West Weighs Soviet Report Of New Missile Fuel, Instruments

By FRED S. HOFFMAN WASHINGTON (AP)—The West today weighed the significance of a Russian announcement that new instruments and sources of power were used to send Sputnik II and its dog passenger more than 1,000 miles into space. Some doubts were expressed that the Russians had used any revolutionary new kind of fuel, but no one could be certain.

American scientists, who have received meager information from the Russians on Sputnik I and Sputnik II, had to rely mainly on their own studies and knowledge in reaching any conclusions.

Laika, the fluffy little female dog making a lonely space journey aboard the half-ton Sputnik II, was reported by the Russians to have come through her first 24 hours aloft in satisfactory condition.

The Soviet news agency Tass said in Moscow that this was confirmed by recordings of Laika's pulse, breathing, blood pressure and other information sent back by the satellite's radio transmitters.

However, there appeared to be differences of opinion among Russian specialists as to Laika's life expectancy.

Officials at the Soviet Planetarium suggested the dog may be parachuted back to earth. But Prof. Kiril P. Sanyukovich, a Russian rocket expert, implied Laika may die encased in the huge satellite sent aloft last Saturday night.

Russia's pioneer earth satellite, launched Oct. 4, took a back seat as world attention focused on the much more bigger Sputnik II. The first satellite, sphere said by the Russians to weigh about 184 pounds, has completed nearly 500 trips around the earth. Its radio equipment is dead.

Air Force Checking Up On Mystery Flying Objects

LUBBOCK, Tex. (AP)—A missile engineer reported seeing a "brilliant colored egg-shaped object" which he said stalled autos in New Mexico yesterday.

The Air Force has started an investigation into similar reports in this and other areas.

Witnesses say a mystery object skipped about the countryside here and near scientific military bases in New Mexico over the weekend. The reported sightings startled citizens, peace officers and servicemen but apparently left no concrete trace.

James Stokes, 45, an engineer from the Air Force Missile Development Center at Holloman Air Force Base, Alamogordo, N.M., said he saw the object on Oct. 28.

Looking up, he told Clark, "I saw a brilliant colored egg-shaped object making a shallow dive across the sky to the northeast. Then it turned and made a pass at the highway and crossed it not more than two miles ahead. Then it moved away toward White Sands Proving Grounds to the southwest. As it passed . . . I could feel a kind of heat wave, like radiation from a giant sun lamp. But there was no sound. It had no visible portholes and there was no vapor trail."

"When I got back to my car and checked the engine, I found it intact but the battery was steaming. But the engine started with no difficulty. I called officials at the Air Force Development Center and notified them of the sighting," he said.

He said the object moved very rapidly and its surface looked like "glowing mother of pearl."

He said Allan D. Baker of Las Cruces, N.M., shot some pictures of the object.

Clark said he was unable to get a statement from Holloman officials and was unable to reach Baker.

A spokesman at Reese Air Force Base here said yesterday a representative of the Air Defense Command had flown in from the Colorado Springs, Colo., headquarters.

When Sputnik I was launched more than a month ago, its orbit carried it to within 170 miles of the earth and as far out as 560 miles. These distances have decreased somewhat since.

The government astronomer said that because Sputnik II's orbit carried it closer to the earth, it is likely the newer satellite will fall sooner than Sputnik I. He estimated Sputnik I will drop earthward about the end of January.

The Russian announcement about new instruments and sources of power for Sputnik II came in a Moscow radio broadcast last night. It quoted a person identified only as "Academician Diskushin" as saying:

"A multi-stage carrier rocket of a new design with foolproof precision controls had to be used for putting the satellite into its computed orbit."

"The increase in the satellite's size to provide for a larger number of measuring the telemetering instruments, and even for an animal passenger, necessitated the development of improved new instruments and sources of power."

Before the Moscow broadcast, Sen. Jackson (D-Wash.) said in Seattle the size of the second Russian satellite and the distance it reached "gives us reason to suspect the Soviets may have achieved nuclear rocket propulsion ahead of us."

In Cambridge, Mass., two rocket experts said they doubt the Russians used any new type fuel to launch Sputnik II.

Frederick C. Durant III, a former president of the American Rocket Society, said that in his opinion the Russian launching system is based on "conventional propellants such as liquid oxygen and kerosene. Durant said he believes the Russians have developed larger rocket engines."

Dr. H. Guyford Stever, associate dean of the engineering school at Massachusetts Institute of Technology, also voiced skepticism about any new Russian super-fuel. However, he said it is possible the Russians are using batteries deriving energy from the sun's rays to power the satellite's instruments. This, he said, "would be quite an achievement."

Durant theorized the Russians "can put a 50-pound satellite on the moon whenever they want to" and that "they could even put one around the moon and have it return." He said "I expect them to do both of these things within a year."

"We in this country have considerable cause for alarm," Durant said.

This jibed with the views of a number of Congress members, who have said urgent moves are needed to keep the United States from falling far behind Russia in modern weapons capability.

Three Senate leaders yesterday received a seven-hour Pentagon briefing on U. S. progress in missiles and rockets.

ROBERSONVILLE—The three-state search for three young girls missing from here since late Saturday night ended yesterday afternoon.

The girls, daughters of Willie H. Roberson, were returned to their rural home near Robersonville after Ralph Grady, wanted for the shooting of James Luther Gardner of Jamesville, gave himself up in Williamston. They were unharmed.

According to Martin County Sheriff Raymond Rawls, Grady, 21, and Barbara Ann Roberson, 18, the oldest girl missing, were married in Emporia, Va. on Sunday.

Sheriff Rawls stated that her two sisters, 13 and nine, told officers they had a "good time."

The incident had caused considerable commotion in and around this small Martin County community. As many as 250 people were present at the Roberson residence during the extensive search conducted for the girls and Grady.

Grady told officers he didn't remember anything that happened at the Airport Inn (the scene of the shooting Saturday night), adding he was drunk at the time. He was charged with assault with a deadly weapon with the intent to kill, inflicting serious bodily wounds. Rawls stated no other charges had been made pending further investigation of the shooting and subsequent disappearance of the three girls.

Physicians report Gardner's condition to be "satisfactory." An operation has been performed to remove the bullet lodged in his chest below his heart. One physician stated he would recover "barring complications."

Barbara Ann, Grady's wife, told the Sheriff she heard the commotion on the inside of the joint and ran in, preventing him from shooting Gardner a second time.

She said she knew Grady and could handle him when he was drinking. After they left the scene, she stated that Grady would not let her and the two younger girls return home. James Earl Matthews, 18, who had come to town with the girls to go to the show was also in the car and accompanied the four during their absence.

Matthews gave no indication that Grady attempted to harm him or anyone in the car.

He stated they went beyond Baltimore, Md. while they just rode "around and about" late Saturday night and Sunday. Rawls stated that Grady and the oldest girl stopped in Emporia Sunday and were married. He quoted the girl as saying she and Grady had been seeing each other and planned to elope once before but changed their minds.

Rawls said she was in "an emotional state of mind" this morning and that he had not questioned her further about the incident.

Grady told officers he had thrown the pistol, a 22 German-make revolver, out the window somewhere in Virginia. The weapon was found in the automobile concealed on top of the radio under the dashboard.

Airport Commissioners To Seek Piedmont Link

The Airport Commission will investigate to determine what steps may be taken for obtaining air service to Greenville by Piedmont Airlines.

Commissioners last night approved unanimously a motion to "go on record as authorizing an investigation to determine what efforts may be taken to obtain air service to Greenville by Piedmont Airlines, and if necessary petition to intervene in the Piedmont Local Service Area Investigation now before the Civil Aeronautics Board."

A pre-hearing conference on the Local Service Area Investigation is to be held in Washington, D.C. Nov. 14.

The action was approved last night by Commission members Vance Perkins, J. A. Collins Sr., C. W. Harvey, W. Woodrow Wood-len and W. T. Kyszer. Also attending the meeting were County Attorney W. W. Speight, Attorney Bill Watson and Engineer Tom Rivers.

It was also reported at last night's meeting that the Serv-Air contract would be terminated Nov. 27 under the 90-day option in the contract. The air force training school in Kinston was discontinued during the summer.

Serv-Air paid a rental of $2,500 annually for use of the local airports. The commission was told that several runway lights were salvaged from the discontinued portion of the east-west runway. They will be used to replace broken lights on the other runways. The section of the east-west runway was taken for construction of the

Set Holidays For County Employees

County employees will miss their regular New Year's Day holiday of come January 1, 1958, but they'll get an extra day at Christmas to make up for it.

Pitt County Commissioners made that decision yesterday afternoon in considering the holiday schedule for the county for the remainder of this year. According to action taken by the Commissioners, county employees will work a regular day on Monday, December 23, but county offices will be closed the remainder of Christmas week, reopening on December 30. It will amount to a four-day holiday for county employees since they normally do not work on Saturdays.

County offices will remain open on January 1, normally a holiday for county employees.

Other holidays approved by the Commissioners yesterday are November 11, Armistice Day; and November 28, Thanksgiving Day.

C. B. Mashburn of Farmville petitioned the Commissioners for reimbursement for the loss of 61 pheasants which Mashburn said were killed by a pack of dogs. Mashburn informed the board that the dogs broke into the pen where the birds were being raised and destroyed them. The Commissioners appointed a committee of three freeholders to investigate the case and make a recommendation to the board.

Apparently Hit By Stray Bullet

A local woman was shot late yesterday afternoon presumably by a stray bullet while sitting on the back steps of her home on Ridgeway St.

Mrs. James Willis Cannon, 23, the wife of a lumberman, suffered a minor wound of her right leg when she was sitting when she felt "something pop" in her leg. She said she first thought it might be a blood vessel.

A short time later she was taken to Pitt Memorial Hospital for treatment. Upon examination of the wound physicians found the slug, fired from a 22 rifle. Following treatment she was released.

The woman stated that she heard no gun fire before or after the "strange feeling" in her leg. No evidence of foul play has been uncovered by officers who are continuing their investigation.

Flu-Like Cases Said Letting Up

The "flu-like" epidemic which has gripped county and city schools for several days showed further signs of letting up today as both school systems reported drops in absences.

City School Superintendent J. H. Rose reported that absences this morning were around 200 below the figures for yesterday.

The city schools reported 713 absences today compared with 921 yesterday. Peak for city schools came last Thursday when 1,286 absences were reported.

Rose said of today's absences, 465 were in white schools and 248 were reported in Negro schools.

"It's improving everywhere," the superintendent said.

Meanwhile D. H. Conley, superintendent of county schools, reported an improvement in the rural system.

He said he did not have school figures for today, "but everything I've checked shows an improvement."

"I think we're over the hump," he declared.

All the schools are operating but "it's considered wise that special activities be limited so as to reduce fatigue for students and teachers."

"That might mean the cancellation of some activities but we think that's advisable at least this week and part of next."

Consider Fire Hydrants For Grimesland Schools

Pitt County's Board of Education is investigating possibilities of installing fire hydrants at two Grimesland schools.

At its meeting yesterday the Board received a letter from the town of Grimesland requesting that the hydrants be installed in conjunction with efforts of Grimesland's governing board to provide fire protection in that Pitt County town.

D. H. Conley, Superintendent of Pitt County Schools, said this morning the Board of Education is seeking to determine whether water storage facilities at the two schools will afford sufficient pressure for the fire hydrants. Each of the schools has its own water storage tank and water system. Grimesland has no municipal water system.

