Eisenhower, Macmillan In Basic Accord On Pooling Science Work

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Eisenhower and British Prime Minister Macmillan today reached basic agreement on pooling scientific and weapons development work.

"to make recommendations in the field of military defense, particularly those problems dealing with missiles and rocketry."

This was the second day of conference between the President and the British Prime Minister on the subject of Russia's scientific-military challenge.

and military considerations involved. It was understood that in the afternoon conference and presumably again in the White House dinner discussion they came to grips with the two central problems of this gathering — how to overtake Russia's apparent lead in long range missiles development and how to coordinate their policies in dealing with the frequently recurring crisis in the Middle East where Russia seeks expanded power.

not only for the weapons race with Russia but also for better use of other resources including manpower.

U. S. Rockets Fly High As Success Crowns Testings

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Air Force said today it has made a successful firing of an experimental rocket designed to reach out into space 1,000 miles or more.

And there were unofficial reports that a second apparently successful firing had been made in scientific experiments conducted at Eniwetok Atoll in the Pacific.

However, Air Force headquarters here gave no immediate details on the first reported firing. Nor did it confirm reports of a double success in the effort to hurl an object further out into space than any man-made device had gone before.

The reports of the Air Force "Project Farside" rocket shoots came as the United States claimed other new gains in science and weaponry to recover some of the prestige lost to Soviet technology in recent weeks.

The United States chalked up these developments yesterday: 1. Fired a rocket from a balloon floating 100,000 feet above the Eniwetok Atoll. The Air Force said it was a success. While technical records of the shot were lacking, the claim that the firing was a success seemed to mean the rocket had shot up not less than 1,000 miles.

It leaves behind a dense cloud of smoke surrounding the launching site. The structures showing dimly in the smoke are service towers used to prepare missiles for firing. (AP Wirephoto).

Nobel Prize For Medicine Given Italian Scientist

STOCKHOLM (AP) — The 1957 Nobel Prize for medicine was awarded today to Dr. Daniel Bovet, Swiss-born Italian scientist who pioneered in the development of antihistamines and turned the poisoned arrow into a tool for the surgeon.

The original announcement on the project said the objective was to launch rockets to an altitude between 1,000 and 4,000 miles. A successful launching would mean it rose to at least 1,000 miles. One officer familiar with the tests said it's possible the rocket may have soared beyond the 4,000-mile goal.

Unofficial reports reaching here from the West Coast said a second apparently successful shot was made from another balloon. However, these reports said, automatic metering equipment in the second rocket didn't function properly and that insufficient information was received to determine the rocket's altitude and other data.

2. Fired to a 109-mile altitude a prototype of the launching mechanism for the American earth satellite, Vanguard, testing the first stage of a three-stage rocket engine by which it hopes to launch a small test satellite in December and a fully instrumented one by next March.

3. Announced perfection of nuclear deep charge for blasting enemy submarines, saying that these atomic weapons already are aboard some carriers of the Atlantic Fleet. The swiftly expanding Soviet submarine fleet is a source of grave concern to American strategists.

These followed closely the third successful test, on Tuesday, of an Army Jupiter intermediate range ballistic missile.

'Labor Spy' Testifies Too Vicious For Him

WASHINGTON (AP) — A witness told investigating senators today he was an antiumion "labor spy" in the Whirlpool Co. plant at Marietta, Ohio, until "they just got too vicious for me."

The testimony, from Charles Littell of Marion, contradicted statements yesterday by the company's labor relations director, Theodore Hufert, that he knew of no antiumion activities in the plant.

Littell told the Senate Rackets Committee he reported regularly to Hufert on his activities until he was fired after making an about-face and becoming a vigorous union supporter.

The testimony marked the third day of public hearings in which the committee is seeking evidence to show whether employers have engaged in what Chairman McClellan (D-Ark) termed calculated efforts to circumvent and violate the Taft-Hartley labor relations law.

"I'm very much ashamed of myself," Littell said as he sat in the witness chair with bowed head.

Littell said he was recruited to spy on fellow employees and fight efforts to unionize the plant. He said his services were enlisted by Dr. Louis Checov, a psychologist on the staff of Nathan W. Shefferman, Shefferman, from Chicago, has been described by Robert F. Kennedy, committee counsel, as a specialist in "union busting."

Littell said this was in 1955, and that Checov told him that his "Checov's job was to keep any union out of Whirlpool." He said Checov bragged that he "had a great deal of money" at his disposal with which to achieve this.

At Checov's instructions, Littell said, he and others formed an antiumion committee of plant employees. He said Checov would give him $20 a week to pay its expenses but that sometimes he pocketed most of the $20.

Guard Puts Off Search For West

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — The Coast Guard today refused to search "at this time" for Melvin West, Jacksonville, N.C., disc jockey who left his home a week ago on a cruise to Bermuda in a 15-foot motorboat.

Barry L. West, father of the 29-year old adventurer, told the Coast Guard this morning that his son's gasoline supply should be exhausted about 3 p.m. today and that winds were reported high and seas rough in the Bermuda area.

West asked the Coast Guard to begin a search for his son. Rear Adm. H. C. Moore, commander of the 5th Coast Guard District, ordered Coast Guard units in North Carolina to advise Barry West that the Coast Guard "will not institute search for his son at this time. His previous request in this connection resulted only in unnecessary jeopardizing service personnel and expenditure government funds."

Sixteen Coast Guard, Navy, Marine and Air Force planes searched a wide area of ocean for West and his boat from Sunday morning until Monday afternoon when the freighter Aldebaran reported she had supplied West with food but he had declined an offer of fuel for his 30-horsepower outboard engine.

No word of West has been received since. His parents, who operate a Morehead City fishing pier, and his wife expressed anxiety mingled with optimism when the first search was launched. Barry West said his son had been around boats all his life and should be able to come through all right.

Edwards, Tyson Are Re-Elected At ASC Session

J. Lyman Edwards yesterday was re-elected chairman of the County ASC committee.

The community chairmen who served as delegates to the county convention also re-elected William Tyson as vice chairman.

The delegates named A. Poe Worthington as the third member of the committee replacing Hardy Johnson.

Johnson was elected a second alternate and W. P. Thigpen was elected first alternate.

Edwards, who was an alternate last year, became chairman about two months ago when the entire ASC committee originally elected for last year's term of office resigned.

The committee elected yesterday will take office Nov. 1 for a full term.

Married

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Bing Crosby and the pretty brown-eyed starlet he began dating three years ago surprised friends and fans today by driving here and getting married.

The crooner started keeping company with comely Cathy two or three years ago. About a year ago their romance seemed to have cooled, and Crosby started dating others.

Cathy is the daughter of a Texas government official. Her mother is a school teacher. Crosby gave his full name as Perry L. Crosby and his age as 35. Miss Grant said she is 23.

Greenville Youth Dies Of Auto Accident Injuries

WINTERVILLE — A 16-year-old high school youth died of internal and back injuries received when his car wrecked near here last night.

Investigating Patrolman Bill Whitehurst of Ayden identified the youth as Sterling Hardy Jones of 1704 E. Third St., Greenville. He was thrown from his vehicle as it rolled and twisted along a clay ditch bank. The accident occurred about three miles from here on the Nobles Cross Road-Winterville road.

A second car involved was operated by Kinsey Harvey Worthington of Greenville Rt. 1 Box 3491. Apparently the two cars were involved in a collision before the Jones youth's vehicle ran off the paved road and into the ditch, according to the patrolman. Both vehicles were headed toward Winterville. Damage to the Worthington car was minor, estimated at $25. The Jones vehicle was completely demolished in the crash.

Young Jones was thrown from the vehicle as it overturned. He was found lying on the ditch bank. The Greenville Rescue Squad's ambulance took him to Pilt Memorial Hospital where he died at 11:45 p.m. The wreck was said to have occurred around 9:30. Ptl. Whitehurst said it appeared both cars were running at a "pretty fast rate of speed." After the cars collided the Jones car went out of control for 319 feet, he said.

Coroner Griffin H. Rouse said this morning that the Jones youth died of "back and internal injuries." He said he was holding the matter open for further investigation and he had not decided whether an inquest would be held.

The Jones youth was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Royce Jones of Greenville.

Virginia Plans Continue Under Placement Act

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Virginia has served notice it intends to keep its Pupil Placement Act in general operation on the assumption the act has not been found unconstitutional by the federal courts.

This basic decision by the state's Democratic administration was made clear late yesterday while lawyers still were debating the ambiguities of court rulings bearing on the act.

Atty. Gen. Kenneth Patten enunciated the administration's official attitude in a carefully worded statement issued after conferences with Gov. Thomas B. Stanley and special counsel involved in segregation litigation.

"I do not consider that the 4th Circuit Court of Appeals held that the Virginia Pupil Placement Act was inoperative in all instances," said Patten.

Patten indicated that in the state's view, the act itself has not been declared a nullity—except in specific cases in which, the courts found, the fact failed to provide an effective administrative remedy for pupils who contended their constitutional rights were being abridged.

Federal District Judge Walter Hoffman held earlier this year, in desegregation cases involving Norfolk and Newport News schools, that the act—considered in connection with other laws in the state's anti-integration package—did not provide such remedies.

The federal judge declared also in his opinion that the act was "unconstitutional on its face."

Top Soviet Soldier On Turkish Border

LONDON (AP) — The Soviet Union is sending one of its top soldiers, Marshal Konstantin Rokossovsky, to command its forces on the Turkish border.

Diplomatic observers in London said the transfer of Rokossovsky, former Soviet proconsul of Poland, was another Russian propaganda move to keep Middle East tension alive and bolster Syria in its cold war with Western-allied Turkey.

Syria yesterday rejected mediation of the current Middle Eastern crisis by Saudi Arabian King Saud spurring U.S. delegates to the United Nations to press for a broad inquiry into causes of the Syrian-Turkish tension.

The U.N. renews debate tomorrow on the Syrian charges that Turkey, prodded by the United States, is planning to attack Syria. Turkey and the United States have denied the accusation, countering that Soviet arms and influence in Syria are causing the trouble.

Tiflis (Tbilisi) radio, in the capital of the Soviet republic of Georgia, announced the appointment of Rokossovsky to command the Transcaucasian military area bordering Turkey and Iran. It lies just 200 miles from Syria.

Rokossovsky since his recall from Poland has been a deputy defense minister. The broadcast gave no reason for the replacement of Col. Gen. Ivan Fedyminsky, last reported commanding Tiflis is believed to be the location of Soviet military headquarters for the Transcaucasian area, which has an efficient road and rail system along which large forces would be moved quickly.

Rokossovsky was second only to Soviet Defense Minister Georgii Zhukov as a World War II Russian field commander. Stalin sent the 60-year-old Polish-born soldier to Warsaw in 1949 as commander of Polish armed forces. He became a symbol of Soviet domination to anti-Russian Poles, and in last October's Polish nationalist movement Communist boss Wladyslaw Gomulka got him recalled.

Syria appeared determined to stand fast against mediation. Official circles in Damascus reportedly felt that Syria would lose through mediation because Turkey might win some conditions in return for withdrawing her troops from the Syrian border.

Syrian officials reported two incidents on the Turkish border. Two Turkish tobacco smugglers in a band of seven that opened fire on a Syrian border patrol were reported captured. And a Syrian farmer plowing a field was injured by the explosion of a mine planted along the border by Turkish authorities to curb smuggling.

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet forces under Marshal Konstantin Rokossovsky on the Turkish border today were reported training to use atomic weapons.

The report was contained in the latest issue reaching here of the newspaper Dawn of the East, published in Tiflis, capital of Soviet Georgia. It was Tiflis radio which announced last night the appointment of Rokossovsky to the Transcaucasian command.

Both reports obviously were intended to show the Soviet Union's readiness for any trouble on its southern border in line with Russian propaganda claims that the Middle East is on the brink of war.

"The forces of the Transcaucasus command are making appreciable contributions to the general cause of strengthening the military might of the Soviet armed forces," said Dawn of the East. "They are tirelessly perfecting their military skills in the field and studying the arts of combat under difficult conditions, taking into account the use of atomic weapons and other means of modern warfare."

School Absences Continue To Run High; No Closing Planned

Pitt County's confusing problem with school absences became a little more confused today, with the exception of one thing: Officials of schools in Greenville and Pitt County are sticking by their plans to keep the schools operating.

Reports from city and county administrative units, and East Carolina College, indicated that all of the schools are apparently holding their own in the troubles. There were some changes from situations reported earlier in the week but the changes were classed as minor.

City Superintendent of Schools J. H. Rose reported a slight increase in the number of absences from elementary grade classrooms. That increase, however, was only a part of the present trend to a growing number of absences in the city's white schools while the absence situation in Negro schools continued to show a marked improvement.

in the city system. However, the total is dropping in the junior high school, it is about the same in the high school and is increasing slightly in the elementary grades.

"Absences, however, are continuing to drop in each of the three Negro schools. The trend is about the same we have noted throughout the week."

Rose also noted that only two teachers were listed as absent from their classrooms this morning.

The county schools' situation continued about the same as spot checks had indicated it to be. County Superintendent D. H. Conley said, "The situation at the moment is not alarming and we hope it will not become such. We don't expect any major change unless unusual conditions aggravate or accentuate present conditions."

running high, no schools are near the danger point."

At Conley's meeting with the principals, all of the Negro schools made reports which showed a total of 925 cases of influenza during the second school month which ended yesterday. A spot check of the white schools showed a total of 224 cases in six schools.

The spot reporting of absences in the white schools did not include, however, reports from some of the county's larger schools.

Dr. C. F. Irons, physician at East Carolina College, reported, "We are still having reports of flu, but there is very little change since the last report. The number of cases in male students is definitely declining and the number of cases among the women students is about the same as it has been."

Dr. Irons also noted that the college's cases do not show any tendency toward increasing severity and that most of the cases being treated in the college infirmary are mild ones with three to five days disability.

Barbara Dail Honored; Mrs. Schmidt New CWBC President

The Credit Women's Breakfast Club of Greenville honored bosses and bosses' wives at the Eighth Annual Bosses' Night Dinner last night.

At this event, which took place at the Greenville Country Club, new officers were installed for the coming year. President Callie Rue Williams opened the meeting with the assembly singing.

Mrs. Dorothy Johnson welcomed the guests, and Herbert W. Lee made response. Inattention was given by Joseph S. Moyer.

