Pick Your Favorite Paris Style

By NADEANE WALKER
PARIS (AP)—Now that the wraps are off Paris fall fashions, members of the haute couture are waiting anxiously to see which of them the public will approve.
Slack waist, low waist, tight calf skirt? Now you can make your choice, and be sure that the fashion czars will be moved by it. For however dictatorially some new trends may be launched, the stylists do heed public opinion.
What you like best from this season's shapes are sure to reappear in next February's openings, while the trends you and all your friends simply detest are likely to wither quietly away.
Trial Balloons
You don't believe it? Well, Dior launched nearly ankle-length day skirts as a trial balloon two seasons ago, made many more of them last season, and dropped them like a hot potato this time after they failed to catch on.
The big issue this season is undoubtedly the slack waisted sack sheath. At the openings, some women declared that they adore them and swore to adopt them; others gritted their teeth and hissed, "Never!"
But already some are to be seen in the smart hotel lobbies and restaurants of Paris, and even strolling down the Champs Elysees. Not many, but enough to indicate that the dressmakers have turned up a controversial trend in the sack sheaths.
Few women, we'll bet, will wear necklines as low as Dior pitches them for cocktail and evening. And surely Pierre Cardin's drapery between the legs is only for the do-or-die exhibitionists. The hobble hems that were shown nearly everywhere are not wearable or comfortable enough to be a universal success, although they've had fad runs before and no doubt will have again.
All of Paris, from Patou to Lanvin the Heim to Balmain, likes satin bows, more or less in profusion, and some women will welcome their soft flattery. But others hate bows worse than a run in the stocking, and when they order or copy one of the new creations they're sure to strip off the gingerbread.
Perennial Black
The couturiers' prediction for black this season will probably go down better in Paris than elsewhere, for it's the color French women tote on anyway. According to popular magazine surveys, a little black suit is everybody's dream of chic. For rebels against sobriety, there is a range of blues, coral, pink, red, green and gold—colorful enough for the gayest.
Maybe a rather bad summer has made the dressmakers pessimistic—or maybe they're just pushing fur. Anyway, they seem to be predicting a freezing winter with their big fur-lined and fur-trimmed greatcoats and thick tweed suits.
And they've given in gracefully, without much of a struggle, to the fact that big hats are a blight. Just see how small the new models are.

FRENCH LOOK FOR FALL . . . Bulky, loose-woven wool tweed by Rodier is used by the house of Jean Patou for this narrow, sack-waisted suit with loose turtle-neck collar. There is a fur-lined coat to match, and hat is same fabric.

Seventh Grade Presents Show

Mrs. John Zeh's seventh grade presented the "Steve Allen Show" for their assembly program at the Junior High School, October 4. Garry Conway presented the devotion and Bill Mays introduced the program.

After the song, the "Men on the Street" were asked if they'd like to take a trip to the moon. The "Men on the Street" were Bobby Helwig, Donald Pierce and Tommy Brown. Freddie Stokes played an escaped convict and was carried from the stage by Tom Duncan and Dennis Eagan, class policemen.
A Mexican Hat Dance was presented by Jimmy Meredith, Susan Prince, Bill Green, Ann Buchanan, Mike Knox, Ann Daniel, Doug Surrency, Donna Whitley, Steve Wright, Janice Williams, Jane Joyner and Rayde Harrington.
Harry Williams, impersonating Elvis Presley, sang "Teddy Bear" and Jerry Bus Clark, Dianah Hodges, Rose Clark and Anna White from the audience came for autographs.
Jake Gaskins, Harry Williams, Martha Henderson and Peggy Ippock did a Latin American dance number, and Karen Martin and Patricia Worthington presented a ballet to the music "Always."
Barbara Minges, Susan Laughter and Shirley Everett pantomimed the Maguire Sisters, while singing "Around the World."
Jake Gaskins performed on the piano a medley consisting of "My Blue Heaven," "Carolina in the Morning" and "I'm Gonna Sit Right Down and Write Myself a Letter."
The final act of the show was given by Gwen Lynch from the Senior High School who performed a novelty dance.
The cast sang a farewell fanfare to close the show.
Announcers were Tom Campbell, Jamie Poindexter and Mae Davis.

Local, State Fair Come, Go; Leave Intangible Values Behind

RALEIGH — There's been lots of talk about fairs, particularly the State Fair held last week, but not much as been said with regard to intangible values of fairs in general.
To one home demonstration agent, Mrs. Martha B. Thompson, Davidson County, their county agricultural fair meant more than exhibits and recreation to the home demonstration program.
Mrs. Thompson feels that the home demonstration leader training program benefits tremendously by giving leaders additional training in food preparation, clothing, canning, handicrafts, and house furnishings. In her estimation, "fairs build a reservoir of trained leaders."
"By coming together to discuss the improvements needed by studying recommendations of the judges and listening to the judges' comments," explains Mrs. Thompson, "our home demonstration club women are developing into strong leaders in the various phases of homemaking. Each year in our fair, two experienced leaders are used in each section and new ones are added to give more individuals the benefits of the training."
As Mrs. Edward Alfred, County clothing leader, expresses it, "It isn't the small amount we make for working at the fair that counts with me. It's what I learn and the fellowship of working with other leaders, the fair committee, and others, that are the greatest values."
"The smoothness of operation of this year's Davidson County Fair can be attributed to the careful pre-planning and training given leaders in the past," Mrs. Thompson continues. "There was no tension, no irritation, and no problems in spite of adverse weather conditions. Except for the routine work, the fair was the easiest and happiest it has ever been."
Mrs. Thompson considers the fair a "real adventure in public relations." "It improves relations with the public in general," she says, "and it makes friends for home demonstration with groups like Kiwanians, those who work with the eating booths, and strengthens relationships with press and radio people."
"It's true that the fair is time consuming and is hard work."

Mrs. Thompson concludes, "but though it may seem repetitious at times, the opportunities are unlimited."

Mrs. Freeman Addresses Sweet Gum HD Meeting

"It Is Smart To Be Well Fed" was the topic used when Mrs. Donald Freeman, assistant home agent, demonstrated to the Sweet Gum Grove Club at its meeting Thursday at the Community Building.
Devotions were given by Mrs. Billy Brown. The secretary called the roll with ten members answering. The vice-president, Mrs. Eric Whichard, welcomed two guests, Mrs. Francis Briley of Greenville and Mrs. Shirley Butler of Stokes.
Mrs. David Nobles, garden leader, reported having a supply of nice beans and squash for table use from her garden. Mrs. Johnnie Meeks gave the poultry report.

Mrs. John Whichard gave a report on the recent State Family Life Leaders Conference she attended. She stated that she could find no better words to use in summing up her report of what she heard in the warm welcome given by Dr. Messick and others and advice given by Mr. and Mrs. Overstreet, also the classes she attended, than the following: "Do unto others as you would have them do unto you."
The treasurer reported $81.39 surplus at the end of this year which she turned over to the incoming treasurer, Mrs. Heber Briley. Other new officers for the club year are: Mrs. Eric Whichard, president; Mrs. Johnnie Meeks, vice-president; and Mrs. David Nobles Jr., secretary.

With Farm Women

By VIRGINIA M. NANCE
(Items this week on: Sampson, Cumberland, Durham, Cabarrus, Alexander and Columbus Counties.)

Emphasis On The New
It's nice to sit down to a meal and know that some of your favorite foods will be there, but most people will admit that something new adds a little more interest to meals.

Sampson County home demonstration women have been working over a period of months toward introducing broccoli into their family meals. According to Home Agent Emily Johnston, garden leaders began last January encouraging club women, as well as others in their communities, to grow broccoli. In June, the foods and nutrition leaders gave demonstrations on the cooking and freezing of broccoli. Now the garden leaders are helping the people secure plants for their fall gardens.

Mrs. A. W. Weeks and Mrs. A. W. Blizell, leaders at Newton Grove, have already worked up an order in their community for 500 broccoli plants. They, like many others in Sampson County, are eager to learn to grow broccoli, since it has never been grown to any great extent in the county.

As a result of home demonstration's concentrated efforts toward better fall gardens, Mrs. Johnston reports that seed dealers have indicated that more seeds for fall gardens have been planted than ever before.

