Queen Said Sounding Out Ike On A Visit To Britain

WASHINGTON (AP)—Queen Elizabeth II turned today from affairs of state, like British-American unity, to watch her first American football game.

Last night, she dined and exchanged with Secretary of State Dulles a pledge of unceasing "free and friendly cooperation," as she put it in a formal toast to President Eisenhower.

Today, she was a guest for the University of Maryland-North Carolina University football game. Her seat was in a carefully engineered box at the 50-yard line.

But before the game in nearby College Park, Md., she and her tall blond husband, Prince Philip, faced a round of the sort of thing they usually do at home.

First up was a British Embassy reception for the diplomatic staffs here of the commonwealth nations. Following that, the Queen arranged to confer honors on American and commonwealth citizens. Then came the laying of a foundation stone for a new office building at the British Embassy. Philip had a date to visit the Marine barracks for a troop review.

The climax of today's program was a state dinner tonight at the embassy honoring President and Mrs. Eisenhower.

Elizabeth was reported, meanwhile, to have informally sounded out Eisenhower on the possibility of his visiting London next year.

The British Information Service in Washington denied any invitation had been extended. But in London officials close to Buckingham Palace and the cabinet said they understood the Queen had personally and informally let Eisenhower know a visit would be welcome when he finds time. They did not say what response she got.

For the foundation stone ceremonies, Elizabeth selected a guest used by one of her kinsmen, George Washington, to start building the U.S. Capitol in 1793. Last Wednesday the British Foreign Office confirmed what had been asserted for at least two years: That she and Washington, as well as Robert E. Lee, were distant relatives.

It was clear to all observing the petite Queen that she has found a new role for herself here. Perhaps because of criticism at home from people like Lord Altrincham and writer Malcolm Muggeridge, Elizabeth has changed her style.

They complained, to the consternation of the royal household, that her public behavior lacked enough of the human touch.

She certainly has it here. Usually blasé Washington was delighted with her broad smile, blue eyes and clear complexion. They liked her demure manner on occasions such as her visit to Children's Hospital, and her regal bearing at ultra-formal functions like the banquet with Dulles at the Pan American Union Building.

The 31-year-old sovereign and Dulles, her host, went far beyond the usual protocol pleasantries in their exchange of toasts at the dinner.

It seemed that in back of their minds was the U.S.-British rift last year over Britain's attack on the Suez Canal area. Certainly they appeared to be laying groundwork for talks in Washington next Wednesday between Eisenhower and British Prime Minister Harold Macmillan.

Ocean-Hop Pilot Found Off Spain

Texas-To-Rome Flight Hit Head Winds, Plane Crashed Into Sea

CORUNA, Spain (AP)—American pilot William Wyatt, attempting a nonstop Texas-Rome flight in a single engine plane, crashed into the sea off this port today. A Spanish fishing vessel rescued him.

Earlier in the morning, U. S. and French air force planes from Bordeaux had begun a search for the 25-year-old former Marine pilot when he failed to report in there. Two French dispatch ships also were ordered out.

Wyatt had expected to land at Bordeaux after strong headwinds on his North Atlantic crossing forced him to give up hope of reaching Rome.

He had been unreported since radioing a position near the tiny island of Groix, 10 miles off the French port of Lorient. Lorient is about 400 airline miles northeast of Coruna.

Wyatt's small, single-engine plane had carried only enough gasoline to last until about 3:25 a.m. EST.

He took off from Galveston at 7:25 a.m. EST Thursday hoping to reach Rome in 36 to 40 hours. He carried 64 hours of fuel.

Wyatt's course to Rome covered 5,693 miles. He was trying to break the 4,957-mile record for single-engine aircraft set in 1949 by the late William Odom in a flight from Honolulu to Teterboro, N.J.

No search was reported underway for Wyatt.

Claim 'Plot'

MOSCOW (AP)—The Soviet Union has charged the United States with a master plot for starting a Middle Eastern war. The Kremlin again warned that it will defend Syria if she is attacked.

A Tass News Agency statement said yesterday that fighting on Russia's southern borders "would threaten in the most serious manner the Soviet Union's security interests."

The statement added:

"No one should doubt that in case of an attack against Syria the Soviet Union, guided by the aims of principles of the U. N. Charter and the interests of its own security, will take all necessary measures to provide help to the victim of aggression."

The statement described a plot which it said had been devised by the Deputy Undersecretary of State Loy Henderson for an invasion of Syria to overthrow the government.

Henderson worked out the plan in conference last month with top officials of Turkey, Iraq, Jordan and Israel, Tass said. It charged that Iraq and Jordan were to begin the attack against Syria, with Turkey and the U. S. 6th Fleet striking Israel was to enter the battle after it was well under way.

McElroy Says Delays On Missile Are 'Out'

WASHINGTON (AP)—Secretary of Defense Neil McElroy has served notice he will stand for no delays in planned development of long range ballistic missiles.

He also indicated yesterday he will accept no excuses that bottlenecks or lack of help are impeding progress in this vital defense field.

The new Pentagon boss, who has been on the job less than two weeks, made known his position in a memorandum to the secretaries of the Army, Navy and Air Force.

A number of Congress members of both parties have voiced concern over the recent launching of a Russian earth satellite before the United States could get one aloft. Some of them have said this, coupled with Russia's claimed success in testing an intercontinental missile, indicates the United States has fallen dangerously behind the Soviets.

Sen. Russell (D-Ga.), chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, said in Blackshear, Ga., he planned to fly here today to direct a committee investigation of the nation's missile and satellite programs.

In his memo, McElroy said he was "greatly encouraged by the congress" he said is being made at missile centers he visited. He said that during these visits, he had watched firings of both operational and test weapons "which in general met or exceeded their design specifications."

He said it appeared the missile program represents "the best balance of technical knowledge, trained manpower and test installations that we can make it this time."

McElroy stressed the "great importance to our national security of maintaining these programs on schedule."

The individual service heads were ordered to send weekly progress reports to William Holaday, McElroy's assistant in charge of missile matters, and to mark copies of such reports "for my personal attention."

The defense chief instructed the service secretaries to inform him directly if they need any help on scientific problems that might be hindering progress in ballistic missiles development.

At one point in his memo, McElroy seemed to be taking note of charges by some members of congress and others that development of American intercontinental missile has been slowed by interservice rivalries.

He told the service heads to inform his guided missiles aides immediately of any assistance which any other service, the Defense Department or any government agency can provide "which will insure the maintenance of our schedules."

McElroy said that as far as he knows, all requests for permission to pay overtime in the missile program had been approved.

The defense chief said a preliminary study turned up no regulations to hamper progress in ballistic weapons development.

Meanwhile, Vice Adm. John H. Sides, director of the Defense Department's weapons evaluation group, said last night that he is confident "that we shall win" the race for development of effective intercontinental missiles.

Speaking in New York, the admiral disputed the Russian claim to have achieved such a missile. He said the Russian claim probably was based on an "errant Sputnik" that failed to reach its orbit when launched late in August.

Motorboater Still At Sea; Family Not Yet Worried

MOREHEAD CITY, N.C. (AP)—Melvin West was somewhere out in the Atlantic today in the S.S. Impossible. And the parents and wife of the 23-year-old disc jockey were getting a little concerned, but not overly worried, on whether he had been successful in piloting a 15-foot outboard motorboat 580 miles from Morehead City to Bermuda.

However, his mother did ask the Coast Guard to start searching for him.

"If anybody can do it, Melvin can," said Mrs. Barry West, one of the lives of her five sons. "He and my other children have been around water all their lives."

Mrs. West and her husband, who manages the Triple-S fishing pier here, also have a daughter.

The mother said she has asked the Coast Guard search not because she was deeply worried, but because it might take quite a few hours for it to get under way, and she thought the precautionary request was best.

Melvin, a Korean war veteran who works for radio station WJNC at Jacksonville, N.C., 42 miles from his home here, started out at 8:35 a.m. Thursday after an abortive attempt earlier that morning because of fuel line trouble.

The Coast Guard at Bermuda said the weather there the last two days has been beautiful, with no wind, little sea, and visibility of five miles. It added that a search would be started if West was unsighted for a reasonable time.

West had assurance that the weather would hold good for 48 hours when he took off.

He relied for navigation on a sextant, compass and a radio set that could receive voice and directional signals, but couldn't transmit.

At 8:35 a.m. today, 48 hours after his departure, a British Coast Guard officer at Bermuda told Beaufort radio station WBMA there had been no report on West's whereabouts. The officer said the weather was good and visibility was 5 miles or better.

He added that a search would be started if, after a reasonable delay, West did not arrive or were not sighted by a ship.

The adventurer, married and the father of three children, said he spent a year and $3,000 preparing for the journey.

He believed it would be the longest trip on record in the open ocean for an outboard.

Boat builders and outboard manufacturers were skeptical that his frail craft and a 30-horsepower motor would enable him to make it.

He took gasoline for 70 hours, a life preserver, rain gear, fishing equipment and a three-day supply of food.

His start was hampered by a broken fuel line which he discovered when he was 30 miles out. He returned to land for repairs, and took off again.

West works for radio station WJNC here. He carried a letter of introduction from Mayor George Dill of Morehead City to Lt. Gen. Sir Alexander Hood, royal governor of Bermuda.

His father, Barry West, operates a pier in Morehead City.

Sky-Gazers Saw Something Over The Carolinas

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

They weren't exactly sure what they were seeing in the skies over the Carolinas this morning, but the amateur astronomers are certain it was Russian-made.

Either the Sputnik or the third stage of the rocket which launched it—both of which are rotating about the earth—was spotted early today by observers in the two-state area.

George Phillips, heading the moonwatch operation at Greensboro, reported that his group got a good sighting of the rocket at 4:36 a.m. and spotted the dim Sputnik at 4:58. This is not a confirmed sighting of the satellite, he emphasized.

Phillips said the rocket was as bright as the brightest star, the satellite so dim it was approaching the limit of visibility. He added that the rocket was sighted about five minutes later than was expected, which he theorized means that the rocket still is losing altitude and picking up speed.

The satellite, he remarked, was seen much lower on the horizon.

At Charlotte, the Amateur Astronomers Club sighted the object at 4:42 a.m. It was just about the time they expected to spot the satellite, but some said it looked more like the rocket and it didn't pass through the path set up by their tracking device.

The object, visible for about a minute, finally was lost in the light of the moon.

At Greenville, S.C., Bob Jones University science student H. Gene Sheagley sighted the satellite or rocket at 4:47 a.m. He observed it for about 90 seconds and also lost it in the moon.

Sheagley said it was in the area of the Big Dipper and was as bright as the brightest members of that star group.

Generally, the weather seemed much more favorable this morning for moonwatching than it has been the past two or three mornings.

However, a Morehead City, N.C. couple Mr. and Mrs. John Danielson, reported they saw an object yesterday morning which they took to be the satellite. Many inland points complained of obscuring haze at that time.

West Germany Severs Relations

BONN, Germany (AP)—West Germany severed diplomatic relations with Yugoslavia today. The Yugoslav ambassador called the action an example of "senseless pressure."

The ambassador, 42-year-old Dusan Kveder, said at a news conference shortly after he was told to go home that Bonn's action "would lead to direct damage to both West Germany and the general political situation in the world."

Kveder did not explain what these consequences would be.

It was the first time since 1871 that a German government acting in peacetime had broken diplomatic ties with another country.

Foreign Minister Heinrich von Brentano, who told Kveder of his government's decision, said the move was made as a result of Yugoslavia's recognition of Communist East Germany, which Bonn denies has any legal existence.