The tables were decorated in the Halloween theme. The head table consisted of a novelty arrangement of yellow chrysanthemums intermingled with designs of black witches. Each individual table was covered with tablecloths in the Halloween motif with candles of orange and black and the center an array to characterize the theme. Hats were given as favors. In addition, each member of the hostess committee came dressed in costumes highlighting the theme.

President Williams introduced distinguished guests, state officers, new members, and representatives of the Kinston, Rocky Mount, and Wilson Credit Clubs. She recognized all sponsors and their wives with a special welcome and expression of gratitude for their constant support. New members welcomed were Miss Bernice Cahoon, Hines Insurance Agency; Mrs. Mary Windle, College Shop; Mrs. Mildred Slater, Grant's Stores; and Miss Alma J. Paramore, A. B. Whitley, Inc.

Miss Barbara Griffin was recognized and introduced to the club. Miss Griffin is the recipient of the E. C. C. student scholarship which the club sponsors. President Williams also introduced State President Beulah Sullivan, installing officer, of Burlington, and Mrs. Elsie May, state first vice-president, of Rocky Mount.

Mrs. Frances Cassick called attention to the bulletins at each place which were specially prepared for the bosses. Mrs. Cassick gave a brief report to outline highlights of the year's progress.

President Williams announced that eight members would be awarded the International One Year Perfect Attendance Certificate. They were: Mrs. Earline Coghill, Mrs. Polly Dail, Mrs. Emma Lee Schmidt, Mrs. Ella Jones, Mrs. Callie Rue Williams, Mrs. Louise Wilson, and Mrs. Jean Clark. Those who were awarded the Five Year Attendance Certificate were Mrs. Polly Dail and Mrs. Callie Rue Williams.

Club's Activities

Although the Breakfast Club is a professional club, participation in civic activities play an important part in their program. Among the club's activities were participation in assisting with the city newcomers' party for the sixth year, two members serving on the Steering Committee; membership in Pitt County Safety Council with a representative attending monthly meeting, and members assisted with Safety Lane Check; members on Board of Directors of Pitt County TB Association who attended annual Board meeting and made report to club; membership in Pitt County Historical Society and representative sent to meetings; donations made to TB, Red Cross and Mental Health Society.

Participated in Paint and Clean-Up Program; program given by M. Buchanan, chairman of Pitt County Safety Council, on the objectives of the council; program by Herbert W. Lee on "Experiences of Diplomatic Courier"; program given for members and bosses on Social Security by N. A. Avera, District Manager of Social Security Administration; and member represented club at charter meeting of Pilot Club.

The club participates in four projects. The International project was the completion of the 10th Credit Educational Study Course for which 33 will receive certificates. Also, an extra lesson was given on Credit and Collection letters. In Dixie Council the club completed "Club Achievement" project and the next course, "Guide To Good Leadership," will begin with the new club year.

In conjunction with the State project, the club completed the Traffic Safety Project in May and in June began "Club Unity." Programs on by-laws, principles and objectives of the club, and birth certificates were given. Twenty-seven members have already secured birth certificates. Monthly newsletters entitled "Keynotes" which covers club's activities are prepared and distributed by the Project Committee. An attendance contest is part of this project.

The local project was a continued scholarship at E.C.C. which was again awarded to Miss Barbara Griffin, business major, now a junior. Plans have been made to sponsor a fashion show to build the Scholarship Fund.

Fellowship is an important part of Breakfast Club membership and many lasting friendships are formed with local and out-of-town Breakfast Clubbers. This year members attended the Fall board meeting in Raleigh; the Spring board meeting in Wilmington with the Greenville club acting as co-hostess; the State Convention in Greensboro, the club won third place in Scrap Book Award; picnic in Rocky Mount and Bosses Night in Wilson; held an annual Christmas party; annual picnic with guests from Rocky Mount; 8th birthday party in March, guests from Rocky Mount, Kinston and Wilson; bake sale; two stork showers for members; and hamburger supper for members.

"Breakfast Clubber of Year"

A highlight of the evening was the presentation of the "Breakfast Clubber of the Year Award" by Sponsor Dan Saled to Miss Barbara Dail.

This award, a handsome silver Paul Revere Bowl, was given to the club in 1955 by Sponsors Bob Greene, Glenn Scott, Wesley Harvey, Walter Harrington and J. T. Barnhill. It is awarded each year to a member who, in the opinion of the sponsors, made the most outstanding contribution to Breakfast Club activity and progress on a cooperative basis for the entire club year.

Chicora BC Hears Dr. Todd

Dr. Richard Todd, professor of history at East Carolina College, discussed John Steinbeck's "East of Eden" at the meeting of the newly organized Chicora Book Club October 15.

Dr. Todd gave special emphasis to the word "Timshel" which means "thou mayest." He closed by giving each member a challenge. "Thou mayest follow the right path doing good, or thou mayest follow the wrong path doing bad."

After members arrived at the home of Mrs. Max Joyner, refreshments were served and the hostess introduced her guests, Mrs. George Coffman and Mrs. Billy Laughinghouse.

The president conducted a short business session before the meeting adjourned.

McLawhorn-Jackson Speak Vows In Grifton Methodist Church

GRIFTON—The Grifton Methodist Church was the scene of a ceremony of impressive simplicity and dignity Friday night at 8:00 o'clock when Miss Phyllis Annette Jackson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Lester Jackson, became the bride of Luke Bernard McLawhorn Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Luke Bernard McLawhorn.

Mrs. Luke Bernard McLawhorn, Jr.

The Rev. Ralph I. Epps, pastor of the bride, officiated at the double ring ceremony.

Prior to the wedding, a program of nuptial music was rendered by Miss Pat Stokes, a Lynchburg College student, at the organ, and Miss Argent Tucker, soloist, who sang "The Sweetest Story Ever Told" and after the ceremony "The Lord's Prayer."

Altar decorations were floor baskets of large white chrysanthemums against a background of palms and cathedral candles in seven branched candelabras. The couple entered the church together and the bride wore a ball-train gown of alabaster white brocade. The bouffant skirt had an inset in the back which was outlined with self-bows, and the fitted bodice's tiny straps was covered with a demi-jacket that was styled with a Mandarin collar and three quarter length sleeves.

Her fingertip veil of illusion was attached to a Mary Queen of Scots cap which was embroidered with seed pearls and iridescents. She carried a white Bible topped with a white orchid showered with satin ribbons.

Ushers were Bill Jackson, brother of the bride, Kerry McLawhorn, brother of the bridegroom, Mac Lancaster, and Ed Shearin of Enfield.

Mrs. Jackson, mother of the bride, wore a soft blue woolen costume dress with winter white hat and a purple orchid corsage. The bridegroom's mother wore a blue and white monotone wester dress with a white hat and orchid corsage.

The bride is a Grifton High School and ECC graduate and is now a member of the Knightdale school faculty.

The bridegroom also graduated from Grifton High School and is now studying at State College, Raleigh, where he works in the Research Lab.

Following the ceremony the couple greeted friends in the church vestibule and later were given an informal reception at the bride's home. Assisting in the home were Mrs. Ernest Broadhurst of Wilson and Miss Merle Reade Moore, aunt of the bride, who served bridal cakes and poured punch.

The table was overlaid with a white cutwork cloth and held a centerpiece of small white chrysanthemums and tall white candles placed in crystal holders. Mrs. Marjorie Phillips, aunt of the bride of Greenville, received in the gift room and Mrs. Walter Patrick, aunt of the bride, presided at the bride's register.

For her wedding trip, Mrs. McLawhorn changed into a gray Ike Clark original soft tweed suit with matching hat and skin accessories. She wore the orchid lifted from her Bible. After a brief trip they will reside in Knightdale.

Out-of-Town Guests
Among the out-of-town persons here for the ceremony were Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Lee Bell and son Lee of Robbins; Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Broadhurst, Misses Janet and Susan Broadhurst of Wilson; Mrs. Marjorie Phillips, Mrs. D. H. Conley and Donald Conley of Greenville; Harry Fleming and son Leigh of Washington, D. FHA Rally To Be Held At ECC

Approximately 700 high school pupils, members of the Future Homemakers of America, will meet at East Carolina College Saturday, October 26, to participate in the annual fall rally of the organization.

The program for the day will be based on the theme "Today's Teenagers, Tomorrow's Homemakers." Dr. Vester M. Mulholland of the State Department of Public Instruction, Raleigh, will be principal speaker.

Fifty schools located in twelve eastern counties of the state have been invited to send representatives to the meeting of District I of the North Carolina FHA organization. Sadie Francis, home-making teacher in the Washington, North Carolina, high school, acts as district advisor and has been responsible for planning Saturday's program.

Dr. Mulholland, speaking at the opening session Saturday morning at 10:30 in Austin auditorium, will discuss the topic "The Teenager of Today." Ann Moore of Greenville, president of the local FHA, will introduce him to the audience. Jean Jackson of the West Edgecombe High School, will preside.

"Youth Looks Ahead," a skit written by students of the West Edgecombe and the Greenville High Schools, will be presented at an afternoon meeting at 2 p.m., also in the Austin auditorium.

Election of a state historian for the FHA will make up part of the agenda of the meeting Saturday. The officer chosen for this position will be installed at the State FHA convention in Raleigh March 29.

Members of the FHA in Pitt County will act as hostesses at the rally here Saturday. Luncheon will be served on the college campus.

Bride-Elect Feeted At Party

FOUNTAIN — A bridge party honoring Miss Anne Harris of Fountain bride elect of December was held at the Moore House in Farmville Friday night.

Hostesses were Mrs. Leslie Yelverton, Mrs. Bill Walker, Mrs. Leslie Yelverton, Jr., and Mrs. Harold Rouse.

The mother of the bride, Mrs. Rodrick Harris of Fountain, and the mother of the bridegroom, Mrs. Fred Pollard of Bethel, welcomed the guests with the hostesses.

Eight tables of bridge were in play. Between the second and third progressions, a salad course was served. Mrs. Floyd Turnage of Fountain won high score for the evening and Mrs. Albert Mercer of Fountain was second high. They received prizes of costume jewelry. The honoree was remembered with a gift of a silver bowl.

A variety of fall flower arrangements were used throughout the rooms. At refreshment time small bouquets of pink and white carnations were placed on the individual tables.

Mrs. Carson Wins High Score Honors

ROBERSONVILLE — Arrangements of fall flowers were used to decorate the home of Mrs. George Glenn Edmondson on Purvis Street when she entertained her bridge club Thursday night.

Cold drinks and salted peanuts were served during the games. Mrs. Hilton Carson won the first award and Mrs. Jack Sharp received consolation prize.

Solid Grounds For Confidence

Confidence is a marvelous thing. Stockholders have been taking financial beatings, right and left, on Wall Street; but hardly anyone talks of a "recession". Nor does anyone seem to take the decline as a serious sign of duplicating the Big Crash.

Wall Street, long regarded as a thermometer of the nation's economy, is today being discounted as such. There's too much confidence in the country as a whole to accept recent stock market setbacks as being indicative of a genuine slump.

Of course, any unsteadiness is watched carefully in a dozen government agencies and by a horde of brokers and private speculators; but the fact remains, no one yet has publicly lost his head.

For a long time we have been hearing talk that a little too much ebullience, a little too much optimism, a little too much in the way of speculative investment had inflated the market above the honest-to-goodness values of otherwise substantial and well-founded stocks; and that letting a little bit of "air" out of the market might be a good thing in the long run.

Overlooking yesterday's recovery trend, we can see some of that "air" was valved off; and it conceivably is a good thing for everybody except to those who saw their holdings drop.

When millions followed millions down the drain of Wall Street's slump the administration didn't move, beyond pulse-feeling. The attitude then, and now, seems to be "the trouble spots will iron themselves out".

This story was repeated once before, shortly after the Korean War. At that time it was found necessary to slightly loosen the credit reins, and everything smoothed out again though something close to panic was heard in some quarters.

It is safe to say nobody sees any likelihood of a real depression. The country is made up of a whole lot of Greenvilles, Aydens, Farmvilles and Bethels. Marks of reasonable prosperity are on them all. It's like that in Maine, Washington, Texas and Florida.

Just the same, many a person wishes he knew just what event, what mood or what expectations led to the stock market slump this time.

Perhaps They Should Stand On Sidelines

Columnist Ray Tucker points out today a potential weakness in the NATO alliance in that there is a question as to whether European members would be willing to back up United States policy of force-against-force in the Middle East.

The point he raises gives thought to another: Allies are costly commodities. They might well be a greater luxury than we like to really think about should the U. S. and the Soviet Union assume a fighting stance.

If Hitler's submarines were a big stumbling block in World War II, picture the obstacles of supplying Great Britain and the other Western European nations if opposed by the many-times-larger Soviet fleet.

The relief and reconstruction help sent overseas following the last great war was an expensive gesture by Uncle Sam; but imagine the price following destruction in another World War.

In a sense, our overseas allies offer a certain amount of military strength; but their civilian needs would be a millstone around America's neck.

Conceivably, there are some aspects to the situation which suggest our friends might be doing us a favor by standing on the sidelines... and just cheering.

Several other commissioners have complained about the demands upon their time for matters over which they have no control, but the pressure has been much heavier on the chairman.

At the time this is written Governor Hodges has given no indication as to who he will name to succeed Joyner either as commissioner or as chairman. It is entirely probable the announcement will be made before this article gets in print. One thing is certain, the new chairman will have an easier time because of the work done by Col. Joyner during the past three and a half months.

GRITS — The menu at the Amerson Hotel coffee shop in Baltimore featured a special breakfast including eggs, country sausage and grits. Our party emphasized that we wanted grits, because sometimes without a special request the kitchen leaves 'em off the plate. Very promptly the courteous Negroess who was waiting on our table brought out big cereal bowls full of grits and a pitcher of cream. We were supposed to eat that while the breakfast was being cooked.

"Look here, gal," said one of the guests, "you oughta know better than to serve grits that way to North Carolinians. We wanta eat 'em with the eggs and sausage—and we'd like to swap that milk for some good brown gravy."

The girl giggled, took back the milk and brought some gravy—but way ahead of the rest of the breakfast. Later it developed she was raised on a farm, belong to one of our cousins in Chesterfield county, South Carolina, but had sort of grown away from her raising as to proper appreciation for grits as they should be et.