Showed Good Response
Last month's demonstration, "A Guide Post to Good Meals," presented to Cumberland County's home demonstration club women, brought excellent response, according to reports from Era K. Robinson, home agent.

Following one of the demonstrations, Mrs. Lattie Jones, Cedar Creek school lunchroom supervisor, said that the demonstration, which included valuable information on the nutritional value of various foods, would be very helpful to her in filling out her monthly lunchroom reports. It seems that this year, for the first time, supervisors will include in their reports the nutritional value of the foods they served.

Later when Mrs. Jones turned in her report, her supervisors who checked reports were pleased to find that she had done hers correctly while others had not. When asked where she got her information, she explained that she was able to make a complete nutritional report as a result of a home demonstration club meeting.

Parliamentary Procedure
"The only training students get in parliamentary procedure comes from 4-H Clubs" was a statement heard from a number of Durham County's school principals, states Mrs. Carolyn Schultz, assistant home agent.

Mrs. Hoyte Thacker, Rougemont, a Sunday school teacher and an active church worker, says, "I can always pick out boys and girls who are 4-H Club members, because they can preside at meetings with ease, and are more capable in conducting business meetings."

Mrs. Schultz explains further that in order to give more 4-H Club members experience in correct parliamentary procedure, club members studied the procedure while electing this year's officers. Addressing the chair, making motions and using correct parliamentary procedure were some of the things they learned.

Flu Vaccine Is Important Notes Doctor

ROBERSONVILLE—Dr. Walter Elliott Ward was the guest speaker at the second fall meeting of the P.T.A. held Thursday evening in the Robersonville High School auditorium with approximately 100 people present.

Dr. Ward discussed Asian flu. He emphasized the importance of vaccination for everyone including babies as young as three months old. The next best defense is a healthy body, he added.

He suggested that the victims of this fast-spreading disease stay in bed to avoid pneumonia, the most dangerous complication. He added that there is no specific cure but the physicians can give drugs to relieve the symptoms. He mentioned that there is a shortage of vaccine.

Harold Brown, a teacher and the pastor of the Gold Point Christian Church, conducted the devotional. Mrs. Wiley B. Rogerson reported on the membership drive and stated that the present enrollment is 214. Mrs. F. Everett announced 28 subscriptions to the Parent-Teachers Magazine.

The new lunchroom manager, Mrs. Harvey Louis Roberson, discussed balanced meals which are planned to meet the Federal specifications. "Those who are unable to pay are allowed free lunches. Each meal consists of 2 oz. of meat, 2 teaspoons of butter, 2 vegetables and a dessert to provide one-third of the child's daily requirements. Once a week when soup is served the pupil has one vegetable," she said.

Vincent Columbo, principal, explained that the government supplies surplus food and reimburses the grammar school with 4 cents for each lunch and pays 3½ cents on each meal eaten in the high school cafeteria.

At the conclusion of the program, Mrs. Dennis Roberson's first and second grades received the attendance prize.

Every Child Needs Fun Of Halloween

By DOROTHY V. WHIPPLE, M. D.

IS THERE to be a Halloween party in your child's school? If your youngster is not too talkative about such things, better make a phone call or two and find out. Most schools do have Halloween parties. The important thing about the party is the costume—that's what it's all about. The children parade about and win prizes for the most outstanding costume. Often there are several categories—the prettiest, the funniest, the most original and so on.

If every child in the class, except one, has some kind of a costume, it's going to be very hard indeed on that one child. Don't let it happen to your youngster.

Mike had just entered school in September. He was in first grade. He was pretty overwhelmed by this whole business of school and lots of the time he wasn't quite sure what was going on. There was talk about a party next Thursday. He was all for it. Mother didn't seem too interested in what went on at school, so he didn't say anything to her about the party. Thursday came and every child in the class, except Mike, came in with a big bundle. Mike was a little surprised at all these packages, but there were lots of things he didn't know so he didn't pay much attention. Ten o'clock came and the teacher said:

"Now everyone can put on his costume and we will all go into the assembly room."

Poor Mike

There was a great bustle about, the bundles popped open, witches, ballerinas, clowns, Davy Crockett appeared all over the room. The teacher was jumping about helping Mary with her sash, Bob with his holster and Timothy with his boots. Poor Mike, he just sat there; nobody paid any attention to him.

Finally Miss Fullerton did see him.

"Where's your costume, Mike?" she asked.

Mike just looked blank.

"Didn't your mother get you anything?" Miss Fullerton was very busy and annoyed at this new problem. Her voice was sharp and condemning.

Mike began to cry.

Miss Fullerton was a good teacher, and a warm friendly girl. Quickly she said:

"Here, Mike you wear my hat and scarf and gloves, and you can be the schoolteacher."

Mike took the things, but he wasn't happy. He felt left out and somehow different from everyone else.

As all the children were marching into the assembly room Mike heard Tom say to Bill:

"Look, Mike wearing Miss Fullerton's hat 'cause his mother didn't get him anything. That's no costume."

Unhappy Day

That was too much for Mike. He tore off the hat, gloves and scarf, threw them on the floor, and ran back to his room, where he began throwing all the books from the bookcase on the floor.

Miss Fullerton's new fall hat was ruined. She had lost her hat and hadn't accomplished a thing for Mike.

The End of the Century Club met at the home of Mrs. Travis Hooker on Fifth Street on last Tuesday. There was an unusually large attendance and the meeting was made more interesting by the presence of Mrs. Cotten. There was a fine report of progress of the public library by Mrs. R. L. Carr, showing a large increase in the number of readers and general interest of the public along all lines. Mesdames Hassell, Dickinson and Little bought vivid reports of the District Federation of Clubs held recently at Aulander. Mrs. Hortense Moyer gave a very moving description of her recent trip to Richmond in which she saw and heard Lindbergh. At the close of the afternoon's program the hostess served tempting refreshments.

Administrators And Bottleneck

Are administrative fetters, perhaps unwittingly imposed, at least partially responsible for the fact that the United States has taken a back seat to the Soviet Union in missile development and the launching of a space satellite?

Have decisions by the Eisenhower administration brought about an atmosphere in which American scientists have found it difficult to push missile development as rapidly as they otherwise could have?

Latest developments on the official front in Washington have indicated that the administration may have unknowingly hampered the nation's program of scientific development. It would appear that Defense Secretary Wilson in his master plan for national security, failed to give sufficient attention to scientific research and development programs. The urgency attached to the program by scientists apparently has not been shared by higher administrative officials.

We cannot call back the time which may have been lost through such unfortunate situations which may have existed in the past. Nevertheless, we can prevent the continuation of such mistakes in the future. President Eisenhower should see that conditions which have impeded the nation's scientific development program in the past few years are, insofar as practical, are removed to assure more rapid progress. Congress, while it has the responsibility to see that taxpayers get their money's worth for government dollars, should make sure that the program does not suffer for lack of adequate funds which can be wisely used.

In short, it appears to us that the bottleneck in our scientific research and development program has not been caused by the scientists of this nation, but rather the administrators who have been responsible for the organization of the program.

Expected Growth Will Require New Planning

The decision of the State Board of Higher Education to study tuition rates and student fees of state supported institutions of higher learning is a necessary undertaking in view of the future needs of these rapidly growing facilities.

It has been pointed out a number of times in recent months that North Carolina's colleges, if they are to meet the demands of the young people of the state, must be expanded greatly within the next decade.

So far as state-supported institutions are concerned, that means millions upon millions of dollars of tax money must be found with which to provide these new facilities as well as expanded faculties to take care of more students. If a larger share of the operating expense of these colleges can be defrayed through higher tuition rates without putting a college education out of the economic reach of a large number of youngsters, the matter of hiking tuition rates may well prove an answer to some of the money problems which will have to be faced.

In view of the millions of dollars which must be spent by the state in expanding physical plants of these institutions, it is apparent that the financial support of colleges will become a problem of major importance to North Carolina within the next 10 years.

Concentrated Effort Is Bringing Results

The idiotic sport of highway racing, obviously widespread in North Carolina for the past few years, appears now to be dying out.

