Two Successful Rocket Firings Spurt U. S. Bid For Baby Moons

Missiles Being Prepared At Cape Canaveral Under Tight Secrecy

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — The nation's test of space vehicles having launched two 5,000-mile missiles within four hours, turned their attention today to efforts to put two baby moons into the sky.

The launchings Friday of an Atlas ballistic missile and a Navaho ramjet vehicle both were successful. The Navaho took off ballistic-fashion under the power of two liquid propellant rockets considerably longer than the missile itself.

College Prospects Clouded By Tests, Blanks

By MARTHA PIERCE
Reflector Teen Writer

Getting ready for college requires much more than merely choosing the college that you like and applying for admission.

J. H. Rose high seniors are finding out just how complicated this business of going to college can be. Along with pages of application blanks to be filled out and a flexible wardrobe to be planned are tests to be taken.

Jane Perkins, Ruth Young, Margaret Ann Harrell, Ray Lane, Ann Moore, and Judy Jolly left Friday afternoon for Raleigh to take the College Board Exams. These girls are planning to make a weekend of it. Mrs. Luther Moore accompanied the girls to Raleigh.

Bunny Overton and Martha Pierce left early this morning to take the College Board Examination in Rocky Mount.

Also present for listening to the Carolina-Virginia ball game, dancing and refreshments were Frankie Saleed, Billy Brinkley, Reggie Johnson, Billy Stocks, Norfleet Felton, Steve Redd, Billy Goodwin and Merrill Bynum.

Thirteen girls were in on the fun and surprises at a surprise birthday party given for Janice Bentley January 4.

Judy Tucker, Jean Trahey, Jess Crawford, Ann Vainwright, Myra Hathaway, Joanne Smith, Sara Webb, Myrtle Moon, Blbro, Linda Harris, Ginger Melton, Phyllis Moore, Margaret Beck and Ruth Clark were the girls who planned it all.

Camilla Henderson had about 25 guests at her house last night. Her guests enjoyed playing cards, dancing, watching television, and refreshments.

Susan Willis was in on the party-giving last night, too. She had some guests over for refreshments and dancing.

Naomi Gibbs is spending the weekend in Raleigh with her parents.

JoAnne Parks, Jane Bass, Gwen Johnson, Iona Jones, Claudette Wilson, and Martha Pierce dropped over to Jean Ann Waters' house last night.

Entertain At Dinner Party

The third-year home economics girls of Winterville High School entertained at a dinner party Wednesday evening in the Home Economics Cottage.

The dinner was planned and prepared by the girls for themselves and guests. Barbara Manning, third-year student, was designated as hostess for the evening.

Under the leadership of Miss Ayla Ray Taylor, Winterville High School home economics teacher, the girls spent the days prior to the dinner making their plans for the dinner.

The classroom was turned into an attractive dining area by a well-arranged table with an egg-crate and an eye-catching bulletin board outlined in cedar, designed by Barbara Manning and Faye Stocks, with this thought, "We can live without art. We can live without books. But show me a man who can live without cooks."

After dinner various activities including a look at the cottage and dancing was planned for the group.

Mrs. Michael Luskin Planning Coffees, Current Events Talks

The deadline for recommendations for League of Women Voters State Current Agenda and any changes in local by-laws is January 20. The Greenville League voted Wednesday night at the board meeting to recommend a study of the state education system. No changes in local by-laws were suggested.

Appreciation was expressed in a letter from the North Carolina Bar Association for the excellent response to the Association's request for assistance in conducting a public opinion survey on the judiciary system of North Carolina. The survey will be postponed for a few months. The December issue of the Tar Heel Voter has been devoted to the subject of the judiciary system.

Every Wednesday at 10 a.m., Mrs. Michael Luskin will have a coffee hour at her home to discuss current events. Anyone interested in the subject is invited to attend.

There will be a state workshop January 28-29 in Chapel Hill; State Convention April 15-17 in Winston-Salem; National Convention April 21-26 in Atlantic City. Any League member who will be able to attend one or more of these meetings, please contact Mrs. Robert Forney.

A Budget Committee was formed with Mrs. Forney as chairman and Mrs. Chester Walsh and Mrs. T. W. Rouse as committee-

Speaker Tells Life Of Lee, Jackson, Maury

Mrs. Sallie Irons gave the George B. Singletary Chapter of the United Daughters of the Confederacy program on General Robert E. Lee, General Thomas Jonathan (Stonewall) Jackson, and Matthew Fountain Maury.

"General Lee was the greatest factor in uniting the North and South," said Mrs. Irons. She added, "Lee and Jackson were both born in Virginia and both were West Point men. Lee was 63 when he died and Jackson was 39."

The Chapter met Thursday afternoon at the home of Mrs. V. C. Fleming Sr. with Mrs. H. T. Smith assisting hostess.

Mrs. T. T. Hollingsworth presided in the absence of the president, Mrs. E. W. Harvey Jr., and the vice-president, Mrs. P. E. Wells. Mrs. J. L. Fleming led the group in the salutation to the flag.

Mrs. Hollingsworth, program chairman, introduced Mrs. Irons. During the social hour a salad course was served by the hostess and assisting hostess.

30 Years Ago Today

January 11, 1928

As each day passes there comes a clearer realization that flying as a means of rapid transportation is here to stay, and soon the town or city that has no provision to take care of this mode of travel will be listed among the has-beens. Already cities about us are taking steps toward municipal airports and unless Greenville, leader in other lines, wants to lose its standing we must get busy. Not only would an airport here attract prominent visitors to the city but there is little doubt that Greenville would be designated as an army emergency landing field if there was a direct line between Fayetteville, the establishment of an airport here would mean that all direct army flying between the two above named fields would use this route which would mean much to the future of this city. Why wait longer to put the town on the map when the opportunity to do so now is at hand and the thing can be done without any great outlay of money?