Contracts for three new Negro teachers in county schools, and one teacher replacement in the white schools were approved by the Board yesterday. Contracts were approved for Henrietta White Davis at the Falkland-Bruce Negro elementary school, Ada Joan Beattie Clemons at the Fountain Negro elementary school, John Baggett Smith, Jr. at Bethel Negro High School, and Mrs. Virginia Bobbitt Maynard as a replacement at the Bethel white elementary school.

The board heard a report from Superintendent Conley on the flu situation in the county schools and inspected the new Negro elementary school at Bruce which is under construction.

Reports Of Lights In The Sky Over Carolinas Are Spreading

Gene Granger of McColl said his brother-in-law, Bowden Tyler, and Tyler's nephew, Buddy Jacobs, saw a dark object hovering over Red Bluff Pond, where they were fishing last Wednesday night.

The men ran to Granger's home and said the object appeared to be about the size of an automobile, was about 70 feet up and had an engine that sounded like a diesel.

Mrs. Barbara Jean Stokes of Lumberton, who was driving with her husband and another couple last Thursday evening, said the group saw an object about 200 feet long in the sky. She said the object "raised straight up, then flamed," and their automobile stalled.

object in the western sky, traveling in a general northerly direction. He said it did not appear very high up.

A. W. Blackburn of Winston-Salem, who works for a Charlotte construction company, reported a sighting about 6:30 a.m. yesterday as he was driving on U.S. 29 outside Concord.

Blackburn said the object appeared about one foot across, glowing more brilliantly than the sun. He added that it was just over the horizon, was sinking and left a trail of light like a flare.

"I've seen planes drop flares, the Northern Lights, and the battle of Okinawa," he commented, "but that thing knocked me for more of a loop than anything I've ever seen."

Bill Hamby of near Weddington said that about 4 a.m. yesterday he got up to see why his dog was barking. From his bedroom window, he reported, he saw a red object "like an airplane on fire, but bigger." From outside, he saw the

Fall Wardrobe May Need Spice

Have you ever felt you were slipping in having that flair in your clothes? Have you ever wanted to fix up that black dress you just simply could not give away, but kept in the back of your closet for it lacked today's new look? Well, do something about it. "Put Spice In Your Fall Wardrobe."

How can this be done? Here is your cue. Come to the Home Economics department in Flanagan Building on the East Carolina College campus where several demonstrations are being given by three East Carolina home economics students, Hilda Jennings, Rebecca Batts and Eleanor Stephenson, as well as Rebecca Smith, home economics teacher, Junius H. Think Of Children Before Moving Day

By VIVIAN BROWN
Children, more than the parents, are likely to suffer when the family moves.

Young adults, particularly, are likely to feel at loose ends without their friends and acquaintances, the security involved in all those local organizational enterprises — church, community clubs, athletic teams, school functions.

There is little that some parents can do about a move—Dad may be transferred to a new job or perhaps ill health necessitates a change of climate for some member of the family. Perhaps the reasons are less important.

Parents should be prepared to cope with the adjustments that may be forced on their children as the result of being in a new environment, says the Child Study Association. The group is trying to further the idea of easing the burden of moving day for the family with some sound tips.

Let the youngsters participate in house-hunting and plans for removal and selection of the new home, they suggest. Interest them in the new environment, perhaps in opportunities available for new companions or new activities in that area.

It's a good idea, too, to let them go over the house in advance, and for the entire family to be in on room selections. Maybe Dick who enjoys painting would prefer a north window, while Kathy who loves sunshine and plants might prefer the south-west exposure. Let them talk it out.

Parents should suggest, even before the move takes place, that each youngster invite his closest friend for a weekend just as soon as they are settled, and perhaps a date may be made even before the move is made.

As soon as the youngsters are settled in a new school, encourage them to invite some of their new class mates to your home, and have a housewarming party for new acquaintances. It's a good idea to include the new teachers in a dinner party when possible, particularly if they have not met you when the children were entered in school.

Keep the young people as busy as possible when you move into that new neighborhood. Whenever it seems that they have time on their hands, dream up something that will interest them. Trips to explore the neighborhood, movies, shopping, and nearby points of interest may take their minds off their problems, and keep them from brooding, until they make new friends.

They may get into the swing of things quicker by joining the Girl Scouts or Boy Scouts, Campfire Girls, 4-H Clubs, dramatics clubs and other local enterprises. Another enterprise that might keep them busy is making up a map of their new home area, per-

She carried an arm bouquet of large white chrysanthemums. Only the families and a few friends witnessed the ceremony.

Natural Gas Should Be Promoted

When a new product is ready for public consumption its manufacturer and distributors spare no horses to let the public know about it. They want potential customers to know about the product, to be thinking about it, to be looking forward to its being available at a local store.

Eastern North Carolina might take a lesson from that long tried and proven practice of merchandising.

Natural gas will be available in Eastern North Carolina in the not-too-distant future. In the opinion of most of the area's leaders in industrial development, it will afford this section an important new asset in attracting outside plants. The people of this part of the state have been told that time and again in recent months. They are looking forward to the day when natural gas will be available in Greenville and other Eastern Carolina towns.

But has this section of the state taken the time or trouble to point out to industry that Eastern Carolina soon will add natural gas to the assets it can offer?

We think not. North Carolina Natural Gas Corp., which will furnish the area between Wilmington, Fayetteville and Elizabeth City with this low-cost new fuel, is now preparing for financing activities preliminary to beginning a 20 million dollar pipeline construction program. It is likely that during the coming year natural gas will be available in this area.

Eastern North Carolina should not wait until then to begin telling industry it will have this new asset to offer. It should be telling industry about it now; pointing up the extra advantage the section has to offer. With the proper promotion program, Eastern Carolina could have new industries here ready to use the new fuel when it is available.

To be sure it will take a number of months to construct the pipeline into this section. But it takes many months to construct an industrial plant also.

Eastern North Carolina should use the time between now and the date natural gas is actually available in this area to promote this new asset in conjunction with its industrial development program. By so doing, the area may not have to wait many months after natural gas is available here to begin to feel the benefits of this new asset.

Curly Is Living Up To Best Dog Traditions

Forget about Sputnik II for the moment. Let's talk about that lonesome little dog a thousand miles above the earth with one chance in a million of getting back down to trees, fire hydrants and run-of-the-kennel fleas.

As dogs go, Curly is really leading a dogs life. Chances are Curly took a few of her favorite fleas with her on her pioneer flight into outer space. But they will be of little comfort. As a matter of fact they'll probably add to her discomfort since she is undoubtedly tied down, unable to free even one paw for a healthy scratch.

Information indicates she doesn't even have a bone to chew on as she circles the earth every 103.7 minutes. She can't romp and play in that little air conditioned container as most healthy dogs (and she must be healthy) normally would.

In spite of all these discomforts, we can't hold with the tidal wave of protests being made by other dog lovers over Curly's being sentenced to life in a satellite.

Curly, in the finest tradition of generations of man's best friend, probably finds a great deal of inner-dog satisfaction in offering herself as a sacrifice to further the knowledge of mankind.

After all, she probably had a choice between making the flight or going to Siberia. We guess she made the wisest choice.

About 'Rolling Readjustments'

By ELMER ROESSNER
There is a lot of talk about a "rolling readjustment" these days and signs and portents indicate there will be more talk in the future.

That leaves the question: Just what is a rolling readjustment? The term is fairly new and there are no formal definitions. Therefore, it can mean exactly what the user intends it to mean. A rolling readjustment can mean the way a fat man ties his shoes, or it can mean "Oh, boy! I don't like the way things are going."

However, there is a wide area of agreement on one, albeit vague, conception. Let's try this: A rolling readjustment is an economic phenomenon during which a decline in some industries is largely or partially offset by rises in others.

CURRENT EXAMPLE
There is a remarkably clear example at the moment. The Federal government has cut back its orders for aircraft. Plane manufacturers have laid off thousands of men. Some estimate total unemployment may reach 100,000 by the end of the year.

At the same time, little 'ol Sputnik is causing the government to step up other defense measures: the perfection of long-range guided missiles, the improvement of defenses against intercontinental missiles, the development of our own little moons, and the placing of an automatic broadcasting station on the old, familiar moon.

Eventually, defense spending will rise to a higher level than it is at present. In the intervening time, some companies will be frantically recruiting skilled men while others are laying them off. Many families will find it necessary to move from depressed areas to boom communities. Some small business, now surviving on the spending of aircraft payrolls, will be forced under; other enterprises near missile projects will fatten. Much of this will be painful but it will be better, in general, than a bust.

THE ROLL IN CONSTRUCTION
There has been another interesting rolling readjustment in the construction field. During the last few years home building has declined. At the same time, can meet and overwhelm the troops sent against him. This was the Great Teachers way of saying that planning is an essential part of wholesome spiritual life.

We are never too old to stop and ask ourselves whether or not we are dawdling, and if we do ask ourselves that question, we may be amazed to find that we are — and have been for a long time — doing that very thing. Our first job was something we stumbled upon. We found ourselves involved in serious situations, not because we planned that way but because they just happened. Accordingly, as we walked along the pathway of life, certain people, with purpose written all over their faces, elbowed us aside and passed us by.

These were people who had plans for their lives.

These were people who had plans for their lives.

These were people who had plans for their lives.

These were people who had plans for their lives.

These were people who had plans for their lives.

These were people who had plans for their lives.

These were people who had plans for their lives.

These were people who had plans for their lives.

These were people who had plans for their lives.

Installing A New Organ

Workmen are now installing the organ which will provide music for Jarvis Memorial Methodist Church's beautiful new sanctuary.

The thousands of pipes which make up the organ will be placed in three separate rooms. Two of the rooms are located on either side of the altar at the front of the sanctuary. A third pipe room is located over the right entrance at the rear.

All three sections will be in use when the organ is played from the console which will be located in the main sanctuary.

However, there will be a second console in the small chapel which is being constructed in the center of the building. That console will play the portion of the organ located over the entrance, thus providing organ music for the chapel when it is in use.

The organ will actually serve the purpose of two organs. The Rev. W. M. Howard, Jr., pastor of the church, declares that the organ will be one of the finest in this area.

Not only is the organ being installed, but work is nearing completion of the reconstructed building. The sanctuary has been renewed and the old stained glass windows were retained and some were replaced to match those used in the new section. Stained glass windows were even placed along the right wall of the sanctuary, and although they do not open to the outside, fluorescent lighting was installed behind them to give the illusion of daylight.

To maintain the original appearance of the building, brick was saved as older portions were torn out and they were used to construct the outside walls of the new section. The outside brick thus matches the old sections.

From the front of the church will appear exactly as it was when worshippers began using their newly renovated sanctuary again. One thing will be missing inside however. The great chandelier which once hung in the center of the church has been removed. The chandelier, designed in earlier days of electrical lighting, consisted of dozens of sockets and used ordinary light globes.

In its place, two light fixtures will be hung on each of the big roof supporting beams, plus other special lighting.

Speaking of progress in local building projects, workmen yesterday resumed the job of installing traffic lights on the newly completed U. S. 13-N.C. 11 bypass. The work has been halted by rainy weather last week.

Lights are being installed at the West End Circle intersection and at the N. C. 43 intersection. Pressure plates are being placed in the pavement so that traffic flow will control the cycle of the lights.

It is our hope that this whole matter can be cleared up quickly. Such a controversy does no one any good. It could hurt a lot of people. And by clearing it up, we don't mean making one man the "goat."

There are those who are trying to read something into this story which is not there. The ABC system in North Carolina is not on trial in this particular case. The ABC system is trying to find the truth and to act according to the truth.

And anything less than the full truth now could do ever greater injustices to several people.

Prime Minister Nehru has said publicly that he will judge the effectiveness of the Communist and democratic systems by their respective success in practice and results rather than by their philosophies. So may the pragmatic peoples of all these backward lands.

