WASHINGTON (AP) — Vanguard chief John P. Hagen said today the Russians probably have run into difficulties trying to shoot a new Sputnik into orbit around the earth.

At the same time, Dr. Hagen cautioned that the next attempted launching of a Vanguard rocket still may not result in placing a U.S. satellite in space.

If the American baby moon does stay up, he said, it will be mainly as a byproduct of a test firing of the complete three-stage rocket planned for use in firing aloft a fully-instrumented satellite next March.

Hagen commented in a written reply to questions submitted by the Associated Press as belief spread that Russia's half-ton Sputnik II, launched Nov. 3, is now or soon will be the only man-made satellite aloft.

Soviet Premier Bulganin said in Moscow last night that Sputnik I, launched Oct. 4, will burn out tomorrow or Monday if not before. "For all I know it may have burned out already," he told reporters.

At Cambridge, Mass., the Smithsonian Astrophysical Observatory said last night it had no word on the fate of Sputnik I, although officials there had predicted the 184-pound sphere would plunge to the flaming end in the earth's atmosphere on or about Thursday of this week.

At Jodrell Bank, England, Prof. Alfred Lovell said Sputnik I probably fell to its doom without anyone seeing it. That satellite has not been seen since early December.

One of the questions submitted to Hagen, the head of the Navy-supervised earth satellite project, was this way:

"The U.S.S.R. was expected to launch a satellite about every four or five weeks. It has been about two months since their last satellite was fired into orbit. Do you believe that the Russians are experiencing difficulties launching their satellites?"

"Probably so," Hagen replied, adding:

"We have no real knowledge of what happened in the very early stages of their rocket-satellite program, but one unofficial source reports that a member of the Russian delegation at the U.N. remarked that they had a great many unsuccessful attempts at launching before achieving a successful one."

This country's first attempt to launch a small test sphere ended in spectacular failure Dec. 6 when the rocket blew up.

Hagen appeared anxious to stress that the next firing, like that of Dec. 6, will be mainly a test of the complete rocket.

Top Polish Scientist Given Asylum In U.S.; Family Is Safely Out Of Native Land

BALTIMORE (AP) — Dr. Jerzy Leon Nowinski, one of Poland's top theoretical scientists, says he defected to this country to escape "political, moral and religious conditions" in his native land.

"It is this feeling of freedom we feel so strongly in the United States that compares with the difficult problem of living in Poland," the 52-year-old mathematical wizard told a news conference yesterday.

Nowinski arrived here Oct. 16 as a guest professor at Johns Hopkins University. He applied to the FBI for refuge shortly after learning his wife and 7-year-old daughter had reached safety in England.

The 5-foot, 6-inch scientist who holds a doctorate from the Warsaw Technical University is internationally known as a specialist in thermoelasticity—the study of stresses caused by heat on materials.

Discussing his reasons for defecting, Nowinski said he was "rather disappointed with the political, moral and the religious conditions in Poland after the war."

Nowinski, a Catholic, also said he and his wife had decided that their daughter "must attend a school with better religious and moral conditions" than the communist schools of Poland.

While Nowinski did not say so himself, it was known here that he is deeply worried about the effect his defection may have on his colleagues back in Poland.

Nowinski himself did not apply originally for his passport to come to this country. After he had been sought by Johns Hopkins as a guest lecturer in its graduate school, other scientists in the Polish Academy of Science where he was associate editor of the academy journal, urged the government to let him go as a matter of scientific prestige.

Apparently, according to colleagues in this country, Nowinski's wife, Maria Franciszka, and daughter Kristina applied for passports to England shortly after he had been granted.

Beans, Hot Dogs For Hillary Team

U.S. SOUTH POLE STATION (AP) — Sir Edmund Hillary and his band of New Zealanders feasted on Navy beans and hot dogs today after completing their trek to the South Pole over 1,200 miles of snow and ice.

The 38-year-old conqueror of Mt. Everest pulled into the American scientific station today after camping in sight of it last night with tractor gasoline left for only 20 more miles.

The five-man band was the first to make it overland from the coast in 46 years. Later trips to the Pole, including the ones that set up the 17-man station here, have been by air.

Navy Lt. Vernon Houk, military commander of the station, and scientist leader Felle Mogensen went out to meet Hillary in a snow tractor. "Glad to be here," the rangy New Zealand beekeeper told them.

The Americans led the New Zealand caravan of three tractors two miles to the spot which U.S. scientists compute as the geographic bottom of the world. It is encircled by oil drums.

The group stopped to look at it, but Hillary did not step inside the circle, then they went to the station mess hall for their first hot meal in several days.

The four New Zealanders who accompanied Hillary are Murray Ellis, Peter Mulgrew, Jim Bates and Derek Wright. Their party made a forced march of 70 miles in 24 hours to arrive in sight of the U.S. base.

Hillary is now awaiting the arrival of a British party led by Dr. Vivian Fuchs, who set out on a trek across the frozen continent from the opposite side at Shackleton Base below South America.

Fuchs and Hillary planned to complete the trip across the continent together as a British Commonwealth contribution to the International Geophysical Year. But Fuchs got bogged down while Hillary was setting up a supply depot 500 miles from the Pole on the New Zealand side.

Fuchs was reported yesterday to be about 200 miles away.

Hillary was to have waited there for him, but the New Zealand adventurer apparently got impatient and on Dec. 26 he radioed: "I am Hell bent for the South Pole—God willing and crevasses permitting."

Former Editor Kills Wife, Self

NEW YORK (AP)—Howard Rushmore, a former editor of Confidential Magazine and anti-Communist writer, shot and killed his estranged wife last night and then killed himself, climaxing an argument in a taxicab.

Rushmore, 45, once film critic for the Communist Daily Worker who broke with the party and the paper in the 1930s, moodily told a woman friend Thursday night he was "feeling low" because his pretty blond wife, Frances, 37, had left him two days before Christmas. Mrs. Rushmore was a former newspaperwoman and had two children by a previous marriage.

First Checks On Liability Claims

NEW YORK (AP)—More than two million dollars in checks, paying off the first batch of individual liability claims in the sinking of the Italian liner Andrea Doria, were mailed last night.

Chris Williamson, president of the Shipowners Claims Bureau, said the checks were only a fraction of the total still to go. The claims originally totaled 116 million dollars.

He said more than 1,700 individual claims for damages were filed as a result of the collision July 25, 1956, between the Swedish liner Stockholm and the Andrea Doria off Nantucket, Mass. The Andrea Doria sank with a loss of 50 lives.

Mutiny In Red Army Rumored

Russian Emigres Relay Reports Of Soviet Troop Unrest In East Germany

BERLIN (AP)—A Russian emigre organization today relayed unconfirmed reports that Soviet troops in East Germany recently staged an anti-communist mutiny.

The National Alliance of Soviet emigres (NTS), which has been conducting a propaganda campaign for the overthrow of the Soviet regime, said it has heard that four Soviet officers and soldiers escaped to West Berlin after the mutiny. They are now believed to be in West Germany, an NTS spokesman said.

British officials in allied-occupied West Berlin announced Thursday that a Russian sergeant escaped to West Berlin and asked for political asylum. Armed Soviet troops patrolled East Berlin Thursday in an apparent search for deserters but were withdrawn that night.

The spokesman said NTS had varied reports on a supposed mutiny at a Soviet army camp near Falkenberg, about 30 miles north-east of Berlin. One said that six officers and a number of soldiers escaped from the camp. He said "the reports, still unconfirmed, came from our own sources."

Allied and German sources had no information on the mutiny. West German diplomats have speculated that Soviet troops who attempted to desert to the West did so inspired by Hamburg's vodka.

Meanwhile, Hamburg's tabloid Bildzeitung said seven Soviet soldiers were shot down yesterday by East German border police while attempting to flee into West Germany near the border town of Kella. Border police were unable to confirm the report.

Reliable informants in the West German capital of Bonn, however, discounted the border shooting report and gave an account of the sergeant's escape.

The informants said a group of Russian soldiers on New Year's Eve got into a fight after a heavy drinking bout. Some of them headed for the border but only one crossed over — the sergeant held by the British.

British intelligence agents questioned the sergeant in Bonn today, a British spokesman said. The Soviet deserter was understood to have made no important disclosures but a tight security curtain surrounded the situation.

Johnson Predicts Congress Bringing 'Can Do' Mood

WASHINGTON (AP)—Sen. Lyndon B. Johnson (D-Tex.) predicted today the Democratic-controlled Congress will convene next week in a mood to brook no delays in missile development.

Johnson, the Senate's Democratic leader, put the missiles program and "a foreign policy that will bring peace to this world" at the top of problems—including domestic economic ones—he listed yesterday as facing the forthcoming session.

Enlarging on this in an interview, the Democratic leader said: "Congress is coming back here in a 'can do' mood. We know that we are faced with some grave problems because of the Russian Sputniks and their missile advances."

Johnson said he regards the inquiry into the missile and satellite programs by his Senate Preparedness subcommittee as "an investigation before-and-not-after—Pearl Harbor."

He announced the subcommittee will resume hearings Monday with Rear Adm. H. G. Rickover, who guided development of the atomic submarine, as the first listed witness in closed sessions.

Rickover is expected to be questioned about development of an atomic airplane. The program for such a plane has been delayed by "investigation before-and-not-after" scientific difficulties. He also will be asked about development of the special type of atomic submarine needed to launch the Navy's 1,500-mile range Polaris missile, which is designed to be fired from under water.

Rickover will be followed by 18 military and civilian Defense Department witnesses, including Secretary of Defense McElroy.

In connection with the atomic plane, it was reported yesterday that Air Force, Navy and Atomic Energy Commission officials agreed in a Thursday conference with Deputy Secretary of Defense Quarles that money should be earmarked for that project in the defense budget for the coming fiscal year, starting next July 1.

But it was learned these officials put off a decision on whether to continue present efforts to build an atomic aircraft that would be militarily useful, or to concentrate on a nuclear plane that might get into the air ahead of any Russian atomic model.

ASC Group To Fight Removal

RALEIGH (AP)—The Rockingham County Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Committee—has indicated it will appeal to Washington its removal from office by the state ASC Committee.

The three-member Rockingham committee was ousted yesterday by the state committee, which also suspended two members of the three-man Halifax County committee.

Disputes over whether ASC office managers in the two counties should remain in office led the action.

H. D. Godfrey, state ASC administrative officer, said the two suspended Halifax members have 15 days to show the state committee why they should be restored to duty. If they fail to convince the state committee, Godfrey added, they also will be removed.

The Rockingham committeemen removed were: T. C. Gentry, Rt. 1, Stokesdale, chairman; James W. Perkins, Rt. 1, Reidsville, vice chairman; and Thomas W. Pearson, Rt. 1, Summerfield.

