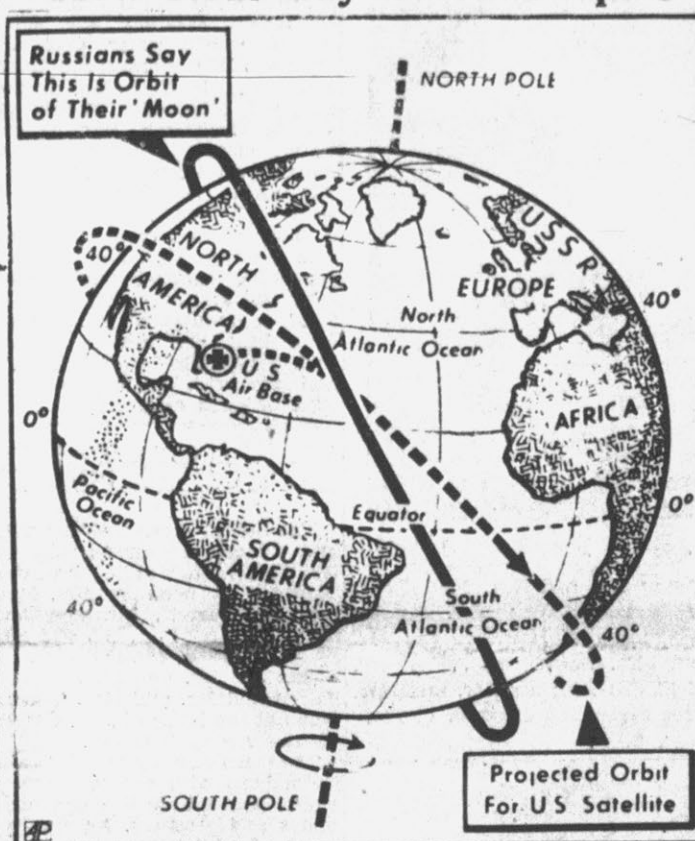

Approval of an idea to place the commissioners' recommendations in the hands of state officials and officials of the Greater University of North Carolina, N. C. State College, the Extension Service, and the Board of Trustees of UNC; and Agreement with a committee recommendation that the Extension Service's agricultural work continue to receive a high percentage of the service's budget, but a protest against de-emphasizing the home demonstration program.

Home Demonstration Club council representatives who appeared before the commissioners were Mrs. Alton Chapman of Grifton, Mrs. Wilbur Worthington of Ay-

ASC Election Is Slated Tomorrow

Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation election of community committees will be held tomorrow, according to George Bellmon, ASC office manager.

Bellmon said polling places will be open from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. Farmers in each community will be electing a community chairman, vice chairman, a committee member and two alternates. They will be chosen in that order according to the number of votes received.

Chairman from each community will meet at the ASC office in Greenville later this month to choose the three-man county committee and two alternates.

Polling places for the various communities are as follows: Ayden, A. town hall; Ayden B. town hall; Beaver Dam, K. M. Crawford's Store; Belvoir, Dupree Bros. Store; Bethel, new town hall; Carolina, Peck Whitehurst Service Station; Chicod, A. Porter's Supply; Chicod B. Grimesland town hall; Chicod C. Elmer Dixon's Store; Chicod D. L. C. Venter's Store; Falkland, town hall; Farmville, town hall; Fountain, town hall; Greenville, A. Howard Forbes Store (House Sta.); Greenville B. court house; Greenville C. court house; Greenville D. Community Pines; Pactolus, Satterthwaite's Store; Swift Creek, A.

Stokes and Lane Store; Winterville, A. town hall; Winterville B. town hall.

Bellmon also released the following revisions in a list of candidates for each community election: In the Chicod A list Linwood Edwards has been dropped and Hugh Mills added. In Carolina Charles A. Forbes has been added. Chicod D. A. G. Warren has been added. Greenville A. J. A. Stanley has been added. In Greenville B. Bob Coggins and F. A. McLawhorn were dropped and B. T. Eastwood and S. A. Moore added. In Greenville C. Marion Mills was added.

In Swift Creek A Van Jones and Wooten Taylor have been added.

Pleven Agrees Try Form Govm't

PARIS (AP)—Rene Pleven agreed today to try to form France's 24th postwar government. Few members of the National Assembly thought he would succeed.

President Rene Coty sent the presidential plane to Brittany for Pleven, who was vacationing at his home there.

American Scientists Near Fix On Orbit Of Satellite; Hope For Share In Secrets

WASHINGTON (AP)—American scientists, reporting headway in efforts to fix the orbit of Russia's high-flying space satellite, hoped today the Soviets will share with them any of nature's secrets it may unlock.

Meanwhile, visual sightings of the Russian baby moon—rocketing along at about 18,000 miles an hour—was announced in Russia and the United States. One American specialist said the Soviet space vehicle, launched Friday, passes over the United States about six times every 24 hours, on a north-south course.

Radio Moscow, in a broadcast for home listeners, said last night the 23-inch space vehicle has already yielded information which it said is "of great scientific value." The broadcast did not say what this information involved.

Some U.S. scientists said the satellite apparently was sending back a coded signal, and they voiced the hope the Russians would let them in on the code, so they can share in any information obtained. One Russian expert said there is no special code in signals coming from the baby moon.

The satellite project is part of the program of the International Geophysical Year. This is a project aimed at learning more about the earth and the universe.

Dr. John P. Hagen, director of the American satellite program, said U.S. plans still call for launching small test vehicles later this fall, with the firing of full-scale 20-inch satellites in the spring. The American satellite is planned to weigh about 22 pounds, compared with the reported 185-pounder the Russians shot into space Friday.

Hagen said the present Soviet satellite appears to be a test vehicle. He said this explains the lack of any advance announcement by the Russians.

Prof. A. A. Blagonravov, a top Soviet satellite specialist who attended an IGY meeting here last week, said the satellite now in flight is not the vehicle Russia had said previously it would launch as part of the IGY program. He said Soviet rocketeers plan to shoot aloft a second sphere "in the nearest future" as an IGY project.

He said all information obtained from its flight will be shared with scientists of other nations.

Blagonravov was asked if the Russians plan to share data they get from the present satellite. He replied that American scientists can obtain very useful information from their observations of it "and they can use this information for the calculations concerning the orbit of it and for the launching of their satellite."

Officials at the Naval Research Laboratory said receiving equipment has been altered at six of the U.S. satellite tracking stations in various parts of North and South America to pick up signals from the Russian sphere. Some information from these installations is being used to help chart the exact route of the Russian satellite.

Hagen said that in a week or so, when the satellite begins making its passes over the United States at twilight, "we can check by optical observations." He said this could be done with binoculars and small telescopes.

At Pasadena, Calif., Dr. W. H. Pickering said scientists at the California Institute of Technology have been recording signals from the Soviet satellite since it was launched.

Pickering, chairman of America's IGY working group on tracking and computation, said the Caltech scientists have learned a great deal about the satellite's orbit which he said "probably is not circular, but slightly elliptical."

He said the sphere's closest approach to the earth may be about 300 miles, "although its average height above the earth is 380 miles."

Blagonravov estimated that the Russian satellite would stay aloft about a month. But Pickering said the sphere probably will have an extremely long life.

Fire Final A-Bomb In Test Series

ATOMIC TEST SITE, Nev. (AP)—The Atomic Energy Commission fired the 24th, and last, explosion of the 1957 test series at 5 a.m. PST today.

Code-named Morgan, the final shot in the Plumbob series was detonated from a balloon tethered 500 feet above the Yucca Flat desert test area.

The fiery flash was visible for a few seconds in Las Vegas, 75 miles away. Observers on Angels Peak, 45 miles from the detonation point, said the fireball lasted 12 to 15 seconds.

The mushroom cloud rose rapidly to 20,000 feet. It was tinged with pink after the brilliant yellow of the flash faded.

The AEC said the Morgan shot energy yield was below nominal or less than the equivalent of 20,000 tons of TNT.

Fifteen aircraft flew data-carrying missions. The AEC said there were no troops participating in the experiment.

The flash was seen in Los Angeles, 290 highway miles southwest, like a momentary sunrise.

Newsmen at Angel's Peak said they didn't feel actual shock but heard a dull thump followed by a rumble lasting about seven seconds.

It was a device designed by the University of California's radiation laboratory at Livermore.

Whether today's atomic blast is the last ever for the Nevada proving grounds is a matter for determination at high levels in Washington, amid international discussions over ending nuclear tests.

The 1957 series started with a tower shot on May 28. The series of 24 included tower, balloon, rocket and underground explosions in a considerable variety of force.

The biggest, a balloon shot July 5, was believed to be in the 60 to 80 kiloton range. The underground shot set off in a tunnel dug into a mesa was small in force, probably in the one to three kiloton range, but was designed to give the earthquake experts valuable data.

'New Design'

LONDON (AP)—The Russians announced today they have successfully exploded a new type hydrogen bomb. The announcement said a "powerful hydrogen device of new design" was tested at a great altitude yesterday.

The announcement was made over Moscow radio while the world was still looking in stunned amazement for the Soviet manmade moon circling the globe.

The emphasis the Soviet announcement put on the "new design" of the latest hydrogen bomb attracted special attention here. And the speed with which the Russians disclosed the explosion—the next day—was significant. Usually they wait—or even keep the tests secret even after they are detected outside the Soviet Union. The last previous reported Soviet nuclear test was Sept. 24.

Superior Court Term Convened

Judge H. Hoyle Sink of Greensboro convened a one-week mixed term of Pitt County Superior Court this morning.

The term is calendared to continue through Thursday with criminal actions predominating. The Pitt County Grand Jury was also called into session by Judge Sink to hear bills of indictment presented by Solicitor Robert D. Rouse Jr. of Farmville.

'Sputnik' Posing Much Confusion

By ALTON L. BLAKESLEE

Associated Press Science Reporter

NEW YORK (AP)—In its third day of life, the Russian moon is creating some trail of confusion concerning three intriguing questions:

Is Sputnik—Russian for earth satellite—making some space studies, such as temperatures or space's shooting stars?

Is it telling about them in a radio code?

Will the U.S.S.R. inform other nations of what Sputnik learns in this maiden voyage into space?

Russia's rocket scientist, Dr. A. A. Blagonravov, now in this country, says Sputnik is only broadcasting radio signals so it can be tracked, and is not studying temperatures, or other events in space. And it's not broadcasting anything in code, he adds.

But in Moscow, a prominent scientist says Sputnik is counting bits by meteorites out in space. The moon would have to report this by some code. One possibility is that, due to language translation difficulties, this scientist was referring to future moons, not to Sputnik the First.

A Moscow broadcast says Sputnik has provided knowledge of "great scientific value," but gives no details. This could refer just to observations of its orbit, giving clues about air density in space, or to knowledge useful in launching and directing future moons into desired orbits.

Some U.S. scientists listening to Sputnik's beeping signals detect changes which they say sound like a code. But they quickly add that this could well be a practice test of a presently meaningless code.

Codes will be essential in any future moons to radio back reports of what is learned in space, since the moons can't land back home.

Dr. Blagonravov yesterday called Sputnik an experimental or test shot, and said it was outside the International Geophysical Year (IGY).

Both nations have agreed to share fully everything their IGY moons learn.

Asked on a TV program NBC-Yough wants to know whether the Russians would share information about Sputnik, he replied:

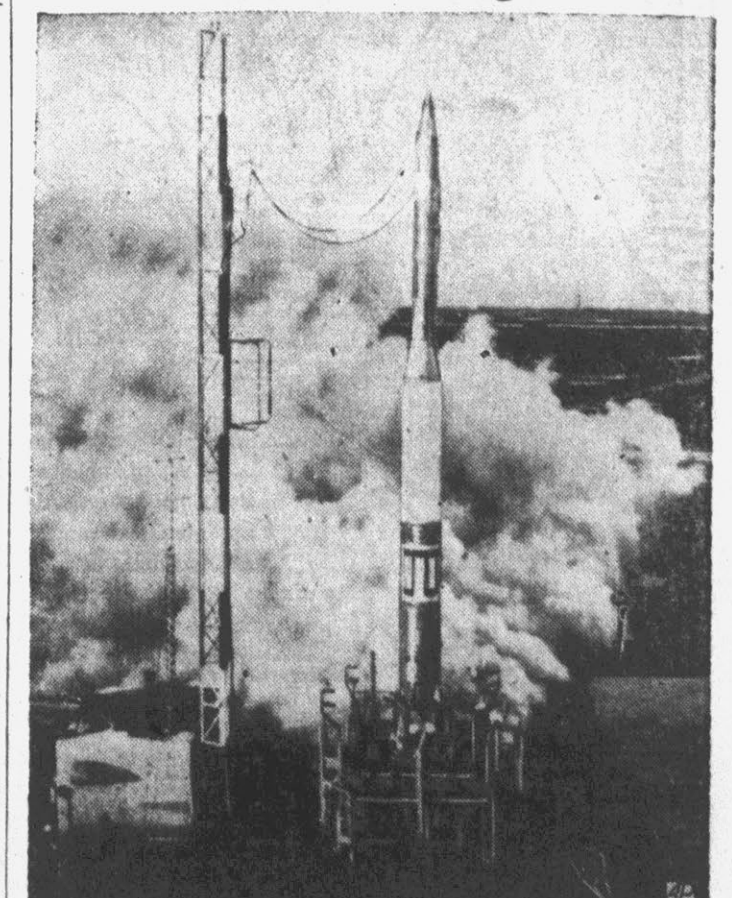

U.S. scientists observing it can learn very useful information for launching their own satellite.