BATTLE OF SHOWCASES We have announced with considerable ballyhoo, for instance, that we planned to make The Philippines an "American showcase" in the Far Pacific for its psychological effect on Asians. Unfortunately, that experiment has not been too successful for reasons too complicated to detail here. But it is a recognized fact at Manila and Washington.

Now, the Communists have decided to establish showcases of their own as to reinforce their political and military advances and encroachments. It is reminiscent of the ballad which says that "Anything you can do, I can do better."

PEIPING COMMERCE THRIVES In the Far East, and again with Russian assistance, Peiping monopolizes the commerce which belonged to Japan in prewar days. On easy terms, including barter, Red China is satisfying markets in Hong Kong, Indonesia, India and the SEATO nations. She is underselling goods and agricultural products from Formosa, Japan and The Philippines — our three main outposts.

Washington had hoped that these countries, especially Japan, would eventually become the dominant economic power there, resuming the prosperous two-way trade Tokyo once enjoyed with the mainland. But Mao Tse-tung has stolen these customers, although at great domestic hardship and sacrifice, thereby weakening our friends to the point of desperation.

The political and psychological impact has been serious. In recent elections in this vital region, Communist candidates have been eminently successful. The large Chinese population, thriving merchants and civic leaders, are turning to Mao Tse-tung rather than to Chiang Kalshek as their sentimental hero.

Show Biz Is Tough

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK (AP) — Much has been said about how tough it is to get started in show business today.

The standard gag is that it is about as easy as it is for a jockey to play center on a top college basketball team.

But just what are the real odds against a beginner who yearns to earn a living in the spotlight?

A man who has some actual figures on this subject is Ted Mack, emcee of "The Original Amateur Hour," a hardy NBC-TV network perennial of radio and television that will celebrate its 24th birthday next March.

"Over the years we have spent four million dollars auditioning some 900,000 amateurs," said Mack. "Of these about 17,000 — or one in 53 — appeared on our show."

"But only about 3,000 — or one in 300 — went on to become professional performers."

"Not all of these, of course, remained permanently in show business. Some married and got out. Other probably, got smart and got out."

"Perhaps no more than 1 in 10,000 — and probably not that many — went on to become real stars."

Not all of the amateurs, however, burn with a desire to become professionals. About 20 per cent say they wouldn't accept a regular show career. They merely want to appear on a network show once.

"It's simply a feather in their cap," explained Mack. The show still auditions some 500 to 1,500 amateur aspirants a week.

"About 70 per cent are singers," said Ted, "and it has been that way since the show began. About 25 per cent are dancers or instrumentalists, and the rest are novelty groups — such as acrobats, jugglers, magicians and one-man bands."

"The novelty acts have declined with the decline of vaudeville. This has been, by and large, a blessing to the listening public. But it has been a bit hard on the man with a little music in his soul who can express it only by bird whistles or playing a musical saw. He no longer has an audience."

Although he is generally sympathetic to the ego vagaries of amateurs, Mack finds some of the acts painful to listen to even in auditions.

"I must say I get a little weary of people who make music by hitting themselves on the head while their mouth is open," he confessed. "And rock 'n' roll groups that can neither rock nor roll . . . and kitchen bands made up of housewives beating on pots and pans . . . Or people who want to show how they can play 'Ave Maria' on the valves of a steam radiator."

Many present day stars found the amateur hour program a showcase and springboard to fame. They include Frank Sinatra, Paul Winchell, Monica Lewis, Vera-Ellen, and opera baritone Robert Merrill.

But Mack is the first to admit that picking a potential star isn't easy.

"One of the greatest talents we ever had on the show was Frank Sinatra," he recalled, "but he had a rough time with us. He was a member of a quartet called 'The Hoboken Four,' and he had a case on his hands getting us to let him sing a solo."

"You can't always call the great ones on first sight — for one thing, they haven't reached the peak of their talent."

"But generally, if a beginner has personality, some sign of talent, and you can sense in him an inner spark . . . a deep interior drive . . . you usually can be sure that, with more training, he will make the grade, maybe become the star he wants to be."

"If he doesn't have that spark, however, no amount of talent or training can make him great."

Press Election Recalls Stories

By LYNN NISBET

MCKELWAY — Recent election of Benjamin M. McKelway, editor of the Washington Star, as president of the Associated Press revived memories among old-timers in the newspaper field about his late father, Rev. A.J. McKelway and the feud between him and Joseph F. Caldwell of the Charlotte Observer shortly after the turn of the century.

The elder McKelway was a Presbyterian minister. He served as pastor of several churches in Eastern North Carolina before going to Charlotte as editor of the Presbyterian Standard. The new AP president was born in North Carolina, and a younger brother has been a popular Presbyterian minister in the Cape Fear Valley.

"It is interesting to note," said one old-timer newspaperman, "that the Associated Press has elected as its president the son of a man who vigorously fought many of the leading newspapers in the state in his time."

McKelway, the elder, was a highly controversial figure. Although a "man of the cloth" he was active in politics, especially in advocacy of social reforms. He was a bitter opponent of liquor, and often was as intemperate in his comments as he charged his opponents were. He wages a vigorous campaign, in and out of the pulpit and his editorial sanctum, against child labor, and to slightly less degree against long working hours for women and the kind of tenement housing provided textile mill employees.

The time was the first decade of the 20th century, the end of the reconstruction period, the time of the big argument over gold, silver and bi-metalism — which split the Democratic party between Bryan and Cleveland folks, and the beginning of the industrial development of North Carolina with cotton mills and electric power. It was more than 50 years ago.

CALDWELL — Daniel A. Tompkins, a prime mover in the textile mill development, had acquired the Charlotte Observer and brought Joseph P. Caldwell to edit the paper. Caldwell was as much of an individualist as McKelway and a clash was inevitable. The Charlotte Observer was the recognized spokesman for the industrialists, nearly all of whom sided either with the McKelway Republicans or the Cleveland "goldbugs." McKelway threw the force of his church paper on the side of the Bryan silver faction of a bi-metal policy, of which Joseph Daniels' Raleigh News and Observer was the principal North Carolina advocate.

Partisan politics was secondary to both Caldwell and McKelway. Caldwell was primarily concerned with the industrial development of North Carolina, and felt that end could be best reached under a gold money standard and the building of manufacturing plants. McKelway was concerned with the plight of little children and women in the cotton mills, and bitterly castigated their exploitation for the profit of mill owners.

From discussion of principles the controversy between Caldwell and McKelway went into an extremely bitter personal feud. On one occasion Caldwell equipped that "If A.J. McKelway has religion, I'd rather have smallpox." McKelway retorted with highly uncomplimentary remarks about Caldwell's personal habits and family life.

The feud resulted in a libel suit brought by McKelway against Caldwell and the Observer. The case never came to trial, having been compromised by the lawyers — including some of the biggest legal names of that decade — on the ground that public trial would "tear Mecklenburg county and the State of North Carolina to pieces."

LAW SUIT — The libel suit, which might seem to be the easiest of all items to substantiate from records, is perhaps the most hazy in memory of old-timers. A telephone call to Lester Wolfe, clerk of Superior Court in Mecklenburg county, elicited information that his staff could find no record of such a lawsuit. Federal court records haven't been checked, and it might have been instituted there.

Old-timers recall that the action was started, that claim was made for substantial actual and punitive damage to the reputation of the preacher-editor, and that the compromise judgment awarded McKelway the sum of six cents. That had the effect of proving that he had a case but also demonstrated that whatever damage he might have suffered was not regarded as very detrimental.

WINNERS — Who won or lost the argument half a century ago and the amount of a court judgment is of little consequence now. The important thing is that both Caldwell and McKelway attained their objectives. At least their objectives were attained, although perhaps after their deaths. Cotton mill building and overall industrial development in North Carolina, including and largely based upon electric power, went far beyond the dreams of Dan Tompkins and Joe Caldwell. And nearly everything that A.J. McKelway fought for has been written into State and Federal laws or accepted by industry as sound economic practice.

Speculation is fruitless, but one can only wonder what might have happened without the freedom of speech and freedom of the press exercised by Caldwell and McKelway, the Observer and the Standard, more than half a century ago.

Strength For Today

By EARL L. DOUGLASS

People who really get somewhere in life are people who have a plan for their lives and follow it. The person who is battered from pillar to post, who has no real objective, who does not know and does not care about his steadfastness to high and noble things — such a person comes to ruin, and the appalling thing is that very often he does not realize it.

It can be shown that almost without exception the world's great leaders have been people who set up definite goals and pressed toward them. In speaking about the spiritual life, Jesus once remarked that a man building a house must sit down and plan what he is going to do; or a man leading an army must make very sure how, with the number of troops he has, he

Reds Score Victories In East

By RAY TUCKER

WASHINGTON — While Moscow keeps the West off balance and preoccupied with threats of military aggression and scientific warfare, the Communists have scored several great victories in the equally important economic conflict in the Far East and Near East.

Besides excelling us in the manufacture of guns or their equivalent in modern battle, Russia and China have determined to outdo us in the production and distribution of heavy goods to neutral and Allied nations in these strategic areas. They are deliberately challenging our supposed superiority in industry, as they have done with Sputnik and intercontinental missiles.

Their principal targets in this crafty and cautious offensive are the vast millions of India, Southeast Asia and the adjacent archipelagoes, the Middle East and Africa, where there is already considerable prejudice against the United States.

Segregationist Declares Negro Pushed 'Too Fast'

ATLANTA (AP) — One of the South's leading exponents of racial segregation says the United States will become a mongrel land of faceless people, high in juvenile crime, if lines of separation are broken down. "Professional agitators and greedy politicians have not been willing to let the Negro develop and grow up in his own way under normal and natural circumstances," declared Thomas R. Waring, editor of the Charleston News and Courier.

"They are shoving the Negro forward faster than his capacity permits him to move," he said, "to mingle and become unwelcome among white people who would like to be his friends but wish to avoid his culture, manners and morals."

heard and understood on the racial issue if the republic is to survive. "I do not say that the country will die if the federal government continues to enforce integration," he pointed out. "People can live under the most difficult and obnoxious circumstances, and generations have a way of adjusting."

Swimming Pool Suit Dismissed

JEFFERSON, Tex. (AP) — A suit asking a court order to permit Negroes to use the Marshall swimming pool has been dismissed. U.S. Dist. Court Judge Lamar Cecil of Beaumont said grounds for dismissal were based on the fact the City of Marshall sold the pool to private interests in October after receiving approval from voters in a citywide election. Cecil said the fact the swimming pool is located inside a city park has no bearing, since the city no longer has an interest or control.

BOY KILLS TROOPER, HANDCUFFS 2—State policemen hold William Clayton Henderson, 16, in woods near Pottstown, Pa., after he handcuffed two state troopers to a tree and killed another with a shotgun blast point-blank in the officer's face. The body of the slain trooper, Philip Melly, 43, lies under a covering at right. Trooper Thomas McCann, one of the two who had been handcuffed, stands behind the body. The officers were called after the boy had argued with his parents and ran off into the woods with a shotgun. (AP Wirephoto).

Felix Gaillard Appears To Be Assured Next French Premier

PARIS (AP) — Felix Gaillard, youngest man to seek the French premiership in more than 75 years, appeared certain of winning National Assembly approval today.

Endorsement of Gaillard and a Cabinet drawn from all factions except the Communists and the extreme-right Pouljadists would install France's 24th postwar government and end a 36-day government crisis.

Gaillard is 38 today. The previous age record was set by Armand Fallieres, who took the job in 1883 at 41.

