At Launching Of "Far Side" Rocket In Pacific

Technicians prepare the pencil-nosed rocket known as "Far Side" just before it was launched into space Oct. 21 in the remote South Pacific. At right, the rocket is suspended beneath its carrier balloon rising over Eilatvok Atoll. The U. S. Air Force, which released these pictures in Washington, said the powerful missile was shot from the balloon at an altitude of 100,000 feet, and then rocketed to a height of possibly over 4,000 miles above the earth at a speed of 17,000 miles per hour. CHAPTER 18

Gil left the next morning. He didn't wear his fancy duds. When he reined his horse up outside the kitchen door and stepped down, he looked like any bronco buster hunting a job. He was even wearing Pa's gun instead of his.

Ma came out of the kitchen carrying a small canvas bag that jingled as she walked. Gil seldom had any money, although he hadn't been to town since Thanksgiving, so maybe he still had the $40 he'd won at the turkey shoot. I'd already talked to Ma about money because I knew my father had had about $200 left from the sale of our steers in the fall. That was all we would have until fall, and I'd told Ma before breakfast that she simply couldn't let Gil have it. I'd probably have to hire Kip Dance, and we'd need the money for his wages.

My first thought was that Ma was ignoring what I'd said. I felt a hot flash of anger, just as I'd had so many times when she'd done favors for Gil. I opened my mouth, and if I'd said what I wanted to, I'd have ripped the lid off. "This is my money," Ma said before I got a word out. "There's $104.2 I'll not touch, Gil, but it's all I've got, so make it last." She handed the money to him and he put it into his pocket, giving her that big smile he gave when everything was fine as silk for him. "Thanks, Ma. I'll bring it back with interest. You'll see. He kissed her and shook hands with me. "Good luck, Dave," he said as if I were the one needing the luck instead of him. "I'll be back next summer. Probably before roundup. You'll need a hand then."

He stepped into the saddle, left his hat to Ma with a grand flourish, and went down the lane on a dead run. He'll never change, I thought. I looked at my mother. She had her eyes closed; her hands were clasped over her breasts; and her lips were working. She was praying for Gil! He'd need her prayers, I told myself; he'd need the hand of the Lord right on his shoulder to keep him from starving to death. He'd blow Ma's money before he ever got out of Bull.

I stood there watching Gil as long as I could see him. As soon as he reached the county road, he turned left and pulled his horse down to a slower pace. I started toward the barn, filled with a sudden hot burst of rebellion. Gil could ride off and see the world, but I was the steady one who would stay home and keep the Big Ten going and take care of Ma.

Then the rebellion was gone. Actually I didn't want to see the world. If I'd had my druthers, this was the choice I'd have made. Kitsy would come home in the summer and everything would be different then. She'd be eighteen. She'd be free of Bess. I'd build another cabin so she wouldn't have to live with Ma. We'd have the life we wanted.

My father had said Gil wasn't the kind who'd appreciate a ranch if it were left to him. So the Big Ten was mine. Gil forfeited any right he had by riding off the way he had. Everything would work out, I thought, just the way I wanted. All I needed was time; all I had to do was wait.

Later in the morning Frank Dance rode over and told me there was going to be a meeting that night in the schoolhouse. I didn't want to go. Everything that was said and done would remind me of my father. But I had to go. The meeting was different from any I had ever gone to, partly because my father and Gil weren't there, and partly because Bess had nothing to say. I wondered if she was blaming herself for what had happened. Bess was the one who had decided we wouldn't stand for any Rafter 3 cattle wandering in the park. Bess was the one who'd shot a Rafter 3 rider. Because of that, my father and I had gone to town and Runyan's man Mort had been killed and Sammy Blue wounded.

And there was this business of Bess and Vic Toll. I didn't know what it meant. I couldn't even guess, but I didn't like it. Maybe Bess was selling us out. So I sat there listening to the wrangling and feeling sorry for Elder Smith, who had more trouble keeping order than I'd ever known him to have. Presently I was aware of something that bothered me. They all were afraid, all of them except Bess and Elder Smith. Fear, my father had often said, was more contagious than smallpox, and now I realized the truth of what he said.

Finally Matt Colohan got up and said right out what I figured most of them were thinking. "I've got a wife and a houseful of kids. I ain't much of a provider, but I'm better'n nothing. If I got what Joe Munro got my wife would be in a fix. Why don't we see how much Runyan will pay us and go somewhere else?"

Bess couldn't stand that. She got up, her big hands gripping the desk in front of her. "I'm ashamed of you, Matt. You run now and you'll never stop running. There's a Cameron Runyan on every range." She swallowed, and then she said, "We can't betray Joe Munro now. Or Herb Jason, either. My folks are buried close to Joe's grave. I'd rather be right there beside them than go crawling to Runyan."

Elder Smith said fervently, "Amen." After that I couldn't hear anything except our heavy breathing. I got up. "Matt, if you sell out to Cameron Runyan, I'll kill you. Herb Jason's widow could have got three times the price from Runyan she got from Pa, but she wouldn't take it. What's more, when I find out who killed Pa, I'll take care of him. I'm not going to wait on Ed Veach."

I sat down. Elder Smith said: "Dave's right. We're not quitting. Matt, let me remind you that your spread isn't the hot spot. If Rafter 3 makes a raid, Dave will be the first to get it, then Bess."

That was all he needed to say. Somehow he had contrived to make all of them ashamed. Johnny Strong got up and said as much, the moved we adjourn.

Afterward Johnny came to me and shook hands. He said, "Remember, I told you that you'd have to fill your father's boots. You'll do a pretty good job, I figure." He gave me a straight look, his face grave. "Thanks for saying what you did tonight, Dave." Frank Dance came to me, too, and shook hands. Then he said in a low tone: "I reckon none of us are gonna wait on Ed Veach, but if you find your man, don't take care of him yourself. A rope's the way to do it, not a bullet."

Ed Veach arrives to "investigate" Joe Munro's murder, and Gil returns to the park in Monday's emotion-packed installment of "Desperate Man."

The only private house in England which has its own postoffice is Holkham Hall, home of the Countess of Leicester. One of her early ancestors was Postmaster General.

MORNING STAR HOLY

Rev. W. M. Dixon, pastor 11:00 a.m.—Worship 7:30 p.m.—Evening Worship

WHAT'S WRONG HERE? A charming picture of a lovely little girl reaching for a Bible. What could possibly be wrong with that? Here's what! 1. The Bible is on the bottom shelf, hard to get at, which means the family doesn't use it frequently. 2. The Bible she's reaching for is written in grown-up language, too hard for her to understand all by herself. 3. The little girl is alone—and she needs help! Why should the Bible be on the bottom shelf, and why should this little girl have to seek its truth by herself? The Church stands ready to help your child—and you! It will help you to understand the Bible and its timeless message of God's undiscourageable love for you, your children and all mankind.

World Community Day To Be Friday

Mrs. Helen Sermons, President of the Greenville Council of World Women, has announced that World Community Day this year will be observed Friday, November 1, at 11:00 a. m. at the Immanuel Baptist Church.

The world wide theme will be "Bread, Freedom, and Dignity." The Rev. John W. Drake, Jr., Rector of Saint Paul's Episcopal Church, will be the speaker for the occasion.

World Community Day is one of three annual observances held under the auspices of the United Church Women of the National Council of the Churches of Christ in the United States of America. The other two are World Day of Prayer and May Fellowship Day.

World Community Day is a spiritual undertaking through which ten million women rededicate themselves to building life, friendships, and universal peace. This year United Church Women have a three fold purpose.

First, they will gather together to worship and study that they may have a greater understanding of the needs of emerging peoples for bread, freedom and dignity.

Second, they will present Parcels for Peace which will be shared with children and homeless men and women who as refugees are still in camps in Europe, the Middle East, and Southwest Asia.

Third they will participate in a positive program of sharing, for the offering will go toward the United Church Women's program for peace and for special self help projects in under-developed areas.

All worshippers attending the service on November 1 are reminded to bring their Parcels for Peace to the Church. A special request has been made for the following items - yardage of denim for workclothes, blankets, full size and children's, household linens, and all types of warm clothing.

Plans for World Community Day are under the direction of Mrs. J. F. Bowen Chairman of the Christian World Relations Committee. Assisting Mrs. Bowen are Mrs. R. B. Lee and Mrs. W. F. Moore.

GRUNCH COOKIES

Ingredients: 1 tablespoon butter or margarine, 1/2 cup coarsely chopped blanched lightly toasted almonds, 1/4 cup firmly-packed dark brown sugar, 1/4 cup butter or margarine, 3-4 cup granulated sugar, 1 egg, 2 cups sifted flour, 1 teaspoon salt, 1 tablespoon milk, 1 teaspoon vanilla.

Method: Melt 1 tablespoon butter over low heat in heavy skillet (about 8 inches). Add almonds and brown sugar. Stir often for about 10 minutes—sugar at bottom of pan will soften a bit and then harden. Remove from heat and stir a few minutes; turn out on waxed paper; when cold, crush fairly fine with rolling pin. Cream 1/2 cup butter and granulated sugar; beat in egg thoroughly. Stir in flour and salt until blended; mix in milk and vanilla. Drop rounded teaspoonfuls of dough, about 2 inches apart, on buttered cookie sheet; flatten slightly with spatula; rinse spatula occasionally in cold water. Bake in slow (325 degrees) oven until lightly browned around edges—12 to 15 minutes. Remove to cake rack to cool. Makes about 5 1/2 dozen cookies.

Rose High Girls Plan Skit For FHA Rally

By MARTHA PIERCE
Reflector Teen Writer

Using a red rose as a symbol of a girl's life, the Rose High F.H.A. helped present a skit, "Youth Looks Ahead," this morning at the District F.H.A. Rally. Participating in this skit from Greenville were Patsy Jones, Pat Barlow, Emily Staniel, and Melinda Coleman.

The stem of the rose represented the girl and the roots were symbols of her environment. The thorns were the troubles the girl will face in life.

Ann Moore, president of the local chapter, introduced the principal speaker of the meeting, Dr. Mulholland.

Christian Science Service

Man's responsibility for spiritual growth and progress will be brought out in the Lesson-Sermon entitled "Probation after Death" at Christian Science services Sunday.

Scriptural selections to be read include the following (Philippians 3:13-15): "Brethren, I count not myself to have apprehended; but this one thing I do, forgetting those things which are behind, and reaching forth unto those things which are before, I press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus. Let us therefore, as many as are perfect, be thus minded; and if in anything ye be otherwise minded, God shall reveal even this unto you."

