Better Outlook

Pitt County's flu situation took a definite turn toward a brighter outlook today, particularly in the Greenville City Schools.

Superintendent J. H. Rose said this morning the city's nine schools reported a total of 951 absences today, nearly 300 less than Friday's record total of 1,230.

He noted, however, that absences are increasing in Wahl-Coates and West Greenville Schools, and "holding steady" in Third Street and Elmhurst Schools.

A "moderate increase" in the county's overall total was reported Friday to the State Board of Health by Dr. Joseph D. Franzoni, acting director of the Pitt County Health Department.

Police Hint At Progress In Hunt For Gang Killers

NEW YORK (AP)—Albert Anastasia, the cold-blooded executioner of Murder, Inc., will be buried today in a Brooklyn cemetery.

Although he was a Roman Catholic, no mass will be said for him and he will not be interred in consecrated ground.

As the 55-year-old hoodlum is put to rest in Greenwood Cemetery, police continue their search for the two gunmen who shot Anastasia dead as he sat in a hotel barbershop chair here Friday.

Yesterday Anthony Coppola, Anastasia's paunchy chauffeur-bodyguard, was held in $50,000 bail on a vagrancy charge.

Police described him as uncooperative. They are trying to find out why he was not with Anastasia when the mobster was killed.

Coppola, 49, was told of his boss' death Friday at Coppola's home in Fairview, N. J. He has given conflicting stories on where he was that morning.

The erstwhile bodyguard was charged specifically with "having no visible means of support and who has given several conflicting answers as to the location of his legal residence and who states he maintains himself partially from proceeds of successful bets and wagers on horse races."

Last night, Chief Inspector Thomas A. Wilson gave the first indication that police may be making progress in their search for Anastasia's assassins.

"I think we're making a little headway in the case," he told reporters. He refused to amplify the statement.

Police have not publicly stated a motive for the killing. Some officials, however, believe that young gangsters, seeking to climb the underworld ladder, may have a hand in the slaying.

No witnesses were brought in for questioning yesterday.

Departing Aide Accepted Auto From King Saud

WASHINGTON (AP)—Victor Pursue, outgoing State Department protocol aide, said today he accepted a gift car from King Saud to avoid appearing unfriendly.

Pursue, who is stepping out as deputy chief of protocol in a feud with his superior, confirmed reports that King Saud of Saudi Arabia gave him his family a 1957 Oldsmobile last June.

"I was overwhelmed at all the publicity," Pursue said. "I thought everybody knew about it. It was certainly no secret. And I cleared it with the State Department's legal division."

Pursue escorted Saud during the Middle East monarch's visit with President Eisenhower last January. Saud took Pursue back to Saudi Arabia for several weeks.

Sputnik Silent; Trackers Redoubling Efforts

WASHINGTON (AP)—Russia's pioneer earth satellite spun silently in space today as world scientists redoubled efforts to track the orbiting sphere by visual and other means.

Radio Moscow announced meanwhile that still another satellite—this one carrying a space traveling dog named Kudryavka—will be launched in the near future.

Sputnik No. 1's beeps and buzzes died away Saturday, three weeks after the first man-made moonlet was launched into its 18,000 m.p.h. orbit around the world.

Melvin West Is Found, Taken Up By Coast Guard

MOREHEAD CITY, N. C. (AP)—"Thank God it's over with." That was Barry West's reaction early today to the news that his son, Melvin West, was safely aboard a Coast Guard cutter bound for Bermuda.

Coast Guard officials here reported Melvin West was tired, but in good condition. Officials said the Coast Guard cutter Rockaway pulled alongside West at 11:43 p.m. yesterday and had both man and outboard motor boat aboard by 105 a.m. today.

The cutter was expected to make Bermuda at 12:30 p.m. today.

It was the disappointing end of a long trip for West.

The 26-year-old disc jockey set out from Morehead City 11 days ago with high hopes of crossing 580 miles of open ocean in his 15-foot outboard motor boat in 40 hours.

West, who named his boat "The Impossible," wanted to prove to the world that the experts were wrong when they said outboard motors were not made for ocean travel.

Even when he was spotted out of gas and drifting in heavy waves 165 miles from Bermuda yesterday, West wasn't ready to give up. A Coast Guard plane dropped him a walkie-talkie and asked him how he was.

West replied he had only half a cup of water, four chocolate bars and no gas. But he said he felt fine, although rather tired. He asked for enough gas to finish his voyage to Bermuda. "I'm good for two or three days more," he said.

The Coast Guard pilot said that West seemed "mighty glad we found him." The pilot said West radioed:

"If you had passed me by I don't know what I would have done."

But West soon perked up and requested more gasoline.

The Coast Guard said no. The plane dropped emergency rations and told West to sit tight.

When 51-year-old Barry West learned of the exchange yesterday afternoon, he put aside his own anxiety and went to bat for his son. He wired $100 to Bermuda to hire a private plane to fly gasoline to West.

"I'd like 'or him to finish the trip if it won't jeopardize his life," said the father. "He showed wonderful ability to handle a small boat and his navigation was pretty good. He was on course."

Even West's wife agreed. "He was determined to make it and I just couldn't stand to have him try it all over again," she said, adding that she wanted him to finish this time and get it out of system.

Morehead City residents began a collection to help buy gas for West.

But the plan was blocked when word came from Bermuda that no available plane had a long enough range to reach West with gasoline and return to Bermuda.

Then Barry West asked his son to give up.

The worried father asked Coast Guard officials to relay this message to his son:

"Melvin: We feel you have proven your point. We have exhausted every means of getting you gasoline to proceed on. Please cooperate with the Coast Guard and go into Bermuda. Signed, your father."

Coast Guard authorities said they spent $300,000 searching for young West at his father's request early last week. That search ended Tuesday when a merchant vessel found West.

When Barry West asked the Coast Guard to start another search for his son last Thursday, authorities refused to do so. But they did tell planes on training flights to keep an eye out for West.

West, a Korean War veteran with 10 per cent disability from a stomach ailment, has three children.

The man who named his boat "The Impossible" wanted to prove to the world that the experts were wrong when they said outboard motors were not made for ocean travel.

Even when he was spotted out of gas and drifting in heavy waves 165 miles from Bermuda yesterday, West wasn't ready to give up. A Coast Guard plane dropped him a walkie-talkie and asked him how he was.

Change Of Command

WASHINGTON (AP)—Westerners expressed belief today Marshal Georgi K. Zhukov has been downgraded in a Communist party move to assert its full authority over the armed forces.

Some observers said Zhukov might be shunted off to a political job, leaving Nikita Khrushchev as the unchallenged big boss of Soviet domestic and foreign policies.

The curt announcement Saturday that Zhukov was "relieved" as defense minister created the impression among Western observers in Moscow that the Russian war hero was being shunted aside, whatever new position he might get.

Much speculation centered about the possibility that Zhukov would turn up soon in the post of a first deputy premier. While this would be a respectable high government position, it would give Zhukov little real authority.

Correspondents found it easy to clear with the censors as well as to predict that Zhukov would be divorced from the armed forces and be appointed a first deputy premier.

Another speculative gambit passed by Moscow censors is that the post of Russian ambassador to Washington might be an ideal post for Zhukov. Howard Norton of the Baltimore Sun cabled this.

Moscow censors sometimes use their authority to amend correspondents' cables as well as to delete material. Censors may pass speculation when they apparently have information to indicate it is right.

The Soviet government formerly had a number of "first deputy premiers," but at the moment it has none. Two of the three men fired from their high posts in the "anti-party group" purge last summer held that rank in the government: V. M. Molotov and L. M. Kaganovich. Georgi Malenkov was only a deputy premier—not a first deputy.

Snow And Frost In West Carolina

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Snows and killing frosts struck the western Carolinas over the weekend. Today the weather was brilliantly clear and cold in those mountain areas.

Three inches of snow lay across the high ridges of the Great Smoky Mountains on the North Carolina-Tennessee border. Mt. Mitchell, in the Black Mountain Range 35 miles northeast of Asheville, had a low temperature reading of 13 degrees last night. The forests were covered by 1 1/2 to 2 inches of snow. Similar snowfalls occurred in the Blue Ridge Mountains from the Virginia border southwestward into northwest South Carolina. Grandfather Mountain had a low of 15.

The mountain areas, still in heavily colored leaf, attracted thousands of Sunday motorists. At one afternoon period, a five-mile section from Newfound Gap westward down the Tennessee slopes automobiles crept bumper to bumper. Snow had fallen in that area and some mushiness had been transformed into ice.

Another factor in the traffic snarl was the appearance of numerous government-protected bears who wandered out of the forests into the picnic areas and climbed into garbage cans seeking toothsome delicacies. Those were the signals for amateur camera enthusiasts to hop out, leaving their cars in the road, to snap pictures.

The Piedmont areas of the Carolinas experienced spotty frost conditions this morning. In some low areas it was called a killing frost.

The Piedmont area through the center of both Carolinas, had temperatures from about 30 to 35 and the weather man indicated there would be more of the same tonight.

The Soviet Union proposed today that the U.N. replace its present disarmament commission with an 82-nation body which would remain in permanent session.

The Soviet proposal would abolish both the 12-nation Disarmament Commission and the five-nation subcommittee which has been carrying on private talks since 1954.

It also would open the disarmament debate to the public, except in specific cases in which private talks were agreed upon.

In effect, the Soviet proposal would set up a sort of special "little assembly" since it would include all members of the U.N. in the proposed commission.

A Soviet note to the U.N. said: "The discussion on disarmament in the General Assembly testifies to the fact that many states are not satisfied with the present procedure of secret negotiations on disarmament carried on in the subcommittee."

The note said a new approach was needed because of recent developments.

"The necessity to solve this problem as quickly as possible," it declared, "is prompted at present particularly by the fact that the armaments race is being stepped up, that new types of weapons, especially atomic and hydrogen weapons and intercontinental ballistic missiles (ICBM), the use of which for military purposes makes vulnerable any part of the world, are being added in increasing numbers to the armaments of states."