Furlough Time Again Extended

MARION, Ohio (AP) — It was a long furlough from the U. S. Army for Victor Howard Berry, 18, but not a happy one. It started when he came home from Italy for 40 days because his father was injured in an auto accident. That was extended 10 more days. His dad recovered, but his sister was in an auto accident. The leave was extended 20 more days. The sister is recovering. Then Berry himself landed on the recovery list. He shot off his big toe while squirrel hunting.

Experts reckoned the young financial expert should get at least 350 votes in the 605-member Assembly, even allowing for some individual defections. Only the 149 Communists and fellow travelers and 42 Pouljadists were ranged solidly against him. In assembling his cabinet, Gaillard succeeded in the apparently impossible task of getting Socialists and Conservatives to serve together for the first time since 1951. But this was no promise that he could keep them on the same track in tackling the grave problems of finance and Algerian rebellion. The top men of both parties, ex-Premiers Guy Mollet and Antoine Pinay, refused to join the cabinet.

As finance minister in the last Cabinet headed by Maurice Bourges-Maunoury, Gaillard made headlines with a sweeping austerity program to bolster France's tottering government finances and foreign exchange position. He trimmed the budget, devalued the franc, slapped a 20 per cent tax on most imports and propagated a switch to cheaper foods to combat inflation. Bourges-Maunoury resigned when the Assembly defeated his bill to give limited home rule to Algeria. Gaillard chose his former chief to be interior minister. Gaillard also retained Socialist Christian Pineau as foreign minister and Robert Lacoste, another Socialist, as the government chief in Algeria, the key post he has held since Mollet became premier in January 1956.

Youth Charged In Death Of Boy

GASTONIA, N.C. (AP) — Seventeen-year-old Alfred Knight rested in jail here today, charged with murder in the fist-fight death of a newspaper carrier boy. Knight, serving a suspended sentence for larceny and breaking and entering, is accused of beating 16-year-old Ronnie Ramsey to death with his fists. Officials set bond at $2,500.

Burley Tobacco Sales Dates Set

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — The eight-state burley tobacco belt will begin sales Nov. 25. Belt officials set up selling hours designed to clear 90 per cent of the crop before Christmas. The belt markets will sell for 3 1/2 hours daily. Markets will be closed on Thanksgiving Day and will close for Christmas Dec. 20, reopening Jan. 6. The burley crop for this year has been estimated at 481 million pounds.

Moonwatchers Are Alerted

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Forest Selby, leader of the Charlotte moonwatch team, says that even though Sputnik II's exact timetable is not known his team has been alerted that they may be able to see the Russian earth satellite within a few days. Selby said the Smithsonian Astrophysical Institute at Harvard, coordinating the U.S. moonwatch teams, said Sputnik II will be as bright, if not brighter, than Sputnik I. Selby said the new satellite's track over Charlotte is expected to be northeast to southwest. He said the Smithsonian observers were optimistic that an accurate track and timetable for the new satellite would be available soon. Selby has 30 observers in his moonwatch team. The entire population of a city of 40,000 could stand on the deck of the U. S. Navy aircraft carrier Saratoga.

Dog Rings Bell For Admission

DES MOINES (AP) — Mrs. Mary Huncke, a member of the State Board of Social Welfare, recently helped care for an ailing daughter. Several times Mrs. Huncke answered the doorbell, but no one was there except her daughter's dog, Duke. Mrs. Huncke thought some neighborhood children were being mischievous until she mentioned it to her daughter, who replied: "Oh, I forgot to tell you, Duke always rings the doorbell when he wants in."

Minor Changes In U.S. Weather

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
The nation's weather pattern showed only minor changes today, with chilly winds, cloudy skies, drizzle, showers or snow in many areas. Only the extreme Southeast and Pacific Northwest were out of the bleak weather picture. Although northerly winds spread cool air from Canada across the eastern half of the country for more than 24 hours, a blanket of clouds kept temperatures slightly above normal from the Rockies to the Atlantic seaboard. Skies were clear in Georgia and the Carolinas and there was a little cooling. North Dakota, with cloudiness, reported readings 8 to 15 degrees warmer than yesterday. A low of 15 chilled Livingston, Mont. Widespread rain and drizzle dampened most of Texas and bordering areas of Oklahoma and eastern New Mexico. The west belt extended eastward into Louisiana and Arkansas. Rain and light snow fell in western parts of Kansas and Nebraska and eastern sections of Wyoming and Colorado. Showers sprinkled the Great Lakes region, the mid-Mississippi and Ohio valleys and New England.

Former Defense Secretary Is Still Calm About Red Sputniks

By JAMES MARLOW Associated Press News Analyst WASHINGTON (AP)—Charles E. Wilson, former secretary of defense, is still pretty relaxed about the Russians sending satellites into outer space ahead of the United States.

In 1954 he said he didn't care whether the Russians beat us into outer space. That was when they were reportedly going all-out on their satellite program.

Now they've launched two Sputniks, proving they are way ahead of this country in satellite development. Asked last night by phone at his Detroit home how he feels about it now, Wilson said:

"We're getting too worked up about this. This is not a weapon business. This is a scientific business. Nothing is going to drop out of the satellites on us."

He added that maybe it's a good thing—and will do us some good—for the Russians to be ahead in this because sometimes we get too confident about our ability to be ahead of everybody.

Here were the questions asked him—and Wilson's answers—at a news conference Nov. 17, 1954:

Question: "Mr. Wilson, what progress has the Defense Department made since 1948 when the defense secretary of that period (James Forrestal) said that they were studying earth satellites and spaceships?"

Wilson: "I like to try to get my feet on—you know, down to earth. I have enough problems on earth."

Question: "Is there such a study under way at the present time?"

Wilson: "In this spaceship business? Oh, no."

Question: "Forrestal wrote about it. There was a study in 1948. Has it been discontinued or is it still under way?"

Wilson: "You are going back too far for me. I don't know of any such study."

Question: "Well, there have been recent published reports that the Russians have given priority to the establishment of a space satellite. Are you concerned that they will beat us in the air with it?"

Wilson: "I would not care if they did."

Question: "You really would not care if you mean you don't care if they get to the moon first?"

Wilson: "I would rather they go off to the moon or some other place than come over here."

Wilson, recently denying a charge that he had blocked funds for this country's earth satellite development, said the Defense Department was "interested in the project but basically it was not the Defense Department's business."

Last night he said the satellite development was a "project of the National Science Foundation and the Academy of Science" and that when the Science Foundation "ran out of funds" the Defense Department put up some money to help.

Gold Rules Companies, Not Agents, Will Collect

RALEIGH (AP)—Insurance Commissioner Charles F. Gold has ruled that the companies, and not the agents, should collect the one per cent additional premium for the new firemen's pension fund.

He made his decision yesterday in rejecting a filing by the North Carolina Fire Insurance Rating Bureau which proposed to have the one per cent additional premium calculated separately at the time the policy is sold.

The 1957 Legislature created the pension fund and authorized the one per cent additional premium. Several companies are contesting in the courts the validity of the Pension Fund Act.

Gold said the companies should collect the gross premiums on fire and lightning insurance. They could do this, he added, and pay the one per cent into the pension fund "without any substantial increase in operating expenses."

Under this method, the one per cent would become an integral part of the rate.

Gold offered the opinion that the rating bureau's proposal would place a burden on insurance agents. It would require them to amount additional to the premiums, Gold said, without providing any method of compensating them for services rendered.

He held that the Pension Fund Act places the burden of collecting and accounting for the money upon the companies and not on the agents.

Either A Hero Or An Arsonist LINCOLN, Neb. (AP)—A Lincoln woman awoke from a nap to find her boxer puppy running around the house with a flaming rug in its mouth.

Mrs. J. R. Ashleman said she had put the rug on the kitchen stove to dry.

She vainly tried to catch the dog, then telephoned the fire department. Service was fast because a fire truck happened to be right across the street on an inspection mission. Rug and floor were damaged by the flames.

Mrs. Ashleman wasn't sure whether the dog was trying to be a hero or an arsonist.

In the three years between 1953 and 1956, schools in the United States had to enroll an extra million students of kindergarten age each season.

More Schools In Carolina Are Closed By Flu

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS Many school children got impromptu holidays today as North Carolina's flu epidemic shut school doors.

But others, in scattered areas, returned to classrooms as flu illnesses apparently passed a peak.

Among schools closing yesterday were all but three in North Wilkesboro and Wilkes County, six in Union County, schools of Swain County, and Summerfield.

Western Carolina College at Cullowhee reported about 500 students with virus infections.

Schools in many areas of the state reported high absenteeism. Statesville Negro schools reopened yesterday after being closed all last week. Also reopening yesterday were Pleasant Garden and Monticello schools, which closed last Thursday and Friday, respectively, and Thankful and Welcome in Wilkes County which had closed last Tuesday.

The Union County Board of Education closed six schools until next Monday because of absences of 25 to 50 per cent of the students. Those schools were Indian Trail, Siler, Mineral Springs, Prospect, Allan and Jackson.

Wilkes County School Supt. C. B. Eller said absent students at some schools ran as high as 50 per cent. All Wilkes schools except Lincoln Heights, Thankful and Welcome will be closed until next Monday.

The Swain County schools reported 350 absences among their 2,000 students. The schools closed for a week.

Summerfield, where 35 per cent of the students missed classes yesterday, planned to reopen Thursday if the situation improves.

Wants Divorce To Wed Heiress

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Singer Allan Jones, 50, and his wife of 21 years say they hope to work out a quick divorce so he will be free to marry a shoe fortune heiress.

Jones told reporters he and Mary Florsheim Pickling, 37, are "in love and want to get married." His present wife is former actress Irene Hervey.

Miss Hervey, 48, charging cruelty, filed suit for divorce last September in nearby Santa Monica. She said she may seek a faster divorce than California's decree which takes a year. Mrs. Pickling is the daughter of Irving S. Florsheim, board chairman of Florsheim Shoe Co.

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP)—Barking dog complaints are routine around police headquarters, but a call taken by complaint secretary Doro Stalling last night, was too much.

A man phoned to say that a barking dog was disturbing him. "Where is this dog?" asked the secretary.

"It's on that new Russian moon," the man said and hung up.

Voters In Half-Dozen States Cast Their Ballots Today; Offer Clues

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Voters in a half dozen states balloted today in scattered off-year elections that may furnish a few indicators for party managers looking to the 1958 congressional contests.

State and local issues dominated the campaigns, although there was some mention in New Jersey of the Little Rock integration troubles, and school segregation was debated almost exclusively in Virginia.

The elections were the first since President Eisenhower dispatched federal troops into Little Rock, Ark., in September to back up a court order for school integration after National Guardsmen called out by Gov. Orval Faubus had prevented Negroes from entering a former all-white school.

Offices at stake were two governorships, in New Jersey and Virginia; two House seats, one each in New Jersey and Pennsylvania; scores of mayors' seats, including that in New York City, and three state legislatures.

Democrats held the two governorships and the New York mayoralty, and were confident they would hold them.

Republicans counted on retaining the two House seats and were hoping for an upset or two elsewhere, particularly in New Jersey, to give them what Eisenhower said the party needs—a big shot in the arm.

Eisenhower endorsed the GOP candidates in the two governor races and in New York City.

NEW JERSEY—The race for governor was between Democrat Gov. Robert B. Meyner, seeking a second four-year term on the strength of his record at Trenton, and Republican State Senator Malcolm S. Forbes, a 33-year-old publisher.

Meyner, favored in advance polls, was putting on the line what chances he may have for getting on the Democratic presidential ticket in 1960. Four years ago at 45, he gained political stature by winning his first term as governor in a normally Republican state by 153,000.