From "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy will be read the following (29:12-13): "Universal salvation rests on progression and probation; and is unattainable without them."

A Hero Only If He Safely Lands

The Coast Guard's refusal Thursday to launch another broad search for Melvin West between Morehead City and Bermuda is understandable. The job had been undertaken once earlier in the week when West was overdue at Bermuda. He was found by a freighter less than half way to his destination, re-supplied and continued his hazardous journey.

No bones have been made by the Coast Guard of its disapproval of West's trip in the 15-foot outboard boat. The first search for West cost about $300,000, one spokesman said. Rear Adm. H. C. Moore, commander of the 5th Coast Guard district, asserted the search "resulted only in unnecessary jeopardizing service personnel."

We can't believe, however, that the Coast Guard has washed its hands of Melvin West. We can't believe it will not undertake another search if the adventurous disc jockey does not soon reach Bermuda.

Melvin West may become one of the long list of daring men who tried the impossible and found the odds too great. How many of his ilk lost their lives try-

No Objections To Broughton

By LYNN NISBET
BROUGHTON — Appointment of J. Melville Broughton Jr. as chairman of the highway has been generally approved by Capitol Square folks. No criticism or objection has been heard. There have been numerous comments about the obvious political angles, as contrasted with Governor Hodges' insistence that the highway setup was being taken completely out of politics. Many references have been made to the distinguished public service rendered by his late father as Governor and Senator.

It is recalled, also, that while there was close alliance between Senator Broughton and Governor Scott in 1948 and early 1949 just before Broughton died, young Broughton was assistant manager for William Umstead's campaign for Governor in 1952 against Hubert Olive whom Scott was supporting.

Consensus of sidewalk caucuses where the matter has been discussed is that Governor Hodges is astutely trying to bring into his official family recognized leaders or contact men in every faction of the Democratic party. Majority opinion expressed in these sideline discussions is that with Broughton as chairman, Elvey White of Wilmington, Lee White of Concord and Cutler Moore of Lumberton on the commission, it will be extremely difficult to support the claim that highway commission is non-political.

The promptness with which the vacancy occasioned by resignation of Col. William T. Joyner was filled pleased most of the people. Naming a new chairman within 24 hours precluded the kind of hassling that went on for months with respect to a commissioner of revenue, utilities commissioners and the State Ports Authority. The quick change also prevented any slowdown in routine highway commission activities.

JONAS — Because there will not be a President or United States Senator or Governor of any member of the Council of State to elect in North Carolina next year, major statewide interest centers on the congressional district races. That focus attention on the tenth district, currently represented in the Congress by Charles Raper Jonas, only Republican in the Tarheel delegation. Although there may be Democratic primary contests in several other districts, and rather close general election results in two or three, the tenth district is the focal point and Jonas, so far as the preliminary 1958 campaign is concerned, is the personification of Republican opposition to a solid Democratic front.

The grapevine telegraph brings word from the tenth that Jonas is being pressured from diverse sources. Many of his personal friends are urging him to try for the "roving" Federal judgeship almost certainly to be authorized by the Congress within the next two years. Many staunch Republicans in the district insist that he seek re-election to his seat in the national House of Representatives on the Republican ticket.

In recent weeks there has developed urgent appeal from a lot of registered Democrats who voted for him and Eisenhower in 1952 and 1956 that he seek re-election to Congress as an outright independent. The reasoning back of that pressure is that Jonas was elected three times by votes of people who stayed with the State Democratic ticket, and who now are more reluctant to be bracketed with the National Republican party in any area. It is fine tribute to Jonas that they still want him in Congress, despite his party affiliation. It is also an interesting sidelight on changing attitudes that many of his supporters have lost confidence in the Republican party and the Republican administration.

IMPROBABLE — Despite the fact that Jonas won all three of his elections to the Congress by vote of registered Democrats, and that he made his appeal on the basis of "vote for the man instead of the party," it is extremely difficult for anyone who knows him to think of him renouncing allegiance to the Republican party in order to keep a position of which he is becoming tired.

There is cumulative evidence that Charles Raper Jonas does not endorse some of the policies of his party, any more than Harold Cooley and Graham Barden endorse all the policies of the National Democratic party. Positive prediction is made that whatever office Jonas seeks, either by appointment or election, he will seek and accept as a partisan Republican — or let it go with the wind.

The tenth district congressman is now getting over his district, and has told friends he will wait analysis of information gathered on his tour before deciding whether to offer for reelection. His actions are being closely watched by Democratic leaders, because they see the tenth district as a weather vane forecasting changes in the state at large and to some extent an indication of nationwide sentiment.

Recent elections show that Charlotte and Mecklenburg, perhaps the whole district, can almost be counted in the Republican column. However, if Jonas decides not to run again the Democratic chances will be improved and the party nomination for Congress much more desirable.

ADD NOTHING NEW LIST—The Harvard Law Review reports: Nearly thirty years ago a questionnaire sent to college and normal school women graduates asked what things were most stimulating sexually. Among 409 replies nine said music; 18 said pictures; 29 said dancing; 40 said drama; 95 said books, and 218 said men.

ing to fly across the Atlantic before that evening 30 years ago when Charles A. Lindburg landed in Paris? How many lost their lives on Mt. Everest before a man planted a flag at the top of the world and lived to tell about it?

If Melvin West beats the gigantic odds he has fought for more than a week now—and we yet hope he will—he will be a hero who pioneered a new trail, accomplished a new feat, conquered a new frontier. If he is never heard from again, the currently popular opinion that he foolishly threw his life away will prevail. Until, that is, someone follows in his wake to prove that the ocean voyage in an outboard motorboat is possible.

Influence Of Brownell May Yet Fade Away

Few people in the South are reluctant to see Attorney General Brownell step down from his post as head of the Justice Department.

To many people, his name has become synonymous with the alarming strides which have been made toward writing laws of the land through judicial rather than legislative process. It is doubtful that Brownell's resignation from high federal office will change any policies in the Justice Department. The man who will succeed him has been his assistant for the past four and one-half years and apparently shares Brownell's views so far as the concept of unlimited federal power in every field of government, business and society is concerned.

Though Brownell steps down from his office as Attorney General, we have little doubt that he will remain one of President Eisenhower's top advisors, at least so far as civil rights are concerned. It has been, in our opinion, Brownell rather than the President, who has led the present administration far down the road toward creating a federal government which centralizes all governmental power in its grasp without regard to individual states. It has been the Brownell influence which has in a large measure charted the course of the Justice Department by sociological rather than legal points of the compass.

Though no immediate changes in Justice Department policies may be expected after Brownell steps down from his post, perhaps in time the Brownell influence will abate and the Justice Department will regain its equilibrium.

Testimonials Sound, If True

By ELMER ROESSNER
The testimonial technique is sound and sounder when it is truthful. William M. Freeman writes in "The Big Name," which is being published tomorrow. (Printer's Ink, 218 pages plus index, $3.75.)

Mr. Freeman, a business news writer for The New York Times, has rounded up just about every thing about testimonials in advertising. He describes testimonials that have worked and testimonials that have cost sales. Perhaps one of the most embarrassing of those cited by Mr. Freeman was a series showing well-known married women, happy because, as they were saying, "I love a man who smokes a Cigarillo." The day Joan Bennett and her husband Walter Wanger appeared in such an ad Mr. Wanger shot and wounded a man he accused of breaking up his home; the day after Errol Flynn and Nora Eddington appeared they announced their divorce, and the day after Lex Barker and Arlene Dahl appeared, they announced plans for a separation.

THE WAYWARD PRINCESS

Grace Kelly, he relates, allowed her name and face to be used in advertisements for Lux soap, attributing her complexion to that product. There is an interview, the girl who was later to be Princess of Monaco asserted, "Soap of any kind, Lux or not, never touches my face." Freeman does not report whether Lux demanded its fee back. Another classic: Red Cagle, West Point football star, said in an advertisement that the Royal portable was the greatest thing he knew in keeping up his grades. In a class of 266 men, Cagle was 232nd in mathematics, 207th in English and 277th in French. But he sure carried a good ball.

There have been many other boobies. Monsanto used the endorsement technique by getting washer manufacturers to recommend its "all" soap powder. Fels replied with an advertisement saying it did not pay anyone to endorse its product, adding that it was approved by Good Housekeeping. Mr. Freeman points out that the approval was an endorsement, and that the magazine was paid for its advertising.

BIG SHOTS AS ENDORSERS

Mr. Freeman found that Henry Ward Beecher, the great preacher, was persuaded to endorse Pears Soap; Sarah Bernhardt endorsed Gold Seal champagne, an American product, as equal to many French champagnes, and that J. Edgar Hoover and General Douglas MacArthur both endorsed Cyma watches.

The U. S. Navy is using an endorsement campaign to gain funds for Navy-Marine Corps Memorial Stadium at Annapolis. Norma Talmadge, Mr. Freeman relates, once endorsed 400 products in a single day. To get publicity for a new picture, her studio offered to have her endorse all products whose manufacturers would mention the picture in their advertisements. From morn to night in a New York hotel suite she posed with product after product, attended by a corps of maids to help her change costumes, a battery of press agents and a squadron of advertising men. The picture, "Breakfast at Sunrise," was a flop.

The Miss Rheingolds, who are continually saying, "My beer is Rheingold, the dry beer," do not always drink that brand. Mr. Freeman discloses. Some don't drink beer at all.

Mr. Freeman is opposed to testimonials that are not honest and those given by unqualified persons. He does not regard Boris Karloff, for example, as an authority on curtains — which he endorsed. The writer is also singularly undisturbed by the fact that testimonials often prey on the readers' or listeners' snob appeal.

Sound, constructive testimonials, he holds, are good advertising. In fact, the dust jacket of his book contains testimonials for it by Bennett Cerf, Carl Sandburg, General Carlos P. Romulo, Fanny Hurst, Ernie Kovacs and others. Mr. Kovacs says, "Now I know why Howard R. Corosowski uses Sussman's Acetylene Torches."

Mr. Freeman tells about a testimonial by a noted stage beauty many years ago. She was quoted as writing, "Dear Mrs. Pinkham: I have taken three bottles of Lydia Pinkham compound and feel like a new man." Mr. Freeman does not identify the beauty; a shameful lapse for a Times man!