There are isolated reports now of motorists involved in planned races on public roads, but these reports seemingly have taken a sharp drop since the new law providing more severe penalties for the sport was passed by the 1957 General Assembly. It may be that the law, with its stiff penalties for violators, has made the sport appear too risky for some who discount its fatal aspects. It may be that many drivers who formerly participated in highway races have come to their senses and have given up the pastime which places their lives and the lives of others in jeopardy.

Whatever the reason, North Carolina's efforts to put an end to racing on its highways are providing the desired results. Consequently lives which might be snuffed out on the highways are being spared. The concentrated campaign against racers is gradually contributing to making the state's highways safer. It should not be relaxed.

Success When Timing Is Right

By ELMER ROESSNER
Business men can never tell from which direction the next spineroo is coming. Those who react the moment a spineroo reacts can go on to fortune. Those who react too late or not at all reveal themselves as slow, overly cautious and slack-adaidish. They'll never make the covers of the weekly magazine.

You won't find "spineroo" in the dictionary. It was invented only 59 seconds ago and may never be heard again. It is an external power that exerts a potential spinning force on business. Enterprises that turn in the same direction as the spineroo pick up speed and profit; those that try to revolve in the opposite direction encounter friction and generate heat.

The outstanding spineroo of the year was, of course, Sputnik. It was so much of a spineroo that some of the most opportunistic entrepreneurs were a bit wary. Tying in to Sputnik might make one be regarded as a fellow traveler. But after it appeared that Sputnik was not truly subversive — and that there were no Russian soldiers aboard who could peer into dressing rooms of Little Rock High — the opportunists moved in.

The big retailers — anti-Communist to the core — brought out displays of telescopes. No one was reckless enough to advertise. "See Sputnik or your money back!" Book stores arranged displays of books by Willy Ley and other interplanetary space authorities. A toy firm launched a rocket-launcher toy. Bartenders vied with one another in creating Sputnik cocktails. Obviously, the more likely a cocktail was to send one spinning, the more it was entitled to be called the original Sputnik

Strength For Today

By EARL L. DOUGLASS
THREE REASONS FOR PEACE OF MIND

Jesus had much to say about anxiety. He warned men against it as the thing that could destroy their peace and wreck all the well-set purposes of their lives. Jesus regarded anxiety as foolish and also as sinful.

It is interesting to note that in one well-known passage on this matter in the Gospels, Jesus uses the word "therefore" in connection with anxiety. Don't worry about money matters, he says. This variety of worry can tear you apart. God takes care of his creation—the birds of the air, the lilies of the field. If God does this for inanimate things will He not do much more for you?

Therefore, be not anxious.

And the same is true for all forms of anxiety. They are inconsistent with our belief and trust in a Heavenly Father. They are unworthy of citizens of the kingdom of heaven. And worry about the future—the "morrow" will be anxious for the things of itself. Sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof.

In other words, the problems will be disconcerting enough when you have to stand before them; don't make them worse by anxious brooding.

Therefore, because you are children of a Heavenly Father, because you are citizens of a spiritual, heavenly kingdom, because you cannot solve tomorrow's problems until tomorrow comes—be not anxious.

Mosquitoes Came Too

Everette Parker was the pinetree of course Saturday afternoon.

He showed up for his wedding. There had been some rumors circulated that Our Colleague would back out at the last minute. He set the fluttering hearts to rest, however, by arriving at the church before the bride did.

The wedding itself was an elegant affair, the reception was the ultimate in receptions, and the refreshments were inspiring. I enjoyed it all, even the thought of spending a year during a silent toast to the bride.

There would be, I suppose, a report on one side activity conducted by most of the men who were present at the church.

Most of us gallantly offered seats in the church to the ladies and turned to the vestibule, porch and steps to watch the proceedings. We shared those areas with monstrous Martin County mosquitoes who brought in several thousand Washington County relatives for the occasion.

It was difficult to maintain even a semblance of dignity in the company of the mosquitoer, but I believe most of us conducted our mosquito-slapping without interrupting the proceedings. At least, there were no complaints from the seated sections about say undue noise-making on the part of the standees.

Strangely, the mosquitoes either disappeared or called off their blood-letting when Everette and Sylvia came out of the church. My only explanation of the situation is that even mosquitoes must realize that Love is supreme in the presence of a wedding party.

To stray from thoughts of the wedding, for a moment, and dwell entirely on thoughts of the mosquitoes, I thought it strange to have so many of them this late in the year. They were, however, big fellows, and apparently impervious to the rigors imposed by the cool weather he had recently.

I also learned on a trip into Craven County Sunday that Jamesville and Martin County have no exclusive claim to out-of-season mosquitoes. New Bern is filled with them, particularly the areas near the banks of the Midget Neuse and the less-inspiring Trent.

As much as I enjoyed the wedding, and as delightful as I found the trip to New Bern, I was glad to get back home in Pitt County.

We have only gnats to worry about — and they have sense enough to recognize cold weather when it sets in around them.

Opinions In Brief

"In summary, the lesson of life is to learn to be happy with what nature has endowed us. We need not be the richest man or woman in our community, nor do we have to have great riches at all. If we are intelligent enough to be thankful for all the things we have (and all of us have many things) and get as much out of life as we can, as we go along, we can be happy regardless of the extent of our material wealth." — Lawrenceville (Md) Times Crescent.

"Long ago it was said that a people get the kind of government they deserve. That is 100 per cent true." — Batesville (Ind.) Herald-Tribune.

"Remember that old crack? The one where an editor wrote that he had just returned from a visit to the county poorhouse to see a newspaper editor who put out a newspaper that tried to please everybody?" — Inman (S.C.) Times.

NEW YORK (AP) — Things a columnist might never know if he didn't open his mail:

That Queen Elizabeth II may be boss in Buckingham Palace, but when she goes fishing she takes her guidance from her husband, as do most wives. . . . It was Prince Phillip who converted her from trout to salmon fishing, now a favorite hobby with both.

That the latest joke in East Europe concerns a Moscow factory worker who was sentenced to 10 years for shouting "Khrushchev is a drunken idiot." . . . That bandleader Sammy Kaye offers this argument for bachelorhood: "Why should a man give a girl half his food just for cooking the other half?"

That you can make a handy shoe rack from an old discarded curtain rod. . . . Just tack it to the inside of a closet door and hang shoes on it by their heels and aren't we getting to be mother's little helper!

That smoking may not give you a disease, but nearly a third of all fires in the United States are caused by careless handling of cigarettes or matches.

Reorganization Is First Step

By RAY TUCKER

WASHINGTON Oct. 22 — In order to catch up with Russia on long-range missiles and encircling moons, the United States does not need a vast amount of new money or an increase in scientific personnel so much as a complete and cruel reorganization of the technical, planning and production system for turning out those weapons.

The assembly line for manufacturing and testing these complicated scientific and spatial devices has become as obsolete as the horse and buggy in an automobile age. From the many remote plants which make the parts to the firing pads at Patrick Air Base and Cape Canaveral, Fla., the system is "clogged with bottlenecks," as Neil H. McElroy, the new Defense Secretary, has quickly discovered.

LACKS AUTHORITATIVE DIRECTION There is nobody in authority or responsibility at the top to speed up work, to eliminate duplication or to assign strict priorities. On the contrary, the three services fight each other for materials, for money, for facilities, for manpower, and, finally, for the right to have a first tryout of their product at Cape Canaveral. Even these facilities are so limited that tests are delayed for days and weeks after scheduling.

Besides the lack of an all-powerful, co-ordinating individual or agency at Washington, there is an utter absence of authority and responsibility all along the production and assembly line. The old Army custom of "passing the buck" so as to escape criticism or reprimand prevails even in this time of crisis.

In order to understand this highly technical problem, it is necessary to realize that missile-making is comparable to the assembly line in an automobile plant, or in any vast industry such as steel.

EXISTING DIFFICULTIES Ford and General Motors, for instance, must depend upon thousands of subcontractors, who supply thousands of key parts for their finished product. These parts must be shipped to an assembly center on a tight and accurate schedule.

If a shipment of carburetors or even less essential parts are missing at a scheduled time and place, there is no end product. Again, if there is no space, no facilities or man power at the testing ground — in this instance, Patrick Air Base and Lake Canaveral — delays pile up. The car will not be ready for the customer on time.