The state allotments for '58 compared with this year, respectively, included:

Georgia 525,929 acres for '58 and 524,671 for this year; North Carolina 13,778 and 13,743; South Carolina 13,778 and 13,743; Tennessee 3,573 and 3,564; and Virginia 105,807 and 105,542.

The department held back 4,025 acres as a reserve for portionment among new farms.

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Agriculture Department today announced a national planting allotment of 1,610,000 acres for the 1958 crop of peanuts. This is the same acreage allotted for this year's crop.

Peanuts will be grown and marketed under a quota program designed to prevent the production of surpluses. Quotas for the 1957, 1958 and 1959 crops were approved by growers at a referendum.

The department said the allotment, which will be apportioned among states, counties and farms under provisions of farm laws, would produce about 626,000 tons on the basis of a normal yield of 1,026 pounds an acre. This year's crop has been forecast at 767,000 tons, reflecting a smaller planted acreage than the allotment and an indicated acre yield below normal.

The woman told officers that the pistol was accidentally fired by Robert Stokes 31-year-old Negro man of 19 W. 14th St. Stokes told officers the pistol went off accidentally while he was cleaning the weapon. The incident took place at the home of the Whitchard woman.

City Police placed Stokes in custody while an investigation into the shooting was conducted. He was later released without bond.

Officers stated no foul play was uncovered by their investigation.

United States is lagging in both the satellite and missile fields, brought more congressional grumbling and an announcement of a full-scale investigation.

A 13-man House Appropriations subcommittee planned hearings beginning Nov. 4 in California, with an emphasis on charges that interservice rivalry has delayed U.S. efforts in both fields.

Rep. Mahon (D-Tex.), chairman of the subcommittee, said these rivalries are the reason that "the him until he was rescued at 2:05 p.m."

Other developments: Russians have beaten us so badly.

The United States has fired more than 60 million dollars worth of Intermediate Range Ballistic Missiles in the past year, and about 12 million dollars worth in the past week, according to an unofficial estimate.

Robert Murphy, deputy undersecretary of state for political affairs, told reporters at Hot Springs, Va., that Russia has solidified free world alliances by "super arrogance" over missile and satellite achievements.

The title of the editorial, "Indestructible unity of party and people," was exactly the same as the editorial used last June to explain to party readers the reasons for the anti-party purge.

This editorial was the nearest approach to official comment on the replacement of Zhukov by Marshal Rodion Y. Malinovsky.

The announcement and the editorial comment left Western diplomats here with the impression that regardless of whether Zhukov gets another high-sounding job party boss Khrushchev's authority in the Kremlin has been strongly nailed down.

Pravda stressed that the Communist party has "no other interests besides the interests of the people," adding that the population always has trusted and supported party policy. Whatever the Communist leadership decides, the party newspaper said, gets automatic support from the people.

This probably means the party expects total support not only for its domestic course, but for its foreign policy as well, and there is a good possibility Zhukov and Khrushchev did not see eye to eye on foreign policy.

Pravda said: "The party and people unanimously approved the decision of the June plenum (full meeting) of the Central Committee of the Communist party which condemned the splitting activities of the anti-party group of Malenkov, Kaganovich, Molotov and Shepilov (former foreign minister Dimitri Shepilov) who joined them."

These words have been repeated many times since that historic June meeting which ousted the veteran leaders on charges of plotting against the party. But the repetition now has new significance in the light of the weekend developments. The party is drumming the notion into its membership that unity is the first essential in all things and

Dr. Mulholland Says, 'Teenagers Of Today Should Make Us Proud'

"Our teenagers of today make us proud," Dr. Vester M. Mulholland of the State Department of Public Instruction, Raleigh, assured a group of 600 Future Home makers of America at Future Home College Saturday morning. He spoke at the annual fall rally staged by District I of the state FHA.

The rally brought to East Carolina FHA members from 45 high schools in sixteen eastern counties of the state. Morning and afternoon programs based on the theme "Today's Teenagers, Tomorrow's Homemakers" were arranged under the supervision of District Advisor Sadie Francis of Washington, N. C. high school.

Jean Jackson of the West Edgecombe school, state FHA song leader, conducted the opening session. Vice President Lew O. Jenkins of East Carolina and Laura Thippen, president of the Pitt FHA Federation, Bethel Chapter welcomed delegates. Ann Moore of Greenville introduced Dr. Mulholland to his audience. Mrs. Faye T. Coleman of Raleigh, state FHA advisor, was among the honor guests.

To the question "What are we proud of in our teenagers?" Dr. Mulholland answered that their enthusiasm, ambition, generosity, desire for peace, and ability to think for themselves are among characteristics of young people that justify confidence in them.

A relatively small number of today's teenagers, he said, are responsible for the problems of juvenile delinquency. Most of our young people, he stated, are worthy of our respect and deserve our praise.

Suggesting to his audience ways of building a better future, he urged them "to stubbornly stick to what is right." He advised his audience to develop the power of thinking independently and of evaluating properly to expand through reading their store of information, and to strengthen their determination to do their best, to become leaders, and to grow in respect and regard for other people.

Betsy Benhall of Woodland was elected state FHA historian at the rally. She will be installed at the State FHA Convention in Raleigh March 29.

Two skits were presented during the afternoon. "Youth Looks Ahead" was prepared by the West Edgecombe and the Greenville FHA Chapters; and "As We Saw It," giving an evaluation of today's rally in TV technique, by the Belvoir-Palkland and the Tarboro Chapters.

Miscellaneous Shower Fetes Ann Hemric

A miscellaneous shower honoring Miss Ann Hamric, bride-elect of November, was given in Washington Thursday afternoon. Hostesses were Miss Charlotte Cherry and Mrs. Richard Cherry.

Upon her arrival, the honoree was presented a white chrysanthemum corsage.

After all the guests had arrived, they were invited into the dining room by Mrs. Cherry for refreshments consisting of bridal cakes, mints, assorted nuts, powdered dates, and ice cream.

Besides being showered with gifts, Miss Hamric was remembered by the hostesses with a gift of crystal and a salad set.

Music Club To Meet

Mrs. Mitchell Explains 'Church Arrangements Should Be Planned'

In the workshop program on church arrangements sponsored by the Greenville Garden Club at the Woman's Club Saturday afternoon, Mrs. Sam Mitchell, instructor-demonstrator, declared that church arrangements should be carefully planned and made with the best fresh flowers and background materials available.

Prior to the opening of the program, Mrs. Mitchell arranged an improvised altar with cross, candles and flowers. In her general remarks on church arrangements she urged that every church have an altar committee for the purpose of seeing that the very best arrangements possible would be made for each service.

She stressed the importance of placing the flowers where they can be seen by every person in the church, that the cross should always be higher than the decorations and in no way obstructed by them. "Arrangements should be carefully made, keeping in mind the architectural style of the church," she said.

Mrs. Mitchell suggested color schemes and flowers for special seasons and services and talked about the types of containers and holders most suitable for them. She then made an arrangement suitable for a gothic style church. Mrs. Tigge Gardner made an arrangement of chrysanthemums for the local Presbyterian Church which was discussed by the group.

The altar committee or others responsible for church arrangements in the churches of Greenville and neighboring communities had been invited for this workshop.

Mrs. Mitchell was introduced by Mrs. J. Vance Perkins, first vice president of the Garden Club and chairman of the program committee.

Mrs. J. H. B. Moore, president of the Greenville Garden Club, welcomed the guests and invited them to hear Mrs. Emily Stuebing of Pittsburgh, Pa. give a program on "Christmas Decoration" in McGinnis Auditorium on Saturday from 10:00-12:00 noon.

30 Years Ago Today

October 28, 1927

On Thursday evening, Mrs. R. C. Deal and Mrs. A. D. Frank gave a most delightful party for the officers and faculty of the East Carolina Teachers College and their wives at the Country Club. The grounds were brilliantly illuminated and the club house was lavishly decorated with yellow chrysanthemums and autumn leaves. A roaring log fire burned in the big fireplace, and for the first half hour the room buzzed with conversation as greetings were exchanged and vacation experiences were related. Then a game of "Guess Who" was played, affording much amusement and causing some thought. All enjoyed several selections on the piano by Mrs. H. C. Haynes. A delicious salad course was served.

Guests were received by Miss Hill and her mother, Mrs. J. B. Hill.

The home was decorated in Halloween and fall colors with witches and black cats throughout the house.

Each of the 30 guests gave Miss Hill a card with instructions on what to do after getting married.

Miss Hill, who was showered with gifts, received crystal in her chosen patterns from her hostess.

Ole' Greens, Side Meat Is Favorite Dish

RALEIGH — Good ole' greens cooked with a hunk of side meat and served with Southern corn bread has long been a favorite in the South. All it takes to serve greens to your family is a little time and effort.

According to Ruby P. Uzzle, Agricultural Extension consumer marketing specialist, you can take your choice of fall greens now, for all kinds are available for you to use as a hot vegetable or in crisp green salads.

"These crisp green vegetables can give fall meals a real lift," Mrs. Uzzle explains, "not only in color and texture, but also in downright good eating."

When you think of greens, perhaps you have in mind only a few of the most common ones, such as spinach, mustard, and turnip greens. But Mrs. Uzzle points out that if you look on the produce counters, you will find many others available also. Among them are escarole, broccoli, kale, kohlrabi and beet greens. Many can be served either raw or cooked. A combination of several will make an appealing tossed green salad to provide crisp, texture in family meals.

There's a special kind of care you should give greens, and Mrs. Uzzle explains it as follows:

1. Greens should receive immediate care after purchasing.
2. If they must be held a day or two before using, refrigerate them.

First, wash bulk greens, discard wilted leaves, pile lightly into vegetable crisper or plastic bag so they do not dry out or lose their crispness.

3. Prepackaged greens may be left in their original container until it's time to use them, then wash quickly, never soak. Lift vegetable out of water instead of pouring the water off to free them from grit and dirt.

Insecticides are your best weapons if insects get into the house.

Colleges' Athletic, Recreational Programs Studied At Meeting

How colleges may achieve better athletic and recreational programs for women students received a variety of answers at an East Carolina College Friday, Saturday at a conference of the N.C. Athletic and Recreation Federation of college women.