Up to the last moment, Yugoslav officials had been saying they hoped "responsible opinion" would prevail and Bonn would not take the strong step.

The Communist party newspaper in Belgrade said last night that breaking relations would be "contrary to the basic principles of international relations." It said Yugoslavia's attitude toward West Germany had not been changed by recognition of the Red government.

German Chancellor Konrad Adenauer had threatened to treat as an unfriendly act any recognition of East Germany by a nation outside the Soviet bloc. Yugoslavia is the first nation outside that bloc to offer to send an ambassador to East Berlin.

'Vanguard' Rocket Test Is Put Off Twice Yesterday

WASHINGTON (AP)—A test of the Navy's Vanguard rocket—the powerhouse planned to propel an American satellite into space—apparently was put off twice yesterday.

The scheduled firing at Cape Canaveral, Fla., was to have been a test of the Vanguard's first stage engine. There was no explanation of why the test wasn't held.

Meanwhile, Russia's Sputnik began its third week of orbiting the earth at about 18,000 miles an hour. New sightings of the satellite were reported in Wisconsin.

Newsmen watching the Florida test area through binoculars yesterday said towers and cranes were moved up to the missile then withdrawn—the second time when a rain squall swept the area.

There was no word when the Vanguard test might be rescheduled. Two preliminary tests of Vanguard rocket stages, held previously, have been described officially as successful.

The first fully instrumented satellite is scheduled to be fired into its orbit next March.

Eight Milwaukee astronomical society observers said they sighted Sputnik yesterday. Edward A. Halbach, director of the society's observatory in the town of New Berlin, said the sightings appeared to be almost certain.

A Smithsonian Astrophysical Observatory official, Dr. Allan Hynek, yesterday proposed establishment of a cabinet post to create a liaison between the government and scientists.

"I suggest," he said, "a cabinet post, such as a secretary of science who would serve in an advisory capacity as a liaison between the government and science, and it would be somebody with the stature of Dr. Vannevar Bush." Bush, an internationally known scientist, headed the huge government research program during World War II.

Hynek also said the United States could land a man on the moon in five years, if it were a matter of national survival. Earlier yesterday, a Russian scientist had said the Soviets would some day, "maybe soon," set up an observation station on the moon. Presumably he meant an unmanned station, operating automatically.

There were other suggestions yesterday, from Sen. Bridges (R-NH) and Flanders (R-Vt.), for some sort of government organization to coordinate scientific effort.

Democratic National Chairman Paul M. Butler said last night that the Soviet satellite points up what he termed "the astounding failure of the Republican administration to maintain leadership for our country in scientific advancement."

Butler said President Eisenhower has displayed "appalling" indifference toward the Soviet satellite launching.

"It is time that Mr. Eisenhower and his administration face up to the realities," Butler added.

Sen. Symington (D-Mo.), a frequent critic of the administration's defense policies, told a Democratic conference in Kansas City yesterday that the successful launching of the satellite means Russia can fire a missile "with a 4,000 pound warhead against any target in the world."

Secretary of Commerce Weeks said last night in Edgewater Park, Miss., that the Russian satellite presents a challenge to the free enterprise system. Sputnik's "beep-beep" signal, he said, is "more than a warning siren." He added:

"It is the starting signal in a new contest to demonstrate again what this country really can do when challenged... the coming months will be the acid test of government leadership and business statesmanship."

Pinay Blocked In French Assembly

PARIS (AP)—President Rene Coty turned to the center parties today for a possible premier after conservative Antoine Pinay failed to win national assembly approval to head the country's 24th postwar government.

Pinay, leader of the Independents and peasants, won only 197 votes to 248 against him—mostly Socialists and Communists. There were many abstentions.

The Socialists killed Pinay's hopes by opposing him when he demanded special powers for a year to deal with economic and financial problems and indicated he might cut social services.

Coty had a choice between immediately designating someone else to try to form a government or naming a coadjutor to seek information and try to pave the way for a new premier.

The president reportedly called in former premiers Robert Schuman, a popular republican; Henry Queuille, a radical Socialist; and Guy Mollet, a Socialist.

Conscience Hurt, Sent Police $10

DECATUR, Ill. (AP)—A conscientious motorist who ran through a red light has sent Decatur police $10 and a note explaining: "I am imposing a fine upon myself; so I will be more careful in the future."

The writer told of unintentionally crossing on a red light. "There were no cars from any direction, so I did no harm," the note read. "But I violated a traffic law, so I am guilty."

Delay Selecting New Technical School's Site

RALEIGH (AP)—Selection of a site for a new, two-year technical institute for the eastern section of the state must wait until North Carolina State College has determined needs for the school.

This word came yesterday from the State Board of Higher Education. After its monthly meeting, a board committee met with budget division officials to discuss plans for picking the site.

Goldensboro, Kinston, Rocky Mount and Elizabeth City have been among communities which have shown interest in giving a home to the new technical institute.

It will be a counterpart to Gaston Technical Institute in Gastonia, which N.C. State College staffs and operates. Dr. J. Harris Parks, higher education director, told the board the college "is making progress" in determining space and equipment needs for the new facility.

Faubus Prevents Extradition Of His Cousin

VENTURA, Calif. (AP)—Gov. Orval Faubus of Arkansas has refused to grant extradition of his cousin on a charge of non-support, the district attorneys reports.

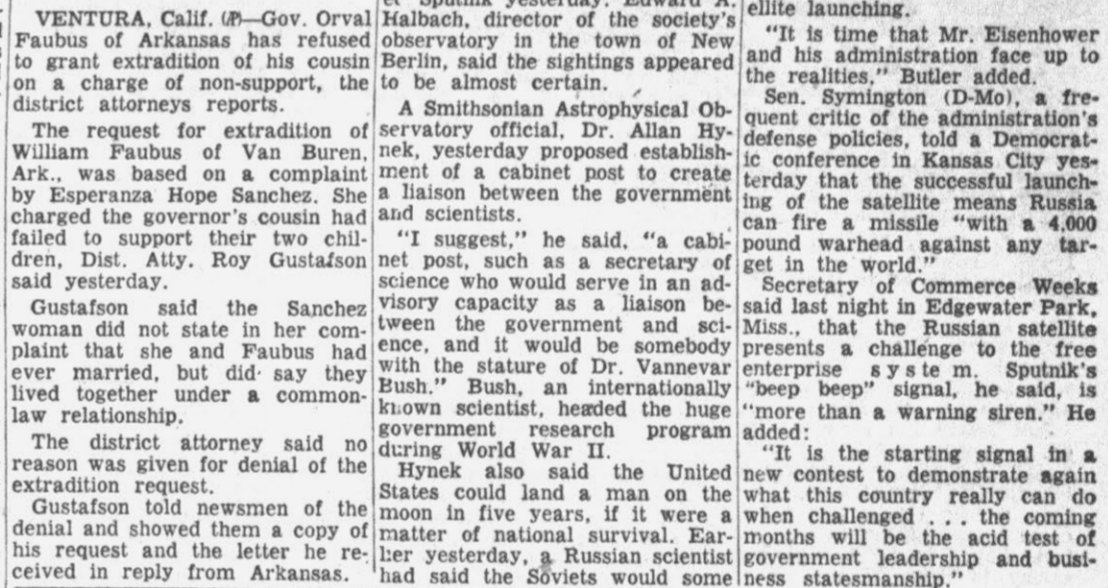

The request for extradition of William Faubus of Van Buren, Ark., was based on a complaint by Esperanza Hope Sanchez. She charged the governor's cousin had failed to support their two children, Dist. Atty. Roy Gustafson said yesterday.

Gustafson said the Sanchez woman did not state in her complaint that she and Faubus had ever married, but did say they lived together under a common law relationship.

The district attorney said no reason was given for denial of the extradition request.

Gustafson told newsmen of the denial and showed them a copy of his request and the letter he received in reply from Arkansas.

Editor Predicts Virginia Next Scene Of Integration Troubles

WILLIAMSTOWN, Mass. (AP)—Benjamin Fine, educational editor of the New York Times, predicts "Virginia will be the next big fight on segregation after Christmas."

Fine, who covered some of the bitterest phases of the Little Rock controversy over that subject, voiced his views last night before a gathering of more than 600 sponsored by the Williams College Lecture Committee.

Elaborating, he said four Virginia counties "have been ordered to integrate, but the integration has been postponed until after election time."

He said the integration order "probably will be ready after Christmas, when we will have the next Little Rock, the next battleground. More's the pity because every time we have such an issue, it will hurt the nation."

Contending the nation needs better education, Fine said "most of the Little Rock mob had third or fourth rate education. We must be careful because our liberal arts and humanities program may suffer at the expense of scientific training. For too long, education has been considered a marginal luxury, and the results have shown up in Little Rock."

Fine said that while between 85 and 90 per cent of Southerners are against desegregation, 90 per cent will accept it.

Turning to politics, Fine said troops were called out in Little Rock "for political reasons—because in Arkansas, no governor has had a third term. Usually the attorney-general steps in," he added.

"As of now, Faubus is in by a landslide, because of support from segregationists, state rights and bigots. I hope it will change by next July, and it will if the good people do something about it."

Fine also predicted that Faubus will be the vice presidential candidate for a third party.

Board Of Health Defers Action On New Director

The Pitt County Board of Health last night deferred for further study new proposals to hire a director for the Pitt County Health Department.

Board Chairman B. Alton Gardner reported that two formal applications had been received for the position which has been vacant since the August 22 death of Dr. Walter C. Humbert. The applications were accepted but formal action on them was deferred until the applicants can be studied further.

Dr. Charles E. Fitzgerald and Dr. F. E. Lamsche reported to other members of the board that their efforts to contract possible successors to the late Dr. Humbert had been unsuccessful thus far. They were directed to continue their work.

In the absence of formal action by the board on a new Health Director, Dr. Joseph D. Franzoni was directed to continue his service as acting director for the department. Dr. Franzoni, chief of the department's Mental Health Service, has been acting director since Dr. Humbert's death.

Discussion of ways and means of filling the vacancy filled most of the time during the meeting last night. However, some discussion was offered toward the department's Rabies Control program and meat inspection ordinance which will go into effect January 1, 1958. No final action was taken on either of the points.

Falls Victim To Capitalist Trick

NEW YORK (AP)—The Russian earth satellite Sputnik fell victim to a capitalistic stunt last night when it was used to light a sign advertising whisky atop a two-story mid-Manhattan building.

The stunt was arranged by Radio Corp. of America technicians. Sputnik's radio signals were picked up by an ultrasensitive short-wave receiver at the RCA laboratories in Riverhead, N. Y., relayed to RCA engineers in New York City and used to trigger an intricate electronic apparatus that lighted the sign.

Early Closing

The Executive Committee of the local Tobacco Board of Trade yesterday set Wednesday Oct. 30 as the date for final sales on the Greenville Tobacco Market. Sales Supervisor W. L. Whebebe announced today.

It will be one of the earliest closing dates ever for the local market.

When the huge market closes it will have been in operation only about two and a half months. Sales began Aug. 15.

It is estimated that crop cuts, poor growing conditions and disease have cut tobacco production on the Eastern Belt by around 30 per cent this year.

Prince Becomes New Aga Khan

DAR ES SALAAM, Tanganyika (AP)—Twenty-year-old Prince Karim was to become the Aga Khan IV today in accession ceremonies making him the spiritual leader of millions of Ismaili Moslems.