All these difficulties now exist along our missile and moon-making assembly line. The failure has been human rather than scientific or mechanical.

BOTTLENECKS NEED TO BE UNCLOGGED For all his industrial genius in private life, former Defense Secretary Charles E. Wilson made no serious attempt to break these slowly accumulating bottlenecks. He was also handicapped by Presidential economy orders. He was forced to stop a speed-up on the assembly line which he had ordered as recently as July.

The economy measure did not seriously handicap current work, however. But it did prevent any effort to reorganize the antiquated planning and production system for field inspections and corrections would have cost more money than Wilson could afford to remedy his technological troubles, and to unclog the bottlenecks.

SOVIET SUCCESS MAY FORCE ACTION HERE Sputnik, however, may force belated action. Secretary McElroy has said that his first job will be to attack and solve this problem, and to mesh the gears of his missile-making system.

Indecision, inefficiency and inadequacy, both at Washington and in the subcontracting plants, are the real reasons for our crushing defeat on the scientific and military fronts.

Unfortunately they were combined with an amazing competency concerning Russia's advances, and in view of Khrushchev's new confidence and aggressiveness, the result has been a dangerous threat of war.

Decisive Cold War Battle For Middle East Appears Near

Editor's Note—William L. Ryan, writer of the following story, is just back from one of the frequent trips he makes to the Mideast.

By WILLIAM L. RYAN
AP Foreign News Analyst

The decisive cold war battle over the Middle East seems about to be joined. For Western civilization, this is a moment for prayerful resolve.

The Democratic world faces a toe-to-toe struggle with communism over a vast sun-baked section of the globe which President Eisenhower calls the most strategic area on earth. The winner will be the side with the strongest nerves and greatest resolutions.

Nikita S. Khrushchev and his Communist cohorts are toying with global peace. One serious mistake, one bad miscalculation in the Middle East now could bring the world to the edge of disaster. This would be no Korea. Much more is at stake, including the economic health of all Western Europe.

All the elements for a little war in evidence today in the Arab world. A big war remains a possibility—though not a probability. But Soviet communism persists in courting catastrophe.

Men who can harness the atom and plan outer space travel are gambling that they can control much less manageable forces: the human emotions of a highly unstable people.

There is no mystery about what Moscow is trying to accomplish in the Arab world.

The Russians do not want to start World War III. But they have gained great propaganda victories through their championing of the Arabs against Israel and through recent scientific advances. In their determination not to surrender this initiative, Soviet policy is using all measures short of war, approaching as close to the brink as Moscow dares.

It is becoming clear that one of Khrushchev's immediate goals is to force a big power meeting of heads of state giving him a permanent and authoritative voice in the Arab world's destinies.

The Russians hope to force such a meeting by beating a constant tattoo on the world's nerves and then building up pressure on London and Washington by offering hope of a way out of a highly explosive situation.

From a big power meeting, the Russians could work to emerge as the leading champions of Arab aspirations. Behind scenes they apparently hope to push forward relentlessly with economic, military and political penetration. They seek destruction of Western Allied influence in the Middle East, so that the northern tier of resistance to communism is broken and there is no hope left for an effective solid front.

Moscow already has a strong foothold in Syria, through military dependence. An economic trap, too, is being set for the Syrians.

The Russians probably are working hard even at this moment to bring about a situation in Syria's neighbor Iraq which will result in an anti-Western explosion there. Frustrated Arab nationalism, in a nation aligned militarily with the West, provides a convenient weapon.

If the explosion in Iraq comes, Soviet solicitude for "independence and sovereignty" could offer a new Iraqi regime a shoulder to weep upon, as it did in Syria. That day would be a black one for the West. Fragile, faltering Jordan would be easy prey to the Cairo-Damascus-Moscow axis. A sudden deluge of American arms has temporarily shored up King Hussein's throne, but it has given the Middle East the look of engaging in an arms race, with the Russians supplying Syria and Egypt. If Hussein should fall, the arms will fall to his—and America's—enemies.

If the Soviet program goes according to plan, Turkey would be effectively encircled. The northern tier will have come apart. With Syria astride the oil pipelines to the Mediterranean, Iraq on the Persian Gulf and Egypt sitting on the Suez Canal, Western Europe's oil would be at the mercy of Arab nationalist demands.

Will the Russians risk total war to pursue such aims?

One must go back a decade to examine the chances.

Iran, 1946: Moscow refused to get out of Azerbaijan. But when the situation became really dangerous, the Russians retreated. They would not risk war.

Berlin, 1949: When the Soviet blockade became too dangerous, Moscow called it off.

Korea, 1953: The Soviet gamble fell short of its goals. An unsure post-Stalin regime saw the threat of a new war. The Russians pulled back, pressed for an armistice.

Indochina, 1954: French and Viet Nam forces were defeated in the North. Communists pushed for and brought about an armistice, then fell back to digest their gains.

Middle East, March 1956: Those in the area at the moment of feverish crisis felt the peace of the world was hanging in the balance. Suddenly a Moscow statement pulled the rug from under Egypt's Nasser and other Arabs who might have anticipated total Soviet support.

Suez, November, 1956: The Russians talked of intervention, threatened war. But in the U.N. they labored to bring about a cease-fire.

The Russians need sustained Arab world tension if they are to push toward their goals. The Soviet policy aims at controlled turmoil. Indications are they will continue leading the world to the brink and suddenly pulling back to consolidate gains.

The big question: Will the Russians be able indefinitely to pull back in the nick of time?

NATIONAL DISTILLERS PRODUCTS COMPANY, N. Y. • 90 PROOF

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market has just suffered its bluest "Blue Monday" since Sept. 26, 1955, the first trading session after President Eisenhower's heart attack.

Successful selling waves yesterday slashed an estimated $6,350,000 from the quoted value of stocks listed on the New York Stock Exchange, based on the fall in the average.

The high-speed ticker tape ran behind the pace of transactions on no less than seven separate occasions when sellers rushed to unload.

The so-called blue chips took a beating along with stocks of lesser quality. Even American Telephone, regarded as an investment-type issue for cautious people, broke 3 7-8 points. Du Pont fell 6 1-4.

When the ticker tape ran late, brokers and analysts looked for some recovery movement after prices were pounded down—buying by so-called "bargain hunters." This is the usual pattern. But there was little or none of it yesterday.

Instead, prices hovered around their low figures only to be hammered down again when the ticker tape was swamped with selling the next time.

Wall Streeters reported no single news event, rumor or other factor behind yesterday's shake-out but rather a combination of "more of the same." The market, they said, was still worried about tight money and uncertain business prospects. Production cuts or layoffs were reported by several more companies. The scaling-down of defense spending was emphasized by the Navy's cancellation of 21 million dollars in contracts with Lockheed Aircraft Co.

Wall Street Sees A 'Blue' Monday

The steel industry's operating rate slipped below 80 per cent of rated capacity.

Brokers reported that despite the 70 per cent margin requirement some stocks were sold because more margin was required. Other stocks were disposed of merely because their owners were nervous—they had seen their holdings fall far enough. Additional sales were reported for establishing tax losses on income tax returns.

Although this was the sharpest decline since the first Eisenhower "heart break," it was only about half as bad, judging by the fall in the average. Nevertheless, it was part of a three-month erosion of prices since the market reached its high for the year July 12, coming then within an ace of its all-time bull market high.

The market got an extra push to the downside last week on news of the Syrian-Turkish crisis. The week before that, the Russian space satellite was the main up-setting factor.

Most Of Estate Is Left To Cats

IONIA, Mich. (AP) — The will of Mrs. Blanche Bonner Barber, admitted to probate yesterday, left most of her estate to provide food and care for her cats.

There was no immediate estimate on the size of the estate, but Probate Court set bond at $26,000 for the executrix, Mrs. Hattie Schaefer. Mrs. Barber, a widow and former Detroit school-teacher, made small bequests totaling $1,100 to nieces and nephews and set up the rest of the estate as a fund for the cats.

Fight For Life Quietly Ended

ABILENE, Tex. (AP) — A gallant struggle for life ended quietly last night for Tommy Cooper, 24. He died of nephritis, last of many serious ailments he suffered.