Strength For Today

By EARL L. DOUGLASS
WATCH THAT BECKONING HAND

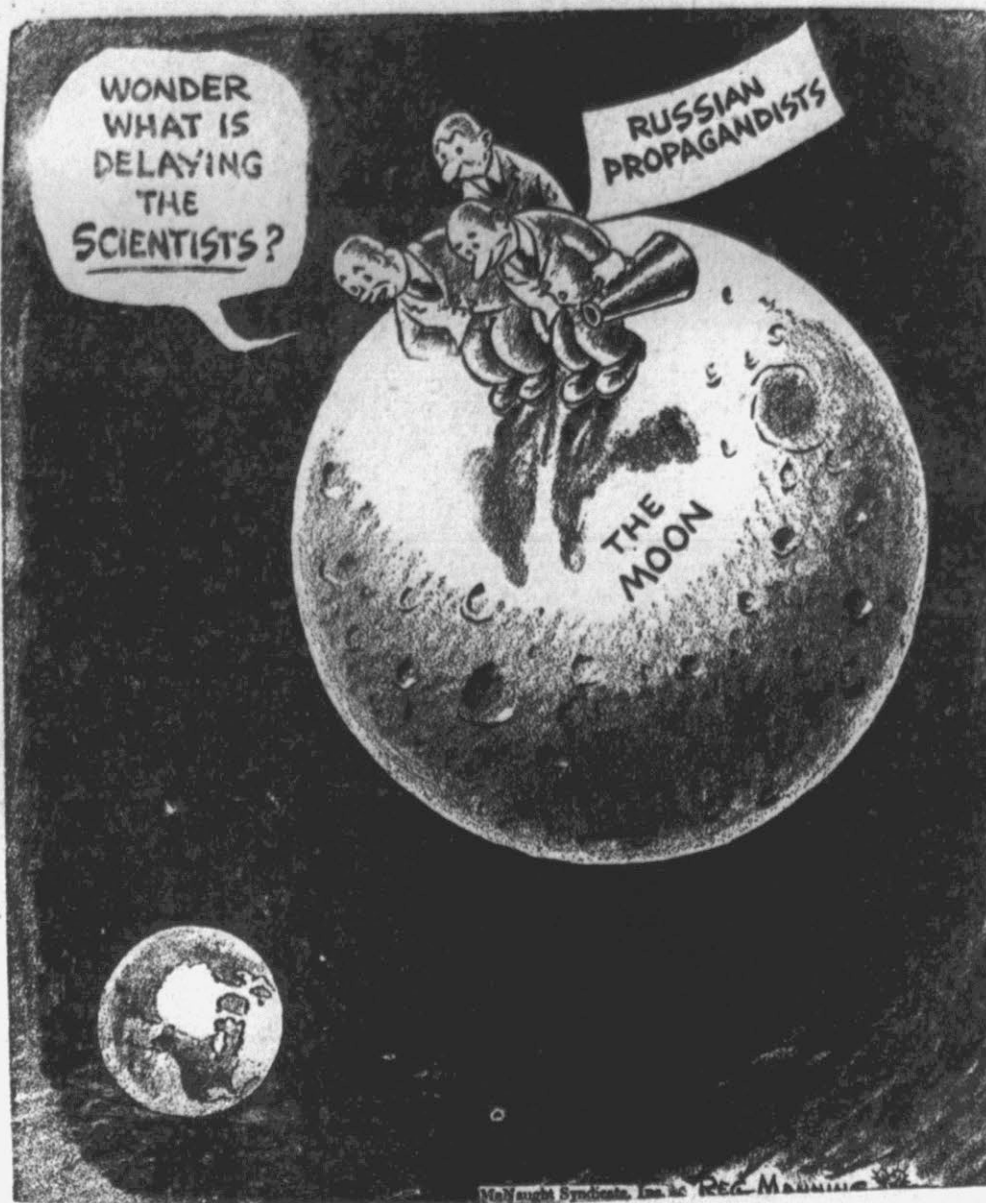

We would all have been very rich, happy, healthy, and almost everything the human heart can desire if we had just taken advantage of circumstances as they arose.

Look at this chap called "the self-made man." How is he different from other people? Not just that he has made a success of things financial, but that he has been alert to take advantage of circumstances as they present themselves. For we can be sure that round about us all the time are very real opportunities for us to better ourselves. We walk right by them every day and fail absolutely to see them. This does not mean that every chance to get in on the ground floor of some new investment is an open pathway to wealth. Not by any means. In fact, the people who build up fortunes seldom stumble on something that makes them rich overnight. Fortunes are made by the slow process of keeping going, slowly but persistently in the direction of progress.

Abraham Lincoln declared that he would prepare himself and the world would probably come when he and what he had could be used. That time did come. Whether your interest is business, professional skill, scientific research, book learning, or art, here is one rule never to forget: Opportunity beckons you oftener than you think. Be alert.

The Mountains' Season

Carolina's mountains are generally assumed to be doing their most colorful garb about this time of year. I don't know just what week marks them as being at their loveliest, because everyone who passes through the mountains at different times in the fall claim they saw them at their best.

I read somewhere that several thousand people were going up (and down) Grandfather Mountain last Sunday to see the sights; so the mountains are a magnet these days.

Over in the Great Smoky Mountains National Park the National Park Service is appealing to the bears in an effort to keep the animals at a safe distance from tourists. Their appeals to tourists haven't been altogether successful.

It seems the Park Service printed some cards captioned "Notice To Bears. Beware of Sabotage."

The message reads: "We want to warn you that certain humans in this park have been passing the biscuits and soda pop to some of your brothers. Keep your self-respect—avoid them. Don't be pawpered like your uncles were last year. You remember what happened to those panhandlers, don't you?"

Other Editors Saying-- Just For The Record

(Wall Street Journal)
News — and its emphasis by news media — seems, in the nature of things, much more often bad than good. We suppose it's that way because actually it's not news when one teenager does not knife another one. And ordinarily it is not news when one nation does not hoist a man-made moon until another nation does so. The fact that the second nation has not created a man-made moon immediately becomes news of the first magnitude.

Before we get too deep into this matter (you can see what editors go through) perhaps we had better not try to define news any further than to say again that there is both good and bad news. Certainly the American public has had its share of the latter recently, whether a man has been a stock market investor or a U. S. scientist building satellites or only a taxpayer watching the cost of Government going up, the news hasn't been very good.

So maybe worth mentioning is the report of Secretary Folsom of Health, Education and Welfare about the Salk vaccine statistics. Across the nation, paralytic polio decreased this last year by 80 per cent compared to 1955. Out of 28 million persons inoculated, only 63 cases have developed. Experts say the dread disease might even be wiped out.

Maybe we'll be called an unrealistic Pollyanna, and maybe we'll deserve it. Maybe it's just because we live in a neighborhood full of kids that sometimes we think Salk's scientific conquest pretty important, too.

NO APOLOGIES DUE (Anderson (S.C.) Independent)

"Not one of the nations ruled by Russia or considered targets for Communism can approach the Southern portion of the United States."

It's high time, thinks the Savannah Morning News, for America to come to its senses and stop apologizing for something that needs no apology — the South. "We have nothing in the South to be ashamed of so far as the people of other nations of the world are concerned," says the Savannah paper.

"Not one of the nations ruled by Russia or considered targets for Communism can approach the Southern portion of the United States in the degree of freedom enjoyed by people of all creeds and colors, in the standard of living available to all people, or in the accomplishments of the people of the South in the fields of economics, science and culture."

"Why, then should the South be ashamed? And why should our fellow Americans in the North and East be ashamed of us?" We agree that the South has been grievously offended by the apologists and "if any apologizing is in order, it is due to the citizens of the South."

Warren And Knight And Politics

By RAY TUCKER
WASHINGTON "Would you tell your readers," asks T. McD., of Glen Falls, N.Y., "the extent to which organized labor, including the Teamsters' Union, backed and contributed to the election of Earl Warren as Governor of California?"

Answer: Chief Justice Earl Warren wooed and won the support of organized labor every time he ran for office in his state. In fact, he conducted such a pro-labor and nonpartisan campaign that Republicans running for state or national office on the same ticket used to complain bitterly against his "lone wolf" tactics.

WARREN CAUTIOUS CAMPAIGNER He rarely appeared at Party rallies for fear he would be linked with fellow-candidates who were opposed by the labor unions. In almost every respect, he ran a one-man show.

His victories were personal achievements rather than Party gains. As a result, he did nothing to strengthen the GOP in a state which may soon surpass New York in national political power and influence.

CIRCUMSTANCES ALTER ACTIONS Ironically, Goodwin J. Knight, then Lieutenant Governor, used to complain bitterly, although privately, against "Warren's liberalism." In fact, Knight became the darling of the Conservatives and Union Leaguers. Now, with Senator Knowland as an opponent in the gubernatorial race, Knight outlanders Warren in seeking the union vote.

Most of the Teamsters' Union officials in California are Republicans. Therefore, it is assumed that they backed Warren. As a matter of fact, Dave Beck and Jimmy Hoffa supported President Eisenhower. However, no man can be held fully responsible for those who choose to support him with their votes, not even such a politically gregarious man as Warren.

"I understand," writes G.P., of Charleston, S.C., "that none of the Cabinet members or Eisenhower officials send their children to integrated schools at Washington, including the President's son, John. Can you enlighten me on this question, especially about Attorney General Brownell's youngsters?"

Answer: I do not believe that any Cabinet member, high Eis-

"These visitors mean well but they will ignore the signs. If they come too close, read this notice to them. They'll catch on after awhile."

This bit of advice is signed by the "Committee."

Oh yes, there's one extra note at the bottom. It reads:

"If you can't read, ask the bear at the next intersection."

The North Carolina Department of Labor periodically reports on city building permits issued by cities of over 10,000 population, and I never cease to wonder at the way Greenville booms right along.

Actually, I suppose our statistics would overshadow a right large number of cities considerably bigger than Greenville if state buildings and construction outside our immediate city limits were included.

By the time some of the projects in the business district are completed, Evans Street will be wearing a "new look," for sure. But, back to those statistics: In terms of millions of dollars, local construction permits for the first 9 months of 1957 totaled $19.9 million, a 9 per cent increase over the total reported for the same month in 1956.

My only conclusion can be that Wall Street regained some of its equilibrium after taking a look at this part of the country.

"Newspapers and lawyers have a lot in common. Lawyers, in the highest sense, are dedicated to preserving the individual's liberties in courts of law. The press is dedicated to preserving that freedom in the court of public opinion."—The Dallas Morning News.

Fakers In Art Beware

By RONALD THOMSON
LONDON (AP) — Leonard Koetser stared at the painting, then sighed sadly and shook his head.