The former Harvard University student, who succeeds his late grandfather, plans to travel for the next year and may return to Harvard later. Other accession ceremonies will be held for him.

Dar Es Salaam was chosen as the site for the first ceremonies because it has one of the leading Ismaili communities with about 20,000 Ismailis, many of them wealthy.

Six Cannons Will Salute Queen

NEW YORK (AP)—Six cannons will blast a 21-gun city hall salute for Queen Elizabeth when the British royal party arrives here Monday.

Mayor Robert F. Wagner yesterday authorized the salute after the Army assured him no damage would result and that half-charge blanks will be used.

About 600 detectives have been assigned to special duty for the day, while 4,689 members of the Police Department will keep crowds in check in the three boroughs the Queen and Prince Philip will visit—Richmond, Manhattan and Queens.

SYNOPSIS
 Dave Munro lives at the Big Ten ranch in Dillon's Park with his brother, Gil, his mother and his father, Joe. Joe Munro had bought the Big Ten three years ago from Herb Jason's widow. Herb had been shot to death. Dave is in love with Kitzy Nordine, and Gil loves her older sister, Bess.

Dave and his father go into Buhi to see Cameron Runyan, absentee owner of the Rafters 3. They are afraid of trouble with Vic Toll, his tough foreman. At Runyan's hotel, Dave and Joe are accosted by Sammy Blue, a gunslinger. Blue threatens to shoot them if they try to see Runyan, and is prevented by the hotel clerk, Runyan, with Mort, another gunman, takes Joe and Dave to his room. Runyan offers to buy the Big Ten at a good price, but refuses to interfere with Vic Toll. Joe refuses to sell and they leave. As they walk across the street, they hear Blue call out, "Munro!" Drawing as they turn, Joe kills Mort and Dave smashes Blue's gun arm. Witnesses swear it was self-defense.

The next day, Dave, seeking Bess's permission to marry Kitzy, finds the door closed in his face. Dave goes to see Elder Smith and is surprised when Vic Toll rides up. Vic threatens the Elder and warns him not to start trouble. At a meeting of the ranchers, Kitzy tells Dave she saw Vic Toll kissing her sister, Bess. At the meeting, the ranchers decide not to sell out to Cameron.

Kitzy and Bess have a fight, and Bess refuses to permit her to see Dave. Bess sends Kitzy away to school in Denver.

Johnny Strong said, "I'll cover your bet," and handed Elder Smith ten dollars.
 "I oughta have odds," Gil said. No one offered any, so he brought another gold piece into view, holding it up between thumb and forefinger. "If you won't give me odds, then make it worth shooting at."
 "I will," Elder Smith said quietly.
 Elder Smith held out his coin for Gil to see, and Gil gave him a shot. My brother had more gall than I had, even if I'd have twenty dollars to risk. In spite of myself, I felt a tingle of admiration for him.
 Gil grinned, the picture of confidence. "Throw it up, Frank."
 Dance threw the walnut into the air with an underarm toss. There was absolute silence as it curved up except for our breathing, then it reached the peak of the arc and seemed to pause. At that exact instant Gil fired, and the walnut disintegrated. Before the echoes of the shot died, Gil said, "Pay up, Elder," and held out his hand.
 Elder Smith gave him the money, saying courteously, "Congratulations, Gil."
 Nobody else congratulated him. "Since you're the best shot in the park," Frank Dance said, "I guess you're our best fighting man."
 "Why, sure," Gil said. "You want some fighting done, bring 'em on."
 I think Dance saw the horses before he said anything about Gil being a fighting man, but I'm sure Gil hadn't. A dozen horsemen were coming up the road. Vic Toll in the lead.
 My father recognized Sammy Blue about the same time I did. He came to me, saying a low voice, "Hard to tell what this means, but don't start anything."
 "I can't even finish anything," I said. "I haven't got my gun."
 "A good thing," he said.
 The Rafters 3 crew reined up a few feet in front of the Elder. "Good morning, neighbors," Elder Smith said. "Step down and join us. I think our Thanksgiving dinner is about ready."
 "Thank you kindly," Toll said, "but we ain't here to visit. I thought some of you might want to sell your spreads. Maybe all of you."
 "No," Elder Smith said. "That go for the rest of you?"
 Everyone nodded.
 "I see," Toll said softly. "Well, don't forget we're offering to buy. That offer'll hold." He paused, and added significantly, "For a while."
 Without another word Toll swung his horse and scattered around us just as Bess called, "Come and get it before we throw it into the river." We went inside.
 No one spoke. We waited until Elder Smith and my father came in. Elder Smith asked the blessing and we got into line behind the kids, our plates in our hands. We filled them and scattered around the side to eat. I cleaned my plate up and then I noticed Bess was gone. There was no way for me to know whether anyone else had seen Bess leave. I tightened the cinch, stepped into the saddle, and rode off.
 I turned off the road at the Nordine lane, but I didn't go to the house. I turned around when I got about halfway up the lane. Vic Toll's big buckskin was tied in front of the Nordine house.

CHAPTER 12
 Along with the Christmas program and the Fourth of July celebration, the Thanksgiving dinner and turkey shoot was one of the big annual events in the park. Elder Smith handled the whole business, even to raising the turkeys. A big tom was given for first prize, a hen for second. He made the targets and set them up, and arranged for someone to judge, usually a man from outside the park.

This year he asked Si Beam to do it. Beam was an itinerate peddler who visited the park every fall and spring. He didn't really compete with Elder Smith's store because the store carried only the essentials. Beam sold gimcracks of one sort or another, mostly to the women: bright cloth for dresses and aprons, needles, thread, Indian blankets.

No one objected to Beam. He'd done the judging before, and was well known and liked. He always stayed with Bess when he came to the park. He'd stayed with her folks when they were alive, so he kept on.

Just before the shooting started, Bess came to me. Barney Lark wasn't in the crowd. He seemed to enjoy his own company better than anyone else's, and seldom came to any of the park gatherings. Still, I couldn't keep from saying to Bess, "I see Barney isn't around. Maybe he was afraid I'd be here."
 "You know better, Dave," she said. "I don't want to quarrel with you. I came over here to say I'm sorry about what Barney did. I just wanted to bring Kitzy back, but he lost his temper."
 I just looked at her. She went on, "We both love Kitzy, David. We want what's best for her, but I'm older and I ought to be a little wiser. In time you'll see I'm right."

She was a big, self-possessed woman, absolutely sure of herself, more sure than any human being had a right to be. I asked, "Have you ever been wrong about anything, Bess?"
 She whirled and walked away, shoulders stiff, her head high, and suddenly I realized Kitzy had been wrong telling Bess she'd sold her saddle. She was incapable of being a traitor to her people.

I stood alone, watching the shooting from the sidelines. My mother was in the schoolhouse helping the other women with the dinner. Both my father and Gil were shooting. Gil was decked out like a Christmas tree. He was wearing his green silk shirt with the white buttons, a brown-and-white calfskin vest decorated with silver pomegranates, his pearl-handled revolver, and spurs with big Mexican jewels. Everybody in the park had him pegged for a show-off, but he'd already established the fact that he could shoot. He'd won the tom turkey three years running.

The shoot lasted until noon, half of the contestants dropping out in the first round, with Gil, Bess, Drank Dance the finalists. Gil won the tom and Bess the hen.

"Now I'll show you some fancy shooting," Gil said. "Boys, there's a gun in Buhi I want. A right fancy one with gold inlay on the barrels. It'd go real good with my outfit, but I haven't got the price." He pulled a gold eagle out of his pocket, held it up for everybody to see, then handed it to Elder Smith. "Hold the stakes. Might as well make this worthwhile." He dug a walnut out of another pocket and gave it to Frank Dance. "Who'll cover my bet that I can hit it when Frank sees it up? About fifteen feet

CAST IN MURDER MYSTERY NAMED
 Ruth Graber, faculty member of the department of music at East Carolina College, and Robert J. Vetter of Greenville will have leading parts in Agatha Christie's "The Mouse Trap," November 19-20 at East Carolina College.

The play is a joint enterprise of the Greenville Little Theater, and the Greenville Branch of the American Association of University Women. Students and faculty members at East Carolina College are also cooperating in the production of the murder mystery by the popular author of whodunits.

Proceeds will be applied to the Foreign Scholarship Fund of the Greenville AAUW. This fund has the purpose of providing scholarships enabling students at East Carolina College to study abroad.

"The Mouse Trap" will be directed by Robert C. Forney of Greenville. Miss Graber will appear for the first time at the college in a leading role. Both Mr. Forney and Mr. Vetter have been cast in the annual spring Shakespearean productions at the college and in plays presented by the Greenville Little Theater.

Others in the cast of "The Mouse Trap" include Beatrice Chanancy of the East Carolina faculty; August H. Laube of Greenville; C. Thomas Hull of Durham, and J. C. Dunn, Jr. of Pinebluffs, East Carolina students; and Mrs. Robert Vetter and Dr. Lucia L'Abate of Greenville.

Beauty Afloat, Pajama Parties In Air

By MARTHA PIERCE
Reflector Teen Writer

A 90-yard dash and the crowning of a charming homecoming queen made a thrilling climax for the homecoming festivities of J. H. R. High.

Decorated floats and flashy convertibles added variety to the annual parade on Friday afternoon. Hours of hard work behind the walls of a local warehouse produced the three floats.

Betty Lane Evans, homecoming queen, led the celebrities in a float made by the Pep Club. The Junior High and the Jayvee cheerleaders also had floats in the parade.

Following the first float were "Mr. and Miss School Spirit," Walker Lee Allen and Mary Ann Bryant. A fleet of pretty girls sponsoring the football players came next and were in stiff competition with the Thunderbirds and Corvets.

The varsity cheerleaders sponsored homecoming. They presented the queen with an arm bouquet of roses and each sponsor with a green and white corsage.

Snapping Pictures
"Say peaches. Hold it." Click. Mr. Osborne, the photographer, took pictures for the annual Thursday and Friday.

Bringing out smiles on the faces of the students took special talent. Some of the gimmicks he used to draw forth a grin were "Think about boys," "Say, boys, think about your girl . . . well, then, think about somebody else's girl," or "Smile so I can see your braces."

Greenville Garden Club Will Sponsor Workshop

The Greenville Garden Club will conduct a workshop on church arrangements at the Woman's Club Saturday, October 26, from 2-4 p.m. with Mrs. E. H. Mitchell, instructor-demonstrator.

The altar or flower committee from each church in Greenville has been especially invited to attend the meeting and bring with them the church vases and flowers to be used in the church on Sunday.

Mrs. Mitchell will discuss general principles relating to flower arrangements in churches and then assist each committee present in making arrangement.

Flower committees, church society officers, and others interested in improving flower arrangements in their churches will be welcomed at this meeting. Members of churches in the county and other towns outside Greenville are invited.

Dr. Hirshberg Reviews Rally Around The Flag Boys For BC

Dr. Edgar W. Hirshberg of the English Department of East Carolina College was guest speaker for the committee reported having given 14 of last year's books to the Medical Auxiliary. The club also voted to buy a book for the Mental Health Society.

Mrs. Blount's home was decorated with unique arrangements of early fall flowers.

After the meeting Mrs. Forbes and Mrs. Blount served a salad course.

Speaker Takes Club On Trip

Dr. Luciano L'Abate, Clinical Psychologist with the Mental Health Clinic, was guest speaker when the Pickwick Book Club met Tuesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Louis Boyd on East Tenth Street.

Arrangements of pyranantha and mums were used throughout. Mrs. Boyd introduced Dr. L'Abate who distributed to the members questionnaires entitled "An Inventory of Attitudes on Family and Children."

