Convict Trio Of Highway Racing In Cumberland

FAYETTEVILLE, N.C. (AP) - Three young men were convicted in a case of pre-arranged highway racing and fined yesterday in Cumberland County Recorder's Court, but the automobiles were not confiscated because they belonged to relatives.

Both Fire Chief George W. Gardner, who served as building inspector for many years, and present Building Inspector J.W. Wilson said houses of inferior construction have been built locally.

Recorder's Court Judge Lester Carter fined Randall Hickman, 17, of Spring Lake, and Ted Myers, 22-year-old Ft. Bragg soldier, $200 each on their conviction of pre-arranged highway racing.

When he shows up, state authorities will be waiting to serve warrants covering charges returned by the Johnston County grand jury. Most of the state charges, as well as the federal indictments, concern violations of liquor laws.

George Thomas Church Jr., 19, and Dewey Willard Teague, 21, both of Hickory, were killed when the 1950 automobile skidded 88 feet and wrapped itself around an oak tree, Church was crushed inside the car, which had gone out of control on a curve, and Teague was thrown down a 12-foot bank.

Williams Tells Society Of Trip To Great Art Centers

Mrs. J. D. Messick, chairman of Dinner Committee, made unusual decorations, using mobile articles from classes of Francis Neel at ECC, combined with berries and fall foliage, for the East Carolina Art Society dinner held last night at the Woman's Club.

The speaker was introduced by Mrs. Moore. Ben Williams is the curator of the State Art Museum. In June he was given a leave of absence from the museum to visit the great art centers of Europe from which most of the paintings in the State Art Museum came. He studied the lighting and installation in those museums and paintings done by artists who are represented in North Carolina.

He stated that he came home pleased, for in many instances a North Carolina museum excelled anything he saw. He was accompanied on the trip by his wife, Margaret, who is an artist and a member of the art faculty at St. Mary's Junior College.

She assisted him in giving the program of slides collected on their trip. These slides showed museums, cathedrals and modern business establishments in Europe, Holland, Belgium, France and Italy.

The speaker called attention to several modern buildings and statues. He told about visiting the studio of the Italian sculptor Canova in a small Italian village and there finding the very mould in which he made the statue of George Washington which was ordered by the people of North Carolina for the Capitol and of its arrival in Raleigh.

During the short business session presided over by W. H. Watson, president, he asked members to express their views to him about future programs and activities, citing the program last spring given by Hobson Pittman and the Animated Magazine luncheon. He asked members if they desired similar programs for the coming spring.

Mrs. J. H. B. Moore called attention to the exhibits arranged for the meeting consisting of paintings done by Dr. Wellington Gray, head of the department of art at E.C.C., Francis Neel, and W. H. Persick, members of the art faculty. Also included in the exhibit were articles selected from the exhibit now showing at the community art center and a special exhibit of seven paintings created by a well known contemporary German artist, Ernst Halder, which were loaned by Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Napp, newcomers to Greenville from Munich, Germany.

Mrs. Moore stated that beginning next week a North Carolina artist will be featured each month in the local gallery, in addition to other exhibits, and that the first artist to be so featured will be a husband and wife team, Mr. and Mrs. Ben Williams.

Mrs. Walter Bell and her mother, Mrs. Woods from Rocky Mount, Mrs. Graham Flanagan Jr. and Mr. and Mrs. Napp were visitors for the meeting and Mrs. J. D. Messick introduced five new members, Dr. and Mrs. David R.

Dr. and Mrs. George Douglas and Mrs. Robert K. Stuart. The president thanked Mr. and Mrs. Ragdale for the gift of a copy of "American Painting," a book just published.

'Live With Antiques' Notes Pickwick Book Club Speaker

"Antiques were made to live with. They have been used in American homes for three hundred years, and they are bringing charm, individuality, and a sense of permanence into American homes today," said Mrs. Willard T. Kyzer when she discussed antiques at the Pickwick Book Club meeting Tuesday afternoon.

Mrs. James Harvey Ward, Jr. was club hostess to members and special guests, Mrs. Kyzer and Mrs. Julian White, Jr. at her home on Ragsdale Road.

Panel Tells Teen-Agers' Point Of View

"The Teen-Ager Speaks" was the subject of a panel discussion at the Junius H. Rose High School P.T.A. meeting last night.

About 250 parents listened to panelists Ann Moore, Bob Billbro, Joanne Parks, Ed Buchanan and Louis Arthur, moderated by Dr. Ralph Brimley, Public Relations Director at East Carolina College, gave the views of teen-agers in general on the subjects of clothing, allowances, privacy and automobiles.

Dr. Brimley summarized these areas by asking the parents to recall the days when they were teen-agers and try to understand the teen-agers today.

Questions were asked from the floor by parents and answered by the panel and Dr. Brimley.

An announcement was made urging everyone to attend the dedication of the high school building Thursday night, November 14, at 8 p.m.

We stock them before you read about them

You read about important new medical discoveries almost every time you pick up a newspaper or magazine these days. Understandably, we and your physician hear about new medicinal agents long before you do. In fact, part of our professional service is to keep physicians informed about the technical details and availability of the new drugs which we add to our stock almost every week.

Occasionally, people come in and ask about a new drug that we do not stock. If it is not available, it is because the drug either has proved disappointing or has not been fully tested. Like your physician, we feel patients are not guinea pigs and that research is best left in the hands of medical schools and hospitals. We'd be mighty pleased, though, to fill all prescriptions for available new drugs for which your physician cares to write.

Reading Program Is Success

By VIRGINIA M. NANCE

Nineteen years ago, an idea which has grown into one of the most valuable home demonstration programs in North Carolina, materialized.

This idea was in the form of a cooperative reading program, which, in 1938, was instigated by the Home Demonstration Department of the Agricultural Extension Service and the North Carolina Library Commission (now North Carolina State Library).

Mrs. Elizabeth H. Hughey, State librarian, and Miss Ruth Current, state home demonstration agent, said recently in a letter to home demonstration club members, "During the intervening years since the program began, it has been gratifying to observe the steady growth of the program which has brought about not only an increased number of readers, but also a definite trend toward improved quality of reading."

To Miss Current, the reading program seems valuable because it encourages people to read more and makes books more easily available to rural families. She says, "Reading can never be a substitute for living, but it can make living more worthwhile by enlarging vision, giving indispensable knowledge, bringing people into contact with great and less great authors. It pictures for them real and imaginary people—people who have had travel experiences, people who have lived different lives, people who have displayed courage, faith and belief in mankind."

The Rural Reading program is another good example of cooperation of different agencies working toward a common goal. Mrs. Hughey explains that the program is one that she "would like to see develop into a family reading program" rather than one directed primarily to home demonstration club women. Already it is felt because club women read the books, many family members do, too. "But I believe it would be possible to make additional lists available," continues Mrs. Hughey, "to include books that will interest the men more and will be ones that children will enjoy."

One of the greatest values that Mrs. Hughey feels the reading program has is in the realm of personal development. She says, "I feel that through this cooperative project, club women will again be rallying in an all-out campaign to inspire people to read. The time for this will come during North Carolina Library Week, March 16 through 22, 1958, when the theme will be 'Wake Up and Read!'"

In the observance of Library Week, sponsored by the National Book Committee, and state and local committees, club women will be helping alert the people of their communities as to the resources, values of reading, and the need of being informed. Many communities will have special programs geared to what they feel the community needs most.