Forbes not only attacked Meyner's record on budgetary and other scores, but raised the civil rights issue. He told Negro audiences "I don't think any Negro can afford not to show support" of the Republican action in pressing for strong civil rights legislation in Congress and of Eisenhower's intervention at Little Rock. Meyner has replied that "if I have any voice at all in national Democratic affairs, I'm for a strong civil rights position."

Of the state's 2,783,315 eligible voters, approximately 120,000 are Negroes.

In the Second District, voters were electing a successor to the late Republican Rep. T. Millet Hand, a 2-1 victor last November. Assemblyman Milton W. Gienn, Margate Republican, and farmer Joseph G. Hancock, Greenville Township Democrat, were the candidates.

VIRGINIA—The Democratic candidate for governor, J. Lindsay Almond Jr., was favored generally to win over Republican Ted Dalton, a state senator and GOP national committeeman.

Both favor segregation but differ widely on how to keep schools racially separated. Almond, backed by the strong Democratic organization headed by Sen. Byrd (D-Va.), followed the "massive resistance" doctrine laid down by Byrd. This means backing up state laws for closing schools and withdrawing state aid if integration takes place.

Dalton favors a pupil assignment plan, administered by local school boards, which would permit token admission of Negro pupils to white schools.

NEW YORK—Democratic Mayor Robert F. Wagner of New York City was regarded generally as headed toward a second term in his $40,000 a year job. He was challenged by Republican Robert K. Christenberry, hotel executive and former chairman of the New York Athletic Commission.

In all, the state was choosing 51 mayors. The Republicans now hold 29 of these places, the Democrats 19 and non partisans 3. Among statewide issues were whether to legalize bingo under local option, and whether to call a state constitutional convention in 1959.

PENNSYLVANIA—Was electing a House member in the 13th District to fill a vacancy caused by the resignation of Republican Rep. Samuel K. McConnell Jr., an easy 2-1 winner last year. The candidates were Republican John A. Lafore Jr., Haverford, and Democrat Glenn W. Preston, Oreland.

Voters also were picking mayors in Pittsburgh, Scranton and 21 other cities and deciding on a proposal to pay a Korean War bonus if taxes were raised to finance the bond issue.

KENTUCKY—Electing 17 of its 38 state senators and all of its 100 representatives; also mayors in most state cities, including Louisville.

CONNECTICUT—Electing mayors in several cities, including New Haven, Bridgeport and Waterbury.

Gov. Knight May Switch Effort To Senate Race

WASHINGTON (AP)—Republican Gov. Goodwin J. Knight of California confers with President Eisenhower today for what may be a face-saving transfer into a 1958 race for the Senate.

Knight has been saying for some months he would not withdraw as a candidate for re-nomination despite the entry of Sen. Knowland (R-Calif.) into the governorship contest. But he is now reported ready to change his mind.

In advance of his meeting with Eisenhower, Knight kept his own counsel.

But there was general belief the California governor would emerge from the White House to announce he has decided to seek Knowland's Senate seat. Knowland, the Senate's Republican leader, has said he will leave the Senate in January 1959.

Eisenhower generally has refrained from endorsing Republican candidates in the primaries and thus Knight might have more than a White House setting for his announcement. But even this would lend weight to the assumption that Eisenhower was pleased by any decision Knight might make to enter the senatorial lists.

Knight has been a consistent supporter of the President's policies. If he were elected, Eisenhower could count another modern Republican among the thin ranks of all-out supporters in the Senate.

A withdrawal by Knight from the governor contest would give the Republican nomination to Knowland without the kind of fight some GOP members, including Vice President Nixon, have feared might split the party and endanger its California chances in next year's election.

Knight, who asked for the White House conference, arranged to see Nixon later. In the past, the vice president and the governor have had factional differences.

For this reason, Knight's visit with Nixon was being billed in advance as a party harmony move. There was little doubt that Nixon would welcome Knight's entry into the senatorial contest.

Knowland's friends continued to emphasize there was no deal between them and Knight to get the governor out of the race for re-nomination.

MUST WAIT PORT WILLIAM, Ont. (AP)—Jerry Mendick held the winning ticket on a car draw at the Canadian Lakehead Exhibition here but is unable to drive the 1957 model. He's 14 years old.

Petersburg, Alaska is a prime center of the fishing and shrimp-canning industry. Almost all its 2,000 residents are Scandinavian.

Aggies Tighten Their Hold On Top Poll Position

By ED WILKS

The Associated Press Tough, win-'em-all Texas A&M not only retained, but strengthened its hold on the No. 1 ranking in The Associated Press college football poll this week—the first club other than Oklahoma to stay on top two straight weeks mid-1955.

Not since Oklahoma took the top spot from then mighty Maryland in the eighth week of the '55 campaign have the Sooners been unable to bounce back after a week. They had been out of the No. 1 position only twice, stepping back for Tennessee and Michigan State last year.

But this is the first time since 1951 that Oklahoma has been held to only two touchdowns on successive Saturdays—losing the top position to Texas A&M a week ago after a 14-13 squeaker against Texas A&M, now 7-0 after a 7-6 scare from Arkansas, moved from a 39-point edge over the Sooners last week to a 215-point buge this week. The 201 writers and broadcasters voting in this week's poll, the heaviest balloting of the season, apparently figured Arkansas would give the Aggies a tough time, but had expected Oklahoma to steam-roller K-State.

Auburn, jumping from fourth to third, finished just 28 points shy of Oklahoma. The Tigers, 6-0, actually got two more first-place ballots than the Sooners.

Oklahoma held second on the basis of point tabulations figured at 10 points for a first place vote, 9 for second, 8 for third, etc.

The rest of the top 10 had quite a shakeup. Michigan State, up from sixth, took fourth with Iowa fifth. The Hawkeyes, tied by Michigan, had been third.

Noire Dame, fifth a week ago, and Duke, seventh last week, tumbled to the second division with their first defeats last Saturday.

Ohio State moved from eighth to sixth. Navy, the Irish beater, leaped from 16th to seventh. Army moved from ninth to eighth. Tennessee advanced from 17th to ninth and North Carolina State stayed No. 10.

Phantoms Prepare For Roanoke Rapids

G-Men Playing Friday Night

PHANTOM GUARD—Billy Brown, 175 pound Greenville high school griddler, will hold down a starting guard position Friday night when the G-Men tackle Roanoke Rapids, there. It will be a Northeastern Conference ballgame.

Greenville's Phantoms, apparently over their edge of the flu, will journey to Roanoke Rapids Friday night for its first ball game in three weeks.

The contest will be a Northeastern Conference affair, although it will probably not count much in the standings. Both the Yellow Jackets and the Phantoms are low down on the Conference totem pole, so far as the race for the title is concerned.

Greenville has compiled a 2-5 record overall thus far this season. The G-Men have whipped one conference club, Kinston, and one outsider, Selma. Roanoke Rapids has compiled a 1-6-1 record.

Coach Bud Phillips held the first full practice the Phantoms have had since flu struck his club three weeks ago. "We worked mostly on conditioning," said the coach. "We're not in very good shape."

Phillips planned to have his club work on offense and defense tomorrow, passing and punting tomorrow, and kickoffs and returns on Thursday.

So far as personnel is concerned, the Phantoms are at almost full strength. Only one regular is missing from the lineup, Norliest Felton, who has played practically every position on the club, is still out with the virus.

Expected to start against the Jackets Friday night will be the following boys: Billy Cox and Steve Noble at ends; Kelly Barnhill and Ralph Sullivan at tackles; Billy Brown and Godfrey Oakley at guards; Albert Crawford at center; Mack Roebuck at quarterback; Charles Roberts and Robert Howell at the halfbacks; Robin Wilfong at fullback.

Phillips scouted Roanoke Rapids last night as the Jackets battled to a 7-7 tie with Weldon. "They have a pretty good running team," he said this morning.

The Jackets run from the single wing and have a good tailback who is fast and a fancy broken-field runner, Phillips said that the Roanoke Rapids club "is about the same size as ours."

Eppes Falls To Jones By 12-7

P. S. Jones, High of Washington walked away with another of Eppes' Homecoming football games—whipping the Bulldogs 12-7, last night at Guy Smith Stadium.

It was the third straight loss for the locals.

Eppes scored first to thrill the large Homecoming crowd. Julius Murphy, sophomore halfback, broke away for a 40-yard touchdown gallop to draw first blood for the hosts, James Harris, fullback, bucked over for the extra point to give Eppes a 7-0 lead.

Jones came back shortly after that first score and made a touchdown on a long pass play. The extra point attempt failed and Eppes carried a 7-6 lead into the locker at halftime.

Eppes threatened several times in the second half, pushing deep into Jones territory, but the big Yellow Jacket forward wall wouldn't give.

Another pass play, this time a 30-yard connection, carried for Jones came score—and the winning touchdown, in the early minutes of the fourth quarter.

Outstanding for the Bulldogs were tackle Kenny Green, guards James Teel and Mack Wooten, and Harris and Murphy.

The Eppes club will play host to Mary Potter of Oxford Friday night in the final game of the season. It will be a non-conference affair.

No Yardstick For Navy-Duke Game

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

When an upset winner meets an upset loser, both fresh from their upsets, almost anything can happen, the laws of football prognostication no longer apply.

Case in point: Navy vs. Duke this weekend at Baltimore.

Victory for an underdog can so charge a squad's spirit that it alters the remainder of its season, or it can set the squad up for a colossal letdown. Underdog Navy whipped Notre Dame, 20-6, last Saturday.

A loss for the favorite can cripple a squad's spirit, or make it into a gang of revenge-seeking demons. Favored Duke lost to Georgia Tech, 13-0, last weekend.

Before those games, Duke was the nation's No. 7 football team and Navy No. 16. After the games, they swapped places.

When the Navy squad returned to Annapolis from Notre Dame, midshipmen turned out in mass to greet the victors. "Beat Duke," the midshipmen cried. We will, promised quarterback Tom Forrestal.

Therein lies the background for a mighty clash Saturday in one of the Atlantic Coast Conference's top non-league games this weekend.

Two other ACC teams play host for non-conference foes: Wake Forest for Virginia Tech and North Carolina State for William and Mary. Virginia is idle. Conference games are Maryland at Clemson and South Carolina at North Carolina, the latter a televised affair.

North Carolina State, which held its No. 10 national position by a 19-0 victory over Wake Forest, began work yesterday for William and Mary. Coach Earle Edwards held the Wolfpack to a light workout, gave them a scouting report

Some Sooner Fans Are Far From Satisfied

NORMAN, Okla. (AP)—Oklahoma is riding a 46-game football winning streak, and is No. 2 in the nation, but this isn't satisfying some Sooner followers.

Fair-weather spectators are unhappy because Oklahoma isn't piling up 5 and 6 touchdown margins.

The situation was brought into focus Saturday as the Sooners, a 5-touchdown favorite, had a hard time beating weak Kansas State 13-0. A 14-13 victory over Colorado in another Big Eight Conference game didn't set well with some.

"It's a perfect situation for Dooner Coach Bud Wilkinson, who has a reputation for being pessimistic about each upcoming game, to say 'I told you so.'"

Wilkinson today just pointed out what he had said all season, that he didn't have a superman team and his squad is playing at the

Duke Still Out Front In Statistics

GREENSBORO (AP)—Although Georgia Tech last Saturday held Duke to its lowest yardage total since the ACC Service Bureau began compiling Atlantic Coast Conference statistics in 1954, the Blue Devils today remain in command of the conference team statistical race.