Upon completion of these forms, a discussion period followed during which it was concluded that children's behavior problems are often closely related to parental personalities and attitudes on child rearing.

During the social hour the hostess served chicken salad in pastry shells, cheese sandwiches, sweet pickles, and butterscotch squares with coffee.

Mrs. Knott Proctor, Jr., vice-president, presided over a short business session after which books were exchanged and the meeting adjourned.

Women In Bible Discussed By The Rev. Drake

Last Tuesday afternoon at 3:00 o'clock, Mrs. S. W. Dunn was hostess at the second fall meeting of the Cosmos Book Club.

Her home was decorated with arrangements of fall flowers and yellow candles.

Upon arrival, guests were served a dessert course by Mrs. Lee Hannah, mother of the hostess, and coffee was poured by Mrs. E. E. Rawl Jr. Later, a large silver platter filled with individual favors was passed.

Then Mrs. Dunn introduced her guest speaker, the Rev. John Drake, whose topic was "Women in the Bible." Beginning with the first woman, Eve, Rev. Drake recounted many incidents concerning the influence of women like Sarah, Delilah, Jezebel, Queen of Sheba, Judith, Susanna, Rebecca, Hannah and Ruth. He stressed, however, that these outstanding women were famous exceptions in the patriarchal society which existed throughout the days of the Old Testament.

"As a rule, women were considered chattel and little distinction was made between wife, slave and concubine. It wasn't until after the coming of Christ and the recognition of Mary as a personage that women began to attain a foothold as persons in their own right," he said.

Rev. Drake concluded his talk with a brief discussion period.

A short business meeting followed.

30 Years Ago Today

"Contracts have already been let for improvements and work will begin immediately," R. H. Wright, president of East Carolina Teachers College, stated today.

The last session of the General Assembly appropriated $400,000 for permanent improvements at the college. Out of this appropriation $10,000 is to be spent for library books. A new model school to be erected on the extreme east of the campus has been planned. At a spot on the south-east of the campus, where the temporary power plant now stands, will be placed the new power house. The new laundry building will be built in connection with the power plant. The present laundry site will be converted into a creak room and lounge room for the girls to go just before meals and on rainy days. A new unit will be built to the dining hall. This will take care of the 800 new students expected next year.

Speaker Says 'Owe Children Four Points'

Mrs. Ellen Carrol, Supervisor of Greenville Elementary Schools, was the speaker at the Third Street School P.T.A. Thursday night.

She talked to the group about the report cards and how the parents and teachers could reach a better understanding as far as grading and abilities of the children were concerned.

"Working together as Parents", Mrs. Carrol said, "there are four basic points we owe our children, security and love, nutrition, pre-eminence, and a place to study. There are different types of intelligence, specific and relative. This should be understood so that we do not expect too much of our children as far as grading is concerned."

A film strip "BRINGING THE REPORT CARD HOME," further illustrated the need of complete understanding. In closing, Mrs. Carrol asked that the parents not be too hard on the children this first grading period.

The membership committee reported that the drive was still being conducted and urged everyone to join.

The Halloween Carnival will be held at the school Friday, October 25. Serving will begin at 5 p.m. and the rooms will open at 6 p.m.

Prone To Be Hurt?

AS A FAVOR TO YOUR COUNTRY, WOULDJA CONSIDER A CAREER IN SCIENCE?

By HAL BOYLE
NEW YORK (AP)—One out of five of the 95,000 persons killed in accidents in America in 1956, it is estimated, was accident-prone.

"Accident-proneness is a disease, a psychosomatic manifestation of a disease process," said Dr. John Henderson.

Dr. Henderson, medical director of Johnson & Johnson, New Brunswick, N.J., is one of a growing number of experts in the field who feel that the nation's that the nation's high accident rate cannot be effectively lowered until it is realized that accident-proneness is an ailment, just as are alcoholism and heart attacks, and proper treatment is employed.

The accident toll last year, beside 95,000 dead, includes, 9,500,000 injured, of whom 350,000 suffered permanent physical impairment. The National Safety Council estimated the cost at $11,200,000 in property damage and time lost from work.

As the result of studies, scientists now feel they can often detect by psychological tests the accident-prone person, who is usually either maladjusted emotionally or immature in judgment, or both.

"Accident-proneness is partly a matter of age," said Dr. Henderson. "It is not altogether an accident that the leading cause of death from the age of 1 to about 25 is — accidents. This is the period of greatest rebellion, repression and emotional conflict.

"After 30 the tendency to have accidents begins to fall off. But there is much truth in an old adage of the insurance business — after three accidents luck is no longer the major factor in the picture."

Are you accident-prone yourself? You may be, according to Dr. Henderson, if:

1. You are fundamentally resentful against anyone or anything in life, carry a deep personal sense of guilt, or brood about your problems while you are at work or behind the wheel of a car;

2. You haven't won the acclaim you feel you deserve in an important field, and you drive fast or dangerously merely to call attention to yourself; or

3. You become flustered in any emergency, and react emotionally — instead of with mature and immediate judgment.

"The ability to recognize these feelings of resentment and guilt is the key to gaining maturity," said Dr. Henderson. "Otherwise, they are polite ways of self-defense, leading the individual unconsciously to destroy himself."

"I believe that at least half the accidents in industry and the home and on the highways could be avoided. But this requires two things — the ability of accident-prone individuals to have insight into their personality problems and face up to the task of becoming well-adjusted; the decision by psychologists to test the accident-prone persons who are a menace to both themselves and others on the highway or in many industrial jobs."

But is it possible for an accident-prone person ever really to become safe?

"Yes, very definitely," said Dr. Henderson. "He should talk out his problem with friends, his minister, his physician. Once he recognizes his problem, and adjusts to it, he can become a safe person."

But he does have to face his problem — and conquer it by growing up.

Opinions In Brief

"I wish to preach not the doctrine of ignoble ease, but the doctrine of the strenuous life," —Theodore Roosevelt.

"When the public realizes the educational value of public libraries and the place it holds as an educational institution, library problems will be solved." —The Wilson Daily Times.

Integrated Facilities, Or None?

It is becoming increasingly evident that efforts by the NAACP toward integration of public recreation facilities will decrease the number of public recreation areas and facilities for members of both the white and Negro races.

It is apparent, we think, that in most instances where a choice must be made between integrated recreation facilities and no recreation facilities at all, most communities in North Carolina will choose the latter. It is also apparent that the threat of integration of public recreation facilities at some future date has been the reason for lack of expansion of these facilities by many communities which desperately need them.

We might find an example of this latter result right here at home. In 1954, shortly after the Supreme Court handed down its decision on public schools, Greenville voters went to the polls to determine whether a bond issue would be floated to construct two swimming pools, one for white citizens and another for Negroes. The issue was overwhelmingly defeated. It was not because the citizens did not want swimming pools, but simply because they did not want the city to build two pools, both of which might be closed at any moment because of actual or threatened integrated use of these facilities.

It is the opinion of many local people that even now a local bond issue for the purpose of building swimming pools would be soundly rejected for the same reason.

In Greensboro, where the NAACP had petitioned the City Council for integration of the white swimming pool even though a Negro pool is provided by the City, the governing body is laying plans to sell these facilities. In spite of the fact that the petition for integration of the all-white pool has been withdrawn, a hearing on the future of these recreation facilities is still slated for Monday night.

In Asheville the city's swimming pool has been sold to the highest bidder after being closed last season because of health standards. City officials apparently decided to sell the facility rather than make necessary repairs because of racial questions which might arise of the pool remained under public ownership.

How great a toll of public recreation facilities present or future conditions will take is anyone's guess. It is now probably, however, that public swimming pools, parks and other recreation facilities in this and other states might be abandoned one by one if efforts to integrate them continue.

That of course brings up a question which must ultimately be decided by the citizens of each community. Is it better to have integrated recreation facilities, or no public recreation facilities at all?

If a choice must be made between these two alternatives, most North Carolina communities would choose the latter.

It appears to us the best interest of all the citizens of both races would be served by preserving the recreation facilities we now have by insuring they remain segregated rather than forcing issues which ultimately can lead only to their deterioration through lack of use.

An Old Idea In Business Again

By ELMER ROESSNER

An old, old idea in Construction, brought back to vigorous life a few years ago, may account for $100,000,000 in building materials sales this year. By 1965, the annual total may reach $325,000,000.

The idea of curtain-wall construction. When an aboriginal built the frame of his hut with poles and then hung palm fronds to form walls, he was using curtain walls.

Today builders erect building frames of steel and then fasten on outer skins of steel, aluminum, copper, glass or other materials. This technique has produced some of the most dramatic, exciting buildings since the war.

It also has produced some esthetic stinkers. The curtain-wall panels of a new New York skyscraper look like the fireproof metal ceilings that were popular in restaurants a generation ago. The panels of another New York building is now being hung with metal curtains that look like cheese graters. The towering monotony of both these and some other curtain-wall structures create a monstrous ugliness.

MAY IMPROVE IN TIME

One reason for these monstrosities is that the architect and his client see only a single panel during the designing stage. It is difficult for the human mind to envision the fact that a single panel, attractive in itself, can be oppressively revolting when repeated thousands of times. It is probable that with more experience with these new materials, architects will do better. Even the first palm hut was an ugly affair.

There is a wide range of choice. About 40 companies are now producing these panels. They are made not only of a variety of materials but also in almost endless ranges of forms and colors. The architect's own imagination is the only limit to his designs.

The advantages of curtain-wall construction are many. Panels can be hung in place in a fraction of a time it takes to construct skins of brick or stone. Costs are usually lower. Occupancy is often earlier, starting the landlord's income sooner. Usually thinner, curtain walls provide more income-producing space than other construction methods. Many provide economical insulation and require less cleaning.

WONDERS IN LABORATORIES

Even greater advantages are to come, according to Jack M. Roehm, director of research for the Kawneer Co., one of the leading producers. Among developments soon to come out of laboratories, he said, are:

Finished inside-outside curtain wall packages. These units include inside wall surfaces as well as outside skins. Some such units are already in production, but technological improvements may make them standard.

Built-in radiant heating panels. The problems involved are not difficult and this improvement could speed construction, reduce costs and increase space.

Integrated utility panels. With only a little more technological planning, panels could include electric and plumbing conduits.

Sun control. Panels designed to deflect the sun's rays in summer and retain them in winter, and panels arranged to provide the best conditions under morning and afternoon sun, are distinct possibilities. These refinements, plus the freedom of design that curtain-wall construction gives architects, may make it almost standard in skyscrapers to come.

The Public Forum

Between now and next Wednesday, October 23rd, you may have the pleasure of seeing a very fine exhibit of creative art work, currently being shown in the Shepherd Memorial Library Art Gallery.

This very interesting collection of drawings, paintings, and sculpture have been collected from public school classrooms in our state.

There is work included that would please a connoisseur of art, a venerable amateur, a serious art student, or a young explorer who enjoys color, clay, paints and paper-mache.

When viewing these well-displayed pieces of art, one cannot help but feel the sincerity of each. There is evidence right here in our community of the universal qualities of art, the way art can be a means of communication without a single spoken word, conveying the mood, idea, and pleasure each experience gave the artists, who in this case were some very young ones.

I only wish it were possible to express gratitude to every individual who helped make this experience in art appreciation available to us. It has offered much incentive.

Strength For Today

By EARL L. DOUGLASS

A BLADE OF GRASS

Have you ever noticed grass growing up through the cracks in an old concrete sidewalk? It is quite remarkable, when you stop to think about it, that such a weak and soft thing as a blade of grass should have the power to force itself through the hard concrete.