PICKETS — The entrance to Griffith Stadium just before the Cardinals-Redskins game Sunday was picketed by some two dozen Negroes carrying banners demanding that Negro players be used on the 'Skins squad. The cards have several Negroes—and they are good players. Maybe that is why the picketers were careful to add in small letters at the foot of their banners that "That is a protest, not a boycott." (They wanted to see the game). We didn't see any real redheads on either team, so maybe the red-headed men ought to get some banners demanding recognition.

'Fair Trade' Is On The Ropes

By ELMER ROESSNER

So-called fair trade has not been knocked out but it is hanging on the ropes. It has been walloped by highest courts in a dozen states as unconstitutional and now the U.S. Supreme Court has landed an uppercut.

The Supreme Court's action may have far-reaching effects on merchandising, and competition in the United States may never be the same again.

The top court's action came in the General Electric-Masters case. Masters, Inc., operates a chain of discount houses, selling appliances and other merchandise below the prices fixed by manufacturers under state laws. GE has been pretty tough with retailers who do not go along with its prices and Masters could not cut prices in its New York stores. It established a mail-order subsidiary in Washington, D.C., which has no fair-trade laws, and offered GE products by mail in New York at cut prices.

COURT UPHOLDS PRICE-CUTTER

GE brought a suit, which was appealed to the Supreme Court. GE held that Masters was violating the New York fair-trade law. Masters held sales that were actually consummated in Washington and were outside the jurisdiction of New York laws. A U.S. District Court of Appeals upheld Masters' contention and the Supreme Court, in refusing to hear an appeal, upheld this point of view.

This means that price cutters, operating from bases in Washington and other states without effective fair-trade laws, can sell at cut prices anywhere, including those states that legalize price fixing.

In fact, the Masters' organization has already announced that it will soon offer fair-trade GE housewares at cut prices in newspapers and magazines throughout the U. S. It is practically certain that other large discounters will do the same.

It is also possible that local merchants — especially those smarting under injunctions and fines levied by the courts on the complaints of GE and other price-fixers — will set up subsidiaries in the nearest states without fair-trade laws. The subsidiaries can sell to the stores' own customers — and to competitors' customers — at less than fair-trade prices.

FREIGHT IS A BRAKE

There is one important factor. The cost of writing and mailing a letter and buying a money order may sometimes wipe out much of the savings possible. The cost of shipping the merchandise from the price sanctuary to the price-fixed area may also slow such sales. If the manufacturer pays the shipping charges, his discounts must be smaller. If the buyer pays the freight, savings may nearly vanish.

But when savings will more than overcome these drags, fair trade will be mighty groggy. It will be difficult for manufacturers to insist that local dealers charge $4.95 for an item when mail-order firms are offering the same thing at $4.49, or $3.99.

In the last few years the top courts of a dozen states have held that state fair-trade laws were unconstitutional to some extent. As these decisions increased in number, many manufacturers gave up price fixing. Eastman Kodak was a notable example.

The new Supreme Court ruling is probably causing those manufacturers still fixing prices to re-evaluate their policies. And, in the end, fair-trade may not be able to answer the bell for the next round.

At this particular time, when retail sales have been dipping, and both manufacturers and retailers have high inventories, a rash of competition resulting from collapse of fair trade could have considerable effect on all retailing, including those lines that have never been involved in the fair-trade situation.

FIRM OFFERS REPAIRS ANY TIME, ANY DAY

A new type of business has been established in California and New York that might profitably be duplicated in other areas.

It might be called a "don't do it yourself" business. The New York firm sells a service agreement at $10 for the first year and $5 for successive years. For this fee the subscriber can call the firm at any hour of the day or night for repair services. In emergencies, repairmen are sent immediately. The subscriber pays the regular price for repairs.

The New York firm has arrangements with 14 contractors and repairmen and the firm certifies their competence.

SAHORS SEEK JOBS ON WINE TANKER

The most desirable berth on the high seas today is a job on the SS Angelo Petri, the new tanker that carries liquid foods to the West Coast and brings back wine. Seamen around the world are trying to sign on.

Don't jump to conclusions. When it carries wine, the tanks are sealed. There's no imbibing at sea. But it is the sweetest smelling tanker afloat; it has none of the petroleum smells that get under seamen's skins, as happens on oil tankers.

Incidentally, it is the only ship in the world that carries the cocktail flag. There really is such a flag: a cocktail glass outlined in blue on a white circle on a blue background. It was devised by yachtsmen to signal nearby ships that the master was serving cocktails. The Angelo Petri flies it day and night.

East Carolina College's big men's dormitory is now under construction on the new portion of the college campus.

The building will be the first to be built on the new section which is located on the south side of Tenth St.

More than 500 students will be accommodated in the new structure.

The start of the new dorm which will be the largest on the campus, points up the phenomenal growth of the local institution during the last ten or twelve years.

It has been a period during which millions of dollars have been spent on new construction and the building program has been almost uninterrupted during the time. Still the need for classroom and dormitory space has not been met.

Since World War II ended State Legislatures have authorized the construction of three new dormitories — Slay, Garrett and Umstead. Also built on the old campus have been a home management house and a faculty dorm.

Beyond that, there has been a new gymnasium constructed on Tenth St. and a new library.

Construction of the new buildings freed older structures for other purposes. Thus Wright gymnasium became a Student Union upon completion of the new Health and Education building.

The old home management house became an Alumni building. The old library was converted into a music building when the sparkling new library was opened a few years ago.

There have been other projects on the campus during the years also. Additional streets were opened. A new street lighting system was installed.

During the years immediately following World War II local citizens conducted a drive to construct a football stadium on the campus. That has been expanded through the years to take care of increased attendance.

Now the college finds its old campus between Fifty and Tenth Sts. completely filled and it must move across Tenth St. to the 37 acres which was purchased some years ago to continue its expansion.

The move justifies the faith of a number of local business men who put up the money to obtain an option on the land and preserve it for the college some years ago.

Greenville, then as now was growing rapidly in an eastern direction. Already houses had closed in the eastern end of the campus and only the land across Tenth St. was available for future expansion.

The State Legislature at the time was not in session so the local businessmen put up the several thousand dollars necessary for the option with the understanding it would be returned if the state bought the land.

Budget commission members wined when told the price of the land — somewhere in the neighborhood of $2,000 per acre. The appropriation was approved however and the land purchased.

Its proving to be a valuable piece of property. The old campus is entirely surrounded by housing developments now and there is practically no more room for expansion on the old campus.

In fact it appears certain that even the new section will be full in a short while if expansion continues and new land must be purchased soon if the college campus is not to be separated.

Other Editors Saying -- Where Are We Heading?

(Washington Daily News)

Every day one can pick up the newspapers, turn on radio or television, or even engage in conversation on the streets and learn just how advanced the people of the world are in making weapons of destruction.

Larger bombers, atom powered submarines, faster and bigger warships, bombs with more lethal poisons than ever before, and men with the know-how to kill thousands upon thousands of human beings with one little gadget are on this world today.

Where are we heading? Is it total destruction? Has mankind lost all of its sense of human values? There are serious questions, and when we search for the answers, we find that so much emphasis has been placed on destruction and killing that we seem to have lost sight of the greater and more human goal of saving human life.

Had America placed the same emphasis on finding a cure for cancer that we have placed on perfecting a bomb to erase a great city, today we'd have the cure for cancer and we wouldn't need so much advice on what to do in case of an attack by hydrogen or atom bomb.

The sad truth is that we are geared to the building of weapons of destruction, of agony, and of death. And somewhere along the line we occasionally find that some doctor or some scientist has added to our store of knowledge on some disease or some ill of mankind. It almost seems incidental that such a discovery is made nowadays.

We are spending so much money in building of weapons of destruction that few, if any, of us can realize the amount even given the figures. We seem to have centered our attention for the moment on space missiles because Russia has beaten us to the punch. But immediately we ask "how can space missiles be used in all-out war?"

At the rate we are going now, it would seem to the average citizen that we are doing a pretty good job of preparing for our own self-destruction. We are told that if a third world war should occur, there probably won't be much of this civilization left to record the history.

With two super powers in the world today, America and Russia, and with their two philosophies of government directly opposed to each other, then many people feel that a clash is inevitable. And we should remember that when the clash occurs, if it does occur, the spark has been set off for total destruction.

It would seem that civilization today has a date with death and that we are racing like mad to keep that date.

What is the answer? The only answer we can give is that people of all nations should sit down together and arrange a "turning back." Leadership in the world is sorely needed. Understanding among men is needed today as never before in our memory.

Unless we do an about face somewhere along the line, we shudder to think of what can happen.

Attlee, it is recalled, made a similar trip to Washington when it was suggested that former President Truman might authorize the dropping of atomic bombs on North Korea during that "police action." Attlee feared that such retaliation would bring China and Russia into the conflict, thereby precipitating a global struggle for which Britain was wholly unprepared.

An atomic duel above Europe, such as realization of the Dulles warning might produce, would be even more dangerous and destructive to Britain, France, West Germany and all our other NATO Allies, from the Low Countries to Turkey itself. All of their cities are within easy range of Russian air forces equipped with atomic and hydrogen explosive, not to mention the intercontinental missiles which the Kremlin may possess.

As a result of the Dulles statement and hurried re-examination of the terms of the NATO Pact, it becomes clear that this defense structure may be merely another Maginot Line, which proved useless under Hitler's first serious assault.

Strength For Today

By EARL L. DOUGLASS

SECRETS

A house in a newly-built development was struck by a truck recently and badly damaged. In the course of clearing away the wreckage and making repairs, the carpenters stripped sections of the sheathing off the walls. The owner was horrified to see what poor-quality, under-sized lumber had been used inside the walls and how hastily and carelessly the studding had been tacked into place.

Of course, the contractor who built the house did not know that his secrets would ever be exposed, how many of us, like that contractor, do things we would be ashamed to have others know about, being certain in our mind that no one will ever know. And how often, as it turns out, we are exposed!

The truth is that there is no real secrecy possible. We cannot be sure of hiding anything from the sight of others forever, and we can be sure that nothing is hidden from the sight of God. "There is nothing covered," the Bible tells us, "that shall not be revealed; and hid, that shall not be known."

The most successful kind of concealment is having nothing to conceal. The greatest peace of mind comes not from having the skeleton locked securely in the closet, but from having no skeleton in the closet at all. Guilt is never as comfortable a state as innocence.

Attlee, it is recalled, made a similar trip to Washington when it was suggested that former President Truman might authorize the dropping of atomic bombs on North Korea during that "police action." Attlee feared that such retaliation would bring China and Russia into the conflict, thereby precipitating a global struggle for which Britain was wholly unprepared.

An atomic duel above Europe, such as realization of the Dulles warning might produce, would be even more dangerous and destructive to Britain, France, West Germany and all our other NATO Allies, from the Low Countries to Turkey itself. All of their cities are within easy range of Russian air forces equipped with atomic and hydrogen explosive, not to mention the intercontinental missiles which the Kremlin may possess.

As a result of the Dulles statement and hurried re-examination of the terms of the NATO Pact, it becomes clear that this defense structure may be merely another Maginot Line, which proved useless under Hitler's first serious assault.

Glamor Is Her Trade

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK (AP) — America today is full of glamorous grandmothers, but Marlene Dietrich, one of the most beautiful, probably has the fewest beauty secrets.

"I wash my face with soap," she admitted cheerfully, "and I don't own a jar of skin cream. Perhaps I should, but I just can't be bothered. I keep only one bottle of perfume in my house—if I have that."

She can enter a room full of celebrities, and all heads will snap her way. Whatever she had, she still has.

Glamor is her trade mark, but never has impressed her very much.

"I was brought up to be useful," she said, "and to do something useful."

"The biggest misconception about glamor is that you cannot be glamorous and also clean house, wash dishes — and do everything anyone else does."

Marlene feels that any housewife can be glamorous but remarked: "I don't know why she would want to. With me it happens to be a profession."

"What defeats most women who seek to be glamorous? In America I would say it is insecurity in their own judgment," she said.

"They become too regimented, which is strange, because we are told this is a nation of individuals."

"To feel they are well-dressed they must have the assurance of others — they must have the seal of approval to be sure they haven't made a mistake."

"But that is where they make their mistake. Their own individuality cannot come through if they follow a pattern, yet they must follow a pattern to feel secure."

Miss Dietrich says she has never had a pattern in life and doesn't yearn for one. She usually makes one picture a year now, does four weeks in Las Vegas, has no ambitions to storm the battlements of television.

"Why should I?" she asked. "I am not trying to prove anything."

"If I hadn't become an actress I think I'd like to have been a doctor — but I could have enjoyed living very well without a profession at all."

She lives simply. When she isn't working, she likes to attend concerts and Broadway openings. The rest of the time she spends reading — two to three books a week — and caring for her three young grandchildren.

"There is so much you want to do for children, and so very little you actually can do," she said. "You can watch their health and equip them with some basic ideas you believe in. You can refrain from giving them candy."

As for the rest of it, they'll do what they want to anyway."

The things that bore her are stupidity, superficiality and people who don't know their job.

The things that please her most are imagination, efficiency and people who are good at what they do, no matter what they are doing."

She often eats only one real meal a day, doesn't care particularly what it is. She is still fond of potatoes and turnips even though "that is about all I had as a child."

She sometimes misses the war years, when she traveled thousands of miles entertaining troops.

"There was a great aim to life then, and I believe in that aim," she said. "You didn't have to think what to do next. It was there to be done."

Asked if she could sum up her philosophy in a sentence, Marlene shrugged wryly with her mouth, then said: "Do your duty — but do it every day."

That has been the actual glamor of her life — duty.

Little Surprise By Resignation

By LYNN NISBET

JOYNER — The resignation of Col. William T. Joyner as a member and chairman of the North Carolina Highway Commission occasioned less surprise around Capitol Square than did his original appointment to the post four months ago. In his letter of resignation, dated October 10 and announced by Governor Hodges this week, Col. Joyner recalls that he accepted the appointment with reservations.

At his first news conference after the highway commissioners were named the Governor told reporters he had to persuade Joyner to take the job and added, "I hope I didn't over-persuade him."

There is no reason to question full sincerity of the Governor's statement that he accepted the resignation with deep regret, nor to question validity of the reasons assigned by Col. Joyner for this action. He said his doctors had advised him to reduce his work load and responsibilities, and that he wanted to conserve his energy to help maintain the tobacco program and to preserve the public school system. He is chief attorney for several tobacco groups interested in promoting culture and sales, and is a member of the school study commission—and is generally credited with formulating the program which has become known as the "Pearsall Plan" for operating the public schools.