At that moment, the value of the picture fell from $100,000 to $100.

Koetser had discovered another fake or worthless copy which had previously been attributed to an Old Master.

Three times in the past two years the Dutch-born London dealer has rocked the local art world with startling verdicts on costly paintings.

His judgments were bitterly fought by other experts at first. But each time they finally accepted his opinions.

Koetser, a burly, quiet spoken man of 50 with a grave smile, looks at Old Masters with a new eye and defies the world's greatest authorities on painting. If he feels they have made a mistake, that takes a heap of nerve in a highly competitive trade where dealers stand to lose small fortunes if they unwittingly make false claims for a picture.

Koetser, who operates from a small, bare studio on a side street off Piccadilly, claims he uses no special methods to evaluate paintings.

"When something is wrong with a picture, I feel as though I had run into a barrier," he said in an interview. "It's like a brake suddenly being applied."

"I sense a mistake. So I look again, carefully studying the quality of the paint, the draftsmanship, the detailed construction of an ear on an eyelid. Gradually I am able to pin down the faults."

"In one respect it is easy. One knows that the great masters are incapable of error. Therefore if one can detect error, the painting is not by a great master."

Koetser's name became front page news here recently over what has become known as the "Holbein Hubbleboob." The case concerned two portraits attributed to Hans Holbein the Younger in a Royal Academy exhibition.

Koetser went along to see the show and found himself in doubt about the authenticity of the painting and the descriptions in the Academy catalogue.

After much research and consultation with colleagues, he announced his findings that one of the portraits — of a former Archbishop of Canterbury — was a copy made by some unknown artist 20 or 30 years after the original was painted in 1527.

Koetser described it as a "very poor and worthless painting" worth about 50 pounds ($140) instead of the previous valuation of 60,000 pounds ($168,000). The other portrait — of a 16th Century English nobleman — was described by Koetser as the work of pupils studying under Holbein, not the master himself.

Koetser admitted that this portrait, nevertheless, had artistic merit. He said it was worth about 10 per cent of its previous valuation of 50,000 pounds ($140,000).

Members of the Royal Academy's selection committee later conceded the dealer's case.

The Holbein affair was dwarfed, however, by Koetser's discovery two years ago that Britain's august National Gallery had harbored a forgery for 20 years in the belief that it was a great classic painting.

The discovery paid him handsome dividends. It tripled the value of a grimy painting he bought at a London auction for 6,000 guineas ($17,640).

The picture bore a strong resemblance to Francesco Francia's "Virgin and Child," a 15th Century classic supposedly owned by the National Gallery and valued at about 20,000 pounds ($56,000).

Koetser decided his was the real Francia and the gallery's a fake.

Koetser took his find along to the gallery and invited experts to compare the two paintings. After a long argument and a series of chemical and A-ray tests, the gallery admitted that Koetser's painting was the genuine article.

Opinions In Brief

enhower official or John Eisenhower send their children to integrated schools. But the reasons, or at least the most important, are geographical rather than individual or personal.

Washington is divided into four sections — Northwest, Northeast, Southwest and Southeast. Two streets running squarely through the Capitol Grounds form the dividing lines.

CAPITAL SECTION WITH LITTLE SCHOOL INTEGRATION Save for a few fringe streets, although they are constantly invading this section, few colored people live in the Northwest area, where all officials have their homes. There is hardly any integration in the schools there, and, of course, few private schools accept Negroes. Thus, there is no racial conflict in the Northwest section as yet.

Another segregating factor is economic. Few Negroes can afford to live in the Northwest or its Virginia and Maryland suburbs, such as Chevy Chase and Spring Valley. Both areas have real estate covenants against colored owners and renters. Vice President Nixon lives in Spring Valley. Many key members of Congress reside in Chevy Chase, only a few blocks from my home. THERE'S MUCH IN A NAME. The following question may not be "of general interest," but it is one which appeals to me. Moreover, other readers may be in the same predicament as a youngster who signs himself "Confused." He writes:

"I am worried about my Social Security status and card. I have a stepfather, but he hasn't adopted me. I am now eighteen, and I have used his name since I was three or four years old. But I used my real father's name on my diploma from Junior High School. What name should I put on my Social Security card, as I am now starting to work?"

Answer: You may use whichever name you choose. Social Security tells me. But, once you have selected a name, keep it permanently to insure that you will collect Social Security benefits, when you reach 65 or become disabled before that age.

Also, keep every scrap of evidence—automobile registration and license, a few bills of importance, factory and employment records—to prove that you are the man possessed of the name on your Social Security card.

East Carolina Hosts Newberry Tonight, Indians Rated To Win

Starting Tackle Tonight

LARRY HOWELL—East Carolina's 245-pound sophomore from Monroe will handle one of the starting tackle slots tonight against Newberry at College Stadium. A two-way man, Howell will work both offensively and defensively.

Invaders Picked To Whip Winless Bucs By 2 TD's

Local fans get a chance to see one of the traditionally strong "Little Three" football powers of South Carolina here tonight when Newberry invades College Stadium against East Carolina.

Rated a solid two-touchdown favorite over the winless Pirates, Newberry will bring a 2-1-1 record to Greenville. Their record includes victories over Troy State of Alabama and Carson-Newman of Tennessee and a tie with the Southern Conference's Citadel, Lenoir-Rhyne of the North State loop has handed the invaders their only loss of the season.

East Carolina, having one of its worst years, goes into the game with five straight losses beneath its belt. They have dropped decisions to Richmond, Davidson, Catawba, Elon, and Western Carolina.

Invasory Strong Coach Harvey Kirkman's Indians are expected to whip the Pirates with a strong ground attack tonight. In their earlier games this season, they have shown an adept offense, depending on two fast halfbacks and a triple-threat quarterback.

Coach Jack Boone, however, is making some changes tonight, it is expected. The amiable Portsmouth, Va., native has worked hard in practice this week to re-shape his club into a winning unit and reports from the Pirate camp indicate that he will field almost a new team tonight.

Several of Boone's key seniors are expected to see alternative duty with some newcomers who have looked good in drills recently. It is rumored that Boone is devising a new twin unit system that may offer the Bucs more depth.

In this switch, Boone may send Ed Emory and Gary Pierce out as starting guards. Both boys have worked as second team men for the greater part of the season. Dickmonds and Ken Burgess, the regulars this year at that position, will probably be held over to strengthen Boone's second alternative unit.

Tackle positions will probably be manned by Larry Howell and Charles Cook. Howard Beale and Tommy Jones will get the nod at end. Lynn Barnett is the starting center.

Backfield Ralph Zehring, EOC's regular field-general, is expected to start at the quarterback slot tonight, but may have to share the work with Billy Skeeter and Stu Holland, a pair of good-looking freshmen.

Halfbacks tonight are expected to be James Speight and Tommy Nash. Boone is expected to use Brownie Salmon and Lee Atkinson, also at those slots. Fullback is expected to be Bobby Lilley. Boy Maynard, too, is expected to see plenty of duty on the alternative unit.

Bear Victory Could Tie Elon

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS Lenoir Rhyne can move into a tie with Elon for the North State Conference football leadership by winning at Western Carolina tonight.

Elon's game with Catawba has been canceled because of flu at Catawba.

Two other North State teams play outside foes. Appalachian hopes to get back on the winning track in an afternoon homecoming game against Emory and Henry. The Mountaineers won their first two games, but have lost their last three.

East Carolina, still trying for its first victory in six games, is home to Newberry of South Carolina in the first meeting between the schools.

Guilford has an open date. Lenoir Rhyne's Bears have won the conference championship the last two seasons, and two league games this season. However, the Western Carolina-Catamounts also have won their last two games—over Appalachian and Catawba—and suddenly have become a team to be reckoned with in the race.

Upset 'Nonsense' Halts As Miami Wallops Kansans

By ED WILKS The Associated Press The upset nonsense was stopped, but good, last night as Miami's Hurricanes pounded Kansas 48-6 in the opener of another weekend of college football.

It looked like the Jayhawks had their foot in the door, scoring in the first five minutes of play. But Miami slammed the door with a bang in a 21-point second quarter and breezed the rest of the way.

That left the job to Colorado, Northwestern, Pittsburgh, North Carolina State, Arkansas, Houston, Baylor, Illinois and Virginia if this is to prove another week of upsets.

A little guy named Fran Curci ran for a pair of Miami TD's and passed for another while quarterbacking the Hurricanes to four touchdowns in 15 minutes.

The Hurricanes, all square with a 2-1 record, gave up the Kansas TD when the Jayhawks partially blocked a punt and took over on the Miami 18. A personal foul moved the ball to the 3—and it then took Kansas three plays to get it home, finally counting on Wally Strauch's plunge.

The defeat left the Kansas with a 1-4-1 record. Their lone victory was a 35-34 Big Eight Conference decision over Colorado—the club that looked like No. 45 in top-ranked Oklahoma's record winning streak today.

None of the other powers appeared to have too much to worry about this afternoon, although Texas A&M and Notre Dame might have been a bit fidgety. The Aggies, shooting for the Southwest crown and Cotton Bowl bid, ran into Baylor while the Irish met Pittsburgh after a two-week rest from competition.

Elsewhere among the unbeaten it was Iowa vs winless Northwestern, Duke vs NC State, Auburn against Houston and Mississippi vs Arkansas.

Once-beaten Michigan State took on Illinois' upset urchins and Army, beaten only by Notre Dame, had what looked like a romp in Virginia.

Lost, But Sub Showed Fight

NEW YORK (AP) — Sometimes the loser can win, too. Game Gale Kerwin of Ottawa and Valley Stream, N.Y., found that out last night.

The transplanted, 22-year old lightweight, subbing for a sub against more experienced Johnny Busso, a ranking fighter, lost the unanimous decision but made a hit in his Madison Square Garden main event debut. The bout was televised.

It was a tight, lively fight all the way. Busso, 23-year old, ninth ranking lightweight contender from New York, switched the tide his way in the sixth round by flooring his hooking rival for nine with a right to the body, and a left and right to the jaw.

The victory for Busso sewed up a Nov. 29 date in the Garden with Paolo Rosi, fifth ranking 135-pounder. Rosi, of Italy and New York, originally was scheduled to meet Busso last night but he was stricken by the flu. Ernie Williams of Washington, D.C. then was named to sub but he also got bit by the flu bug.

Kerwin, 129, had the small crowd of about 1,000 rooting for him. He dominated the first half of the bout with thumping left hooks to the body and head but from the sixth on it was Busso's show.

