By ALVIN TAYLOR, Reflector City Editor. An incentive pay plan for city employees was adopted by councilmen last night upon recommendation of City Manager Leonard Bloxam.

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — America's first satellite launching vehicle exploded in its stand today. The Pentagon said in Washington another test probably could not be held for about 30 days.

The launching attempt took place before noon in bright sunshine, with only thinly flecked clouds in the sky.

"hold" was ordered. Later this delay was extended. The launching site itself is closed to newsmen, not because the Vanguard project is secret—it is not—but because an assortment of secret military missiles is in the area, awaiting testing along the 5,000-mile range from Cape Canaveral to Ascension Island.

There was a big flash of smoke and nothing left the ground. Apparently it blew up.

At 1 a.m. the Defense Department announced that a six-hour countdown, or final time checking process, was starting in hopes of a launching at sunrise, at 7 a.m.

Shortly thereafter a one-hour

Case Worker Tells Jr. Woman's Club Functions Of Home Society

The functions of the Children's Home Society in Greensboro, a project of all the Junior Women's Clubs in the state, were explained to the Greenville Junior Woman's Club when they met on Wednesday evening.

She answered many varied questions concerning the Children's Home Society.

Smart Santas Choose Lovely Illustrated Picture Book Gifts

By DOROTHY V. WHIPPLE, M.D.
Long before a child can read he will love books. If he lives in a home where everyone reads, he is a lot more likely to grow up with a love of good reading than if he never sees an adult crack a book. Let's begin with picture books and start a library, that will grow as he grows. A good picture book must have lovely illustrations, beautiful format and an amusing story. The pictures that appeal to the young child are clear and bright with the details of life that are familiar. The pictures themselves must tell the story. The story needs to be simple and told with not much text. It is not necessary that the words themselves be easy to read.

grandparents, aunts, uncles and miscellaneous friends, but even parents are often uneasy about what's good for the child.

Remember first books are for fun. If there is any deep down objective it is to show the little child that pleasure lies between the covers of a book. Don't buy books because they teach something. Books do teach, of course, but the teaching is secondary to the joy of the story itself.

Some of the books we adults read as children are still good, but don't forget that many new ones

Your best bet is to go to a good book store and spend some time looking over their selection of picture books. If you doubt your ability to pick out something, especially if you're a maiden aunt or a rich uncle, drop in at the library and have a chat with the librarian of the Children's Room. She knows what books children enjoy.

Steps to Reading

A picture book is not intended as a first reader, but starts the youngster on the way toward being a reader by giving him a love of books. After the story has been read to him over and over, you will see him pick up the book and "read" the story. He knows every word, but he reads the pictures, not the little black marks. He learns the sound of big strong words that go with the pictures—words he couldn't "read" for years—but he loves them, and his vocabulary grows. He may amaze you, like 5-year-old Chris, who took his turn at a guessing game when the whole family was in the car: "I'm thinking of an amphibian that's green," he said.

Each child is different from every other child, but there are picture books for all. A picture book is not a toy the little child enjoys all by himself. Books need to be shared. Mother or Daddy should look at the book with Molly, read her the story as the chubby finger points out the familiar details in the pictures. Another time Molly will bring the book over to Mother, snuggle up next to her and open up the bright pages. If Mother makes a single mistake in reading the text, Molly is very likely to correct her. Molly already knows exactly how it should go.

Children do not read a book through once and then put it aside. They want it read over and over and over again. A good book becomes a cherished possession.

How to Choose

Sometimes grownups don't know how to buy books for little children. Mothers and fathers know the child's likes better than can do his own choosing.

High on the list of male preferences are such things as new TV sets, hi-fi sets and sports equipment.

Most all men would like a camera, if it's an imported, expensive kind.

In the clothing category they like sweaters, provided they're either all wool or cashmere, in conservative colors, with "nothing gadgety."

And, the survey reveals, there's always one gift sure of a male welcome. When in doubt, give liquor.

Survey Reveals Men's Wants

By DOROTHY ROE
AP Women's Editor

What do men want for Christmas? Well, the things they don't want are neckties, cuff links, gag presents meant to be funny and anything that has to be exchanged.

These facts came to light as a result of a recent survey conducted by a New York businesswoman, Eleanor Kairalla, for the guidance of some of her retailing friends and, incidentally, for her own reference. She hired a group of college boys to buttonhole men at railroad stations and other public places and question them about their gift preference. The replies are revealing:

"My wife has the world's worst taste in neckties."
"Why does she buy me shirts without finding out the right size?"

"If I get another bottle opener that says 'How Dry I Am' I may forget I'm a gentleman."
"I like to pick my own ties, shirts and whatever jewelry I wear, which is not much."

So, if these common gifts are spurned, what do the gentlemen really want?

Top of the list is an automobile. The boys also wouldn't mind a gift of cash — any amount.

If the little woman feels she really must give him a gift of clothing, then he wants it in the form of a gift certificate, so he

There's A Long, Long Road To Go

Tedious labors involved in launching the missile designed to carry a tiny satellite skyward seems to indicate long-range rocket warfare is still a goal, not a realization nor near-realization.

The Vanguard missile is small, and presumably less complicated than the sought-for intercontinental ballistic missile; but the headaches in this initial firing are a dramatic reminder of difficulties involved.

For instance, in Wednesday's countdown workers found a "myriad of minor electrical difficulties—frayed wires, short circuits and the like". A leaky valve and poor weather conditions, combined with the exhausting work processes, made firing impractical on that occasion.

Newsmen on the scene reported that "holds" or delays are so frequent and so routine that it is a rare thing for a launching to be accomplished in the exact time initially allowed.

Practical weapons of war just can't afford to be so sensitive to fault. They must be designed so as to be effectively handled by men in the field who are neither scientists nor skilled engineers; they must deliver the goods while leaving a margin for error; necessarily, there is a limit to their fragility.

It is reasonable to assume that for a long time to come test-firings of intermediate and intercontinental range rockets will be slow paced operations with the encountering and clearing of "bugs" in each individual missile. In short, a continuing process of trial and error will go on even after some measures of success has been achieved.

In reading of difficulties encountered by Vanguard we must expect the Russians also ran into the same problems. Too, we should remember secrecy shielded Soviet experts; and there's just no telling how many failures or aborted firings were encountered before reaching their goal. They said nothing until after a Sputnik was actually skyborn. Our own scientists are laboring under the searching glare of publicity and the eyes of a waiting world. That makes for pressure.