Experiences of Sputnik could help the Russians in subsequent launchings, and the United States with its first one.

Dr. John P. Hagen, director of the American moon project Vanguard, said in a telephone interview that the Soviet radio signal appears to contain a code.

"It could well have no meaning other than to practice a code transmission," he said. "This would be expected. It's heard to tell if it represents real information."

Sheriff Deflated Senator's Version

UNION, S.C. (AP)—Union County Sheriff J. Harold Lamb today said his department has ordered Browning automatic shotguns, which he called standard riot weapons, to bring his equipment up to date.

The sheriff said no sub-machine guns have been ordered.

Last night, State Sen. John C. Long of Union said the county had ordered nine sub-machine guns worth $1,000 and $300 worth of ammunition to "repel any invasion by federal troops or anyone else violating our laws."

Long said he meant county and state laws calling for separation of whites and Negroes in schools and elsewhere.

Gov. Timmerman today had no comment to make on the Union County guns.

Today, Sheriff Lamb issued this statement:

"No sub-machine guns have been purchased.

"They are Browning automatic shotguns to be placed in patrol cars. These guns are similar to guns now in use by law enforcement agencies throughout the United States.

"The adjoining counties, Cherokee and Chester, have the same type guns and I understand that the city of Spartanburg recently ordered similar equipment.

"We have now and have had for a number of years, since the 30s, two sub-machine guns and a gas gun. This kind of equipment in the hands of law enforcement agencies is not unusual.

"I have always been prepared to carry out all the laws of the state and have always been ready to protect the citizens of Union County. I will continue to enforce

Satellite Signal Picked Up Here

Radio signals from Russia's satellite were heard on short wave radio in Greenville for more than an hour last night, but no reports were received here today that anyone in this immediate area actually spotted the man-made moon some 560 miles above the earth.

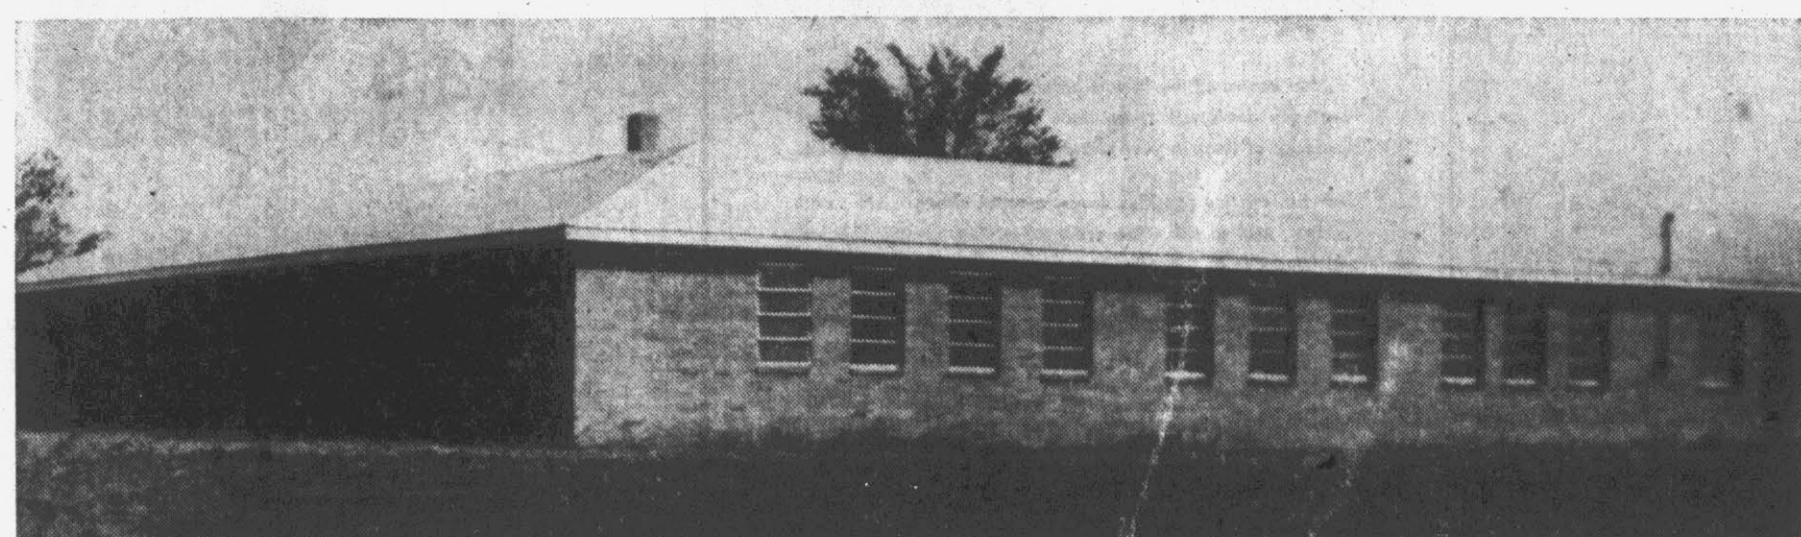

Charles A. White, 504 East Ninth Street, Greenville, said he listened to the satellite's radio signal from 9:30 to 10:30 last night on short wave radio, but was unable to spot the tiny moon with his binoculars.

From information which has been made public by the governments of the United States and Russia, White said, the satellite should have been visible in this area about 10:35 last night.

"I looked for it, but I couldn't see it," White told the Reflector today. "I believe it could have been seen from here if a person had been in a field somewhere where there were no trees or obstructions."

White said he picked up direct broadcasts from Russia in English and Russian concerning the satellite earlier during the evening on his shortwave set. During the broadcast, he added, the Russians relayed radio signals from their satellite. From 9:30 to 10:30, he added, he picked up the signals directly from the satellite on 20 and 40 megacycles.

Cornerstone-Laying Ceremony Held For New Church

ARLINGTON ST. BAPTIST CHURCH—Cornerstone ceremonies were held at the Arlington St. Baptist Church yesterday. Two sections, shown above, have been completed and are now being used for church activities. Future plans call for construction of an additional two sections for the church. (Reflector Photo).

Miss Stokes, Dr. Floyd Marry In Afternoon Ceremony Here

Episcopal wedding vows at St. Paul's Church in Greenville Saturday afternoon at four o'clock united in marriage Miss Helen Stokes and Dr. Benjamin Joseph Floyd.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Carter Stokes Jr. of Greenville and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Jackson Floyd of Raleigh, N.C.

Prior to the ceremony Miss Eva Hodges of Greenville and Miss Helen Ann Ruddle of New York presented a program of wedding music. Among the selections sung by Miss Ruddle were "O Perfect Love," "Entr'acte Me Not To Leave Thee" and "The Lord's Prayer."

On the altar call Miss and seven branched candelabras holding white cathedral candles formed a background for the ceremony.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a gown of candlelight satin featuring a portrait neckline, appliqued with antique Brussels lace. Her gown was fashioned along princess lines with long tapering sleeves and full skirt extending into a cathedral train.

The wedding veil of antique Brussels lace and imported illusion was attached to a Juliet cap of matching lace. She carried a cascade bouquet of white hybrid orchids showered with thalepsois, and a train of antique Brussels lace and imported illusion was attached to a Juliet cap of matching lace. She carried a cascade bouquet of white hybrid orchids showered with thalepsois, and a train of antique Brussels lace and imported illusion was attached to a Juliet cap of matching lace.

Mrs. Henry Abbott Callaway Jr. of Durham was matron of honor. Bridesmaids were Miss Helen Terry Flanagan of New York, Miss Lois Marilyn Dent of Nitro, West Virginia, Miss Cleo Warlick of Raleigh, Mrs. Thomas Nesbitt of Durham, and Miss Olive Meadows Stokes, niece of the bride, of New Bern.

All the attendants were full length gowns of ice blue satin designed along princess lines. The bride's neckline dipped in the back and formed a bow and streamers which extended to the floor. Each wore an ice blue bandeau of ostrich. Long white gloves completed their formal attire. They carried cascade bouquets of purple orchids tied with matching satin ribbon.

Benjamin Jackson Floyd was his son's best man.

Ushers were Randolph Grady Moore of Omaha, Texas, Dr. Henry Abbott Callaway Jr. of Durham, Charles Laughinghouse Stokes of Maury, Richard Carter Stokes III, and John Lee Stokes of Greenville, brothers of the bride.

Mrs. Stokes, mother of the bride, wore a waist length gown of pale blue lace and organza, a blue beaded hat and matching accessories. The bride's grandmother, Mrs. Richard Carter Stokes of Lynchburg, Va., wore a black velvet gown with a beaded necklace and hat to match.

Mrs. Floyd, mother of the bridegroom, wore a beige lace dress, matching lace hat and beige accessories. They each wore white orchid corsages.

Mrs. Floyd was graduated from Duke University, where she was a member of Alpha Delta Pi Sorority. She was presented to North Carolina Society at the Terpsichorean Club Ball in Raleigh in 1933. For the past year she has taught in the city schools of Durham and was a member of the Splinter's Club there.

Dr. Floyd attended Hardin-Simmons University and was graduated from the University of Texas. He received his M. D. degree from the University of Texas Medical Branch where he was a member of Alpha Kappa Kappa Fraternity. He served an internship at Kansas City General Hospital, Mo. and is at present an assistant resident physician in urology at Duke Hospital.

Immediately following the ceremony the bride's parents entertained at a reception at the Greenville Country Club. Mr. and Mrs. Charles Laughinghouse Stokes greeted the guests.

Mr. and Mrs. James Perkins introduced the receiving line composed of Mr. and Mrs. Stokes Jr., Mrs. Stokes Sr., Mr. and Mrs. Floyd, Dr. and Mrs. Floyd, and the bride's attendants. Receiving throughout the club house were Mr. and Mrs. Edward Graham Flanagan, Mrs. James Ernest Hammond, Mrs. Henry Robinson King, Mrs. Thomas Ramey Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Randolph Grady Moore, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Crump Jr., Dr. and Mrs. Robert Palmer Stickley, Robert Palmer Stickley, Mrs. Robert Neubauer, Mr. and Mrs. John Crump, and Mrs. Kenneth Brimm.

A green and white color theme was used throughout the club. At either end of the ballroom the mantels were banked with white chrysanthemums and greenery centered with an arrangement of candles.

The refreshment table was covered with a banquet cloth of satin overlaid with ruffles of tulle and featured a five branched silver candelabra with spargnettes filled with dainty chrysanthemums, gladioli and smilax. Silver trays with filled with bridal cakes, ribbon sandwiches, petite fours, bridal mints and salted nuts.

Champagne punch and frosted coffee were served from large silver punch bowls at either end of the room. Mrs. Letcher Willis, Mrs. Dall Laughinghouse, Mrs. Radford M. Garrett, and Mrs. Allen Johnson assisted by Miss Jean Groves, Mrs. Jake Higgs, Mrs. Lawrence Watts, Miss Helen Ann Ruddle, and Miss Ann Wilkerson.

An Italian lace tablecloth covered the bride's table which featured a four tiered wedding cake decorated with wedding bells holding lilies-of-the-valley. Cornucopias of spun sugar overflowed with white chrysanthemums and tall seven branched candelabras holding lighted tapers formed a background.

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Carter Stokes III presided at the register. Godfathers were said to Mr. and Mrs. Dall Laughinghouse Jr.

Buffet Dinner

After the reception a buffet dinner was served to the wedding party, families and out-of-town guests at the home of the bride. As the couple left for a wedding trip to Nassau the bride was wearing a Dior blue sheer wool suit with a small matching blue hat and black accessories. Her corsage was a white orchid.