Referee Teddy Martin had the fight even in rounds 5-3, but cast his ballot for Busso on points, 6-5. The general knockdown was the difference. Judge Jack Gordon had it 6-3-1 and Judge Bill Recht, 5-4-1, both for Busso. The AP card had Busso ahead, 6-4.

Eisenhower Attending 'Lightweight' Contest

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Eisenhower travels to the U.S. Naval Academy today to watch the first Army-Navy football game in the lightweight league—and to help raise money for a new Navy stadium.

Eisenhower, who played some football at West Point more than 40 years ago, arranged to leave the White House by automobile at midday for the 35-mile trip to the Naval Academy at Annapolis, Md.

He was scheduled to take his seat in the stands five minutes before the kickoff.

At this game, played by 150-pounders, old soldier Eisenhower is the Navy's guest. So his box is on the midshipmen's side of the field.

But around the White House, in advance of the game, there was some doubt among aides as to whether Eisenhower could keep from rooting for his West Point alma mater.

In this "little Army-Navy game" of lightweights both teams are undefeated this season. But Navy has played only one game and Army two. The Navy is a veteran competitor in the 150-pound league and has won the championship nine times. The Army lightweights are in competition for the first time this year.

This is the last game to be played at the Navy's old Thompson Stadium. Eisenhower is joining an expected 12,000 other spectators in paying $2 a ticket, with the proceeds going toward a three million dollar Navy-Marine Corps Memorial Stadium to be built soon.

Eisenhower has attended only one other football game since he became President in 1953. Earlier this month he was in Washington's Griffith Stadium when the Air Force Academy lost to George Washington University.

A week from today, the President plans to see the Army varsity team play Colgate at West Point.

In five football seasons as President, Eisenhower always has passed up the Army-Navy varsity football game, being played this year on Nov. 30 at Philadelphia. The word has been felt that as an Army man he couldn't be impartial—but that he also felt, as commander in chief of all the armed services, he should be impartial.

However, Eisenhower readily agreed to take in today's service game in the lightweight league in order to boost the Navy's drive for funds for a new stadium.

Tornadoes Dump Central In 26-13 Non-Loop Game

Victory Gives Ayden 6-2 Slate Against All Foes

AYDEN — Ayden's Tornadoes played host to Central high school of Elizabeth City last night and were quite unhostable. They kicked the visitors, 26-13.

The victory moved Ayden's overall season mark to 6-2. It was a non-conference game.

In the first quarter, Ayden, unable to gain, punted. Central's receiver bobbled the ball and shot Braswell recovered for the Tornadoes on his own 34. Five plays later, fullback Tommy Edwards crashed over for an Ayden touchdown. The extra point try failed.

Central took the resulting kickoff on its own 13 yard line and drove 86 yards right back up the field for its first score of the night.

The first time Ayden got the ball in the second quarter, the Devils scored. Coach Stuart Tripp's chargers worked the ball for 75 yards for the second score. Harold Worthington broke loose for a 21-yard run to the three to set up the touchdown and Clarence Mills carried over from there. Edwards added the point.

At halftime, the score was 13-6 in favor of Ayden.

Ayden took the opening kickoff of the second half and banged its way back up the field for 80 yards and a touchdown. Roy Salmon, quarterbacking the club, sneaked over for the tally. Edwards passed to Braswell for the extra point.

Central scored against moments later. The visitors drove 80 yards for the touchdown and got an extra point.

In the first play of the final period, Edwards took a pass from Worthington at the line of scrimmage and wiggled his way for 20 yards and another touchdown. The point was missed and the score ended 26-13.

Defensive standouts for the winning club were Dan Bateman, Ray Von Byrd, Barry Moore and Ken Harris. Worthington and Edwards were the big guns offensively.

Central's quarterback Ted Hassell was the top performer for the losers.

Next week Ayden observes its homecoming against Tarboro at Ayden. It will be a non-conference tilt.

Japanese Golf Artists Take Nine-Stroke Lead

TOKYO (AP) — Japan's Torakichi Nakamura and Koichiro, using their putters like wands of magic, shot into an almost unsurmountable nine-stroke lead over the favored Americans today. One round remains in the international Canada Cup golf tournament.

It appeared it would take a miracle for Sam Snead and Jimmy Demaret, the two tourney-toughened veterans of the U. S. circuit, to overtake the inspired pros of the host nation who show no signs of slackening their sub-par sweep.

Playing in occasional rain and stiff winds, Nakamura, business-like little Japanese Open champion added a five-under-par 67 to a previous brace of 68s for a 54-hole score of 203 which put him well in the lead for the individual championship.

His poker-faced partner, Ono, added a 68 to give the Japanese team an aggregate score of 414, nine strokes better than the Americans.

Struggling to regain the lead they held the first day, Snead and Demaret found the rain-soaked greens of the Kasumigaseki Country Club too puzzling for them. Each finished with a third round 71.

The American total was 423 for three days of medal play.

The Welsh team of Dai Rees and David Thomas, finding the gusty weather to their liking, moved into third place in the Canada Cup standing with a score of 428. Rees, captain of the British Ryder Cup team this year, shot a 72 and Thomas, youngest member of the British forces, a 70.

Par for the 6,895-yard course is 36-36-72. It played much tougher today.

South Africa, Australia and Canada apparently were the only other teams among the 30 nations competing with a look-in for either of the two championships. South Africa and Australia were tied at 429 and Canada followed at 430. Canada's veteran Stan Leonard had one of the best third round scores with 70. His partner Al Balding shot 71.

Pentecostal Holiness Church Winds Up Conference In Oklahoma City

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla.—The Rev. Joseph A. Synan of Hopewell, Virginia, was re-elected to his fourth term as presiding bishop of the Pentecostal Holiness Church at the concluding session of the week-long general conference here. This city was host to the 13th quadrennial meeting of the denomination's highest policy-making body, making the third time the general conference has convened in this mid-western city.

Synan becomes chairman of the general board of administration of the church, and in a decision to create four jurisdictional areas in North America the conference also elected four assistant general superintendents to assume some of the administrative duties to be delegated by the bishop. They are the Rev. Thomas A. Melton of Leaksville, N.C., from the Western North Carolina Conference; the Rev. W.H. Turner of Florence, S.C., a member of the North Carolina Conference; the Rev. Robert L. Rex of Oklahoma City, Okla., former director of the Home Missions Board; and the Rev. George A. Byus of Tacoma, Wash., a former missionary to India.

The Rev. W.W. Carter of Roanoke, Va., was re-elected to his second 4-year term as general treasurer, and Dr. R.O. Corvin, president of Southwestern College of this city, was also re-elected to his second 4-year term as general secretary. These seven officials form the executive committee of the church.

The Rev. W. Eddie Morris of Goldsboro, N.C., superintendent of the North Carolina Conference, was one of 32 annual conference superintendents elected to the general board of administration.

In a resolution adopted by the delegates, the constituency of the church was requested to "maintain a Christian spirit in dealing with the problems of integration."

Franklin Springs, Ga., was selected as headquarters of the denomination, retaining the publishing house at this site, also, following spirited debate in which efforts were made to transfer executive offices and other administrative functions to a new site in this city. Delegates from the southern states voted by a substantial majority to keep the headquarters at the present site. Plans were announced to begin construction of the first unit of buildings for executive offices and a new publishing house.

Other action taken during the session granted permission for local churches to vote pastoral calls for two-year tenure instead of the present annual assignment. A budget of more than $1,900,000 for general administrative operations for the quadrennium was approved.

Safety Film Is Shown To Club

A safety film, "Chain Reaction" was shown by Bob Lee at the regular meeting of the Exchange Club of Greenville last night.

The film was narrated by Bob Hope and showed a father hurrying down the steps in the morning and stepping on his son's skate at the bottom of the stairs. After taking a tumble the father hurriedly left the house and drove out of the driveway without looking, nearly causing an accident with a truck—two irritated drivers. The truck driver barely avoids having an accident at an intersection which makes another irritated driver.

The film also brought out other forms of driving that were unsafe, such as double parking, driver getting out of car on the street side, failing to give adequate signals, passing on a hill or on a curve, and following too closely.

The narrator reminded "a good driver is one who wants to be around to drive another day" and urged that "we start a chain reaction with an act of courtesy."

President Howard Moya reminded the members "Ladies Night" will be held December 6, at which time the annual Book of Golden Deeds award will be made. He urged all nominations for the award be sent to him before November 22.

'Around The World In 80 Days' -- After 700 Hours

BOBBY ELLWANGER AND HERBERT CARTER
... Plotting A Formation For Tonight's Show.

THE BAND'S LIBRARIAN AND COPYIST
... Copying And Arranging ECC's Band Music.

By JIMMY ELLIS
Reflector Staff Writer

Football fans, at least the dyed-in-the-wool type, believe Saturday games are a sort of anti-climax.

They know from experience that most games are won on practice fields. They are familiar with the six days of grunting, groaning, and minutely detailed preparation that football players endure before going into any single game.

Those same football fans may or may not be part of the growing crowd that appreciates half-time entertainment by bands as much as they do fast-paced action on lines of scrimmage.

What they probably don't realize, however, is that there is just as much grunting, groaning and minute attention to detail behind the band's performance as there is behind the football team's showing.

East Carolina College's 100-piece marching band offers a case in point.

At tonight's East Carolina — Newberry football game in College Stadium, the band will cram more than 700 man-hours of preparation into 11 minutes of the half-time intermission.

It's difficult to say exactly when work began on the program, but the question of where it began is no problem at all. It started in the mind of conductor Herbert Carter.

Carter, who has been boss of East Carolina's band since 1946, first offered his ideas about tonight's show to the band more than a month ago. He suggested a general theme of "Around The World In 80 Days" to the band's eight-member Maneuver Committee, which met one day in September with the specific job of planning a program for tonight.

When the committee got Carter's idea, it suggested a program framework that included stops in Paris, Hawaii and New York City. General outlines for each of the formations were mapped and returned to Carter for study of their practicality.

The conductor, who is not always an easy man to please, studied the plans with two things in mind: simplicity of the proposed formations and their direct relationship to available music. When Carter satisfied himself that the program was practical, the plans went in a couple of directions at the same time.

One of the stops was at the desk of the band's music arrangers. The other was in a workroom in the college's Music Building where drum major Bob Ellwanger began charting positions of every bandman during every minute the group was to be on the field.