In thinking about the reading list itself, it's interesting to note how the books are selected for the list. According to Mrs. Hughey, county librarians are requested to send in book titles their club women would like to see included the next year. They ask the women what they felt was most helpful from the year before and what new ones they want or what subjects they are more interested in. After these requests are tabulated and evaluated, the lists are made up and sent to Miss Current for approval. The lists are then made available to librarians in July in order that they might make certain the books will be on hand when the women request them.

Each year about this time the next year's rural reading list is released to home demonstration club members. At their annual Achievement Days held during October and November reading certificates are awarded to those club members who, during the past year, have read the required number of books.

The requirements for receiving a Book Review Certificate are fairly simple. In order to receive one, a club member must read and review before her club or similar group three books, one of which must be non-fiction. All the books must be on the reading list for the current or preceding years. If a club member desires, she can work further toward an Advanced Book Review Certificate, which requires that she read and review five books, four of which must be non-fiction.

The number of club women in the state who receive certificates varies from year to year, since no more than one certificate can be awarded a club member in any one year. In order for a club member to be eligible for the advanced certificate, she must first have earned the Book Review Certificate. Once she has received both, no further State recognition is given.

To date this year 496 state book review certificates and 265 advanced certificates have been awarded. Many counties will in some way recognize additional club women who have already received both certificates, but are continuing to participate in the program.

Boys List Date Taboos For Girls

By VIVIAN BROWN
AP Newsfeatures Writer

If you want to be a popular campus belle, better learn the whys and wherefores of dating. There are many ways to irritate the boy who takes you out. Here's a list compiled by two boys, seniors at a Westport, Conn., high school, who prefer anonymity in their confession.

1. Why does a girl become insulted if you even talk to another girl at a party or at a dance? And for some reason or another most girls think you are supposed to dance every dance with them when you take them out.

2. Is there any reason why a girl must call you a silly pet name when you are with your buddy or mother? Such names as "Cookie," "Poochie" sound endearing until they are overheard by others.

3. Why does a girl think she makes you jealous by playing up to the orchestra or a group of boys she doesn't know? It just makes her look cheap.

4. Must she always make decisions. Can't she wait until you give the waiter her order or until you make a suggestion for the evening before she tells you what she'd like. This type of girl opens doors, and always leads the boy to the table, too.

5. Why do some girls on that first date, anticipate that you've just taken her out for a necking engagement? They are scared that you are going to "demand" a kiss before the evening is over.

6. Isn't it considered reasonable to expect a girl to ask you in to her home once in a while, perhaps for a sandwich after a date? There shouldn't be any harm if parents are home.

7. Why does a girl write you a mushy letter just because you've given her a little encouragement. And why is that particular letter always opened by your mother or sister by mistake?

8. If a girl wants to put on make-up why doesn't she leave the table. It's disgusting to watch some girls slather on lipstick, and even eye make-up at the table. And combing the hair at the table, certainly means she is carrying the idea too far.

9. Why does the average girl feel obliged to rundown a girl you've just paid a compliment to, acting insecure just to have the other girl praised?

10. The spoiled brat type of girl who can't be a good sport when things go wrong—flat tire, deflated wallet, a case of flu on the night of the big dance—is just ruling herself out of future dates.

11. Why do girls bore you with a lot of frilly chit-chat, and then get insulted if you discuss baseball or some sport in which you are interested.

12. A girl doesn't have to be dressed to kill when you take her to a party, but she should find

New Hatchery Spells Many Things

It is difficult to measure in dollars and cents the economic importance of the new Chemell hatchery which will be built in Greenville.

By some standards the new hatchery would be considered a very small industry. From Pitt County's standpoint, however, the hatchery can mean several million dollars a year additional income.

From the standpoint of the number of people the hatchery will employ, it will be relatively small industry, affording jobs for some 20 to 30 people. In addition to these jobs the fact the hatchery is located here can mean much to the further diversification of agriculture. It will mean supplemental income for farmers of this vicinity.

Initial reports on the operation say the hatchery will purchase approximately $10,000 worth of eggs weekly. That item alone will mean some half million dollars a year paid to farmers who produce these eggs. Add to that the amount of feed it will take to keep up enough chickens to lay $10,000 worth of eggs a week and we have another major item. Then when the eggs are hatched there will be baby chicks galore to be grown locally or shipped to other areas. This phase too will have its impact on the local economy.

This new industry in Greenville will not only help the economy from the standpoint of the jobs it affords in the new plant. It goes hand-in-hand with efforts toward greater diversification of Pitt County's

Face Difficult, Delicate Task

By LYNN NISBET
PORTS — The new State Ports Authority faces a delicate and difficult task in carrying out provisions of the statute creating it and the extra assignment given by Governor Hodges in announcing the personnel of the Authority.

The Governor took two steps to eliminate the intense rivalry between the two major port cities of Morehead City and Wilmington. No member of the new Authority lives in the area or on a railroad line directly connected with either port. Closest member is W. G. Clark, Jr. of Tarboro, who is about 120 miles from Morehead and 130 from Wilmington.

Although bunched in pairs the new members fairly well represent the whole state except the southeastern third adjacent to the ports.

Clark of Tarboro and K. F. Adams of Roanoke Rapids live in adjoining counties in the northeast. Collier Cobb Jr. of Chapel Hill and John M. Reeves of Pinehurst are neighbors in the eastern Piedmont, while Earl Phillips of High Point and C. D. Gray Jr. of Gastonia are in the heart of the industrial Piedmont. Robert L. Eichelberger of Asheville is the far western representative.

Major business activities of the members are diverse. Adams is a paper mill executive; Clark represents about every phase of agriculture with important banking connections; Cobb is in insurance, banking and contracting; Gray and Reeves are in textiles and financing; Phillips is primarily in furniture manufacturing; Eichelberger might be termed a general representative of the public special interest in any particular line. It had been hoped that an experienced transportation man would be named.

INTERESTS — It is interesting to note that except for names and places of residence specifications written for members of the new board are almost identical with those of the men replaced.

Opinion hereabouts is that Clark will be named chairman of the new group, and his interests in agriculture, banking, fertilizer, manufacturing are as like to those of retiring chairman Edwin Pale as two peas in a pod. Each of the other six retiring members has a counterpart on the new board. Governor Hodges told newsmen that all the men being replaced were his personal friends.

WHY? — With comparable interests and ability and friendship, why the complete change in board personnel? In his statement the Governor indicated that conditions which have arisen were perhaps not the fault of anybody, but he recognized as a fact that development of the ports was being handicapped by resentment in some quarters of real or fancied discrimination in favor of Wilmington. He said he reluctantly concluded a clean sweep was necessary. He also recommends — and in this case a recommendation is an order — that the main authority office be moved from Wilmington to Raleigh. Whether or not there was basis for the charges of discrimination — and many people doubt there was — the fact that they were widely publicized called for steps to eliminate friction.

Morehead City folks have resented the fact that the port at Wilmington was doing more business and that the main offices were located there. Wilmington has had the advantage of two big railroads — ACL and SAL — while up to now Morehead has been served only by a weak short line. Acquisition of the A&NC operations by Southern tends to equalize rail advantages and opens possibilities for development at Morehead City that did not exist a few months ago.

SCOPE — Publicity given to the rivalry between the two main ports, and the fact that very little has been done by the State Ports Authority except at these two major ports, has tended to create popular impression that Morehead City and Wilmington were the only responsibility of the Authority.