Upon their return they will reside at 803 Buchanan Boulevard, Durham.

Out-of-Town Guests

Out-of-town guests for the weekend were: Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Jackson Floyd of Raleigh, N.C.; Mrs. James Ernest Hammond of El Paso, Texas; Mr. and Mrs. Henry Robinson King, Mrs. Thomas Ramey Jr., and Mrs. Jack Martin King, all of Tyler, Texas; Mr. and Mrs. Randolph Edward Moore and Mr. and Mrs. Randolph Grady Moore of Omaha, Texas; Mrs. Richard Carter Stokes Sr., Dr. and Mrs. R. P. Stickley, Robert Stickley, Mrs. Robert Neubauer, Mrs. John Gannaway, Mrs. Virginia Grimes, Mrs. Katherine Lewis, all of Lynchburg, Va.; Mr. and Mrs. John Hutchings, Dr. and Mrs. James Glen, Miss Mary Ann Stark, Miss Mary Jo Ingalls and Dr. James Callaway of Durham; Miss Helen Terry Flanagan and Miss Helen Ann Ruddle of New York; Miss Lois Marilyn Dent of Nitro, West Virginia; Miss Cleo Warlick of Raleigh; Mr. and

Mrs. Benjamin Joseph Floyd

Mrs. Lawrence Watts Jr. and Mr. Tenn.; Mr. and Mrs. Paul Royer of Manassas, Va.; Mrs. Charles Williamson of Danville, Va.; Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence A. Moyer Jr. of Chapel Hill; and Mr. and Mrs. Fred Dixon and daughter of Florence, S. C.

Don't Raise Girl To Be A Tomboy

By DOROTHY V. WHIPPLE, M.D.
AP Newsfeatures

Marge would have worn blue jeans to school if she'd been allowed; she hated skirts and dresses.

Every Saturday she went out to the farm with her father and ran the tractor for him. She was an expert at fixing the milking machine or tinkering with any machinery that wouldn't work. She played ball as well as any boy and knew the batting average of every player in the National League.

Marge was her father's son. Mr. Kirkwood had been greatly disappointed that all his three children were girls. From the time Marge could toddle Dad had taken her to his shop. She grew up with bolts and toy trucks. She never played with dolls nor dressed up.

Marge had great scorn for sissy occupations. Her mother was an ineffectual person who resorted to tears to get her way. Marge had contempt for her mother. She was pals with the men on the farm and her friends at school were all boys. She didn't date, but she played with the boys at their games and she was so good they were glad to have her on second base.

Tomboys Grow Up
Poor Marge, she is headed for plenty of trouble. She cannot grow up to be a man and she doesn't want to be a woman. We just don't have a neuter gender class for people to fall into. You have to be either a man or a woman in this world of ours.

There are advantages in being either sex, but masculine women or effeminate men have a rough time of it. They are seldom liked or admired by either men or women. They grow up to be lonely people.

It's fine when a girl and her

Dad's Mistake
If Dad had understood what he was doing to Marge he might have changed his tactics a little and still been good friends with his daughter. Admitted her when she was dressed up, expressed his pleasure in her femininity, given her jewelry and perfume at Christmas and birthdays instead of baseball mitts and bats, encouraged her to cook occasionally and been appreciative of womanly ways. Then Marge might have grown to accept herself as a woman with pride and respect.

Entertains Club
BETHEL—Thursday night, Mrs. Ed Hemmingsway was hostess to her bridge club at her home on the Bethel-Greenville Highway. The house was decorated with fresh flowers and dried arrangements.

As the game progressed, nuts and soft drinks were served. Those who entered the game were Mesdames J. L. Gurganus Jr., Burton R. Ayres, Bill Johnson, J. A. Manning, J. R. Bunting Jr., Edward Earl Dennis, Sam Keel and Ed Hemmingsway. Mrs. Keel was high score winner and was presented a tray by the hostess.

At the conclusion of the games, the hostess served ham biscuits, nutty fingers, cookies, candy and hot chocolate.

CALIFORNIA TARTS

Ingredients: 3-4 cup sugar, 1/4 cup boiling water, 2 tablespoons butter or margarine, 3 tablespoons cornstarch, 3-4 cup cold water, 1-4 cup cooking sherry, 2 eggs, 1/2 teaspoon vanilla, 7 (3 1/2-inch) baked tart shells, 1/4 cup coarsely chopped walnuts, whipped cream (if desired).

Method: Heat 1/4 cup of the sugar in a small heavy pan, stirring constantly. When sugar gets lumpy, then melts and is a light golden brown, carefully and slowly stir in boiling water. Cook and stir until all the lumps are melted and syrup is thick. In another pan, melt butter over low heat and stir in cornstarch. Stir in cold water, sherry, sugar syrup and remaining 1-4 cup sugar. Cook and stir until clear and thickened. Beat eggs lightly. Vigorously stir a little of the caramel mixture into the eggs, then stir back into remaining caramel mixture and cook and stir over very low heat 3 or 4 minutes longer. Remove from heat and stir in vanilla; cool. Spoon into baked tart shells and top with walnuts. Garnish with whipped cream if used.

Degree Of Pocahontas Elects Officers, Hears Representatives

Members of the Degree of Pocahontas and Redmen of the 4th District held its joint meeting in Winterville Saturday afternoon.

The Pocahontas met in the community building and Redmen in the Redmen Hall.

Mrs. Nina Joyner of Farmville Council was the presiding Pocahontas and the meeting was carried out in ritualistic form.

After the American flag was presented, an allegiance was pledged and the opening ode sung.

Council representatives gave reports of the progress that is being made in their Councils.

Mrs. Mattie Hardee of Ayden Council spoke on Mental Health, and the members decided to donate $25 to the Mental Health Association.

Nomination of officers was held and the Keeper of Records was asked to notify each officer before next district meeting of the date and place of meeting.

After the meeting closed the Redmen invited the Pocahontas to a banquet in the school lunchroom. The address of welcome was given by N. T. Cox, with Charlie Johnson, Great Sachem of N. C., responding.

The invocation was given by Randolph Harris, Edward Lee Hardee introduced the Great Chiefs and visitors.

The tables were covered with white cloths holding center arrangements of mixed summer flowers and red berries, with commercial favors at each place.

Slim Short and his band provided the music for the dance which followed in the school gymnasium.

Breakfast Fetes Party

The Stokes-Floyd wedding party and out-of-town guests were entertained at a wedding breakfast Saturday at noon by Mrs. Radford M. Garrett, Mr. and Mrs. Radford Garrett Jr. and Mrs. Lee Dwight Garrett, Mr. and Mrs. William Folger Jr. and Mrs. William Faison and Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Webb at the home of Mrs. Garrett on the Arden Highway.

The house was decorated throughout with arrangements of white, gladioli and chrysanthemums and greenery. An arrangement of white carnations, snapdragons and chrysanthemums centered the dining room table. For the occasion Miss Stokes was attired in red wool and wore a white orchid presented by the hosts.

Upon arrival, guests were greeted by the hosts and hostesses. Assisted by Mrs. James S. Ficklen, James Ficklen Jr. and Mrs. and Mrs. William Stuart Boet, a three course wedding breakfast was served to the members of the wedding party and out-of-town guests.

Mrs. J. W. Short Has Bridge Supper

GRIFTON—Mrs. J. W. Short was hostess on Thursday night when she had as guests for a bridge supper members of her contract club and additional guests.

Throughout the home arrangements of fall asters and marigolds were used. Guests were invited on arrival to the dining room where supper was served from a table covered with a linen cut-work cloth and centered with an arrangement of roses. The chicken salad supper was served buffet.

During the bridge games which followed highest scores were compiled by Mesdames Robert Mewborn, Bryan Davis and Miss Bert Johnson. Other players were Mesdames L. L. Mewborn, Richard Nelson, J. L. Quinerly, Jack Tucker, Alton Chapman, Joseph House, J. S. Chapman, M. B. Hodges, Archie Rogers, Joe Goolsby, Eleanor Gower, Miss Hazel Patrick and Miss Louise Mewborn.

Prescription Pharmacists

... can you count the factors entering into your prescription. Pharmacy deals with a multitude of details, and the many thousands of items in your pharmacist's stock prove the point.

Your prescription specifies drugs, amount, strength, size, and dosage. Add to these the order of mixing, compatibilities, and hundreds of procedures and diversities within the knowledge of your pharmacist. They multiply the selective factor of medicines, and establish pharmacy as a most complex profession. All of these skills are employed to serve you when we fill your prescription.

Manse Being Used By EC Students

The former Presbyterian Manse, located at 401 East Ninth Street, has recently been converted into a Student Center.

This Center is used primarily by the 375 students of the Presbyterian denomination who attend East Carolina College.

Mrs. Leonard Davis, Campus Christian Life Worker, is in charge of the student center where a student program is carried on.

This organization, the Westminster Fellowship, has several scheduled activities each week including vespers, speakers, study and discussion groups.

A small weekly paper is published by the Student Center telling of the recent and future happenings. In addition, a kitchen is furnished with facilities enabling the students to serve meals and refreshments, a small library, and an office for the Campus Christian Life Worker which is used also for discussion panels.

While the Center is used mainly for students, it is at the disposal of the East Carolina College faculty and other interested groups.

Relaxing Is Key To TV Winning

By DOROTHY ROE
AP Women's Editor

How do you win a fortune on a television quiz show?

Well, the most important thing is to relax, say Erik and Helena Gude, the happy young couple from Los Angeles whose TV winnings to date top the $120,000 mark.

"A year ago we were broke," says pretty Helena, "and Erik was furious when he found I'd made a date for us to appear on the quiz program Do You Trust Your Wife?"

"I had to practically drag him to the studio. But now he feels differently about it."

The reason Erik feels differently is that the Gudes won $100 a week for the next 23 years on the original program, which starred Edgar Bergen. Then they were brought to New York to continue to press their lucky streak when the show changed to the ABC network, a new format and a new M. C., Johnny Carson.

Only now the ante has been upped from $100 a week for a year to a flat $1,000 per show, which now runs five days a week. If you won all week, you could pocket $5,000.

The Gudes have three children, Elena, Karl and Hans, aged 4, 3 and 2. Erik, a former Navy officer and a graduate of Annapolis, now employed as a civil engineer, answers most of the questions on the program, in which either husband or wife may take over.

"I didn't spend my childhood reading encyclopedias, and I wasn't known as a brain at Annapolis. I finished solidly in the middle of my class, a comfortable but no sensational place.

"I guess the reason I've been able to keep winning on this program is that I spent a lot of time in my boyhood taking exams, and I found I could always pass them if I just relaxed and didn't get flustered."

"Erik is the most relaxed man I know," says Helena fondly. "Never gets tense or steamed up. Isn't it lovely?"

Young Mrs. Gude was born in Bogota, Colombia, the daughter of a South American father and a French mother. Her father, a career diplomat took his family with him on his world travels. She met Erik in France and now is a full-fledged American citizen.

Erik and Helena say the only cramping they do for the current quiz program is reading quiz books, full of extraneous information.

Home From European Trip

BETHEL—Dr. Dan Jordan has returned to Bethel after visiting the following countries: Ireland, Scotland, Norway, Sweden, Denmark, Finland, Amsterdam (Holland) and London. For a side trip he went to Paris and visited Clayton Whitehurst, son of Mr. and Mrs. Sam Whitehurst.

On August 25 he left the United States with a group of doctors for Europe. They went in the interest of medicine. This was known as "Duke University Viking Cruise." They visited all the hospitals throughout Scandinavia where specialized medicine is practiced.

Lecturers Will Appear At ECC

Greenville, N. C., October—Mr. and Mrs. Paul Harris, Jr., of Boston University will visit East Carolina College October 21-24 and will act as consultants and lecturers at a series of meetings of classes and campus organizations. Their topic will be "Developing a Philosophy of Life."

The visiting speakers will come to the college under the sponsorship of the Danforth Foundation Project now being carried on at the college. This three-year program is designed to better the individual students as "a citizen, a parent, or a parent-to-be, and also as a person of faith."

Mr. and Mrs. Harris have done extensive work in YMCA-YWCA activities at the local and at the national level. Mrs. Harris was a member of the YWCA staff in Argentina from 1939 to 1942. Last year, she was one of the staff assistants to the Dean of Women at Boston University.

Mr. Harris is a Quaker and an ordained Unitarian Minister. His academic background includes study at the University of Louisville, Kentucky State University, and Vanderbilt University.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Harris have traveled widely in Europe, and in central and South America. Presently, they are associates to the Human Relations Center in Informal Education at Boston University.