Col. Joyner is also among the top-shelf lawyers for the Southern Railway, and is often called in as associate counsel for other railroads in hearings before the Utilities Commission and the courts. There is scarcely a day in the year without some situation arising involving conflict of interest between the railroads and the highways.

DETAIL — In his letter of resignation Col. Joyner tells Governor Hodges that "the burden of the highway work is the heaviest of my public tasks." The colonel didn't say it, but his friends know that this heavy burden is due largely to the mass of detail he has been called upon to handle, much of which was not contemplated in the organizational scheme set up under the new plan enacted by the 1957 Legislature.

Theoretically the highway commission is solely a policy-making body and the chairman has no more responsibility than any other member except to preside at meetings, while the Director of Highways runs the administrative end of the department. It has been impossible, however, for employees of the department or the general public to remember that the chairman is not the big boss.

Chairman Joyner has been called ed upon many times to arbitrate or referee differences arising between the accounting, administrative and engineering sections of the highway department—as well as to give a lot of time to correspondence and personal visitors who still think the chairman ought to be the top man with final authority—as has been the case from 1917 to 1957.

Several other commissioners have complained about the demands upon their time for matters over which they have no control, but the pressure has been much heavier on the chairman.

At the time this is written Governor Hodges has given no indication as to who he will name to succeed Joyner either as commissioner or as chairman. It is entirely probable the announcement will be made before this article gets in print. One thing is certain, the new chairman will have an easier time because of the work done by Col. Joyner during the past three and a half months.

GRITS — The menu at the Amerson Hotel coffee shop in Baltimore featured a special breakfast including eggs, country sausage and grits. Our party emphasized that we wanted grits, because sometimes without a special request the kitchen leaves 'em off the plate. Very promptly the courteous Negroess who was waiting on our table brought out big cereal bowls full of grits and a pitcher of cream. We were supposed to eat that while the breakfast was being cooked.

"Look here, gal," said one of the guests, "you oughta know better than to serve grits that way to North Carolinians. We wanta eat 'em with the eggs and sausage—and we'd like to swap that milk for some good brown gravy."

The girl giggled, took back the milk and brought some gravy—but way ahead of the rest of the breakfast. Later it developed she was raised on a farm, belong to one of our cousins in Chesterfield county, South Carolina, but had sort of grown away from her raising as to proper appreciation for grits as they should be et.

PICKETS — The entrance to Griffith Stadium just before the Cardinals-Redskins game Sunday was picketed by some two dozen Negroes carrying banners demanding that Negro players be used on the 'Skins squad. The cards have several Negroes—and they are good players. Maybe that is why the picketers were careful to add in small letters at the foot of their banners that "That is a protest, not a boycott." (They wanted to see the game). We didn't see any real redheads on either team, so maybe the red-headed men ought to get some banners demanding recognition.

Attlee, it is recalled, made a similar trip to Washington when it was suggested that former President Truman might authorize the dropping of atomic bombs on North Korea during that "police action." Attlee feared that such retaliation would bring China and Russia into the conflict, thereby precipitating a global struggle for which Britain was wholly unprepared.

An atomic duel above Europe, such as realization of the Dulles warning might produce, would be even more dangerous and destructive to Britain, France, West Germany and all our other NATO Allies, from the Low Countries to Turkey itself. All of their cities are within easy range of Russian air forces equipped with atomic and hydrogen explosive, not to mention the intercontinental missiles which the Kremlin may possess.

As a result of the Dulles statement and hurried re-examination of the terms of the NATO Pact, it becomes clear that this defense structure may be merely another Maginot Line, which proved useless under Hitler's first serious assault.

Tips On Foiling The Goblins

HALLOWEEN GLITTER—Mrs. Joe Stone adds glitter to the clown outfit worn by her son Joe, while Bobby, dressed as a bunny, looks on. (Reflector Photo By Anne Singleton).

Time for Halloween costumes, again, and when every little fellow fancies himself a knight in shining armor, a clown or a big black cat.

Take the easiest way out if you can, mom, because mainly the costumes are one-shot. Even if they are put away for next year, they'll be outgrown or "out of style" when witching brew time comes "round again.

Aluminum foil may serve as a quick, easy-to-use material for junior party-goers. Last year's clown suit (if it still fits) may get a new ruff of glittering foil and a conical shaped hat. Or make armor-like accessories for a young knight to perk up costume.

The ruff may be made by tearing off a yard of household foil and pleating it, accordion fashion. Squeeze one edge tightly over a piece of string. Do the same with a second piece of foil, squeezing it over the same piece of string. Spread both pieces of foil so that the ruff will fit around the neck. Tie it at the back of the neck with string.

The hat may be made of heavy paper or cardboard and covered with foil. Cover it with foil and decorate it by making four balls of foil and attaching them to the hat by glue or small pieces of thin wire passed through the balls and through the hat. Place them in a line from top down the front of the hat.

Shining Armor
A knight's helmet may be made with three pieces of household weight aluminum foil about a yard long, formed over a small lampshade (an inexpensive one from a variety store will do the trick). Mold each piece of foil with the hands to the shape of the shade, overlapping the foil to make the complete helmet. Round out the top by placing a hand inside the helmet, and forming it into a round shape. Turn up the bottom edge, making two vertical cuts with scissors at the front to form an opening for the face. Turn up this piece of foil higher than the rest of the brim. Top with a plume formed of foil, and glue it to the top of the helmet.

A shield can be made by cutting a piece of cardboard into an oval or round shape. Cover it completely with foil and decorate it in any interesting design with lengths of foil that have been crushed into a rope in the hands. These lengths can then be glued to the shield. A piece of stout string at the back provides a handle and also bends the shield into a rounded shape.

A sword is made from a piece of stiff cardboard covered with foil and decorated at the handle

30 Years Ago Today

October 24, 1927

A navy man is taught to keep his mouth shut, and when he opens it he usually gets into trouble, declared Rear Admiral Magruder in a statement last night. Naturally there are secrets surrounding our branches of our national defense, but beyond this, there should be no gagging of citizens and their right to criticize when they feel criticism is due. In the Magruder instance most of his criticism was but a review of the defects in administration found by the special commission that some time ago gave complete study to our naval affairs, and a criticism of the administration for its failure to carry out the commission's recommendations. As we see it, Admiral Magruder in his criticism was not only within his own rights but has rendered to the people of the nation a service for which he should be thanked.

Mrs. Klingenschmitt Gives Program To ACEI

The Greenville Branch of the Association of Childhood Education International had its first meeting yesterday afternoon at the Wahl-Coates Laboratory School.

During the social hours spiced apple juice and ginger bread was served by Miss Lou Galphin and her committee.

Mrs. Evelyn Blue, president, opened the meeting by extending a welcome to all members. The minutes of the last meeting and of the executive board were read by Mrs. Betsy West.

Mrs. Sally Klingenschmitt gave the program "A. C. E. I. Center Day." She told of the beginning of A. C. E. I. It began with a dream, an idea, and a plan. The dream was the improvement of education; the idea was that pooling resources, the dream could be realized; the plan was to form an organization whose members would work together for children.

"The idea has grown stronger with the years. The plan has changed as the vision has widened," she said. A brief history of A. C. E. I. and a progress report of the Center fund was given. In 1956 at the Washington, D. C. Conference, the Steering Committee proposed plans for an A. C. E. I. Center Day in November.

The Greenville Branch observed A. C. E. I. Center Day at their first fall meeting, October 23.

Mrs. Blue announced the State Meeting is to be in Greenville, March 15 and the A. C. E. I. Study Conference will be in Atlantic City, New Jersey, April 6-11. The Elmhurst School will serve as hostess to the next Greenville Branch meeting January 22.

Foggy London Has A Fog-Maker

LONDON (AP) — London of all places has an official fog maker. Dr. George Elton whips up real pea-soupers. But there's a scientific purpose behind what might appear to be one of the world's most superfluous jobs.

In December 1952 a fog-smog killed hundreds of Londoners. "Can't something be done about them?" Dr. Elton wondered. To learn the secret of dispersing fogs, he first had to manufacture them to order. So for five years he's made them—in a concrete tank.

Today he is able to say "The work has been encouraging. I hope we are close to a solution."

A lecturer in physical chemistry at Battersea Polytechnic Institute, Dr. Elton began by making fogs in test tubes. Then he started churning them up in an enormous concrete tank.

When he felt he had a formula that would chase a fog, he quipped an airplane with a 30-gallon tank. He pumped the chemical through small outlets on the wings. The plane attacked a half-mile-long patch of cumulus cloud near the Isle of Wight.

"It was very exciting," he said. "Within 15 minutes there was nothing left but a few wisps."

He believes his fog disperser will first be used at airfields and will cost a fraction of a method used in wartime at a cost of $1,000 or more a minute.

Lack Ordinance On Chalk Marks

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Traffic officer R.E. Hessel arrested Frank Livingston after, he said, the plumber had erased a chalk mark from the tire of his parked truck.

Hessel said Livingston had obstructed an officer's duties because the chalk marks are used to identify overtime parkers. This, contended Hessel, constituted destroying evidence.

Municipal Judge Donald Wright dismissed the case. He ruled that evidence is not evidence unless a crime is committed—and the city has no ordinance forbidding erasing chalk marks.

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — William Schmeisser of Washington, D.C., dashed out of the Fairmont Hotel at California and Mason streets and told a cab driver "Pacific Union Club, please — and hurry."

stored confidence. People were beginning to feel the administration was too complacent.

But whether the restored confidence would last was another matter. It was on that point that Wall Street had its fingers crossed.

John B. Huhn, partner of Bache & Co., said, "I don't think this rally will hold. It's gone too fast. It's going to take two or three days to build up a base and give people confidence." Others echoed that opinion.

Wall Street Relaxing, But Fingers Crossed

NEW YORK (AP) — Inhabitants of Wall Street's financial canyons felt better but kept their fingers crossed today.

The sensational rally in stocks yesterday was something they had yearned for more than three months. But there was a feeling the rally might have been too good to last.

It was a spectacular rally. The Associated Press average of 60 stocks jumped $5.80 to $156.70.

biggest one-day advance in 2 years. It came after the market had slumped to a new low for the past 2 1/2 years.

Behind the sudden turn-about in a market which has been declining since mid-July were two factors, in the opinion of financial men. One was the market's own technical condition and the other was President Eisenhower's plan for a series of nationwide talks.

Technically, brokers thought the market was due for a rally. Many thought it was overdue. When a market declines steadily for several months, they said, a point is reached where liquidation lets up and new demand is attracted. That creates a rally.

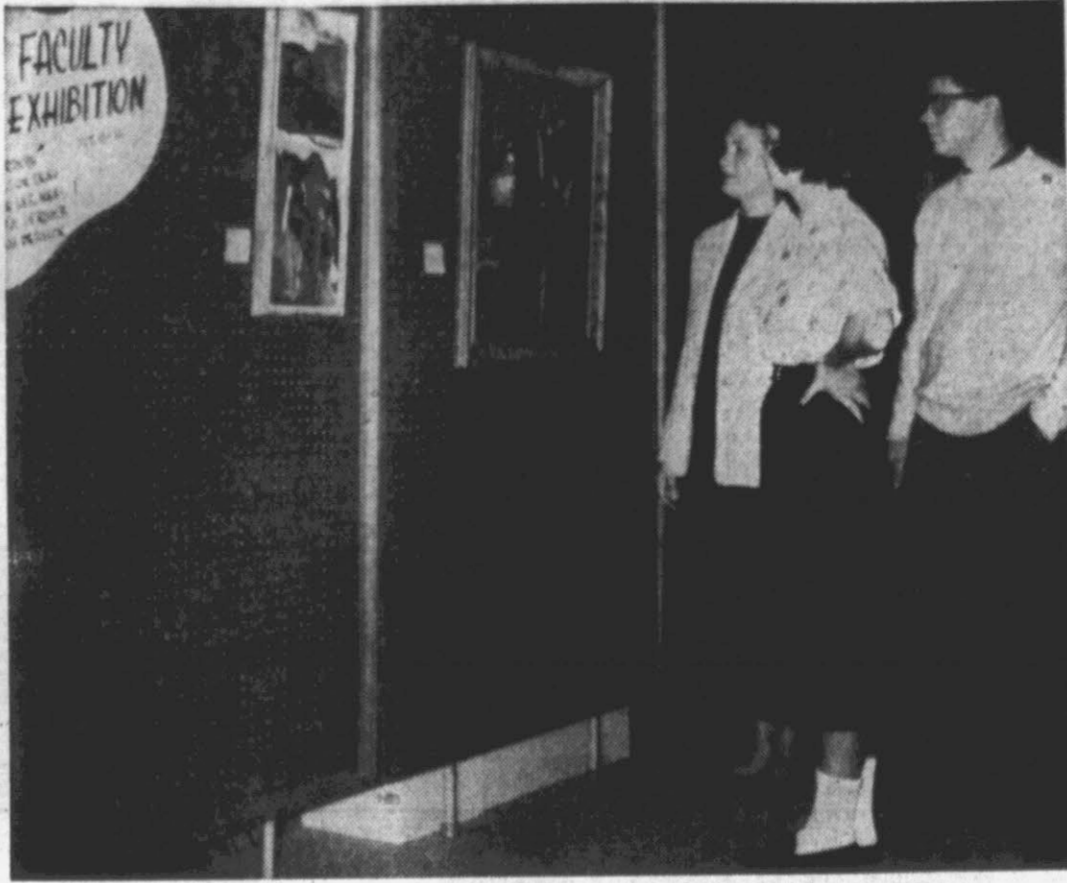

Eisenhower said Tuesday night that he plans talks on his "beliefs and determinations" on the national economy, defense programs and efforts for greater scientific achievement.

Apparently this helped restore some market confidence, at least temporarily. Some brokers feel the market has reflected uncertainty over the domestic economy, apprehension over the international situation and disquietude over alleged lack of political leadership.