The legislative act creating the Authority specifies that it shall develop and promote the ports at Morehead City, Wilmington and Southport "and such other places" as might serve the best interests of the state as a whole. That includes Fayetteville; New Bern, Kinston, Goldsboro and Smithfield — maybe Martin Greene's idea for a Raleigh port on the Neuse; Washington and Greenville; Edenton and Elizabeth City, as well as both commercial and pleasure boat facilities at numerous other ports.

Main statewide interest will be in development of the deep-water facilities for ocean-going commerce at Wilmington, Southport and Morehead City. Whether these facilities can be more efficiently developed and operated from an office in Raleigh than on the ground at one of the ports remains to be seen.

North Carolina's situation with respect to ports development is like its position in many other phases of total economy. Its chief asset is at the same a major liability. Maryland has only one port of consequence at Baltimore; Virginia has only one at Norfolk; South Carolina has Charleston, Georgia has Savannah and Alabama has Mobile. All these states have other ports, but none comparable to the big ones. North Carolina has the Wilmington-Southport and the Beaufort-Morehead City areas rivaling each other for supremacy. Necessity, born of economic and political, requires dividing attention between them.

agriculture and the development of supplemental income crops.

As in every instance when a new industry comes to a community, a great deal of effort has been put forth by a few local citizens to convince officials of Chemell Hatcheries that Greenville is the ideal location for their new plant. It is the spirit of community effort which these citizens have exhibited that enables a city and a county to progress.

Greenville is pleased the company decided to locate its new hatchery here. We are confident that the company will be equally pleased with its choice as the new enterprise becomes a part of the local economy.

Sudden Awareness Of The Patrolman's Role

Hundreds of times a day law enforcement officers stop motor vehicles on the highways. It's part of their job to issue citations for infractions of highway regulations, to inspect vehicles, to remind motorists to drive carefully.

Such work is routine for law enforcement officers . . . particularly members of the Highway Patrol. It looks like a simple job to the average motorist. Nothing dangerous about. The public gives little thought to the procedure until some maniac, for an unexplained reason, slays one of these officers.

Suddenly the public becomes incensed. They are eager for the murderer to be caught; they howl for his scalp. Suddenly many citizens—some for the first time in their lives—realize the routine work of highway patrolmen isn't a job without its hazards. It is more than just sitting hour after hour behind the wheel of an automobile. It is more than trapping speeders and hiding on side roads.

Though the public for the most part fails to realize it, highway patrolmen are well aware of the odds against them in their job. The patrolmen, their wives—yes even their widows—are aware that death is the constant companion of the law enforcement officer. Most patrolmen, because of their caution, because of their training, beat the odds. But sooner or later the grim reaper takes his toll as was the case with Patrolmen Reece and Brown.

Tragic as it is, perhaps after all the deaths of these two patrolmen will serve some useful purpose. Perhaps it will instill in the people of North Carolina a new respect, a greater appreciation, for these highway patrolmen who daily risk their lives to make the state and its highways safer for the other fellow.

Music Pirates Not Scuttled

By ELMER ROESSNER
Music pirates were hit by a new Federal Court decision but they were not scuttled. Freebooters will continue to prey in the recorded music industry.

The U.S. Court of Appeals, Second District, has ruled that dealers who sell unlicensed records are liable for the royalty payment of 2 cents a record. This rate is set by Federal law. The case centered around music played by the late Major Glenn Miller and his A.E.F. orchestra. It was alleged that a company had recorded a radio broadcast of the music and had pressed it on records. Major Miller's estate, administered by his widow, Helen D. Miller, still collects royalties on his works.

Music publishers licensed to use Major Miller's music used the record-maker and a number of retailers. The record-maker settled. The retailers won in the lower court, but now have lost on appeal. They say they will appeal the new decision to the Supreme Court.

SAILING THE TIN PAN MAIN.

There is a great amount of piracy in the music industry. A pirate can make a tape recording of a radio or television number and pay a manufacturer to put it on records. He can sell these records to dealers cheaply because he pays no royalties, no studio rent and no fees to stars or orchestras.

Pirates often give their firms fancy titles and bestow imaginary names on the sinners and their works. They steal. At other times, they boldly feature the name of the star. Pirates have roamed Tin Pan Alley freely because there has been little change in the copyright law since it was written in 1909, before the days of broadcast music.

Even if the new decision is upheld by the Supreme Court, pirates will continue to operate, probably offering dealers rebates of 2 cents a record to cover any liability for royalties. However, if upheld, the decision may clear the way for their actions that could lead to other precedents. For example, a singer might demand her regular recording fee from each retailer who had sold stolen records of her voice. Each member of the orchestra might also sue for wages. If enough financial hazards were set up, dealers might find it advisable to deal only with suppliers above suspicion.

Meanwhile, other kinds of piracy flourish. One consists of the outright theft of popular records on a single, long-playing disc and sold through music stores or other channels. This is generally termed bootlegging. By the time the copyright owners catch up, the pirates have gone out of business, perhaps to set up offices someplaces under new names.

Another type of piracy consists of making tape recordings of music of native plays and transferring it to disks. The natives get nothing more than a few bottles of rum for their work—considerably less than the James Caesar Petrillo scale. Later they may discover that the pirate has applied for a copyright on their music.

OFFBEAT ITEMS IN THE BUSINESS NEWS

R. A. Calabret, Bakelite official, says latex paint production is increasing so much that in 1962 the industry will produce enough to paint a mile-wide strip from New York City to Port Worth—which may be just what the country needs. . . A Zanesville, Ohio, appliance dealer is trying to convince doctors and dentists that Hi-Fi music sets in waiting rooms would precondition patients for happier sessions.

Salaries of engineering, scientific and administrative employees rose 5.9 per cent between June, 1956, and June 1957, the American Management Association reports. The rise is a third less than in the previous year, indicating a trend toward leveling off. . . Sales of air conditioners have been rising seven times as fast in California as in the rest of the country, says Cloud Wampler, Carrier chairman.

When big people get together, they discuss ideas; when average people get together, they discuss things; and when small people get together, they discuss other people. — Hanover, Kansas, News.

Strength For Today

By EARL L. DOUGLASS
LIFE'S PROPER SEQUELS
Great emphasis is being laid today on hobbies. We are assured that we must have a hobby else we may fall into all sorts of disagreeable states of mind. Hobbies relieve tension, get our minds off the duties which if unduly pursued overwhelm and overburden us.

That hobbies are necessary and advantageous no one can deny. But there is a lot of nonsense in the hobby idea today, and such nonsense arises chiefly from the fact that people who advocate hobbies often make too much of them. We have entered upon a sad state of our existence when any hobby becomes first in our lives. As an occasional diversion, as relief from tension

The Story Of A Building

On hearing some casual mention of the old Reflector building's rather busy past, I pressed for more . . . and it left my head in a whirl.

It seemed to me then that there were enough people in the neighborhood who didn't know the story and might find it interesting. The building has been a familiar landmark on Greenville's main street for something like sixty years, and when it goes, Evans Street will be changed too.

Actually, the old Reflector house was part of a block of buildings erected by the Elliot Brothers of Baltimore before the turn of the century. The block included what is now the Sherwin-Williams store (a two-story building then), a few one-story buildings, and then the two-story structure on the corner. The group was known for a long time as "the Riello block" after a theatre which occupied one of the buildings.