For lack of contrary evidence we'll concede Russia has fired missiles that America has not put into the sky. At the same time we are becoming more aware of the great distance to be travelled before successful testings can be translated into an arsenal of rockets.

Comrad Khrushchev's boasts of possessing a complete kit of "ultimate weapons" sound, in the light of our own experiences, like wishful thinking.

They're further along in some fields of rocketry than we; but a long way from being out of reach. The day of America's Strategic Air Command is far from ended.

--- But First Of All, Can Presidents Quit?

Granting the burdens can overtax a President; granting that a younger man, trained for the role, could take his place . . . can a duly-elected President shuck off his responsibilities and just quit?

Is it true that the processes of our elective system doom a man to the presidential yoke until he drops by the wayside, runs his course, or declared by some as yet unidentified authority to be unfit to maintain the pace?

More and more we wonder. Speculation that President Eisenhower may yet abandon his executive position is still being heard.

It is even suggested the early resumption of official duties, relatively soon after his mild stroke, has been a sort of self-testing in order to satisfy himself that he can meet the obligations of his position.

The Free World's struggle for survival demands a strong, sure hand at the helm. And while our presidents are the elected heads of the United States, a tide of events has also cloaked them with the leadership of many nations and multitudes of peoples who look to America as their guide and protector.

The question of "when" or "should" a president step aside seems premature. First must be determined the point: CAN a president quit?

If the decision to resign is left to the holder of the nation's highest position, it is not inconceivable that in times of crisis a president might declare himself unable or unfit to meet the needs of the times . . . a string of his successors might so similarly rule. What then?

Plain, unadorned chaos. Win, lose or draw; the prospect is not a happy one.

The mantle of the presidency cannot be laid aside lightly. Can it be ever laid aside?

Still In The Dark On Foreign Aid

By ELMER ROESSNER
After 15 years of it, there is still considerable misunderstanding about America's foreign aid.

A recent Trendex poll showed that 57.6 per cent of all Americans favored cutting foreign aid to provide more money for missile and space programs. Many said, in effect, "It's time we stopped shipping our tax money overseas."

Many Americans believe that is exactly what we do; that somebody down in Washington ties up bundles of $1, $10 and $100 bills, puts "made in America" labels on them and sends them to less fortunate nations abroad.

Many suspect that when the money is received in, say, Benightedstan, officials there peel off the top bills and stuff them in their burinoses and give what's left to the poor.

WHAT REALLY HAPPENS
It doesn't work that way at all. No money is sent abroad. What is sent is credit. And it's sent only for specific purposes.

It works this way: Suppose that Benightedstan needs $10,000,000 for a new water works, or needs that much worth of grain to relieve a famine. If the American Government approves of plans to help the nation, Uncle Sam says in effect, "I've put $10,000,000 to your account in the U.S. You can draw that money to spend for specific purposes in the U.S."

That $10,000,000 represents tax money, of course. It came out of the pockets of you, me and millions of others. But it is spent right here in the U.S. It creates jobs in factories, jobs on ships, incomes for farmers, and profits, all around—subject to more taxes.

In most cases, the U.S. requires the benefited country to set up "counterpart" funds. In this hypothetical case, Benightedstan would have to set up a fund of $10,000,000 worth of Benightedstan simoleons, or whatever the currency is.

DOUBLE DOLLAR MILEAGE
In some cases, these counterpart funds are used to build and maintain U. S. Embassies; in other cases they are to be used for local improvements, such as building roads, canals, etc. Thus, every contributed dol-

CORONERS — Next to justice of peace courts the county coroner system in North Carolina is perhaps the most obsolete and inefficient in the whole area of the administration of justice. Both offices were inherited from medieval English common law and practice, and have been carried forward in successive revisions of the constitution, resisting efforts to adapt them to present day needs.

Doctors, especially pathologists, and many law enforcement officers, have sought for a quarter century or more to make the functions of the coroner's office more adaptable to modern needs by requiring medical autopsies in all cases of death having any element of mystery. After several legislatures had refused to consider bills looking to that end, and two or three sessions had considered but killed such proposals, the 1955 General Assembly enacted a permissive statute, authorizing county commissioners to establish a medico-legal system of scientific investigation supplementing the functions of the coroner.

The same Legislature authorized the Governor to appoint a committee to set up a skeleton program, but in traditional legislative fashion neglected to appropriate any money. The 1957 session made available $27,000 for this biennium, mainly for establishment of a toxicological laboratory at Chapel Hill. The laboratory is being set up and in a short time will be ready to serve the counties desiring its services.

So far only three counties — Guilford, Union and Wilkes — have adopted the plan. The advisory committee, headed by Holt McPherson, High Point newspaper man as public member and chairman, is made up mostly of professional men from the State Board of Health and the medical colleges in ex-officio capacity, is starting an educational campaign in behalf of the idea.

HANDICAPS — To many people outside of North Carolina and to some newcomers into the state it appears absurd that a State which has boasted about a record of progressive leadership should be so reluctant to adopt a method of crime detection and law enforcement which has proven so valuable in other communities.

An informal conference the other day between members of the commission and newspaper folks disclosed some of the reasons. One is the traditional Tarheel objection to change. Another is the item of expense.

The proposed system will be more expensive in immediate outlay of dollars. The extra cost is certain: the alleged greater efficiency and long-range saving in dollars is not so sure. The people have not been sold on that point.

The expense handicap is probably the easiest to overcome. North Carolinians have demonstrated times without number that they are willing to pay for what they want. Witness bond issues and tax levies voted for public schools, libraries, hospitals and good roads, in aggregate sums of multiplied millions of dollars.

By and large county commissioners are conservative. That is inherent in their positions, since they are charged with conserving as well as developing the capital resources of their counties. The implied accusation that the reason more counties have not adopted the medico-legal system of supplementing the functions of the county coroner is because the commissioners are tight-wads is hardly justified. Same thing goes for members of the Legislature. Sure, these officials must be sold on the idea—but the rank and file of citizenship must be sold on it first.