"Eisenhower's statement," said Eldon Grimm of the brokerage firm of Walston & Co., "was far and away the dominating market factor. The market was ready to rally anyway, but that really re-

The show, including paintings in oil and water color, block prints, and ceramics, is on display in the Joyner Memorial Library and will be open to visitors during the month of this month. The faculty artists whose work is being shown are Dr. Wellington Gray, John Gordon, Francis Lee Neel, and William and Roberta Persick. The visitors to the exhibition shown above are (left to right) Letty B. DeLoatch of Conway, Evelyn Walston of SnSow Hill, and W. Joseph Stell of Greenville.

Parking Bill Is Matter For Suit

PORT WORTH, Tex. (AP) — Think you pay plenty for a parking space? Assistant Dist. Atty. Gordon Whitman filed suit for $2,925 against Rambo Construction Co. and the Continental National Bank.

Whitman claims the money is owed for city parking meter spaces that were blocked by street barricades when several stores were constructed atop the bank.

Offices To Be Required For Small Loan Agencies

RALEIGH (AP) — After next Jan. 1, small loan agencies in North Carolina will have to set up shop in their own separate offices.

The State Banking Commission yesterday adopted a regulation to prohibit loan agencies under its supervision from occupying an office or the annex to an office of any other business.

The special committee which recommended the new regulation said it will "enable the banking commission to more efficiently supervise small loan agencies."

The committee said only a "small number of businesses" will be affected. Check by banking department examiners has shown that "the intermingling of offices of supervised loan agencies and businesses of other types tends to create confusion in the mind of the borrowing public as to the type of business operated," the committee explained.

In another action, the commission voted to hold in abeyance an application from the Bank of Hobbville for authority to open a branch at Edenton.

Objections to the application were voiced by President J. G. Wood of the Bank of Edenton. "We do not feel the economic situation at Edenton justifies another bank," said Wood.

Bank Commissioner W. W. Jones, who had not made a recommendation on the bid for a new bank at Edenton, expressed the opinion that "Edenton is adequately served now" by the present bank.

A delegation appeared in support of the proposed Edenton branch of the Bank of Hobbville.

Camera News

IMPRESSIVE is the word for this realistic figure in Dinosaur Park, Rapid City, S. D. Close inspection of the negative showed clouds not visible in the first contact print, so the enlarged print is more impressive and far more satisfying to our columnist.

By IRVING DESFOR
AP Newsfeatures

Too many camera fans judge the success or failure of their efforts by the first set of prints they get from a drug store, camera shop or other commercial processor of film. Often they're dismayed by the results and are ready to chuck photography for a more rewarding hobby.

Sometimes, however, they are misled by a bad set of prints. Mechanical operators, working automatically and using no judgment, can chop off vital areas that happen to be on the negatives' edges, select the wrong grade of paper or permit a print to come out too light or too dark. Even in high quality photo finishing plants, some bad prints manage to evade those on the lookout for mistakes. In plants which depend on volume processes, the percentage of bad prints is likely to be greater and the chance of catching or redoing them is less.

In all cases, fans should try to learn to "read" their negatives instead of their prints to determine whether their efforts were successful or not. It is a readily acquired knowledge that comes with practice. If fans were to make a practice of studying their negatives along with every print they have made, they would soon realize how they relate to each other.

A negative should be handled only by its edges, never by smearing fingerprints across its surface. A negative has a dull, slightly-embossed emulsion side and a shiny, gelatine backing. Any scratches, dirt or fingerprints on the film show up as imperfections in the print and become more unsightly with enlargement.

To view a negative in its proper left-to-right perspective, the shiny, gelatine side should be towards the eye. You can look through a negative towards a light or a blank white sheet of paper to judge its quality.

Where the negative is completely transparent (or thin), the print will be completely black; where the negative is black (heavy or dense), the print will be white. A good quality negative reveals detail in both the thin (shadow) and the heavy (highlight) areas and have a full range of tones between. It will not be too dense nor too thin. In bright sunlight or in closeup flash shooting, faces and white clothes are usually bathed by overpowering light and result in dense areas on the negatives with little detail visible.

These, and other types of problem negatives, result in very poor prints because contact printing machines and automatic enlargers must print either the dark or the light areas and sacrifice the other. If they time the expose so that the face has detail, the rest of the print will be too dark. If they make the exposure so that the dark portions print properly, the faces will be washed out.

Good prints can be made from these problem negatives, but they require individual attention and are best handled by enlarging. By skillful manipulation, an expert printer can "burn in" the dense portions of a negative and hold back or "dodge" the thin areas to produce a balanced print with a full graduation of tones.

There's nothing like a sparkling enlargement from a negative that had yielded a washed-out contact print at first to restore a camera fan's confidence and egg him on her to greater picture efforts.

Financial Needs Cited By Futrell

FALKLAND—Less income in Pitt County this year will bring about a financial problem for a certain segment of the population, according to K. T. Futrell, county Superintendent of Public Welfare.

Futrell made this observation at a meeting of the Falkland PTA October 16, when he was principal speaker. The welfare superintendent stated that due to the financial decrease there will be a "great need" for good, usable children's clothing, and suggested a "clothing closet" sponsored by some agency in the community. He said it might also be desirable to exchange clothes with other communities.

Following his talk, Futrell distributed leaflets to the group about the services rendered by the Pitt County Welfare Department.

He was introduced by Principal V. W. Haynes, who also spoke briefly on organizing a clothing closet for the local community. The group voted to ask the churches of the community to be responsible for collection and distribution of the clothes, with aid from teachers on suggesting needy persons.

The attendance banner went to the fourth grade. Mrs. Levi Woodson won the door prize.

Many Flu Cases Over The State

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

North Carolina's flu epidemic, presumably the Asian variety, continues to take its toll, but thus far no deaths have been reported.

Most victims recover after three or four days in bed, but feel "washed out" for a few days thereafter.

Three college football games have been canceled this weekend because of the flu bug. Davidson College called off its two-day homecoming program.

High school games also were canceled and some high schools closed yesterday for the weekend.

As the number of students missing classes increased, there occasionally arose a doubting voice. J. D. Morgan, assistant superintendent of the Mecklenburg County Board of Education, said he found "lots of cotton being picked" throughout the county which had 556 students out yesterday.

Dr. C. J. Pietsenpol, reporting 150 cases among the 870-man student body at Davidson, canceled scheduled dances for Friday and Saturday night on the homecoming program, then last night, on advice of the school physician, called off the entire program.

Earlier, Presbyterian College had canceled its game with Davidson because of 35 ill football players. Davidson then found a substitute in Elon, which had its game with Catawba canceled because of illness on the Catawba side. But last night, several Davidson squad members joined the sick list and that game too was canceled.

Mars Hill Junior College reported 40 new cases yesterday, swelling its total to 105 in the infirmary and two auxiliary infirmaries. The school canceled its scheduled football game with Marion Military Institute of Alabama.

A total of 188 students at North Carolina State College were hospitalized as 8 new cases of flu were reported today. The sick students were being cared for in the college infirmary, in a dormitory adjoining the infirmary and in a Raleigh convalescent home. Dean of Student Affairs J. J. Stewart Jr. said that "as of now the college has no plans to suspend classes."

At Chapel Hill, where more than 1,500 UNC students have been stricken during the epidemic, the flu outbreak was reported definitely on the wane. Only a few new cases were reported yesterday.

Meanwhile, the Raleigh and Wake County schools reported a decline in absenteeism resulting from flu. In the city schools, absences yesterday totaled 2,586 compared with 2,750 on Tuesday. Queens College reported 95 cases. School officials called in extra nurses to handle the sick.

Iredell County closed five Negro schools until Monday. School officials reported 500 absentees at the schools.

Children's Home at Winston-Salem canceled its football game this weekend and said it might cancel others if the situation doesn't improve.

Charlotte reported 2,050 absentees yesterday from 14 city schools.

Central High School in Mooresville reported 120 absentees among its 600 students yesterday and said the school might be forced to close.

PHILADELPHIA — Some heart operations are "safer than a tonsillectomy," a Philadelphia surgeon said today.

Recent surgical advances have made it possible to correct holes in the inner heart wall which cause "blue babies," Dr. Houck E. Bolton, instructor in chest surgery at Hahnemann Medical College and Hospital, said at a cardiac children's institute.

He said other new heart technique make possible the removal of the patent ductus — a blood vessel that should disappear before birth — and cure aortic stenosis — the narrowing of the great blood vessel of the heart.

Sputnik Is Given 2 More Months

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — Dr. Fred L. Whipple, director of the Smithsonian Astrophysical Observatory, says latest figures indicate the Russian rocket has a life expectancy of at least two more months.

He said last night it could not be estimated immediately how long more the Russian satellite itself would continue circling the globe.

Dr. Whipple added, however, that the satellite is expected to outlast the rocket by a considerable time because of the lessened drag on the satellite's compass.

spherical shape. Scientists estimate the highest point of the rocket is now about 480 miles above the earth, compared with 573 miles when launched Oct. 4.

The low point is now approximately 140 miles from the earth, a decline of about three miles since launching.

Observatory officials said the third stage rocket is now about 56 minutes — or about halfway around the world — ahead of the smaller Sputnik.

The rocket has been pulling ahead of Sputnik daily since they were launched into space.

There is a progressive daily increase in the space between them, so that in the next week the rocket is expected to move as far ahead as in the past three weeks. That would put the rocket and the satellite neck and neck again in their race around the world.

Judge Will Act As 'Conscience'

KANSAS CITY (AP) — A tall, 66-year-old circuit judge has become Kansas City's conscience on jurid reading matter.

Judge Ben Terté has before him 260 copies of publications some citizens say are obscene. He must decide whether they are.

Two weeks ago police searched five newsstands and a magazine distributing house. They seized between 13,000 and 20,000 magazines, books and pamphlets. "We want to know which ones are obscene under the law," said Police Chief Bernard Brannon. "The court will tell us. Then we can take further steps to keep them off newsstands."

The state placed the 260 copies in evidence at the start of a hearing before Judge Terté yesterday. The hearing was recessed indefinitely to allow defense attorneys time to determine whether they wish to present evidence.

'New' East Carolina Team To Be Meeting Newberry

Against Newberry Saturday

By BILLY ARNOLD Reflector Sports Editor When East Carolina enters into its sixth game of the season...

PROBABLE STARTER—In Coach Jack Boone's revised lineup for the Saturday night Newberry game, Ed Emory is a probable starter at guard.

Strategy? Perhaps the move is a strategic one by Coach Boone and his aides, designed to snap the Pirates out of a five-game losing streak.

Boone's team at the beginning of the season included five seniors on the starting eleven. One was lost after the first game due to bad injuries...

Senior guards and captains Ken Burgess and Dick Monds may be benched, along with tackle James Faircloth and fullback Bob Maynard, who are also seniors.

Filling in at guards during recent drills, have been Gary Pierce and Ed Emory. Both have looked good on offense this week and both turned in good defensive performances yesterday in practice.

Emory is a 240-pound sophomore from Lancaster, S.C.; Pierce is a 210-pound freshman from New Castle, Delaware.

Handling the tackle slots Saturday night at College Stadium will probably be Charles Cook and Larry Howell. Cook is a 210-pound freshman from Wilmington; Howell is a 245-pound sophomore from Monroe. Faircloth, a regular at 225 is having ankle trouble and may not see action at all.

Backfield Ends will be Howard Beale, a sophomore, and Tommy Jones, a junior. In the backfield, there may be a big shake-up. Ralph Zehring, regular quarterback, has been experiencing trouble with the flu and may share his duties with either Billy Skeeter or Stuart Holland.

Both boys have proved themselves good field generals in their work with the Buc junior varsity club. Both can pass, both run well. Fullbacks are expected to remain the same as usual, although there has been no definite statement from the Buc camp pro or con James Speight, who has been by far the most elusive Buc runner this season...

Both boys have proved themselves good field generals in their work with the Buc junior varsity club. Both can pass, both run well. Fullbacks are expected to remain the same as usual, although there has been no definite statement from the Buc camp pro or con James Speight, who has been by far the most elusive Buc runner this season...

The fullback post, usually manned by senior Bobby Maynard, will probably be awarded to either Bobby Lilley or Randall Holmes. Saturday night, thus eliminating all seniors from the starting line-up. Holmes is a sophomore who has seen only limited duty; Lilley has worked alternately with Maynard for the most part this season. He is a junior.

About Newberry Newberry, with a 2-1-1 record for the season, will invade ECC stadium for the first meeting between the two schools.

The South Carolina club is a member of the "Little Three" group of that state and is rated one of the strongest little college teams there. Its 2-1-1 record seems even better considering that the tie came against The Citadel.

Newberry runs from the split T and is strong with the dive and option series. Horace Turbeville, a transfer from Clemson, is the big offensive star of the club, who runs, passes and kick.

Manager Haney Voted Tribute WILLIAMS, Ariz. (AP) — "It's a surprise to me," Fred Haney said last night when informed he had been named National League Manager of the Year in the annual Associated Press poll.

Haney, who led the Milwaukee Braves to their first pennant and world championship, was resting in his motel room in this northern Arizona community. He asked for details. A few paragraphs of an Associated Press story were read. "That's terrific," he said. "Naturally I'm honored and very happy about it. We are on our way to Los Angeles and just stopped here for the night. I hadn't heard a thing about it."

Haney won in a close vote over Fred Hutchinson, pilot of the second-place St. Louis Cardinals. Haney received 90 votes and Hutchinson 84 of the 180 cast by members of the Baseball Writers Assn. of America. Mayo Smith of the Philadelphia Phillies was named on five ballots and Bill Rigney of the New York Giants on one.

The Braves manager said, "I'll be honest. Up until a couple of days ago, I was too busy thinking about other things to even consider I would get this honor." He wouldn't take all the credit. He said, "The fellows on the ball club do the work. It just takes some effort to guide them."

Hearty Welcome Given Dodgers By Los Angeles Fans

LOS ANGELES (AP) — This city gave big league baseball a tumultuous welcome last night. Hundreds of spectators strained against ropes as a chartered plane carrying the vanguard of the Los Angeles Dodgers set down at International Airport.

Snead, Demaret Take Early Lead In Japan

By WILL GRIMSLEY TOKYO (AP) — A course record 67 by Sam Snead and a 69 by Jimmy Demaret sent the United States off to an imposing five-stroke lead today in defense of the international Canada Cup golf championship.

Putting the Kasumigaseki Country Club's rough koral grass greens as if they were marbled, the two veteran Yanks outclassed handicapped professionals from 29 other nations in the opening round of the 72-hole medal play tournament.