A diabetic from childhood and later victim of a heart attack, Cooper went blind in 1951. Despite this handicap he managed to graduate from high school in 1952 and became an Eagle Scout a year later. His father, B. O. Cooper, is chief of police at Stamford, Tex.

City Approach To Be Like Park

BALTIMORE (AP) — The State Roads Commission says the $600,000 beauty treatment for 15 miles of approaches to the Baltimore harbor tunnel will make motorists think they're in a public park.

The SRC said the trees and shrubs also will cut down on headlight glare, screen unsightly views, help stabilize the slopes and even reduce traffic noise.

The Sports Reflector

By BILLY ARNOLD

George Tucker, who graduated from East Carolina in 1954 after playing four seasons of football for the Pirates, is making a name for himself as one of the South's top coaches.

The husky, amiable ex-tackle is coaching the number four-ranked Junior College in the South, at Wingate.

According to a release, Thursday, Oct. 17, by the National Junior College Athletic Association, Tucker's Wingate College club is one of the best in the nation. In the NJCA rankings, the nation is divided into Northern and Southern divisions. The most recent rankings are as follows:

1. Tyler, Texas (4-1)
2. Arlington, Texas, (4-0)
3. San Angelo (3-1)
4. Wingate, N. C. (4-0)
5. Texarkana, Texas (3-0-1)

STILL ANOTHER WIN

The above listings do not include Wingate's 41-12 thrashing of Ferrum Junior College in Ferrum, Virginia, last Saturday night.

This National ranking assumes greater importance when it is remembered that this is only Wingate's second year in football since World War II.

Wingate has relied mostly on a powerful ground attack this season to gain its five victories. The Bulldogs have an average of almost 300 yards rushing per game. The club averages well over 15 first downs per game. Tucker's chargers have a scoring average of 18.6 points per contest, while holding opponents to an average of only 6.4. Three Bulldog TD's have been called back by rule infractions thus far this season.

Though wet weather has hampered Wingate passing during their first four games, the Bulldogs made up for lost time by scoring four touchdowns by air last week against Ferrum.

STATISTICS LOOK SHARP

A glance at further statistics compiled by George Tucker's aggregation indicate a well-coached team. The Bulldogs have picked up a total of 78 first downs, 1,472 yards rushing, and have completed 12 of 23 passes thus far. And they have a fine punting average of 32.2.

Tucker, a young man still in his twenties, seems headed for a bright future in this coaching business. His early success thus far has been a product of plenty of study and hard work—a quality that typified his football playing at ECC a few years ago.

While in Greenville, Tucker gained All-North State conference honors as a tackle and was once picked by the Associated Press as the outstanding lineman of the week throughout the nation.

Season 'Showdown' For Baylor Bears

WACO, Tex. —Baylor's disillusioned Bears will jam their football season into one afternoon Saturday. It's the showdown, the last chance at the Southwest Conference championship Baylor has sought for 33 years.

High, mighty and undefeated Texas A&M, rated No. 2 in the nation, awaits the shock of the last Bear charge.

The team that finished last season like a whirlwind then beat Tennessee in the Sugar Bowl was supposed to be top dog in the Southwest Conference this year. But injuries, illness and a sharp Arkansas team virtually ruined the season.

The Bears climbed partially back last week with a heroic 15-12 victory over Texas Tech. They did it with nine players unable to even make the trip.

Baylor will be stronger for the A&M game. Most of the injured will be able to play some.

The spirit of the squad is high. "Our kids will be mentally ready," said Coach Sam Boyd. "They always get ready for A&M. There are a lot of seniors on this and that would like to beat A&M. They never have while on the Baylor varsity."

One of them — the one who wants to be the most — is Doyle Traylor. This hard-luck guy has been able to play just three down against the Aggies in four years on the varsity. He suffered injuries the past three years.

Sooners Regain Top Of Poll, MSU Drops To Eighth

By ED CORRIGAN
The Associated Press
After a one-week absence, Oklahoma was back in its accustomed spot atop the Associated Press football poll today.

As if to lend emphasis to the change, Michigan State, which had displaced the Sooners at the top of the heap a week ago, tumbled all the way down to eighth.

Nor were the Spartans the only ones to nosedive. Minnesota, Oregon State and Arkansas, all of whom were high on the list before each absorbed a beating Saturday, dropped.

The votes by the nation's sports writers and sportscasters were tabulated on the usual 10 for first place, 9 for second, etc. Oklahoma, which rang up its 44th consecutive victory Saturday — a 47-0 lacing of hapless Kansas — got 1,365 points compared to 1,108 for second-place Texas A&M. Oklahoma had 89 first-place votes and Texas A&M 5.

The Aggies advanced from third to second by virtue of their three earned 7-0 victory over Texas Christian.

Following them in the top 10, in order, were Iowa, Duke, Auburn, Mississippi, Notre Dame, Michigan State, Army and Louisiana State.

Michigan State was the only one of Saturday's losers that managed to stay in the top 10. Minnesota tumbled from fourth to 14th, while Oregon State and Arkansas, seventh and 10th, respectively a week ago, fell clear out of sight.

Minnesota was beaten by Illinois, the same club that licked Michigan State last year. Oregon State lost to UCLA 26-7, and Arkansas dropped a 17-0 decision to Texas.

Army, Louisiana State and Mississippi are the three newcomers to the top 10.

The top 10 with first-place votes in parentheses:

1. Oklahoma (89)	1,365
2. Texas A&M (5)	1,108
3. Iowa (16)	958

6. Mississippi (10)	601
7. Notre Dame (4)	588
8. Michigan State (1)	547
9. Army	196
10. Louisiana State	133

The Second 10:

11. N.C. State	115
12. Ohio State (1)	112
13. Rice	103
14. Minnesota	80

Duke And State In Game Of Year

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
Saturday's Atlantic Coast Conference football game at Raleigh, N.C., matching two national powerhouses, Duke and North Carolina State, shapes up as the conference game-of-the-year.

Both teams go to the game without a loss on their records. Duke, ranked fourth nationally, has won five straight. State, ranked 11th nationally, has won four and tied one.

Will State be tough? Duke Coach Bill Murray says:

"Any team going into its sixth game with the record they have and with only three touchdowns being scored against them is bound to be tough. State has a good defensive background."

How about Duke? State Coach Earle Edwards says:

"Coaches can talk all they want to. It's the players. If Duke has a better team than we do, they have a good chance of beating us."

State's Asst. Coach Bill Smaltz summed up the Blue Devils tersely: "big, tough and undefeated."

State and Duke have met 32 times since their series began in 1924. Duke winning 24, State 7 and 1 a tie.

The only common foe Duke and State have had so far this season was Maryland. State whipped the Terps, 48-13, and Duke beat them, 14-0.

Maryland's Coach Tommy Mont, asked about the pending game, replied, "There's no doubt about it. It will be a great game."

The game, which conceivably could decide the ACC championship, will be televised over the ACC network of 20 stations ranging from Baltimore to Miami.

ACC fans won't have to wait until Saturday for action, however. One of the traditional battles of the conference takes place at Columbia, S.C., at mid-week when South Carolina and Clemson tangle in their annual Big Thursday game.

The game has such partisan fans that a coach could lose all season and still be considered a success by the alumni if he won the Big Thursday meeting.

Both teams, idle last weekend in preparation for the game, worked hard yesterday. Clemson Coach Frank Howard held a long and fast dummy scrimmage during which the Tigers reviewed their plays and looked at South Carolina-type passing. South Carolina Coach Warren Giese staged a rough defensive drill against Clemson players run by freshmen and reserves.

"When we do get a victory it's going to be mighty sweet," said Wake Forest Coach Paul Amen, preparing the Demon Deacons for a game with North Carolina Saturday. The Deacons, who have lost four straight, worked out yesterday with two first stringers on the injured list: fullback Neil MacLean and end Dan Herring.

North Carolina, still smarting from Saturday's upset loss to Maryland, emphasized fundamentals in its workout. Said Coach Jim Tatum, "We have been running out of gas and we're trying to correct that." Halfback Jim Schuler was limited to light work while fullback Don Lipski and guard Dick Furjanic missed the drills because of injuries.