The growth of the grass is slow, of course, but its pressure is constant. Day and night, it keeps pushing its way through, its progress imperceptible, but its triumph certain at last.

Habit works the same way on human character. The man who begins to let himself indulge in a vice is sure that he can stop it whenever he wants to. And the growth of the bad habit is like that of the grass—so slow that it cannot be seen. But at last the character, like the concrete, gives way, and the damage is done. Alcoholism and drug addiction, for example, almost always start slowly and imperceptibly.

But there is a bright side too. Good habits can be just as powerful, and can be made into character-building forces just as strong. Again, the process is one of constant pressure, and perhaps it takes even longer to form good habits than to acquire bad ones.

Character develops slowly. But be sure that the steady pressure keeps it developing in the right direction.

Things You Didn't See

By ALVIN TAYLOR

One thing folks around a newspaper office get to see that the readers don't is all the news copy which winds up in the news editor's waste basket rather than in the paper.

The Reflector's Associated Press teletype begins operation around 2 a.m. each day. It sends a steady stream of copy until 2 p.m.

Obviously all that material can't be included in each day's edition so therefore the editors have to pick the best of the stories, pare them down to the available space and toss the remainder away.

After the daily battle to publish an edition had ended yesterday and the chattering teletypes had become quiet, I found myself rooting through the waste baskets. The following is what I found:

A story from Little River,

S.C. said that a Charlotte man was awaiting with bated breath a $250 decision from the Curator of Fishes at the American Museum of Natural History in New York.

It seems the eminent authority had been asked to determine once and for all what kind of fish it was that the man had caught in the Northeastern South Carolina Anglers' Roadeo.

The Charlotte man had entered the 103-pound fish as a red snapper placing him in line for the $250 prize. A photo was sent to the Charleston Museum which termed the fish a black grouper, also eligible for the prize. However it was pointed out the fish was red and pink which didn't show in the photo. Then it was decided the fish was a Cuba snapper and ineligible.

So the fish went to New York and their decision is to be final.

Other Editors Saying--- Unfair Attacks On South

(Sheep (La.) Times)

The Woodrow Wilson School of Public Opinion and International Affairs at Princeton University apparently has settled the question of Southern opposition to integration to its own satisfaction. A recent news story quotes the School as having found, through a poll, that white Southerners who read newspapers and magazines, listen to radio and watch TV are—quoting the dispatch—"more sympathetic to the Northern point of view than persons who live in isolation."

This, it may be assumed, a gracious assumption that people of the South are not entirely beyond the influence of the news they are exposed sufficiently to.

Southern and antisegregation propaganda they will abandon their traditions and beliefs and principles and in time accept integration. Such a hypothesis is rather far fetched on the basis of a poll of 300 persons in an area of 40,000,000 but in one way it does square with the facts as seen by many sensible Southerners.

The Montgomery (Ala.) Advertiser, points out that "much of the South's current bitterness is directed not at the Negro, but at Northern generalizations, sermons, half-truths, over-simplifications, and misrepresentation of the (segregation) situation in this section of the country." The Advertiser suggests that the Princeton organization could perform a worthwhile public service by conducting a comprehensive survey of many thousands of Southerners, instead of 300, to determine what has been the effect upon them of biased, superficial and stereotyped stories, articles and broadcasts about the South as presented in a considerable portion of the non-Southern publications of the nation, as well as by many political leaders of both parties outside of the South.

Some time ago one of the nation's largest national poll organizations reported that its samplings in the South indicated that 55 per cent of Southerners believed that integration certainly would come some day—when, they did not attempt to say. That was in February of 1956. The same organization made another poll in the same areas a week or so ago and found that only 43 per cent of Southerners believed that integration ever will come in the South. Both percentages could be questioned as probably far too high, yet the decrease of 12 per cent carries significance.

War Deterred By Big Bombs

By RAY TUCKER

WASHINGTON — "Does all this squabbling over Turkey and other Middle East nations," asks Mrs. L.O. of Los Angeles, Calif., "mean that we are heading into another world war? And will the Russian defeat of us on the scientific battlefield strip us of our Allies and deprive us of the support of the smaller but important countries around the earth?"

Answer: Few nations have exchanged such bitter and belligerent words over disputed territory as Washington and Moscow have, without engaging in war. The present situation is almost a parallel to the Serbian and Polish crises which led to World Wars I and II, respectively. And the strategic, oil-rich Middle East is far more important and crucial than the Balkan and Baltic nations were in 1914 and 1939.

Nevertheless, and despite their recent scientific gains, it is the military and economic belief at the Capital that Moscow is not yet ready for a showdown with the West. If he were, in view of the Communists' utter lack of decency and scruples, atomic bombs would be falling over Turkey tomorrow.

WEAPONS BEGET CAUTION

It is the destructiveness of today's weapons, not any diplomatic achievement or compromise, which will probably prevent actual warfare, limited or global. But unless the Administration stops trying to fool the American people, and catches up quickly with the Kremlin's military and scientific superiority — within six months — things might really become more serious.

Khrushchev, for all his occasional glib words, is less trustworthy than Hitler or Mussolini. If he thought for a moment that he could defeat the United States and its Allies in such a remote area as the Levant, he would order Marshal Zhukov to march on Turkey tomorrow.

NO NATION CAN TRUST RUSSIA. Mrs. L.O.'s second question is embarrassing, not only to the writer, but also to Washington officialdom. The immediate fear resulting from the launching of the satellite, of the intercontinental missile and of a new type of hydrogen bomb was that it would frighten Allies and neutrals, and lead them to turn from the West to the Russians for protection.

It has not worked out that way, and for logical reasons. Our European Allies, as well as professional neutralists like Nehru and even Nasser, know that they cannot trust Russia. They also realize that the only country which can eventually match Communist power, industrially, scientifically and economically, is the United States. They must depend on us.

WHAT OUR ALLIES DEMAND But our Allies demand two things. They insist that Washington quit its delay and dilly-dallying with respect to ballistic missiles, rockets and satellites, and demonstrate its superior superiority over the Muscovites. They also insist that we abandon our dog-in-the-manger attitude and pop-in our development of these fearful new weapons with their military and scientific experts.

A QUERY ON THE SUNNY SIDE To turn from these grave problems, I have a delightful query from F.K.N. of Reliance, S.D. He asks whether "the late President Roosevelt, while campaigning in the Dakotas in the early 1930's, wore a patch on his coat, such as Adlai Stevenson's similar strategem of a 'hole in the sole of his shoe'?"

Answer: Showing how quickly the great ones pass off the stage at Washington, there is no memory of the Roosevelt family or of the newspapermen who accompanied him on early 1930 trips to verify or negate this question. However, having known F.D.R. well, I shall give my own version pending further inquiry.

If the former President did pin or sew a patch on his coat, it was a characteristic Roosevelt jest. He never tried to hide the fact that he was born with a golden spoon in his mouth, social, financial and political. Moreover, in the early 30's, he needed no such artificial and burlesque devices to win elections. He lost only two states to Alf Landon in 1936.

In fact, it was because of these fancies and fooleries that so many people liked Roosevelt—that is, personally.

New Bern Spoils GHS Homecoming With 20-6 Win

Howell Gallops For 89-yard TD But Phantoms Fall

	NB	GHS
First Downs	11	6
Net Yards Rushing	277	86
Passes Att.-Comp.	4-1	9-2
Yards Passing	8	15
Passes Int. By	2	0
Punting Average	31.5	24.2
Fumbles-Lost	5-3	3-2
Yards Penalized	50	40

New Bern High School's ponderous Bears are still in the Northeastern Conference championship race—thanks to halfback Jean Earl Worthington.

The hard-running halfback struck for a pair of long-distance touchdowns in the third quarter last night to hand the Bears a 20-6 victory over Greenville in College Stadium. The win was the third in conference play for the Bears who have lost once.

It was Homecoming for Greenville's Phantoms and they played their role to the hilt, particularly in the first half when they turned to a staunch defense to offset only nine offensive plays and went to their half-time rest with a 6-6 tie.

The offense fielded by the Phantoms in the first half consisted almost entirely of halfback Robert Howell. He took the game's opening kick-off and returned it for 89 yards and the touchdown that kept New Bern struggling until Worthington went to work in the third quarter.

Worthington made his two touchdowns almost by himself. His first came early in the third period when he took a Greenville punt on the Phantom 40, rolled back almost to the 50 to set up his blocking and then set sail down the left sideline. Nobody laid a hand on him.

His second score came about six minutes later when the Bears took over on their 36 where a Greenville drive stalled. On the first play from that point, Worthington took a pitch-out on the left side, cut back across the tackle and faked the Phantoms' secondary out of position to shake himself loose. He went the full 64 yards untouched.

Howell's kick-off return and the tough Greenville defense threatened to upset the Bears in the early moments of the game, but a break that went in favor of New Bern put them back into the game.

New Bern failed to move on their first series of downs and Terry Maultsby went back to punt them out of trouble. His long kick was fielded by Howell on the Greenville 20 where the Phantom halfback promptly dropped it and end Bobby Mohr fell on it for New Bern.

Four plays later the Bears had the touchdown that tied the game up. Quarterback Julian Lewis did the honors, going over from two yards out on an off-tackle keep play. Billy Cox blocked the extra point attempt.

For the remainder of the first half, except for two plays late in the first quarter, four plays in the early minutes of the second period and the last three plays before the half, New Bern held the ball. They launched three separate drives, but lost the ball twice on fumbles and once on a combination of Greenville defense at the three-yard line and a 15-yard penalty against the Bears on an attempted quarterback sneak.

One of the ironic features of the game was that Worthington's wrap-up touchdowns came in the second half when the Phantoms and the Bears were on more equal terms offensively.

In the second half, the Phantoms got deep into New Bern territory three times but lost their punch within sight of the end zone. The one time they got in serious trouble resulted in Worthington's 40-yard punt return.

The play was set up when the Phantoms kicked on a third down from their own nine. Worthington ran it all the way back.

Other than that, the Bears made their breaks, notably Worthington's 64-yard scoring run. Halfback James Ross kicked the extra point after each of Worthington's touchdowns runs.