Five strokes back in second place came the surprising Japanese tandem of Torakichi Nakamura and Koichi Ono. Nakamura, 42, a teaching professional, shot a 68, second only to Snead's record round. Ono shot 73 for 141.

The competitive course record for this picturesque 6,895-yard layout was 69, held by Tokyo players. Par is 36-36-72.

Snead, 45, White Sulphur Springs, W.Va., recouped with dead-eyed putting after straying from the fairway on six holes. The tournament decides championships in both individual and team competition, the latter based on combined scores of the two representatives.

Two strokes back of the Japanese at 143 came the young South African team of Harold Henning and Gary Player, who shot 71 and 72, respectively.

Australia's twosome of Peter Thomson, the three-time British Open champion, and Bruce Crampton, all-around young athlete from Melbourne, was nine strokes back at 145, tied with Canadians Stan Leonard and Al Balding.

The best of the British forces, the English team of Peter Alliss Jr. and Ken Bonfield, followed at 146 on a pair of 73s.

DAVIDSON, N.C. (AP) — Davidson College last night canceled its scheduled homecoming festivities this weekend because of flu.

Acting President Dr. C. J. Pietsenop said there were about 150 cases among the student body of about 870. He said 20 of the cases are members of the football team.

Dr. Harding Knedler, school physician, recommended the action. Pietsenop said Davidson's football team had been scheduled to play Presbyterian College but EC canceled the game Tuesday because 35 of its squad had flu. Davidson then obtained a substitute game with Elon after its game with Catawba had been called off because of flu at Catawba. Last night's action canceled the substitute game.

Boyd Decisions Scruppy German

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — Onetime top-middleweight contender — Bob Boyd of Chicago scored a 10-round unanimous decision over Franz Suzina of Germany last night in a bout that saw only the referee hit the deck.

Suzina, who weighed 159, sent Referee Joe Palmer to the canvas after the seventh-round bell as the official was trying to break the fighters. Boyd was a pound over the middleweight limit at 161.

Boyd, on the comeback trail after suffering a broken jaw a year ago September, scored early and withstood Suzina's desperation punches.

It was Boyd's fifth victory since Joey Giardello cracked his jaw in a fight in Cleveland. He now has a record of 46-7-1. Suzina, the favorite of the local crowd but not the bookmakers, has a 41-19-13 record.

"It was a right hand that caught me on the back of the head," Palmer said. He said he thought it was more surprise than power. "I've been hit harder than that," he laughed.

Judge Dick Albino gave Boyd 7 rounds to 3 and Judge Harold McGrath scored it 6-3-1 in favor of Boyd. Referee Palmer also favored Boyd 5-4-1. The Associated Press card saw Boyd the victor 5-3-2.

Gamecocks Favored In Big Thursday Tilt

COLUMBIA (AP) — Slightly-favored South Carolina and experience-shy Clemson met for the 55th time here today in that colorful classic — the state fair "Big Thursday" football game.

The largest crowd ever to witness a football game in South Carolina was certain to pack newly enlarged Carolina Stadium. All of the 44,500 tickets were sold long ago.

The game represented a chance for South Carolina to climb back up the Atlantic Coast Conference ladder after its initial setback to Duke.

The winner, at least, has the right to claim the state's unofficial football championship. After losing to Duke, South Carolina beat Wofford, Texas and Furman.

Clemson lost to N.C. State and North Carolina. It has whipped Virginia in the conference as well as little Presbyterian.

Coach Warren Giese's South Carolina Gamecocks were solid favorites until first string quarterback Bobby Bunch and flashy halfback King Dixon were injured in practice last week.

Bunch is out for the season. Dixon was to be out of action at

Manager Haney Voted Tribute

WILLIAMS, Ariz. (AP) — "It's a surprise to me," Fred Haney said last night when informed he had been named National League Manager of the Year in the annual Associated Press poll.

Haney, who led the Milwaukee Braves to their first pennant and world championship, was resting in his motel room in this northern Arizona community. He asked for details. A few paragraphs of an Associated Press story were read.

"That's terrific," he said. "Naturally I'm honored and very happy about it. We are on our way to Los Angeles and just stopped here for the night. I hadn't heard a thing about it."

Haney won in a close vote over Fred Hutchinson, pilot of the second-place St. Louis Cardinals. Haney received 90 votes and Hutchinson 84 of the 180 cast by members of the Baseball Writers Assn. of America. Mayo Smith of the Philadelphia Phillies was named on five ballots and Bill Rigney of the New York Giants on one.

The Braves manager said, "I'll be honest. Up until a couple of days ago, I was too busy thinking about other things to even consider I would get this honor." He wouldn't take all the credit. He said, "The fellows on the ball club do the work. It just takes some effort to guide them."

Faubus Assails Federal Govm't

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP)—Gov. Orval Faubus last night accused the Federal government of letting the hoodlums of paratroopers "trample into the dust" the will of a majority of Southern citizens.

Faubus told a county judges' convention that in using troops at Little Rock Central High School, the government had taken a long stride toward destroying a republican form of government.

He vowed that he would continue on his "present course of defending the rights and privileges of the people by every proper and legal means."

Faubus spoke to about 450 persons at a meeting of the Arkansas County Judges Assn., one of the most powerful political organizations in the state.

Applause broke out frequently as he denounced the federal government and the Arkansas Gazette, a Little Rock newspaper which has been critical of the governor's actions in the integration crisis.

The organization adopted unanimously a resolution condemning President Eisenhower for sending troops to Little Rock and praising Faubus.

These other developments occurred in the Little Rock integration picture yesterday:

1. The Army completed the release from federal service of some 8,500 Arkansas National Guardsmen called to active duty by President Eisenhower in the integration dispute. About 1,800 guardsmen are being retained.

2. Faubus left in suspense the status of released guardsmen by saying he had not taken them back as the state's troops.

3. The nine Negro students who attend Central High under federal soldiers' protection walked out of school without a military escort for the first time.

In his speech, Faubus said, "We have found here the will of a majority of the citizens of this community, this state, a great region of the whole union, trampled into the dust by the hoodlums boots of the airborne federal troops." Faubus referred to soldiers of the 101st Airborne Division flown to Little Rock Sept. 24 on orders of President Eisenhower to enforce a Federal Court order for integration at Central High. Eisenhower federalized the Arkansas National Guard the same day.

Faubus said the will of "a small minority — the NAACP—perhaps less than 1 per cent of the people, has prevailed, and their will is being enforced upon all the people by federal troops using rifles and bayonets."

The governor devoted about a third of his address to denunciations of the Arkansas Gazette and its publisher Hugh B. Patterson Jr.

He charged that the newspaper had "misrepresented, slanted, distorted and colored the news in reference to me and the Little Rock situation" more than any other newspaper.

Faubus accused Patterson and other Gazette personnel of trying to imply that the governor is mentally unbalanced.

He said a Gazette "idea of placing a psychiatrist among news reporters" at his press conference apparently had failed. "So now the editor and publishers have set about to leave the impression that I am off balance, without the assistance of an expert," Faubus told the judges.

The governor had kind words for another Little Rock newspaper, the Arkansas Democrat.

The Gazette had no immediate comment on Faubus' attack. All nine Negro students attending Central High with some 2,000 white pupils were back in classes yesterday for the first time in more than a week. Some had been absent with flu.

They left unescorted for the first time since Sept. 25. Arkansas Military Dist. headquarters said removal of the escort was "a new policy instituted today."

Next Attorney General Came To Fore Much Like A Nixon

By JACK ADAMS

WASHINGTON (AP) — William P. Rogers, like his close friend Vice President Nixon, has risen high in a few years and at a comparatively young age.

The boyish-looking Rogers, a 44-year-old New Yorker, yesterday was tapped to succeed the retiring Herbert Brownell Jr. as attorney general. The changeover is expected in about two weeks.

Like Nixon, also 44, Rogers came out of World War II an obscure naval officer. But both young lawyers soon started their climbs. Nixon came to Washington in 1947 as a fledgling Republican congressman. In that same year, Rogers joined the staff of the Senate War Investigating Committee.

When the Eisenhower administration came to power in early 1953, Nixon was sworn in as vice president and Rogers became deputy attorney general—second-ranking official in the Justice Department. It is from that post that Rogers will step into the Cabinet. His appointment is subject to Senate confirmation.

After Brownell's resignation and Rogers' selection were announced, Nixon predicted Rogers "will make an exceptional record."

Nixon and Rogers have developed close ties over the years. In the 1952 campaign, Rogers was one of Nixon's chief political advisers. When President Eisenhower suffered a heart attack in September 1955, Nixon secluded himself that night at Rogers' home in nearby Bethesda, Md. The vice president explained later he did so to avoid telephone distractions while he kept in touch with other officials.

Brownell, nine years older than Rogers, is understood to have recommended Rogers for appointment as his deputy when the Eisenhower administration was taking form.

Brownell generally is affable, but is regarded as being a bit austere. Rogers is on a first-name basis with many persons, and he is known for his quick wit.

Vigorous in action, he nearly always follows the friendly, informal approach.

When reporters came to ask questions about his new appointment, he greeted them characteristically: "Hi, Joe. Hello, Frank," and so on around the room. It's doubtful if anyone in official Washington calls him anything else but "Bill."

Fresh out of college, he was hired in 1938 by then Dist. Atty. Thomas E. Dewey as an assistant in a drive against the New York rackets. It was that drive that made Dewey a national figure.

When World War II broke out, Rogers joined the Navy. He was assigned to the aircraft carrier Intrepid and took part in the capture of Okinawa. He left the service as a lieutenant commander.

He rejoined the New York County district attorney's staff for a time, but in 1947 accepted appointment to the legal staff of the old War Investigating Committee. Rogers later became chief counsel of that committee and was continued in that capacity when it became the Permanent Senate Investigations subcommittee.

Rogers left government service in 1950 to become a member of the New York-Washington law firm of Dwight, Royall, Harris, Koegel and Caskey. He served that association to become deputy attorney general in 1953.

Next Session Of Congress May Be Known As 'Sputnik' Session

By ED CREAUGH
Associated Press News Analyst
WASHINGTON (AP) — The next session of Congress may well be known as the "Sputnik session."
Lawmakers have been traveling far and wide during Congress' off-season. The word is seeping back that they find the Soviet satellite a prime topic of public concern, right behind such local and more immediately pressing problems as jobs and prices.
This naturally will encourage the Democrats—not that they need much encouragement—to hitchhike on the satellite, so to speak, as an issue to raise against the Eisenhower administration.
They can count on some help from Republicans. Only yesterday Sen. Bridges (R-NH) lit into the President's foreign economic adviser, Clarence Randall, for calling Sputnik "a silly bauble." Bridges said the Randall comment was "grossly misleading and irresponsible." The New Hampshire senator is one of the legislators who wants a Senate investigation of the country's satellite and missile program.
President Eisenhower himself has indicated concern over public reaction to Sputnik. He plans a series of speeches—rather urgent in tone, it appears—to reassure the American people about their country's scientific and military progress among other things.

The President has said that while Sputnik shows Russians have a mighty rocket, it doesn't increase by "one iota" his concern for the country's security. Apparently he now feels it necessary to explain why he feels this way, in the light of evidence that his confidence is not too generally shared.
Eisenhower may be able through his speeches to take off some of the heat. The armed forces may do the same thing by some impressive demonstrations in the missile field. But the fact remains that—even if U.S. officials didn't regard this country as being in a race—the Russians were the first to launch an artificial moon. And the question naturally arises: What else may they be first in?
So Congress will investigate. What else it can do is not clear at this point. Vote more money for missile development; order a shakeup in the country's military-scientific setup? That's a pretty good bet—if the administration doesn't do it first.
Pressure to consolidate missile research comes from a variety of sources. The U.S. Chamber of Commerce, for instance, has assailed what it calls "wasteful rivalry" among the armed services "for domination of our missile program." And Sen. Mansfield (D-Mont.), who does not line up with the chamber every day, calls for one centralized research agency to "do away with the overlapping, the duplication, the inefficiency and the waste" in the missile field.

Sputnik's effect on Congress will be far-ranging. It will influence foreign affairs and defense strategy discussion. It already is being cited alternately as evidence that (1) more money should be spent on development of weapons and less on foreign aid, and (2) more money should be spent on foreign aid to counteract the effect of Sputnik.
Quite a flurry, all in all, to be stirred up by what the President has called "one small ball up in the sky."
Roadside Stand Applies Honesty
SUNSET BEACH, Calif. (AP) — There is a roadside stand near the Meadowlark Country Club and people in the vicinity have come to know it as "Honesty Market."
The stand has fresh fruits and vegetables. One customer wrote to the Long Beach Independent about the operation, saying: "In four years we have never seen a clerk at this market. The prices of all items are marked and in bags and boxes, and you simply drop your money in a box. Today the cars were lined up 10 deep while people shopped."

Broughton Takes Oath Tomorrow For State Post

RALEIGH (AP) — J. M. Broughton Jr., son of a former governor and U.S. senator, will take the oath of office tomorrow as a member and chairman of the State Highway Commission.
Broughton, a Raleigh attorney, was named by Gov. Hodges yesterday to fill out the unexpired term left by the resignation of W. T. Joyner of Raleigh.
Associate Justice Jeff D. Johnston Jr. of the State Supreme Court will administer the oath of office to Broughton at ceremonies in the governor's office, Irwin Monk of Asheville, recently named to the State Veterans' Commission, will be sworn in at the same time.
Broughton, 35, will take his seat on the commission when it meets here Nov. 4-5. The commission term left vacant by Joyner's resignation, which he said was dictated by his health, will run until June 30, 1961.
Associate Justice Johnson managed the successful campaign of Broughton's father, the late J. Melville Broughton, for the U.S. Senate. The elder Broughton defeated the late William B. Umstead of Durham for the Senate seat.
A few years later, young Broughton served as a campaign aide for Umstead in his successful race for governor.
To accept the highway job, Broughton will resign as a member of the State Hospitals-Board of Control. He was named to the job by Umstead and reappointed by Hodges.
Gov. Hodges expressed confidence Broughton "will make a great contribution to the progress and growth of our state highway program."