Serving as new chairman in Rockingham will be Joe Carter of Rt. 2, Ruffin, and Wilson Holland of Rt. 2, Stoneville, will be vice chairman.

Chairman Jack Batchelor of Scotland Neck and Vice Chairman J. Edward Tippetts of Rt. 2, Roanoke Rapids, were suspended from the Halifax committee.

Russians Hint At Testing Of Atomic Subs

MOSCOW (AP)—The Newspaper Soviet Fleet indicated today the Russians may be testing atomic submarines.

In a review of a booklet on submarines, the navy newspaper discussed the advantages and disadvantages of atomic submarines "as discovered by testing."

"There is no doubt that if necessary for the defense of our motherland our country can match the atomic techniques of the aggressors with even mightier Soviet atomic techniques."

The Swedish Naval Yearbook, issued yesterday, said the Soviet Union probably already has three atomic subs. The yearbook said that two may be in the Baltic Sea and a third in the Far East. It gave no details.

The United States has four atomic submarines in service, and a fifth one is expected to join the fleet this year.

President Goes Back To Farm

GETTYSBURG, Pa. (AP)—President Eisenhower arranged a schedule mixing work with relaxation at his farm home today on the last weekend before Congress reconvenes.

The President drove back to his farm yesterday after spending about 24 hours in Washington.

Wintry weather was expected to curtail Eisenhower's outdoor activities today. He has not played a regular game of golf since suffering a mild stroke Nov. 25, but the White House disclosed yesterday that his physicians say the President's recovery is so complete he can play golf any time he chooses.

Best N. C. Works Of Art Being Shown

By ANNE SINGLETON
Reflector Woman's Editor

Representational and nonrepresentational pieces of art are featured in the present art gallery exhibit which reflects the best works of art created in North Carolina during the past years.

Included in this group of 16 creations are two paintings by William Persick entitled "No. 535" and "Still-Scape" and "Seated Man" by John Gordon of the East Carolina College art faculty.

The elements influencing the artistic creations can be seen and felt in a majority of the works. Many of the contemporary oil paintings reflect the life of this period and the way of life of the whole world today.

All of the paintings now at the gallery were included in the 60 works selected by a jury consisting of Dorothy Miller, Harry Bertola, and Emerson Woelffer for showing at the North Carolina Artists' Exhibit held in the N. C. Museum of Art during the month of December.

Most of the paintings being exhibited are for sale at prices indicated on each.

A special highlight in the front gallery are two works of sculpture entitled "Knight" and "Landscape" created by E. C. Longford of Roanoke Rapids and Robert A. Howard, sculpture instructor at the University of North Carolina.

The public is invited to view this outstanding collection which will be shown at the gallery until February 1.

REPRESENTATIONAL . . . "Marina" by Haywood Newkirk of Raleigh is a highlight of the current art exhibit.

Quite Mixed Up

Beginning the New Year right! Those Junior girls have done it again. Things were definitely mixed up Tuesday at a "backwards party" given by Sylvia Vincent and Pat Barlow.

Instead of the winner of the drawing receiving the door prize, it was given to the girl who drew the names from the name pot. All of the games ended with the losers getting the prizes. With all their clothes on backwards, the guests and hostesses were required to walk backwards; and even the refreshments were served in a turn-about manner. About 30 girls were present for this mixed-up affair.

Shorter Hair Slated In '58

VAMP COIFF . . . Long hair designed with lifted look by Ruel. Hair is brushed sleekly away from one side of the face, brought forward in pouf on the other. Lifted circle of hair at forehead adds height.

VIXEN HAIRDO . . . Saucy hairdo that is demure too. It is asymmetric with hair brushed from one side of the face. A double waved bang touches the forehead just below the hairline.

The advantage of being a brunette is that you can run the gamut from casual hair styles to the Theda Bara vamp coifs, says one of America's foremost hair stylists, Mr. Ruel.

His newest styles for 1958 are designed with the chemise in mind (not that you'll wear it, but that's what you said about the pointed toe shoe, and look what happened), the hairdo getting a "lifted look."

"Long hanging hair worn with a chemise distorts the silhouette, makes it look foreshortened," says Ruel, director of Coiffures Americana. "Hair must be worn well off the neck with the chemise style—short, or if a woman prefers long hair, then lifted, seemingly held in suspension."

The lifted look offers also height and fullness—a hair silhouette popular with short girls.

One distinct advantage brunettes have over blonde or red-haired sisters is that they do not usually feel they must conform to a glamor girl stereotype in a choice of hair styles. They wear what looks good on them.

Two new styles designed by Ruel are ideal for brunettes. One is a vampish style with a hint of mystery. The other is sweet and demure, with perhaps just a sly hint of vixen. Both hair styles are asymmetric, featuring a hair brushed sleekly back and away from one side of the face, brought forward on the other. This kind of hair treatment is dramatic, and demands small, well-placed ears, since the ear is emphasized when hair is brushed away. Both coiffures also feature bangs, one wispy and separated in the casual fashion, similar to Italian hair styles. The other is a double wave. Bangs hairdos are very chic on brunettes, emphasized against the light skin.

Dark hair must be kept washed and brushed faithfully to look its best, reminds Ruel, and he suggests color-rinsing it occasionally to give it added gloss.

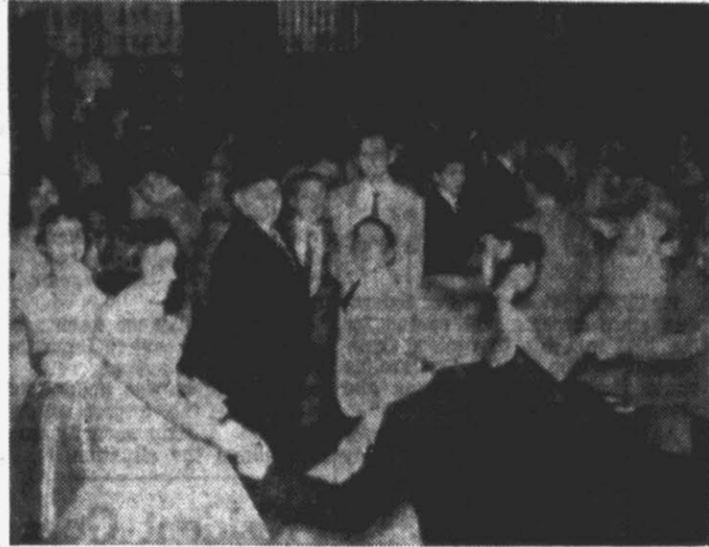

"Never neglect your hair, thinking dirt won't show because it is dark," Ruel says. "Many brunettes think they can get away another day or two without a needed shampoo. But that psychology is all wrong."

Eighth Grade Has Dance

SEMI-FORMAL DANCE—Eighty-five guests attended a semi-formal dance held at the Eastern Pines Community Building last night.

Eleven hostesses entertained 85 of their eighth grade classmates last night at a semi-formal dance held in the Eastern Pines Community Building.

A new year's motif was carried out in the decorations which featured a multitude of balloons floating from the ceiling and peeking from each corner of the room. A cheery fire in the large fireplace completed the scene.

Hostesses for the occasion were Miss Jayne Willis, Miss Judy Tripp, Miss Mary Goodwin, Miss Gigi Guice, Miss Sara Oakley, Miss Judy Thigpen, Miss Shirley Harrell, Miss Nancy Allen, Miss Elaine Dunn, Miss Merilee Morin, and Miss Janice Laughter.

During the evening, refreshments consisting of punch, peanuts, mints, and other accompaniments were served from a table covered with a white cloth and centered with burning tapers encircled with pine.

Mrs. Ed Maloney and Mrs. Godfrey Oakley served punch from each end of the table. Mothers of the hostesses, assisted by Mrs. Mel Willard, grandmother of a hostess, were chaperones.

A highlight of the evening was a floorshow with Mac Mackenzie as master of ceremonies.

Studying geography at college comes in handy when you become the wife of an explorer, says Tay Thomas, wife of Lowell Thomas Jr.

The junior Thomases are following in the footsteps of Lowell's famous father, exploring the far corners of the earth together and helping out on production and filming of the current Lowell Thomas TV series High Adventure.

"Tay's a great traveler," says Lowell Jr. "We plan to take as many trips together as possible as soon as the children are a little older. Right now our little girl, Anne, is 2 and Lowell III is 6 months."

"We took our greatest trip in 1954—sort of a delayed honeymoon. We took a whole year and traveled all over Africa and the Middle East in our own airplane.

We did a little work too filming a TV series called 'Our Flight to Adventure.'

"We carried sleeping bags and four days' food supply on each leg of the trip. We used the plane for big jumps and then set off on foot to explore the country."

"We took some chances during part of the trip, flying over the Himalaya Mountains, on a course where there were no airways, no radio and no weather reporting, in a single-engine plane. But we were lucky, and Tay said she didn't mind if I didn't."

Lowell Jr. is a former instructor in the Air Force, and still flies his own private plane on lecture tours around the country. He has been well schooled by his adventurous father, having started his globe-trotting career at the age of 15, when Lowell Sr. arranged for him to accompany a movie cameraman on a trip to South America with the U.S. Navy in 1933.

Robert Charlton Addresses 4-Hers

Immediately following the meeting the members had a New Year's party. The refreshment table was covered with a holiday cloth and surrounded by crepe paper streamers, multi-colored balloons and candles.

Refreshments of hot chocolate, individual cakes, candy squares and nuts were served by adult leaders, Mrs. Norman Savage and Mrs. Betty Speight. Cecil Register, Miss Margaret Stevens, Mr. Charlton and 27 4-Hers attended the meeting and party.

Bethany Community 4-H Club held its regular monthly meeting Thursday night in the Bethany Educational Building with Roy Earl Rouse, president, presiding over the meeting. Barbara Greer had charge of the devotion and program.

Robert Charlton of the Health Department, speaker, stressed the importance of the fourth "H"—health—in the 4-H Pledge. January is being observed as special health emphasis month for 4-H members in Pitt County.

Spending Fever Must Be Curbed

It is one of the paradoxes of democratic government that during a period when national security expenditures must be increased, the tendency toward increasing unnecessary government expenditures likewise comes to the fore.

It has happened not once, but many times. And in 1958 we are facing a year in which it may well happen again.

Federal expenditures for stepped-up missile and space vehicle programs are expected to boost Presidential budget proposals to a record peace-time high this year. While such conditions logically call for strict economy in other fields of federal spending, economy in other fields is not often the rule. The spending spree seems to grasp every agency and segment of the federal government. No matter how remotely associated with national security, agencies seem to need more funds to carry out their programs.