RESENTMENT — Conclusion is almost inescapable that one of the main handicaps in getting the program accepted is popular resentment at ascendancy of control by the medical profession over the activities and habits of the people. This attitude does not stem so much from the relationship between patients and family physicians as from the excessive claims for the virtues of miracle drugs, cold and cough remedies, cures for stomach ailments and backaches that clutter the airways for radio and television programs. Natural reaction of the average person is that if all this stuff can't keep me and my folks alive, why do I need a doctor after somebody is dead?

In that connection it may, or may not, be significant that for years committee of the medical society failed to get a medico-legal autopsy law passed, but when the sponsoring group was designated as a "citizens committee" the present permissive law was enacted. If the people want it the Legislature will authorize it and the county commissioners will adopt it. And, if the people want it they will pay for it.

The sponsoring citizens committee believes that when people understand the full purpose of the program is to clear the innocent as much as to convict the guilty the idea will have popular support. Records are available for the three counties in North Carolina and from other places where the plan has been in use much longer to prove that it is its effect.

The real question here is similar to the main question about schools and roads. It is not whether we can afford to pay for the services, but whether we can afford not to pay the relatively small initial cost in view of the long range benefits.

Waiting For A Falling Out

By DON SCHLIENZ

Strictly For The Birds

I've never tried my hand at hunting ducks, and as of now the odds are strongly against my ever doing so.

Oddly enough, an avid duck hunter did much to cement my adamant position while describing the pleasures of his recent outing.

His enthusiastic recollections entailed these jolly little side-lights:

After a hard day's work, a long drive to the anticipated scene of pleasure. Bedtime is put off in order to enjoy conversation with companions of the hunt.

Before the crack of dawn, the sleep-fogged duck-seeker crawls from his bed, dresses, eats his breakfast and girds himself for the day. He dons over 20 pounds of clothing (counting the heavy boots) and carries another 20 to 30 pounds of necessary equipment. (This last varies with his degree of foresight and enthusiasm.)

Still a bit worn from a short night's sleep and strains of the preceding day he is guided to the blind . . . where all the fun takes place.

Now even armchair duck hunters know that good weather for ducks is foul for humans. If it's cold, blustery, overcast and a scattering of rain . . . the day is "beautiful" for ducks. Hunters also give every outward sign of approval, too.

The blind is a tiny two-man affair, conveniently open to the wind, the rain and the cold. There is enough space for two pair of feet, two gun butts and . . . well, who needs any more?

So there they sit, hour after hour. Occasionally one gets out to wade in the water and realign the decoys, but unless they brought cushions, that plank becomes a hard seat.

As the hours drag on, an occasional flight passes near enough overhead for a shot . . . but this isn't their day. (As a matter of fact, the majority of them aren't.)

Conversation becomes more desultory; cheering comments are harder to come by, and the close quarters are proving to be a strain.

The returning guide is welcomed like a long-lost brother, gear is hastily dumped in his boat and all return to the base of operations. A duck may have been left behind, but there is no consternation.

There follows a long ride home in weather again that is still fine for ducks, but plain murder for motorists.

Bed seldom felt so good. Next day, joints are stiff and occasionally there's a twinge in a muscle. The carefree hunter of 48 hours ago is now a bleary-eyed wreck who faces another day of earning a living.

Assuming our huntsman brought back two birds, we may as well also assume they found their way into the freezer where they were conveniently forgotten. Or, they may have been given to a friend.

On a couple occasions I can remember receiving such a treasure, but have yet to taste one. There's a secret in cooking wild duck that must be known to only a select few. Yes, we followed plenty of advice; but the result still smelled like something better left unsaid.

So the end product of a duck hunt leaves me cold. Even the most ardent hunter will dismiss the financial side of the case, that you can buy a dozen domestic and edible ducks at the market cheaper than you can shoot one dubious trophy.

"It's the sport that counts," he says. The prospect makes me shudder.

A Boy We'll Keep

By ED CREAM

WASHINGTON (AP) — There must be some easier way to live than with a 6-year-old boy. He is a power pack of destructive energy, a tornado of disruptive noise. He takes off with the thrust of a Jupiter rocket when you need him for something. He clings to you like a stamp to a letter when you want to be alone.

The 6-year-old is convinced he knows everything worth knowing—and then he forgets how to tie his shoe. He can dial a seven digit telephone number but he can't remember whether the teacher said there would be school tomorrow.

You conclude, miserably, that you have parented an idiot. And then, as calmly as you please, he beats you at checkers three games running and you're forced to admit he's a genius after all.

Unquestionably the 6-year old is in league with the devil. In no other way could he have become so perverse. He insists on lounging indoors, watching television, on the most sparkling day of the year. He insists on going outdoors, to do nothing in particular when the wind is howling and the rain pelting.

The 6-year-old is as fussy about food as a millionaire with an ulcer. The best is not nearly good enough for him. Of course he always settles in the end for a peanut butter and jelly sandwich, but not before turning up his nose at many suggestions which would tax the resources of the best restaurant in Paris.

His table manners, on the other hand, would shame a backward Zulu. He slurps. He dribbles. He has to go to the bathroom and always he babbles. The word has not been invented that the 6-year-old doesn't think of when you have company for dinner.

You can't get him dressed in time for school without brute force. Once he's been to school, the combined resources of the FBI and the Russian secret police couldn't pry out of him what he learned there—if anything. Except songs the other kids taught him.

Such as: "I like chocolate. It's full of TNT. 'Mama puts it in my milk 'To try to poison me.'"

So you're willing to write him off as a bad investment. You're thinking the Roman's weren't so depraved, at that, when they abandoned some children on exposed hillsides.

You're reading him bible stories one night. You get to the part about Abraham. He guesses it's Abraham Lincoln. You explain that no, Lincoln was named after a man in the Bible and so were lots of other people. "Were you?" he wants to know. "Mmm-mm, no," you say. "Are you sure?" he asks. "Isn't there something in the Bible that begins, 'Our Father?'" So you decide to keep the little stinker after all.

FRIENDS WHO HURT US
You say you don't like such and such a person. Have you ever stopped to ask the reason why? You may say that you dislike his selfishness, his stubbornness, his insincerity, his vacillating and unstable disposition. But how about this for a reason—he doesn't feed your ego?

We can be quite tolerant of people's faults, but what we can't stand, and what makes us clinch our fists and tear our hair and stamp our feet and declare we won't stand for it, is the fact that certain people do not feed our ego. They do not defer to us. They do not flatter us. They do not slap us on the back every time we pass them and declare that it's a swell day, even though it may be the most wretched day imaginable.