Plans for the visit of Mr. and Mrs. Harris to the campus are being made under the direction of Dr. George A. Douglas, who is in charge of the Danforth Project on the campus. Faculty members at the college will welcome the guest speakers at an informal coffee hour Monday, October 21, in the Mamie E. Jenkins Faculty-Alumni House.

Education Was Given Back Seat

President Eisenhower, through the use of federal troops, has succeeded in making certain that nine Negro students attend Central High School in Little Rock. But what is to be gained from attendance by the nine Negro students and more than 2,000 white students at the school when the tense atmosphere is an obstacle to either teaching or learning?

The school has been open for a month now, and all of that time it has been the center of one of the most explosive controversies the country has witnessed in at least a generation. If in that time the students have gained what they normally might be expected to get from one classroom attendance, we would be surprised.

Though the crowds that once hooted and demonstrated outside Little Rock Central High have disappeared, the confusion among the students, in the corridors and classrooms of the building still exist. The Negro students are going to classes with the white students, but we doubt that any of the children are really gaining much from their studies.

The situation within the school, where soldiers carry rifles, might be compared with the situation throughout the South over this integration situation.

Through the use of federal troops, the United States government might force public school integration in many Southern communities. But that in itself does not mean the practice is accepted by the people of the community or the region. Is anything gained by the fact that integration is achieved by use of force when the people refuse to accept it?

Is anything gained by sending youngsters to school where they have their minds on the soldiers and guns in the hallways and around the building, rather than on their studies?

Like other social changes, the acceptance of integration cannot be forced by legislation, judicial decree or the use of arms. Integrated school attendance, as we have seen, may be brought about by one or more of these means, but when it is, education takes a back seat.

A New Era Launched With Soviet Satellite

Successful launching of a man-made moon into the edge of outer space opens the door to vast new knowledge about the earth's atmosphere and the space beyond. It puts man a step closer to the dreamed-of day when travel into outer space will become a reality.

We are shocked, surprised and disappointed that Russia rather than the United States won the race in launching the first successful earth satellite. It is bound to shake us from the complacency that has been created by our conviction that the United States, rather than Russia, held a wide margin of scientific superiority. Then too, it is only natural to expect that the Russians will make as much propaganda hay as possible from the scientific achievement.

So far as the advancement of science is concerned, man has now penetrated outer space with a device of his own. Now that the barrier has been broken we may well expect rapid advancement on this broad, new frontier. This advancement will be provided, we believe, by a number of nations; just as the scientists of practically every nation have contributed to the first successful launching of a space satellite.

What changes this new major advancement will bring in the lives of people around the world it is difficult for the layman to imagine. While the world's scientists assemble and make use of this vast area of new knowledge, the laymen of the world must condition themselves for life in what promises to be a new era of the scientific age.

Gibberillick Acid Splash In Spring

By ELMER ROESSNER

You will hear a lot about gibberillick acid next spring.

That's the stuff that makes some plants grow incredibly fast and big. It was isolated from a fungus by Oriental scientists who observed that rice stalks affected by the fungus shot up to almost unbelievable heights.

Plants treated with small amounts of the acid extract double, triple and even quadruple their rate of growth. Three pharmaceutical houses greater experimentation — no one is sure exactly how it works or whether it is safe to use on food plants — these houses have cut the price 60 per cent. The price has dropped from $4,500 to $1,800 a pound.

A little goes a long way. The new price may encourage more experimental stations and horticulturists to experiment with it, and commercial processors are likely to add a bit to their plant foods.

And — yoo-hoo, Federal Trade Commission! — as is always the case when a sensational new product appears in the gardening field, there will be dozens of fast-buck outfits adding a random molecule to other mixtures and advertising their products as gibberillick-acid fortified. And there will be others who will add nothing at all to their products and make a lot of double-talk claims to separate you, and you from your trusting buck.

OTHER BUSINESS PROSPECTS

Here are other business predictions, distilled from a ferment of trends, developments and advance information:

More savings banks will dabble toes in consumer loans. Brooklyn Savings has found the water fine. In most states, savings banks are barred from commercial fields, which includes consumer loans — now a rich source of income. Brooklyn Savings found a way around it. It will loan the amount on deposit back to the depositor at a net cost of less than 1 1/2 per cent, a huge savings on life insurance loans. New York laws limit such loans to 90 days — after which the savings bank turns the debt over to a commercial loan subsidiary. Other banks are studying the operation and it may spread into other areas.

Men may be scared into buying new clothes. The American Institute of Men's and Boys'

Wear is launching a magazine advertising campaign to show men they can't afford to wear shabby clothes. It has some touching cases to reveal to make you, buddy boy, afraid to step out in a rumpled suit.

MULTIPACKS AND FAST AMORTIZATION

More six-packs of foods and juices are coming. The food industry has been slow to follow the successes of brewers who have been packaging six cans in a carry container, but indications are that they will try to catch up. Juices and other canned foods in six-packs will appear in greater number this fall.

Processors are discovering that selling six is more profitable than selling one — and that when there six cans in the pantry, consumers consume more freely, whether of beer or kumquat juice. The word "pantry" is used figuratively; scarcely a pantry has been built in the last half century.

"Rational amortization" will be a battle cry when Congress resumes. Supermarket chains are in a quandary. They spend millions for new check-out systems that are outdated before they operate, but the Internal Revenue Service insists costs be charged off over 15 to 20 years. Because this is ruinous when equipment has a short life, super chains are launching a lobby propaganda campaign to urge the government and the public their present troubles. You will see and hear a lot about it before Congress resumes.

OLD PROMOTER HOLDS PROGRESS FIGURES FAULTY

"The American people have an enormous capacity for fooling themselves," the Old Promoter remarked today.

"Come, now!" we said, "please don't denounce television again." He frowned. "What I have in mind is the constant flow of statistics proving that this country is increasing its wealth with so many new plants, office buildings, apartment houses and other big structures. But in adding up these wonderful figures, nobody remembers to subtract the value of the structures torn down to make room for them. If we ever deducted this cannibalistic loss we'd find we were making a lot less progress than we pretend."

The old fellow has something there, but I'm not sure what.

Strength For Today

By EARL L. DOUGLASS

A CONFIDENCE GAME

In his memoirs, Vincent Sheean tells how as a college student he deliberately took easy courses. "It was a kind of confidence game," he wrote of his early college days, "of which the victim was, of course, myself."

Many of us could truthfully describe ourselves as our own victims. To say that a man is his own worst enemy may be a trifle largely because there are always so many people to whom it can be truthfully applied.

Take, for example, the matter of time. How often people complain that they don't have time to get their work done, time to spend with their families, and so on. "If there only were more than twenty-four hours in a day!" they say sadly. But watch how many of those hours they waste in coffee breaks, in skimming the pages of a magazine, in aimless gossip with some other supposedly busy person.

Or consider the problem of being overweight. "What wouldn't I give," someone sighs, "to lose twenty pounds!" But what actually will he give, or rather, give up? Probably nothing — he will keep right on eating big meals, between-meal snacks, and fattening foods.

Look at your problems. Of how many are you yourself the chief cause? Remember, you can stop being your own victim any time you have the will to want to do so!

Clean Up Yourself—

By HAL BOYLE

The Things One Learns

NEW YORK (AP) — Things a columnist might never know if he didn't open his mail:

That the surest way to get an ulcer is to waste your time mountain climbing up molehills.

That in 18th Century England a proper gentleman always washed his hands after handling money.

That the world's largest infant, according to the Fisherman magazine, is the baby blue whale. It measures upward of 25 feet at birth.

That in some South Pacific Islands natives literally "tie the knot" when they get married. Friends of the newlyweds join them together with a grass rope.

That if you're in dutch with the income tax people you may be interested to know the first internal revenue service was developed in Holland in the 17th Century.

That whatever our neighbors across the seas think of Uncle Sam, he's no tightwad. Federal spending from 1789 through June 30, 1957 totaled $1,151,000,000,000.

That Edison Hotel executive Milton J. Kramer has this sign on his desk: "A wise man is not as certain of anything as a fool is of everything."

That Bob Apple and Annie Lemon are next door neighbors on Peachtree St., in Nashville, Tenn.

That each hospital bed in the United States serves an average of 13 patients a year.

That in 15th Century France a man who kept three or more servants had the right to kiss any French woman he fancied — except the relatives of his superiors.

That if you really want to lose weight you must cut down not only on the minutes you spend at the dining table — but also the seconds.

That someone has suggested this as the best epitaph for the Iron Curtain: "Rust in peace."

That the male lion, one of the most handsome of all animals, is also one of the least fickle. He often spends his entire life with the same mate.

That inflation has hit Africa. The price of a wife in one tribe has gone up to nine goats and six jars of beer.

That Grace Downs, who trains airline hostesses, gives this difference between the sexes: "A man worries about what the future will have in store, but a woman worries about what the store will have in the future."

That in a five-mile race a buffalo could probably outrun the fastest thoroughbred that ever lived.

That the Guacharo, a South American bird, is so fat the natives melt it for use as butter.

That Edie Adams, star of "I'll Abner," is so crazy over her husband Ernie Kovacs, that she has his photo pasted on the dial telephone in her dressing room.

That in a few years there may be a national shortage of violin players. How many kids in your neighborhood are studying the fiddle? I don't know any.

That the poodle belonging to the chanteuse Fernanda Montel is probably the most confused dog in show business. Every month she changes its name — just for good luck.

That beehives are the oldest air-conditioned dwellings. Bees inside the hive keep the temperature 10 degrees cooler than outside by fanning their wings.

That it was Mark Twain who made this immortal distinction:

"Work consists of whatever a body is obliged to do. Play consists of whatever a body is not obliged to do."

Variety In The Hobbies

By ROGER BABSON

BABSON PARK, Mass. — During my recent summer vacation, I studied hobbies—in other words, my hobby was hobbies! I now list thirty of these. As a food for one is poison for another, I will list these in alphabetical order without showing any preference. However, my choice would be Antique Furniture, about which I will write one or two weeks hence.

(1) ART AND PAINTING. The most expensive of all hobbies is the buying of valuable paintings and other art collections. Furthermore, many prominent men, such as President Eisenhower and Winston Churchill, adopt amateur painting as their hobby.

(2) BICYCLING AND ROLLER SKATING. In Europe, the bicycle is as important a means of transportation as the motor car is here; but in this country the bicycle is used mostly as a hobby for taking trips. Roller skating is no longer popular on our streets and sidewalks; but the rinks are becoming more crowded every year.

(3) BOATING. The outboard motor and the congested highways have brought boating back as an important hobby. Sailboats are again being revived.

(4) CERAMICS. The making of plates, tiles, and other household utilities have always been popular. The person making them usually sends them out to have them baked.

(5) COLLECTIONS. STAMPS, SMALL RELICS, ROCKS, SHELLS, AND BUTTERFLIES. Collecting is an old hobby.

(6) COOKING. Some men enjoy cooking, both indoors and outdoors, as a hobby.

(7) ENAMELING. This is usually done on copper, and some amateurs do very beautiful enameling of dishes, plaques, and other mementos.

(8) ETCHING ON GLASSWARE. This is being done by some parents to pass down valuable items to their children. It is a pleasant and permanent hobby.

(9) FLY-TYING. Most fishermen purchase flies; but some fishermen believe they get the best results from flies of their own making, in competition with those of friends.

(10) GLASS PAINTING. This is sometimes practiced by those who cannot enamel well. There, however, is a trick to painting on the reverse side of glass. The results are very permanent.

(11) HOOKED AND BRAIDED RUGS AND PATCHWORK QUILTS. This is a very popular hobby with invalids and older people. Children appreciate such products made by their grandparents.

(12) LEATHERCRAFT. The carving and burning of leather is a most interesting hobby for those who wish to make their own wedding presents or Christmas gifts.

(13) MANUSCRIPT AND AUTOGRAPH COLLECTING. Both of these are interesting and profitable hobbies.

(14) MINIATURES. These are very small "models" made to represent animals, soldiers, and dolls, etc. Such work requires both skill and patience.

(15) MODEL BUILDING. Fathers interest their children by making ships, airplanes, and even doll houses.

(16) MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS. Many busy executives have kept from having a nervous breakdown by learning to play some musical instrument and perhaps joining some local band. The collection of phonograph records and tapes are hobbies for some, as well as the collecting of books.

(17) NATURE STUDY. The raising and appreciation of flowers and birds, and even enjoyment of scenery is a hobby. I feel, however, that one must inherit this love and be "born" with it.

(18) PAPER WORK. Many women secure most excellent results by making paper flowers, paper favors, and paper table pieces. These can be used, or given to friends, or sold.