Tech, handing Duke its first loss of the season 13-0, limited the Blue Devils to only 66 yards rushing and 43 passing. This reduced the Duke total offense average from 355.8 to 320.6 yards a game and the team's rushing offense average from 303.7 to 269.7 yards per contest.

Nevertheless, Duke still leads the ACC in both departments. Clemson's fast-improving Tigers ranking second with 307.8 yards a game overall and 235.2 yards per game rushing. The Tigers gained 339 yards in upending Rice 20-7 last Saturday night.

Duke also continues to set the pace in total and rushing defense, but Clemson and undefeated North Carolina State are in close pursuit. In total defense, Duke's average yield is 194.4 yards per game, Clemson's 215.0 and State's 215.4. In rushing defense, Duke has given up an average of 129.3 yards per contest, State 139.1 and Clemson 145.

In the aerial departments, Virginia continues to lead pass offense with an average of 87 passing yards a game, but a 199-yard passing effort by VMI against the Cavaliers last Saturday dropped Virginia from first to fifth in pass defense. Taking over as the No. 1 team in pass defense is North Carolina.

Furman Fullback Much Improved

GREENVILLE, S.C. (AP)—Hicky Horton, 6-foot-2 sophomore fullback from Hepzibah, Ga., is Furman's most improved football player of the early campaign, says Coach Homer Hobbs.

Horton, a 185-pounder, carried for only 11 yards last season and this year gained 34 yards in his team's first two games against East Tennessee State and Florida State.

BOWL NEARLY DOUBLED

DALLAS (AP)—The Cotton Bowl, site of Dallas' annual New Year's Day football classic, has been nearly doubled since 1930 when it was built to seat 45,000 at a cost of $400,000. Five times that amount has been spent in the last five years. The double-tiered stadium now seats 75,504 fans.

Michigan State Due To Give Irish A Hard Time

EAST LANSING, Mich. (AP)—Notre Dame the school that has Michigan State its first important assist into big money football, can expect a hard time as thanks on Saturday.

The Irish appearance here, a Midwestern classic in recent years, will be the first sellout in the new 76,000 capacity Spartan stadium.

In the last few years, the Spartans have beaten the ears off the old buddies who gave them the initial lift into national prominence. Michigan State is a slight favorite.

The MSU-Irish football series dates back to 1897 but was discontinued after Notre Dame won a 48-0 shutout in 1941.

Michigan State decided to gamble on getting into big league football when enrollment started booming in the years following World War II. A solid gate attraction was needed to justify enlarging the stadium capacity from 26,000 to 51,000.

Notre Dame signed for a long-time series starting in 1948 and the rise of the Spartans dates from that agreement.

State later was accepted into the Western Conference, had several unbeaten seasons, topped the national ratings and has continued enlarging its stadium.

The Irish won the first two games of the modern series, in 1948 and 1949. But State has taken five out of the last six, including a 35-0 shutout in 1951 and a 47-14 walloping last year.

Michigan State has measured Indiana, California, Illinois and Wisconsin this fall while losing only to Purdue 20-13. Notre Dame

Coach Has Plans For 'Retirement'

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP)—Football Coach Ed Doherty of the University of Arizona was asked what he planned to do after retirement at a meeting of the Tucson Towncats, a downtown booster group.

Doherty, 38, whose Wildcats have not won this season, said he and his assistant Gene Peltier plan to head for Mexico with footballs under their arms.

"When we get far enough south so someone asks, 'What's that thing you're carrying?'" he added laughingly, "that's the place we'll retire to."

Lawmen Uncertain They Want To Get Involved In Role Of Censors

By ROBERT A. WILLIS
Associated Press Staff Writer

A lot of North Carolina lawmen these days are standing around holding bow and arrow in one hand and a ready-made target, with a lot of vari-colored rings, in the other.

The weapons are labeled "Law" and the target "Objectionable Publications," and the lawmen don't know whether they want to be in on the shooting.

Last June the North Carolina Legislature passed a law making it a crime to publish or distribute obscene printed matter or photographs. The law includes a model legal definition of obscenity, as drawn up by a group of U.S. lawyers, professors and jurists.

Now in the hands of most Tar Heel lawmen are copies of a list drawn up by a committee of the North Carolina Sheriffs' Assn. The list includes 20 crime and love comic books (no newspaper comic strips were included) and 31 other publications commonly found on newsstands, which the committee deemed obscene or otherwise objectionable.

The law makes violations a general misdemeanor which would permit prison sentences and - or fines in the discretion of the judge. The maximum prison sentence is two years, but courts have not ruled on just what the top limit is for a fine for a general misdemeanor.

To date, there have been no prosecutions under the new law. And many North Carolina sheriffs, although they are quick to deplore the circulation of magazines and books featuring nudity, illicit sex and crime, seem anything but eager to police the newsstands.

Most of the officers point out that the Sheriffs' Assn. committee intends the list only as a suggested guide, and say they want to consult with others before taking any action.

Robert J. Pleasant, Wake County sheriff, commented, "I hesitate to trust my judgment on deciding what is fit to read and what isn't. I think the mothers and fathers should be more concerned about what their children are reading."

Just what the children are reading nobody can say, but few people would question that printed matter and photographs about crime and sex abound on newsstands, and that some of it is extreme. Probably most of the newsstand operators do not order material they know to be objectionable, but find it included with their requested shipments from magazine distributors. The operators don't have to put it on their racks, but many do.

Teachers and critics of literature point out that what is objectionable for one person is not for another. They don't classify all printed matter as literature, but they often feel that public opinion and the courts should be the judges of what should be allowed to circulate.

Forsyth County Sheriff Ernie Shore speaks for another school of thought when he says: "I think they should stop these magazines before they ever get off the presses. I think the government should act as the censor and not leave it up to police officers."

During this year's legislative session State Rep. Thomas G. Dill of Edgecombe and Timous Valentine Jr. of Nash sponsored bills to make it unlawful to publish or distribute obscene matter. The two said they had numerous requests for such legislation.

State Sen. J. Spencer Bell of Mecklenburg, who was not an original backer of the bill, offered the amendment to define what is obscene.

"I'm no bluenose," said Bell. "But I thought that if we were going to make this thing a crime, we needed a definition of what it is."

The amendment, made a part of the state law, is a model definition drawn up this year by the American Law Institute's committee on model penal laws. The U.S. Supreme Court, in ruling on a recent California case, cited this model definition as a proper one. It says:

"A thing is obscene if considered as a whole its predominant appeal is to the prurient interest, i.e., shameful or morbid interest in nudity, sex or excretion, and if it goes substantially beyond the customary limits of candor in description or presentation of such matters."

"A thing is obscene if its obscenity is latent, as in the case of undeveloped photographs. Obscenity shall be judged with reference to ordinary adults, except that children or other especially susceptible audiences if it appears from the character of the material or the circumstances of its dissemination to be especially designed for or directed to such an audience."

Fred M. Burnette of Black Mountain, a Buncombe County deputy sheriff who heads the Sheriffs' Assn. committee, also says there was considerable public demand for some sort of policing of newsstands. He was appointed to the committee, along with five other Buncombe County citizens, two years ago by his sheriff, Laurence E. Brown.

Members of the group are Frank E. Lavoock, chairman of the Buncombe County Board of Education and a retired businessman; C. R. Sumner, retired newspaperman; Mrs. J. J. Schulteis, head of the county's juvenile planning board; the Rev. Wayne Williams, retired Baptist minister who for years was chaplain at the Veterans Administration Hospital at Oteen; and Tom Sharp, for about 40 years a social worker.

"The committee members were selected," Burnette declared, "because they are open-minded, good citizens with ability and background." He said he checks the newsstands in the county about once a month, buys copies of magazines he thinks may be objectionable and shows them to the members.

"Each member makes a separate appraisal of each magazine," Burnette said. "No one knows what another has decided. Then we compare the appraisals and if they are in agreement, or nearly so, that the publication is objectionable, we put it on the list."

Burnette added that Buncombe dealers are asked to remove these magazines from their racks. "They've been very willing to cooperate," he said. Sometimes dealers ask later that the committee reconsider its findings regarding some magazine, and it may be taken off the list if the committee decides it has become less objectionable.

The current list which the committee considers objectionable includes such comic books as Bat Man, Boy Loves Girl, Dark Mysteries, Love Problems, Two-Gun Kid, Wonder Woman, and Young Brides. Other magazines listed include Confidential, Hit Show, Playboy, Sir, and Whisper.

Suggest A-Bomb 'Best Bet' For Marking Moon

By DON GUY

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP)—An atomic bomb would be the best way to mark the surface of the moon if the Russians plan to hit it with a rocket Nov. 7, Dr. Fred L. Whipple, director of the Smithsonian Astrophysical Observatory said today.

There has been speculation that the Russians might try to reach the moon on that day, marking the 40th anniversary of the Bolshevik Revolution.

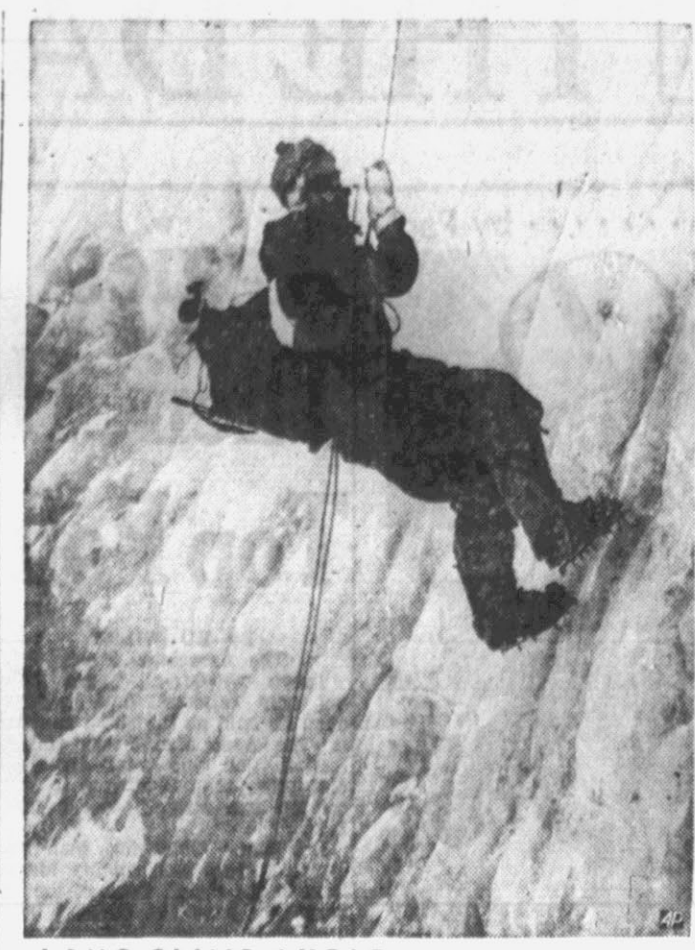

Dr. Whipple said it would take approximately four or five days for a rocket to reach the moon, approximately 235,000 miles away. So such a rocket would be presumably under way if Nov. 7 were the target date, he said.

Dr. Whipple said it would take an approximate 40 per cent increase in power over that used for Sputnik II to send a rocket to the moon.

"There is a lunar eclipse Nov. 7 which would be an ideal time for the Russians to hit the moon. An atomic flash would show up much brighter against the face of the moon darkened by the earth's shadow during an eclipse.

This eclipse will not be visible in the United States but can be seen in Hawaii.

Dr. Whipple said it would be more efficient to brighten the moon's surface itself as an identifying mark than to attempt to color it with coloring matter sent from the earth in a rocket. He said that astronomers have long

Public Welfare Institute Set

RALEIGH—The Need for Continuing Professional Development' will be the subject of the address by Jay Roney of Washington, D. C., at the opening session Thursday morning at the 38th annual Public Welfare Institute to be held in Raleigh.