Present on the campus to take part in a series of six programs were representatives of Montreat College, Elon, University of N.C. East Carolina, Woman's College UNC, and Greensboro College.

Discussions emphasized development of qualities of leadership, physical fitness as a goal of athletic and recreation programs, and type of desirable publicity.

Ann Wilson of Mount Olive, junior at East Carolina and president of the Federation, presided at business and program meetings. Dr. Clinton R. Prewett, chairman of the East Carolina psychology department, addressed members at a dinner meeting Friday night. Mrs. Jean Edge of Rocky Mount and Mrs. Hope Taylor of Washington, N.C., spoke at the opening session Friday afternoon.

Leaders of a series of informal discussions of various aspects of athletics and recreation for college women included Kack White of Woman's College; Annette Capps of East Carolina, and J. Lou Dedrick of Montreat College.

A business session Saturday morning set up plans for the election of Federation officers for 1957-1958. The president will be chosen in the near future at Greensboro College, the secretary at East Carolina, the sports day chairman at Elon, and the publicity director at Duke. The new officers will assume their duties as soon as elections are completed on the various campuses.

Diversification In Industry, Too

Eastern North Carolina, in the throes of an economic adjustment, isn't too choosy about the kind of labor a new industry hires so long as it can attract new industries.

That, of course, is understandable. This section needs industry to provide year-round payrolls. It makes little difference at the moment whether the industries hire men or women, skilled or unskilled. The main thing Eastern Carolina has its eyes on is the number of jobs a plant can provide, and the total annual payroll it will pour into the community's economy.

Such an attitude on the part of a section has its advantages; but at the same time it has obvious disadvantages, both from the standpoint of the community and from the standpoint of new industry which becomes a part of the community.

The Smithfield Herald points up a vivid illustration in commenting editorially on the Jerold Corporation garment manufacturing plant which has enjoyed successful operation in Johnston County for the past three years and predicts even more highly successful operations in the future.

Observed the Herald: "The county's (Johnston's) deficiency in male-employing industry has adversely affected the Jerold Corporation in this way: The company has spent considerable time and money training women for jobs and has lost some of these employees because their husbands found it necessary to leave the area to obtain employment."

How many other industries in Eastern Carolina communities have experienced by manufacturing concerns an adverse affect on the entire industrial growth of the section?

Eastern Carolina can ill afford to turn up its nose at any new industry while its development program is in its infancy. We need the jobs and the payrolls too badly to turn down any sound plant. Yet, while the area's industrial development program is still being organized, the advantages of a balanced, diversified industrial program should be kept in mind. We have both men and women who need industrial jobs. We have both skilled and unskilled workers in our area. In our efforts to attract industry we should not concentrate on one particular type, but seek a variety through which we can build the soundest balance between industry and agriculture.

Dismal Swamp Canal Has Big Implications

Oceangoing vessels in the Dismal Swamp Canal? It may sound far-fetched, completely out of the question.

Or is it out of the question? Promoters of the idea have at least gotten to first base by gaining the support of Representatives Herbert C. Bonner of North Carolina's first Congressional district, and J. Porter Hardy of Virginia. The Congressmen say they will introduce a bill asking for a survey on the feasibility of widening, deepening and extending the famous canal between Elizabeth City and Norfolk.

It will take a whale of a selling job to convince the right people that the project is worth the money it will cost. It will take an uphill fight to get Congress even to approve the necessary survey on feasibility of the project. Yet, with the potential which is at stake if the project should become a reality one day, it is well worth pushing even against long odds.

Such an inland water link, say backers of the proposal, would bring billions of dollars worth of steel, chemical and other manufacturing plants to the area. It could be a major factor in North Carolina's attaining the station it desires as a major gateway to world markets for import and export. It could greatly enhance North Carolina's industrial development program, particularly in an area which desperately needs the economic boost industry can give it.

In its long range aspects, this project is well worth all the support North Carolina as a whole can give it.

Capitol Square News And Notes

By LYNN NISBET UNDERSTANDING — Whether William P. Rogers Jr., newly appointed U. S. Attorney General, will be any more considerable of southern viewpoints than his predecessor and former chief, Herbert Brownell, he at least has been subject to ameliorating influences. He was counsel for the McCarthy investigating committee of which Sen. Clyde Hoey became chairman when the Democrats gained control of the Senate. It is known that Senator Hoey had real personal affection for the young man, even though they differed widely in political philosophy. Rogers has visited in North Carolina and his experiences under Senator Hoey should enable him to understand the sincerity of the North Carolina viewpoint, even if he can't agree with it.

UNATTRACTIVE — Majority of the lawyers and many rank and file members of the Republican party in this state were gratified at the appointment of Edwin M. Stanley to succeed Judge Johnson J. Hayes as judge of the Middle District Federal Court. The Stanley selection over Kyle Hayes, who had the backing of the party organization in North Carolina, suggests that the Republicans may have more difficulty getting good men to run for Governor and U. S. Senator during the next few campaigns. H. F. Seawell Jr., candidate for Governor in 1952, left the party when he failed to get the nod for district attorney. Hayes was the Republican candidate for Governor in 1956, and he and his friends felt he had priority claim on Federal patronage.

DARK PLACE — The only dark place in the whole experience of the delegation which went to New York seeking industry was the general attitude of uncertainty and fear because of what this country is NOT doing in utilizing nuclear energy, said the Governor. He found many business men who had always been ardent supporters of Eisenhower now showing concern over the position into which this country has fallen — behind Russia in weapons and behind anticommunists in peaceful uses of energy.

The Governor indicated possibility that this attitude might tend to slow down business expansion all over, but he could not see where it would affect North Carolina or the South more than other areas.

An Analysis Of Trends, Data

By ELMER ROESSNER Here are more business predictions, based on analyses of developing trends, sweetened with bits of advance information:

Wholesale prices will decline. They are under great pressure now. Industrial buyers are trimming inventories and holding off new purchases.

The government will crack down on mortgage insurance deals. Some lenders are said to require borrowers to buy insurance from certain firms. The Justice Department antitrust division is investigating.

Hooded cook-out sets will be the vogue next summer. Barbecue sets with hoods caught on a bit this summer and manufacturers are betting almost everybody will want them next year. With hoods, fish, poultry and meats can be smoked at home. Delicious.

"Wash-and-wear" apparel will rock and roll laundries. The trend to wash-and-wear fabrics for suits, dresses and sportswear for women and suits is strong among consumers; manufacturers are stepping up production of both textiles and garments. All this will shift more apparel from laundries and cleaners to home washers.

SWING TO CANNED POP More soft drinks will be canned. One of the soft-drink giants is planning extensive tests of canned drinks in vending machines. If they work, other soft-drink companies are sure to follow. Many smaller firms use cans up to now the big three have clung to bottles.

"Hitting licenses" will boost gift sales. A big aluminum producer, as a good will gesture to retailers, is supplying them with "hitting licenses!" Shoppers can use them to hint to mates and friends what gifts — not necessarily aluminum — they'd like. German plastics will compete in U. S. markets. Production is rising in West Germany and some of the 2,000 firms in plastics will turn to America for additional sales.

Others will be slow to follow Ford's new-model-every-year plan. Some fear the plan may slow sales because prospects will be dated in a year. They are watching results, however,

Strength For Today

By EARL L. DOUGLASS COST SO LITTLE, MEAN SO MUCH Gratitude and kindly remembrance—how much they add up to in the daily rounds of life! The shame of our neglect in matters of this sort — that being thoughtful costs us too little yet means so much to those to whom we are thoughtful. Also it takes only a few words, a sincere assurance of gratitude, to make a person who has served us feel good for days. There are a lot of things in life to be discouraged about. Sometimes it seems that human life is almost beyond the hope of ever getting very high — on the mount of achievement. But, after all, there is an amazing amount of good latent in the human heart. Along with all the world's crime and if Ford clicks with the plan, the rest will follow.

TAX-ON-CO-OPS DRIVE Measures to tax co-operatives will be pushed next year. A bill to levy income taxes on co-ops has been introduced every year since 1949 but has never gained support. Now several trade associations are getting behind it for a real push. P. S. It won't pass.

Japanese watches will invade America. A big U. S. watch company has arranged to give technical assistance to a Japanese manufacturer. In return, it will get royalties and exclusive sales rights to the Japanese watches in this country. This may stir up a big row, with labor and other manufacturers demanding higher barriers against foreign watches made with cheap labor.

Tuna will cost more. West Coast catches have been small and several canners are planning to boost prices.

More multipurpose kitchen tools are coming. Single motors to power a choice of many tools have proved so popular among men that manufacturers are working on plans for similar distaff tools. With a series of attachments, a single motor could power a mixer, a chopper, sharpener, can-opener, pot scourer, floor polisher, etc. Some multipurpose tools are already on the market, but their attachments are limited in number.

OLD PROMOTER OBJECTS TO 'PERSONAL' AD MAIL The Old Promoter was in a blustery mood when he dropped in today. We gave him a cigar to quiet him down and invited him to sit out his mind.

"I'm annoyed by companies who put 'personal' on letters that turn out to be mass-produced advertisements that are as personal as Main Street," he said. "One of these days some advertiser is going to make his envelopes 'super-personal.'"

"He will undoubtedly be followed by someone stamping mail." "So personal this must not be opened even by the addressee."

"What can we do about it?" we asked. "We can suggest that the Post Office require all mail marked 'personal' to carry first-class postage," he said.

So, We Learn By Mail

By HAL BOYLE NEW YORK (AP) — Things a columnist might never know if he didn't open his mail:

That the rumba began in Cuba as a symbolic dance portraying the barnyard courtship between the rooster and the hen.

That in Britain 93 per cent of all homes have running water. In America, alas, the figure is only 85.9.

That "The Ballad of Davy Crockett" is considered the fastest selling record in history with more than six million disks during its first half year on the market.

That in Greece the dough for the bread to be served at a wedding is kneaded in public. Friends of the bride and groom toss gifts of money into it.

That, according to the Fisherman magazine, it doesn't pay to be a road hog in a speed boat. You can be held financially liable for any damage caused by waves in your wake.