The fever of record spending spreads from federal agencies to other levels in the country. State and local governments are inclined to ask more assistance from Uncle Sam. Individual communities are more inclined to press for federal expenditures for localized projects in which they are interested.

As a result, increased expenditures for defenses also bring about an increase rather than a decrease in other federal spending. The net increase in federal spending is usually considerably higher than the net increase in amounts appropriated for strict defense purposes.

For this the taxpayers can blame no one but themselves. Individual pressure groups, composed of taxpayers, want to see that their pet projects are cared for. They are willing for other non-essential spending to be reduced; but not spending for their pet project. Thus they shout for overall government economy in non-essential spending, and yet they demand that non-essential spending in which they are particularly interested be continued.

Amid the din of demands for individual non-essential projects, sincere appeals for overall economy in government become lost. Members of Congress, dependent upon the voters to return them to office, have long since found that lavish federal spending wins more friends than austerity policies.

So we continue to struggle with this financial monster of our own making. The struggle will continue until the citizenry as a whole awakes to the fact that their own selfish desires to keep their hands in Uncle Sam's pockets must be subordinated to the welfare of the nation as a whole.

When conditions demand an increase in defense expenditures, they likewise demand greater economy in other government programs.

Private Firms Assist In N. C. Development

More than 6,800 new jobs and $19 million annually in industrial payrolls is bound to have a significant effect on the economy of an area even as broad as that served by Carolina Power and Light Company in the Carolinas.

The power company has announced that in 1957 industrial concerns announced plans for expanding 67 existing plants and constructing 66 new ones in the area it serves. Capital outlay involved in the projects will total more than $90 million.

These new jobs, while not all of them are in North Carolina, will play a part in efforts of the Tar Heel state to increase its per capita income. They will play a part in broadening the economy of the state for many of the new plants will manufacture products which are not now produced in the area.

CP&L does not claim credit for enticing any of these firms to locate new plants or expand existing plants in the area it serves. Yet the power company, like many other private enterprises, probably played an important role in inducing the companies to locate plants in the area. North Carolina, in its efforts toward industrial expansion, should not overlook the role which private businesses already located here are playing in attracting new industry to the state.

Congressional Races For '58

By LYNN NISBET

ISSUES — Since it is not the year to elect a President of the United States interest in the 1958 nation-wide voting will center in congressional races. Thirty-two Senators will be up for full six year terms, and almost certainly there will be three or four fill-ins. All of the 435 Representatives are to be elected, 12 of them in North Carolina.

Issues in these contests will be divided between foreign relations and domestic affairs. Each of these major facets will be subdivided into two or three sections, upon which candidates and voters will place varying emphasis. All have a direct relation to the common pocketbook.

Questions involved in the foreign policies have to do with the extent to which the United States should attempt to underwrite the expenses of all nations in the free world, and what part of the foreign-aid money should go to military and how much to non-military purposes. North Carolina is perhaps less concerned with these problems than some other states. In the area of foreign trade, especially textiles and tobacco, North Carolina has a bigger stake than any other part of the country.

The main issues in the domestic affairs field stem from the inadequacy of national defense, the plight of agriculture, arguments over civil rights and conditions prevailing in labor-management troubles. There is no real problem in North Carolina. Because of the concentration of military installations in this state, there is more than usual interest in the national defense program. The civil rights question is of keen interest here, and a sound solution of the agriculture problem is vital to our economy.

STATE-SIDE — The situation in North Carolina is very similar to that in the nation. It is not the time to elect a Governor or United States Senator, and presently there are no vacancies on the Council of State. Two or three Supreme Court Justices will be the only names on the state-wide primary ballot. There will be 12 Representatives in the Congress to elect, 170 members of the General Assembly, some 400 county commissioners, 110 sheriffs and clerks of court, about a dozen Superior Court judges and a flock of other officers to be nominated in counties or districts.

General interest centers in the legislative races. Issues are not yet clearly defined, and they will vary from county to county. In many counties the issues will be entirely local, in others more attention will be given to state-wide legislation.

Chances are the next Legislature will devote most of its time and energy in reviewing and completing work of the 1957 session. The last session went a long way toward reorganizing State government, and a commission to continue studies and recommendations in that field was authorized and appointed. The administration department and highway commission acts will be reviewed, probably amended to strengthen weak places. The study group is expected to come up with several new and possibly controversial proposals for further changes in the organic structure of State government.

The 1957 tax laws will certainly be reviewed in the light of experience. Here again a commission was named to continue studies and recommendations, both as to changes in the 1957 act and to retire new proposals designed to equalize the tax burden.

CONTROVERSIAL — Three entirely new study commissions authorized last time are sure to come up with highly controversial recommendations. Most important is the 15-member group to propose revision of the constitution. This involves the "fighting pieces" of a short ballot and legislative apportionment. (The short means that fewer high officials will be elected by the people, more appointed by the Governor.) The report of this commission could well prove the most controversial item in the 1958 General Assembly.

Another commission is studying public school financing, dealing with proportion of total cost to be paid by the State and by local units, and involves possible year-round use of school houses. The method of electing trustees of the Consolidated University has been criticized for years. A commission was named to study that question and recommend improvement. Whatever the recommendations are, they will be controversial. UNC trusteeships presently represent about the only "patronage" members of the Legislature can give themselves, and previous efforts to change the plans have always failed.

The municipal government study commission is as important as any, but there is less prospect of real controversy over its recommendations. There will be debate about appropriate division of tax sources between State, county and municipality, and over greater autonomy for city government.

Other groups were named to study nursing homes, motor boat regulation, uniform land maps and cancer control. If the 1959 Legislature gives proper attention to these commissions' recommendations, and to correcting mistakes discovered in 1957 acts, there will be little time for new business.

Crackdown Year For The IRS

By ELMER ROESSNER

For some time now the IRS has been growing more concerned over businessmen's travel and entertainment expense deductions. It has felt that its rules are liberal and common-sensical. In fact the rules are. Your reporter has been studying them in connection with a little book he has been knocking out, ordinarily, the IRS can tangle logic, gobble-duck and syntax when it sets out to write a rule, but the travel and entertainment deduction rules are fair, clear and in English.

Despite that, the IRS has a sneaking suspicion that some businessmen are using these deductions to cheat on income taxes — though Heaven only knows why it should think that!

HIDDEN RAISES — The IRS suspects that some employers have increased expense accounts instead of granting raises to upper-bracket executives. A $5,000-a-year pay boost doesn't mean much after taxes, but a $5,000 expense account may be pretty sweet if the employee doesn't have to account for it. And a trip to survey possibilities of opening a branch in Paris could be even sweeter. Last fall the IRS decreed that tax returns must account for expense monies. Of course, businessmen have always been obligated to account for expenses if challenged, but the new rule requires the accounting from everybody, right along with the return.

Protests were vigorous. Businessmen said that was a sort of ex post facto ruling and they were not prepared to itemize expenses, even though they could prove they had spent the total. So the IRS postponed enforcement until this year.

So in tax returns for 1958, all persons receiving expense monies — and that includes lowly employees, executives and owners

- of firms, must:
- 1. Include reimbursed expenses as part of income on line 5, page 1 of 1958 tax forms;
- 2. Report expenses as a separate item on line 6 a, page 1, and
- 3. Attach a list itemizing those expenses.

WHAT TO DO NOW — So any expense-getter who has not already done so should quickly get a notebook or pad of some kind and start listing the expenses for which he is reimbursed. The account should be annotated; just listing "entertainment" and "travel" items won't do. The taxpayer may be called on to prove just who was entertained and why where he traveled and how.

It will also be wise to become a little Tax Squirrel, and tuck away all receipts and other evidences of money spent for travel and entertainment. However a desk drawer or strong box is preferable to a hollow tree.

Incidentally, Happy Crackdown Year will probably become Happy Boom Year for all the credit card organizations because their bills will substantiate claims for restaurant and resort entertainment, and hotel and travel expenses.

WORKERS GET LITTLE CREDIT FOR PRODUCTIVITY — Only 34 per cent of 182 industrial firms surveyed by Mill & Factory report productivity is higher than a year ago. Fourteen per cent said productivity is lower and 52 per cent said it is about the same.

The 34 per cent reporting increases gave these reasons. Of these, only 3 per cent — about 1 per cent of the total — credit better workers.

- Incentives ..... 27
  - Better Machines ..... 52
  - Better Methods ..... 73
  - Better Materials ..... 10
  - Better Supervision ..... 57
- Several gave more than one reason.

Strength For Today

By EARL L. DOUGLASS

Beyond The Eye

The invisible world! Do you believe in it? In a very interesting TV program recently, a great scientist explained electrons, protons, neutrons, and cosmic rays. He ended up by saying that there is also a substance which registers its presence on scientific devices and can be measured and evaluated. But it cannot be seen. It appears to be completely invisible — beyond, at least, our limited range of vision.

It is always dangerous to compare physical and spiritual realities and particularly dangerous to try to show a definite relationship between them. But every man and woman having religious faith worthy of the name believes in an invisible world. Round about us, or perhaps in realms far distant, an order of life different from our own physical life certainly appears to exist. We cannot prove the presence of such an order of life as we prove scientific facts in the material world. But millions are confident that the invisible world is real. To believe this is not to be believed in spiritualism. This is Old and New Testament religion shared by the devout of every theological persuasion. There is an invisible world, we believe, more real than the physical world in which we live. The basic tenet of Christianity is that the living presence of Jesus Christ continues to exist among men even though our physical senses cannot apprehend this presence.

Plates And An Almanac

I don't understand it. The line wasn't especially long, but it took forever to get to the license counter . . . and once there I was whisked through like a greased pig.

It had seemed as though the waiting had been so prolonged that my supper-hour had long gone by; but once outside and back at the car the meter indicated I had been gone only thirty minutes.

The first obstacle in the course had been the checking of my FS-1 certificate; like others before me and some after, it had an error. So away to the insurance office for remedial action. They straightened things out fast; and away again, to stand in line. Amongst others waiting with reservoirs of patience were two girls aged maybe nine and eleven. Presumably they were accompanying someone else, but for a long time their aloofness almost had me believing they were in the license-buying business too. (That fantasy was dispelled ultimately, but it was fun while it lasted.)

At the Municipal Building, there was a line too; but not for city tags. It looked as though the Utilities were doing a brisk business.

You may remember when no calendar was complete without carrying full data on the moon and its phases, weather forecasts for each day, holidays, feast days, signs of the zodiac and a host of other invaluable information.

One seldom sees that kind of calendar any more; but in paging through a 1958 issue of Turner's Carolina Almanac, I'm happy to find survival of these traditions.

Ye Almanac includes a guide to planting, a table of morning and evening stars, conjunctions of the moon and planets, planting tables, birthdays of notable people, tips for farmers and storekeepers.