(19) PHOTOGRAPHY. The taking of pictures, developing and printing of films, and en-

Trade War Against U.S. Looms

By RAY TUCKER

WASHINGTON A trade war directed against the United States threatens another serious split among the Western Allies at the very moment when powerful groups in Congress are insisting on greater tariff protection for American industry against foreign competition.

The domestic interests involved range from manufacturers of automobiles and textiles to California and New England fishermen. This country's economic superiority now arouses the same sort of resentment that our vast military and political power, including the stationing of our troops overseas, has caused in Britain, France, Germany and Japan. They accuse us of seeking to "hog" world markets in the same way that, according to their viewpoint, we try to run the United Nations.

So menacing has the commercial warfare become that American and Canadian officials are meeting at Washington today to discuss these difficulties. It may be the last chance to prevent Canada from joining with England and the Commonwealth countries—in all—in a tariff deal signed to reduce sharply our exports to their markets.

QUOTAS AGAINST AMERICAN GOODS Under this plan, which is now before the British and Canadian Governments, the 11 Commonwealth nations would lower their tariffs for their joint benefit, and also establish quotas against American goods. In short, they would aim to become free of commercial dependence on the United States as a buyer or supplier.

The British Labor Party, which would probably topple the Macmillan regime if an election were held today, is bitterly anti-American on this question. A speaker at Labor's recent off-year political convention declared:

"If our friends in the United States want advice, strong world, they must examine the results of their actions in the field of exports and imports. We wish to live by the results of our own energy, and America can help by increasing her imports."

BEAR GRUDGE AGAINST UNCLE SAM

In order to cut down the inflow of U.S. goods, which has reduced their gold and dollar reserves to the danger point, both Britain and France have had to resort to "austerity" programs. They have closed the door to purchase of luxury and essential American articles.

These everyday hardships contributed to the recent fall of the Bourges-Maunoury Ministry in France, as they helped in the election of the Diefenbaker Government in Canada a few months ago. Popular discontent also endangers the life of the Macmillan regime in London.

Thus, it is not only the bankers, the industrialists and the economic classes—which have grievances against the United States. Every household—the so-called "little people"—has a personal and private grudge against Uncle Sam, who is still portrayed in many foreign cartoons with a mark across his chest.

NEHRU BANS U.S. PRODUCTS

BUT NOT $600 MILLION LOAN. The boycott of American goods now extends to India. Even as he seeks a $600,000,000 loan from Washington to relieve his country's financial distress, Prime Minister Nehru has curtailed or banned the import of numerous American-made consumer articles—fountain pens, safety razor blades, textiles, drugs, medicine, automobile accessories etc.

Every foreign government, for both ideological and economic reasons, has imposed drastic quotas on American motion pictures, and limited the percentages of earned dollars which may be withdrawn. This will be a severe blow to the Hollywood industry, which depends on foreign revenue for a considerable portion of its new profits.

IRONIC SITUATION There is deep irony in this trade offensive. Many of the overseas industries demanding protection have been rebuilt and expanded with American taxpayers' money. And Germany's amazing recovery, which was similarly financed, has worsened the world situation by robbing the protesting countries of many of their profitable prewar markets.

Congress, which has become strongly protection-minded in recent years, will react angrily and violently to these trade discriminations in January. And then, the economic war will blaze in a big way, to Moscow's delight and satisfaction.

Little Rock Is 'Eye' Of The Storm; Destructive Forces Swirl All About

By RELMAN MORIN

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP)—This is the eye of the hurricane, the dead center of the storm.

There is the same deceptive calm, the same oppressive feeling in the air, the sense of vast and destructive forces swirling toward disaster.

This is Little Rock.

A police car siren screams in the street. People who wouldn't have noticed it a month ago look up anxiously now. A riot starting?

I've got a loaded shotgun beside my bed," says a man. If he hears a sound in the night, he will reach for it.

At night the telephoning starts, the threats and warnings.

"Who is this?" a click. The phone goes dead.

The calls come to parents. Segregationists would like to force a mass boycott of Central High School. "There's going to be trouble at school," better keep your daughter home."

They come to the father of a boy who delivers the Arkansas Gazette, the Little Rock newspaper Gov. Orval Faubus. "If you don't want something to happen to your kid."

No name.

They even come to legislators. A man's voice says to State Sen. Charles Yarbrough, "Understand you're in favor of a cooling off period instead of closing the schools."

There's a slab at the back of the undertaker's where you'll be cooling off."

It's hardest on the parents.

Most are letting their children go to the high school—and worrying over what the die-hards may do in reprisal.

Some are keeping their boys and girls away—and worrying for a different reason. A woman, in tears, calls the segregationist Capitol Citizens Council. "My daughter wants to go back. She's falling behind in her studies. What shall I do?"

Soldiers inside a high school fights and muttered threats there business slowed to a standstill.

...feeling between neighbors so deep it may never be bridged.

...the atmosphere heavy with menace, dark and brooding.

Even seeing Little Rock today, you can't believe it.

Federal troops in a Southern city? Bayonets pointed at American men and women? Impossible.

All that ended 90 years ago. It couldn't happen in this day and age.

But it has happened.

Force confronts raw force now.

Twice a day, the power of federal authority pushes through massive resentment to take nine Negro students to school, against the wishes of most of the people.

Seventy per cent? Eighty? Who can say?

And no end is in sight in Little Rock. Nothing has been settled. A decision is postponed. But what happens when the troops are withdrawn?

Moderates can only hope. "Maybe people will get used to it."

Segregationists say they are simply waiting. "We can't do much now. But you'll see."

Little Rock is a nice place.

People say "howdy" to strangers. They are courteous in their cars, on the streets, in the stores.

They are proud of their city. It's a good looking city, clean and bright with tree-shaded streets.

There is a church on every other corner, handsome buildings, good schools. People have two interesting and well-edited newspapers.

It's a good community.

Yet, in other states and even in other nations today, Little Rock is an ugly symbol. It represents mob violence, unbridled passions, defiance of the law.

It represents the most critical clash between a sovereign state and the federal government since the Civil War and the Reconstruction.

What has happened here is bigger than Little Rock, bigger than Arkansas, bigger than the whole South. It hangs over all of America.

The reason is quite clear.

It took federal troops to enforce a law. Now a high school has been integrated. Nine Negroes are sitting in classrooms with white children. Under guns, the law is being observed.

But what of the future?

If the "Little Rock Nine" should be forced out of school again, it will strengthen the hands of segregationists everywhere. Who can expect compliance with the Supreme Court ruling anywhere else in the South?

Vice Versa, if they stay, will segregationist opposition go down like a row of dominoes, with Little Rock the first domino?

Further, is this to be the pattern for integration everywhere? Violence, followed by the rumble of Army trucks and naked bayonets?

In short, for both sides, a gauntlet has been thrown. Perhaps, somehow, reasoning people on both sides will find the compromise. And perhaps history will mark Little Rock as the turning-point in the greatest social struggle of a century.

How did this come about?

You could go back a long way. You could point to the workings of city and state politics, the operations of the National Assn. for the Advancement of Colored People, the interplay of ambition and high emotion.

It's an incredible story.

It begins with a man who thought he had devised a plan for integration that would satisfy everybody—until another man, Gov. Orval Faubus, decided to use force.

This Diplomat Can Shift Sides With No Difficulty

By TOM HOGGE

UNITED NATIONS, N. Y. (AP)—Ahmad Shukairy, veteran Syrian delegate who blossomed forth this year as Saudi Arabia's chief U.N. spokesman, has been nicknamed the Arabs' convertible diplomat.

Shukairy himself sees nothing strange in his shift from working for a pro-Soviet state to one which has been strengthening its ties with the West.

"You might call it a change of fronts on the same battlefield," he said, "an appeal that the West would do well to adopt as the basis for its Middle East policy."

"We are still part of the same Arab movement."

Acquaintances of Shukairy point out that in Syria he was just another diplomat. In Saudi Arabia he is minister of state—one step below the foreign minister.

Others say Shukairy's shift is merely a fresh example of pan-Arabism. It has occurred among the Arab delegations before, but usually on a lower echelon.

Shukairy was born in Damascus, but he lists himself as a Palestinian Arab. His family moved to Palestine when he was 3 years old.

Cultured, dapper and immaculate, Shukairy received a better education than many Western diplomats can boast. He is a graduate of the American University in Beirut, the Jerusalem Law School and Oxford University.

In previous years he has been best known at U.N. headquarters for his impassioned speeches on behalf of Palestine's 900,000 Arab refugees.

With his rolling baritone, dramatic gestures and colorful phrases, he became a familiar sight to television audiences.

Shukairy has served on many missions pressing the cause of the Arab refugees. In 1949 he represented Syria on the Palestine Conciliation Commission in Geneva.

The same year he toured the Arab states to solicit support for the Palestine Arabs. In 1950, he was named assistant secretary general for the Arab League, a post he quit when he became Saudi Arabia's minister of state.

Many who heard Shukairy blast Western policy in the Middle East before the Assembly this week remarked that he still sounds more like a Syrian than a Saudi Arabian.

Shukairy denies the policy speech had any anti-Western intent.

"It was an appeal to the West," he said, "an appeal that the West would do well to adopt as the basis for its Middle East policy."

Await Reaction To Gromyko Talk

WASHINGTON (AP)—State Department officials awaited Moscow reaction today for evidence on whether the unprecedented Dulles-Gromyko talk here will lead to some improvement in Soviet-American relations.

Meanwhile, Secretary of State Dulles and his aides were carefully studying Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko's comments in the person-to-person discussion to see whether they opened up any new avenues of approach.

Dulles and the top Soviet diplomat met in Dulles' home here late Saturday for 3½ hours. A joint statement said they had talked about the Middle East, disarmament, the European situation and contacts between this country and the Soviet Union.

The statement which both men agreed to declared that exchange of views had been helpful in clarifying the policies of the two governments on these major areas of common interest.

Gromyko told reporters upon leaving Dulles' house, with a friendly farewell handshake at the front door, that he considered the session "useful."

Informed officials said neither man had put forward any new ideas or proposals for dealing with any of the problems raised.

Cross Is Burned For Governor

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (AP)—State police planned to turn to the FBI today for scientific help in tracking down the persons who burned a cross and hung anti-integration signs on the fence of Governor House, the residence of Maryland's Gov. Theodore R. McKeldin.

McKeldin has publicly and bitterly criticized the actions of Gov. Orval Faubus of Arkansas in the Little Rock integration crisis and has blasted segregationists in Maryland as well.

A passing sailor found the burning cross, two signs and two Confederate flags hanging on the iron rail fence surrounding the executive mansion about 1:05 a.m. Sunday. William Clark notified police who extinguished the flames and took down the placards.

McKeldin, unaware of the incident until police notified him later in the day, called the cross burning an empty gesture, completely wasteful in time and purpose" if it was aimed at changing his position or the position of Maryland officialdom from their support of human rights.

"If, however, the purpose of the perpetrators was to besmirch the name of Maryland beyond its borders, their efforts undoubtedly are meeting with success," the governor said.

Pirates Handed 34-14 Setback By Catawba Gridders

Lack Of Depth Is Boone's Problem

SALISBURY—Quarterback Lou Blacchi and the big Catawba football team thrashed East Carolina 34-14, Saturday night, to set down the Bucs in their first North State Conference game of the season.

The loss was East Carolina's third in three games. Throughout the first period of play, the Pirates had an edge and speared deep into Catawba territory for the only threat of the quarter.

Minutes after the beginning of the second period, James Speight, EEC halfback, went wide around end for 12 yards and scored. The extra point was good and the Pirates had a 7-0 lead.

Punt Return
Tribal halfback J. T. Davis took Howell's kickoff and raced 70 yards to a touchdown, moments later, to put Catawba back into the game. Reports have it that there was a questionable play during the course of that punt return that shook up the Bucs. They never recovered.

After that, it was all Catawba. The Tribe scored twice more in that period on touchdowns and collected a safety. A snapback got away from EEC kicker Bob Lilley on the Buc 18 and Catawba linemen pounced on him and the ball in the end zone for two points. In the third period, Catawba scored again. In the fourth, EEC quarterback Ralph Zehring set up the Bucs' second touchdown on a pass play, then rammed over on a quarterback sneak.

Catawba came back with one more touchdown to finish up the scoring. Blacchi did the scoring on an option play.

No Excuses
East Carolina Coach Jack Boone stated today that "we have no excuses. Our boys looked good for one quarter, but when we started substituting, we couldn't keep up with them."

The Bucs picked up a total of 282 yards, which Boone considered "pretty good." He said, "We still need plenty of work on fundamentals. The score of Saturday's game was probably a fair indication of the game, but not of our team. We're a better team than that. When a club picks up almost 300 yards in a game, we should be beating somebody. It's just a matter of a little more work."