Other Editors Saying--- Aliens On The Increase

(Henderson Dispatch) Recent government statistics throw light on the number of aliens in the United States. The figure is surprising if not indeed the basis for some concern. An alien is a person who is a citizen of a foreign country and who is sojourning in the United States without being naturalized, and hence not a citizen.

Outsiders are allowed certain periods of residence without being required to take out naturalization papers. But if all those now here and who occupy that status are considered, the figure is surprisingly large, and is worthy of at least some consideration.

The Immigration Service has reported that as of last January, Britons and Canadians numbering 543,484, are more numerous than any others. They are more or less our own type of people. But the same cannot be said of many others who are residing here without being citizens. In all, there are 2,833,732, and that represents an increase of 7.5 per cent over the previous year.

Other nationals are listed in this order: Mexicans, 470,411; Germans, 257,234; Italians, 255,667; from Poland, 193,739; from Soviet Russia, 86,341; Greece 52,887; China, 40,965; all others, 933,004.

Greatest concentrations are in the coastal and Great Lakes States, New York, California, Texas, Illinois, Michigan, New Jersey, Massachusetts, Pennsylvania and Ohio accounted for nearly 75 per cent of the un-naturalized foreign born in this country. More are in New York than elsewhere, with 550,097.

One can analyze the list in his own thinking as to potential hazards that are accepted in harboring so many foreigners. If they like this country to the extent of wishing to remain here, they should become naturalized. Otherwise — well, there should be a way, and there is a way, to meet the problem. Americans should not be unmindful of these conditions.

Probably the Rotary or Kiwanis Clubs would have no "Anti-Queer Dealer" as a member. I would subscribe to the leading "Antique" monthly magazines and — in a year — know more about antiques than any one else in the locality."

Tricky Mart For All

By ROGER BABSON BABSON MARK, Mass. — Of course, antique furniture cannot be bought today and sold next year at a profit. It has a very poor "over-the-counter" market. The dealers in such furniture are keen and hard to beat. Therefore, you must buy it right — below the market — in order to sell it at a profit. It is usually best to buy if from families whom you know, and sell it to others whom you know — making your own market.

BEATING INFLATION AND MAKING PROFITS

We talk about "growth stocks" and "inflation hedges," but the very best of this group is good antique furniture. A friend of mine in Gloucester bought a highboy at public auction some years ago for fifty dollars getting it refinished, as it was very shabby. He sold it to me for eighteen hundred dollars. I have since been offered three thousand dollars. Very few "growth stocks" or "inflation hedges" can equal this investment.

When buying such furniture it is very important to get a "genealogy" of the chair, table, highboy, or bed which you buy. Insist upon a written statement as to the family who owned it and how old it is; in other words, a history of the piece. Then, when wishing to sell, look up some member of the same family who has become well off. He may live in a distant city, but this makes no difference. Write him about his "heirloom." Send him a snapshot picture and quote him a price double what you paid! The chances are that he will purchase it. Furthermore, it will be a good investment for his family. He will surely get more pleasure from it than from any other possible investment he could make with that same money.

MEN RETIRING FROM BUSINESS

I sometimes have letters from men who have been very successful executives, retiring from active business, asking what to do to "keep busy." They may have been retired on account of age or may have had a nervous breakdown, or their retirement may have been due to other reasons. I tell such persons that, under the same circumstances, I would go into the antique business. It is dignified, one cannot lose much money in such a business, and it gives one a place to loaf, to read the newspapers, and to meet a few people each day.

Psychologists tell me it would be unwise for me to remain home most of the day. I should have some place to go every morning and remain for the day. This will give me a different environment, enable me to meet new acquaintances and make new friends. I am told that such a change will do more good than pills or any other device for keeping young. The antique business is an interesting business, and the inventory always increases in value. Of course, one should not depend upon such a business for a living, but rather for a life.

WHERE TO LOCATE

I probably would not locate in my home city or town. I certainly would locate in a large city. I probably would not locate in a suburb where the men are away all day. I would like to locate in some city of about 25,000 where the men are engaged in local industries. I would join the Chamber of Commerce, and some luncheon club. Adlai Still A Potential Choice

By RAY TUCKER WASHINGTON Although Adlai E. Stevenson told fellow-Democrats who assembled here recently that he doubted the possibility of a third Presidential nomination after his two defeats, the likable Illinois lawyer was easily the most popular figure at the meeting of the National Advisory Council. Observers thought that he acted as if he were willing to go good for any shade of Democratic liberal. Stevenson would probably be more acceptable to that section than any of his rivals. At the recent policy meeting, he was not certain that any statement on the Little Rock incident was advisable. He was overruled by the more radical element.

Negatively, Stevenson seems strong because his opponents are so weak, especially Harriman, Williams and Kefauver. As of today, he has to fear only Senator John F. Kennedy of Massachusetts, Senator Stuart Symington of Missouri and Governor Robert B. Meyner of New Jersey. Meyner will be eliminated unless he is re-elected next month

It must be a massive victory, not a political squeeze play. SYMINGTON SYMBOL OF DEFENSE Persistent popular concern over our lags in national defense, especially intercontinental missiles and moons, have naturally stirred greater talk and consideration of Senator Symington. He has been far ahead of the Administration in recognizing Russia's advances in the scientific realm, and in demanding greater concentration and expenditures for similar projects here.

However, as the "Red moon" has disturbed world and domestic politics and politicians, so an "Eisenhower satellite" could lessen Symington's popular and convention appeal. He would then become a more likely vice-presidential nominee. With Vice President Nixon and Secretary Dulles pressuring the President offsetting the Wilson-Adams sneers at Sputnik, it is almost certain that Eisenhower will shoot missiles and moons into the political skies before 1960, possibly before the 1958 lation, he simply said that he had been so busy in the practice of law, which required considerable foreign travel, that he "had given the question of a presidential nomination no thought whatever." That seemed to sound like the statement of a thoughtful candidate.

Stevenson's DEMOCRATIC OPPOSITION'S WEAK. Finally, although the South may be in no good for any shade of Democratic liberal. Stevenson would probably be more acceptable to that section than any of his rivals. At the recent policy meeting, he was not certain that any statement on the Little Rock incident was advisable. He was overruled by the more radical element.

Congressional elections. It has now become a question of ballot-box ballistics.

PROBABLE 1960 ISSUES In such an event, the most moving and effective 1960 issues will probably be inflation, foreign affairs generally, farm legislation over low prices, labor dislocation passed on, or proposed, the reaction of Northern Negroes and the Democratic South to future integration development.

With Eisenhower out of the race, and the Republicans possibly split into "modern" and conservative factions, domestic problems and the dissatisfaction deriving from them may be the determinative factors rather than picturesque and heroic personalities. The "common man," or what E.D.R. called the "forgotten man," may be on the march again. As of today, politicians generally agree that these issues are operating in favor of the Democrats. However, Ike still has three years to stage a Republican comeback. by between 150,000 and 200,000.

Educators Told Less Training For Jobs Needed In Automation

By HERMAN R. ALLEN
CHICAGO (AP)—American high school educators were told today that automation of industry will call for less, not more, job training in their institutions.
Devereux C. Josephs, chairman of President Eisenhower's Committee on Education Beyond the High School, which submitted its final report Saturday, said in a prepared speech "The young will fill many jobs that do not now exist. They will invent the products that will need new skills. Why take precious time to train for professions which may disappear or be modified? Many skills can be taught on the job."

Attendance laws now keep many in school who could not have survived the standards of 1900, when high school was largely college preparatory.
One result has been circular revisions which have posed questions of the high school's purpose and have brought many charges of watered-down high school education. Most notably in recent years, alarm has been expressed that not enough youngsters are preparing for science, mathematics and engineering in view of Soviet Russian strides in these fields.
By coincidence, the high school conference is to be followed here the last half of the week by a conference on engineering and scientific education, sponsored by the national science foundation and various professional organizations.
End advance for use at 7 a. m. EST.

Far more important in an increasing complex society, said Josephs, will be "to learn those things which will be useful to any career—our relationship to our surroundings, how to read critically, upon which can be built the capacity to learn new jobs."

Josephs, board chairman of the New York Life Insurance Co., was on the opening program of the Conference on the American High School, sponsored by the University of Chicago and the National Citizens Council for Better Schools.

The conference, drawing top educators from all parts of the nation, was called to grapple with a crisis that began to build up at the turn of the century.

At that time, only about eight per cent of American youth of high school age actually attended high school. From then on, spurred by numerous factors including the spread school attendance laws, high school enrollment mounted. Today over 80 per cent of high school-age youth are in school.

Stricken Family Is Given $12,000

HUNTSVILLE, Tex. (AP)—People of all faiths met at the First Methodist Church yesterday and gave more than $12,000 to the stricken family of Nat Davis Jr., which lost three small children and all its possessions in a fire Saturday night.

The parents were hospitalized with shock and injuries received in vain attempts to rescue Peggy, 4, Stevie, 6, and Judie, 8, who were trapped in upstairs bedrooms.

Deanna, 11, escaped and Nat Davis III, 14, was not at home. Davis is head cashier at the First National Bank of Huntsville.

Camera's Eye Will Focus On Fabulous TV Infant

By CHARLES MERCER
NEW YORK (AP)—People occasionally ask why television doesn't turn its cameras on itself for a close look at the fabulous infant.

Operating under the "why not?" theory, "Wide World" (NBC-TV) will do exactly that on Nov. 10 in a 90-minute program appropriately entitled "The Fabulous Infant." It will be a look at the past 10 years of television, at its present and its future.

A notable feature of the show will be the return of "Mr. Television" himself, Milton Berle—not as a comedian, but as a serious commentator on the problems of performers in the medium and the problems of television in developing and maintaining talent.

"The program will be not a tribute to television, but the story of television," says "Wide World" executive producer Barry Wood. And the producer of this particular show, Herbert Sussan, emphasizes that the other major networks, CBS-TV and ABC-TV, have offered the fullest cooperation.