There was a time when no home was complete without an almanac to peruse when chores were done. It's easy to see why. Where else could you find "If you want your hair to grow luxuriantly see that it is trimmed during the new Moon and when it is in a fruitful sign — Cancer, Scorpio or Pisces."?

"All crops that produce their yield in the ground should be planted in the old of the moon." One would expect these observations to be tested by time, for they are literally generations old. It's hard to dismiss them as superstitions and with no truth in scientific fact.

And yet, the little book is running over with wisdom keyed to the moon.

Other Editors Saying --- True Or False?

(Goldsboro News-Argus) Proof should be had in the next few months as to the truth of a statement most of you have heard.

It is the assertion that in part North Carolina's being at the bottom rank in per capita income is explained by the fact that her farmers as a whole failed to make income tax returns. That statement was given this writer in all seriousness four years ago by a man of top experience in state government. He was serious. He was no trying to attract attention or to surprise or to make a show. He was stating a fact that to him was gospel truth. And that man had served in top place positions in Raleigh, positions where he was able to have access to information upon which to base great weight.

This man, whose permission to quote by name we do not have, is one whose word carries great weight.

The North Carolina office of the Internal Revenue Service is well along with a complete check on farmers who have failed to make income tax reports. By the time you read this, letters to 46,000 farmers in 23 counties will have been mailed. Each will say that check of the records has failed to show an income tax report. The drive will continue until it is carried into each of the 100 counties in the state.

Just how much pew revenue this may bring in, or just what per cent of the farmers getting the letters should have made reports remains to be determined. It is astonishing, however, that on an average 2,000 farmers in the average county are being notified they are not on record with income reports. Preliminary replies show that 8 per cent of the farmers queried made reports under another name or initials. Thus John S. Jones has filed under J. S. Jones.

And a considerable percent of those queried, it will develop, did not have enough income to be required to report.

We have had a chance to note in Goldsboro, however, that the letters have sent many scurrying to get the reports in.

The Federal tax collectors, after the rush of regular income tax business now upon them, will send their agents to check personally on cases from which no reply has come.

In due time, then, the accuracy of the statement of North Carolina's terribly low per capita income is in part explained by failure of farmers to file reports will be revealed.

Opera House Uproar

By OSCAR A. GUTH
SYDNEY (AP) — Poetry or pastry? The cry was raised when Sydney chose a design for an opera house.

It's certainly unusual, and has split public opinion, the architectural world, and nearly the government.

Most outspoken was world famous architect Frank Lloyd Wright. Said he: "God help us all . . . This circus tent is not architecture."

But what he calls a tent was judged the best of 217 designs entered by architects all over the world in the international contest for an opera house at Sydney's choice harbor-side spot — Benselong Point.

The panel of judges comprised Prof. J. L. Martin, professor of Architecture at Cambridge University (who designed the London Festival Hall), America's top-line architect Eero Saarinen, and two Australian architects.

Their opinion differed vastly from Mr. Wright's comment. They said that Danish architect Joern Utzon's winning design would make "one of the great buildings of the world." Utzon, 38, lives in Helleback, Denmark, with his wife and their three children.

He won $11,250 for the design and will be charged with the supervision of the building of the opera house which is expected to cost about 7 1/2 million dollars. His opera house will be three stories high with two auditoria, side by side, on the second floor, seating 3,000 to 3,500 persons and 1,200 respectively.

The most unusual feature is the roof, which will consist of interlocking cement and the shell vaults. The tallest will house the glass stage.

The auditoria are arranged like Greek theaters in the rising base and are approached either underground from ears or externally along a magnificent ceremonial approach.

No sooner had the Premier of New South Wales, Joseph Cahill, announced his Labor government's acceptance of the plan and decision to go ahead with the building of the opera house, than up went a party outcry: "Where will the money come from?"

The Labor party and its supporters clamored for "homes and hospitals before opera."

But Premier Cahill persisted. He said he would finance the opera house from special manmoth state lotteries and from a public appeal.

Later he brought Utzon out for the launching of the appeal and for preliminary technical discussions.

The appeal brought nearly half a million dollars in its first hour, but has been only moderately successful since.

However, as the foundation stone is not to be laid for another 18 months, there is still plenty of time for Cahill's lotteries to help substantially, and it will be Australia's love for gambling that will build its first opera house — not only its enthusiasm for grand opera.

"The good health of the railroad industry is of vital concern to the United States, and if this good health is to continue, the railroads need immediate assistance from two important sources — the government and the railroad unions." —St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Nixon's Words Are Uncensored

By RAY TUCKER

WASHINGTON — "Does Vice President Nixon," asks H.O. of Los Angeles, Calif., "write his speeches without consulting President Eisenhower?" I note that in certain respects, although minor, his public statements have differed from those of men supposed to be in more frequent contact with Eisenhower. I refer particularly to Nixon's disagreement with Adams on the importance of the Russian's Sputnik.

Answer: I am reliably informed that Vice President Nixon does not submit his speeches to President Eisenhower or Sherman Adams for prior censorship. Except in the instance that H.O. mentions, however, he has not expressed any serious disagreement with the Administration's major policies.

But Nixon has struck out on his own to a certain extent. He aims to discuss Eisenhower policies which are not too well understood or advertised, and to dramatize them. By comparison with Nixon, both Eisenhower and Adams are rather inarticulate.

To use a newspaper metaphor, the Vice President is doing what we call a "rewrite job" and trying to put some "punch" into the political headlines.

NIXON UNDERTAKES ANOTHER ASSIGNMENT Vice President Nixon has under taken another assignment, for which the President should be thankful. Republican politicians, from National Chairman Meade Alocrin down to the humblest precinct worker and doorbell-puller, feel that Eisenhower has neglected them, that he has no interest in their political affairs.

Nixon, who is a party politician to his fingertips, is trying to dissipate this impression. Despite the pressure of official business, he takes time to deliver "pep" talks to local GOP gatherings whenever he can. He will be the headline orator in next fall's Congressional campaign. His interest is not entirely unselfish, for he hopes to be the Presidential GOP candidate in 1960.

VICE PRESIDENT MUST BEWARE OF PITFALLS Nixon, however, may be laying pitfalls for himself. A man seeking a Presidential nomination should not pontificate on too many important subjects and problems in days so changeable and so vicissitudinous as those we live in at the moment. He may wear himself thin, contradict himself or take a position which may be unpopular and untenable three years hence, when he will make his stab for the big prize.

In fact, he has stumbled a bit already. Although he was the first important Administration spokesman to realize and discuss publicly the menace inherent in the Russians' scientific and military advances, repudiating Adams, Charles E. Wilson and even President Eisenhower himself, he has seemed to be trying to minimize the Russo-American equation in recent pronouncements. Obviously, he does not want to pass too much ammunition to the Democrats.

As a practical politician, Nixon must realize that the Democratic National Committee is keeping a daily file on what he says and does. He should not talk too much between now and 1960. Then, he will have a minimum for which to apologize or explain. MISSILE BATTERIES ABROAD. "Do you think that certain European nations' refusal or reluctance to accept American and launching sites will weaken our anti-Russian defenses on the Continent?" Inquires M.K., of Haverhill, Mass.

Answer: I do not want to be too optimistic, but I see no special danger in their standoffish attitude. According to tentative plans, the United States will locate four missile batteries in Scotland, two in England, two in Belgium or Holland, two in Italy and two in Turkey.

So situated, these will be able to bracket Russia's industrial, transportation and oil-producing areas. They will hit her from so many angles, unless they are knocked out, that it will be difficult for the Communist forces to defend their vital centers. In addition, we hope to have big bombers capable of flying more than 2,000 miles an hour.

The Doctor's Husband

Next day, at the Clinic Board meeting, Michael heard his colleagues call him a hero; his eyes were smiling, but serene. He knew what he knew! That any hero is the right man in the right place at the right time, doing the thing he must do.

Having listened, he quietly suggested that there must be some important business on the agenda. "There is," said Dr. Hays. His eyes circled the group of men. Dr. Dana was not present. "But you're not off the pan yet, Loren. For I've a somewhat personal question to put to you, and before I speak it might be well to remind you that I'm forty pounds heavier than you are."

"I mean that!" he answered the smile on Girard's face. "Our methods are different, and so our results are not the same. Tracy uses the intent, personal approach. Each baby she takes over from the obstetrician becomes her baby; each child who comes to her is her child. She grieves when her children are ill, she suffers their pain, rejoices in their progress and recovery. The children's parents are her friends, she deeply shares their anxieties, and their hopes, rejoices in their triumphs. All these things are no real part of science, they have no therapeutic value which you could evaluate but her patients trust her and love her — and they get well. She is a good doctor.

"While I — well, I am a good doctor, too. A scientist. For me, a baby is a matter of measurements, heart and lung function, perhaps the heritage of his or her parents. Each patient is an entity made up of tests and observations, symptoms and reactions. I get results, too.

"And — well, anyway, Tracy is a swell person, and of course she is that kind of doctor. You like her, and can guess that her patients liked her. When I got back from Thule, O'Connell asked us both to work out of his office, arranging our hours and clinic part services and so on in order that we could do it. It seemed like a fine plan — only, it didn't work. The patients preferred Tracy, and said that they did. Instead of my reasoning why they preferred her, I got huffy, and I imagine I was rather hard to live with. Any other girl would have walked out on me.

"But not Tracy. You know her, she isn't easily discouraged, not apt to give up on a thing she's set out to do. So, before O'Connell could get around to telling me to pack up and leave, she managed to get me a bid to come here and work. And, for no other reason than that she wanted to let me get firmly established in the practice here, she decided to conceal her M.D. I didn't approve, but beyond what I've told you, there is no sinister cause for the concealment. She could be licensed here without one bit of trouble, if she weren't so engrossed in making spaghetti."

THE PROFESSOR

It's not so many years since I played in the Friday Afternoon String Quartet at Professor Johnson's house. I'm the one by the bookshelves, with the violin. During those sessions, I sometimes wished I were outdoors kicking a football around. Yet if the Professor had told me to go, I would have been disappointed. Even as a kid, I realized what a good and kind man Mr. Johnson was. We used to see him in Church every Sunday—I don't think I've ever missed—and he did so many fine things. When he died, our minister said that he had been truly humble, and therefore truly great. Our minister is a wonderful man, too. I should know—I've been going to his church all my life... Our church! These then have been the three great influences in my life—the professor, our minister, and my parents. They have placed my feet on the path I hope to follow always. Now the rest of the way, with God's help, is up to me.