The arrangers and writers, who have had tough jobs in getting music for programs, got a break with the show planned for tonight. They were able to get about half the music from publishers in time for rehearsals, leaving themselves only half as much work as they usually get.

Music which will be used tonight includes the song, "Around The World", which will be played while the band forms a giant balloon; a can-can dance number, which will accompany the band formation of the outline of Paris' Eiffel Tower; "Hawaiian War Chant", which will be played for a hula by the majorettes while the band forms an outline of a giant ukelele; and a callopie tune which will be played during formation of a king-sized hot dog.

Some of the music was available, already arranged, from publishing houses. The rest of it had to be written and arranged by the band's specialists in that field.

While the arrangers and writers were doing their work, Ellwanger was busy plotting outlines of the various formations. It's a process that's more difficult than it sounds, because he has to make the formations according to the band's ranks (seven members to a rank) which have been formed according to instrumentation techniques.

After the arrangers and writers complete their activity, they pass the finished music along to copyist J.C. Sykes who prepares individual copies of the music for every member of the band. He works with chief librarian John Lowery, who runs the duplicating processes for the music and also for Ellwanger's charts of the band movements.

When Lowery and Sykes finished their work, they arranged the music and charts in order for each of the instruments, and passed them along to individual bandmen. That's when the band, as a group, began functioning.

The entire group usually has on three rehearsals for any single program. For the one which will be presented tonight, they had a couple of extra rehearsals slipped in since East Carolina's football team played out-of-town last Saturday and the band did not make the trip.

The three rehearsal periods, which are limited to an hour-and-a-half each, consist of walking through the formations, marching through them, and finally going through a timed rehearsal (that took place yesterday afternoon). Any special music rehearsals have to be sandwiched into the field rehearsal periods and the usual practice for the band is take a few minutes to go over the music before they go onto the football field on rehearsal days.

None of the work is easy, especially since almost every phase starts from scratch and the band constantly looks for original ideas. They don't use any published formations or programs, preferring to make their own.

Cooperation makes it all work. The band is organized under Carter, of course, but students take a big hand in seeing that it keeps moving. Linwood Pittman of Rocky Mount is president of the group and he is assisted by vice-president John Lowery of Kinston and secretary-treasurer Shirley Naves of Asheville.

The officers are all members of the Maneuver Committee. Other members are Jack Pindell of Raleigh, Dottie James of Wilmington, Ellen Sturkie of Rocky Mount, Bob Ellwanger of Rockingham and Bill Speight of Roanoke Rapids. Speight, who is the band's military drum major, actually runs the band while it is on the field. Ellwanger, who does the fancy work as a drum major, assists him and also drills the majorettes who are Earlene Culliphern of Elizabeth City; Ellen Sturkie of Rocky Mount, Gayle Davenport of Portsmouth, Va., Doris Robbins, Shelby Jean Grady of High Point and Charlotte Fichette of Elizabeth City. Alternate majorettes, who attend every practice but who aren't guaranteed a spot in the football shows, are Judy Bledsoe and Barbara Pleasant, both of Raleigh.

"Outside" help, the term used to describe individuals who aren't actually members of the band, play a big role in preparation of music for each show. William Glasgow, director of the Farmville High School band, and Donald Hayes of Ecc's music faculty, have both done a lot of work in arranging and writing music this year.

Another "outside" man is Frank Fagan of Greenville who does the narrative portions of the half-time shows. Fagan does his work after obtaining copies of the general outline and formations and usually works with the band during at least two rehearsals.

Financial support for the band's football shows comes from the ECC Athletic Department, which gives the band sufficient funds to arrange their programs and, also, to make one road trip each fall with the football team. Props are donated by the college's Maintenance Department and Greenville merchants.

The cooperative element between all the groups will keep the show tonight from running any longer than 12 minutes at the very most. It will also keep the band from standing more than 30 seconds in any one spot, except during some of the formations, and it will limit movements from one formation to another to less than 15 seconds. Tying all the loose ends together is a tough job, not just for conductor Carter, but for every member of the band. It's also almost a labor of love for them, since they don't get any pay for it and students who are not music majors get only one hour of academic credit for their work with the band.

The bandmen take it all in stride, however, satisfied with the intangible rewards.

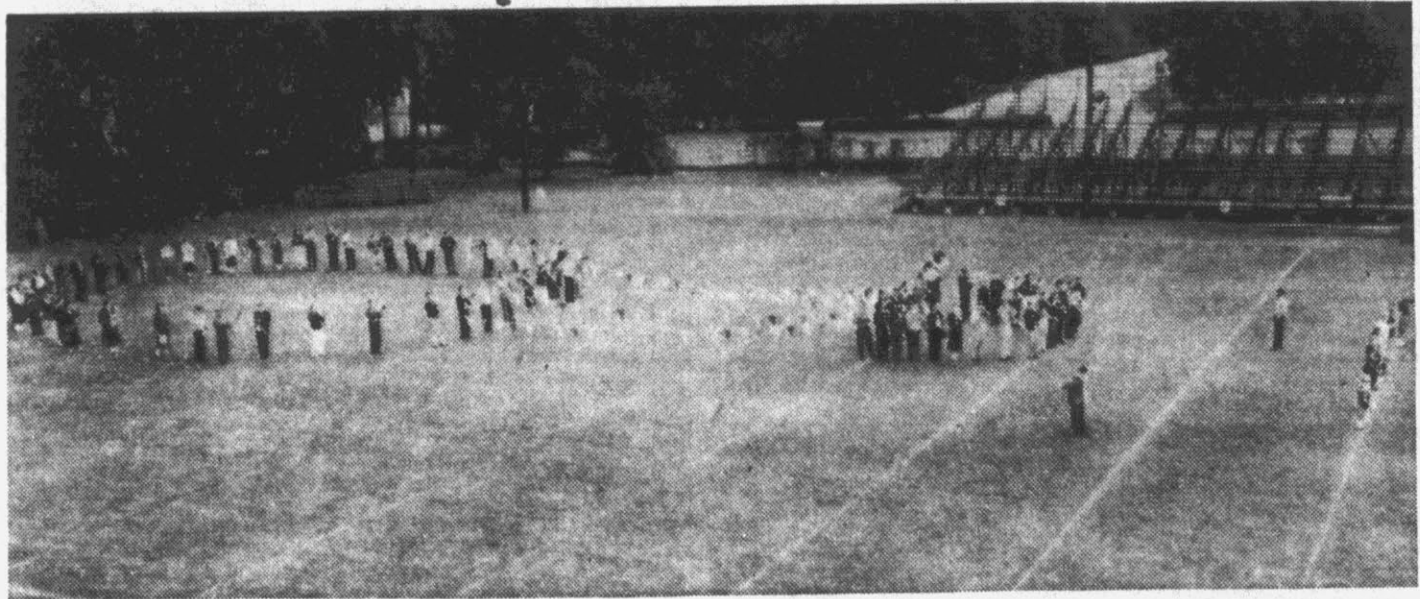

Their only wish is that some folks would realize there's a pile of work behind their few minutes on the field.

LEGAL STILL: Dr. Kenneth C. D. Hickman patiently waits for his vapor compression still (foreground) to turn salty brine into fresh water. The machine has a capacity of 500 gallons a day.

By TIM SMITH
 ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — The white-haired scientist waited for the ticking of the small, square machine to stop. Then, from a glass jar which was connected to the machine by tubing, he drew a glass of clear, odorless fluid and drank it.

Dr. Kenneth C. D. Hickman smacked his lips. "Not bad."

The fluid was plain water which a short time before had entered the machine as heavy brine. It had been purified in a vapor compression still Dr. Hickman designed.

No bigger than an automatic washing machine, the unit, as yet unnamed, is tailored for householders on coastal lands where supplies of pure water are slim or non-existent.

The unit can also be used, the doctor says, to purify polluted waters inland.

Completely Automatic
 An electrical pump maintains the still's supply of water. Inside, the impure water is passed through heat exchangers, rapidly whirling cylinders, changed to steam, condensed back to water and finally run into a storage tank.

When the tank is full, the electrical pump shuts off. When the purified water is used, the pump starts ticking again to replace the amount drawn off.

Two engineers from the Interior Department's office of Saline Water recently inspected the machine and called it the most promising of several vapor conversion processes now under departmental study.

Hickman expects the unit to find immediate use in nations around the Baltic Sea, in the Caribbean and along the U. S. Pacific Coast, all areas in acute need of good water supplies.

Household Version

It is a "baby" version of a large commercial unit which Hickman designed for the U. S. Department of Interior. The department is planning a test run for this in the near future at Wrightsville Beach, N.C.

The little unit was built in a laboratory owned by Aqua Stills, Inc., a Rochester research company established to develop the process. Hickman is vice president of the company.

Entirely automatic, the still uses less electricity than a home laundry machine and can turn out 500 gallons of pure water a day, Hickman says, about 100 more than the daily requirement of the average family.

Hickman says plans are under way to put the little still into production within a year.

Manufactured in small quantities, it will sell for about $1,500 but in mass production its price could be trimmed to $300-a unit, the doctor says.

Taking Offering For Temperance

Members of the Greenville Seventh-day Adventist church are joining with other Adventist churches across the nation today in taking an offering for Temperance education, Pastor Lyndon De Witt said today.

The local pastor explained that Seventh-day Adventists are total abstainers, and that their members neither drink nor smoke. "We have believed since our early history what the medical profession is teaching, that tobacco is harmful to the body, and that alcohol endangers the lives of others," he said.

Pastor De Witt deplored the fact that there are more than 4,500,000 alcoholics in our country, and that each year 346,000,000 man hours are lost to industry because of alcohol-related absenteeism and accidents.

According to the Yale University Center of Alcohol Studies, it is reported that the number of alcoholics in the United States is increasing at the rate of 250,000 a year.

Seventh-day Adventists, through their American Temperance Society, Washington, D. C. have set up Institutes of Scientific Studies for the Prevention of Alcoholism, which are held each year in Loma Linda, California; Geneva, Switzerland; Bombay, India, and at the American University in Washington, D. C. Through their publication, "Listen," they are also endeavoring to enlighten youth with the facts concerning the effects of alcoholic beverages.

It is to help finance these projects that the special offering is being taken Saturday, Pastor De Witt said.

Soldier's Statue Is Back In Place

APFOMATOX, Va. (AP) — The marble statue of a Confederate soldier is back on its pedestal here after a three-year absence and Sheriff David T. Robertson is the modern hero of this Civil War surrender ground.