The corner building was purchased for use of The Reflector in the Christmas holidays of 1900 and the mechanical department was set up in the adjoining building now occupied by a drug store. The newspaper's offices took up only a small part of the building. Masonic lodgerooms were situated on the second floor, and the first floor was largely taken up by law offices, insurance offices, and a jewelry store.

Perhaps one-quarter of the ground floor space housed the paper's offices, the Southern Express office, a Western Union telegraph office, and book store and cigar counter . . . which later added a soda fountain.

The Masonic temple was completed on the court house square in 1903, and the newspaper took over the second floor of the corner building, installing the mechanical equipment there. Another change came in 1910 when the downstairs space became available and the paper moved its equipment down there.

Thereafter, for a while, a billiard parlor operated on the second floor. In 1923 that floor was converted into office space.

In 1947 the expanding needs of The Reflector forced a move of the newsroom and much of the mechanical equipment upstairs again. The rest is recent history.

Workmen who are dismantling the structure have uncovered some old handmade bricks. And all but two of the beams which bore the roof were found to be in perfect condition.

Those beams, of long leaf heart pine, spanned the width of the building. They measured roughly 2X10, and are as sound as the day they were installed.

The timbers between the first and second floors measure about 3X15. The expectation is that they'll be found in generally good condition too.

They built to last, in those days.

Opinions In Brief

"We are dealing in 48 cent dollars today. That means that for every dollar we paid for life insurance during the past few years, every dollar we paid on a mortgage and every dollar we put in the bank is really worth less today than half of what we paid for." — Ponte-a-la-Hache, La., Piqueunnes Gazette.

Twenty Years Of This

By HAL BOYLE
NEW YORK (AP) — As any ordinary happy man does, I awoke as usual this morning with the pleasurable sensation that my wife was pouring champagne on my toes.

I awoke and discovered, as usual, that my wife was not pouring champagne on my toes. "Do you know what day this is?" she asked.

"She thought I didn't really know what she had in mind. The trouble for her is that I did. As a matter of fact I had been brooding about it for 20 years. "This, my dear," I assured her, "was the day I destroyed you forever, just two decades ago."

"You were a carefree, bare-minded working girl, and I did the most cruel thing a man can do to an innocent girl with a purpose in this world — to take her away from her job."

"Well, you did," she said. "So I did," I answered. "And industry is the poorer, but I am the richer."

"Don't you think we should celebrate?"

"Celebrate what?"

"This is an occasion."

"Living with you, every day is an adventure. Being married to a Mau-Mau might offer the opportunity of an occasion. Being married to you every moment, even after 20 years, has its strangeness."

"Well, I didn't have to marry you. I could have married any number of men. And why I picked you I don't know. And who else could you have married, anyway?"

"Which Mau-Mau?"

"Any Mau-Mau?"

"Would you rather have her?"

"Not after knowing you?"

"Do you think I am like a Mau-Mau?"

"Which Mau-Mau?"

"You don't make sense."

"Do you want me to make sense?"

"Some days."

"Then marry another man on those days."

"But you aren't at all other-satisfactory."

"I'm not?"

"No, you're not!"

"But you are!"

"But do you really mean it? I mean from the heart?"

"Well, I'd rather have you than any Mau-Mau I know."

"You're sure?"

"Sure. Will you do me a favor?"

"What?"

"Is there any champagne in the icebox?"

"Yes, Why?"

"Will you open a bottle and pour it slowly over my toes?"

"No, I won't. And why do you ask such a crazy thing?"

"Do you really want a way to celebrate a 20th wedding anniversary?"

"No, not if you don't wake me up by pouring champagne on my toes. This is my anniversary, too."

And when the mailman comes, he brings these tidings:

That Grace Downs, model school teacher, took her young niece to her first movie. . . When Grace asked her later how she liked it, the child replied, "It's okay, but there's no time to run out to the kitchen for a cookie."

That the tilt of the Leaning Tower of Pisa in Italy has increased a quarter of an inch in the last 15 years.

That one of the biggest selling fruits in America is the coffee bean. . . which, the chances are, probably didn't know is actually a cherry.

That the longest word you can type out on the top line of letters on a standard typewriter is — "typewriter."

That it was Friedrich Karl Otto Dibelius who observed, "Power is like sea water. The more one drinks of it, the thirstier one gets."

Strategists Urge 'Exit Ezra'

By RAY TUCKER
WASHINGTON—"Exit Ezra" has become the short and snappy term most descriptive of the political expediency which a new group of GOP strategists at Washington have adopted in order to resuscitate the Administration and the Party for the 1958 and 1960 elections.

The good-natured Eisenhower has finally heeded the call of the cold, practical and no-nonsense politicians.

Although the "Exit Ezra" slogan applies particularly to Agriculture Secretary Ezra Taft Benson, he is simply the symbol of the planned housecleaning of Administration figures who have become unpopular with influential elements of the electorate. But he is the most dramatic and ironic symbol.

Eisenhower is now listening, although reluctantly and belatedly, to men who play politics in the backstage and "smoke-filled room" style. Although he cannot run again, and has no deep interest in Republican fortunes, he has an understandable pride in his own performance, and in obtaining popular endorsement of his principles in forthcoming elections.

TASK OF RESUSCITATION Inasmuch as he and his Party have lost a good deal of their former popularity, he realizes that he has been receiving and acting on bad advice. So, he has assigned the task of resuscitation to such fervent partisans as Vice President Nixon, Postmaster General Arthur E. Summerfield and Sherman Adams, White House Chief of Staff.

Despite Eisenhower's personal admiration for the three resigned Cabinet members—Humphrey, Wilson and Brownell—they had become handicaps. They were willing sacrifices on the altar of expediency. They would have been pressed. They were not pressed.

Humphrey and Wilson dramatized the Democrats' basic charge that "Big Business" dominated Administration policies. Humphrey's "light money" program made him a vulnerable target. Wilson's economy directives and his hostility to scientific research were connected with the appearance of the Russian Sputnik in the skies.

BROWNELL'S DESEGREGATION EDICT Brownell was associated with drastic implementation of the desegregation edict, as climaxed in the Little Rock episode. His antitrust offensive, especially his persistent prosecution of the du Pont-General Motors tie-up, had antagonized conservative interests and generous contributors. And he had broken with Thomas E. Dewey who still stands high at the White House as a pro-Nixon ally and adviser.

There is no ideological pattern to these exits. John B. Hollister's departure from the International Co-operation Administration was not regretted because he was too much of a Taft conservative and isolationist. Yet Arthur Larson, although he wrote the bible of Eisenhower's "Modern Republicanism," was demoted from USA. Ike is simply dropping or demoting those who handicap him and the Party with Congress and the voters.

"EXIT BENSON"—The expected Benson exit, however, reflects most vividly the cold-blooded resort to expediency. It also throws a new light on the Eisenhower who put up with the undisciplined and exuberant Patton in World War II.

Benson has carried out the President's fundamental views on the agricultural problem conscientiously and religiously. He seeks to balance production with consumption save for essential and emergency reserves, to dispose of price-depressing surpluses and to reduce costly artificial supports to a minimum. Indeed, he has been framing an even more drastic Agricultural Act for 1958 at the direct order of the White House.