Boone praised quarterback Ralph Zehring. "He's coming along, now. He completed 11 of 25 passes for a total of 166 yards. That's not bad."

The Buc coach remarked that his club's offense was not bad, but that defensively, the Pirates were spotty.

"It looks like our biggest trouble," he concluded, "is in depth. We may just have to go with our top eleven until we give out."

Lenoir Rhyne Is Still Powerhouse

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
If anyone in the North State Conference thought Lenoir Rhyne was going to be a pushover this season on the basis of their early showing, they can perish the thought.

The Bears won their opening game, then lost to Wofford and were held to a 0-0 tie by Presbyterian College in a game played in mpid and rain.

Lenoir Rhyne snapped out of it Saturday, rolling over a strong Newberry 43-0, as terrific Harold Bullard scored five touchdowns.

Elen took over first place in the conference standings with a 2-0 record after drubbing Appalachian 20-6. Catawba, in second place with one league victory, had little trouble with East Carolina in a 35-14 win.

Two other non-league games Saturday saw Western Carolina edged by East Tennessee 7-6 and Bridgewater shutout Guilford 7-0.

Three family games are set this weekend with Lenoir Rhyne playing its first conference game at Appalachian, Catawba at Western Carolina and Elen at East Carolina. Hampton-Sydney is at Guilford in the one non-league affair.

The performance of Lenoir Rhyne's Bullard was the talk of the league. His touchdowns came on runs of 2, 69, 31, 31 and 13 yards. He scored four of his touchdowns in the first half in six carries. In all, he gained 209 yards rushing.

The standings, conference games first, overall record second: Elen (2-0, 2-0), Catawba (1-0, 1-1), Appalachian (1-1, 2-2), Lenoir Rhyne (0-0, 2-1-1), Guilford (0-1, 0-2), East Carolina (0-1, 0-3), Western Carolina (0-1, 0-4).

ECC Baby Bucs Lose To Wingate By 13-0 Score

CONCORD—After both teams had staged a scoreless battle for three full quarters, Wingate Junior College's offense got rolling and ran up two quick touchdowns and added one extra point at Concord Saturday night to win their fifth straight game at the expense of the East Carolina Baby Buccaneers.

Wingate of nearby Monroe kept hammering away at the EC line for short yardage to score. Up until five minutes had elapsed in the fourth period, it appeared that the contest would end in a 0-0 tie.

A call on the part of the referee nullified Walkie Hankford's touchdown in the second quarter. The officials ruled that time had run out in the second quarter as the play got underway. Then they reversed their decision to say that the EC offense committed a penalty which would of course would have been taken by the Wingate team.

Sonny Basinger was the individual star for Wingate but EC's Walkie Hankford matched him all the way. He appeared to be all over the field on defense and several times came up from his secondary position to make tackles on and behind the line of scrimmage. It was Hankford who intercepted a Wingate pass that could have been a touchdown and he steadily ran through the Wingate offense when EC took possession of the ball. Bobby Patterson made several fine catches of Porgie Turner's passes as did Hankford. Other standouts for the EC squad were George Slaughter, Tommy Bland, Leroy Singleton, Baxter Savage, Fritz Tanner, Neal George and Carroll Teague.

This marks the first time this season that Coach Earl Smith's squad has been defeated. The next opponent on tap for his team will be the University of Richmond's Junior Varsity in a game slated for this coming Thursday night at College Stadium. Kickoff time is 8 p.m.

Virtually 'New' World Series Is Under Way Today

Sutton Stars As Redskins Romp

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The rest of the National Football League better watch out—the Washington Redskins are rolling.

The Redskins, sparked by three rookie backs and veteran quarterback Eddie Le Baron, showed a passing and running offensive that left the Chicago Cardinals in the dust, 37-14, yesterday.

The rookie backs included halfback Ed Sutton, former North Carolina star; fullback Don Bosseler, ex - University of Miami player, and Jim Podoley, another halfback from Central Michigan who may develop into the rookie flash of the league.

Sutton scored twice in the third period, on end sweeps of 18 and 5 yards. Bosseler plunged one yard for another TD and end Johnny Carson grabbed a 19-yard pass from Le Baron for another. Sam Baker booted three field goals of 12, 32 and 16 yards and four extra points to complete the scoring.

Both of Chicago's touchdowns came on passes, quarterback Lamar McHan completed both to end Gern Nagler. One play covered 83 yards and the second 36. Bosseler picked up 67 yards on 16 carries. Sutton 44 yards in 10 carries and Podoley 41 yards on 10 attempts. In all, Washington made 427 yards.

The upstart and unbeaten Baltimore Colts and the back - home-again Cleveland Browns were a step ahead of a logjam of eight National League teams.

The Colts pace the Western Conference and the Browns the Eastern Conference with 2-0 records. The rest of the league is virtually in one big second place tie after weekend play.

Sunday's results compounded the tangle as last week's losers turned on the winners. The Detroit Lions defeated the previously unbeaten Green Bay Packers 24-14 and the San Francisco 49ers reversed a lopsided exhibition performance and whipped the Los Angeles Rams 23-20. All six teams have 1-1 records.

The New York Giants, defending champions, evened their record Saturday night, winning their first game, 23-20, against winless Philadelphia. In other Saturday games, Cleveland moved into familiar first place quarters after overpowering Pittsburgh 23-12 and the Colts repeated a 1956 upset of the troubled Chicago Bears 21-10.

Pittsburgh also has a 1-1 record. The Bears, Western champions last year, and the Eagles each took their second defeats in two games.

Two drivers qualified at Wilson yesterday in a 50-lap stock car race for next week's National Sportsman Championship 100-mile race at Langhorn, Pa.

They are Earl Moss of Creedmore and Ned Jarrett of Newton, who finished one-two. In third place was Jimmy Thompson of Charlotte.

Randleman's Lee Petty, driving an Oldsmobile, won a 100-mile Grand National stock car race for late models at the Charlotte Fairgrounds Saturday.

Petty didn't make a single pit stop. Fireball Roberts of Daytona Beach, Fla. was second. He made one pit stop.

Eddie Baker of Lynwood, Calif. and Buck Baker of Charlotte finished third and fourth respectively.

By JOE REICHLER

MILWAUKEE—Practically a new World Series starts today. Milwaukee's Lew Burdette and New York's Whitey Ford go after their second victory in the fifth game of the October classic.

With the series all square at two victories apiece, after Milwaukee's dramatic 10-inning, 7-5 triumph over the Yankees yesterday, the see-saw battle must return to New York no matter what happens today.

Barring a sudden collapse by either team, the series seems almost certain to go the full, agonizing, seven-game distance. Since tomorrow has been set aside for travel, the issue cannot be decided until Wednesday, at the earliest.

"Those National Leagueers have proven to me what I've thought right from the beginning," Stengel said. "I warned my fellows at the start not to take them too lightly. Make no mistake about it, this Milwaukee team is tough."

In Ford, the Braves will be facing a pitcher who not only has muffed them with five hits in a 3-1 success in the opener, but a seasoned performer who has won five World Series games.

In Burdette, the Yankees will be facing a pitcher who has shacked them with only seven hits, only one longer than a single, in his 4-2 triumph over them in the second game.

Warren Spahn, ably supported by the bludgeoning bats of Henry Aaron, Frank Torre, Johnny Logan and Eddie Mathews, gained the all-important Milwaukee victory yesterday. He went the 10-inning distance despite only a three-day rest and 11 Yankee base hits that included a last-ditch three-run homer by Elston Howard and a near-fatal triple by Hank Bauer.

Until the ninth, Spahn was superb. He had limited the Yankee powerhouse to only six hits and had not permitted a run after the first inning. From the second through the seventh, he had faced the minimum of three batters an inning. Two double plays wiped out the only two hits he allowed in that interim.

A double by Andy Carey and a pinch single by Jerry Lumpe put Yankee runners on first and third in the eighth but a third twin killing, started by shortstop Logan, snuffed out that threat. Logan, incidentally, established a series record with 10 assists.

The ninth was a nightmare for Spahn. After retiring the first two batters, the brilliant southpaw seemed certain of an easy 4-1 triumph but a tremendous Yankee rally tied the score at 4-4.

Yogi Berra and Gil McDougald singled and Howard, connecting with a 3-2 pitch, slammed the ball into the left field bleachers for a three-run homer.

Spahn managed to wiggle out of that inning without further damage but in the 10th, again after he retired the first two batters, Tony Kubek beat out an infield hit and scored on a triple by Bauer. All seemed lost when the Braves came to bat in their half. But Tommy Byrne, who had taken over in the eighth, hit pinch hitter Nippy Jones with the first pitch. Bob Grim was summoned from the bullpen.

Red Schoendienst sacrificed pinch runner Felix Mantilla to second. Logan, after taking two balls, smashed a double into the left field corner, tying the score. Stengel preferred to pitch to the left-handed Mathews even though first base was open. A healthy respect for Aaron's bat plus the knowledge that Mathews had been held hitless through the first three games prompted Casey's decision. It proved to be the wrong one.

Mathews, after working the count to 2-2, smashed a fast ball over the right field fence, breaking up the game and sending the delirious crowd into hysterics. It also hung the loss on Grim.

Six of the seven Braves' runs were manufactured by home runs. Besides Mathews' payoff wallop, there were those of Aaron and Torre. Aaron's blast came in the fourth inning, off starter Tom Sturdivant, who had pitched one-hit ball through the first three innings. It put the Braves in front 3-1.

Torre followed one out later, with another home run.

Tar Heels Were 'Hungry', Explains Tatum; So They Beat Favored Navy

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

"Hungry. The boys were hungry for a victory and they went out and got one."

That's how Jim Tatum today described the startling 13-7 victory of his North Carolina Tar Heels over Navy, the nation's six-ranked football team, in one of two major upsets staged by Atlantic Coast Conference teams Saturday.

Duke, ranked fourth nationally, fought Maryland tougher than expected before emerging with a 14-0 victory. Virginia defeated Wake Forest 28-20, to round out games for league teams.

North Carolina didn't use a single pass, and intercepted five Navy aerials. Tatum was asked whether these interceptions, together with the recovery of a Navy fumble on the Middles' 22-yard line that led to a Tar Heel touchdown, meant that the winners were getting all the breaks.

He also was reminded that a clipping penalty nullified a Navy touchdown early in the game.

"Sure, we got some breaks, but you must remember that a winning team makes its own breaks," he said.

The Tar Heels changed their strategy for Navy and instead of making use of a favorite running pass off a pass or end run option, fooled the Middles by staying on the ground.

South Carolina Coach Warren Giese said sophomores was Texas' trouble. "Texas had a lot of sophomores in the lineup and the pressure was on. They just didn't have enough experience," he said.

The pressure was applied by Dixon and fellow halfback Alex Hawkins, each scoring two times. The Gamecocks scored 20 points in the final quarter to win.

The state of Texas will see another ACC club this week when Duke plays Rice at Houston. Duke is led by Wray Carlton, leading scorer in the conference with 40 points. Clanton, who set an individual league record of 26 points against Virginia two weeks ago, scored one touchdown against Maryland, passed for the other to halfback George Dutrow just before the game ended, and converted twice.

Rice, a tough club, ripped Stanford, 34-7, Saturday, after opening with a 20-14 victory over LSU.

Co-ACC leader North Carolina State should have an easier time keeping its slate clean in a Saturday night game at Florida State. The team from Tallahassee has lost to Villanova, 21-7, and to Boston College, 20-7, after opening with a 27-7 victory over Furman.

In other Saturday games, Clemson is at Virginia and Wake For-

Matthews Gloats Over His 'Get Even' Homer

By JOE MOOSHIL

MILWAUKEE (AP)— "This overshadows everything else," gloats Eddie Mathews after pounding out his "get even" homer in Milwaukee's 7-5 World Series victory over the New York Yankees yesterday.

The dramatic drive off reliever Bob Grim evened the series at two games apiece, got Eddie even with Grim who had struck him out at New York and ended the third baseman's slump worries.

Mathews had gone hitless in the first three games before doubling yesterday in the fourth inning of the fourth game.

"Slumps are unpredictable," said Mathews, who had 32 homers and a .292 season average. "You never know when you're going to get in one or when you'll get out. But I'm not, thanks to these lucky pennies and Joe Adcock's bat."

"Before the game started, a writer slipped three pennies in Mathews' back pocket 'for luck.' Whether it was the three pennies, Adcock's bat or just the law of averages, Mathews doesn't care. "The pennies are going to stay right in that pocket through-out the series," said Mathews, "and I'm going to have to stick with Adcock's bat. In fact, I think I'll buy Joe a dozen."