We like the people who cheer us, who tell us we are better than we really are, who by their attitudes give us a sense of self-sufficiency. But all such people are bad for us. What we need to do in this life is to face the truth, and the friend who is a friend indeed often holds a looking-glass before our faces and calls upon us in the name of God to take one look and grow sick with revulsion and shame.

Good friends often leave scars, and these scars are the badges of their friendship. The cheerful fellow who carries with him plenty of ingredients to lubricate every situation and make life easy is Satan's most sinister messenger sent to devastate our souls.

Overseas, Eyes Turn To Nixon

By RAY TUCKER

WASHINGTON Although Vice President Richard M. Nixon is a virtual unknown to the people and statesmen of Europe, they now show great interest in him as a result of President Eisenhower's ill health. Many foreign newspapers suggest that the President resign immediately.

Like most political observers in this country, European writers expect Nixon to be the Republican's Presidential nominee in 1960. Since the President of the United States exerts a tremendous influence on their affairs, including their hope of survival in a war, they naturally want to know Nixon's viewpoint and philosophy.

Foreign newspapers have begun to publish long biographies of the Vice President since Eisenhower suffered his "mild stroke." Foreign correspondents at Washington have jammed the press conferences which Nixon has held in recent days. They have button-holed their American colleagues for information on him, especially California correspondents who know him well from daily coverage since he first appeared in the House.

OVERSEAS EDITORIALS FAVORABLE TO NIXON With only a few exceptions, most of the overseas editorial comment has been favorable to Nixon. They appreciated especially his prompt recognition that Russia's technological gains were a serious threat to the Western World, and not a mere "bauble" or "scientific stunt." They sense that a war might break on the time of the next President of the United States.

The exceptions occur in ultra-liberal newspapers, which recall the Vice President only as "the man who tracked down Alger Hiss."

sembles the criticism voiced by many American Democrats. They say:

"He seems to have become a pretty good administrator. He is a clever fellow who learns fast. He is an ambitious person."

Here is the editorial reaction of the London Daily Mirror, which has one of the largest circulations of world newspapers—4,649,696. This paper caters to the populace, and is extremely influential for that reason. It says: "No one can tell yet how Nixon will shape up in the job. Too slick? Too much of a salesman? Too inexperienced in world politics? Maybe."

"But Nixon has one supreme advantage. He is only 44. Young enough to learn. Tough enough to stand the strain of the most exhausting job in the world. The pace in 1957 is too hot for the Old 'uns." "BUDDING STATESMAN"—LONDON TIMES The staid London Times, which generally reflects the viewpoint of government, banking and business interests, says in a noncommittal vein: "Mr. Nixon is now bound to come into the international limelight. His political rise in the United States was in conditions far from any international awareness, and in his first years in office he was still immersed in domestic politics.

"A tour to the Far East in 1953 gave him a broader view, though most of his travel was in the area of greatest American dominance. But his recent tour of Africa demanded a different approach."

The ultraliberal Manchester Guardian described Nixon as a "controversial figure who has been many things by turns, and most of them at the politically well-judged time. In the last couple of years he has appeared in a partly new guise as the budding statesman."

That I May Know Christ

ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By Alfred J. Buescher

Scripture—Philippians 3; 2:25-29; 4:18.

Paul describes himself to the Philippians as a typical Hebrew before he saw Christ and became a Christian. Reared in a Hebrew household, he was a Pharisee.—Philippians 3:5.

He writes of his zeal in persecuting the Christians as he rode toward Damascus to bring the disciples to Jerusalem to be punished for their belief in Jesus Christ.—Phil 3:6.

"What things were gain to me, those I count as loss for Christ. And I count all things but loss for the excellency of Christ Jesus my Lord."—Philippians 3:7, 8.

Paul writes his thanks for the many gifts sent to him by the Philippians and delivered to him by Epaphroditus.—Phil. 4:18.

That I May Know Christ

PAUL DETERMINES TO INCREASE IN THE KNOWLEDGE OF CHRIST

Scripture—Philippians 3; 2:25-29; 4:18

By NEWMAN CAMPBELL

A PROBLEM has arisen among the church members, causing unrest. Some contended that "in order to have a valid hope of salvation through the Gospel," they must submit to Moses' law and be circumcised. Paul writes the Philippians that this is not true, and says "For we are the circumcision, which worship God in the spirit, and rejoice in Christ Jesus, and have no confidence in the flesh."

Then Paul writes of his own life: "Circumcised the eighth day, of the stock of Israel, of the tribe of Benjamin, an Hebrew of the Hebrews; as touching the law, a Pharisee; Concerning zeal, persecuting the church; touching the righteousness which is of the law, blameless."

MEMORY VERSE
"I count all things but loss for the excellency of Christ Jesus my Lord."—Philippians 3:8.

Paul never forgot and ceased to mourn over his persecution of the Christians, and it made him very humble, sometimes doubting, it seems, that he should be called an Apostle.

Brought up in a home in which the old manners and religious customs were cherished, he was a "Hebrew of Hebrews," and a Pharisee according to the law. Having attained a secure and enviable position among his people, he changed completely after his vision of Jesus, and devoted that same zeal in serving Christ, writing, "But what things were gain to me, those I counted loss for Christ."

"Yea, doubtless, and I count all things but loss for the excellency of the knowledge of Christ Jesus my Lord; for whom I have suffered, and am ready to be counted as dead."

ferred the loss of all things, and do count them but dung, that I may win Christ."

Then Paul writes that he means to devote himself to the contemplation of Christ and His Gospel, "That I may know Him, and the power of His resurrection, and the fellowship of His sufferings, being made comfortable unto His death, if by any means I might attain unto the resurrection of the dead."

Dr. Wilbur M. Smith suggests that all the classes might be reminded that when they have to pass an important examination in school, whether it be primary, high school or college, they must give up everything else and devote themselves to study of the subject assigned them.

All the classes might also be urged to study carefully the life of Christ on earth and ask themselves, when puzzled by a problem, what Jesus would have done in these circumstances and try to please Him by their actions.