No Cabinet member has obeyed a White House directive more loyally and fully. But both his policies and personalities infuriate the farmers and their political spokesmen on Capitol Hill. They see no hope of holding the agricultural areas, where they lost in 1956, if he remains at the Capital much longer. So, "Exit Ezra" is the political password among GOP bigwigs today.

Concerning Spiritual Gifts ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Paul reminds the Corinthians that among them are men of different gifts. One man is gifted with wisdom and knowledge, but in all is the Spirit.

Concerning Spiritual Gifts

EACH ONE HAS SOME TALENT TO BE USED IN GOD'S SERVICE

Scripture—I Corinthians 12-14.

By NEWMAN CAMPBELL. DR. WILBUR M. SMITH states that the first chapter listed in today's lesson is one of the most important in all the New Testament. I agree with him. He suggests too that the younger classes and the older ones too, introduce it by the teachers allowing the pupils to name as many different types of workers in their own church as they can think of.

room has something that distinguishes him or her from the others. If it is not in the school's curriculum, these might be good-nature, thoughtfulness of others, obedience to the school rules, etc. Paul knew the people of the Corinthian church well, and he points out their diversified gifts or talents, but all should have the same spirit, he wrote, for God is the same "which worketh all in all."

THERE OUGHTA BE A LAW! By FAGALY and SHORTEN

Killian said, too, that "a very strong scientific advisory group is an essential part of the plan, and the recruiting of this group will proceed with the utmost dispatch." Did Eisenhower's announcement last night on the new set-up for science mean that a "czar" with substantial power is to oversee the missile and earth satellite programs? At one point in the President's address the language suggested Killian might be such a czar. He said Killian, aided by a strong advisory group of outstanding experts, "will have the active responsibility of helping me follow through on the program." Eisenhower said also that Dr. Killian "will see to it" that projects which experts believe have the best possibilities "shall advance with the utmost speed" and that Killian "will make sure" that the best talent and full resources are applied to high-priority projects. But then Eisenhower also said: "In the Defense Department is an official, directly responsible to the secretary, in charge of missile development. I have directed that the secretary make certain that the guided missile director is clothed with all the authority that the secretary himself possesses in this field, so that no administrative or interservice block can occur." It was learned last week that the Pentagon was exploring the idea of appointing a separate manager for coordinating the different projects for development of an antimissile missile to counter the intercontinental ballistic missile. The Army and the Air Force both have their own projects in this field. They also have separate—and justly promoted—projects for the intermediate range ballistic missile. The President said: "It misses the whole point to say that we

Committee Will Seek Rural Telephone Peace

RALEIGH (AP)—A committee will seek to spell out an agreement to end a fuss between the State Utilities Commission and rural telephone cooperatives over boundaries of areas served by the co-ops. The group was set up yesterday after a lengthy conference attended by the Utilities Commission and representatives of the Rural Electrification Authority, which administers the rural telephone program. Gov. Hodges had suggested the meeting as a means of finding a settlement. Utilities Chairman Stanley Winborn indicated an agreement proposed by the co-ops would be acceptable to the commission, and the committee was named to put the agreement in writing. Under it, the commission would not order a private telephone company to serve customers in a co-op's territory until the co-op and the private company attempted to work out the matter with the prospective customers involved. Utilities Commissioners Sam Worthington, Harry Westcott and R. Lee Whitmore were named to the committee, along with REA Chairman Gwyn B. Price, L. P. McLendon of Greensboro and Dr. S. H. Hobbs Jr. of Chapel Hill. McLendon, an attorney, outlined the proposed agreement. It would settle a dispute which arose when the commission ordered Central Telephone Co. to serve seven customers in territory claimed by the Randolph Telephone Membership Corp. Although that order was reversed in superior court, the commission later again ordered the company to serve a customer in the co-op's territory. The co-op's charged the commission's position endangered the federal loans which finance the rural telephone program. In turn, the commission said it had authority to order private company's to serve persons the co-op could not or would not serve. It said boundaries agreed upon by co-ops and companies were not binding on the commission.

want to become involved in this way," says Jennie Ann Lindstrom of the separation granted in Italy yesterday to her mother, Ingrid Bergman, and Roberto Rossellini. Miss Lindstrom, 19, is a sophomore at the University of Colorado. She spent several weeks in Europe earlier this year with her actress-mother. It was the first time the two had met since Miss Bergman left the United States and Jennie's father, Dr. Peter Lindstrom, seven years ago. Apples were being grown in Nova Scotia as early as 1635.

New Science, Technology Boss Will Run Into Big Controversy

By ELTON C. FAY WASHINGTON (AP)—Dr. James R. Killian is moving from cloistered university life into one of the sharpest controversies and some of the knottiest problems Washington has seen in many a year. Sitting on the right hand of President Eisenhower as "special assistant to the President for science and technology," the 53-year-old head of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology will find he also is concerned, directly or indirectly, with such matters as these: 1. Clamoring criticism from people in and out of Congress who demand to know (a) why we are supposedly behind Russia in the missile weapon field; (b) why Russia is ahead in the satellite launching business; (c) what is going to be done about it. 2. Money—should more be spent for military scientific projects? 3. The rivalry of the individual armed forces in weaponry, which Eisenhower calls "alleged interservice competition." Killian is no stranger to Washington activities, having served on an Army science advisory panel in 1951 and on a number of national foundation and scholarship boards. He comes to Washington calmly. But he said in a statement at Cambridge, Mass., last night that "I shall move as rapidly as possible to marshal the best scientific and engineering judgment and creative talent in the United States and to make it available to the President for the formulation of national policy which involves science and technology."

must now increase our expenditures of all kinds on military hardware and defense. "Certainly, we need to feel a high sense of urgency. But this does not mean that we should mount our charger and try to ride off in all directions at once." The Defense Department set out this fiscal year to spend no more than 38 billion dollars for defense. Recently, it was disclosed that the year might end with the ceiling exceeded by seven or eight hundred million dollars. Yesterday, there was speculation that the total of estimates made by the armed forces for the next fiscal year might reach 40 billion dollars.

HOW WE DO THE JOB

Our program is based on the idea that power should stay with the people. Farm Bureau members in community meetings establish county policies. The County Farm Bureau members of the N. C. Farm Bureau Federation make their recommendations to the State Resolutions Committee, and approve or reject state policies with their voting delegates. Similarly the State Farm Bureau members of the American Farm Bureau Federation determine AFBF policies. Elected officers, staff personnel, and legislative committees follow these resolutions on the state, county and national levels in trying to do the things farmers want done. Thus, from the members come the program, and through the members it is made effective. This is how farmers, through an organized grass-roots plan, get results on the county, state and national levels.

FACTS FARMERS SHOULD KNOW

These conditions are little known by some farmers . . . not at all by non-farm people . . . but they are vital to welfare of everybody.

FARMERS MUST HAVE A FAIR INCOME

- 1. To insure a sufficient supply of food and fiber — Farm production should be geared to public needs with a generous reserve supply for emergencies. The benefit of efficient farm production should be shared by farmers and consumers alike. 2. To help insure national security—Our security and welfare as a nation depends to a great extent upon the products of our farms. 3. To conserve and develop human and national resources—Soil depletion and human depletion go together. Our increasing standards of living and growing population demand soil improvement. 4. To raise the long-time level of farm living—The continuous prosperity in other areas of our national life depend upon a growing prosperity among farm people. Likewise, better living in the countryside depends upon the capacity of city people to buy. 5. To avoid an agricultural depression—Our past two depressions were caused by a corresponding period of low farm income. This can happen again. 6. To avoid a general depression—Welfare of agriculture depends in general upon the health of our economy. An adequate farm program must be based on the long-time betterment of our total economic life.