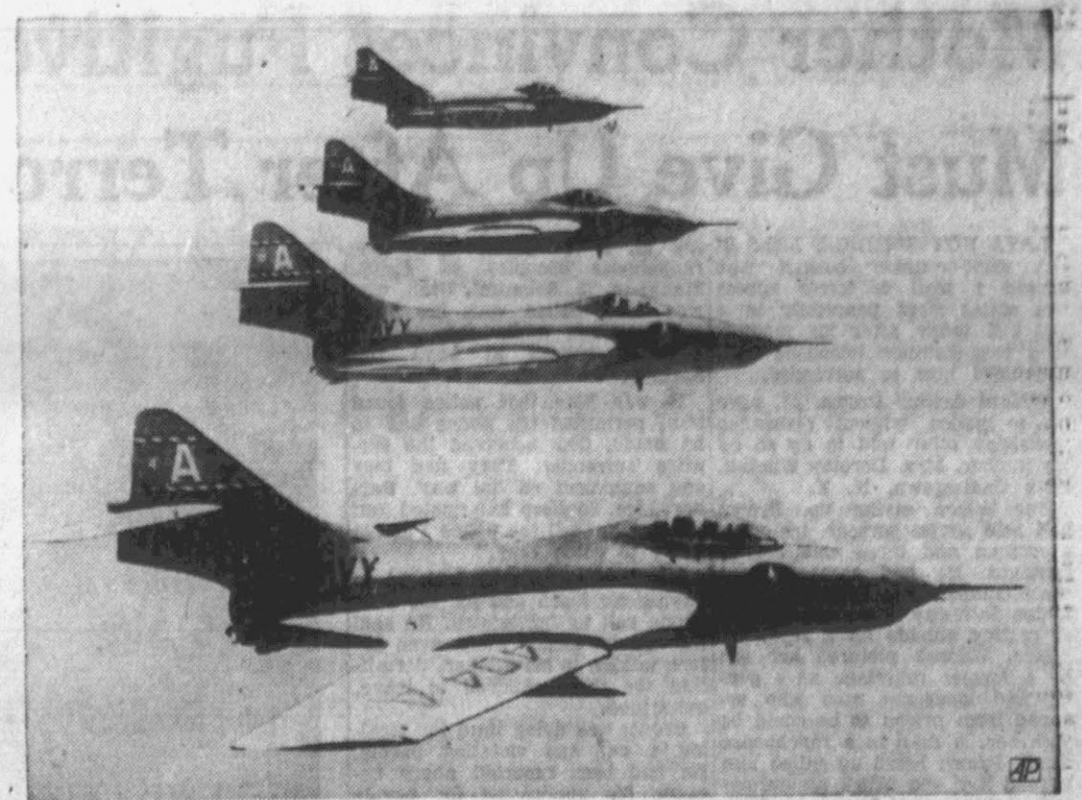

Thus the viewing audience will see in the opening segment of the program brief kinescopes of dozens of the TV stars and lesser constellations of yester year.

It will in part answer the question of "What did television promise 10 years ago?"

To demonstrate that the talent of the future in large measure depends on relatively unknown performers on local stations, the cameras will turn to local performers and programs in Omaha, Boston, San Francisco, Detroit, Columbus, Ohio and Springfield, Mo.

An interesting phenomenon of television performers — "the big break" — will be seriously discussed by Ernie Kovacs who suddenly rose to popularity on the basis of a single half-hour program after years of being a very funny fellow in the medium.

Sussan and Wood say that while the show will not stress the technical aspects of television, the people behind the cameras will be given their day before the cameras. "We want to know how he amount of work and the type of action that goes into producing a program."

Guatemala Calm After Promise

GUATEMALA (AP)—Guatemala's capital was generally calm again today after installation of a new provisional president and the promise of new presidential elections within four months.

Ending a week of demonstrations, strikes and government changes, Congress yesterday named Guillermo Flores Avendano, a 61-year-old retired colonel, to be the nation's chief executive. He was sworn in a few hours later in a hasty ceremony in the presidential palace.

Flores Avendano was second vice president under President Carlos Castillo Armas, who was assassinated last July. The first vice president, Luis Arturo Gonzalez, succeeded Castillo Armas but resigned last week in the turmoil which followed the presidential election Oct. 20.

After that vote the Castillo Armas party claimed victory for its candidate, Miguel Ortiz Passarella, but the rightist candidate, retired Gen. Miguel Ydigoras Fuentes, charged the election had been stolen from him. Ydigoras supporters began daily demonstrations and strikes during which two persons were killed. The disorders culminated in mob violence Friday which brought economic life in the capital to a standstill.

A three-colonel army junta which seized the government last Thursday and set aside the election results finally bowed to Ydigoras' demand that Flores Avendano take over temporarily. The latest government shift set off a few sporadic demonstrations yesterday which police blamed on Communist agitators and "common criminals."

The political parties meanwhile accepted the temporary solution of the crisis.
The United States, a major financial prop since Castillo Armas overthrew the pro-Communist regime of President Jacobo Arbenz Guzman in 1954, is expected to recognize the provisional government.

CAP Searching For Lost Plane

ATLANTA (AP)—Civil Air Patrol air and ground searchers today resumed their hunt for a two-engine private plane with three persons aboard which has been missing four days on a flight from Atlanta to Charlotte.

Ground crews concentrated on an area around Braastown-Bald Mountain in extreme north Georgia where two persons reported hearing an explosion Wednesday night. However, no one has been located who saw the blast and its exact time could not be determined. The 4,787-foot peak is in the general flight path between Atlanta and Charlotte.

The Piper Apache is owned by the Haw Manufacturing Co. of Charlotte and was piloted by Ben Gunn, who moved to Atlanta from Charlotte a short time ago. Passengers were Mr. and Mrs. Harry B. Shaw Jr., of Charlotte. Shaw is president of the firm bearing his name.

The plane took off Wednesday at 6:36 p.m. Gunn radioed a few minutes later that he was leaving the airport control area. Nothing else has been heard.

Capt. Lowry W. Davis, head of the Georgia CAP wing, is directing the search which Sunday included about 70 planes from Georgia, South Carolina and North Carolina. About half that number of planes were expected to take part in today's search.

Davis said the search was not started sooner because no flight plan was filed that would have made its position known to Civil Aeronautics Administration stations.

The CAPL, a volunteer Air Force auxiliary, was called on to make the search by the 14th Air Force.

Mother Convinces Fugitive Son He Must Give Up After Terror Trail

LAVA HOT SPRINGS, Idaho (AP)—A saint-or-sinner convict who spread a trail of terror across two states slept peacefully in a jail cell today after his mother, in a long-distance telephone call, convinced him to surrender.

Willard Arthur Brown, 23, gave up to police without resistance yesterday after told to do so by his mother, Mrs. Dorothy Wilczek, from Jamestown, N. Y. Brown had held seven persons, including a woman and three children, as hostages. He had escaped from the Montana State Prison at Deer Lodge Saturday in a state car after getting outside on a ruse.

Mrs. Wilczek pictured her son by a former marriage as a gentle and lonesome man who escaped from prison so he could be with her. A man in a ranchhouse where Brown holed up called him a good boy and asked assurances from officers that Brown wouldn't be molested.

But a woman kidnaped at gunpoint by Brown said he raped her. And two Canadians abducted by Brown said he robbed them and threatened to kill them and swore he wouldn't be taken alive.

Brown's surrender at the isolated ranchhouse two miles west of this sulphur water spa ended a full-scale manhunt that centered in Idaho but involved officers in Utah, Montana and Wyoming.

Surrounded by police, Brown released three children whose ages ranged from 1 to 7 and then asked permission to call his mother. Police agreed. Mrs. Wilczek told Brown to give up and he said "Okay, mister, I'll do it for you."

Brown walked out into the light drizzle, put his 30-30 rifle down on the muddy ground, and surrendered.

He was taken 36 miles northwest to the Blaine County Jail in Paoliello, where police pondered today what charges should be filed, and where, Brown, meanwhile, got his first sleep of a 26-hour period in which he:

Escaped from the Montana State Prison at Deer Lodge.

Stole at least four cars, the rifle, money and clothes.

Kidnaped a 23-year-old Montana mother of three, Mrs. Laura Shaford, and held her nine harrowing hours. She charges he raped her at gunpoint. Brown denies it.

Forced two Canadian hunters, Gordon Hunter, 21, and Fred Hesel, 20, both of Moosejaw, Sask., to drive him across eastern Idaho, robbed them, then bound them with a torn shirt and drove away. One of the Canadians said Brown told them as he left, "I should shoot you."

Later, fearing police were closing in, Brown holed up in the ranchhouse occupied by J. R. Maughan, 72, Bountiful, Utah, who was baby sitting with his three grandchildren while the parents attended church in Lava Hot Springs.

It was here that police found him, permitted the phone call to be made, then accepted the surprise surrender. They had tear gas equipment on the way. Earlier, Mrs. Shaford had quoted him as saying, "tell the police I'm not going to come easy."

Maughan said Brown insisted on paying for lunch and for the telephone call to Jamestown. He said the convict turned meek even before talking to his mother, permitting the three children to leave unharmed.

Brown was doing time for stealing a car and violating parole. He had been reported angry because his application for parole was turned down last week. The prison lists his address as Tonawanda, N. Y. He also served time in the Federal Reformatory in Chillicothe, Ohio.

Health Officer Held In Slaying

ROCKINGHAM, N.C. (AP)—Dr. T. Boyce Henry, 67-year-old Rockingham County health officer, was being held here today without bond charged with murder in the fatal shooting of his wife.

His wife, Violet, about 55, was found shot to death in the couple's home in a substantial Rockingham residential section Saturday night.

Police Capt. B. H. Gillis said Dr. Henry was being held pending a hearing either today or tomorrow.

Gillis quoted the elderly doctor as saying Mrs. Henry was shot in the chest as the two wrestled for possession of a .22 caliber rifle. Gillis said Dr. Henry told him the couple had quarreled and Mrs. Henry said, "This is going to be the end of you."

The policeman quoted Dr. Henry as saying his wife got the rifle, returned to the room and the two then tussled for it.

Dr. Henry, a native of Anson County, has practiced here about 35 years. He has been county health officer three times, his latest term beginning last August.