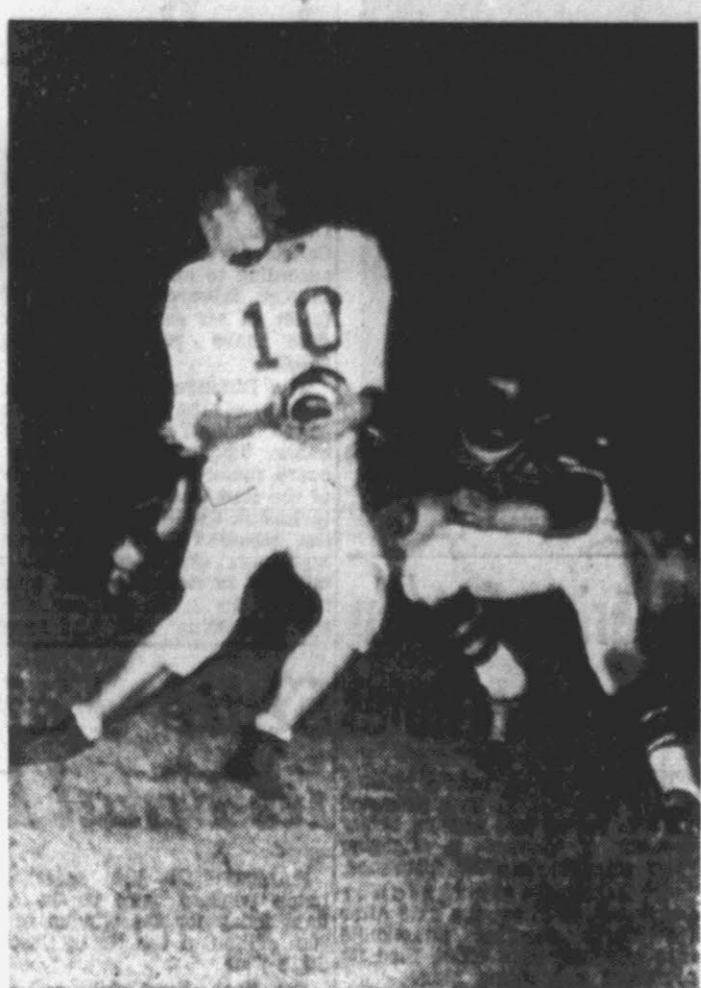

Greenville's defensive play was led by tackle Kelly Barnhill and center Albert Crawford, but a whole lot of defense was primarily a team affair. New Bern's big backfield picked up plenty of yardage between the 30-yard lines, but the Bears were unable to get through the Phantom defense beyond those points except on the first touchdown drive and on Worthington's two runs.

Howell and Robin Wilfong sparked the offensive play of the Phantoms, but that was stymied most of the time by the New Bern line which averaged nearly 200 pounds per man.

The Phantoms are 1-4 in the conference and 3-5 overall. They meet Piquay Springs here next Friday in a non-conference game.

Scoring summary:
New Bern ..... 6 0 14 0—20
Greenville ..... 6 0 0 0—6

New Bern scoring: Touchdowns, Julian Lewis and Worthington (2); extra points: Ross (2). Greenville scoring: Touchdown: Howell.

ROEBUCK TRAPPED—A New Bern tackler traps GHS quarterback Mack Roebuck on an option play for no gain. Roebuck and crew held the Favored Bears to a 6-6 halftime tie but succumbed in the end to 20-6 defeat.

89-YARD TOUCHDOWN RUN—Phantom halfback Robert Howell took the opening kickoff last night against New Bern and roared 89 yards for a touchdown. Above, moving so fast that camera action is blurred, he dodges a final tackler before reaching paydirt. Howell's TD was the only Greenville score of the game and his gallop was the longest run made last night.

WORTHINGTON ROMPS—The fastest man in the Northeastern Conference, Jean Earl Worthington, romps for yardage as a Greenville tackler dives in vain for him. Worthington sparked his Bears to a 20-6 triumph at College Stadium last night. (Reflector Photos by Billy Arnold).

Colts, Browns Put Undefeated Records On Line Saturday

By MIKE RATHET
The Associated Press

Power-laden Baltimore and defense-minded Cleveland will try to stretch their unbeaten streaks to four tomorrow against opponents they handled with quick dispatch the first time around.

The Colts, leading the National Football League's Western Division, meet the second-place Detroit Lions (2-1) before an expected 54,000 in Detroit's Briggs Stadium. Baltimore crushed Detroit 34-14 in the season's opener.

The Eastern Division leading Browns, who defeated Philadelphia 24-7 last Sunday, face the cellar-dwelling Eagles (0-3) on the road.

In other games on a full program, defending champion New York in the East, opens its home season against Pittsburgh. San Francisco meets Green Bay at Milwaukee. Los Angeles and the Bears go at it in Chicago, and Chicago's Cardinals are at Washington.

Baltimore, which has amassed 100 points in its three games, will throw a two-pronged attack at the improving Lions. Led by quarterback Johnny Unitas, who has thrown for eight touchdowns, the Colts also boast a sharp running attack spearheaded by Alan Ameche.

Detroit's secondary has been responsible for 14 interceptions this season and will have to stop Unitas, who passed for 241 yards and four TD's in their first meeting. Offensively the Lions seem to have come up with the right combination with Tobin Rote and Bob Layne sharing the quarterbacking duties.

Tommy O'Connell, the league's second best passer, and All-American Jimmy Brown have returned the Browns to their accustomed position at the top. Offensively weak Philadelphia is still strapped by the injury to quarterback Bob Thomson. Sonny Jurgensen and Al Dorow will run the team.

The Giants (2-1) are without the services of quarter Don Heinrich, sidelined with a broken thumb, but regained ace field goal kicker Ben Agajanian, who has been bedeviled with the flu. Pittsburgh, also 2-1, unveiled a shifty runner in Billy Wells last week. He returned a kickoff 96 yards in a 29-20 victory over the Cardinals.

Green Bay (1-2) suffered a severe blow this week when first-stringer and Gary Knafele was declared out for the season with a knee injury. Along with Bill Howton they had formed one of the best pass-catching combinations in the league. The Packers will have to rig their defenses to stop the passing of Y. A. Tittle and the running of Hugh McElhenny who have led Frisco to a 2-1 mark.

The Bears have lost three in a row after being picked to retain their Western Division title, but Los Angeles (1-2) will have to stop the charges of Rick Casares as well as the passing combo of Ed Brown and Harlon Hill. The Rams have the league's leading ground gainer in Tom Wilson, who never played college ball.

MIAMI, Fla. (AP)—North Carolina State and Miami, a couple of immovable objects, battled to a 0-0 tie in the Orange Bowl here last night in a game that didn't settle anything.

N.C. State, which entered the game undefeated in its four games, proved that the one touchdown underdog role handed them by the odds-makers was all wet.

But other than that, it was a hard-fought, evenly matched battle of lines.

In the second half, both teams tried field goals. N.C. State's Don Miska and Darrell Dess knocked Miami runners for big losses during a series of downs in the third period. The Hurricanes attempted a punt which was blocked on the Miami 15.

The Wolfpack attempted three straight passes and when they failed, used Jim Scarette on a field goal try from the 22. It was blocked.

Meanwhile State's two ace halfbacks, Dick Christy and Dick Hunter, and Miami's star halfback, John Varone were the victims of sharp line play.

Christy, usually State's big rusher, managed only 37 yards and Hunter got 53.

Second string Miami halfback Joe Plevel also picked up 53 yards but the night's big gainer was Hurricane fullback Bill Sandie with 55 yards. Varone settled for 43.

Maryland-UNC Tilt Picked As ACC's Top Attraction

Three NS Games On Tap Tonight

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
Lenoir Rhyme, its knockout scoring punch hospitalized with the flu, goes against its second North State Conference foe of the season tonight.

Fullback Harold Bullard, whose 48 points made him the nation's leading scorer in small colleges last week, checked into the Lenoir Rhyme infirmary yesterday.

Whether he'll see action tonight in the Bears' big homecoming game against Guilford is doubtful.

Three other games tonight include two conference tilts. Catawba is at Appalachian and Western Carolina plays host to East Carolina in the family affairs.

Elon, the league leader and the conference's only undefeated team with three straight victories, plays host to Presbyterian College of the South Carolina Little Three.

N.C. State Frosh Top Virginia To Keep Streak

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. (AP)—North Carolina State's freshman football team remained unbeaten today but the Baby Wolfpack had to come from behind to stay that way.

The State freshmen dropped the University of Virginia from 20-7 here yesterday with Claude Gibson leading the way. Gibson scored twice, on runs of 3 and 18 yards.

Virginia scored first in the second quarter when Ed Ferris capped a 75-yard drive by plunging over from the one.

The Baby Wolfpack got started in the third period with a 60-yard drive climaxed when Gibson scored over from the three.

Ayden Wallops Contentnea Club, 27-0, In Loop Contest

CONTENTNEA — Tommy Edwards paced Ayden's Tornados to a 27-0 Coastal Conference victory over Contentnea here last night.

The All-Conference fullback scored one touchdown, an extra point, and set up the other three Ayden scores. He carried the ball only 11 times, but had an average of 15.3 yards gained per carry.

19 yards around end for the first Ayden score of the night, climaxing an 80-yard sustained drive. Edwards bumped over center for The extra point failed.

The next time Ayden got its hands on the ball, Edwards eluded Contentnea tacklers and scooted around his own right end for 51 yards and another touchdown. The extra point failed.

It was in the second half before the Tornados could reach paydirt again. The Maroon-and-White got another 80-yard drive underway. Edwards, carrying only three times, accounted for 71 of those yards, and Worthington bulled his way across from the 11 yard line. Clarence Mills ran over the extra point.

Wraps It Up
Bobby Jean Weatherington wrapped it up for Ayden with a one-yard blast for the final touchdown. The score climaxed a 57-yard drive. Weatherington passed to Leslie Stocks for the extra point, ending it, 27-0.

Win Assures Devils Of First Place Slot

By BILLY ARNOLD
Reflector Sports Editor

VANCEBORO — Farmville, behind 6-0 at the half, disposed of a determined Vanceboro outfit, here, last night, 27-13, to be assured of at least a tie for the Coastal Conference championship.

The triumph upset Coach Elbert Moyer's team to an undisputed lead in the league and gives them a 4-0 record against Coastal opponents. Only Benvenue, which now has a 2-1 record, can tie the Red Devils, and few give them much chance of accomplishing this.

Vanceboro now has a 1-4 record for the season.

Vanceboro, eager for an upset, started with a spurt, racking up five quick first downs. Before Farmville could recover from the shock, the hosts scored.

Farmville's Johnny Dixon fumbled a punt on the Red Devil 40 and Vanceboro recovered there. The VHS club drove quickly to the 25. Carol Willis, quarterback, then delivered a pass to end Fred Kite on the 15 and Kite banged his way across for the first touchdown of the game. The extra point attempt failed. Vanceboro held the surprised Farmville outfit in check throughout the rest of the half and the score was 6-0 at the midway mark.

Coach Moyer whipped his club together during the intermission, evidently, for three minutes after they got the ball in the third quarter, they had a touchdown.

The Devils took the kickoff on their 43 and drove 57 yards for the tally. Sharp running by Irving Allen and Johnny Dixon sparked the drive and Dixon carried over for the TD from the one. Dixon also got the extra point.

Tied 13-13
Farmville hit paydirt again shortly afterwards, when Richard Joyner intercepted a Vanceboro pass on the Farmville 24 and carried 50 yards to the Vanceboro 26. Allen bucked for 13 and a pass from Sonny Mall to Allen clicked for the score. The conversion failed and Farmville had a 13-6 lead.

In the fourth quarter, Vanceboro got back into the game. A pass from Willis to Kite on the Vanceboro 15 connected, and Kite rambled 80 yards for a touchdown. Joe Hill carried the point and it was tied 13-13.

With time closing in, Farmville took the ball on its own 36 and drove to a touchdown. Mall picked up the longest run of that sequence on a 28-yard gallop to the VHS 21. Allen scored from there. Mall added the point, making it 20-13.

Vanceboro, trying to make the yardage on fourth down, deep in its own territory, lost possession. The Devils fought over on the 28. The Devils fought to the 15 and Allen bumped it over from there. Mall added the final point, making it 27-13.

Almost Another
With less than a minute remaining, Troy Dail intercepted a Vanceboro aerial on the VHS 25 and returned it to the four yard line. Farmville had a first and 10 there at the end of the game.

Outstanding for Farmville were Ralph Cash, Joe Flake, James Bundy, Richard Joyner, Clyde Killbrew, Johnny Thorne, Troy Dail, Bill Lewis, Mall, Allen, and Dixon.

Farmville is idle next week.