THE FARMER'S SHARE

Here's a table showing the proportion of our national population on farms in various years, and the proportion of the national income which went to farmers in those years.

Table with 3 columns: Year, Farm Income % U. S. Income, Population %. Rows include years 1910 through 1956.

RETURNS ON A 2c A DAY INVESTMENT

Farm Bureau is an independent Farm Organization, built and financed by farmers, to obtain for them a fair share of the national income. Farm Bureau consists of 1,587,107 families located in all 48 states and Puerto Rico. Farm Bureau is the organized voice of American Agriculture—the largest and strongest farm organization in the world. A representative meets with every committee that has anything to do with agricultural legislation in order to see that the policies of its membership are carried out. It serves the farm family every day in the social, educational and legislative fields.

Acquit 'Wizard' In Assault Case

CONCORD, N. C. (AP)—Eldon L. Edwards, 48, of College Park, Ga., imperial wizard of the U.S. Klans Inc., Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, yesterday was acquitted here of charges he assaulted a news photographer during a KKK meeting Oct. 26.

James M. Babb, 46, photographer for the Concord Tribune, had charged Edwards with being one of seven or eight men who knocked him down, roughed him up and damaged his camera when he attempted to take a picture following a cross burning at the meeting near here.

Judge Clyde L. Propst Jr. ruled the evidence insufficient. He held the case without a jury.

Miss Kay Harbison, a reporter for the Concord Tribune who said she was shoved during the meeting, testified that she could not identify any of the klansmen involved in the assault.

Babb testified he could not identify the color of Edwards' robe. Judge Propst told Edwards "Don't let the fact that you came up here from Georgia and received a fair trial in this court give you or anyone else the idea that we encourage the operation of the Klan here."

"I view many of the things done in the name of the Klan as very little higher than a soldier in a schoolhouse—Little Rock was at one extreme and the Klan is at the other. We don't like anybody coming in from the outside and interfering in our affairs," the judge concluded.

Edwards denied the charges.

President's Big Test Lies In Persuading Lawmakers

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER
WASHINGTON (AP)—President Eisenhower's call for creation of a NATO scientific committee to speed the sharing of knowledge among Allied nations seemed assured today of enthusiastic acceptance by the European allies.

He is expected to face more opposition on the issue in Congress than at a December meeting of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization in Paris. Eisenhower will head the U. S. delegation.

went on, he would support organization of a scientific committee within NATO "to carry out an enlarged Atlantic effort in research."

New Super-Fuel Near Stage Of Mass-Production

PITTSBURGH (AP)—A scientist revealed today that the United States soon will attain substantial production of boron-hydrogen high energy fuels, compounds which some sources suspect were the new type rocket power Soviet Russia says it used to fire Sputnik II into space.

"Project Zip" was the code name assigned to the research by the Navy in 1952. It has been classified as secret until very recently. Pilot plant production of boron-hydrogen compounds has been under way for some time at the plant of Callery Chemical Co. in Butler County 25 miles north of Pittsburgh. Dr. George F. Huff, the company's director of research, told a reporter. The output has been devoted to research. A new four-million-dollar plant going into production next spring at Lawrenceburg, Kas., will produce "practical quantities," he said. Larger production will come from a 38-million-dollar plant scheduled to open at Muskogee, Okla., in January 1959.

We fussed a few weeks ago at the Saturday Review for devoting so much time and so many of its columns to Science, at a time when Literature and the Humanities are having so much trouble surviving. John Lear, Science Editor of SR, has now answered our complaint with a personal letter, enclosing the excerpts from SR of March and April, 1956, which explain the reasons why the magazine is doing what it's doing:

"The experiment"—of including science articles in a literary periodical like SR—will, we hope, write Mr. Lear, "serve to remind the non-scientists among readers of the Saturday Review that Science is intimately shaping and moving their lives from day to day. We intend to document our observation that Science is not only relevant to creating a vital part of it; and that education for the whole man must respect it. . . . The purpose of SR-Research, concludes Science editor Lear, is to try "to restore the old perspective, to re-establish the common man's belief in the oneness of things." Everybody, in short, is involved in science and ought to be interested in it—something with which we certainly agree, and we send our thanks to Mr. Lear of SR for sending us—and you—his views.

Out of Context Meyer Levin's novel "Compulsion" about the Leopold-Loeb murder case has just come out as a play in New York, and critics are mixed in their reactions to it. . . . In the advertising blurb, Brooks Atkinson, the Times critic, is quoted as raving about some of the acting in it—which he does in his criticism. But his complete impression of the play was thumbs down—which the ad did not quote, and you can't blame the ad writers, we suppose. But lifting the one good thing Atkinson had to say about "Compulsion"—out of the context of his bad review of it was, we think, a prime of ex-

Flu May Have Claimed 5 Lives

RALEIGH (AP)—The current outbreak of influenza in North Carolina may have claimed as many as five lives.

The toll rose yesterday with a report from Durham that two deaths there probably resulted from complications following influenza. In addition, tests were being made to determine whether Asian flu led to the pneumonia which caused the death of a Greensboro woman.

The State Board of Health already had attributed two deaths in Chatham County to complications following the flu. Meanwhile, the board placed at 150,908 its estimate of the number of cases of "influenza like" disease in the state for the week ending Nov. 1. The earlier estimate of 145,000 was raised with later reports from other county health departments.

The deaths in Durham, listed as probably resulting from complications following influenza, were a 41-year-old man and an 86-year-old woman. The Guilford County Health Department reported about three terms whether Asian flu led to the pneumonia which caused the death of Mrs. George Shanks, 38, of Greensboro.

NEW PORT, R. I. (AP)—The 11-member staff of the Newport Welfare Department not only foregoes coffee breaks, but even remains in the office during lunch hours.

Director Helen C. McLeish reported yesterday: "The staff prefers remaining in the office during lunch hours as many of the clients contact the staff at that time."

State Of Texas Adopts Crooner

WEST COLUMBIA, Tex. (AP)—Crooner Bing Crosby and his bride, actress Kathy Grant, were back for a weekend visit in her old home town today.

They arrived late yesterday, and Crosby promptly became an adopted Texan as he stepped off a plane at Houston, 71 miles northeast of here. Notice that he now is an honorary citizen of the state was delivered by a representative of Gov. Price Daniel.

Kathy, 23, referred questions about her film career to her 53-year-old husband.

"Oh yes, she'll continue making pictures," Crosby said. Another questioner wanted to know if she planned a large family, and Kathy replied: "We're Catholics, you know."

FOR MEDICINE, TOO

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP)—An electronic device developed for oil exploration is being used in finding and tracing nervous disorders. The $10,000 machine was developed by Magnolia Petroleum Co. for use in prospecting geological structures below the surface. Because of its depth of electrical penetration was not enough, it was donated to the Baylor University College of Medicine.

He projected two moves bearing on Allied relationships in the scientific field. He said he would ask Congress to "remove legal barriers to the exchange of appropriate technological information with friendly countries."