Gillis said both had been married previously. Mrs. Henry is survived by one son in the Navy. Dr. Henry has two children. There were no children from their union.

Heavy Drinking, Smoking Heightens Risk Of Cancer

BYALTON L. BLAKESLEE AP Science Reporter

NEW YORK (AP)—Heavy drinking plus heavy smoking equals greater risk of throat and mouth cancer, especially for pipe and cigar smokers, a cancer researcher said today.

Heavy drinking was defined as consistently taking seven or more shots of hard liquor a day.

Heavy smokers who do this run 10 times the risk of cancer of the larynx, or voicebox, and the mouth than heavy smokers who drink moderately or not at all.

The relative risk appears greater for pipe and cigar men than cigarette smokers, said Dr. Ernest L. Wynder, of the Sloan-Kettering Institute for Cancer Research here.

The findings apply only to drinkers of hard liquor, he told the annual meeting of the American Cancer Society. Not enough wine and beer drinkers have been analyzed yet for conclusive data.

Wynder said he cannot tell whether alcohol alone can start the mouth and throat cancer. He hasn't enough data on heavy drinkers who aren't heavy smokers to make a comparative study. Purely as theories, he said, alcohol might make the throat and mouth tissues more permeable to tobacco smoke, or heavy drinking might produce diet deficiencies making the tissues more susceptible to cancer-causing agents.

Lung cancer has been associated with cigarette smoking by some statistical studies, with little effect blamed on pipe or cigar smoking.

Wynder said pipe and cigar smoking.

Wynder said pipe and cigar smokers in this new study had a higher incidence of cancer higher up in the respiratory tract.

The study is based on 209 men with cancer of the larynx, 209 men of the same ages free of cancer, 132 men with lung cancer, 543 men with cancer of the oral cavity and 207 patients who had either non-cancerous sores of the head, neck or chest or cancers of the lower gastro-intestinal region.

Tar Heel Textile Workers Wait For Union Purge

SALISBURY, N.C. (AP)—Some 1,600 textile union members in this area are waiting to see what their national leaders are going to do about cleaning the United Textile Workers house.

One of their spokesmen has already implied that the workers will pick up and move into the Textile Workers Union of America if UTW doesn't get busy.

"We don't intend to stay in a corrupt organization," says Harold Foster, business agent for the 950-odd members of TWU Local 251 at the Cooleemee plant of Irwin Mills.

The AFL-CIO has given UTW until Nov. 15 to correct corrupt conditions exposed in recent Senate probes or face expulsion.

Foster denied on Saturday that representatives from TWUA, the other CIO-AFL textile union, has been raiding UTW units. Then, he added:

"They won't have to raid us if the UTW doesn't clean up."

Foster, Wall Orrell of the Finish Co. UTW unit here which has about 750 members, Charlie Baker of Danville and W. E. Taylor of Newberry, S.C., have formed an area committee to lead the fight for a clean national union.

Meanwhile, the general president of the TUA, William Pollock, speaking Saturday night in Philadelphia at a TWUA 20th anniversary dinner, said he hopes the UTW will obey the clean-up directive.

Otherwise, he said, TWUA will hold open "the door to a clean, honestly-run union of textile workers under the banner of the AFL-CIO, so they can remain in the house of labor." He added:

"I hope the decent, honest elements in the UTW will take charge and conduct a real house-cleaning of their union. Our only aim is to bring all textile workers together into one, big, effective, honestly-run union."

The UTW was an AFL affiliate while TWUA was under CIO until the two groups merged.

Pollock also urged a 35-hour week at 40 hours' pay in the textile industry. "This, of course," he said, "should be a forerunner to its adoption by American industry as a whole."

Most Of Nation Is Chilled Today

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS A late October cool spell chilled most all sections of the country today.

Snow accompanied the colder air as it moved into the Northeastern part of the nation.

Temperatures were in the 30-40 degree range in wide areas of the country. Exceptions were most sections of Arizona, California and parts of Florida.

Chillier weather spread into the middle and lower Mississippi Valleys eastward to the Atlantic Coast. Temperatures were mostly in the low 30s, and below freezing in some areas. It was a nippy 29 at Anniston, Ala.

Florida also cooled, with readings 10 degrees or more lower than 24 hours earlier.

Although skies cleared and most of the snow in the Northeastern area but more than a foot of snow fell in the Cleveland area yesterday. Fairly heavy falls also were reported in parts of western New York and western Pennsylvania.

The only other wet spots were in the Northern and Central Rockies which reported generally light falls of rain and snow.

Snow flurries and showers were expected to continue during the day in the New England states southward to Virginia. Fair and cool was the forecast in the Southeast.

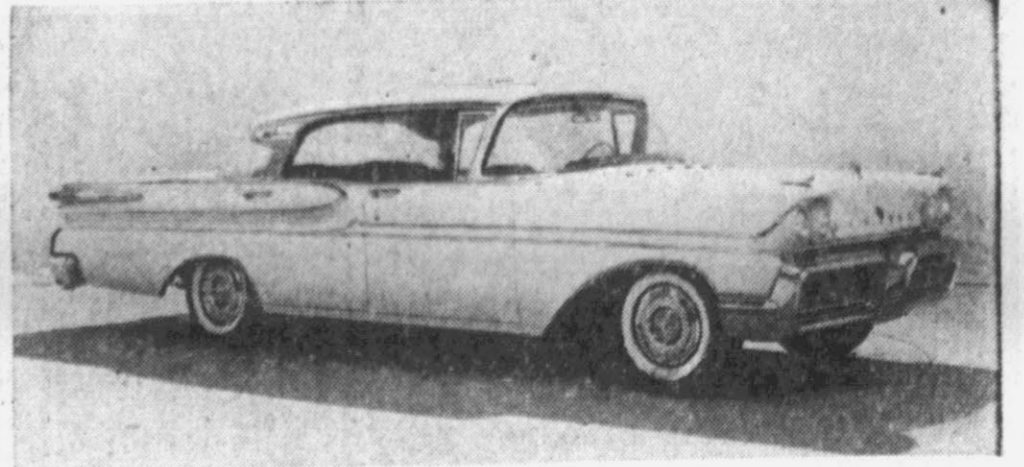

Mostly fair and warmer was the outlook in the Southern and Central Plains and eastward through the Ohio Valley.

Crewmen aboard U. S. Coast Guard lightships get little sleep during foggy weather. The fog horns vibrate the ship so much that sailors can hardly hold themselves in their bunks.

Evangelist Sees Rising Danger Of World War

NEW YORK (AP)—Billy Graham says the danger of war is greater now "than at any other time in the past 10 years."

The evangelist told a religious rally of 40,000 persons at the Polo Grounds yesterday that President Eisenhower should "tell the American people exactly where we stand."

"The American people are not children," Graham declared. They want the facts straight from the shoulder. The President is the only person with the prestige and confidence of the American people to call this nation into a period of sacrifice, renewed dedication and a return to God."

Graham spoke at a service climaxing "Visitation Week," an annual event of the Protestant Council of Churches of New York City.

This year's visitation program concentrated on the 56,676 persons who made "decisions for Christ" at Graham's New York crusade last summer. A total of 1,284 went forward yesterday.

The crusade began with nightly meetings May 15 in Madison Square Garden. The preaching phase ended with a rally in Broadway just south of Times Square Sept. 1.

Last July 20, 100,000 persons jammed Yankee Stadium on a sweltering evening to hear Graham.

Despite yesterday's cold and threatening clouds, Graham doffed his overcoat when he began preaching from a stand at second base.

He predicted the downfall of the United States unless Americans follow the ways of God.

Graham reviewed the perils facing the nation and said a congressman had told him that there is a strong element within the Kremlin that believes that Russia should attack the United States within the next two years.

He said it would be "most unfortunate" if Eisenhower should say anything in forthcoming speeches that would give the American people a "false sense of security."

Graham did not identify the congressman.

Graham said he feared that God is "preparing a pagan nation" to destroy the United States just as he "prepared a pagan nation to destroy the ancient kingdom of Israel."

"We're asleep," he said, "but I tell you God has not changed. . . . His coming judgment is more certain than any mathematical formula. . . . You may laugh, you may sneer, you may doubt it. But I tell you it's coming. . . . I am convinced the time is short."

The text of the sermon involved the Biblical story of the Prophet Amos who warned the Hebrew people that they would be destroyed as a judgment for their sins.

Pointing to the overcast sky, Graham said:

"There's a world swinging out in that immensity of space called Heaven, and there's another world swinging out in that immensity of space called Hell."

Nautilus Travels Under Ice Pack

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—Secretary of the Navy Thomas S. Gates says the atomic-power submarine Nautilus has scored another first by traveling 1,000 miles under the arctic ice pack in five and a half days.

Gates, here to address Republican groups in San Jose today and Oakland tomorrow, said the Nautilus was on a cruise this month testing equipment and machinery and gathering operational and scientific data.

He noted that the Nautilus now has an operational sister ship, the Sea Wolf.

"We have approved up through the 1958 shipbuilding program 17 additional nuclear submarines," he said.

The Winterville chapter of Future Homemakers of America attended the District I rally at East Carolina College Saturday.

Plans for the rally were discussed at the October meeting which also featured a program, "Degrees in FHA". The degrees—Junior, Chapter and State—were illustrated and explained.

FHA officers have begun improvement of the chapter's point system by which requirements for degrees are met.

Officers who are participating in the program are Sandra Hunsucker, Shirley Churchill, Betty Anne Hardy, Daphne Little, Barbara Evans, Mary Ann Worthington, Irma Sue Worthington, Ramona Nobles, Joyce Jones and Joyce Jackson. They are being assisted by Miss Alya Ray Taylor, advisor.

The Winterville-Ayden Band took part in East Carolina College's Homecoming Parade recently. Van Jackson is president of the band and serves with Richard Gorman, vice president and reporter; Moye Waters, secretary-treasurer; and Sue Ellen Hunsucker, librarian.

Majority of the members of the Senior Class turned out recently to honor Margaret Baker at a party on her 17th birthday. The party was held at the Community Building.