Mathews switched to an Adcock bat after developing a blister in the palm of his hand. "My bat has a knob on the end," Eddie explained, "and that irritated the blister. Joe's bat doesn't have a knob."

The size and the weights of the two players' bats are the same except "mine is a little heavier at the end and the weight in Joe's bat is more evenly distributed."

After Mathews' drive cleared the right field barrier, the 25-year-old Santa Barbara, Calif., bomber was mobbed at the plate by his teammates. In the dressing room he was surrounded by a host of writers and he loved every minute of it.

"This overshadows anything else I've ever done," said the man whose major league homer total

A lot of chub fishermen on the rivers have had some pleasant surprises during the past two weeks. It seems that a lot of rocks and Pamlico rivers more or less by accident. This has caused some intentional rock fishing, but they seem to be hitting sporadically. They have been caught on a wide variety of lures, including gold spinners, butterbeans, sonics and silver spoons with a pork rind attached. Looks like the best bet is to go chub fishing and hope that a school of rocks come by.

I tried the chub Wednesday and had fair success with a spritz spoon. They did not appear interested in top water at all, but the water was very high due to the northeast wind and recent rains. As usual, with high water the fish were in the sloughs and grass. It was necessary to go right back into the woods with weedless spoons to find the fish.

The fishing in brackish water continues to be excellent. Bob Lewis and wife from Mt. Olive, and W. A. Jackson from Kinston brought back a fine catch last Saturday. They were bottom fishing with shrimp in the Neuse River. They caught spot, croakers, sea mullet and a few grey trout. Said they saw some fine catches of speckled trout made near the mouth of Goose Creek with minnows. Best plug reported to be one with a black back and yellow belly.

First Half Of Split Season For Hunting Doves Is Now Behind Us

The first half of the split season for hunting doves, which opened September 7, closed last Saturday. The second half of the split season for hunting doves will open December 11 and close January 10.

The daily bag limit on doves (a migratory bird) was raised from 8 to 10 this year as a result of an increase in dove population throughout the Atlantic states.

The hunting season for hunting squirrel, deer and bear will open October 15 and continue through January 1. The squirrel bag limit has been cut to six and two fox squirrels may be included in the six, Pitt County Game Protection J. O. Teel stated.

In Pitt County, the open season for hunting deer begins October 15 and ends November 1.

The duck and geese season will open November 7 and close January 15.

Any hunter who finds a banded dove should turn the band over to the local wildlife protector or mail it to the U. S. Fish and Wildlife Service, Washington, D. C.

The North Carolina Wildlife Commission will hold a meeting at the courthouse in Washington, N. C. next Thursday at 10 a.m.

WAYNE D. OVERHOLSER'S new Western thriller DESPERATE MAN

CHAPTER 1
My father and I were working on the corral gate when I saw my brother Gil riding across the pasture from Bess Nordin's ranch. I said, "Gil's coming Pa." My father tossed his saw on the ground and straightened up. One thing about Gil: when he was on a horse, he was worth watching.

Gil was riding Buck, his big sorrel gelding. Tuck was the fastest horse in Dillon's park, and Gil loved him, but loving him wasn't enough to keep Gil from riding the devil out of him. He put the sorrel over the barbed wire fence between Nordin's and our Big Ten in a long, graceful jump, and came right on, never missing a lick. A minute later he reined up in front of us.

"In a hurry, Gil?"
"Sure am," Gil said. "Saddle up. A bunch of Rafter 3 cows are coming into the park, and we're gonna run 'em back over the hill."

"Who is?"
"Me'n you and Bess and her crew."

Bess Nordin's crew consisted of two men, Barney Lux and Shorty Quinn. Any way you counted it, that added up to five, including Bess, who was, as Pa often said, the best man in the park. My father was a good hand with a gun and everybody knew it, but even quality wasn't enough against numbers, and Rafter 3 had numbers besides being a plenty salty outfit.

"What happens if we run into some Rafter 3 riders?" my father asked.
"We'll blow their heads off," Gil said.

He sat looking at Pa, his black Stetson cocked at a rakish angle. Flashy! That was the word for Gil. He could do a lot of things well — almost everything except work. He had a talent for wearing fancy clothes and he owned the most expensive pair of jeans in the park. He always carried a pear-handled 44, and he was fast and accurate with it; but whether he could kill a man was something else.

Gil had fallen in love with Bess when we first moved to the park three years ago, and he said he was going to marry her. If he did it would be quite a trick, because she was a strong-minded woman from away back. I hoped he got her. It would serve him right.

My father didn't say anything. Impatiently, Gil said, "Bess told me she'd wait for you." He motioned toward me. "The kid can finish the gate." Then he whirled his sorrel and took off for Anchor.

The kid can finish the gate. That was like him. I stood watching until he disappeared, blood pounding in my temples. Sure, I could stay here and finish the gate, while he sashayed around over the country trying to look good in front of Bess.

Gil was twenty-two. I was nineteen. He used to whip me regularly until I was sixteen. It hadn't been too tough a job, with him three years older than I was. Then there'd been the time in Buhl, the county seat, when I jumped me. I'd have whipped him if Ma hadn't knocked me groggy by hitting me on the head with a frying pan. He hadn't tackled me since.

When Gil was home he never turned a hand. He was sickly, Ma said, and him as big as a young Southern bull. Funny thing: he couldn't work at home, but he'd go over to Bess's ranch and shine up to her.

I hadn't realized my father had saddled up until he said, "Dave." He stood a few feet from me, holding the reins of his brown horse. When I looked at him, he said, "I've felt the same way more'n once, Dave." He stepped into the saddle. Then he said, "Never mind the gate."

He rode off, not across the pasture the way Gil had, but down the lane to the road. Quite a man, my father. Big, hard working, patient, Joe Munro deserved more than he'd received from life — the way I saw it, anyhow. He was one of the reasons I'd stayed home. He needed me and he loved me, and I loved him.

I hated Gil. I'd hated him as long as I could remember, and someday I'd break his neck. Here were times, too, when I hated my mother. I knew it was wrong, but I couldn't help it.

Ma hadn't wanted me in the first place. She had a hard time when Gil was born. She almost died, and she told my father she wouldn't have any more children. I don't believe she ever neglected me — physically, I mean. But if she ever gave me a caress or a word of endearment, I couldn't remember it.

"Where did they go, Dave?" Ma called from the back porch. I stood looking at her for a moment. She was a small woman, under five feet, and I never knew her to weigh more than one hundred pounds. Now, at forty, she was showing her age. Her hair was grey, she had wrinkles in her cheeks and around her eyes.

Right then I wasn't in any mood to listen to her fret about Gil. I said, "A bunch of Rafter 3 cows are headed into the park, and they're going to run 'em back over the hill."

Now she really had something to fret about. All of us who lived in the park were under the shadow of Rafter 3 guns. The trouble had never come to a head, but it was only a question of time until it would, unless Vic Toll, the Rafter 3 foreman, got a dose of lead poisoning.

I went into the barn, climbed to the mow, and lay down on the hay. I had a hunch Kitzay would be over. She was Bess's younger sister, seventeen and pretty, and the one person in the world who meant more to me than my father. We were in love and wanted to get married, but Bess threw the monkey wrench at us.

Bess was twenty-five, and she and Kitzay had no one but each other. Their folks died when Kitzay was small and Bess had practically raised her. "Kitzay isn't going to work like I have," Bess said daily. "When she's eighteen, she's going away to school. She'll marry somebody with money, not a kid like you, Dave, who doesn't have ten cents to his name."

Bess wasn't a woman to change her mind. She didn't have anything against me, but she'd decided Kitzay's future, and that ended the whole business.

The only time Kitzay and I were alone was when Bess and the crew were gone, and Gil wasn't at either place. Oh, we could see each other at parties or in church on Sunday morning or maybe at a school shindig, but always when Bess was around.

I didn't wait long. I heard the barn door open and close, the one on the north side that Ma couldn't see from the house. A moment later Kitzay climbed the ladder to the mow and stood there, smiling, provocatively at me.

I said, "Hello, Kitzay." She put her hands on her hips. "Were you expecting me?"

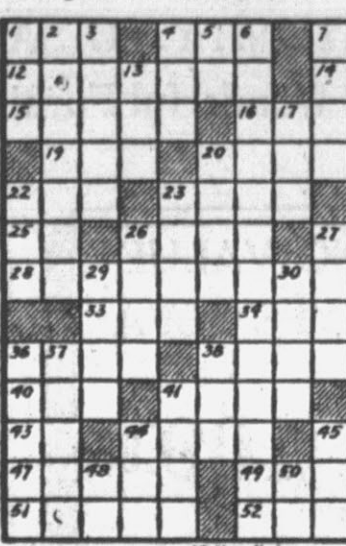

I said, "Counting on it." I couldn't even look at her without getting tied up inside. Blue eyes, chestnut hair that held just a little curl, a slim figure more girl than woman, Kitzay Nordin was everything in the world I wanted.

Science Shrinks Piles New Way Without Surgery

Finds Healing Substance That Does Both—
Relieves Pain—Shrinks Hemorrhoids

New York, N. Y. (Special) — For the first time science has found a new healing substance with the astonishing ability to shrink hemorrhoids and to relieve pain—without surgery. In case after case, while gently relieving pain, actual reduction (shrinkage) took place. Most amazing of all—results were so thorough that sufferers made astonishing statements like "Piles have ceased to be a problem!"

The secret is a new healing substance (Bio-Dyne®)—discovery of a world-famous research institute. This substance is now available in suppository or ointment form under the name Preparation H. At your drugstore. Money back guarantee.

Teamsters Begin Rocky Road Into Dubious Future

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP)—The Teamsters Union, with President Elect James Hoffa at the wheel, headed out on a rocky road today in the wake of a convention held under fire.

Pending in federal courts at Washington is an effort by New York rank and file Teamsters members to discredit the acts of the convention on claims of "rigged" voting delegations.

The AFL-CIO Council meets in New York Oct. 24. It had warned the convention under pain of expulsion not to elect Hoffa, and said both Hoffa and retiring President Dave Beck were unfit to stay in organized labor.

If the Council suspends the 14-million-member Teamsters, and Hoffa himself faces charges of wiretapping conspiracy and perjury in New York federal courts Oct. 15.

That is the same day the 44-year-old Detroit labor leader was scheduled to succeed Beck, to whom the convention granted leave as of that date. But Hoffa, already top Teamster in all but title, probably will assume the office earlier through an arrangement revealed by Beck yesterday.

Beck, 63, told newsmen he had offered Hoffa his resignation effective anytime Hoffa wants it. He said that probably would be in a week or so. Beck's five-year term is scheduled to expire Dec. 1.

Beck will receive a $50,000 a year pension as retired president. Hoffa was congratulated on his election by Maurice A. Hutcheson, president of the 800,000-member Carpenters Union and a member of the 29-man AFL-CIO Council. Officials of three sailors' unions also were reported congratulating him.

Many Roadblocks To His Ambition

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP)—When he was a 7-year-old in Glubokie, Poland, David Swindler watched his dad make the rounds as village policeman. He dreamed of one day becoming an officer, too.

Now that dream has come true—but in Oklahoma City, when he became a rookie scout car officer.

A lot happened in the intervening years. There was World War II, occupation by the Russians, forced labor in a camp in Siberia, then release to relatives in Germany and emigration to the United States.

Most of the young officer's family died in the Siberian camp.

SEOUL (AP)—The United States and South Korea today exchanged instruments of ratification of the friendship, commerce and navigation treaty they signed last Nov. 28. The treaty goes into force one month from today.

THEY CAN AFFORD THE LIFE INSURANCE YOU NEED!
NATIONWIDE'S FAMILY INCOME PLAN SHOWS YOU HOW

—Nationwide's low premium FAMILY INCOME PLAN starts out with a large amount of protection when your children are young—when you need the maximum coverage your dollar can buy!

As your needs diminish, your protection tapers off . . . and when the children are grown, your policy still provides permanent protection plus high cash values for retirement income. Get all details now!

AN EXAMPLE OF THE PLAN AT WORK
If you have a $10,000, 20-year plan, and death occurs during the 6th year after the policy is issued, your family receives:

IMMEDIATE LUMP SUM
to pay for last expenses . . . $ 2,000
PLUS—A LUMP SUM BENEFIT or its equivalent in monthly income at the end of the 20-year period . . . $ 8,000

EMERGENCY INCOME
of $200 MONTHLY
for 12 full months . . . $ 2,400
THEN—AN INCOME
of $100 MONTHLY
beginning the 13th month following death and continuing for 14 full years . . . $16,800

TOTAL PAYMENTS TO YOUR FAMILY . . . $29,200*
FACE AMOUNT OF POLICY . . . $10,000

*Benefits reduce proportionately if death occurs later in 20-year period. Benefits equal the face amount if death occurs after the family income period.