Paul writes his thanks for gifts sent him by the Philippians and brought to him by Epaphroditus, "my brother, and companion in labor, and fellowsoldier, but your messenger." This man had been very ill and not expected to recover. But he did and was sent by Paul to the Philippians church. (Philippians 2:25-29; 4:18.)

Paul asks the Philippians to lead righteous lives and writes to them: "This one thing I do, forgetting those things which are behind, and reaching forth for those things which are before, I press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus."

Twelve Bodies Found In Wreckage Of Explosion

VILLA RICA, Ga. (AP) — Grim-faced men resumed the search for additional bodies today in the blackened wreckage left by a terrific gas explosion and fire in this northwest Georgia town of 3,500.

Half a block was leveled by the blast yesterday. Twelve persons were known to have been killed and about 20 injured.

The town was without gas service, and people were warned not to turn on appliances.

The tragedy was the whole town's.

There was a boy who broke a tooth in school and went to the dentist's office and died; a nurse who kept on working after the bodies of her brother and father were brought in; the people who visited a dime store to buy Christmas ornaments and were carried out later on stretchers.

The explosion demolished a drugstore, dress shop, 10-cent store, jewelry and florist shop and a second-floor dentist's office. It was attributed by Asst. Police Chief H. G. Black to a faulty gas line in the basement of the drugstore.

Oscar Hixon, superintendent of the municipally owned gas system, was working on the line at the time and was killed. Also killed were O. T. Dyer and his son Johnny, who were working home.

Ray Tyson, 39, a clerk in the drugstore, said he was behind the soda fountain when the explosion came about 11 a.m. "I thought a bomb had hit the place," he said.

"But I knew it was gas. We had been smelling gas for a day or two."

Hundreds of rescue workers from other communities rushed to the scene. Volunteers, police and firemen came from as far away as Atlanta, 37 miles east of Villa Rica.

At the little Villa Rica Hospital, Mrs. Lewis Harrison, chief surgical nurse, learned that her father and brother, O. T. Dyer and Johnny Dyer, had been killed.

She bowed her head and fingered her handkerchief for a moment. Friends suggested she go to the hospital to see the bodies.

She refused.

Ladies To Enter House Of Lords

LONDON (AP)—One of the male animal's last citadels, the British House of Lords, last night agreed to a petticoat infiltration.

The upper house of the British Parliament unanimously approved a bill authorizing Queen Elizabeth II, on recommendation of the government, to create lifetime peers, both male and female, who would sit with the lords.

The lifetime titles will lapse on the death of the holders, a device intended to attract those who think a person should earn position, not inherit it.

After the formality of another passage by the lords, the bill will go to the House of Commons.

Government sponsorship assures its passage there.

Most of the present peers inherited their titles, and Conservative party supporters predominate. The bill is designed to bring the membership more in line with the political and sexual complexion of the British population.

The lords for years have fought any suggestion that they admit women, whose beachhead was established in the House of Commons—Britain's real seat of political power—in 1919 by Virginia-born Nancy Astor.

Question Sale Of Union Property

SEATTLE (AP)—A high Teamsters Union official says he is uncertain whether Dave Beck, president of the international union, has authority to sell a union-owned automobile.

The uncertainty was expressed by Frank W. Brewster, president of the Western Conference of Teamsters, at the Superior Court trial of Beck on charges he stole $1,900 from the union.

The $1,900 was received for a 1952 Cadillac sold to a Teamster member in 1956. The state charges in a grand larceny indictment that Beck pocketed the cash instead of turning it over to the Teamster treasury. Brewster at first said he would say Beck had authority to sell the car but under continued questioning by deputy prosecutor Laurence D. Regal replied: "I would think he would have the authority but I'm not positive about that."

GHS At Wilmington; Other Green Teams Here, Away

Greenville high school meets AAA Charleston, S.C., at Wilmington tonight in the first of a series of pre-season practice sessions.

Tomorrow night, the Phantoms will battle Camden, S.C., to wind up the two-day session.

Greenville schools' basketball season will be launched as a whole tonight, with three other Green teams playing.

The local jayves, under Coach Bud Phillips, journey to Wilson tonight for a 6:30 tilt, while Coach Milton Reece's Greenville Junior high schoolers tangle with Goldsboro at the old gymnasium. In the new Junius H. Rose gym, ninth grade teams from here and Goldsboro will also hold a game at 6:30.

Coach Boley Farley, whose Phantoms have been touted by pre-season observers as one of the teams to beat in the AA North-eastern Conference, said today that he plans to "just see what we've got."

Asked about naming a starting lineup, the Coach stated that he plans to use "everybody." He is expected to take a 17-man squad to Wilmington.

"We'll probably be playing by teams," Farley said, "using one team the first quarter, another in the second quarter, and so on. We'll be watching all of them."

Worried a bit about the South Carolina competition (both opposing clubs are reported to be strong in their own state), Farley added, "We're probably in for a hard time this weekend. We've been moving mightily slow lately in practices."

Clippers Return

CHARLOTTE (AP)—The battered Charlotte Clippers, losers of three straight road games, headed for home today and an Eastern Hockey League game tomorrow night with Philadelphia.

New Haven took the Clips' measure last night 4-1 as Bill McPherson, Claude Boileau and Joe Ingoldby led the attack. Jim McNulty got Charlotte's only goal.

ACC To Discuss Bowl Play Today

By KEN ALYTA

GREENSBORO (AP)—The Atlantic Coast Conference today attacked the complex problem of football bowl games at its annual fall meeting, with its course of action uncertain.

The ACC had before it a proposal advanced by the University of South Carolina to permit any conference school to accept a bid to a postseason football game.

Whether this plan would receive the required support of six of the eight members was a moot question.

The ACC will be without a bowl tieup after Duke plays Oklahoma in the Jan. 1 Orange Bowl game at Miami. This has been the only ACC post season activity allowed up to now.

The Orange Bowl has decided not to renew its contract with the ACC, preferring to retain only the tie with the Big Eight Conference, dominated by national power Oklahoma.

The feeling in some quarters has been that ACC would profit more by throwing open to its members bowl games approved by the NCAA, making it possible for the conference to be represented by two teams some years as has been the case in the Southeastern and Southwest conferences.

But whether this feeling will be reflected in the vote of the full conference today was something that could not be predicted. A full round of closed committee meetings extended well into last night and some private politicking may have decided the issue.

The grants-in-aid program is a prime example of the uncertainties of predicting conference action on a vital issue.