Two ACC teams entertain outside foes this week: Virginia host to Army and Maryland host to Tennessee.

Coach Mont held a sweat-suit workout for the Maryland Terps yesterday, spending most of the time setting defenses.

Coach Ben Martin sent his Virginia regulars through loosening-up exercises but held a scrimmage for reserves and freshmen. Martin reported that first team guard Jim McShane was on the doubtful starter list with an injured knee.

Flu Cancels Out Saturday Game For G-Man Eleven

Duke Wins, But Fans Stay Home

DURHAM, N.C. —Over the last 25 years Duke University has been one of the biggest winners in college football.

The school has turned out some outstanding players and its coaches Bill Murray and before him, Wallace Wade, have records that rate with the best.

This season the Blue Devils have won five games in a row and rank fourth nationally. Sounds like a perfect setup, but Eddie Cameron, veteran Duke athletic director, and a former football and basketball coach, says not so.

The fact remains that Duke just doesn't draw well at home. In three home games to date this season the attendance has totaled 56,000—less than 19,000 a game.

Last week Cameron came up with a new gimmick—the family plan. Under the plan the purchaser of two adult tickets for the game with Wake Forest would be entitled to bring along his youngsters, or "even the kids next door or down the block," as Cameron put it.

So what happened? About 17,000 turned out, 200 adult ticket purchasers and about 500 "on the cuff" youngsters.

Packers Lacking All-Round Back

GREEN BAY, Wis. —The ideal pro football quarterback, but Green Bay Packers don't have the ingredients — Bart Starr's pass accuracy, Babe Parilli's snappy throwing and rookie Paul Hornung's running.

The trio of signal callers are doing their best to take the place of veteran Tobin Rohe, whom the Packers traded this year to the Detroit Lions to gain defensive talent.

The Packers now have a fine defense, but their offense lacked the touchdown touch in three straight National Football League losses to Detroit, Baltimore and San Francisco. Green Bay had won its opener against the Chicago Bears.

Starr played the first 18 minutes against the 49ers in Milwaukee Sunday. He gained 36 yards in completing four of his five passes. However, he lost 29 yards trying to pass on other plays.

Parilli completed 5 of 11 passes, accounting for the rest of the Packers' aerial gain of 104 yards. He also plunged one yard for Green Bay's first touchdown in the 24-14 loss to San Francisco.

Hornung entered the game in the final period and ran 62 yards on just four carries, one of them a touchdown run of nine yards.

Commenting on Hornung's performance, Blackburn said, "The boy is the best running quarterback we have. But he also is our poorest passer. If he could pass close to Starr or Parilli, there would be no question who our quarterback would be."

The coach said Starr continues as the starting quarterback because he throws the best pass.

Game Violations By 3 Pitt Men

In Magistrate Luther Moore's Court in Greenville last week, W. W. Sutton, Rt. 3, Greenville, was found guilty of hunting squirrels in the closed season. The magistrate fined the defendant $35 and $9 court costs. Pitt County Game Protector J. O. Teel was the prosecuting officer.

In Magistrate Tom Stowe's Court in Washington Saturday, Joseph Manning and Josh Menton of Grimesland were found guilty of hunting deer in a closer area of Beaufort county. The magistrate fined each defendant $50 and $11 court costs, and then suspended the fines.

It was announced this morning that the Greenville — Fuquay Springs football game scheduled for this weekend has been definitely postponed.

Coach Bud Phillips stated this morning that the flu has attacked both teams and that the game has "definitely been called off." Phillips said that there is a possibility that the contest will be played at the end of the season on November 15, although it hasn't been agreed upon.

Fuquay Springs contacted GHS officials requesting the cancellation or postponement of the game due to illness and the Phantoms had entertained thoughts of scheduling another team for this weekend here at College Stadium.

But Phillips said today, "It's kind of hitting us, too, now." Yesterday, he commented, 10 varsity gridders missed drills due to the virus. "Six of them didn't even come to school, and the other four went home immediately after classes," he said. The same number of boys from the junior varsity squad are sick.

Further decision on whether or not a full-in tilt will be staged, will be carried in the Reflector when school officials and Coach Phillips release a definite statement.

The Wilson-GHS jayvee contest, scheduled for tomorrow night there, is also being discussed now. There is a possibility that the game will be postponed, although nothing definite has been announced.

Of the 10 varsity gridders on the sick list, several are starting team members. Out at present are Robin Wilfong, Norfleet Felton, Charles Ross, Godfrey Oakley and Wilbur Paul and others.

Club President Calvin Griffith last year weighed a proposition from Los Angeles, but he and the other board members finally voted it down. The Brooklyn Dodgers have since moved into that territory.

While insisting he does not want to leave Washington, and has no plans to do so, Griffith has said he feels obliged to lay any sound offer before the directors.

C. Leo De Orsey, one of the five other directors, said today he "will look at every proposition that is made."

De Orsey, a Washington tax lawyer who last spring tried some baseball leaders by declaring the game is "big business," also said: "If it makes sense in a business way, I will vote for the proposition. My only interest is in casting my vote along business lines and not hobby lines."

De Orsey said the short time remaining before the deadline for league approval of a franchise shift made it impossible to examine all facets of the existing offers. Major league transfers must be okayed by Oct. 31.

He called Minneapolis a territory "in which a good deal of money could be made with a big league club." But he added Minneapolis and St. Paul would have to get together on one team.

Forty teams on unbeaten list

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
Forty teams, only 11 of them classed as major schools, have approached the halfway mark of the college football season unbeaten and untied, an Associated Press survey disclosed today.

Duke, Mississippi and Texas A&M, each rated among the top 10 in the AP's nationwide poll, lead the major survivors with five straight victories. Top-ranked Oklahoma, Dartmouth, Auburn, Iowa, Arizona State of Tempe, Texas, Western and Drake have won four straight apiece, and Notre Dame completes the major list with a 3-0 mark.

Among teams with four straight wins is Elon College of North Carolina.

Aircraft Industry Is Hard Hit By Military Cutbacks

By ELTON C. FAY AP Military Affairs Reporter

WASHINGTON (AP)—The aircraft industry, already feeling the pinch of the military program cutback, predicts that 100,000 more men may have to be laid off in its factories. Here and there, local stresses are arising from the closing down of armed forces facilities and government-owned plants which employ civilians.

But an Associated Press survey also discloses that although the reduction in the defense program is the largest since the end of World War II, its impact on some basic industries — like steel and aluminum — is so diffused as to be relatively light.

In some defense quarters, there have been rough estimates that for all industries holding defense contracts, the cutback might eventually mean a reduction in working force of perhaps 200,000. This layoff period would extend over a year or more.

Out of the 38 billion dollars being spent in the current fiscal year by the military, about 12 billion dollars is for procurement — of planes, missiles, ships, guns, ammunition.

The cutback in the military program is not a reduction from either figure. It is a cutback in the amount of hardware which can be purchased for 12 billion dollars because the cost of weapons has gone up. If the number of items bought is reduced, there will be fewer workers needed to produce them. Orval R. Cook, president of the Aircraft Industries Assn. and former Air Force general, says that some estimates indicate that 100,000 more layoffs are expected in the aircraft industry. That will be a drop from a present level of about 900,000.

A growing commercial aircraft production "will help in large degree to soften the losses in military aircraft," he says.

The impact is more direct in communities where the government owns and operates or has contractors operate plants like ammunition facilities and shipyards.

By next June, the Sunflower Ordnance plant in Kansas, which has employed 1,800 persons, will shut down completely. The Ar-

Millions Lost In Texas Storms

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP)—September storms caused $6,572,700 damage in Texas, the state defense and disaster relief headquarters said yesterday.

Heavy rains in the southeast Gulf coast area caused some two million dollars damage, including loss of much of the region's rice crop.

One tornado touched ground during the month, the report said, causing $7,000 damage. Most of the other storm damage occurred in west Texas.

Marriage Licenses

Eight marriage licenses, evenly divided between white and Negro couples, were issued last week by the Pitt County Register of Deeds office.