THE CHURCH FOR ALL... ALL FOR THE CHURCH
The Church is the greatest factor on earth for the building of character and good citizenship. It is a storehouse of spiritual values. Without a strong Church, neither democracy nor civilization can survive. There are four sound reasons why every person should attend services regularly and support the Church. They are: (1) For his own sake. (2) For his children's sake. (3) For his own community and nation. (4) For the sake of the Church itself, which needs his moral and material support. Plan to go to church regularly and read your Bible daily.

STEALER'S CHOICE

WAYNESBORO, Pa. (AP) — A thief who ransacked a supply of canned goods, fruits and vegetables gathered by a local church for a charity offering had his own peculiar modus operandi: he stole only commercial canned goods, snatching home canned items. Men have been making knives for about 175,000 years.

His Store Never Sold Tobacco, Wine Or Beer

The final chapter in a unique business story will be written tonight when Charles J. Cannon winds up his Saturday business at Independent Market.

Cannon is closing the store after operating it for more than 27 years on Dickinson Avenue. The store's unique feature lies in Cannon's claim that in all those years he has never sold any tobacco, wine or beer.

The fact that religious convictions kept Cannon from handling those items, which are selling better today than ever before, had little to do with the decision to close the store.

"We are in the wrong location for the times," Cannon said. "We never suffered because of our lack of tobacco, wine and beer because most people are willing to accept your convictions on something like that."

"We have been hurt, however, by poor parking facilities and the growing trend of customers to patronize stores with parking lots." Cannon claims that until after World War II his store had the biggest business in town. It has been in the same location for more than 25 years and was in a building next door for two years prior to that.

During all those years, the market has handled a general line of meat and groceries. Some years ago, some cosmetics and household items were added to the stock, and last spring Cannon began selling some dry goods items in an effort to redeem some of the business that was slipping away.

The attempts to bolster the store's sagging sales wasn't enough. "Meeting our competition's prices and delivering, too, was just too expensive. We couldn't do it," Cannon said.

Independent Market's span of operation almost covers Cannon's entire career as a grocer. He had worked as a farmer and carpenter before going into the grocery business in the late 1920's.

Now that he's getting out of the retail trade, Cannon will go with a local packing house and one of his sons will work for another store.

Railroad Moves In New Offices

Norfolk and Southern Railway has moved into its new offices and warehouse on S. Pitt St. Station Agent E. R. Phillips announced today.

Thus the local railroad offices have left the old Dickinson Ave. location which has served since it was built at the turn of the century.

At the height of railroading both passenger and freight service was located on Dickinson Ave. and trains left the main tracks which run on the southern edge of Greenville to take the siding leading to the station a number of times each day.

Then passenger service was discontinued and the old passenger station closed down.

Some months ago Norfolk and Southern began construction of the new freight station and it was recently completed.

The station, located at 1410 S. Pitt St., is on the railroad's main line. This will mean that the local station will "have closer contact with trains passing," Phillips said.

The old freight station has been sold.

However, Phillips said the siding which led to the old station will remain intact since a number of tobacco companies, a coal yard and other businesses are served off the siding.

Remodeling Their New Home, One Room At A Time

FIRST HOME . . . Mr. and Mrs. Stuart Shinn have recently moved into their first home located on Elm Street. During this new year they have made plans for decorating and adapting their home to meet their individual needs.

QUITE MODERN . . . Black and white suspended lights are used in the living room to carry out the black and white color scheme which is offset by the gold walls, red chairs, and salt and pepper couch.

SUPPER FOR TWO . . . While Mrs. Stuart Shinn prepares the evening meal, her husband, Stuart, adjusts the modern suspended light which is a unique feature in the dining area. The walls in the kitchen and dining area are a sand color and a brown cloth covers the table.

 A new year, a new home, and new situations comfort Mr. and Mrs. Stuart Shinn.

Married two and a half years, the Shinn's recently moved into a two-bedroom brick home on Elm Street and they are busy planning and remodeling each of the rooms to fit their personalities.

"There is a world of difference living in your own home and a rented apartment. I have a sense of satisfaction now in our first home," said Shinn.

Taking pride in their brand new surroundings, the young couple have big plans for this year.

"As soon as we finish with the living room, we plan to redecorate the bedroom and add other finishing touches throughout," they explain.

Carrying out a Chinese modern theme in the living room, they have added unique black and white suspended lamps and eye-catching Oriental conversational pieces to highlight the room.

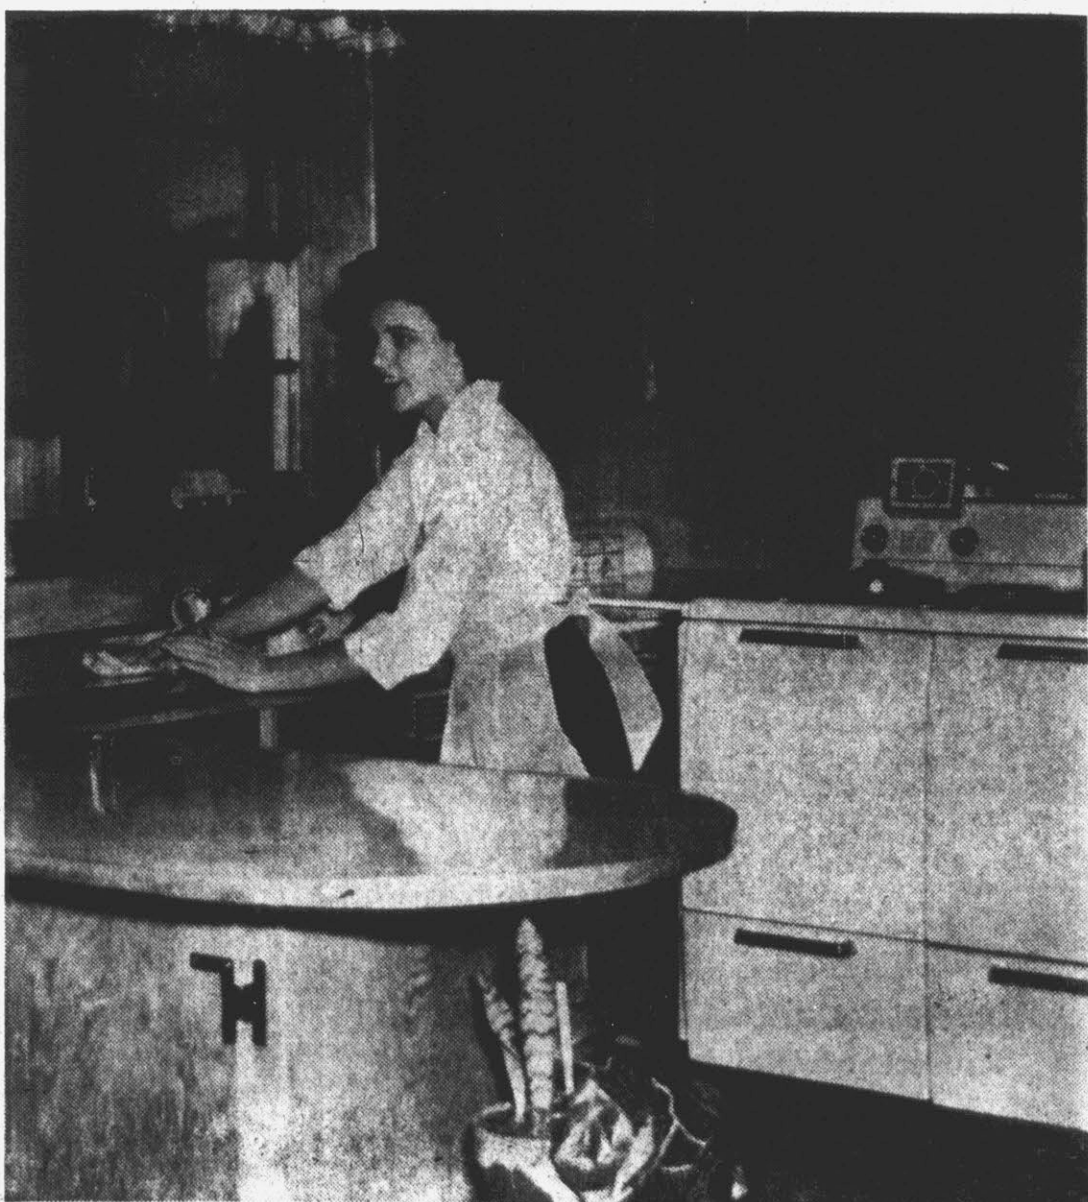

Another novel feature Shinn plans for his home is the installation of a remote control wire system and an intercom. In the future he will install a master control in the bedroom so that all lights can be turned off by one central switch.

His intercom system will enable people to talk from room-to-room and will carry music from the radio and hi-fidelity set to each room.

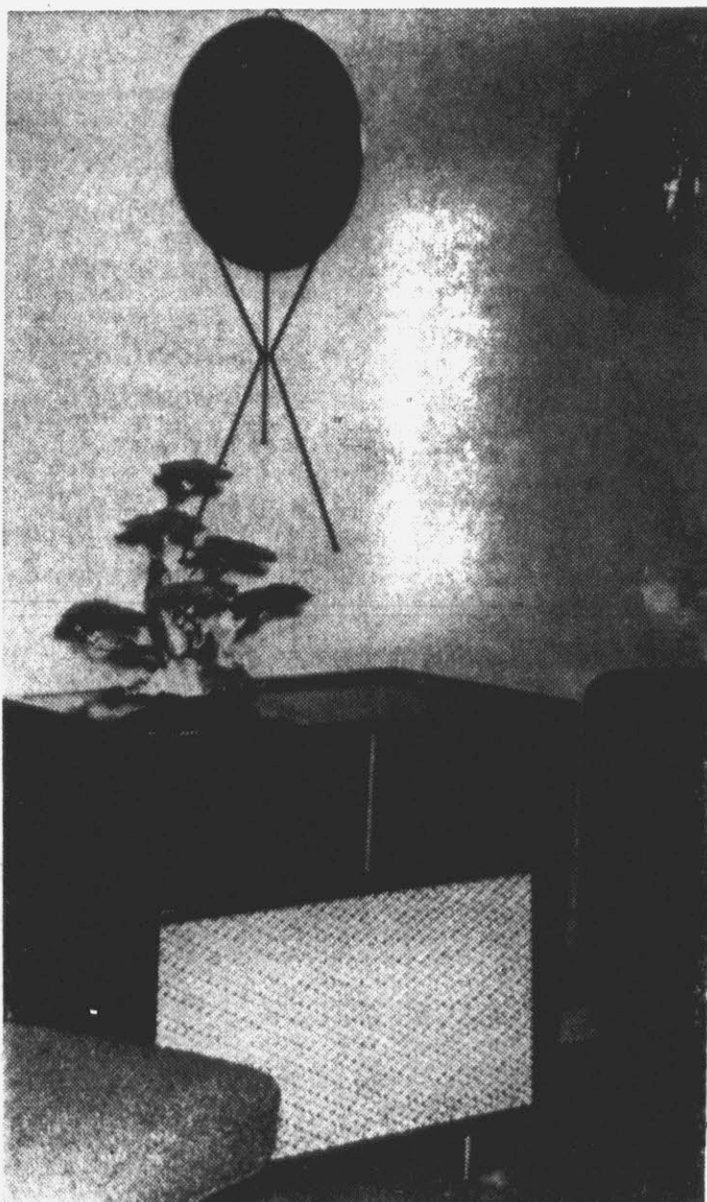

Building for the future, Stuart and Betty Lou Shinn look forward to this new year and extra hours of enjoyment in their first home.