Several times in the five-year history of the conference it has appeared that the schools would agree to honor commitments between member institutions and prospective student athletes, but when it came to voting time the measure failed to pass.

Maryland, Virginia, and South Carolina have held out against passage of the grants plan.

Now it has again come up sponsored by sister institutions, the University of North Carolina and North Carolina State.

Clemson has advanced a proposal that would allow conference teams added opportunity for postseason basketball tournament play. Only the conference tournament winner is allowed under present rules to continue play and that only in the NCAA event. The Clemson proposal would allow any other conference team to accept a bid to another event. This aimed at making ACC teams eligible to compete in the New York National Invitation event.

North Carolina State would limit the number of football scholarships at a figure to be determined. The idea, says State, is to effect more equality of opportunity among conference member institutions and control rising costs of the program.

Both teams will be hoping to extend their lead in the North State standings by this contest; both are currently in the top slot with 1-0 records.

The first predictions issued concerning the tilt at ECC's Memorial Gymnasium put the Indians out in front by some 10 points. Odds are about even now. For several reasons.

A glance at the over-all situation seems to favor East Carolina.

It was learned here today that Catawba suffered its first loss of the season Monday night when they were dumped by Pfeiffer College at Misenheimer.

For some reason, the results of that game was not very well publicized. Neither the UP nor AP services carried it. It changes the picture somewhat, now.

Since East Carolina slaughtered the Pfeiffer club 103-68 in the Bucs' opening game of the season, it would seem to indicate that Coach Howard Porter's club might possibly be better than Catawba after all.

Another factor that could influence the outcome of tomorrow night's fray, is the fact that Catawba tangles with Atlantic Christian tonight at Wilson.

That might take something out of the Indians, along with having to make the long trip East from Salisbury.

As if that were not enough to contend with, Catawba must face still another obstacle: the ECC Gym jinx. The Indians have been unable to whip an East Carolina team at the local gym in the past six years. The Pirates have a phenomenal 55-6 record on their home court and has a 50-game winning streak going until last season. Their only game there thus far this season was the 103-68 rout of Pfeiffer.

Indications now being that East Carolina may be in the thick of the North State Conference race this winter, the school is making a fine offer to fans in this area, concerning season tickets.

Normally ten dollars for 10 home ballgames, the tickets are being sold today and tomorrow for nine dollars, since the Bucs have already disposed of one home tilt. Individual tickets at the door sell for $1.25, therefore, a season ticket would save the buyer a total of $2.25.

Also, capacity crowds are expected to jam the gym for conference games with Atlantic Christian, Western Carolina, Lenoir Rhyne, Elon and some of the other important matches, and Athletic Director N. M. Jorgensen said today that individual tickets may not be sold at the gate for those games due to lack of seating space.

A season ticket, however, would assure the holder of a reserved seat at each of those tilts.

Anyone interested may write, or call ECC, or pick up a season ticket at tomorrow night's ECC-Catawba game.

NC State Trying For A Comeback

By BEN OLAN

North Carolina State's Wolfpack the perennial Atlantic Coast kings until Frank McGuire's North Carolina Tar Heels came along to dominate the league and win the national title, may make this the season for a comeback.

At least the Wolfpack started out on the right foot in the Conference competition. Last night, they turned back Wake Forest 62-51 on a late drive that increased a slim two-point lead to 15 during a four-minute stretch.

The slim college basketball schedule also was highlighted by Minnesota's 67-66 victory over Iowa State and Georgia Tech's 73-62 triumph over Alabama.

In other games, Tulsa opened by downing New Mexico A&M 62-56; Richmond beat Virginia Tech 72-62 in a Southern Conference game; Nebraska downed Wyoming 77-66; Princeton defeated Lafayette 75-72; St. John's of Brookline rode over Roanoke 86-62 and Louisville walloped Georgetown, Ky. 74-54.

North Carolina State, which had a 7-7 Conference mark and was 15-11 over-all last season, was ranked behind North Carolina, Maryland and Duke, in the 1957-1958 pre-season estimates. But the Wolfpack appeared improved against Wake Forest. Particularly impressive was Bob MacGillivray, a 6-4 junior, who scored 20 points—nine during State's pivotal rally.

Minnesota's youthful Gophers, spanked Southern Methodist in their opener Monday night, refused to get excited in the face of Iowa State's relentless ball hawking. Whitey Johnson's driving field goal with 15 seconds left clinched matters, Lyle Frahm had 21 points for the losers.

Georgia Tech jumped off to a big lead behind the shooting of Bud Blemker and Terry Randall. Randall wound up with 21 points.

Richmond thwarted Virginia Tech's offense with a sliding zone defense in the second half. Tech had a four-point lead at the half.

Tulsa, a Missouri Valley club, had its hands full with the New Mexico Aggies, who lost to Rice and Arkansas earlier in the week.

Roger Wendel, who led the Tulsa scorers with 16 points, insured the victory with a pair of free throws with a little more than a minute remaining.

Murray Pleased With Practices

DURHAM (AP)—Duke Coach Bill Murray, at the end of his first practice week for the Jan. 1 Orange Bowl in Miami, was pleased today with the return to action of varsity tackle Tom Topping.

Topping, hurt in the final game with North Carolina, worked out yesterday in light equipment. The 204-pound, 6-2 senior was expected to be ready for regular duty next week.

The Blue Devils, who meet Oklahoma in the bowl, worked mostly on offense yesterday.

Other starters for the Tar Heels are Roger Whitley, Albemarle's 212-pound fullback, who was picked over Salisbury's George Knox; Rogi Potat of Hendersonville and Bill Burgess, Elizabeth City, halfbacks; Bennie Voncanon of Asheboro and Newton, ends; Joel Goodrich and Sam Galoway, tackles; Jean Paul Berry and Cecil Holcombe, guards; and Sonny Kerns, center.

East Carolina College's high-scoring basketball aggregation gets a big test Saturday night when it meets another strong North State outfit, the Catawba College Indians. The tilt is slated for 8 o'clock in Memorial Gym here, and will be the second loop battle for the Bucs.

The young and inexperienced Pirates of Coach Howard Porter left the experts speechless during the opening week of play. ECC, rated a low-division club in the North State, romped past Pfeiffer by 107-68 in the opener. Last Saturday night, the Bucs rose from the underdog role and knocked off an onrushing Guilford five by a 91-69 measure.