High Court Begins New Term; Big Ruling Ahead

By PAUL M. YOST
WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court today begins a new term that is certain to produce historic decisions affecting racial relations, Communist activities and other important national problems.

The court already has agreed to hear arguments in 113 cases. In the previous term that ended July 11, the court heard arguments in 123 cases. Thus, from the standpoint of oral arguments, the justices already have a work load almost equal to that of the entire 1956-57 term.

Pending school integration and subversive activities cases could add to the controversy still ranging from last term.

Whether the Little Rock school situation will reach the Supreme Court is problematical, but the court is expected to act this month on an appeal involving Virginia's pupil placement act.

Virginia and school officials of Norfolk and Newport News joined in the appeal, asking the court to review lower federal court decisions that the act is unconstitutional. The Virginia act conferred on a state board the authority for assignment of pupils. The appeal said the board could act on stated bases, but none of them involved in any way race or color.

"The time has come," the appeal said, "for the Supreme Court to recognize and expound the practicalities of life in these areas (affected by integration) and to establish a framework within which public education can continue."

Other cases involving racial difficulties range from a $100,000 contempt fine given the National Assn. for Advancement of Colored People in Montgomery, Ala., to a $75,000 damage suit by Negro railroad workers in Houston who contend they were discriminated against in favor of white workers. A long list of cases dealing with subversive activities awaits court action, with top interest in two appeals contesting constitutionality of the "knowing membership" clause of the Smith Act.

Communist leaders Claude M. Lightfoot and Julius I. Scales, first to be convicted under the clause, filed the appeals. Final decisions in their cases may not come in the new court term, however, because the Justice Department said the convictions must be set aside. The department took this stand in view of a Supreme Court decision last June that defendants must be given access to secret government files in certain cases.

In the labor field, the court has been asked to rule on the authority of a state court to ban picketing that was accompanied by threats to monistries and offensive name calling. It also was asked to rule whether, under some union contracts with employers, unions may induce workers not to handle "hot cargo" — that is, nonunion or struck goods.

In the business field, pending appeals concern validity of "tie-in" sales of whisky, "fair trade" pricing practices by large manufacturers, cutting or milk prices to kill off competition, the right of three major soap companies to study testimony given before a grand jury in an antitrust law case, and asserted predatory pricing by chain stores.

By long tradition, today's session is brief and given over to opening formalities. Next Monday the court plunges into its work in full.

NEW YORK (AP)—Russia's mandate moon boosted aircraft and other missile-making stocks early this afternoon but the stock market as a whole was lower.

The missile-related stocks were ahead from 1 to 3 points as Wall Street anticipated bigger spending as an answer to the Soviet success.

But key stocks elsewhere in the list fell as much as 2 points or so as brokers reported scare selling based on nervousness about the general situation.

Volume was heavy in the first hour or so due chiefly to the succession of big blocks of aircraft and missile makers. These issues soared as much as 4 points at the start. But as trading slowed several trimmed their gains while others went to new highs for the day.

The drop in other sections of the market was not accompanied by heavy selling but it was enough to put the stocks down. At the same time, considerable short-selling was reported.

Martin Co. and General Dynamics were among the stocks which improved initial gains, surging ahead more than 3 points each. Douglas Aircraft trimmed an early 4-point gain to around 3. Boeing clipped a point from its initial rise of more than 3. Lukens Steel plummeted around 8 points on news that it has cut its base price on carbon steel plate. It knocked about 2 points off the loss in subsequent dealings.

Leading rails were mostly lower. Southern Railway and Southern Pacific lost fractions. The Associated Press average of 60 stocks at noon was down $1.10 to $166.50 with the industrials down $2.00, the rails down $1.00 and the utilities unchanged.

Driver Is Bound Over Today On Hit-Run Charge

A 27-year-old Bethel driver, accused of running over two Negro brothers on the U. S. 13 Bypass Saturday night, has been bound over to Superior Court on a hit-and-run charge.

In City Court this morning, Judge Charles H. Whedbee also found Donald G. Morris guilty on two other charges resulting from the accident. Morris was sentenced to 60 days on the roads, with the recommendation that his license be revoked permanently on the charge of careless and reckless driving. In addition he was found guilty for operating a motor vehicle without a license and sentenced to 30 days, suspended upon payment of court costs and on the stipulation that he not operate an automobile for 12 months.

The two brothers, struck by Morris' automobile, were identified as Calvin Moore, 20, who sustained a severely broken left leg, and Alton Moore, 21, who received a broken bone in his left leg.

The youngest brother was admitted following emergency treatment at Pitt Memorial Hospital. His condition was described as "satisfactory" this morning. Following treatment, his injured brother was released.

Morris' automobile, traveling north on the bypass, reportedly struck the two pedestrians, walking on the right side of the highway. The accident took place at approximately 7:40 p.m.

Less than 10 minutes after the accident occurred Morris was arrested by Pts. W. E. Williams and J. B. Surles. The two State Highway Patrolmen, stationed a short distance up the highway, observed Morris' automobile pass, they said, "at a high rate of speed".

Giving chase, the officers finally caught Morris' vehicle approximately a mile up the highway when he attempted to make a wide turn onto another road. His automobile blocked in, the driver attempted to flee but was caught by the officers.

He reportedly stated, "I didn't mean to do it."

When asked what he had done, Morris told the Patrolmen that he hit a man up the road. Upon finding out what had happened, Williams and Surles placed the driver in their vehicle and went back to the scene of the accident.

Williams stated they found two men lying on the shoulder of the road, neither being able to get to his feet. A companion, who was walking with them at the time of the accident, was standing by trying to flag down traffic on the west highway.

He stated that the automobile ran off the side of the highway and hit his two friends. Morris said the injured pedestrians were walking on the highway, adding, "I did not see them until about the time I hit them."

Williams stated that it was impossible to tell whether or not the vehicle ran off the road because of weather conditions. Morris stated he knew he had hit someone but became excited and tried to get away from the scene of the accident as fast as he could.

The Bethel resident also told officers that his license had been revoked three years ago and he had not gotten them back. He admitted having "two good drinks."

The two brothers, struck by Morris' automobile, were identified as Calvin Moore, 20, who sustained a severely broken left leg, and Alton Moore, 21, who received a broken bone in his left leg.

The youngest brother was admitted following emergency treatment at Pitt Memorial Hospital. His condition was described as "satisfactory" this morning. Following treatment, his injured brother was released.

Morris' automobile, traveling north on the bypass, reportedly struck the two pedestrians, walking on the right side of the highway. The accident took place at approximately 7:40 p.m.

Less than 10 minutes after the accident occurred Morris was arrested by Pts. W. E. Williams and J. B. Surles. The two State Highway Patrolmen, stationed a short distance up the highway, observed Morris' automobile pass, they said, "at a high rate of speed".

Giving chase, the officers finally caught Morris' vehicle approximately a mile up the highway when he attempted to make a wide turn onto another road. His automobile blocked in, the driver attempted to flee but was caught by the officers.

He reportedly stated, "I didn't mean to do it."

Report Record-Breaking Results N. C. Industrial Development Drive

SOUTHERN PINES, N.C. (AP)—North Carolina's Industrial Development Campaign showed record-breaking results during the three-month period ending Oct. 1.

This was shown today in figures presented to the State Board of Conservation and Development as it opened its two-day fall meeting here.

The board was told that announced investments in new plants and plant expansions in North Carolina during the three-month period totaled more than $55 million dollars, largest ever reported for any one quarter.

Gov. Hodges was scheduled to address a joint meeting of the board and the Rotary, Kiwanis and Lions clubs of Southern Pines shortly after noon.

John J. Appleyard, acting chief development engineer for the Commerce and Industry Division of the Department of Conservation and Development, reported that the new plants and plant expansions announced for the July-August-September period will provide employment for 4,896 persons and a total annual payroll of $16,576,000. Investments earmarked for these plants and expansions total $95,523,000.

During the same period in 1956 the new plants and expansions totaled $32,517,000, provided new jobs for 4,809 persons and an annual payroll of $13,004,000. For the same quarter in 1955 investments totaled $16,095,000.

Of the 73 new plants and expansions announced during the third quarter of this year, 34 will be new plants. They have announced investments of $78,960,000, employment for 3,626, and an annual payroll of $12,999,000.

Especially significant new programs announced during the third quarter included Allied-Kennecott Titanium Corp., Wilmington; R. J. Reynolds Co., Winston-Salem; and C. Howard Hunt Pen Co., Statesville.

The Piedmont led other areas in new plants gained, listing some 55 per cent of total new industries, the board was told. Approximately imately 35 per cent of the new firms located in the third quarter settled in the coastal plain, while 10 per cent located in the mountain section.

Appleyard said the change made by the 1957 Legislature in the state's income tax allocation formula "has already had a substantial impact upon North Carolina's industrial development program."

He added, however, "It must be concluded that the full, on-range benefits cannot as yet be accurately measured."

He said that analysis of inquiries about the tax program directed to Gov. Hodges and to other state departments is continuing and thus far has turned up "what we believe to be 11 potential prospects."

The board also received reports from C&D Department Division heads today. The board's standing committees planned to begin their meetings this afternoon. The final business session of the board starts tomorrow at 2 p.m.

Yesterday Gov. Hodges, board members and C&D Department personnel were taken on a tour of the Seaboard's Freight Classification Yards at Hamlet.

10-Year-Old Found Her Mother Dead

CROWD STANDS OUTSIDE OF DEAD WOMAN'S DOOR ... young unwed mother's body found yesterday.

Police officers late yesterday afternoon found a young unwed Negro mother of two dead of an apparent self-abortion.

The woman was identified as Mary Louise Moye, 25, of 702-B Imperial St. She was found on a bed in the front room of her home.

Pitt Coroner Griffin H. Rouse stated, following his investigation, that the woman died from excessive loss of blood caused by an apparent self-abortion.

She was found by her 10-year-old daughter who had been out playing most of the afternoon. The youngster, upon finding her mother, started screaming, attracting police officers who were conducting an investigation of another case nearby.

Coroner Rouse said the woman had been dead for possibly three or four hours when she was found at approximately 6 p.m.

The Moye woman also had an eight-year-old son who was not home at the time of the incident.

Illicit Whiskey Found In His Car

A 44-year-old local Negro was charged with possession and transportation of non-tax-paid whiskey by Pitt ABC officers working with ATU Agent Charlie Smith early Saturday night.

Bruce Reddick, 44-year-old resident of 307 E. First St., was arrested and charged when officers found four and one-half gallons of illicit whiskey in the back of his automobile parked in front of his house.

Reddick was given a hearing yesterday in New Bern and released under bond pending the next term of Federal Court in Washington, N. C. His automobile was also confiscated pending further court action, officers stated.

Wound Up Deep In Creek Bed

WACO, Tex. (AP)—Pedro Trevino, 45, was rescued by an ambulance driver from a 40-foot-deep creek bed and taken to a hospital with back injuries.

Pedro explained that he got tired while walking home. He said he started to sit down on a bridge railing and then found himself on the creek bed.

Air Force Sends Man 'Simulated' 95 Miles Up

BALTIMORE (AP) — With the world looking to space and speculating when it will be able to send men to the moon, the Air Force announced today it has sent a man to a record simulated altitude of 95 miles.

Niels Jensen, a scientist from Litton Industries, Inc. of Beverly Hills, Calif., made the trip without leaving the ground by wearing a special pressure suit in a chamber capable of producing rarified atmosphere.

Litton designed and constructed the new high vacuum chamber, 15 feet long and 8 feet in diameter for the Air Research and Development Command's Office of Scientific Research.

The pressure suit enables Jensen to provide accurate information about his own physical behavior and to observe the reaction of materials, equipment and instruments under extremely low pressure and density.

Normalcy After Coastal Storm

MANTEO, N. C. (AP)—Things are back to normal today following Saturday night's storm which buffeted the Outer Banks with gusts of wind up to 45 miles an hour and high tides which flooded some roads and buildings.

Telephone communication with the mainland also was lost for a couple of hours, but radio communication was maintained.

The highway between Oregon Inlet and Hatteras was flooded for a time, and a general store on the Manns Harbor waterfront had 15 inches of water in it.

The state ferry at Oregon Inlet is expected to resume service today. It stopped Saturday afternoon.

A dredge operating at Oregon Inlet lost half a dozen pontoons to the storm.