A registration of over 500 from over the State is expected for the two-day meeting, according to the announcement of program details made today by Dr. Ellen Winston, Commissioner of the sponsoring State Board of Public Welfare. Many persons interested in public welfare in addition to the members of the staffs of the county departments of public welfare are expected to attend.

Roney, who is director of the Bureau of Public Assistance of the U. S. Department of Health, Education, and Welfare, heads a list of well-known leaders in public welfare and related areas who will be heard during the meeting. Sessions will be held in the Sir Walter Hotel.

Three groups will meet Wednesday afternoon in advance of the opening session Thursday morning of the Institute proper. These groups are the N. C. Swine Specialist Sees Big Cash Crop In Hogs

"North Carolina has a great opportunity to improve its farm income through hog production," Jack Kelly, swine specialist for the State College Extension Service, told Greenville Rotarians last night.

Kelly pointed out that North Carolina now ranks tenth among the states of the nation in swine production. The program, he said, is adaptable to both large and small farms in North Carolina, and can enable farmers to have a cash crop from which they can get income every month of the year.

No county in North Carolina has moved forward faster in the past five years in swine production than Pitt County, Kelly asserted. "The fact remains that we still do not have enough farmers in Pitt County producing hogs," he declared.

F. F. Hendrix, who introduced the speaker, told Rotarians swine now provides a cash income of approximately two and one-quarter million dollars a year on Pitt County farms. In addition to that, he said, Pitt farmers sell more than one and one-half million dollars worth of corn which could produce some $3 millions additional farm income if it were fed to hogs.

Through use of pictures, Kelly traced the development of swine in North Carolina and other areas. "We are now producing the type of meat hog which the consumer wants—the kind with plenty of red meat and little fat," Kelly said. "So long as we produce this kind of hog, we can be sure that swine producers will get their share of the market for meat."

He asked Rotarians to urge farmers of Pitt to increase their hog production and "make it one of the main enterprises on their farms." He added that with an anticipated four per cent increase in swine production this fall and another seven per cent increase next spring, hog prices will probably slightly lower next year.

"Even so, the farmer who uses his corn to feed hogs for market will realize a greater cash income than the one who sells his corn in the market and raises no hogs. The corn-hog ratio will remain favorable."

Art Of Molasses-Making Briefly Revived On Farm

ADULTS COOK THE MOLASSES—YOUNGSTERS SAMPLE IT ... plate full of the "good stuff", a piece of bread and healthy appetites.

HEBER WORTHINGTON ENGROSSED IN WORK AT EVAPORATOR ... many other workers tried their hand too.

NEGRO WORKER, OLD MULE TAKE TIME OUT FOR A FEW MINUTES OF REST ... rotary vice used to get the most out of the molasses cane.

By EVERETTE PARKER
Reflector Staff Writer

Something unusual in this day and time but commonplace as late as the 1930's took place in Pitt County yesterday and is continuing through today.

They are making "honest-to-goodness" molasses on Heber Worthington's farm, one and one-half miles from Winterville.

Worthington, who will be 76-years-old on his next birthday, just decided on the spur-of-the-moment to try his hand again at the age-old trade of making molasses. He did just that.

He got the idea when his son, Cecil, picked up some molasses cane seed on a trip last year. When his son approached him with the idea he decided to plant cane this year and ordered additional seed in order that he might have enough to make a sizable "run".

Not long ago he bought some equipment from a farmer in Martin County and put the molasses-making plant down near a wooded area in back of his house. The evaporator was installed on a cinder-block foundation.

"We did that so we could make some more next year and in years to come", his son Cecil said.

Two weeks ago the Worthingtons' cut their cane and stripped it so they could make the molasses before cold weather sets in "sure ruff". The father and his sons started yesterday morning about 10 o'clock.

As they busily engaged themselves in the work at hand, curious neighbors and passersby stopped by to see just exactly what they were doing. One bystander said it was the first time he had seen molasses in more than 20 years. Several others agreed.

Worthington said he had not made any in more than 25 years. He said he used to cook molasses years ago for the public. "Why", he stated, "I ran over 4,000 gallons one week back during the Hoover Days."

A few yards back of the evaporator, where most of the activity was centered, an old Negro and a tired-looking mule were busily engaged in operating a rotary-type vice used to squeeze the juice out of the molasses cane. The cane was fed through the vice while the mule pulled a long pole causing the device to turn.

Out of it all came a thick juice with a dark green tint.

See Bigger Role For Recreation

GREENSBORO (AP)—The importance of recreation in modern times continued to be the theme today of the 13th annual North Carolina Recreation conference here.

Dr. Claud B. Bowen, pastor of the First Baptist Church here, told delegates yesterday that organized recreation is becoming more and more vital as world population increases and humans live longer. He said people have more leisure and more tension than ever before ... and there is probably more than a casual connection between the two.

Earlier, the director of the North Carolina Recreation Commission said lack of qualified workers and available land is threatening the development of recreational programs in the state.

The director, Ralph Andrews of Raleigh, said it is becoming steadily more difficult to acquire land for playgrounds and parks, especially in larger cities.

Marine's Death Ruled Accident

CAMP LEJEUNE, N.C. (AP)—The fatal shooting of a 19-year-old Marine private here Oct. 31 was caused by the accidental discharge of a shotgun carried by a prison guard, an investigation has shown.

Maj. Karl E. Faser, informational services officer, said the victim, Pfc. William F. Corson of Olean, N.Y., had boarded a work detail truck with five other prisoners when the shooting occurred.

The officer said testimony indicates that Corson was killed when a 12-gauge shotgun carried by a guard fired accidentally. Corson was serving a 60-day sentence in the brig following a court martial he had received for drunk and disorderly conduct and showing disrespect to a non-commissioned officer.

DESPERATE MAN

CHAPTER 26

A Rafter 3 cowboy found Barney Lux's body and reported it to Vic Toll, who took word to Veach. Toll naturally would deny any knowledge of the hanging, but Veach was responsible for it. The sheriff wouldn't know that Lux had been spying and murdering for Rafter 3, and Toll wouldn't tell him that, either.

At least that's the way I figured it, and Veach's nervousness convinced me I was right. He acted like a man who was afraid he'd find the truth and would have to arrest someone he didn't want to. He left the park, apparently as confused as he was after the murders of my father and Elder Smith.

The body, of course, was brought to the park and we had a funeral. I didn't like the idea of burying Lux in the same cemetery with my father and Elder Smith, but it would have aroused suspicion if I'd raised the point. After Barney Lux's funeral, we forgot the whole business—or appeared to forget it, although I doubt that anyone else did.

Bill decided to go to work for Bess, and I hired Kip Dance again. We were deep in the work of the busiest season of the year. We had to plant the spring crops. Because the weather turned abnormally hot and dry, we had to flood our hay meadows. Then spring roundup, of course.

Everyone seemed to be satisfied with the calf crop except Matt Colohan. It ran about 95 per cent for most of us, and we could look forward to a good beef fattening in the fall. If cattle prices stayed up, we'd have the best year since Pa had bought the Big Ten.

Kitsy knew this was the busiest time of year and she understood why my letters were shorter and more infrequent than usual. For the same reason, I suppose, she postponed writing a letter she'd been wanting to write since late April when she'd had her eighteenth birthday. In June I received it.

Dearest Dave, You've been asking in every letter for weeks when I was coming back to the park. I've avoided answering because I can't come back with things the way they are. I suppose I seem bullheaded to you, and maybe I am. Maybe I'm over-proud, but I simply can't come back now, Darling. I just can't.

I suppose I should be grateful to Bess. She practically raised me and she made Anchor pay and she put money in the bank—I don't know how much, but there must be a lot of it. Now she writes that I'm to go back East in the fall. Miss Crannell, who runs the school I'm attending, says I'll be ready by September if I stay here all summer. But that would be such a terrible waste of money, Dave. It wouldn't make me any better wife to you.

If I came home now, we would be right back where we were and have to do it all over again. I couldn't stand it, Dave. I won't come back unless I'm your wife. I promise you one thing, Dave. I'll never live in the same house with Bess again.

Next week end Miss Crannell is taking her girls to Glenwood Springs for an outing. I'm going to be sick. She'll have a fit, but she'll have to leave me. I want you to come to Denver and marry me. I'll have everything ready. I'll even buy my own wedding ring. If you're coming, wire me from Rock Springs and I'll meet your train.

Lovingly yours, Kitsy

It was the longest letter Kitsy had ever written me, and the most important. I knew, without her saying it in words, that if I failed her now, she'd be done with me.

Funny how you come to a time like this when you know that everything you want, that all your future, depends on what you do. June was no time for a vacation but... Well, Kip would just have to manage. What would I use for money? I still had my $12, and there was a little over $100 left from the sale of the steers last fall. No enough. Besides the railroad tickets and price of meals on the train, I had to have enough to buy clothes, pay the preacher in Denver, pay a hotel bill, and pay for the meals we would have together.

I rode into Frank Dance's Diamond 8, not really expecting to get the money. I didn't tell Frank why I had to have it. Just said I needed $100. He looked at me quite awhile, then walked into the house and came back and handed me ten gold eagles.

"I ain't gonna ask you what you're gonna do with it," he said. "I'll just take your word that you need it."

"I'll make out a note," I said. "I've got some four-year-olds." "Your word's good enough for me, Dave," he said.

I rode away, thinking how everything had changed in a little over six months. I'd been afraid of marriage that night Kitsy got me out of bed. I wasn't now. I felt good when I thought about it. Everything was going to be all right.

When I got home I asked Ma to fix something for me to eat and to put up a lunch. I said I needed all the money that was in the house. She gave me a questioning glance, but she didn't put the question into words. I got my $12; she brought the steer money, and the little that she had accumulated from the sale of butter and eggs. Not much because she'd given Gil all she had when he left.

When I picked up my lunch, Ma asked, "Know when you'll be back?"

"No. Three, four days maybe." "Can you tell me where you're going?"

"Rock Springs." I couldn't tell her any more than that. "Good-bye." "Good-bye, Dave," she said. I saddled the brown gelding my father used to ride. He had more bottom than my bay, and the ride to Rock Springs was a long, hard one. Just as I mounted I saw Si Beam turn into our lane from the county road.

I had the Winchester in the boot and my revolver on my hip, and I had a sudden crazy urge to shoot the peddler right off the seat of his rig. But I didn't. I rode down the lane to meet him. Before he could say howdy, I yelled: "Si, back up to the road! I don't know why you're here, but it isn't for any good. Go on. Get!"

"What have I done, Dave?" "You brought Cameron Runyan's offer. I don't know what string you're playing this time, but I'm guessing you're still Runyan's errand boy. You'd better go someplace where he's popular."

He didn't say another word. He backed up until he reached the county road and then turned upriver. I didn't wait to see where he was headed.

I made the fastest ride to Rock Springs I ever made, getting off my horse and running part of the time so he wouldn't play out on me. I checked at the depot for the departure time of the next Denver train, left my horse in a livery stable, got cleaned up in a barber shop, and bought my store suit, white shirt, and tie. I barely made the train.

Dave and Kitsy are married in Denver, but the honeymoon ends on an unhappy note. Don't miss tomorrow's emotion-packed installment of "Desperate Men."

Lanny Ross Chose Radio, Now In His 25th Year

By CHARLES MERCER

NEW YORK (AP)—A 25-year career in the highly competitive world of radio involves a man in some difficult decisions.