The Quakers proved to be no match for Porter's club after the first half at Guilford. Coach Bob Shoaf's veteran outfit kept pace with the Bucs during the opening half and went to the dressing room with a 41-41 tie.

Porter is expected to go with about the same line-up as in the two games of the young season: Jessel Curry and Ike Riddick, both sophomores, at the guards; Harold Ingram and Don Smith at forwards; and either Plaster or Guy Mendenhall at center.

Catawba has a team not noted for height, but it has bumped off one of the pre-season top clubs, Western Carolina College, in its first battle. Catawba and East Carolina share the leadership of the loop, but something has to give Saturday night. The Indians, under the tutelage of Coach Earl Ruth, are fast and scrappy, as in the past. Last season, the Indians sent the Bucs to the wire in a 72-71 decision.

Joe Plaster, lanky 6-8 junior center, turned in the best performance of his career as he led the Buc uprising in the final tilt. The Virginia native controlled the backboards and tossed in 20 points through the nets for game home. Plaster had a great night from the floor, hitting 9 out of 11.

Ike Riddick, former Greenville All-Stater, was also a star in the winners' final surge, collecting 16 points for the night. The spunky sophomore also paced the floor play of the Bucs.

When the Pirates run up against strong Catawba this week, they are expected to be at full strength. Charlie Adams and Marion Hales, hampered in the first two games with ankle injuries, are expected to be available. Both are lettermen from last season.

Private Girard Sails For Home

YKHAM. Japan (U-GI) William S. Girard, accompanied by his Japanese wife, sailed today for home and an Army discharge. The 22-year-old Illinois private and Haru (Candy) Girard were the last of 977 military passengers to board the transport Gen. A. E. Anderson. The 18,000-ton troopship is due in San Francisco about Dec. 16.

The couple made no farewell appearance at the rail for the host of newsmen and photographers on the dock below. An Army press officer explained: "He's probably in the hold already. This is a Navy operation and they aren't giving any VIP treatment to any private. From now on Girard is just like anybody else."

"After all, there are a lot of other privates on the ship, a lot of good soldiers who didn't do anything, and if Girard gets special treatment, why they'd throw him overboard."

Girard was assigned to a compartment in the hold with six other soldiers and airmen. Candy got a lower-deck cabin with three other wives.

The soldier from Ottawa, Ill., was convicted last month of the fatal shooting on an Army firing range of a Japanese woman scrap collector and was given a three-year suspended sentence. Japan's insistence on trying him set off a furor in the United States which for a time threatened to impair Japanese-American relations.

Girard will go from San Francisco to Ft. Sheridan, Ill., the Army post nearest his home. His enlistment expires Jan. 27 but he may be discharged before that. Because of his conviction he was demoted this week from specialist third class to private.

Water Safety Problems Reviewed For Local Body

A need for more safety precautions on inland and Coastal waters was cited by Commander J. W. Kincaid, guest speaker at yesterday's meeting of the Pitt County Safety Council.

Kincaid, Chief of Intelligence and Law Enforcement Section of the Fifth Coast Guard District at Norfolk, stated it would be practically impossible to legislate water safety, adding that the problem can only be solved by the individual boat operator.

He said 190 lives were lost in 191 boating accidents reported in his area during the fiscal year of 1956. Most of those lives could have been saved had not the individuals involved stubbornly refused to utilize life saving equipment.

"We made many needless calls last year," he said. "Nearly all of these calls resulted from carelessness."

"Obviously we don't think enough about the rules of water safety to make them successful."

Congressman Herbert C. Bonner explained that boating has become an enthusiastic American pastime. He related as increase from 250,000 to twenty-five million boaters in recent years.

Bonner explained a tentative bill dealing with water safety regulations has been drawn up to be introduced at the next session of the House of Representatives. "We must have uniform laws governing boating as we do automobiles," he stated.

It was announced by Chairman L. M. Buchanan that the Pitt Safety Council will hold its next meeting on Jan. 9 due to the upcoming holiday period. Greenville Recorder's Court Judge and attorney Charles H. Whedbee will conduct the program.

Members of the Tau Boat Club were among the special guests present for the meeting.

CHAPTER 14

On January 15, Michael departed for service in the Air Force. Tracy moved to a small suite at the Forest Park Hotel, and took up her duties in Dr. O'Connell's office.

The time flew. Michael was at Chanut for ten days, then he was sent to California. After three months at George, he was sent to Alaska, which he loved. He sold his car and sent Tracy the money to use for a car of her own. She did as he asked, proud of his thoughtfulness.

While stationed at Anchorage, he wrote three enthusiastic letters to her. Then he was transferred to Tule, which he enjoyed as much. "It's made for a guy like me, with polar bear blood in his veins."

He seemed to be doing well in all respects. "I'm afraid my duties are more executive than actually medical; I'm up for Major so perhaps I ride my desk with grace. And to be perfectly honest, Tracy, I like what I'm doing."

Tracy answered them in kind. She too kept busy. She let her red hair grow until she could wear it in a smooth page-boy, and then she cut it short again. She bought her a red coat and twin cammere sweaters. She was asked to sit in on the consultations over the development of a polio vaccine, and the pink pig grew heavy with many coins. By amicable agreement, she and Michael each were sending regular checks to pay off their debt to his father. Calling it "their debt," Tracy told herself, signified a new and wonderful unity between them.

Tracy was learning much professionally. She knew how to take and record all the minute details which would lead to an accurate diagnosis. She did, or supervised, all the tests, and analyzed them. Tracy had heard Dr. O'Connell say that she was the best he'd ever known in getting diagnostic detail out of a patient.

She put on a little weight and acquired a certain dignity which was becoming to her. Dr. O'Connell was fatherly proud of her. In the summer of 1953, Tracy served as godmother for the Rogers' first grandchild, and, for Tracy, the occasion promised to be a tall milestone in her life.

"Up till now," she explained to Rosalee, "I've had other ready to guide me. But now it's my turn to guide and advise."

"Sounds like you're approaching old age at a gallop."

"Oh, not old age, Rosy! But maturity, and I'm quite old enough for that!"

"How does your friend Howdy feel about your new maturity?" teased Rosalee.