White couples to whom licenses were issued included Robert Tripp, Route 2, Greenville, and Mrs. Grace Erwin, Greenville; Bernard McLawhorn, Route 1, Grifton, and Phyllis Jackson, Grifton; Alfred Earl Garris, Route 3, Greenville, and Connie Y. Dennis, Route 1, Ayden; and Sberial Lee Brinn, Norfolk, Va., and Vicki Dean Cook, Washington, N. C.

Negro couples who received licenses included Thomas Harper and Omah Faye Reddeck, both of Greenville; Kellmer Wiggins and Penelope Copeland, both of Route 1, Robersonville; James Little and Maryella Foskey, both of Route 1, Farmville; and Jimmy Williams Jr. and Zephaine Dixon, both of Route 6, Greenville.

SCRANTON, Pa. (AP)—Prisoners in Lackawanna County jail indirectly felt the effects of influenza today.

Father And Son Hunting Trip Ends In Tragedy

GLENWOOD SPRINGS, Colo. (AP)—A father-and-son hunting trip ended in tragedy in the mountains near here early yesterday when an 8-year-old boy froze to death in his father's arms.

Coroner Jack Farnum said the boy, Richard Leroy Scott, died of exposure. The temperature in the area was "about the middle 20s and froze water," Farnum said. The father, Junior Scott, told Farnum he held his son against his own body in an effort to keep him warm while they were stranded Sunday night on the rain-swept rimrocks. The child, Scott said, lapsed into unconsciousness and ceased breathing sometime before daylight.

Scott and his son were unsuccessful in their attempt to find a trail down from the shale rimrocks in the dark. Rain extinguished their fire. Farnum said the boy wore two sweaters, jeans and shoes and that the father was attired in daytime clothes, including a jacket.

AN APOLOGY, TOO BEAVER, Okla. (AP)—Beaver County Sheriff A. L. Shook said Harry Henson, 59, held on a burglary charge, sawed his way out of his jail cell after penning an apology. "I hate to do this but the boys came after me," Henson wrote. The "boys" were not identified.

CHAPTER 14

I ran through the house and into Gil's bedroom. I threw the covers back and shook him awake. "Get up," I said. "Pa's been shot. Get up." He blinked at me as if unable to grasp what I'd said. I took hold of his ankles and dragged his legs off the bed and dropped them so his feet hit the cold floor instead of the rag rug.

As I ran through the kitchen into my room, I heard my mother crying hysterically in the front part of the house. I dressed as fast as I could, buckled on my gun belt, wrapped my muffer around my neck, and pulled on my sheepskin. The only rifle I had was my father's Winchester hanging across two pegs just inside the kitchen door. I grabbed it as I ran out of the house and went across the yard to the barn. I had no thought beyond catching the man who had murdered my father.

Before I finished saddling my horse, sunrise was flaming across the horizon. When I reined up in front of the house, the light was strong enough for me to see where the killer had stood not more than twenty feet from the door. Half a dozen brown paper cigarette stubs were on the ground. He must have waited quite awhile.

I rode in widening circles, feeling the pressure of time, but wanted to know where Jones had left his horse. He would have saddled the animal and tied him not far from where he waited. The ground where I found the cigarette stubs was bare and frozen hard, so there were no boot tracks, but I found horse tracks in a patch of snow at the end of our lane. I stepped down and took a moment to study them. The sign indicated the animal had been tired there for some time a couple of hours, at least. At the edge of the snow I found the sharp print of a big boot. The heel was not run over on the side. The killer was wearing a fairly new pair.

I swung back into the saddle and put my horse down the lane in a run. When I reached the road, I stopped, suddenly realizing I was being foolish because I might have to ride all day. Wearing my horse out the first hour in the morning was no good. I wished I hadn't taken time to look at the tracks.

Jones was my man. All I had to do was find him. Pulling out in the middle of the night and not staying for breakfast as my father had asked him to do. His phony story about heading for Tucson but he just happened to wander into the park. Why, there wasn't any doubt about it. Toll had hired a killer and Jones was the man. Now the question was which way he had turned. He would stay on the road to put as much distance as he could between him and the man he'd killed, and in the shortest possible time. He couldn't ride fast across the fenced hay meadows or along the river, where it was brushy and there were patches of ice. But I had no way of guessing whether he'd head upriver and try to get out of the park and escape into Wyoming or Utah, or whether he'd try for the Rafters 3 and hope Vic Toll would hide him out.

I wasted time, half an hour maybe, before I picked up fresh sign to the north that told me he was making a run for it upriver. So I headed that way, knowing that by now he must have almost an hour's start on me. But I felt better when I remembered Jones's horse looked as if it were on its last legs. A horse's appearance can be deceiving, but I didn't think I'd been fooled by this animal.

More than that, I knew the country. The road petered out at Johnny Strong's ranch. That was the end of the park, too. North of there the Big Red boiled down through a ten-mile canyon, and Jones would have to leave the river and fight his way around the canyon through wild country broken by a dozen dry washes feeding into the Big Red. His horse would be finished by noon.

So I took a steady, ground-eating pace, confident I'd have my man within a few hours. Elder Smith was cutting wood behind the store as I rode past. I pulled it long enough to say, "Pa was murdered this morning."

Elder Smith was too shocked to do anything but stand there and look at me. I asked, "Will you let the Dances know? And Bess?"

"I'll tell them," he said in a voice choked with emotion. "I didn't think it would be Joe. I was sure I'd be the one."

I rode on, glad that the neighbors would be told. I kept on straight up the river. The sun, which seemed to add no warmth to the chill day, climbed higher into the sky. The clouds had broken away, and now my steadily shortening shadow rode beside me. I passed Matt Colohan's ranch. No sign of life. He was the worst rancher in the park, with a fat slovenly wife and eight kids. He never worked any more than he had to, making most of his living from his still. His calf crop was always poor, and he never had more than ten or fifteen steers to market in the fall, but he never worried. He was half-drunk most of the time, and he certainly would have been last night, it being Christmas Eve.

I passed the March ranch, Luke Jordan's, Sam Binford, Riley Mackay. All of them set back off the road to my right at the base of Campbell Mountain. I tried not to think about my father, or about what would happen to us now. To Gil, who had always been babied; to my mother who wouldn't know what to do; to me, who had found something here in the park I had never known before, something that was of value as I'd worked beside my father, knowing the Big Ten was ours, and that some day it would be mine. Not Gil's because he didn't want it.

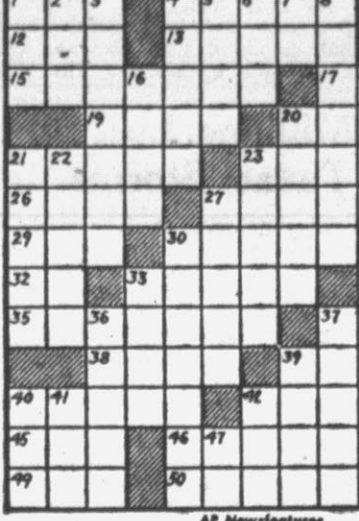

Suddenly tears began running down my cheeks. I didn't ask for them. They were just there, and the lump that was in my throat was so big I couldn't swallow. I was ashamed and I was glad no one was here to see me cry.

No, I mustn't think about my father. I'd think about Jones, who had eaten our food and slept on our couch and fed his horse our hay, and then had stood outside in the cold and shot my father when he'd come out of the house with a milk bucket in his hand. And I'd think what I'd do when I caught him. I'd kill him. I'd twist his neck until he was purple in the face and he could talk. Murder? Hell, no. We made our own law out here. We stomped our own snakes. We didn't depend on fat old Ed Veach to bring the law of Marion County to Dillon's Park.

The trail is growing shorter. Dave and Johnny locate their quarry in tomorrow's thrill-packed installment of "Desperate Man."

Virginia Politics Sees Little Impact From Ruling Of Court

RICHMOND, Va. (AP)—The U.S. Supreme Court's refusal to review part of Virginia's program for maintaining racially segregated public schools appears at first glance to have had little effect on the state's heated campaign for governor that winds up two weeks from today.

What the Supreme Court knocked out, by refusing to review lower court decisions ruling it unconstitutional, was Virginia's pupil placement act.