Protocol Dept. Peace Shattered

WASHINGTON (AP) — The quiet in the State Department's striped pants division has been shattered by a clash between protocol chief Wiley Buchanan and his energetic deputy Victor Purse.
Net result, Purse, 39, has been relieved of his duties by Buchanan, a Republican who was appointed No. 1 protocol expert last January.
Buchanan, former ambassador to Luxembourg, was unavailable for comment on the move. Purse would say only: "I've been asked to leave protocol and to take some new assignment."
Buchanan was known, however, to have bawled Purse out yesterday at the airport for hitching a ride aboard the President's plane Columbine III when it brought Eisenhower from New York.
Purse had been in New York helping maneuver Queen Elizabeth and Prince Philip through the final formalities of their visit to the United States. He was one of about a dozen hitchhikers on the presidential plane.
The airport lift apparently climaxed a behind-the-scenes cold war between the two men. Purse is a veteran of 14 years duty in the department, four of them in protocol.
Informants familiar with prior skirmishes said Purse considered Buchanan, 43-year-old political appointee, to be stuffy and too rigid in his approach.
Buchanan, on the other hand, is reported to have viewed the lean, fidgety Purse as too undignified and casual for the task of guiding diplomats through the maze of receptions, dinners and visits which are standard fare in the State Department.
The State Department has given no hint yet what Purse's new post will be. He will be told after a brief furlough.

Lost His Nerve, Lost His Money

DALLAS, Tex. (AP) — A man who tried to hold up Charles B. Almo's grocery lost money on the deal.
He ordered and paid for sardines, cookies, bread and cigars. Then he pulled a gun and told Almo to fork over his cash.
But he lost his nerve and ran, minus his groceries.

Traffic Chore

RALEIGH (AP) — Football and ice skates will add up to a traffic headache on the North Carolina State College campus on Saturday.
The problem will be how to handle the cars bringing the crowds to see Duke and N.C. State play football in Riddick Stadium and to watch a matinee performance of an ice show (Ice Capades of 1958) in Reynolds Coliseum. More than 28,000 persons are expected for the two attractions.
Officials of the State Highway Patrol, the Raleigh city police department, and the college traffic department mulled the problem over yesterday at a luncheon. They came up with these suggestions:
Football and ice show fans were asked to arrive early and park only in marked spaces. Western Boulevard was recommended as an entrance and exit of the campus. Sharing rides, and use of buses if possible, were suggestions designed to reduce the number of cars.
Raleigh police chief Tom Davis urged football fans without a ticket to stay home. Detectives will be on hand to guard against ticket scalping, he added.
Anyway, the game will be televised.

ON THE HOUSE

MRS. AMERICA and her four children stroll on the lawn of their Arlington, Va., home, a six-room split level brick house.

By JOHN O.B. WALLACE

AP Newstatures
THE DESIGN of a house, and especially its room arrangements, is a more important consideration than price or location, according to one group of American housewives — the 49 finalists in the 1957 "Mrs. America" contest.

If you can assume that they represent a cross section of American housewives, then you may have a clue as to what kind of a home the American housewife wants.

The finalists came from all 48 states and the District of Columbia. All but one live in their own homes; one lives in an apartment. They were polled on present-day American homes and their advantages and disadvantages, here are some of the results:

More than a third said the design and floor plan of the house was the deciding factor. Four combined price with design and floor plan in their answers. One said price and location were the main reasons behind the selection of her home. The others listed various reasons, convenience to the husband's job; choice "made out of necessity;" and nine said they had "no other choice."

Who selected their home? A majority said the decision was made jointly by husband and wife. One said she, alone, chose the house. Three said the husband alone made the selection. A few said the house was selected by the entire family, children included.

Ranch Houses Popular
IN STYLE, ranch houses represented the largest single preference. Other style preferences included split levels, ramblers, Cap Cod, Spanish type, Colonial, and brick and framed cottages.

Where are their homes located?

All but 16 live in suburban homes; 12 live in urban areas and four in farm areas.

How much did their homes cost? Nearly half spent more than $10,000 but under $20,000; six spent less than $10,000. An even 10 spent more than $20,000 but less than $30,000; five spent more than $30,000. (Some of the finalists did not answer this question).

The poll also produced this scattered information: A preponderant majority of these women do their own housework, their own washing and their own ironing.

Most said they had adequate work space but eight said they needed more space, particularly in the kitchen.

Separate Children's Area
MOST WERE HAPPY with the amount of storage space in their homes. Seven said they needed more closet space; three wanted more kitchen cabinets and one said she needed more bedroom closets.

Nearly two-thirds of the women said children should have their own living areas in the home. Nearly the same number, by turning this question around, said adults should have separate areas set aside for their own activities.

Separate family living areas were popular with nearly all.

What about Mrs. America, herself?

Mrs. Linwood Findley, a 32-year-old mother of four children, lives in a six-room, split level brick house in Arlington, Va. She represented the District of Columbia. Her husband, Harry, is an Air Force lieutenant colonel, stationed at Ft. McNair Industrial College, Washington, D.C.

Their home has three bedrooms, a living room, dining room and kitchen. It has three baths and a den. The basement includes a recreation room and a work room. They bought the house a year and a half ago and did all interior painting and wallpapering themselves.

Self-Built Rock Garden
THERE IS a woodburning fireplace in the living room and a large picture window. The back yard includes a rock garden, the pride and joy of Mrs. Findley; she made it herself. She also constructed flagstone steps in some areas around the house.

Her living room is finished in dark woods; her furniture is traditional English. Gardening is her chief hobby. Under the picture window in the front of the house are huge window boxes with petunias. She also planted a rose garden in front of the house.

Mrs. Findley and her husband set tile in the basement and built a flagstoned patio. On the subject of homemaking, Mrs. Findley says: "Everybody in our family feels that our home belongs to all of us, and it's our job to take care of it together. We all had a hand in refinishing our furniture, even including the children."

The family, she says, has an earn-and-save plan, whereby the boys, Harry Jr., nearly 12, and David, nearly 10, cut the grass and get paid for it.

One of the girls, Lynette, 6, helps with the dishes. The other girl, Lane, not quite 4, "is still too young to help," the mother says.

Atom-Powered Icebreaker Near In Soviet Russia

By THOMAS P. WHITNEY

AP Foreign News Analyst
The Russians are claiming another scientific "first"—not so dramatic as Sputnik, but more practical.

It is the first nuclear-powered surface ship, an icebreaker which may revolutionize arctic navigation.

This biggest icebreaker in the world will pack a punch calculated to put it into areas ships never have reached.

It has been under construction in a Leningrad shipyard for two years, and the Soviet news agency Tass says the engines are being installed now.

Its displacement of 16,000 tons makes it 4,000 tons larger than any icebreaker of record. Atomic reactors will give it 44,000 horsepower, more than twice the power of any other icebreaker.

Modern icebreakers clear paths for ships through thick arctic icefields by raising their prows above the ice and then crushing it beneath them. Their engines not only propel the ship but also pump water back and forth in ballast tanks to shift weight. The additional weight of the new nuclear icebreaker as compared with conventional types and its high ratio of horsepower to weight promise enormously increased icebreaking capabilities.

The use of nuclear power is reckoned to enable the ship to operate for a year without refueling and make it completely independent of conventional fuels.

The new icebreaker will be put into service on the northern sea route to the north of Siberia. This route is used on occasion to transfer warships from the Soviet northern fleet to the Far Eastern fleet. It has been open for only a short part of the year.

'Talking' Trash Cans Previewed

RALEIGH (AP)—Trash cans wired for sound—voicing a warning against being a "litterbug"—will be thrown into the fight to clean up North Carolina during the week of Nov. 24-29.

The first of the talking trash cans drew gasps yesterday when it was previewed on a busy Raleigh intersection. Stunned bystanders saw Gov. Hodges dedicating the can while it talked back to him—in his own voice.

Hodges has proclaimed Nov. 29 as "North Carolina Clean-Up Week" to climax the drive by his committee for clean highways.

The litterbug, who tosses trash on roadsides and other public places, is the object of extermination for the campaign.

Another of the talking trash cans will be unveiled in Wilmington today. The wraps will be taken off another in Greensboro on Friday, and a fourth will be dedicated in Charlotte on Saturday.

The cans talk from loud speakers which can send out either prepared recordings or be operated through microphone concealed in a nearby car.

Ex-Band Leader Abe Lyman Dies

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP)—Abe Lyman, former bandleader and composer, is dead of cancer at 59.

The Chicago-born Lyman, who died yesterday at his home here, began his professional career as a drummer in 1916. Two years later he came to Los Angeles.

Among his song hits were "Mary Lou," "I Cried for You," and "After I Say I'm Sorry."

In 1921 Lyman's orchestra, with the late Gus Arnheim at the piano, opened at the Coconut Grove in the Ambassador Hotel. Later Lyman and his band appeared in films and on the radio.

He retired in 1949 and devoted himself to the family restaurant business. Survivors include the widow, Rose; two sisters, Mrs. Dorothy Marcus and Mrs. Sarah Kaplan, and a brother, William Simon, all of Los Angeles.

Israel's railway lines cover 382 miles.

Another Winter Near South Pole

MCMURDO SOUND, Antarctica (AP)—With a bitter storm whipping snow around their huts, veterans of last winter here got the sad news today that they probably won't be home for Christmas.

Navy Capt. W. M. Dickey, the area commander, told the 317 "old explorers" that bad flying weather has delayed arrival of their replacements. Most personnel changes will now have to await opening of the ice as the antarctic summer progresses and ships can reach Little America.

The personnel exchange was not made last summer until late in January and early February. But hopes had been raised by a Navy newsletter from Washington to the men's families indicating they might be home for the holidays.

Dickey said only hardship and special cases now are likely to get out in time. Morale is still high despite the delay, he added.

A tractor train of 19 men headed by Lt. (j.g.) Bob White of Glen Falls, N.Y., completed a 650-mile, 21-day trek from here to Byrd station Tuesday. It carried 145 tons of supplies, including a rig to drill 1,000 feet through the ice for geological information.

STAFF PITCHED IN
BONHAM, Tex. (AP)—Flu struck six regular carrier boys and their substitutes, but it didn't interrupt delivery of the Bonham Daily Favorite. Publisher A. L. McAllister and three members of the newspaper staff pitched in to make the deliveries.

WAYNE D. OVERHOLSER'S new Western thriller DESPERATE MAN

CHAPTER 16

I walked to the corner of the room and sat down in the chair Jones had been in. I said, "Matt, you're drunk."

"I ain't no such thing," Colohan said hotly. "This here hombre pounded on the front door while it was darker'n the inside of a bull's gut. I lit a lamp and looked at the clock yonder. Five after four."

"That's right," Mrs. Colohan said. "He woke the baby up."

Jones took a pipe out of his pocket and began to fill it. He said sullenly, "I dunno why you've got to bust in here and start chokin' me to death. I didn't do nothing to your pa. I waited till your folks were asleep, then I got up and left."

I watched Jones fill and light his pipe. I felt awful. The Colohans wouldn't lie about a thing like this. Then I remembered the cigarette stubs I had found where the killer had waited outside.

I crossed the room to where Jones sat and held out the matchbox to him. "Have a cigarette," I said. "I guess you ran out of papers or you wouldn't be nursing a pipe."

He looked at me. "Why shouldn't I nurse a pipe? I don't like cigarettes. I don't smoke nothing but a pipe."

I looked at his boots. Both heels were sadly run over on the sides. Jones wasn't my father's killer, and all I'd done was to waste the day. I asked, "What'd he say when he opened the door, Matt?"

"Something about could he sleep in the barn. He'd already put his horse in the corral. I remembered seeing him at the schoolhouse with you folks, so I said I thought he was staying at the Muaros and he says no, he just had supper there. Claimed he couldn't go on because he was cold. Frozed his feet."

I broke into Colohan's talk. "Matt, he's a liar. When I went to bed, he was snug on the couch. I got up and put my hand on the butt of my gun. 'Jones, you'd better tell us...'

"Hold on, boy, hold on," Jones begged. "I'll tell you all I can, but it ain't much."

"Let's hear you spiel," I said.

"Like I told your folks, I was headed for Arizona where I've got a job waiting," Jones said. "But I had some bad luck in Rock Springs and lost all my money in a poker game. Lost my gun, too. I noticed a little gent watching me all the time I was playing. When I walked out of the saloon, this gent trails along—"

"What'd he look like?" I asked.

He blinked at me. "Oh, I dunno. Had mean eyes. Looked like a gunslinger. Kill a man just as soon as look—"

"Did he carry his right arm in a sling?" I asked.

Jones scratched an ear as he thought about it. "No, but that right arm was stiff."

I looked at Johnny Strong. "Sammy Blue," I said, and Johnny nodded. "Go on," I said to Jones.

"Well, this gent followed me out of the saloon. He comes up and says, 'How'd you like to earn fifty dollars?' Fifty dollars looked like a million, so I said sure. He tells me 'bout this Dillon's Park and how I was to get here. I was to show up at the first house, belonged to a fellow named Munro, he said, and ask to stay overnight. I'd get twenty-five dollars then, and the other twenty-five would be mailed to me in Buhl."

"That all?" I asked.

"Yeah, except for one little thing that was kind of funny. He says to leave Munro's place after they're asleep. He says that's what I was getting paid for, to not be there by three, four in the morning. I asked why, and he said just do what I was told."

"Hell's bells," Matt Colohan yelled. "That Blue hombre was setting him up for a hanging."

Jones' mouth fell open, his slow mind finally catching on to what had happened to him. "That dirty dog!" He swallowed. "If I hadn't stopped here, you'd have figured I done it."

I got up, sick with disappointment and frustration. Sammy Blue knew he might be traced if we caught Jones, so he'd probably stayed out of the state.

"Tell Hugo to take Jones to town," I told Johnny. "Maybe Veach will hold him and get something else out of him."

"I don't figure he will," Johnny said, "but I'll have Hugo take him in."

I left the house, mounted, and went home. When I reached our lane, I saw there was a light in the house and I wondered if we and Gil were home; but when I went in I saw that Frank Dance was there, and that my father had been laid out in a coffin that rested on two sawhorses in the front room.

"Howdy, Dave," Dance said. I nodded at him and stood beside the coffin for a time, looking at my father's face. He looked serene and peaceful, but it wasn't him. I turned away and walked into the kitchen.

Dance followed me. He said, "There's coffee on the stove. Lorna fetched an apple pie over, and Bess, she made some sandwiches. They're wrapped in that cloth on the table."