Forty Cases Cleared From Docket Of County Court

Forty cases were cleared from the docket of Pitt County Recorder's Court this week as the court prepared for a two-week lay-off because of scheduled Superior Court terms. One other case, a speeding charge, was referred to Superior Court for a jury trial at the request of the defendant, Kermit Alvin Pitt, of New Bern, Pitt, listed as a 34-year-old preacher, was charged with speeding 70-miles-per-hour on October 12. Six other defendants in speeding cases had prayers for judgment continued and suspended upon payment of court costs and surrender of driver's licenses for ten days. Defendants who received such sentences were: Canine Gilbert Brown, Negro, Tarboro; Robert Preston Rouse, Route 2, New Bern; Walter Reid Perkins, Jr., 400 Summit Street, Greenville; Marvin Eugene Whaley, Cherry Point; William Vernon Tyson, 611 Maple Street, Greenville; and Howard Stocks, Route 5, Greenville. Three other defendants in speeding cases were ordered to pay fines and costs. Those defendants and judgments against them were: Aaron Roy Rhodes, Route 2, Greenville, speeding, $10 and costs, and driver's license suspended for 30 days; Carl Driscoll Lineberger, 304 Elizabeth Street, Greenville, speeding and failure to stop for a stop sign, $25 and costs, and driver's license revoked for six months; and Ernie Muse Walker, New Bern, speeding with a truck, $10 and costs. Pleas of guilty in absentia were entered by four defendants who were ordered to pay $25, costs deducted, and surrender their driver's licenses for ten days. They were: Henry Kenneth Smith, Route 2, Vanceboro; Bernice Ray Sutton, Route 1, Grimesland; Guy Tilden Hansen, Cherry Point; and William C. Schulz, Camp Hill, Pa. Smith, Sutton and Schulz were charged with speeding. Hansen was charged with speeding, driving on the wrong side of the road, and driving without a valid driver's license. Other speeding cases and judgments returned were against Ernest Holt Weaver, Louisburg, who was also charged with following too closely, no pros; and William Bradford Murphy, Alliance, N. C., speeding with a truck, costs. Continuances were granted to two defendants who were charged with operating vehicles without driver's licenses. They were Lee Lonia Williams, 200 Ridgeway Street, Greenville, and Melvin McCarthy Whitehurst, Route 5, Greenville. Willie Lee Wright, Negro, Route 4, Greenville, was also granted a continuance on a charge of no chauffeur's license, but Roosevelt Howard, Negro, Route 6, Greenville, charged with not having a license, was ordered to pay $25 and costs. John David Brewer, Route 3, Greenville, got a continuance on a charge of driving after his license expired, and Leander Tyre, Negro, 609 Sheppard Street, Greenville, was ordered to pay $25 and costs for not having a license and failing to give a proper signal when making a turn. Marcus Grimsley, Rte. 1, Winterville, appealed a 90-days suspended sentence to Superior Court after he was found guilty of driving under the influence of intoxicants, driving on the wrong side of the road, and improper lights. Grimsley's sentence was suspended on condition he pay a fine of $100 and costs, and his driver's license was revoked for 12 months. Raymond Wesley Dixon, Route 5, Greenville, got an extra five months tacked onto a prison term he is presently serving after being convicted for driving under the influence, driving without a license, and having improper brakes on his vehicle. A suspended sentence of 90 days and revocation of his driver's license was ordered for Linwood Earl Knight, Negro, Route 1, Stokes, after he was found guilty of careless and reckless driving and driving under the influence. Knight's jail sentence was suspended on condition that he pay $100 and costs. Other traffic cases and judgments included: Bobby Kay Lloyd, Route 1, Greenville, careless and reckless driving, defendant entered a plea of guilty to driving to left of the center line, costs and driver's license suspended for 15 days; Linwood Patterson Bolton, Ahoskie, careless and reckless driving, $25 and costs, driver's license suspended for 30 days; and Ralph Mirl Slade, Oriental, careless and reckless driving, and speeding with a truck, $25 and costs, driver's license suspended for 30 days. Whiskey cases and judgments returned included: Noah Clark, Negro, Route 2, Robersonville, possession of non-tax-paid whiskey, costs; Charlie Thomas, Negro, Bethel, possession of non-tax-paid whiskey, 90 days suspended upon payment of $50, costs deducted, and on further condition defendant does not violate any liquor laws for two years. Macie Hardy, Negro, Route 3, Greenville, possession of non-tax-paid whiskey, $5 and costs; Clarence Anderson, Negro, Route 6, Greenville, possession of non-tax-paid whiskey and possession for the purpose of sale, $10 and costs; and Doris T. Carmichael, Negro, Route 2, Robersonville, possession of non-tax-paid whiskey and possession for the purpose of sale, not guilty. Other cases which were cleared from the docket were: Jimmie Lee Parker, Negro, Route 1, Fountain, assault with a deadly weapon (two counts), 60 days suspended upon payment of costs and payment of prosecuting witness's medical bills; Jesse Anderson, Negro, 1304 Fairfax Avenue, Greenville, assault with a deadly weapon, not pros upon payment of costs. John Howell, Negro, no address listed, assault with a deadly weapon, 90 days suspended upon payment of costs and medical bills of prosecuting witness; Clinton Joyner, Negro, Farmville, assault with a deadly weapon, 60 days suspended upon payment of costs and surrender of shotgun. Ardroy Joyner, Negro, Belvoir, worthless check, not guilty; C. P. Sutton, RFD, Greenville, worthless check, not pros upon payment of costs; Clarence Everett, Archie Edwards, Jimmie Sutton and Jesse Hinson, all of Fountain, gambling, each defendant ordered to pay $10, costs deducted.

HIGH WINDS and waves herald the approach of Hurricane Audrey last June 27 along the Louisiana coastline near Cameron. Before the storm subsided, it had left at least 518 dead, 1,000 injured, and millions of dollars in property damage in one of the severest tests of State and local disaster organizations in the recent history of the nation. (Photo by Louis King, Lake Charles, La.)

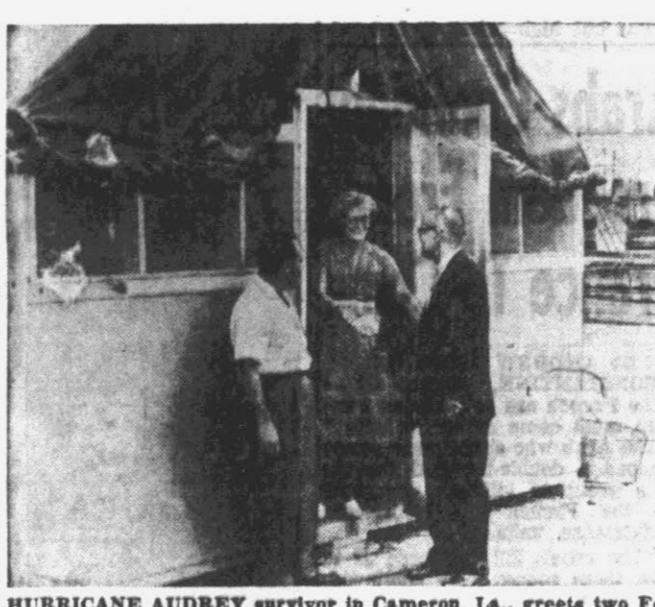

SEN. RUSSELL LONG of Louisiana (right), chats with Jack Heffelmeyer, who voluntarily travelled from the East Coast to the Hurricane Audrey disaster area to help out. BACK FROM DESPAIR Cameron Rebuilding Better Community on Ruins of Old

Cameron is coming back. The town which felt the brunt of Hurricane Audrey's assault on the southwestern Louisiana coastline last June is rebuilding rapidly after being nearly leveled. Cameron is also coming back through its own efforts. What is one of the nation's first disaster planning commissions has been set up there. It will oversee the rebuilding of most of Cameron within nine months, allocating gifts and other resources as it sees fit. In time, it should be a better town than it was. In the past, Cameron and its neighboring communities, Creole and Grand Chenier, each had a tiny clinic. Now they will have a new Cameron Memorial Hospital, built with the help of Federal funds, the American Legion, and others. The Junior Chamber of Commerce will build a public library, which the town has never had. Even 34 college students, whose resources were wiped out by the hurricane, will be able to continue in school through help received from the Louisiana Department of Education.

DEAD ANIMALS were a familiar sight in Cameron Parish (county), La., after high waters from Hurricane Audrey swept over land only about two feet above sea level, and wiped out some 35,000 head of cattle. Farm organizations have made some overtures to the agriculture division of the Cameron Planning Commission toward helping re-establish a foundation herd in the stricken area. REFUGEE SHELTER and sorting-out center for casualties in the McNeese College gym at Lake Charles, La., was crowded by homeless Hurricane Audrey survivors from the Cameron area. The disaster caused at least 518 deaths, but the toll would have been much higher were it not for heroic action by doctors in the disaster zone, and a 200-bed civil defense emergency hospital set up on the spot in isolated, sparsely settled Creole, La. Marine Commandant Is Host To Prince Philip

WASHINGTON (AP) — Prince Philip, as captain general of Britain's royal marines, pays a visit today to the commandant of the U.S. Marine Corps. Gen. Randolph McC. Pate, the top U.S. Marine, and Col. Leonard F. Chapman, the Marine barracks commander, arranged to receive Philip with a 20-minute military review and a social get-together afterwards. The Prince was invited to Pate's residence on the compound, the oldest federal building still in use in Washington, it escaped destruction when the invading British burned the White House and the capitol in the War of 1812. While Philip was headed for ruffles and flourishes and a 21-gun salute from the American Marines, Queen Elizabeth planned to remain at the British Embassy to dispense honors and help lay a cornerstone for a new office building. Philip departed from royal formalities yesterday when, at a garden party at the British Embassy, he held his first news conference. It was an impromptu chat which he initiated himself. He covered a variety of subjects in talking with reporters. Philip said he and Elizabeth weren't buckling under the rigors of their official visit. "We're used to it," he laughed. He indicated that he believes British monarchs are not as news-worthy at home as the President of the United States, who may draw 200 to 300 reporters to a weekly White House news conference. "If we did that same thing, we'd get two people," he said. Asked whether he had ever spoken before to a group of reporters, Philip replied: "Well, I meet them at a club perhaps, but if I did this sort of thing, then you might expect to continue the contact and I'm afraid that could not be done." The Prince stressed a belief about the scientific nature of western space satellite research. He said the "whole thing has been muddled up" to confuse pure science with a cold war race.

School Credits For Holding Job

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP)—When school bells rang this fall at San Juan Union High School there was something special for juniors and seniors: they can get scholastic credit for working at part-time jobs. The new program gives students an opportunity to find out what work is like while still studying toward graduation. Mrs. Kamena plans to get community support — and more job offers — by naming an advisory board of civic leaders. University Hall on the Brown University campus in Providence, R.I., was a barracks for American and French troops during the American Revolution.