The act gave a three-member state placement board the power to assign pupils to all public schools in Virginia on any basis except race.

with the board. All others were frozen in the schools they attend. Not affected by the decision were two other sections of the anti-integration program, one of which automatically closes any school that integrates, then turns the school over to the governor, who tries to reopen it on a segregated basis.

campaign in favor of school segregation. They differ on the best method of preserving it.

NEW YORK (N.C.D.A.)—The stock market rebounded vigorously early this afternoon from yesterday's huge set-back. Key stocks rose from fractions to 2 or 3 points, recouping part of their losses of the previous session. A scattering of declines ranging from fractions to a point or more dotted the list.

The high-speed ticker tape was late for a total of 48 minutes in a turbulent first hour which saw the tremendous total of 1,070,000 shares changing hands. Prices churned irregularly in this early part of the session. Brokers reported that a considerable number of margin accounts were sold out but that the offering met demand at the comparatively low prices prevailing. Much of it was a carryover from yesterday's nervous selling but today the selling met support and the tone gradually changed from mixed to slightly higher.

Late in the morning the ticker ran late again in a buying surge that sent prices definitely higher. At the end of this 25-minute period of heavy dealings, prices seemed close to their best. Brokers said the market's action was primarily a technical rebound from yesterday's shake out, the worst since Sept. 25, 1955, the first recession after President Eisenhower's heart attack.

The ticker tape was at most 4 minutes behind the pace of transactions during the first stretch of delay and was a minute behind in the second period. By noon, volume totaled two million shares.

A shock to Wall Street in the early stages today was a further drop by American Telephone which fell 2 1/2 to 161 on blocks of 7,000 and 1,000 shares.

Three Insurance Firms Merging

BURLINGTON, N.C.—Officers of three insurance companies, each specializing in a different field, announced here today that they have merged.

The companies are Carolina Casualty Insurance Co. and Carolina Home Life Insurance Co. with home offices here and the Insurance Co. of the South with headquarters in Jacksonville, Fla. Announcement was made by Shepard Broad, president of both Carolina companies and Raymond K. Mason, president of the Insurance Co. of the South.

The merger, effective immediately, will double the net worth of both the Insurance Co. of the South and Carolina Home Life Insurance Co. The three companies will have total assets of about $8 million.

They will maintain their present locations.

The Insurance Co. of the South, which specializes in writing fire insurance on private dwellings, was incorporated in Florida in April of 1951. Mason and his associates acquired controlling interest in the company in September of 1955. The company has about 300 stockholders.

Carolina Casualty, which has more than 2,000 stockholders, specializes in writing transportation insurance. Carolina Home Life centers its operations entirely in the life and hospitalization fields.

Disposed Of 207 Cases In Month

Municipal Recorder's Court Clerk E. J. Dees' report for September shows that Judge Charles H. Whedbee disposed of 207 cases and that there were 161 convictions or "guilty" pleas.

There were 20 acquittals and nine cases not pressed, combined or dismissed, and four cases were sent to Superior Court. Thirteen defendants were called but failed to answer during the month.

Urban Problems Laid To Rural Leadership

KANSAS CITY (N.C.)—Witnesses told congressional investigators yesterday many of the problems confronting cities stem from the fact state legislatures usually are controlled by members from the country.

"Every country boy is suspicious of the big city boy," former President Harry S. Truman declared. "I know I am."

Truman testified 40 minutes before a House subcommittee holding hearings around the country on relationships between the federal government on the one hand and state, county and municipal governments on the other.

Most states have laws limiting the amount and kinds of taxes their cities and counties may impose.

"Some members of the Missouri Legislature don't give a hoot about the problems of urban populations," Truman said.

"States will have to take care of the cities, because if they don't there will have to be another department in the federal government."

He suggested there might develop a need for a department of Cabinet rank to look after the interests of urban areas such as the Department of Agriculture represents the special interests of farmers.

Gov. Herschel C. Loveless of Iowa suggested another possible solution redistributing seats in the legislatures to take into account shifts in population.

"Iowa is badly in need of reapportionment," he testified. "Control of the Legislature is held by the less populous areas. Legislators from rural areas see their populations shrinking and become very conservative."

"The Legislature has consistently taken a dim view of embracing programs emanating from the federal government, however beneficial and needed they may be."

The subcommittee is composed of Representatives Fountain (D-NC), chairman; Reuss (D-Wis); and Michel (R-Ill).

Pedestrians Told Obey Laws, Or Will Face Arrest

Patrolmen have been instructed to begin making arrests among pedestrians who violate highway laws, Highway Patrol Cpl. C. E. Whitfield said today.

"Those who violate pedestrian laws are subject to arrest if they are seen walking on the wrong side of the road," the corporal said. "Already several have been cited for violations."

Whitfield noted that three pedestrians have been killed in Pitt County thus far this year. There have been 19 pedestrian injuries.

"We want to ask the people to cooperate because we are running into trouble on pedestrians," he said.

State-wide, 23 per cent of the death toll this year has been pedestrians, according to the corporal.

He reminded that law requires pedestrians to walk on the left side of the road facing traffic. Pedestrians are also required to step off the traveled portion of the road at the approach of oncoming traffic.

Whitfield offered the following suggestions to pedestrians for highway safety:

1. At night wear light clothing and carry a flashlight if possible. A flashlight is not available, carry a white handkerchief or white cloth in the hand.
2. Always stop and look both ways before crossing the highways.
3. Walk across the highway—never run.

Identify Owner Of Bootleg Car

The Pitt County Sheriff's Department said today that a car seized in a bootlegging incident last week did not belong to the man they thought it did.

The car, a 1950 sedan, was seized after Deputy Ralph Tyson arrested Ben Foreman, a Negro of Greenville, Route 1, for hauling 47 half-gallon jars of non-tax-paid whiskey in the vehicle. Preliminary investigation by the Sheriff's Department showed that the vehicle was registered in the name of H. S. Bedford, Snow Hill, Route 1.

Further investigation by the department has revealed that Bedford traded the car to a Greenville automobile dealer and that it was subsequently sold by the Greenville firm to another party.

Investigation showed that Foreman was the person who owned the car although details of the sale had not been cleared by the State Department of Motor Vehicles registration division.

Foreman will face trial for possessing and transporting non-tax-paid whiskey, and the confiscated automobile will be sold, according to law, at public auction.

Six Divorces Granted In Day

The suit which was dismissed was one in which Mimi Haddock Mitchell was seeking a divorce on grounds of two years separation from Freeman Mitchell. Judge Walter J. Bone entered a judgment on non-suit and dismissed the action after Mrs. Mitchell testified that she could not meet residence requirements for the divorce.

Divorces were granted went to Alvania Briley Hunt from Carl Richard Hunt, Don P. Evans from Lucy C. Evans, Nannie Lee Harris from William Jasper Harris, Fannie Mae Roberson from Haywood Sornells Roberson, Willie C. Darden from Reba D. Darden, and Georgia Belle Autry Young from Marshall Young.

Judge Accepting Girard's Version

MAEBASHI, Japan (N.C.)—The presiding Japanese judge today accepted GI William S. Girard's story that he did not mean to hit anyone when he fired the shot that killed a Japanese woman collecting scrap brass on an Army firing range.

"The court does not feel that you fired this shot with intent to hit anyone, but so far as you are concerned, you think it was negligence or an accident—is that right?" — Judge Kawachi asked the 22-year-old soldier through an interpreter.

Girard, testifying in his own defense in the final stage of the two-month-old trial, said that was right.

Kawachi's statement seemed a gain for the defense. But under Japanese law the three-judge court could still convict the soldier of the charge of inflicting bodily injury causing death if it decided he knew the power of his weapon and the danger of firing the way he did.

The soldier, admitted firing two cartridge cases from his grenade launcher to scare away Japanese brass collectors last Jan. 30. He claimed he fired one straight up in the air and the other over the heads of the trespassers.

Girard admitted changing his testimony early in the investigation, saying he first told of firing only one shot because he was "nervous and scared." He emphatically denied the testimony of his companion on the firing range, Specialist 3.C. Victor Nickel of Inksler, Mich., that Girard first asked him to say he knew nothing about any shots and later to say he saw Girard fire only once.

The judge also asked Girard if he repeated his deed—an important element in Oriental justice. "I am very sorry," the soldier replied.