FIXING INTERCOM . . . Shinn spends many hours in the den which he transformed into his "putter room." Now he is busy fixing an intercom system which he will connect to the radio and hi-fi and which can also be used for room-to-room talking.

SUNNY KITCHEN . . . Mrs. Shinn enjoys keeping her sunny, modern kitchen which is highlighted by stained wood cabinets neat and orderly.

CHINESE MODERN . . . The ming tree placed on their black hi-fi set, which features a black and gold top, is of focal interest in the living room.

WHITE PREDOMINATES . . . Fluffy white curtains teamed with a white rug and spreads add to the charm of their bedroom which is furnished in a traditional theme. (Reflector Photos by Anne Singleton)

Washington Nips Phantoms 62-58 In Overtime Game

The Sports Reflector

By BILLY ARNOLD

WASHINGTON—Bill Sweel, the red-faced, trigger-tempered Coach of Washington's Pam-Pack, is an individual who has a way with the referees. And he certainly had his way with them here last night.

The Washington mentor managed to talk his ball club into a 62-58 victory over a Greenville team that had just about clinched a win over him.

Last night, however, the crook-nosed Washington mentor managed to talk his ball club into a 62-58 victory over a Greenville team that had just about clinched a win over him.

"Get Off The Court, Sweel"

When Greenville's Roebuck was fouled in the act of shooting here last night, with four seconds remaining in the game and the score tied at 54-54, the referees indicated a hacking foul. The official timekeeper neglected to stop the clock at the foul, and the buzzer sounded the end of the game shortly after the foul signal.

Sweel descended upon the referees with the wrath of a plague of locusts, disrupting the game, and spent a full two minutes arguing in the middle of the court. One of the officials gave Roebuck the ball and told him four times to shoot his fouls.

Roebuck told the official that he wouldn't shoot until Sweel was removed from the court. At that, the official turned to the irate Washington Coach and said, "Get off the court, Sweel."

"Wait a minute! Wait a minute!" Sweel screamed, throwing his arms around the ref. He continued to stay on the court and soon persuaded the rattled ref to consult with the timekeeper.

At first, the timekeeper evidently sided with the referee, for the official waved his hand and indicated for Roebuck to shoot his foul tosses. But Sweel would not give up. He continued to argue until the referee went again to the scorer's box to consult the official scorer. This time, the decision was that the foul had been called after the buzzer had sounded. Sweel had won.

A Very Angry Man

Greenville Coach Bo Farley, a polite coach, who had been taking Sweel's ranting and raving calmly, was then informed by the official that a change had been made.

The original decision would have given Roebuck two free tosses and there would have been four seconds left in the game. The changed decision, however, called for an overtime.

When the ref informed Farley that the foul did not count, that Roebuck did not get any shots, and that the game would be forced into a three-minute overtime, the Greenville Coach became a very angry man. No amount of talking however, could change the ref's mind.

At this point, the Phantoms were rattled beyond repair. Farley was about to withdraw his club from the game, but the fired-up Phants begged him to let them continue, and he did.

The first thing that the ref did after the beginning of the overtime, was to call a technical foul on Greenville's Wesley Hudson, giving the Pack a free throw. He never indicated what the foul was for and, as yet, the Greenville coaches do not know.

Washington was awarded five more free tosses during the overtime, enough to put them ahead. The Phants were out of it.

Referee Was Protected

As the buzzer sounded the end of the overtime period, with the scoreboard showing a 62-58 Washington victory, the Greenville fans descended upon the court and formed an angry ring about the referee. It took Coach Sweel and three or four husky Washington football players to escort the official off the court and to the dressing room.

After the ref had showered and dressed a crowd still waited for him outside the dressing room and he had to be escorted to his car.

Coach Boley Farley, who attended the game with a fever of over 100 (he has had an attack of the flu) labeled the action at last night's game "the worst I've seen in 25 years of coaching."

Nation's First Meets Washington And Lee

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS The nation's No. 1 team and the Southern Conference's No. 1 scorer take aim on each other tonight as top-ranked West Virginia risks its unbeaten basketball record against Washington and Lee at Morgantown.

It's the first conference game of the new year for both clubs and, off-hand, you wouldn't expect it to be much of a contest. After all, West Virginia has won nine in a row, W&L, which won its first two games, has lost its last eight.

But you won't find West Virginia coach Fred Schaus or his Mountaineers looking past the Generals and their amazing scorer, Dom Florin. When the teams met Dec. 14 at Fayetteville, W. Va., Florida bucketed 32 points and West Virginia was hard pressed before finally prevailing 74-69.

Florida, far and away the top individual scorer in the conference, carries a lofty 25.3-point average into tonight's game on 253 points in 10 games. West Virginia, winner of its last 26 conference starts, is 5-0 for the season inside the league while W&L is 0-2.

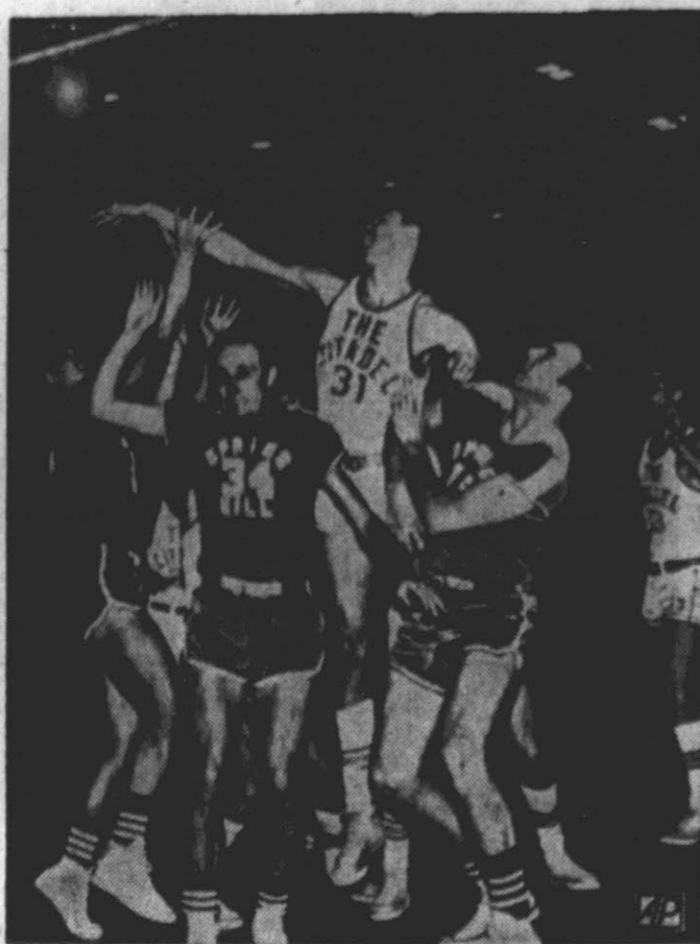

Davidson makes its debut in league competition at VMI (0-2). In a non-conference affair, George Washington, 1-5 for the season, goes to New York for a game with St. John's.

No games were played by conference teams last night.

Gola Is Slow In Returning

The return of Tom Gola from the service figured to make the Philadelphia Warriors a title contender in the Eastern Division of the National Basketball Assn. But the former LaSalle All-American was slow rounding into his preservative form and then Paul Arizin was sidelined with a leg injury and the effectiveness of high scoring Neil Johnston was curtailed by a fractured jaw.

Miss. State Has Cause To Worry

By ED CORRIGAN

The mortality rate has been so high for the major unbeaten of college basketball the past five days that Mississippi State has good cause to worry about tonight's game with Auburn.

Not that the Maroons should lose. No, indeed. Babe McCarthy's lads already have taken care of Auburn once. That was in the final of the Birmingham Classic last month.

State now has compiled a record of 9 victories without a defeat. West Virginia, No. 1 in the country in this week's Associated Press poll, also has won 9 games and hasn't been beaten.

But look what's happened to the five main pretenders to the Mountaineers' throne. Kansas State, Michigan State, Cincinnati and Maryland all topped Monday.

With the Still Chamberlain's Kansas team fell Thursday. With the Still, of course, was indisposed, but is expected back in action when the Jayhawks open defense of their Big Eight title next week.

The Maroons are rated No. 9 behind the whole crowd in the current rankings, and if it gets past Auburn again—the first score was 67-55—McCarthy and Co. will have their fingers crossed when they step on the hardwood at State College, Miss.

Three other major conferences also begin operations today. The Big 10 has a full schedule. The Southwest Conference also begins play, as does the Ivy League.

The Pacific Coast Conference played its first league games last night with Southern California whipping Washington State, 67-65; UCLA halting Oregon, 64-58; Oregon State vanquishing California, 55-43, and Idaho tumbling Stanford, 67-59.

Maryland, No. 7, was the only one of the top 10 to play last night. They gave South Carolina a 72-59 lacing in an Atlantic Coast Conference game. South Carolina made it close for more than a half and pulled to a 57-40 tie late in the game only to have Maryland open up the flood gates.

South Carolina Coach Frank Johnson said he hated Maryland on a par with North Carolina in the ACC. The two teams meet twice in the league and on those two games probably will hinge the ACC's representative to the NCAA tournament. North Carolina won it last year.

Virginia edged Clemson, 88-85, at Clemson; Creighton barely pulled past Monmouth College, 61-58, at Omaha; Akron snapped a tie in the last minute to defeat Lake Forest, 83-72 at Lake Forest, Ill., and Oklahoma City rolled past New Mexico, 89-60 at Oklahoma City.

Another main problem of the college athletic leaders is "red-shirting," the practice of holding college athletes, usually football players, out of intercollegiate competition for one season while they gain experience fighting on scrub teams.

The big ten and Ivy Leagues now have ruled out this practice by limiting competition.

ECC Opens 1958 Play Tonight At Appalachian

East Carolina College basketball team, idle during the Christmas holidays, returns to action tonight when they meet with conference foe, Appalachian State Teachers College on the Mountaineers' home court in Boone.