Finally Closed Legal Loophole

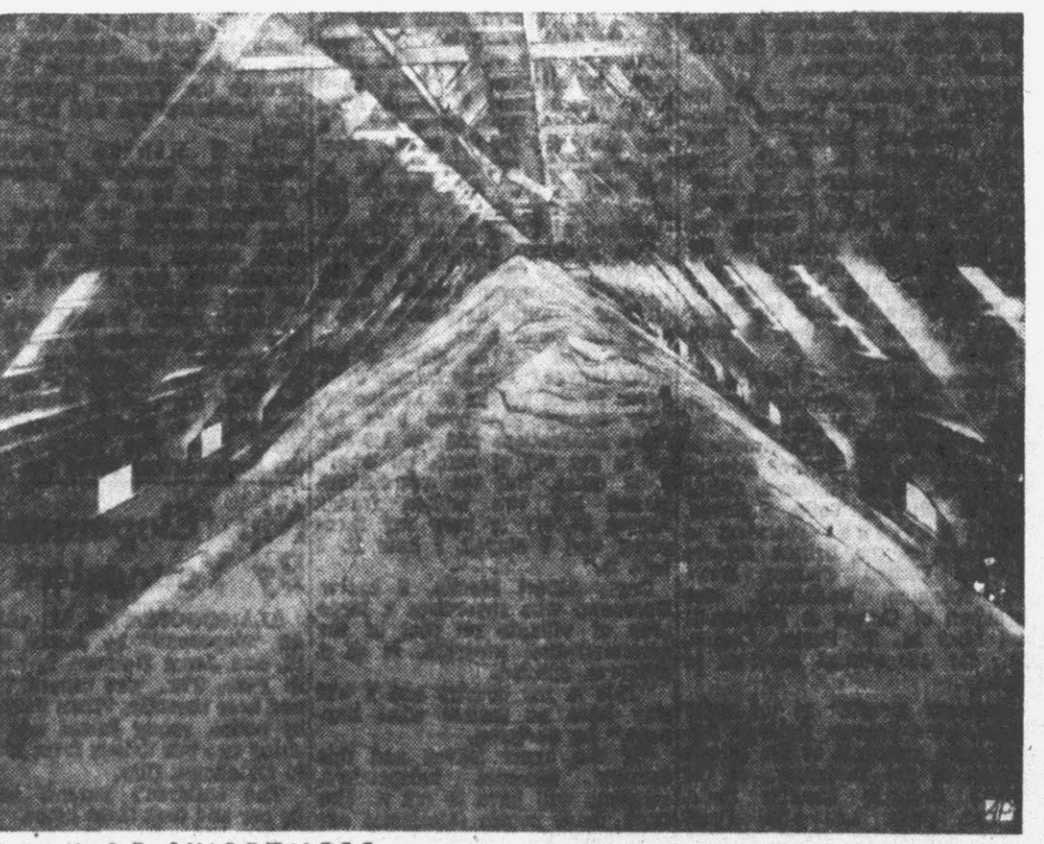

MIDDLETOWN, Ohio (AP) — Middletown law officers wanting to charge an inmate with breaking out of jail ran into a problem — there was no law against breaking out of the city jail. They finally charged the escapee with destruction of city property — he broke a window in his escape — and city fathers promptly adopted an ordinance plugging the embarrassing legal loophole. ALBUQUERQUE (AP) — Nonie Tenorio, 24, Albuquerque, dropped into federal court to see how the Bernalillo County Grand Jury was proceeding. "But he didn't stay long. He was spotted by deputy U. S. marshals and arrested on the spot. The curious Tenorio had been indicted the previous week on a dope charge. He couldn't understand. Hadn't he been released on $1,000 bond? The deputies explained Tenorio had been released on $1,000 bond, but U. S. Dist. Judge Waldo Rogers had raised it to $10,000.

Camera News

By IRVING DESFOR

AP Newsfeatures
I've had an advance viewing of many of the new cameras scheduled to make their debut soon in the hectic pre-Christmas season. The relentless march of time flips the calendar pages all too quickly so it won't be too long before you see these tempting targets in your local camera stores.

From an over-all viewpoint, it looks like a landslide swing toward 35mm cameras and a popular vote for a new exposure system called "EVS." This "exposure value system" hastens the end of the "f-stop" system and the kindest words from the mass of camera fans are likely to be "Good riddance."

The exposure value system expresses in a simple number the proper combination of lens opening and shutter speed that will produce a properly exposed picture. It is determined by the amount of light present and the type of film being used.

The system originated in Germany, the innovation of Friedrich Deckel in an expensive synchro-coupled shutter first shown at the Photokina in Cologne in 1953. In the following year, it was introduced in America in the Rollei camera. The light valve system, "LVS" as it was called in Europe, was expanded to less expensive prontos, shutters, and gathered momentum abroad. In this country, it was seen only on expensive or imported cameras.

Now it has been incorporated in the most popular American-made cameras from fixed-focus Kodak Brownies up to precision equipment with built-in exposure meters. The EV system has also come to the new line of Polaroid picture-in-a-minute cameras, another significant shift.

Here's how EVS tries to simplify picture taking. It is expressed in a number which usually runs from 4 to 18. That number may be measured directly with a new light meter . . . for instance, the number may come with a chart of instructions for a particular film for certain lighting conditions . . . for instance, Verichrome pan film, sunny day; 14. It may also be imprinted on certain cameras at different notches along with symbols of the light conditions.

The number "14" in itself is easier to cope with than the intricate to set the camera at 1/500th of a second at f-11 or an equivalent exposure. In a simple type of camera which has a fixed shutter speed, setting the EVS number, 14 for instance, adjusts the lens opening to its proper relationship for a correct exposure.

In another type of camera, the shutter speed has to be selected according to the subject matter. If it involves action, it may be necessary to shoot at 1/200th of a second; if it's an average picture it can be shot at 1/50th. Whatever speed is selected has an individual EVS number which may be 5, 6, 7, etc. Then the lens diaphragm is set to its EVS number so that together with the shutter, the total adds up to 14 or whatever exposure value has been determined.

Thus there are many combinations of shutter speeds and lens openings each of which will produce a correctly exposed snapshot or color slide. In still another type of camera, they've gone one step farther. The more expensive cameras have the lenses and shutters coupled together so that turning either one automatically adjusts the other to the proper combination. The exposure value having been determined a single setting to that number operates the various combinations as a unit.

Exposure-value cards for different types of films will make their debut along with many of the new cameras. The ones not being used are carried in a special slot in the camera case. In some types, when a camera is loaded with film, its particular EV card fits into a groove on the back of the camera. It serves as a reminder of the type of film in the camera and is a handy reference guide for exposure-value numbers for various light conditions. Flash recommendations are covered on the reverse of each card.

To sum it up, if a camera fan can add, subtract or deal with numbers that go up to 18, he can produce perfect negatives. Whether he produces perfect pictures is another matter however. That still depends on his choice of subject matter.

Applies A 'Cure' The Hard Way
FORT SCOTT, Kan. (AP)—Frank Becco, a Fort Scott businessman, went to a nearby lake to clean out his duck blind. He was driven away by angry wasps.

Next day, Lyle W. Amer volunteered to clean out the blind. "I want to get pretty well stung," Amer said. "It helps my rheumatism."

Becco took Amer to the blind. Amer got his stings and eradicated the wasps.

A Fort Scott physician, questioned by a reporter, said the wasp sting contains a neurogenitive toxin which in small doses could alleviate pain through partial paralysis of given areas.

"But," the doctor commented, "he certainly does it the hard way."

Fifty Years In Grand Lodge

Heart Surgery Changed Chances For This Indian

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—A postal worker from India — who nearly died after traveling halfway around the world to undergo heart surgery — headed for home today with what he gratefully described as a "dramatic new lease on life."

Sewa Chand, 25-year-old father of four, was unable to walk more than two blocks earlier this year. He suffered from a closed mitral valve in the heart. Now, a brisk stroll of an hour and a half seems like nothing at all.

Chand had rheumatic fever some years ago, and the closed heart valve was a result. Doctors in India were unable to help him. Then, in 1956, he read of the award of the Nobel Prize to Dr. Andre P. Cournand of New York for his work on heart ailments. Chand wrote Dr. Cournand, asking his help.

Dr. Cournand got in touch with Dr. Charles P. Bailey, professor of thoracic surgery at Hahnemann Medical School here. Dr. Bailey arranged for a committee of Americans to sponsor Chand's trip to Philadelphia.

On July 23 Chand underwent surgery. The closed valve was opened to permit the proper flow of blood through the left side of his heart. Then, as the surgeons were completing their work, his heart stopped beating entirely. The doctors massaged it back into action, but for three days Chand lingered near death in deep shock. Then he slowly began to recover.

Today, bright-eyed and sprightly of step, he said "This is a dramatic new lease on life for me. I can go back to my family and my work. It is really wonderful."

Phone Directory Gets New Look

Telephone directories with a modern colorful appearance will be sent local subscribers within the next few days it was announced today by Frank Harrington, local manager for Carolina Telephone and Telegraph Company.

Harrington said that the forthcoming directory replacing current books features a modern cover designed to be more attractive and harmonious with surroundings in which it will be used. A new hard finish glossy paper, expected to retain its clean appearance under reasonable wear, is being used on the new directories.

The smart looking cover resembles a rich piece of mahogany polished to a high luster. Highlighting the attractiveness of this cover is the receiver of a new yellow telephone receiver and cord placed vertically along the left edge. A yellow band extends horizontally across the width of the front cover. Exchanges listed in the directory are printed on the yellow band. An emblem calls attention to the classified yellow pages in the directory which tells subscribers where to find goods and services offered by local businesses.

Following suggestions received by the telephone company, a space is provided on the front cover for subscribers to list the telephone number of their fire and police department.

Nearly 8300 copies of the new directory will be distributed initially to subscribers in Greenville and Ayden. A sufficient additional quantity of the books is ordered to take care of replacement requests and growth of the exchanges covered.

'Trunk Murder Case' Solved

REDWOOD CITY, Calif. (AP)—Sheriff Earl B. Whitmore's office has solved the Half Moon Bay "trunk murder case."

John Dooley, 10, told police Sunday he saw a body being stuffed into the rear end of a car. After 40 hours of investigating, the sheriff's office learned yesterday the body was that of a live high school student who wanted to avoid paying the 90-cent admission to hot rod drag races.

Vigilantes And Suspects Mixed

AMERICAN FALLS, Idaho (AP)—Police said yesterday they are having trouble separating suspects from vigilantes in a wave of sex offenses in American Falls.

They said self-appointed vigilantes, armed with revolvers, rifles and clubs, have been roaming the streets at night, both afoot and in cars.

Officers said the vigilantes are in danger of being shot by other vigilantes and police.

'Creative Listening' By New York Prison Chaplain

By TIM SMITH
ATTICA, N.Y. (AP)—Once every week, 60-year-old Rabbi Harris J. Brevis enters the state's maximum security prison here for an exercise in "creative listening."

That's how the short, white-haired rabbi — who has been blind for 30 years — describes a crucial part of his technique in attempting the moral regeneration of hardened convicts.

It's uphill work. Virtually all prisoners, the clergyman says, deem themselves innocent. But about 20 per cent of the inmates who seek his help respond and make some progress.

"This does not mean they become 'good' or 'get religion,' only that they establish a more realistic view of themselves in relation to society," he explained.

And he added: "The counselor is like a mirror to reflect the prisoner's own thinking back to him. If this technique is not successful, the chaplain must return to his original role — describe the power of faith he must appeal to reason, to conscience and to the spiritual roots of the individual."

The rabbi has been visiting chaplain at the Attica prison 12 years. While Jewish prisoners average only about 30 out of 2,000, non-Jews sometimes come to him as well.

Reveal Use Of Homing Device

CHINA LAKE, Calif. (AP)—The U.S. Navy has revealed for the first time that the Sidewinder air-to-air guided missile has an infrared heat homing device.

Capt. William W. Hollister, commander of the Naval Ordnance Test Station, said yesterday that the infrared system enables the missile to hit its target by homing in on hot exhausts of enemy jets.