I didn't think I was hungry, but Dance understood how it was. He went ahead and poured a cup of coffee and cut a piece of pie, and by the time he opened up the sandwiches I remembered I hadn't eaten all day. I was famished.

"Elder Smith was here most all day," Dance said. "We'll have the funeral tomorrow afternoon. We'll get the grave dug in the morning."

"Where's Ma and Gil?"

"Over at Nordine's. Shorty, he's coming over after 'while and he'll sit up the rest of the night."

I began walking around the kitchen, my hands opening and closing at my sides. Dance turned around. "I thought maybe you'd tell me but you haven't, so I've got to ask. Did you get Jones?"

"He wasn't the one," I said, and told what I'd done.

"Don't blame yourself, Dave," he said quickly. "I'd have done the same if it had been me. They must have been figuring on this for a long time. They knew what Joe done, leaving by the front door like that. Usually a man goes out through the kitchen door."

"Yeah," I said. "But how did the killer know?"

"Why don't you go to bed, Dave? This has been a bad day, and tomorrow won't be no easier."

I went to bed, but I couldn't sleep. I knew the answer to Dance's question. Whoever killed my father was a park man.

Joe Munro's death leaves the Big Ten without a master. Will Gil or Dave step into his father's shoes? Don't miss the answer in tomorrow's installment of "Desperate Man."

PROVES HIS POINT

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP) — To prove his point that his jealousy did have a safety sticker, pre-law student Alfred Retisios, 19, hauled his whole windshield into court. He explained that when officers stopped him, he was driving the 1929 model car without the windshield. Judge W. E. Bell dismissed the case.

"Why don't you go to bed, Dave? This has been a bad day, and tomorrow won't be no easier."

Dogs in Stockholm, Sweden, are taxed at the rate of 40 kroner (about $8.00) annually.

Singers Enmeshed By Comedy Requirements

By CHARLES MERCER

NEW YORK (AP)—Many of the popular singers who are presenting their own television shows must have awakened to a disturbing fact by this time. They are not being judged only as singers and performers, as hosts and hostesses; they're also being judged on the basis of their alleged comedy scripts.

It's an unfortunate state of affairs in this season of "variety" programs — unfortunate for the public as well as the stars.

There was a time when a singer simply sang, when a host hosted and a hostess hosted. But not any more. Now they're asked to get hearty laughs as comedians and comediennees too. Possibly they could do it if their writers handed them the material — which, by and large, they haven't thus far.

In the past week, for example, three superb singers and performers launched a new season of TV programs. As singers and performers all were excellent. But two, and to a lesser degree the third, were badly let down by their writers.

Dinah Shore returned to a new season on NBC-TV, happy to report. She has the same sparkle and winsomeness that always mark her performances.

Her guests were well-chosen too: Nannette Fabray, Danny Thomas, Tab Hunter, Dean Jones. Thomas wisely always brings his own material with him. But the others, including Miss Shore, were caught in an embarrassing predicament when the script called for hearty laugh comedy. The material simply wasn't there. Caught in a similar predicament was that fine singer and actor, Frank Sinatra, who has started his own program on ABC-TV (Fridays 9 p.m., EDT). Nothing could have been finer than Sinatra singing such songs as "The Lady is a Tramp."

His principal guests seemed wisely chosen too: Bob Hope and Kim Novak. But all three were entangled in a long and humorous sketch that involved Miss Novak being chased around the world by Sinatra and Hope.

The third singer who made her debut with a regular TV program was Patrice Munsel (ABC-TV, Fridays, 8:30 p.m., EDT). It was a delightful show. Relatively, she was the most successful of the three.

Why? From this corner because she did not strive as hard for comedy as the others. In the few minutes when her script did take a stab at humor, great guffaws did not issue from the nation's living rooms.

National Award For C&D Work

WASHINGTON (AP) — The State Department of Conservation and Development has won a national award for its tourist promotion.

State Advertising Director Charles Parker said today the advertising division of the department had been notified by Midwest Travel Writers Assn. that they tied with New York for the "Best news and photo coverage of an area in the United States and its possessions."

DUPONT ZEREX® ANTI-FREEZE

PERMANENT TYPE

WITH MR-8 KEEPS YOU GUARANTEED* SAFE

AGAINST FREEZE-UPS, RUST-UPS ...AND IT WON'T ROT HOSE

HOW MR-8 PROTECTS YOUR CAR

Here's the complete all-around cooling system protection you get with "Zerex," the only permanent type anti-freeze containing MR-8, Du Pont's special chemical rust inhibitor.

- 1. Works in all waters
Du Pont "Zerex" anti-freeze with MR-8 is compatible with all types of water. Even in hard water the inhibitor stays in perfect solution. Hard water makes the inhibitors used in many anti-freezes precipitate out, materially reducing their protective qualities.
- 2. Will not rot rubber hose
"Zerex" with MR-8 will not rot or soften rubber hose because it contains no oil. Oil is extremely harmful to some radiator hose, softening or rotting it sometimes in one season. Then the hose may collapse or burst, causing overheating and engine damage.
- 3. Neutralizes all acids
The seven different metals used in modern cooling systems can become corroded when a permanent anti-freeze solution turns acid. However, "Zerex" with MR-8 has extra "reserve alkalinity" that gives winter-long protection from the corrosive action of cooling system acids.
- 4. Keeps rust in suspension
"Zerex" with MR-8 keeps the cooling systems of today's complex engines clean and free-flowing. Because "Zerex" contains no oil, it does not cause rust to stick to cooling system surfaces and clog radiator passages, which can cause overheating and engine damage.

So don't take chances this winter. See your dealer now and get the complete winter-long protection only "Zerex" with MR-8 gives. It's the premium, permanent type anti-freeze made and guaranteed by Du Pont... your best assurance of quality and satisfaction.

DU PONT GUARANTEE
"Zerex" anti-freeze will protect the cooling system of your car from freezing, rust or corrosion for one full winter—and will not leak out—if used in a properly operating, watertight cooling system and if used according to Du Pont directions printed on the "Zerex" container.

Du Pont guarantees too, that "Zerex" will not boil away and can be used with either high or low-opening thermostats, at high or low altitudes in extreme driving or weather conditions. "Zerex" will not harm rubber hoses, gaskets, pump packing, metal parts of the cooling system or car finish. "Zerex" mixes perfectly with water, flows freely and transfers heat efficiently.

NEW YORK (AP) — Buying demand which spilled over from yesterday's historic rise pushed the stock market into heavy trading today but profit-taking clipped gains and established some losses early this afternoon.

In a follow-up to yesterday's huge rally, the biggest in 28 years, key stocks rose fractions to more than a point. In some cases the gains ran to 2 or 3 points at the start.

The range of advances was still a point or so but losses in about the same range replaced some of the early gains.

The high-speed ticker tape ran behind transactions for an hour and 36 minutes. At worst, the tape was 7 minutes behind transactions on the floor of the New York Stock Exchange.

Wall Street sentiment was still riding high on President Eisenhower's announced plans to make a series of talks reaffirming faith in the American economy. Financial analysts and other arms, a published report that the Federal Reserve Board has decided to ease up a bit on its tight money policy and some reports that the money-market situation has already eased slightly, were other items bolstering market confidence.

A succession of big blocks pushed prices higher at the opening. Top honors were taken by Lukens Steel, up 3/4 to 70 on 19,000 shares, followed by Bethlehem Steel, up 1/2 at 41 on 15,000 shares.

Lockheed, helped by news of its 62 million dollar missile contract, was the favorite in the airfields, rising more than a point and holding a fraction of this in later trades. Du Pont canceled a 1-point gain and showed a net loss of a point. Gulf Oil erased a point gain and eased. International Harvester, Douglas Aircraft and Martin Co. lost most of early 1-point gains.

John-Manville was up around 2. Still ahead around a point were Eastman Kodak, Baltimore & Ohio Chesapeake & Ohio, Goodrich, Union Carbide, General Electric and U.S. Gypsum. Most major steels remained fractionally higher. Chrysler dropped a fraction. General Motors was firm. Anaconda and Kennecott showed fractional losses. Air Reduction rose around 2 points as most chemicals held to the upside.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks at noon was up 90 cents to $157.60 with the industrials up $1.60, the rails up 40 cents and the utilities up 30 cents.

Fashion-Setter Dior Stricken

MO TEGATINI, Italy (AP)—Christian Dior, 52-year-old king of the postwar fashion world, died early today of a heart attack while on holiday in this north Italian resort 25 miles west of Florence.

The quiet, balding and slightly paunchy creator of the revolutionary "New Look" had come to Montecatini a week ago with four friends.

He dined last night at his hotel with Mrs. Raymond Zennacker, his chief assistant, and after dinner retired to his third-floor room. At 11 p. m. he called for a doctor. Subsequently the local priest, the Rev. Giulio Celli, was summoned.

Also at the bedside of the famed designer when he died were a local doctor, a French physician and his dinner companion.

Dior was the second of French fashion's major postwar designers to die after a brief but meteoric career. Jacques Fath succeeded three years ago, at the age of 42, to leukemia.

Dior was virtually unknown until 1947, when he burst to the forefront of the bitterly competitive fashion trade with the revolutionary longer, full skirts of his New Look. In that one season he became the dictator of high style, and never since had anyone come topping him from his pinnacle.

As a young man, Dior left his political science studies to start a small art gallery in Paris.

Illness forced him out of that, and after his recovery he had to sell his last valuable painting to live. A friend who was designing dresses and had persuaded him to try his hand and helped him get a start. He did not have great success.

After the World War II service, he started thinking about getting up his own shop. In 1946 he got the backing of Marcel Boussac, wealthy textile manufacturer.

From his first collection, he was a fabulous success.

He let skirts down in 1947, hiked them up in 1953 and de-emphasized the bosom in 1954. For each change buyers, customers and fashion writers flocked to his salon on the Avenue Montaigne. Designers from Hong Kong to 7th Avenue adapted the lines he decreed, and Dior at his death himself headed a multimillion-dollar combine of eight companies and 16 associates in 10 countries.

Superior Court Term Is Adjourned Yesterday

Superior Court, scheduled to continue through this afternoon, adjourned yesterday after a jury had upheld the validity of a last will and testament.

Judge Walter J. Bone terminated the civil term which had opened Monday. His action came after signing a judgment which ruled that a paper filed in the office of the Clerk of Superior Court was the last will and testament of Katherine Mills, deceased.

A caveat against the document had been filed by Bennie Mills, Jesse Mills and Mrs. Velma Mills Meeks, charging that the paper was obtained through undue influence, improper influence and duress. They charged that at the time the will was executed, in April 1951, Mrs. Mills was not capable of executing a last will and testament due to old age, disease, and mental and physical weakness and infirmity.

A jury responded to issues offered by the court by saying that the paper was executed according to law, that Katherine Mills had sufficient mental capacity to make and execute a will on April 2, 1951, and that the paper was the last will and testament of the deceased. The jury returned a negative vote on the question of whether the paper was obtained through undue influence, improper influence and duress. They also ruled that at the time the will was executed, in April 1951, Mrs. Mills was not capable of executing a last will and testament due to old age, disease, and mental and physical weakness and infirmity.

In another judgment signed yesterday by Judge Bone, Loan May of Greenville was ordered to give possession of three trucks to Guaranty Bank and Trust Company, executors of the estate of W. G. Scott, for subsequent sale and satisfaction of a ruling returned by a jury Tuesday.

In the case, the jury had ruled that May was indebted to the estate in the amount of $181.38 and that the estate was entitled to possession of the trucks. The trucks are to be advertised and sold, with proceeds to go toward settlement of the judgment and the balance, if any, to be turned over to May.

Camouflaged

ELIZABETH CITY, N. C. (AP)—The camouflage was too good. A group of Alcohol and Tobacco Tax Division agents were hunting liquor stills in Camden County. From a farm house they walked out to a hog-pen.

Behind the pen they found what appeared to be an old lane. Upon inspection, they found that holes had been dug in the lane, and into the holes had been placed small pine trees, intended to show that the lane had long been in disuse.

The officers marched through the little forest and 200 yards farther on found what they expected—the liquor still. They destroyed the 120-gallon capacity boiler and about 6,000 gallons of mash.

No arrests yet.

Bank Merger Is Formally OK'ed

ROCKY MOUNT, N.C. (AP) — Boards of Directors of the Peoples Bank & Trust Co. of Rocky Mount and the Bank of Edenton have approved a merger of the two banks.

This was announced today by W. W. Shaw, president and trust officer of the Rocky Mount bank, and John G. Wood Jr., chairman of the board and president of the Edenton bank.

The proposed merger is still subject to approval by stockholders of the two banks and the State Banking Commission.

The bank officials said approval of the merger would give this area a bank with $2,800,000 in capital, 30 million dollars in deposits and resources of 33 million.

The Rocky Mount bank operates its home office and four branches in Rocky Mount as well as branches in Nashville, Whitaker, Zebulon, Middlesex, Battleboro, Pine-top and Enfield. The Edenton bank has no branches.

The proposed merger of the two banks was mentioned yesterday at a meeting of the State Banking Commission in Raleigh. The commission postponed action on an application of the Bank of Edenton to establish a branch in Edenton. However, Banking Commissioner W. W. Jones said the proposed merger would have no bearing on the Hobbsville bank's application.

No Escort Today For Negro Pupils At Little Rock

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP)—Eight Negro students entered Central High School today without a military escort for the first time since they began attending classes at the previously all-white school a month ago under protection of federal troops.

The ninth student, Elizabeth Eckford, was absent, reportedly because of illness.

Yesterday the Negroes left the school without escort for the first time since soldiers arrived.

An Army spokesman said the procedure was "new policy."

As the Negroes walked up to the steps to the main entrance, three white boys met them face to face on the steps for a moment, then parted and let them through. There were several shouts from about 20 white boys who were lounging around the entrance.

More Rain For Damp Midwest

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

More rain dampened well-soaked areas in the Midwest and moved into eastern sections of the country today.

Strong northerly winds fanned cold air from the north central region south and eastward, causing a sharp drop in temperatures in some areas. The chillier air extended southward through Texas and eastward through the Great Lakes region and Mississippi Valley.

It was below freezing again this morning from extreme northwest sections of the Great Lakes westward through the Dakotas, Montana and northern Idaho. As the cold air headed south and eastward, readings dropped to the 40s and 50s in most areas, about 15 degrees lower than 24 hours earlier.