Coach Howard Porter's crew, 5-1 in pre-Christmas play, hope to keep the early season's pace alive against the Apps, but may find their rivals a little tougher than usual.

ECC captured the Mountaineers with east in the two meetings last season, but the freshman-loaded Apps' five is reported to be much stronger, however lacking in experience.

The Pirates may miss the services of Center Guy Mendenhall for a short period of time. The Cary senior injured his ankle in practice earlier this week and his playing status is not definite.

Paced by Harold Ingram, senior and acting captain of the Pirate crew, the upstart Bucs pulled several surprises in pre-holiday play with only one "off-night" depriving them of a perfect mark.

Porter has been using a faster and more interesting type of offense this year with his guards, Jessel Curry and Ike Riddick, supplying the speed to make the fast break work. Both boys, breaking into the lineup as sophomores, are averaging in double figures with Curry leading the team in scoring with a 17-point average.

Joe Plaster, the vastly improved center, and freshman Don Smith, are expected to be the other front men for Porter along with Ingram. Charlie Adams and Guy Mendenhall have supplied Porter with strong reserve strength thus far. Both boys are experienced and have turned in top performances.

Mendenhall, a 6-6 senior, is one of the Bucs' leading performers and also hovers around the double figures mark in the scoring parade.

East Carolina will take to the road for the next week for a battle with Pfeiffer College and then returns home Saturday night for a loop contest with arch-rival Elon College.

Ending up the non-conference competition against Pfeiffer, ECC will be attempting to record an unblemished mark against outside opponents. Pfeiffer's Bulldogs will be seeking revenge for the earlier trouncing administered by the Pirates.

Baseballers May Offer NCAA Subject

Western Illinois pulled out from a 13-point halftime deficit to turn back Tennessee A&I, 79-75, in the NAIA (Small College) Midwest Tipoff Tournament at Macomb, Ill.

By UGH FULLERTON PHILADELPHIA (AP) — After thinking things over for two days, National Collegiate Athletic Assn. leaders have not come up with a red-hot subject for their 52nd annual meeting next week — but college baseball men may provide a good one.

The American Assn. of College Baseball Coaches is the first of a half-dozen groups of college sports leaders to meet here in the annual mid-winter sessions. They have pulled back from their strong stand of last year over signing college players to professional contracts, but they still are stirred up about that question and about summer baseball.

Principal baseball question to be settled here is how far the summer leagues can go in paying college players before they lose their amateur status. A proposal considered last night by the AACBC executive committee put a limit of $325 a month plus certain expense allowances.

Before that figure can be agreed upon the coaches and the NCAA will have to vote on its acceptance session on Wednesday.

Meanwhile the baseball coaches are preparing another blast at the major leagues about signing college players before their eligibility is used up. They admit they have no big squawk when a player is offered a huge bonus—$25,000 or more—but they think college players who aren't worth such big payments should be allowed to stay in school for the full four-year period.

Another main problem of the college athletic leaders is "red-shirting," the practice of holding college athletes, usually football players, out of intercollegiate competition for one season while they gain experience fighting on scrub teams.

Referee's Reversed Decision Disputed; Farley To Protest

WASHINGTON—Washington's Pam-Pack edged the Greenville Phantoms in an opening North-eastern Conference ball game here last night, 62-58, in a wildly-disputed overtime.

A twenty-minute argument that resulted in a reversed decision by the referees forced the game into a three-minute overtime. The action was termed by Greenville Coach Bo Farley as "the worst I've seen in 25 years of coaching."

The two teams fought nip-and-tuck throughout the first three periods of play, before the underdog Phantoms ran up a 7-point lead, 42-36, in the last quarter. Washington whittled away at the Greenville lead and, with 12 seconds remaining, finally tied the game at 54-54.

Argument With four seconds left, Greenville guard Mack Roebuck attempted a shot and was fouled by a Washington player. The official timekeeper failed to shut off the clock and the buzzer sounded as the official was going through the motions of indicating a Hack foul.

Washington Coach Bill Sweel charged off the bench and onto the court to argue. After two full minutes of ranting, the Washington mentor persuaded the official to consult with the timekeeper and official scorer. The decision was handed down, apparently, that the foul was good. The signal was given for Roebuck to shoot his shot: a d it was decided that the game was over. Thus, Roebuck was to be given two chances to nail a victory for the Phants.

Sweel, however, refused to leave the court, even after being ordered off by the officials; he continued to argue. After close to five more minutes of displaying his temper, he again persuaded the referee to consult the official scorer and timekeeper. This time, the official table saw things Sweel's way.

Decision Reversed The officials then reversed the original decision and ruled that the foul had been committed after the final buzzer, that Roebuck had no foul shots coming, and that a three-minute overtime would be forthcoming.

Coach Farley's efforts to reason with the referee were to no avail and the overtime was called into play. During the overtime, Washington sank two field goals, while the rattled Greenville team netted two. But the referees charged the visitors with five fouls, including a mysterious technical. The Pam-Pack scored on four of those five free tosses, which gave them the winning margin of 62-58.

Protest Farley, who has been sick with a critical case of the flu and who attended last night's game with a fever of over 100, said today that "I still feel today the same way I felt last night about that call. It was the worst I've ever seen. Had there been any question in the referee's mind about that decision, he would have called it immediately, rather than waiting until Sweel could argue him into it."

Coach Farley stated that he plans to file an official protest with the Northeastern Conference, "but I don't know whether it will do any good." He expressed regret that he allowed his team to continue the game under the circumstances.

Elsewhere around the loop, Farmville's girls nipped the Grifton females 75-52 in another surprising Pitt County game. Faye Baker netted 33 points to pace the winners, while Lou Mehorn got 27 for the losers.

In the boys' game, Farmville turned on the power to outpace Grifton 50-18. Joe Blake was high for Farmville with 13.

Winterville's girls look an upsetting 47-41 loss last night at the hands of Grimesland. A final-quarter surge by the Grimesland girls, netting them 14 points to Winterville's 8, pulled in the victory for them.

In the boys' game, Winterville took an easy 66-33 win.

The loss was the first of the season for Winterville's girls in five games. They are still regarded the top club in the standings, according to reports to the Reflector.

Decision Reversed The officials then reversed the original decision and ruled that the foul had been committed after the final buzzer, that Roebuck had no foul shots coming, and that a three-minute overtime would be forthcoming.

Coach Farley's efforts to reason with the referee were to no avail and the overtime was called into play. During the overtime, Washington sank two field goals, while the rattled Greenville team netted two. But the referees charged the visitors with five fouls, including a mysterious technical. The Pam-Pack scored on four of those five free tosses, which gave them the winning margin of 62-58.

Protest Farley, who has been sick with a critical case of the flu and who attended last night's game with a fever of over 100, said today that "I still feel today the same way I felt last night about that call. It was the worst I've ever seen. Had there been any question in the referee's mind about that decision, he would have called it immediately, rather than waiting until Sweel could argue him into it."

Coach Farley stated that he plans to file an official protest with the Northeastern Conference, "but I don't know whether it will do any good." He expressed regret that he allowed his team to continue the game under the circumstances.

Elsewhere around the loop, Farmville's girls nipped the Grifton females 75-52 in another surprising Pitt County game. Faye Baker netted 33 points to pace the winners, while Lou Mehorn got 27 for the losers.

In the boys' game, Farmville turned on the power to outpace Grifton 50-18. Joe Blake was high for Farmville with 13.

Winterville's girls look an upsetting 47-41 loss last night at the hands of Grimesland. A final-quarter surge by the Grimesland girls, netting them 14 points to Winterville's 8, pulled in the victory for them.

In the boys' game, Winterville took an easy 66-33 win.

The loss was the first of the season for Winterville's girls in five games. They are still regarded the top club in the standings, according to reports to the Reflector.

State ABC Board To Review Testimony In Glenmore Case

RALEIGH (AP)—The state ABC Board will study testimony gathered at a hearing before deciding whether to suspend the sale of Glenmore Distilleries products in North Carolina liquor stores.

Inside workings of a pool which supplied free booze to legislators and high-ranking politicians were revealed at a hearing held here yesterday.

The Louisville, Ky., distillery came before the board to argue against a 30-day ban on sale of its products which the board voted after suspending the permit of Fred B. Kelly of Raleigh, state representative for Glenmore.

The board turned down a motion by James H. Pou Bailey of Raleigh, attorney for Glenmore, to dismiss the action. It delayed a further decision after Atty. Gen. George B. Patton said each board member should first study a transcript of the testimony.

Kelly lost his permit as a salesman after he was involved in last burden of supplying free liquor by the North Carolina Democratic party.

Glenmore had no knowledge of the pool's operation, Kelly added.

The ABC Board has since removed the authority under which salesmen could withdraw up to three gallons of liquor from the state warehouse here each month as samples.

Bailey contended that Glenmore was an innocent victim of a situation of which it had no knowledge and over which it had no control.

Atty. Gen. Patton pointed to a memorandum issued by the board on Aug. 13, 1956, which advised distilleries they would be held "strictly responsible" for acts of their employees.

Bailey said Glenmore should not be punished "for a situation that the state ABC Board knew of and permitted to exist." Kelly testified that if the State ABC Board did not know the free liquor pool "I don't know how they escaped and I would say they did."

But ABC Chairman Tom Allen asserted that "The state board never knew anything about the pool until the matter broke" in the newspapers.

Parte," the undersigned Commissioner will on Thursday, the 16th day of January, 1958, at 12 o'clock noon at the courthouse door in Greenville, N. C. expose to public sale to the highest bidder for cash the following described real property, to wit:

That certain lot or parcel of land in the City of Greenville, Pitt County, North Carolina, and being located on the West side of Reade Street in South Greenville between Thirteenth Street and Fourteenth Street, and beginning at a stake on the west side of Reade Street 130 feet from the south-west intersection of Reade and Thirteenth Streets, and running thence westwardly and parallel with Thirteenth Street 171 feet to a stake, thence southwardly and parallel with Reade Street 45 feet to a stake, thence eastwardly and parallel with Thirteenth Street 171 feet to a stake on the west side of Reade Street, thence northwardly with Reade Street 45 feet to the beginning, and being the same property conveyed by Amanda Allen Sermons to Velma Tripp, deceased, by deed dated March 14, 1940 and recorded in Book J-23 at page 339 of the Pitt County Registry.

The sale will be made subject to confirmation by the Court and the proposed purchaser at said sale will be required to deposit with the Court 10% of his bid pending confirmation of sale.

This the 30th day of December, 1957.

Commissioner

Utilities Show Growth In Year

RALEIGH (AP)—The barometer of assessed valuation of public utilities has shown healthy growth for North Carolina during 1957.