The statue was toppled by Hurricane Hazel in 1954. It shattered and was carried away. Pleas by Robertson to have the statue replaced were met with indifference in newspaper columns caused by the turn of the souvenir pieces. After three years, he got all together with dental cement and the statue was rededicated.

Stock Market Is 'All Even' Again

By ED MORSE
 NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market was all-even by the end of this week after one of the most hectic five-day periods in history.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks closed at $156.70 unchanged from the week before.

But volume soared to 20,804,199 shares, the highest total since the week ended Oct. 1, 1955. That was the first week after President Eisenhower's heart attack.

Outstanding highlights of the week were two days, Monday and Wednesday. On Monday, stocks took their worst dive since Sept. 26, 1955, the first trading session after the Eisenhower heart attack.

On Wednesday, the market made its biggest one-day advance since Nov. 14, 1929. The latter was a day of temporary recovery following the blackest days of the '29 crash.

This was a climactic week in the long decline, now well into its fourth month, since the market reached its 1957 high on July 12. The tremendous volume, the repeated series of late ticker tapes, the almost frenzied scale of selling and buying on the heaviest days — these were the factors that spelled "climax" in the language of Wall Street.

It was a climax to a long decline — but what next? A strong recovery? A continued slide to new lows for the year?

The word among financial analysts these days is that the market must "test" the lows reached this week. If it sinks through them, the market theory calls for a recovery of from a third to two thirds of the ground lost since July 12.

After that, they say, the burden of proof will be on the bulls as to whether the market is to continue its upward progress. They point out that ever since the all-time bull market high reached in April 1956, the general trend has been downward. The highs have never surpassed that April '56 high. The lows have been increasingly lower.

There was no special news to send the market plummeting on Monday but rather an accumulation of the same kind of doubtful news about business and the economy in general.

There were further reports of cutbacks, "stretch-outs" and layoffs which underlined Wall Street's concern about tight money. The steel industry's operating rate slipped below 80 per cent of capacity.

Stock prices, already relatively low for new investors or short-term traders, began to slip. Selling began more selling. Despite the high margin requirements for stock purchases, brokerage houses began sending out calls for more margin. In distress cases, this margin was not forthcoming and these "weak accounts" were cleaned out.

On Tuesday a vigorous early rally washed-out by afternoon and prices slid off moderately, but it was a turbulent session with trading volume up to 5,000,000 shares, a two-year daily record.

President Eisenhower's speech that night in which he bade Americans banish "morbid pessimism" and announced his intention of making a series of affirmative speeches on the nation's economy, defense and scientific achievements was generally regarded as the turning point.

The market rebounded. The Wednesday advance, greatest since '29, brought an estimated rise of $7,200,000,000 in the quoted value of stocks listed on the New York Stock Exchange. This wiped out the losses of the two preceding days. The "confidence factor" had been restored with a vengeance.

The slight continued rise of Thursday and the moderate decline of Friday cancelled each other out. The market ended the week all-even.

Mother said "no visitors" to the nine youngsters.

Firemen said the mother had gone visiting.

They identified the children who perished as Rafael Villareal, 7; Olga, 6; Irene, 3, and Francis, 1. The fire was believed to have started from a kerosene stove, firemen said.

Over $1 Billion In Military Aid

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States shipped more than one billion dollars worth of military equipment to its free world allies in the first six months of this year, President Eisenhower told Congress yesterday.

In a letter accompanying the 12th semiannual report on the mutual security program, Eisenhower said the aid program helps "make military attack less likely" by contributing to a strong defense.

The report, required by law, said $1,100,000,000 worth of military equipment and supplies was shipped to free world countries during the period.

More than half of the deliveries went to Europe and the Far East, the report said. Slightly more than one third of the total was for ground force units and included artillery, ammunition and tanks.

Another one third went for aircraft and supporting equipment. The rest was for ships, communications gear and other items.

The latest total brought to 16 billion dollars the value of military items sent overseas since the mutual defense program began in 1950, the report said.

STAFFORD OLDSMOBILE CO. ANNOUNCES THE NEW 1958 OLDSMOBILE

Exciting styling changes that enhance the appearance from every angle mark a completely new Oldsmobile for 1958. In addition, the General Motors division is introducing a true air suspension system, newly efficient and economical Rocket engines and an improved Jetaway Hydra-Matic Drive.

The 1958 Oldsmobile will be on display, beginning November 8, at Stafford Oldsmobile Company in Greenville, N. C.

Oldsmobile's new "mobile look" is very evident in the entirely redesigned body, new rear quarter panels, a new front end with recess-type grille and four-beam headlamps, one-piece rear window with greater glass area and new rear deck and roof. The decorative trim on the side panels accentuates the length, flowing lines and low silhouette of the new Oldsmobile.

"The 1958 Oldsmobile has been completely and tastefully redesigned with distinctive and exciting styling. In fact, practically everything you can see is new," said Jack F. Wolfram, Oldsmobile general manager and vice president of General Motors. "We believe our new car is a fitting culmination of six decades of progressive product leadership, and is a fitting car to start Oldsmobile's next 60 years of progress."

Oldsmobile for 1958 offers three different Rocket engines in its three series of cars. The economy-priced Dynamic '88' series is powered by an engine with the new "Econ-o-way" dual carburetor and is rated at 265 horsepower. This engine, according to Wolfram, represents the greatest fuel economy improvement in Oldsmobile history. The Super '88' and '98' series both have the Rocket engine with quad-jet carburetor and developing 305 hp.

Available as an optional extra on all series is the J-2 Rocket engine with three dual carburetors and generating 312 hp. Compression ratio is 10 to 1 and displacement is 371 cu. in. in all three engines.

The '98' series has four body styles in 1958—two hardtops, Holiday sedan and Holiday coupe, a four-door sedan and a convertible. There are five body types in the Super '88' Series—Holiday sedan, Holiday coupe, four-door sedan, convertible coupe and Fiesta station wagon. The budget-priced Dynamic '88' Series offers a wide range of seven body selections—Holiday sedan, Holiday coupe, two-door sedan, four-door sedan, Fiesta sedan and convertible. In all there are 18 body styles.

Two Oldsmobile accessory innovations for 1958 are available to customers—a Trans-Portable radio that can be completely removed from the car for use elsewhere and a Safety Sentinel speedometer warning that utilizes both a light and buzzer to warn when any pre-set speed is being exceeded. The compact all-transistor Trans-Portable radio with its self-contained batteries and aerial fits in a conventional compartment on the instrument panel but it can be withdrawn to use away from the car. Both these accessories are optional at extra cost.

Oldsmobile's new 1958 styling starts at the four-beam headlamps in the front and extends to the new and larger taillights. Two headlamps are recessed and placed side-by-side in each front fender. The recess-type grille is composed of anodized aluminum louvers with a streamlined Oldsmobile emblem at the center. Rectangular parking lights are integrated in the outer ends of the massive and protective front bumper.

Horizontal trim strips sweep the length of the front fenders and through the rear quarter panels and fenders. A thin roof line accents the low silhouette. The rear window is a single pane of glass with up to 28 per cent more area. Distinguishing the long rear fenders are flowing twin blades of chrome atop each fender-crown.

Oldsmobile's New-Matic Ride is optional at extra cost on all series. This true air suspension system cushions the car on four chambers of compressed air, one at each wheel, to create an ultra-smooth ride, with less driver and passenger fatigue, according to Wolfram. It eliminates completely any conventional leaf, coil or torsion-bar spring units with metal-to-metal contacts.

Oldsmobile's unique air-ride design is a "closed" system. When new air is required, moisture, oil-vapor and dust are eliminated by a special air filter and oil filter which enable the valves to function properly under all operating and weather conditions.

The New-Matic system also incorporates a unique leveling feature achieved with special height control valves that instantaneously and automatically adjust the pressure in the air springs to compensate for any change in the load or the road. When the car is heavily loaded, the height control valves send additional air into the springs, "pumping them up" to keep the car from sagging. When the car is lightly loaded, the height valves release air from the air springs, keeping the car level and preventing the front or rear from "riding high."

In adopting the four-beam headlamp system, Oldsmobile is making functional use of all four precision-aimed lamps for downward-lighting. The outboard lamp on each side provides the low or passing beam. Both the outboard and inboard lamps on each side combine to provide the high or driving beam.

Interior styling of the 1958 Oldsmobile matches the striking new exterior appointments. The Super '88' and '98' Holiday models present a new "star-light" headlining of sponge vinyl in light colors to set off the "fashion-flair" upholstery offered in a variety of colors and fabrics. Among the nine fabrics available is a three-dimensional puffed nylon cloth that affords greater passenger comfort, offered on several Holiday models.

Don't forget, see the new 1958 Oldsmobiles Friday, November 8, at Stafford Oldsmobile Company, Greenville, N. C.—(Adv.)

An Education For The Judge

BOSTON (AP) — Municipal Court Chief Justice Elijah Adlow had discovered what a "cuff list" is.

The occasion was the case of Charles DiFranco, who police said had in his possession $238, 13 betting slips and a cuff list.

The judge fined DiFranco $50 after it was explained the list was a roster of customers who operate strictly on credit.

Confusion Over His Report Card

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Leo Marshall, Jr., 7 year old son of the chief traffic controller at International Airport here, reported that he got "131 and 8" on his report card.

The elder Marshall had discovered his son checked and given his days present and absent.

Producing New Version Of Dollar Bill

WHERE IT COMES FROM: With roughly $2,000,000 stacked like cordwood in the foreground, Bureau of Engraving printers operate the new government rotary presses which can turn out bills nearly four times as fast as the old ones.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States is putting out a new dollar bill.

And the new bills are being run off on presses that—among other things—can turn them out nearly four times as fast as the old machines.

Well over 25 million dollars worth of the new bills already are in the channels of distribution. As worn and tattered dollars are returned to the Treasury Department, the new version of the U. S. dollar gradually will take over in the marketplace.

Few people will note the difference. The biggest innovation on the 1957 dollar is the addition of the phrase "In God We Trust." A 1955 Act of Congress required that all future paper currency carry this motto, which already appears on U. S. coins.

The bills also carry the signature of the new secretary of the Treasury, Robert B. Anderson, and the series date 1957 — which doesn't indicate the year of print but does date the latest-change in design.

The effect of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing's new presses also will be detectable to numismatists. The new presses can reproduce the required fine-engraving work on dry paper. With the old presses, damp paper was used and the bills shrank slightly in the drying process.

Since the dry process eliminates this shrinkage, George Washington's face will be slightly fuller on the new bill, although its buying power is moving in the opposite direction.