Five cheerleaders, selected from a field of nine candidates, were selected by the student body last week after a student assembly. Sandra Hunsucker was named chief cheerleader for the squad and other members are Barbara Evans, Doris Dillingham, Daphne Little and Irma Sue Worthington.

Included in the comments made during the campaign assembly were remarks from coaches Paul Clark and Elaney Moye. Each candidate also made brief comments and led a cheer.

Work has begun on writing the prophecy, history, and last will and testament of the Senior Class. Faye Stox is writing the prophecy, Sandra Hunsucker is class historian and Le Ann Newby is doing the last will and testament.

General work of the yearbook has begun, using a theme selected by Editor Jimmie Runkle and known only by members of the annual staff. Individual pictures, which will be used in class sections, were returned last week, and group pictures are to be taken October 30.

A safety film, shown by Linwood Kilpatrick of the Pitt County Health Department, highlighted the October meeting of the Parent-Teacher Association.

An announcement was also made at the meeting by President Reid McLawhorn that a total of $278 was made at the annual PTA supper. His announcement was made after the devotional, by the Rev. E. G. Cole, and preceded an announcement by Principal Paul Clark who said that a movie projector had been purchased for use by elementary students.

Miss Brown's fourth grade won the attendance prize.

Jimmie Runkle, Barbara Manning, Janet Allen, Margaret Jane Case, Margaret Baker, Van Jackson and Don Jackson took the Scholarship Qualifying Test last week as the first phase of National Merit Scholarship competition.

SALEM, Ore. (AP)—Oregon's Legislature opens a special session today to give tax relief from a general fund surplus that will reach 69 million dollars by next June.

Republicans and Democrats agree tax relief should be given to the state—which is being hit by growing unemployment.

The question is how much relief.

Gov. Robert Holmes and members of his Democratic party have proposed that 10 per cent be lopped from the 1957 state income tax bill of each resident.

Holmes said this would mean a tax reduction of about 18 million dollars. In addition, Holmes said five million should be added to the basic school support fund. This in effect, would cut property taxes.

Republicans, however, want 50 million dollars lopped from the 1957 income tax bill.

Warren Gill, the GOP leader in the evenly-divided Senate, said Republicans also want "to make the change in the rate schedule so that it will have a measure of permanence."

Gill said the Democrats "just want to pacify the taxpayer ahead of the 1958 election and then have the high rate schedule still there to clobber him with a few months later."

A few Democrats feel that a large part of the surplus should be diverted to the fund which pays unemployment benefits to the obless in the state.

There were 26,000 obless persons in the state last month. In a comparable period of a year ago, 15,000 were unemployed.

The state estimates that 33,500

Foundation Asks More Basic Science Research

By FRANK CAREY

WASHINGTON (AP)—The National Science Foundation, calling for greater American support for basic scientific research, says Russia has given "special and significant attention" to it.

The NSF in a report yesterday recommended far reaching measures designed to increase the national effort in this type of research.

Among the key recommendations was one calling for revisions of federal income tax laws as a means of increasing "philanthropic giving for basic research" by industries, other non-federal organizations and individuals. It proposed a tax credit for such support, and one especially aimed at encouraging greater support from low- and middle-income individuals.

The principal purpose of the foundation is to foster basic research and education in the sciences. It was created by Congress in 1950 to promote scientific progress.

Basic or fundamental research is research for new knowledge which may or may not have practical value. But the NSF calls such research "the indispensable basis for practical developments."

The 64-page report declared that Russia apparently is devoting a greater proportion of its total research effort to the basic type than is the United States. A spokesman said a tentative estimate is 14 per cent for the Russians compared with about eight for the United States.

The report made no reference to Russia's recent success in launching her satellite.

As regards national security, it said, "the objectives have in recent years acquired a measure of added urgency because of the special and significant attention given to basic research in the Soviet Union."

The report also said: "There is reason to believe that the United States supports more basic research than any other single country. Yet the potential of its scientists exceeds the support available, and probably exceeds it by a considerable amount."

Among other recommendations

'Pilot State' In Red Tape Study

GREENSBORO (AP)—The Federal Housing Administration has designed North Carolina as a pilot state in an experiment to cut red tape on home loans of $20,000 or less.

J. L. Widman Sr., state director with offices here, said yesterday steps will be taken at once to get the one-year experimental program under way.

Widman said if the program succeeds in North Carolina it will be made a permanent policy of the FHA and extended throughout the agency.

The plan will be limited to financial institutions in towns having a population of 15,000 or less. It is believed that small town bankers not only know property values in their areas, but they know prospective borrowers as well.

Properties eligible for the short cut lending process are single-unit homes on which insured loans of not more than $20,000 can be made and on certain urban or farm-type housing on which commitments up to $8,000 can be made.

House Burglar Messy Intruder

BURBANK, Calif. (AP)—Jack Reimer says the burglar who broke into his house certainly was a lousy housekeeper. When Reimer returned from a recent vacation he found the sink stacked with dirty dishes, beds unmade and food spilled on the floor. Whoever broke into the house didn't take anything, just ate and slept, Reimer said, "But he was a real slob."

Another War Would Surpass Past U.S. Industrial Strains

By SAM DAWSON

NEW YORK (AP)—Any war of tomorrow could put a strain on the nation's industries far beyond the challenge they met so successfully in World War II.

Industrial engineers say that missiles call for complicated parts and strange alloys that require more steps in manufacture, more men and machines than did the comparatively simpler engines of destruction in the last war.

Many of the problems aren't licked yet—problems that didn't enter into the older type of warfare at all. Even after they are solved, setting up high speed production lines for missiles in an emergency would beg both for more automation and for more skilled workers.

Industrialists in World War II were startled when President Roosevelt ordered production multiplied several fold to turn out 50,000 warplanes a year. The job was done in time by the aircraft industry and its host of suppliers and the civilian industries that were transformed into war plants.

The Defense Department's exact spending on missiles is a secret, but industry estimates it to be about three billion dollars a year, twice what it was two years ago. Perhaps 100,000 persons work on them in dozens of plants. More money could be poured in, if Congress ordered—but it would take more than money to get the host of missiles that war might demand.

Fred K. Powell, Jr., vice president of engineering for American Machine & Foundry, contends: "By conventional modern methods of manufacture, it has already been found that there aren't enough people in the country to make the small transformers and relays which would be needed for guided missiles in a full dress, ready for war missile armaments program."

But progress toward more automation is reported. For example, synchro coils are needed in vast numbers in missile equipment. In each synchro, about the size of an egg, there are 2,000 feet of wire. Normally it takes girl factory workers 40 minutes to wind these coils with small winding machines. New Methods and machines by AM&F now allow one operator to run four machines at a time and produce four synchros in seven minutes.

Engineering as well as manufacturing problems still abound. Industrial scientists are busy studying what happens to electronic and mechanical equipment in a missile as it goes through uncustomed atmospheric conditions of the ionosphere, which man now has penetrated.

One such study is under way at a laboratory of Litton Industries of Los Angeles. There scientists are also testing lubricants for use in high altitudes where ordinary ones vaporize or lose their properties. There's also the problem of what happens to the intercontinental ballistic missile warhead when it reenters the earth's atmosphere at 18,000 miles an hour.

When, some years hence, all the scientific and production problems are licked in America, Orval R. Cook, president of the Aircraft Industries Assn., quotes military experts as expecting that missiles will be handling most air defense missions and up to half of offensive missions.

Missiles call for harder, tougher and costlier heat resistant steels and new high strength light metals. Republic Steel engineers say these metals are more complex to work with, more demanding of lead time than were the carbon steels of World War I and the aluminum and magnesium of World War II.

Industry also will be up against a paper barrier, too, in a major conflict. Already, industry production chiefs say, the blueprints and specification sheets for the more complex missiles weigh more than the finished product.

Rabbit Hunting Isn't The Same

SCHUYLER, Va. (AP)—John Mayo thinks railroadings is still a fine thing, but he deprecates the fact that rabbit hunting isn't as good as it used to be.

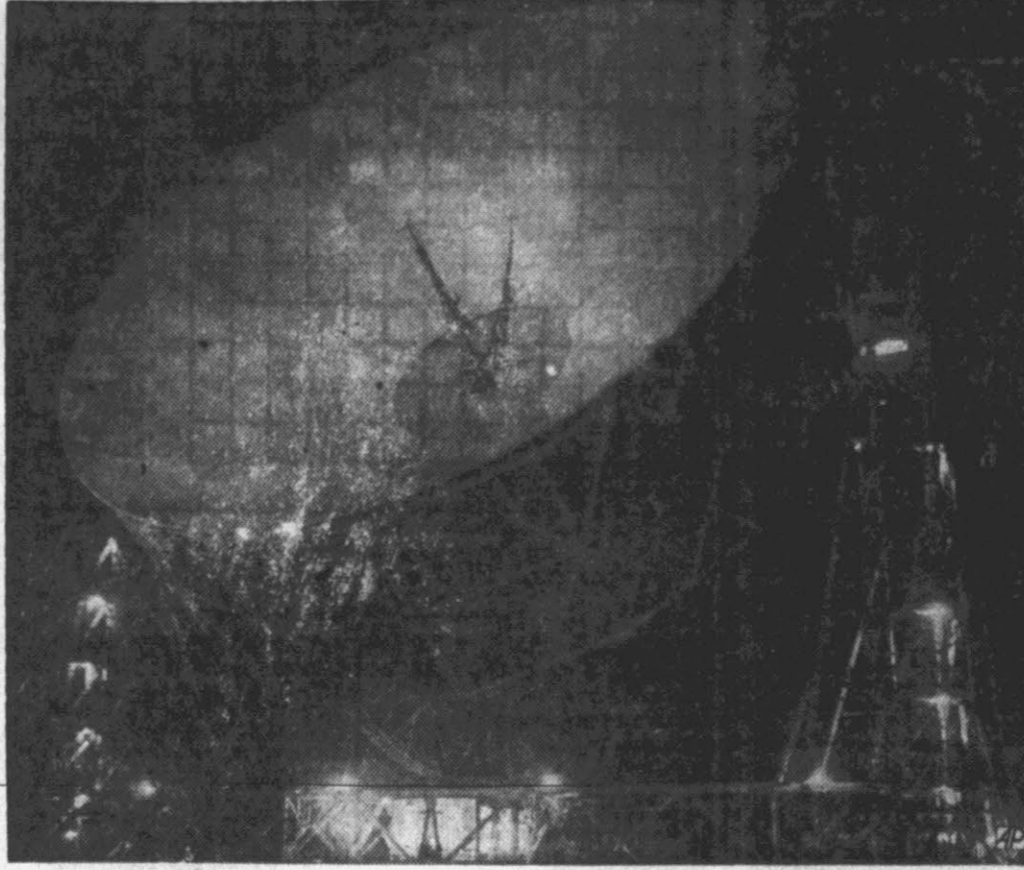

Mayo, retiring after 51 years on the Nelson and Albemarle railroad, owned by a stone company, says he used to stop the engine almost any time and shoot a rabbit—got 14 in one season. As engineer he covered the railroad's 32 miles every day after he advanced from fireman in 1925.