DESPERATE MAN

CHAPTER 29
 We reached Buhl in late afternoon and camped along the river under the cottonwoods at almost the exact spot where I had camped nearly four years before with my folks.
 We took care of our horses, staking them out in the grass between the town and the river, gathered a tall pile of firewood, and stood around arguing about what our course of action should be. My father or Elder Smith would have taken hold; but as it was, none of us had any real status as a group leader.
 I was the only one who wanted to let the townspeople know we were there. I said we'd come to balance any threat Toll would make and the sooner we announced ourselves, the better.
 In the end they gave in without me having to tell them I had another reason, a personal one. I had to know if Kisty was there yet, and I would have gone alone if I'd had to. First, Frank Dance backed me, then Johnny Strong, and finally the rest of them agreed to go.
 When we reached the courthouse at the end of Main Street, the sun was well down in the west, but the day hadn't cooled. The summer had been dry and hot, with no rain here in Buhl for weeks. Ed Veach must have seen us from his office in the courthouse. He came out and called to us, standing bareheaded in the sunlight, red in the face and sweating.
 "What are you fellows doing in town?" Veach demanded in a bullying voice.
 "Come down off your high horse, Ed," Frank Dance said. "We ain't breaking no law."
 "We're aiming to visit court tomorrow," I said. "A neighbor of ours is being tried. Remember?"
 He backed out and called to us as if uncertain how far he could push us, or whether he could push at all. He said, "There's an ordinance in this town against packing guns."

We knew there was such an ordinance, but we also knew it wasn't enforced. I asked, "Vic Toll in town?"
 "No."
 "He will be," I said. "You going to take his gun?"
 Veach backed up another step. "I reckon you'd better keep yours," he said. "Just don't start no trouble. I don't want this town turned into a shooting gallery. You savvy?"
 "Then you'd better see Toll don't start trouble," Frank said. "And you'd better see Bess gets a fair trial," Johnny Strong added. "She'll get a fair trial," Veach said. "I reckon you boys never sat in court when Judge Jefferson Brundage was presiding. Nothing formal about him. But he's fair."
 Veach started to turn around. I asked, "Where's St. Beam?"
 "I dunno."
 Suddenly it struck me that he might have Bess locked up in his filthy jail. He was halfway to the front door of the courthouse when I asked, "Where are you keeping Bess?"
 "In the hotel," he turned and looked at me. "I've got a woman with her. I ain't gonna put her in jail unless she's convicted, but if you boys try to—"
 "We won't," Frank said. "You just keep her out of that jail."
 There were twelve of us altogether, and it wasn't often that eleven armed men walked down Buhl's Main street in a bunch. The news that we were there would be all over town within a matter of minutes.
 As soon as the clerk, Brown, recognized us, he came out from behind his desk and gravely shook hands all around. He said: "I'm mighty glad to see you boys. Nobody can scare the judge, but he don't live here. The jury does." Here again was a line of thinking that wasn't monopolized by one man. We went into the bar. Alec Brandy, the mayor, was there, and as soon as he saw who we were he came to us. "I'm paying," he said. "What's your choice gentlemen?"
 We lined up and ordered, then Brandy said: "It's no secret that we've been worried about this trial ever since Bess Nordine was indicted. Rafter 3 will be here in the morning. What will happen then?"
 The bartender poured our drinks, but we let them stand. When nobody answered Brandy's question, he got impatient. "All right, all right. You boys didn't come to town for the ride on a day as hot as this."
 "That's right," Frank said. "This is a put-up job, Alec. We aim for Bess to get a fair trial."
 "And if she doesn't?" Brandy pressed.
 That wasn't a question any of us could answer, so we turned to the bar and had our drinks. Brandy, more impatient that ever, said: "Now you boys listen to me. I'm the mayor of this town and I'm speaking for it. We've got between three and four hundred people living here, most of them women and kids, and even us men don't have a stake in the trouble between you and Rafter 3."
 Johnny Strong hit the bar so hard with his fist that the glasses jumped. "You better see your folks stay under cover. We've had two men murdered who were as innocent as any of your women and kids. Now one of our women is being tried for something she didn't do. I know what's gonna happen, but I know Vic Toll, and I know we ain't gonna stand for him framing Bess Nordine and sending her to jail in Canon City."

 He stalked out, all the rest following him but Frank Dance and me. I asked, "Where will you and your friends stand if we get into a fight, Mr. Brandy?"
 "We'll stand against the side that fires the first shot," Brady said, "but don't let it happen, Munro."
 "We can't promise anything," I said. "There's something bigger here than you or me or Bess." He got his pipe out and filled it. "I know that, Munro. Judge Brundage knows it, too. I talked to him this afternoon. None of us likes the things that have happened in this fight you boys are having with Rafter 3, but turning our town into a shambles won't make those things right."
 Elder Smith could have argued with him, maybe found a way out of this mess, but I couldn't. Confused, I turned away and walked into the lobby, Frank following me. All this time I had been thinking that this fight had to be brought to a head, and that Vic Toll and his crew had to be wiped out; but I knew now I was wrong. I thought about Bess as we walked back to camp through the thickening twilight. If she had any chance, I couldn't see it.
 Vic Toll lives up to his legend of power and toughness at the first day of the trial. Don't miss the fast action in tomorrow's installment of "Desperate Man."

By MIRIAM VETTER
 Robert C. Forney, director of the Greenville Little Theater's forthcoming production "The Mousetrap," the Asaph Christie chiller scheduled for presentation November 19 and 20 at McGinnis Auditorium is a very busy man of widespread interests.  Dr. Forney, who is employed as Process Superintendent at Dupont's Dacron plant in Kinston, has established himself as a leader in civic affairs in the two years he has lived in Greenville. He is the president of the Greenville Church Council of the United Lutheran Church, a member of the Boy Scout Executive Council, and an active member of Rotary. He also enthusiastically devotes much of his time to the Greenville Rifle Club, for boys from twelve to seventeen, for which he is instructor.

and he has been an ardent worker of the Thespian art since childhood. He played his first role at the age of twelve, appearing with the Newcastle Players, and repertory company in Chicago. During his University years he was active with the Purdue Players and the Lafayette Little Theater. For sometime he was associated with the Wilmington Drama League of Wilmington, Delaware. As one of the founders of the Kinston Community Theater, he served that group as actor and director. Since moving to Greenville in November of '55 he has been instrumental in the revival of the local drama group.
 Until the last few years, Forney's main theatrical interest was acting. He has appeared in "The Show Off," "The Hasty Heart," "The Barretts of Wimpole Street," "Another Part of the Forest," "Joan of Lorraine," "Yes My Darling Daughter," "Born Yesterday," "Three Little Indians," and other plays. He was seen here as Jacques in the ECC production of "As You Like It" last May. His directorial chores have included "Mr.

NEW YORK (AP)—A rally by rocket fuel and other missile-age stocks failed early this afternoon to repeat yesterday's leadership of a general stock market rally. The favored issues advanced fractions to a point or more. But steels, motors, oils, rails, nonferrous metals and most chemicals took losses in about the same range.

The statement by Sen. Bridges (R-NH) that he expects spending to increase by one or two billion dollars in the U.S. science-missiles program rescued the missile and fuel stocks from early declines. Earlier they had been victims of profit-taking. Wall Street sources said also that President Eisenhower's speech gave no promise of a step-up in defense spending and was disappointing in that respect. The ticker tape was late about five minutes in the opening pile-up of sell orders. U.S. Borax, one of yesterday's big gainers, was suspended from trading for 59 minutes under a wave of sell orders but the Bridges statement reversed the tide and it returned to trading with a net loss of only 1/4. Later, however, it sold off about a point, an improvement over its earlier loss of 3 points or more.