So says Lanny Ross who certainly should know. One of radio's memorable singers, he is celebrating his 25th anniversary in the medium. At present he offers five and one-half hours weekly of song, conversation and disc-spinning on CBS Radio's New York station, (9:05 a.m., EST, Mondays through Saturdays).

Many have forgotten that Ross was a great track star at Yale. Ross says there probably would not have been a radio career at all if he had gone abroad as a member of the 1928 Olympics team.

A great quarter miler and holder of the AAU 300-yard indoor title, he was named to the Olympics team scheduled to sail for Europe on June 26. He also was leader and soloist of the Yale Glee Club, scheduled to sail for Europe on June 23.

"I went with the Glee Club, to the surprise of a good many people," he said. "I never regretted it." Such a decision, he feels, is one reason why he still is heard on the air waves while many a well-known singer of years past has faded.

"I wanted to sing," he said, "and I had a bit of hard work to do. I wanted to be basically well grounded as a professional singer. If you have that basic training, you can change and develop your style. Some make a hit with a particular style for a time, but it's difficult to survive without the basic hard work."

Luck and the help of friends play an important part too, said Ross. Perhaps there was an element of luck in a 1931 decision of his.

He was among a group of young hopefuls lined up for the cast of a new musical, "The Americana Revue," that year. But he also was doing a 15-minute program in radio—and consequently appearing late for rehearsals. The producer warned him to choose either the show or radio.

"I chose radio," said Ross. "The show ran a year and a half on Broadway. But I've run 25 years or radio."

LEGAL PASTIME
ANADARKO, Okla. (AP)—A lawyer made an unusual request of District Judge L. A. Wood. He asked for a court order to provide a checker set for use by attorneys waiting for juries to arrive.

15 Yards To Go
"Hold that line!"
Feet are stamping. The crowd is roaring. Excitement fills the air. It's the fourth quarter and the score is tied.

There's color and action aplenty on a "Football Weekend"—and it's not confined to the gridiron either! In the stands the spectators are gaily garbed—some with huge, colorful mums—others waving brightly-colored banners—almost everyone sitting on plaid blankets—a few even attired in raccoon coats. Vendors make their way through the bleachers with tempting, mustard-topped hats.

Why this word picture? Well, it's simply a way of pointing out that football—like so many other fall events—is made-to-order for movies! Color... action—movies capture it all, everything but the aroma of the popcorn!

If you've been thinking about movies, there's no better time to start than now—and no better place to start than right here at our store. We'll show you the whys and wherefores of all the new Kodak movie cameras—from the $29.95 Brownie Movie Camera right on up.

So, before you take that seat on the 50-yard line, come here first!

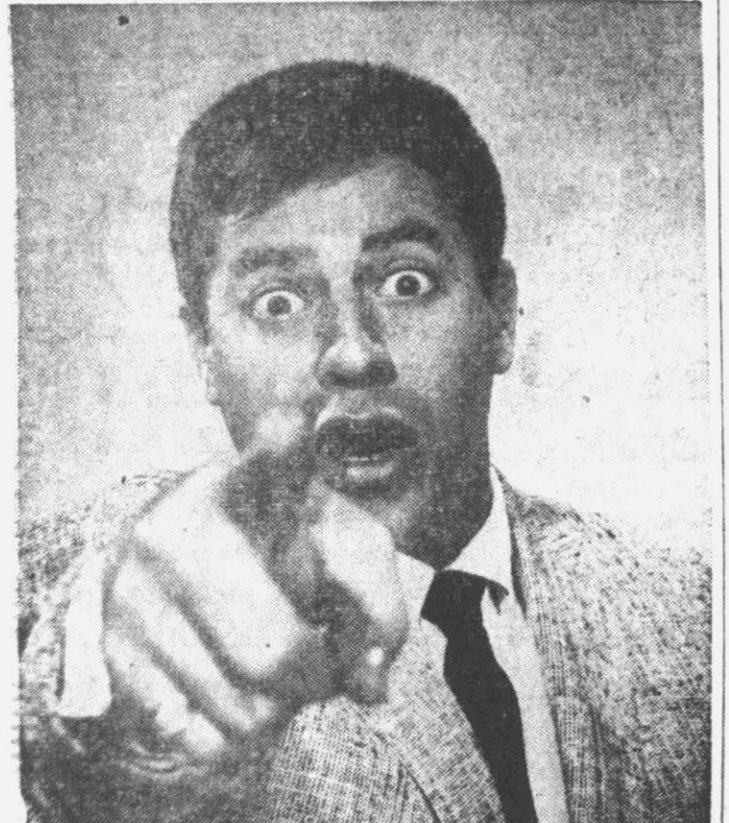

Tons Of Fish Die Of Red Tide

NAPLES, Fla. (AP)—The year's worst attack of the fish killing Red Tide has hit the Naples area.

Tons of dead fish have been washed ashore in two days.

The State Conservation Department has stepped up its program of spraying the gulf and passes with copper sulphate. The outbreak has killed more game fish than any other this season. The Red Tide is caused by gymnodinium brevis, a minute organism.

Marilyn Monroe Says She's Ready For Work

By BOB THOMAS NEW YORK (AP)—Almost recovered from the loss of a baby, Marilyn Monroe says she is eager to get back to work—and also to have a big family.

he's in town. We'll need a house with plenty of room. We have two children (Miller's by a previous marriage) and there'll be plenty more.

Marilyn and Miller live in a tastefully decorated apartment filled with modern paintings and sculpture and hundreds of books. She was, of course, late for the interview, but only an hour.

I commented that she looked like a teen-ager with her slim figure and dewy look. "That's just because I'm not wearing any lipstick," she said. "As a matter of fact, somebody at Fox sent me a script that would have had me playing a teen-ager. I sent it back with the comment that I had hoped I was progressing as an actress and didn't want to go back to playing teen-agers."

Does she miss California? "I miss the weather, definitely," she replied. "I also miss a few (emphasizing few) of the people there. But I'm very happy with what I'm doing here. I keep very busy."

"I enjoy being a wife," she said. "I like to go in the kitchen and thumb through the cook book to find something that looks interesting. I'm pretty good, too. I've baked bread and made noodles, though I guess you shouldn't print that."

AMERICANIZATION

WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS, W. Va. (AP)—Peder Axel Henry Birger Gillis Gustafson Wege will become an American citizen soon, and he also will shorten his name. The Swedish native has decided upon Peder Axel Wege.

HOMING INSTINCT

DULUTH, Minn. (AP)—Tabbie, a 10-year-old cat, likes the bright lights. She was left on the farm of relatives when the Swande Hallberg family moved away from Duluth. Tabbie hiked 80 miles back to Duluth. She was taken in by new occupants of the home.

The world's mightiest range of mountains are underneath the Atlantic Ocean. But, seldom do the peaks rise far enough above the seas to emerge as islands.

MIDWEST STOCK EXCHANGE
CHICAGO (AP)—Steels, aircraft and missile shares paced the Midwest Stock Exchange to an irregular advance today in light trading. Gainers outnumbered losers about 2 to 1. Oils were mixed as were shares representing miscellaneous manufacturers.

The aircraft and missile stocks continued their strength yesterday on news of Russia's second earth satellite. News that residential contract awards for September made the biggest gain this year over 1956 levels was an encouraging factor. The steels rose despite the dip in steel production to the slowest pace since July.

The exchanges in New York were closed because of election day.

Queen Stresses Belief In Closer Ties With America

LONDON (AP)—Queen Elizabeth II told the opening of a new parliamentary session today that Prime Minister Macmillan believes his recent talks with President Eisenhower "will greatly further" free world unity.

Seated on a throne in the glittering red and gold House of Lords, the young sovereign opened Parliament for the third time since she became Queen in 1952.

In the speech, written by Macmillan's government to outline its program, the Queen emphasized the close association of the United States, Britain and the Commonwealth along with other democratic nations.

In an oblique reference to the Soviet Sputniks, the monarch said Britain will continue to search for an international disarmament agreement, "mindful that, at this momentous time, the advance of science into the unknown should be inspired by the hopes, and not retarded by the fears, of mankind."

British Minister of State Allan Noble called the Soviet move a "discouraging development." Wallace Nesbitt of Canada said his government would be "shocked and disappointed at this ultimatum."

Nesbitt later told a reporter he thought Russia had acted after it became convinced the Assembly would pass a 24-nation Western arms proposal. The resolution calls for resumption of talks by the disarmament subcommittee on the basis of Western proposals Russia rejected in London last August.

Delegates had expected Russia to make some drastic move since the United States and other Western nations blocked the Soviet proposal that future arms talks take place in an 82-nation "little U. N. Assembly."

Delegates to the Assembly were shocked by the Soviet decision to quit both the U. N. Disarmament Commission and its five-nation subcommittee. Most of them felt this killed off chances of any more disarmament negotiations at present.

Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister V. V. Kuznetsov disclosed his government's decision yesterday to hushed delegates in the Assembly's 82-nation Political Committee.

Kuznetsov threw cold water on any hopes the Russians might reconsider by telling delegates his government was not given to making statements rashly.

U. S. delegate Henry Cabot Lodge voiced hope the Kremlin move was "just a passing thought and wiser counsels will prevail."

Jules Moch of France expressed hope the Soviet Union would "reconsider its position before it shoulders the responsibility of breaking off disarmament negotiations."

The search for James Allen ended this morning when the local Negro voluntarily turned himself over to City Police and Pitt County ABC officers.

A warrant was filed for Allen's arrest over the weekend when law enforcement officers found two gallons and seven pints of illicit liquor in his home at 1406-A Ward St.

The defendant was released under a $200 bond to appear in City Court.

In yesterday's paper Stencil Jenkins of Robersonville Rt. 1 and John Louis Smith of Robersonville Rt. 3 were erroneously identified as Negroes. The two white men were arrested Sunday on liquor violation charges.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Rebecca Gaskins Butler; a son, William M. Butler of Ayden; his mother, a brother, Edgar Butler of Marion, S.C., and two sisters, Mrs. Earl Moore of Dudley's Crossroads and Mrs. Jodie Barrow of Newport News, Va.

Funeral Wednesday For H. B. Butler

VANCEBORO—H. Berkley Butler, 48, farmer, was drowned in Vandemere Creek near Vandemere Monday afternoon. He was fishing with a companion when their boat overturned.

Funeral services will be held at Chapman's Methodist Church at 3 p.m. Wednesday by the pastor, Rev. Ellis Bedsworth. Burial will be in the church cemetery. The body will be taken to the church from the Wilkerson Funeral Home in Greenville one hour before the funeral.

Mr. Butler, son of Mrs. Cora Langley Butler of near Dudley's Crossroads and the late W. J. Butler, spent his life in the Dudley's Crossroads community. He was a member of Chapman's Methodist Church.

Local Lions Help Stuff Christmas Seal Letters

About 60 members of the Lions Club stuffed Christmas Seal letters for the Pitt County Tuberculosis Association last night under the direction of Paul Curtis, chairman of the Health and Welfare Committee of the Lion's Club.

This service was given in lieu of the regularly scheduled program so that these letters would be in the homes of Pitt County citizens November 15.

James Taylor, president of the local Lion's Club, congratulated the members on their splendid cooperation in this project.

Mrs. Milton Clarke, Executive Director of the Pitt County Tuberculosis Association, urged everyone to buy and use Christmas Seals so that a year round program will continue to be available in Pitt County.

"The major portion of funds so raised will be used in the local community, the remainder being utilized to help maintain the Veterans of Foreign Wars national home for veterans' orphans and widows at Eaton Rapids, Mich., and to insure the continued highly efficient functioning of this organization's national rehabilitation and welfare service."