CHAPTER 19

The following afternoon Ed Veach showed up in a buggy. I knew the sheriff would have to come and I knew he'd be grumpy. He was. The weather had stayed cold, so the drive across the plateau against the wind must have been anything but pleasant.

"Howdy, Munro," he said. "A doggone cold day."

"It is," I agreed. "Come in and warm up. Stay for supper."

"No, I'll go on to Elder Smith's place," Veach said. "I stopped here to ask you what you know about your pa's death."

I had given this some thought and made up my mind what to say. I wasn't going to tell him about the footprint I'd found, or that I was convinced the killer lived in the park. So I told Veach how Pa had died and that I'd been sure the saddle tramp Jones had done the killing, and I'd wasted the day chasing him.

Veach listened, but even with his face half covered by the muffler I had the notion he wasn't interested. When I finished, he said, "I'll have a talk with Colohan before I leave. Thanks, Munro."

Later I learned he spent two nights with Elder Smith, he did talk to Matt Colohan and went back to Buhi. He made no arrests, he didn't do any more investigating, and when he returned to town he released Jones, who left the country at once.

Our winter was a hard one, the worst Elder Smith could remember. I hired Kip Dance the first of the year, and it was a good thing I did. Kip was good help, good company around the house in the evenings.

Bess never told us whether she heard from Gil or not. We didn't, and a cold fury began to grow in me. My mother cried a good deal. Sometimes she would put an arm around me and ask, "Do you think he's all right, Dave?" And I would say, "Sure he is. He's just too busy to write."

Strange the way it went through these cold, bitter weeks. Because Kip and I almost lived with our cattle, our winter loss was practically nothing: a couple of calves to wolf; and early in March Kip got the wolf. Even Bess, with two good hands like Barney Lux and Shorty Quinn, had heavier loss than we did, and I heard that Matt Colohan was hard hit. Rafter 3 would be, too.

I had a feeling that the greater the Rafter 3's loss was, the bigger price we'd have to pay. I never escaped the feeling that I might meet a bullet just as my father had.

I learned a lot of things that winter because I had to. At first I hadn't felt much grief about my father's death. But as the days went by I felt his loss more keenly. The thing that surprised me the most, and was the least expected, was the unmistakable fact that my mother and I were being drawn closer together. I think we began to see in each other characteristics which we hadn't known existed.

She missed Pa, too. One time she said sadly, "It's a shame I never realized how much I loved your father when he was alive."

Of course there was no way to tell how much Ma had really changed until Gil got back. And he would come back. I never doubted it. He did, late in March. He had been gone three months almost to the day.

If any man ever changed, in appearance at least, Gil had. I doubt if I would have known him if I hadn't recognized his horse. He was that thin. Even with two weeks' growth of beard on his face, his cheeks seemed to have collapsed. His clothes were practically rags. When he dismounted, I saw he wasn't wearing Pa's gun. Even his horse wag in bad shape.

Ma kissed him and cried, and I shook hands with him, and so did Kip. Then he looked at Ma and said, "Is there anything to eat?"

"Of course, Gil," she said, and ran into the house.

I asked, "Where's Pa's gun?"

"I'd been a little sore about him taking it in the first place. I'd naturally figured Pa's gun would be mine, but before I knew what was going on, he'd taken it and left the country."

Gil looked me right in the eyes, a sullen, hungry man who hated me. He said: "I sold it in Grand Junction to buy something to eat. Go on, cuss me out. Lord it over me. I'm the prodigal son who used up my inheritance in riotous living, and I had to eat with the pigs to even stay alive. Now get out the fatted calf and butcher it. I'm back, Dave. I'm back, and I'm gonna live off the fat of the land like you've been!"

"You won't need me any more, I guess," Kip said.

"Reckon not," Gil said. "Pay him off, Dave." Then he turned and went into the kitchen to eat. I didn't want a showdown in front of Kip, so I got his month's wages. He picked up a few things he had in Gil's room and walked out. I followed him, when he heard me, he turned. "I'm sorry for you, Dave. Why didn't he get his neck broken?"

"Yeah, why didn't he?" I said. "Well, you were a good hand, Dip. You were a good boss," he said, and held out his hand. "So long."

I shook hands with him, I said, "Go by Nordin's, will you, and tell Bess he's back."

He grinned. "Glad to, Dave." When I got back, Gil was shaving. I said: "Let's get something straight, Gil. This spread needs two men to do the work. I guess you're going to be one of them since you wanted to let Kip go, but I've been running the outfit and I'm going to keep on running it. If you need some convincing, we'll step outside and you'll get it."

Affronted, Gil turned around to look at Ma.

"Gil," she said, her face showing how miserable she felt, "things have changed since your father died. Dave's worked hard this winter and he's done well. You'll take his orders if you stay."

"Well, if that ain't a — of a note!" He turned back to the mirror on the wall and finished shaving.

When Gil had washed and dressed, I asked, "Going over to see Bess?"

He whirled to face me. "No, I'm not going to see Bess. She don't care about me."

She'd come, all right, but it was another ten minutes before she showed up crossing the back porch and knocking on the door. I let her in. She scarcely nodded at me; her eyes on Gil. He stood there,

Cowboy Suit Is Still Preferred

LONDON (AP)—The British boy of today may have been born in the space age but he still prefers a cowboy suit.

Tonald Strode, of the British Toy Manufacturers Assn., says children on the whole are conservative when it comes to toys.

The little girl of 1957 wants a doll and a teddy bear for Christmas. Strode believes. Her brother still demands something from the American wild West, or a Robin Hood getup.

"Space suits and moon rockets were just a passing fancy," said Edward Brady, chairman of a group of toy retailers. "This year they're definitely out."

"British boys and most of those on the continent still prefer a bow and arrow to a death ray space gun."

He acknowledged that miniature Sputniks will be on sale for Christmas 1958, but said:

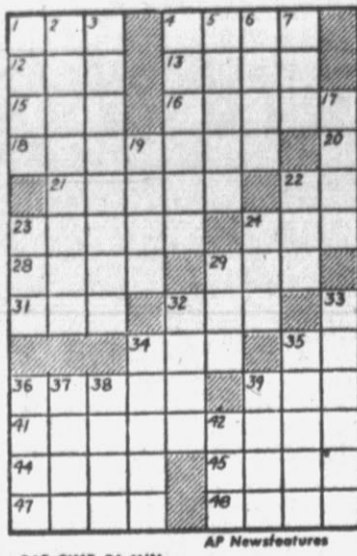

"I'll bet you a bow and arrow to a toy radar that a Sputnik will never outsell a cuddly teddy bear."

TOP FARMER—Clarence C. Campbell Jr., 21, of Belvidere, N. C., is the recipient of the 1957 Star Farmer award, the most coveted degree conferred by the Future Farmers of America. He began farming in 1950.

Mexico Pushing TV Coverage Across Country

By JACK RUTLEDGE
 MEXICO CITY (AP)—Mexico, first Latin American nation to have television, now hopes to be the first to have it beamed to every corner of the country. This goal may be reached within a year.

The industry, privately operated is growing rapidly despite the high costs of sets and the low budgets for productions.

Nine stations bring TV to most of central Mexico, some border sections and part of the Gulf Coast. A half dozen more will make programs available to virtually every part of the country.

There are perhaps 250,000 sets in use.

Because of import duties, the cheapest table model set costs around $200. That is high even for white collar workers who average $60-$100 a month and buy on the installment plan.

When television was new, many stars performed just to be on the air. Now they want a little money, too. A little is what they're getting.

One of the top shows stars a gravel-voiced character named Cavillazo. His leading men and women get about $1250 a show, including rehearsals. Other performers with good parts get $250 and $3, and extras are happy to pick up 50 cents or a dollar.

Despite the high cost people are buying sets, and despite the lagging quality of some shows people are looking at them.

Some stations are adding retransmitters on nearby mountain peaks to beam programs far away. Such major cities as Veracruz and Tampico depend on such retransmissions.

The most popular shows are

The market was lower at the start. After an active opening the pace slowed.

Coopers were helped by signs of a pickup in demand and by optimistic statements about the industry from the presidents of Anaconda and Kennecott Copper. Steel shares were lower as producers were reported lowering their estimates of production in the next two months.

Sees Effort To Remove Tribble

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — Dr. Walton Kitchin, a son of a former president of Wake Forest College, says alumni are organizing a drive to have the current president of the Baptist school, Dr. Harold W. Tribble, removed.

Dr. Kitchin, son of the late president Thurmon Kitchin, said the alumni will not support the college as long as Dr. Tribble is president, and the college cannot operate "as it should" without such support.

Dr. Tribble said he had no comment on the report.

Kitchin gave his views in an interview while here from his home in Clinton over the weekend for the annual meeting of the alumni of Bowman Gray School of Medicine, a branch of Wake Forest.

Kitchin said he is not a leader in the anti-Tribble movement. He said he is just one among a "majority who believe we can not rally around the administration of Dr. Tribble." He said he believed about 75 per cent of the college's approximately 14,500 alumni share his views.

He said there are no indications what methods the alumni will use. He added that the attack will come to a head within the coming months, but said it would not be at the Baptist State Convention, which meets in Raleigh Nov. 19.