Figures released yesterday by Secretary J. C. Bethune of the State Board of Assessment placed total valuations for tax purposes of public utilities at $609,445,106. This was an increase of $37,420,126 over valuations for 1956.

Telephone and power companies showed considerable expansion for the year. The largest increases in a number of years were shown for three of the state's leading railroads, including the Southern, Seaboard Air Line and Atlantic Coast Line.

The Board of Assessment placed corporate taxes--the amount valuations are raised over that shown on local tax books--at a total of $279,624,395 for 1957, a gain of $17,171,370 over 1956.

A breakdown of the utilities valuations included: Electric, gas and power -- $311,930,213; railroads -- $155,807,307; telephone -- $14,999,671; Pipelines -- $13,994,417; express--$352,169; the Pullman Co. --$680,000; Telegraph -- $824,551; and water--$886,778.

Southern Railroad had a gain of nearly 2 million, with a valuation of $64,410,254. Atlantic Coast Line was up a little over half a million at $35,774,324; and Seaboard Air Line increased nearly 2 million with a total of $25,714,210.

Southern Bell showed the largest increase among telephone companies. Its valuation of $64,265,618 was an increase of nearly 6 million. Carolina Telephone & Telegraph, at $24,159,530, was up almost 5 million.

Neighbors Sue Nonconformist

ST. LOUIS (AP)—Alphonse J. Dulles' mail box is white with black lettering.

His neighbors have black mail boxes with white lettering.

They asked him to change the color scheme of his box to conform with theirs.

He said he wouldn't, so they sued.

Their petition, filed in Circuit Court yesterday, asks a court order to make Dulles conform and $2,000 damages.

The petition says the 27 home owners in a subdivision where Dulles lives agreed to place their mail boxes on centrally located racks, and to have them black with white lettering.

Besides having the wrong color combination, the neighbors complain, Dulles' mail box isn't on a rack, but an "unsightly, unfinished post."

Says Dulles: "It's the way I bought it--the way they sell it in a store. It's going to stay that way until someone with more authority than they have makes me take it down."

Kate Is Dropping Her Old Theme

NEW YORK (AP)—Singer Kate Smith says she won't be singing "When the Moon Comes over the Mountain" any more.

She announced last night she was dropping the tune as her theme song after almost 27 years.

It will not be heard on her new radio show on the Mutual Broadcasting System that starts next Monday, she said.

Miss Smith said she has "simply grown tired of hearing the song." She said she has sung it more than 10,000 times.

Students Want An 'Oak Ridge'

NEW YORK (AP)—A group of students want to build their own miniature Oak Ridge atomic laboratory in a Manhattan high school.

The group from Stuyvesant High School yesterday sought Atomic Energy Commission approval to construct a cyclotron and subcritical atomic reactor.

The board of education said it would be the first such equipment in any high school in the nation.

Edmund Hillary Has Gone A Long Way In Five Years

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
Sir Edmund Hillary is a tall, lanky New Zealand 38-year-old beekeeper with an unruly shock of hair who has gone a long way in nearly five years — from the top of the bottom of the world.

The 6-foot-3 explorer was a small town boy from Auckland when he scaled Mt. Everest May 29, 1953. He was so obscure that original reports gave his first name as Edward instead of Edmund.

But even before he came from the Himalayas, Hillary had a knighthood from Queen Elizabeth II for planting the British flag atop the world's highest peak. The British timed the announcement to coincide with the Queen's coronation.

Hillary took it calmly. Asked about the view from atop the world's highest mountain, Hillary replied: "Not spectacular. Monotonous. Everything is flat."

Eleven other expeditions had attacked the 29,000-foot peak before the British expedition. Some climbers had died. None had succeeded.

The New Zealand mountaineer, who had been on only one other Himalayan expedition before the assault on Everest, put a couple of gray-black rocks from the top of the world in his pocket, had a bite to eat and climbed down.

When he got to London he revealed that his Nepalese mountain guide, Tenzing, had saved him from plunging into a crevice and certain death as they were in sight of their goal.

Back home Hillary married Louise Rose, the daughter of another mountain climber. He took his bride on a lecture tour around the world, then went back for more Himalayan climbing as the leader of the New Zealand Alpine Club's 1954 expedition to the Barun Valley. During the trek he got pneumonia, but recovered despite weather that forced rescue parties back.

Good Catch For Mail Carrier

PORTSMOUTH, Va. (AP) — M. S. "Tiny" Moynihan, a 24-year-old mail carrier, is quite a hero to folks around here, but he takes the incident as just one of those things which happen to a mailman.

Donna Kelly, 4, trying to retrieve some toys, slipped and neighbors watched in terror as she clung by one hand to the outside of a second-floor window sill. Moynihan, a former high school athlete and assistant to the athletic director of the recreation bureau, rushed up and persuaded the child to drop. He made a perfect catch.

Old Boneshaker Is Brought Home

RIDGEWAY, S.C. (AP) — A Ridgeway resident returned from England with what is believed to be one of the oldest bicycles in existence.
Robert W. Metcalfe said a Parisian manufacturer, Pierre Michaux, apparently developed the bicycle about 1915. It was known in France as a velocipede and later in England as a "boneshaker."

Plans for the New Zealand expedition to the antarctic began in 1955. Hillary was asked whether it would be difficult to find new worlds to conquer. Hillary replied: "No, there is still a bit of fun left in the world."

Last year at this time he was busy staking out the base camp for the expedition about three miles from the U. S. Navy's McMurdo Sound base. Introduced to the U. S. Navy commander as "Sir Edmund," he asked the American skipper for his first name. "Dave," replied Capt. David V. Canham Jr.
"Well," replied the conquerer of Everest, "just call me Ed."

Cummings Survives Years And Ratings

By BOB THOMAS
HOLLYWOOD — There are a few fortunate TV programs which continue year after year regardless of trends and ratings. The Bob Cummings Show is one of these.
Like Ozzie and Harriet and Burns and Allen, Bob's show continues on its merry way without interruption. Next Tuesday he is laughing into his fifth year with the weekly gambol in which he plays a photographer with an eye for the glamor dolls.

There are several reasons for the show's success. Foremost is the fact that Bob is one of the top light comedians in the business. And the show is a clever combo of sex and comedy. Plus which Bob can benefit from the mistakes of his first venture, a ridiculous caper called "My Hero."

After that show was dropped, I was as dead as you can possibly get in show business," he recalled. "I sat in my agent's office one day and heard a top producer tell him on the phone that nobody would buy me. Being out of work, I accepted the State Department's invitation to go on a good will mission to Argentina."

While he was down there, a top-flight comedy writer, Paul Henning, came up with the idea for a new show for Bob. The idea clicked, and overnight, Bob was a hot star again.
"I learned some lessons from 'My Hero,'" he said. "Although the new show was sold in August, I wouldn't go on the air until January, when we had a comfortable backlog. We had gone right on TV with 'My Hero' and were constantly on a deadline, so we had to grab at every script that came along, good or bad."
"I also resolved that we wouldn't aim at the kid audience. Sure, it's easy to develop a following that way, but kids are the most fickle audience in the world. Once they drop you, you're finished forever."
"So we came up with the idea to develop a strong kid following anyway."

By Any Name, It Is For Parking

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — No matter what you call it, it's just a place to park automobiles.
The Durham Merchants Assn. wanted to call the city's new parking lot "Downtown Parking Lot No. 1" or "Merchants Parking Lot No. 1." Councilman Floyd Fletcher suggested "Seaboard Parking Lot."

Books & Stuff

By DR. ED HIRSBERG Today's Review

The New Year is a time for looking back as well as forward. In books, we've had a pretty good year—some terrific flops appeared. Biggest surprise success was "By Love Possessed," the long novel by Bruce Cozzens that still is Number One among the best sellers despite the fact that it is pretty "literary" in the sense that it contains a lot of big words and is quite intellectual in its approach—which goes to show, maybe, that American readers aren't so dumb after all and have pretty good taste, sometimes. If you look through the other titles from last year's efforts you'll discover a cross section of popular approval that indicates that writers have to be good to gain recognition—and that most of the best sellers have been reasonably high quality, even though they're best sellers.

Looking Ahead

Announcements from the publishers indicate that the books that will be coming out in the next few months will continue along a fairly even keel — there probably won't be any "Peyton Places" from what we can gather, though Grace Metalious will publish again. "Meanwhile the movie based on her sensational story is doing very well. . . . Big event for the general readers promises to be National Library Week, scheduled for March 16 to 22, when the American Library Association and the National Book Committee are getting together to try to get people excited about reading. Slogan for the Week will be "Wake Up and Read," and the folks in charge are trying to get as many people as possible into the act to make it a success. Here are some of the things that National Library Week sponsors are disturbed about—and hope to change.

"The habit of reading is not keeping pace with increased education, leisure time or high disposable income. . . . Sixty percent of American adults did not read a book, other than the Bible, during 1954. (Anyway, we're glad the Bible did well. . . .)

"Half of the adults in this country live within a mile of a public library—but only one-fifth of them visit it." (When was the last time you went into Sheppard Memorial?) . . . We trust you'll be hearing more about National Library Week—and that it's a big event here in Greenville. . . .

Local Scene

Coming to Greenville January 20 for its annual one-night stand is the Grass Roots Opera Company, which will present Johann Strauss' melodic masterpiece, "Der Fledermaus" (The Bat) in a new English translation with a stellar cast of singing stars, to coin a phrase. . . . Also coming soon on the stage at McGinnis Auditorium will be "Teahouse of the August Moon," one of Broadway's most successful comedy hits. The acting and producing will be done by the East Carolina Playhouse at E. C. C. . . . And returning over TV: Your Columnist's 15-minute book program, "Look-In At Books" over station WNCT-TV this Sunday afternoon at 1:45—something good to put you to sleep on. . . .

ROUNDUP TIME

ELK CITY, Okla. (AP)—It was like the old cattle driving days when 50 head of calves broke loose from a sales barn here. The calves ran through town for hours until they were all rounded up.

may determine how soon the economy will rally: 1. "the promptness with which business firms adjust their inventories"; 2. "the speed of the decline in plant and equipment spending"; and 3. "the amount and timing of fiscal and monetary measures to counteract recessionary trends."

Deal With Cause And Emergency

MOREHEAD CITY, N.C. (AP) — Morehead City Hospital recently had to deal with both the emergency and the cause of the emergency.
Attendees treated an inebriated patient for snakebite. A few hours later the still inebriated patient returned, clutching a live rattlesnake, its coils wrapped around his arm.
He explained that he had been told with an injection of the blood of the rattlesnake he would "get better right off."
Gently and firmly, the attendants explained he had received all the treatment he needed and cautiously escorted the patient and singing rattlesnake to the nearest exit.