The rapidly circulating everyday dollar has an average life expectancy of only 13 months. More than a billion dollar bills are retired annually and literally go up in smoke in what is undoubtedly the most closely watched fire in the nation.

Cites Tourist Values In N. C. Historical Sites

SMITHFIELD, N. C. (AP)—Restoration and preservation of North Carolina's historical sites could bring a $2 million dollar annual boost to the state's tourist industry, Dr. Christopher C. Crittenden, director of the State Department of Archives and History, declared today.

Crittenden said that development of historic sites from the mountains to the coast with tours arranged could bring a million additional visitors to the state annually. An average expenditure of $14 per day and an average stay of three days, he added, "that's $42 million dollars." He said he considered the figure "conservative."

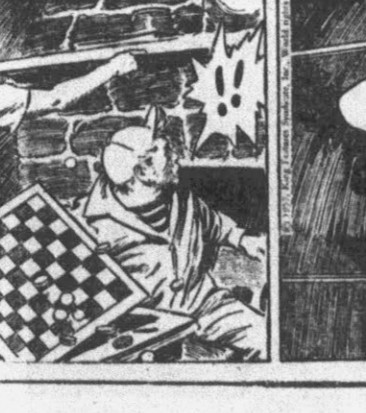

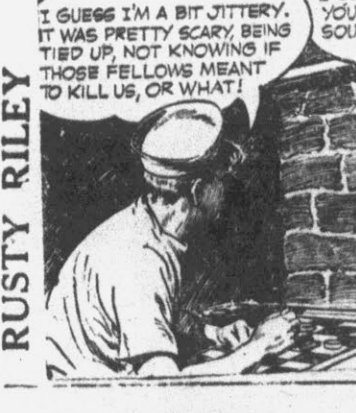

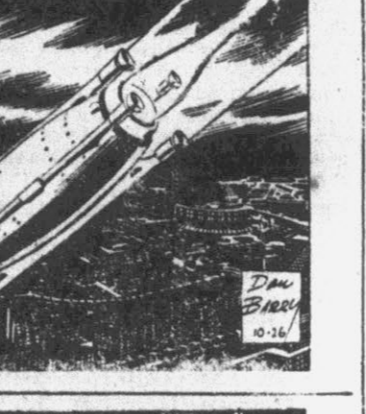

Crittenden told of plans for the restoration of Bentonsville Battleground, which the press group visited yesterday. The site of the Civil War battle, largest ever fought in North Carolina, was acquired recently for restoration.

He said plans call for restoration of the old Harper House on the battleground, the preservation of trenches and gun emplacements, marking of the battlefield and construction of a museum which would tell the story of the battle.

And, said the governor, income from tobacco is off 150 million dollars this year from last. He said he spoke of the agricultural problems of the east "with grave concern and with only one purpose in mind—to inform all of our people of the seriousness of these problems, and to find some solution which will help the farm people affected to find new and better sources of income."

"I firmly believe that there is a tremendous future for Eastern North Carolina both as an agricultural area for diversified farming and for industrial growth and expansion of all kinds," Hodges declared.

Last night the newspapermen heard Gov. Hodges say that the economic problem of Eastern North Carolina can be stated in one sentence: "It relies too heavily on tobacco for its income."

Rockets Could Not Be Satellites

WASHINGTON (AP)—On the basis of available information, the research rockets fired by the Air Force in "Operation Far Side" could not become satellites. They apparently were fired straight up.

In launching a satellite, the rockets which sling-shots it into space first rises straight up. Its flight is then controlled so it curves, and flies parallel to the earth at a pre-selected altitude.

When the final rocket fires, it shoves the baby moon forward, then lets it go. The speed is critical if the final stage rocket or satellite are to keep going with no more push.

If the moon or final stage rocket are sent forward at only 10,000 miles an hour, gravity pulls them back to earth. If the moon or rocket are shot at 18,000 miles per hour, they get in balance with gravity. Gravity tries to pull them back, but only succeeds in making them curve around the earth.

The Air Force has emphasized the Far-Side firing was not an attempt to place a satellite in space and has no relation with that program. The rockets apparently were designed to ascend straight up and then fall back through the earth's atmosphere—possibly burning from aerodynamic friction.

Scientists said that until accurate data on the speed of the rocket, its direction in relation to bodies outside the earth such as the moon, and other material are available it will be impossible to suggest the fate of the rockets.

SELFISH COCKER
 CLINTON, Okla. (AP)—L. T. Bruce found out that dogs are as selfish as humans.

When his grandson came to visit, he brought along his beagle puppy. The neighbor's cocker saw the beagle and promptly gathered up his playthings including two rubber balls, two rubber mice and a leather watch band, and laid down on top of them.

DOG WARDEN Robert Mills rounded up several strays and placed them in a cage on his truck. Then spotted a Great Dane.

Trying to get the dog into the truck, Mills found there was too much Dane and not enough cage. As he pushed and pushed, the other dogs squeezed out of the cage and took off. With them went the Great Dane.

Knight Silent As To His Plans

By MORRIE LANDSBERG
 SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP)—Gov. Goodwin J. Knight kept a lot of people guessing today on whether he'll stick with his 1958 political plans.

Would he step out as a candidate for re-election rather than buck Sen. William F. Knowland for the Republican nomination? Just a couple weeks ago, the Republican governor emphatically denied he would withdraw from the race in order to avoid a bitter clash in the GOP primary next June.

But yesterday, still confined to the executive mansion after a siege of flu, he chose to remain silent on the latest open speculation offered up by Rep. Patrick J. Hillings (R-Calif.) at a San Francisco news conference.

The Arcadia Congressman, a close friend of Vice President Nixon, on expressed belief Knight may run instead for the U.S. Senate or accept a federal appointment.

Did Knight's "no comment" mean there was something to Hillings' assertions?

Tom Bright, the governor's press secretary, said he knew of no change in plans. Then why didn't Knight bother to knock down the withdrawal talk? Bright came around with a formal press release:

"The governor probably will be in the office by Monday. There will be no statement on the political situation before that time."

If Knight-Knowland showdown is avoided it will save Vice President Richard Nixon the possible embarrassment of having to choose sides in his home state's primary contest.

Embezzling Of Meter Money

WINTON-SALEM (AP)—Two city employees have been charged with embezzling $200 in parking meter collections.

One, William Esmond Flynn Jr., 33, a bookkeeper in the finance department, has been with the city for 13 years.

The other, Harvey Clay Stanfield, 22, a parking meter collector, has held his job 19 months. They are free in bond of $1,500 each for arraignment in Municipal Court Monday.

Trying to get the dog into the truck, Mills found there was too much Dane and not enough cage. As he pushed and pushed, the other dogs squeezed out of the cage and took off. With them went the Great Dane.

Ace Director Prefers To Take Chances In Movies

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Want to know the difference between the movies and television today? The movies can take chances. TV won't.

The issue was brought into focus as I talked to Frank Tashlin, one of the brightest new directors in films. With his keen comedic sense, he has been sought after by the TV moguls. But he has resisted the overtures.

"I'd rather do movies," he said. "Why? Because it's more fun. You can take chances with movies nowadays. The films have to fight for a public, and that means we've got to give them something new and exciting."

"This is something recent. Five years ago, I never could have gotten away with some of the wacky things I had in 'Will Success Spoil Rock Hunter?' But now if you've got ideas, they'll give you free rein."

"In television, you have to play everything safe. TV has entered its middle age. Movies have passed it and I guess they're in a second childhood."

Tashlin's remarks are incisive. While hard on the stockholders, the movie depression has been a good thing for creativity. TV performed the service of wiping out massive mediocrity in the picture business. The B picture has been virtually killed, except for exploitation films like those dealing with monsters and teen-agers (no parallel intended).

Each picture has to stand on its own now. And it's got to be good! Now let's take a look at TV.

Task. Television is suffering from hardening of the creative arteries. And at such an early age! You don't have to be an olderster to remember when TV was exciting. New comics—and some of the old ones—were presenting fresh comedy. Bright young playwrights were taking chances on offbeat themes. TV cameras were roving the country to catch news being made.

But now everyone has an eye to the ratings. The question is no longer: "Is the show fresh and original?" It is: "Can we get a big audience?"

The result is a constant watering-down, a mediocre sameness that makes oldtime B movies seem like sterling attractions.

No wonder real creators like Frank Tashlin are sticking to the movies.

Educational Television Is Getting Fresh Help

By CHARLES MERCER

NEW YORK (AP)—Educational television stations, long the financially poor nephews of the TV channels, are receiving some worthy aid this year.

While 252 educational channels have been reserved by the Federal Communications Commission, only 31 are in operation. Lack of money is the chief reason.

There are many indications that the viewing public is interested in education. For example, the quiz shows "A Better Example," "Sunrise Semester" over CBS-TV's New York station. Many viewers have been rising at 6:30 a.m. and several hundred have paid a $75 entrance fee to get college credits in comparative literature.

Now NBC-TV is resuming its educational television project, begun last season. On Monday it will begin sending out live to the nation's educational stations the first of five new program series—free to the stations. The production cost—$750,000—is shared equally by the network and the Educational Television and Radio Center at Ann Arbor, Mich.

Of further encouragement to educational TV is an announcement by a new group called ONSET (Organization for National Support of Educational Television). With the aid of a grant from a drug company, ONSET has produced its first TV program series called "World of Medicine." First showings begin this month over educational stations.

SAYS LONGEVITY COULD BE 'CURSE'

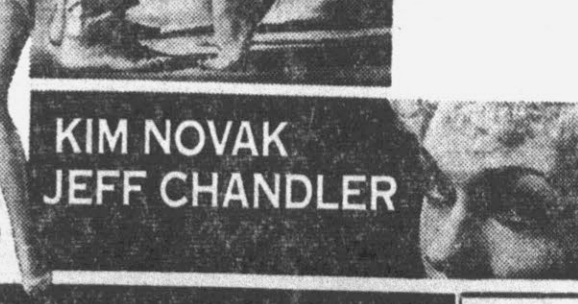

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—Medicine's success in prolonging life may "become a curse rather than a blessing" unless people's minds and personalities are also preserved, says a leading psychiatrist.

Dr. Edward A. Strecker, professor emeritus of psychiatry at the University of Pennsylvania School of Medicine, said yesterday that preserving the mind and personality is "infinitely more precious than the body." He noted that many old people have sound bodies but are forgetful, lack interest in their surroundings, and suffer from infirmities due to deterioration of parts of the brain.