Tracy's cheeks flared pink. "That Howdy! But, really, Rosalee, he's only being kind to me."

They were friends. Howdy Nisbet was excellent company. And Tracy liked him; she liked being asked to eat Christmas dinner with him and his parents they were lovely people, and devoted to their only son. She and Mr. Nisbet marveled that a girl so young and pretty could be a doctor. They listened with a degree of horror when Howdy and Tracy would get into some medical discussion.

Somehow that kind of talk didn't seem just right to the older folk, not between a fine young man and a pretty girl. "Women shouldn't be doctors," decided Howdy's mother, nodding her silvery-white head.

Tracy smiled. "All right, then, I am not a doctor around this house. Remember that, Howdy."

"Suits me fine," he agreed cheerfully.

It was fine for Tracy to have such friends, and such a home to go to as a welcome guest.

Mrs. Nisbet was originally from New England, and the family maintained as a summer home the farm which she had inherited from her parents. Mr. Nesbit was an attorney, lately become selective in the cases he took by way of "lapping off." They spent the entire summer in New England, and Howdy always went there for his vacation, or part of it.

When Mrs. Nisbet suggested that Tracy might like a "good rest at the farm" for her vacation, she accepted with pleasure.

Howdy deplored the fact that he and Tracy could not be at the farm together. It had, he declared, been something of a misfortune to take her into the same office; journeys together, for fair purpose or foul, were never practical.

She considered his extravagant manner to be great fun, and on the first of July she departed for the East, glad that it had been decided not to "let on" that Tracy was a doctor.

"We have doctors enough up there," declared Mrs. Nisbet, "and there's no use in the world of folks pestering you about their aches and pains while you're with us."

So, simply as Mrs. Michael Loren, Tracy went to New England and immediately fell in love with the lifting hills, the broad meadows, the rock-walled fields and the encircling trees. With the flash of rivers, and the old, settled houses.

"I could live here!" she told her hosts with warm enthusiasm.

"We hoped you'd like it," Tracy did like it, and made big plans for spending her two weeks to the best advantage. She'd fish, and she'd take long walks, climb a mountain, look at some interesting houses.

What she actually did was to wake up in the early dawn of the Fourth with a burning pain in her lower abdomen, a hardness—Oh, no! she moaned. I can't have appendicitis here!

But she was very sick, and within twenty minutes Mrs. Nisbet heard her, came to her, and also suggested appendicitis.

"I'll call the clinic right away," Mrs. Nisbet was saying in a downright cheerful tone. "There's always somebody there."

"Don't tell 'em she's a doctor," said Mr. Nisbet, who had joined the consultation. "She can't do a thing to herself in this matter."

"I know what to say," Mrs. Nisbet assured her husband. And trotted off.

Tracy moaned and rolled her head; she'd lived another twenty minutes, and she must get up—

A strong hand pressed her shoulders down upon the mattress. "Easy does it, girl," said a deep, clipped voice. Tracy looked up in amazement. The doctor! So soon?

"Who're you?" she asked, the words blurred feverishly.

"I'm Haws," said the man whose fingertips at least knew about McBurney's point. "Senior Surgeon at the Indian Ridge Clinic."

She intended to smile, but she was too sick—and he probably thought the face she made was a symptom. Clinic indeed! Any three

Tale Of The Tub Hurried Exodus For Publication Due To Big Stink

YORK, Pa. (AP)—Max V. Pickel Jr., a fifth grader, contributed this news-worthy item to a column for school children in the York-Dispatch.

After relating that he and his father spent the day flying model airplanes, Max reported: "When we came home it was time to go to evening church. My mother made me take a bath. But when I was done, it was too late to go to church. So I had taken a bath for nothing."

Tracy, professionally curious, investigates the local medical set-up while she recuperates. Be sure to follow her activities in tomorrow's installment of "The Doctor's Husband."

LAWRENCE, Kan. — A big stink drove about 400 persons from the Student Union Building at the University of Kansas last night.

Several vomited and developed headaches but no one had to go to the infirmary. About 15 organizational meetings broke up without benefit of motions to adjourn. The Hawk's Nest sandwich shop closed. The fire department responded but decided it wasn't a gas leak. Derwood McCabe and seven assistant building engineers searched everywhere for a stench bomb but could find nothing. McCabe said the gas wasn't poisonous—just malodorous.

Hundreds Sight Lights In Sky

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—Reports of mysterious lights in the sky kept telephone lines busy in at least three Eastern states last night.

The lights were reported in Wilmington, Del.; from Hackensack to New Brunswick in north-eastern New Jersey; and in Philadelphia, Bloomsburg and Johnstown, Pa.

In Washington, D.C., the Naval Observatory and the Naval Research Laboratory said they had received reports of sightings but were not making an official check.

A Project Vanguard official in Washington said there was no connection with the awaited U.S. satellite launching in Florida. It was probably a meteor, he said.

TOURIST CENTER—Rep. Robert Hale (R-Maine), thawing out in Honolulu after a tour of antarctic exploration bases, predicted today large numbers of tourists will be flocking to the antarctic in a few years. He said it is "the most beautiful of all continents" and its weather is "really quite pleasant—in the summer."

WALL STREET—Aircraft-missile issues led the stock market lower today following failure of the Vanguard test satellite launching.
Douglas and North American aviation fell 2 points immediately after the disappointing satellite news, but they quickly recovered a part of this loss. Martin, prime contractor in the Vanguard project, lost less than a point.
Steels, motors, metals, rails, airlines and most oils were down but losses did not run beyond a point.

General Dynamics, Grumman, United Aircraft and General Tire suffered declines of less than a point.
The rail group, one of the weakest, showed losses of more than 1 point in Baltimore and Ohio and nearly 2 points in New York Central.
In the motor list Chrysler, which is involved in missile work with the Jupiter, fell a major fraction. Other motors held about unchanged.
The shipbuilding shares, recent favorites, were under profit-taking pressure and New York shipbuilding dropped about 1 point.

A big loss of more than 6 points was suffered by high-priced International Business Machines. It was involved in the Vanguard project through a calculation center which was to trace the satellite's flight.
Farm equipment stocks displayed early firmness but settled back later to around previous closing levels.
At noon the Associated Press average of 60 stocks was 70 cents lower at $158.80 with the industrials down 80 cents, rails down $1.20 and utilities down 10 cents.