General Dynamics was a pace-maker in the rally of missile and fuel stocks. Not only did it have the benefit of sharply higher earnings but Eisenhower's speech referred favorably to this company's Atlas missile and its B-52 Super-sonic bomber as well as to submarines in which this company is involved. Boeing was down 1/4 to 37 1/2 or an opening block of 10,000 shares and continued to sell actively, off about a point. The Associated Press average of 60 stocks at noon was down 90 cents to $156.00 with the industrials down 1.50, the rails down 80 cents and the utilities unchanged.

Plan No Drainage Work North Of New Bern Highway

No major work is planned for Greene Mill Run above the New Bern Highway.

He noted that when the project was first presented before Bloxam City Councilmen that last night in a progress report on various bond issue projects, Bloxam said there had apparently been some misunderstanding about the mill run project.

The cost of that project would have been $60,000.

However, he said, "To accomplish many of the problems which confronted the city, the complete program was re-vamped and the original expenditures of some $60,000 reduced to $16,000."

"That, the public was advised, would cover the straightening out of some of the restricted areas on the run and complete clearing and snagging operations to the New Bern Highway."

"From the New Bern Highway to a point where the drainage ditch empties into the run out of the South Greenville section, south of the Norfolk and Southern Railroad, we were to do some snagging to expedite the water from this area to the present run."

Bloxam reported that all of the ditching had been done. It was found that the worst conditions existed between the river and 10th St. Consequently practically a new ditch was dug through the area. The run has also been completely snagged from 10th to 14th St. and some sharp turns eliminated.

"The city manager is of the opinion that unless it is an unusually hard downpour, something of very unusual conditions, the run is more than adequate to take off the water."

"It is our intention to set up a regular maintenance program on this drainage project, and from year-to-year do further developing work in the vicinity of Elm St. Park, Rock Spring section to the New Bern Highway."

"The city manager cannot see that it should be an obligation of the taxpayers of the City of Greenville to do any work on the run above the New Bern Highway, in that all this area is outside the corporate limits and does not present any drainage problem to any of the properties inside the corporate limits."

"With proper maintenance work in a continued program of widening, from time-to-time, it is felt that many improvements can be made in various sections of this run, and eventually, over a period of five years, accomplish the same purpose as originally set up in the program."

Bloxam also reported that bond issue monies for fire department improvements have been spent. The city purchased a new fire truck and a quantity of fire hose. Twenty alarm boxes authorized have been installed, he said.

A crawler-type tractor was purchased about eight months ago and has been used on First St., the garbage fill and various street excavation projects.

Work on the First St. project, which was also authorized in the bond issue, has been underway, Bloxam reported.

The fill between Holly and Side Sts. has been completed and the Utilities Commission is installing water, sanitary sewer and gas mains. Retaining walls are also in.

Bloxam said it is anticipated that the project will be completed in the spring.

Reporting on drainage projects authorized in the bond issue, Bloxam said work on River Dr., Willow St. and Woodlawn is complete. Drainage on Vance St. from Fifth to the river has been completed.

The major line can now, with minimum expense, be extended from year-to-year into the Cherry View section on Cherry, Imperial and Douglas, Fleming Sts.

At present city crews are installing drainage in the vicinity of Farmville Blvd. to include Halifax, Spruce, Myrtle, Davenport, Battle Sts. The project is expected to be completed in three or four weeks.

Engineering has been completed in the East Third and Fourth St. area. Plans are to begin drainage study works in the vicinity of Church and Drum Sts., Allen, Washington and Van Dyke Sts. in North Greenville.

In recreation, South Greenville facilities have been completed and money is being raised to furnish the building. Lighting has been installed on the Elm St. Park ten-

Ingrid Prepares To Leave Home In Rome

ROME (AP) — Ingrid Bergman packed today to leave this ancient city where she once found happiness.

With her 7 1/2-year marriage to Roberto Rossellini broken up, the beautiful Swedish actress planned to leave Sunday for London with her three children by the Italian film director.

Rossellini was already gone, reported on route by car to Paris.

Friends professed not to know whether Miss Bergman would return to Rome to live, or whether the legal separation the couple obtained yesterday would be followed by a divorce.

A divorce would have to be obtained in another country, since Italian law's only provision for dissolving a marriage is an annulment granted by the Roman Catholic Church. Miss Bergman now 42, and Rossellini, 51, were married by proxy in Mexico on May 24, 1950, after she received a Mexican divorce from her first husband, Dr. Peter Lindstrom.

Erocle Graziadei, the Rome attorney who arranged for the separation, said he had received no instructions to initiate divorce proceedings.

Graziadei was called to Paris to make arrangements for the separation soon after the couple was reunited in the French capital. Miss Bergman was playing there in the stage play "Tea and Sympathy." Rossellini had been absent in India for almost a year making documentary films for the Indian government. During that period his name was linked with a pretty Indian script writer, Sonali Das Gupta, who preceded Rossellini to Europe and was last reported in Paris.

Miss Bergman said her children by Rossellini—Roberto, 7, who was born a week before his mother got her divorce from Lindstrom and the 5-year-old twin girls, Isabella and Isotta Ingrid—would accompany her to London where she will work on a new motion picture.

Miss Bergman is scheduled to go to Hollywood in February to work in another movie for 20th Century Fox.

Miss Bergman has an 18-year-old daughter, Jenny Ann, by her first husband. She is a student at the University of Colorado.

'Return of Christ' Will Be Theme For Sunday Bible Study

The "Return of Christ" is the theme for a new Sunday Night Bible Study series to begin at St. James Methodist Church this Sunday at 7:30. The six-Sunday series will be centered around certain Bible passages dealing with the Second Advent of Jesus Christ, the "end of the world," and "Judgment Day." The Rev. J. Mallory Owen, Minister of the Church, will teach.

Each session will be limited to thirty minutes. Before the study begins, as persons enter the Church they are requested to kneel at the Altar in prayer. The period from 7:30 to 8 o'clock will be dedicated to concentrated Bible study. After the group adjourns at 8 o'clock, those wishing to remain for a formal ymn singing fellowship are encouraged to do so. Coffee hours will be scheduled from time to time.

The first series, scheduled to end December 15, is the study of a great doctrine and its sources in the Biblical text. Future courses will be based on a single book of the Bible, such as the Epistle to the Romans.

The study is open to persons interested in searching the Scriptures, without reference to their Church affiliation. "Bring your Bibles and do not miss this first important introductory session," Minister Owen urged in announcing the new service.

Tax Is Based On 1957 Standards

RALEIGH (AP)—Employers covered by this state's Employment Security Law got the good word today: There will be no general statewide increase in tax rates this year.

Henry E. Kendall, chairman of the Employment Security Commission, announced that 198 tax rates, which will be mailed to all covered employers by Nov. 1, will be based on the same tax schedule used this year.

North Carolina's taxable payroll at the end of June amounted to $2,093,376.4. This was an increase of $118,619,427 over the previous year. On top of this expanded payroll, unemployment in the state has been running considerably higher than the national average. Kendall said this led to belief that a higher tax schedule might be necessary to maintain adequate reserves.

However, the fund balance showed an increase of $42,700, Kendall said, rising to a total of $181,164,813 at the end of July. This, he added, eliminated any need for a jump in the tax schedule.