The Citizenry Isn't Feeling Impact

There can be no doubt of the peril of this nation and the free world in the face of Russian accomplishments in the rocket and space fields.

That is not to say that the United States and the free world are doomed to come under Russian domination because of developments in the Soviet Union. The United States can and must retain the scientific and technological leadership which it has had for so many decades. This feat can be accomplished only by mobilizing the nation's scientific and economic forces toward the goal.

President Eisenhower in his State of the Union message outlined in general terms things which must be done. For the most part, however, he directed his proposals to things which must be done by Congress and by high government officials. He failed to point to those things which must be done by the citizenry if these goals are to be reached.

In spite of the shock of Russian advancements in rocket and space development, complacency and apathy still hold sway among the citizens of this nation. The majority of Americans are confident the United States has little to fear at this time. They are confident American know-how, the efforts of our scientists and high officials will keep us on top of the heap.

The attitude of today is similar to that which prevailed in 1941. We were a confident, cocky people, sure we were doing what was necessary to maintain our national security. Then came Pearl Harbor and the war. Suddenly most citizens realized how far removed from the mobilization they had been. We realized how very little most individuals had contributed to mobilization efforts which had been underway for more than two years. Within a matter of months civilians as well as those in uniform had daily reminders that their nation was engaged in a life and death struggle. There were old tooth paste tubes and razor blades to be saved, old license plates to be traded for new ones, ration coupons and a host of other reminders.

Every citizen was touched in one way or another by constant reminders that he must do his part if the nation was to survive.

Perhaps today Americans need some tangible daily reminders of the sacrifices which must be made; the achievements which must be realized. More taxes, speeches by officials, and even shocking government reports are not enough. We need something more; something short of the wartime fetters on our economy, yet something tangible which will make a contribution if the total effort is to succeed.

The job cannot be done by scientists, officials and Congress alone. It must be done by the entire nation.

That Hunt For N. C. Minerals

By LYNN NISBET

LAND LEASE — The brief news stories about the Council of State sending back to the Board of Conservation & Development a proposed lease on some 60,000 acres of phosphate bearing land gave the impression that this action constituted a rebuff to Governor Hodges, and was part of a so-called "feud" between him and certain members of the Council.

What seems to be a more accurate interpretation is that the action meant that the State's elective officials, awakened to the potential value of the non-metallic minerals in North Carolina, thought the proposed lease was too inclusive and monopolistic, and that the State should have the benefit of further exploration and competitive bids for the mineral rights.

The discussion developed the fact that leases granted several years ago for limestone included all other minerals, except natural gas and petroleum. It developed further that the pending lease agreement with Bear Creek Mining Company was generally accepted under belief that Bear Creek is a wholly owned subsidiary of Kennecott Copper. Check of records in the Secretary of State's office fails to disclose any relationship between the corporations. The record shows that Bear Creek Mining Company was chartered as a Delaware corporation on September 12, 1945, with $10,000 capital—1,000 shares at $10 each. Authorized capital was increased to $500,000 a few years later.

The company domesticated in North Carolina on August 7, 1952, the papers filed showing both the authorized and paid-in capital at $10,000. The fee paid, however, was $200, the amount due on $500,000 authorized capital stock. There is no reference in any of these papers to Kennecott, listed as big men in the copper company.

CRUDE OIL — Domestication papers filed on June 6, 1957, by General Crude Oil Company show that formally requested further Reynolds Company, organized in Delaware July 10, 1929, with 2,500,000 shares on non-par stock. On December 23, 1933, the name was changed to General Crude Oil Company, the authorized capital reduced to 1,500,000 shares of $2.50 par value. In March of 1950 that was increased to 2,000,000 shares. The company domesticated in North Carolina on June 6, 1957, showing authorized capital of $5,000,000 and paid-in capital of $4,732,312.50.

Crude Oil was the company that formally requested further chance to bid on the lease, on grounds that short time and delayed mail prevented them getting in a prepared application at the July meeting when the lease to Bear Creek was authorized. At the July meeting, however, representatives of Monsanto Copper, one of the biggest in the business, made personal request for time to explore and prepare

We Can't Escape That Extra Revenue Need

Following his radio and TV address to North Carolina the other day, Gov. Hodges was reluctant to speculate on whether it will be necessary to ask the 1959 General Assembly for a tax increase.

He pointed out in his address that the cost of all government is rising and that citizens are demanding more services which cost more money. He added that needed services must be provided.

While officials may be reluctant to talk of the prospects of still further increase in taxes, the state's citizenry should not build up false hopes that they will escape additional taxes. If the state of North Carolina is to spend more money on government programs, this money must come from taxes. It must come either in the form of more revenues from existing tax levies, or it must come from new levies authorized by the General Assembly.

We can't escape the problem of budget-balancing by hiding our heads in the sand for another year before we give thought to what will have to be done in 1959.

Favor A Course In Salesmanship

By ELMER ROESSNER

Seven out of eight marketing executives and salesmen believe salesmanship should be taught as a college course in schools of business, according to a poll by Dr. Charles L. Lapp, professor of marketing at Washington University.

In addition, more than two out of five think such a course should be required.

Dr. Lapp polled 448 executives, mostly in the St. Louis area. He thinks polls in other areas would produce roughly similar results.

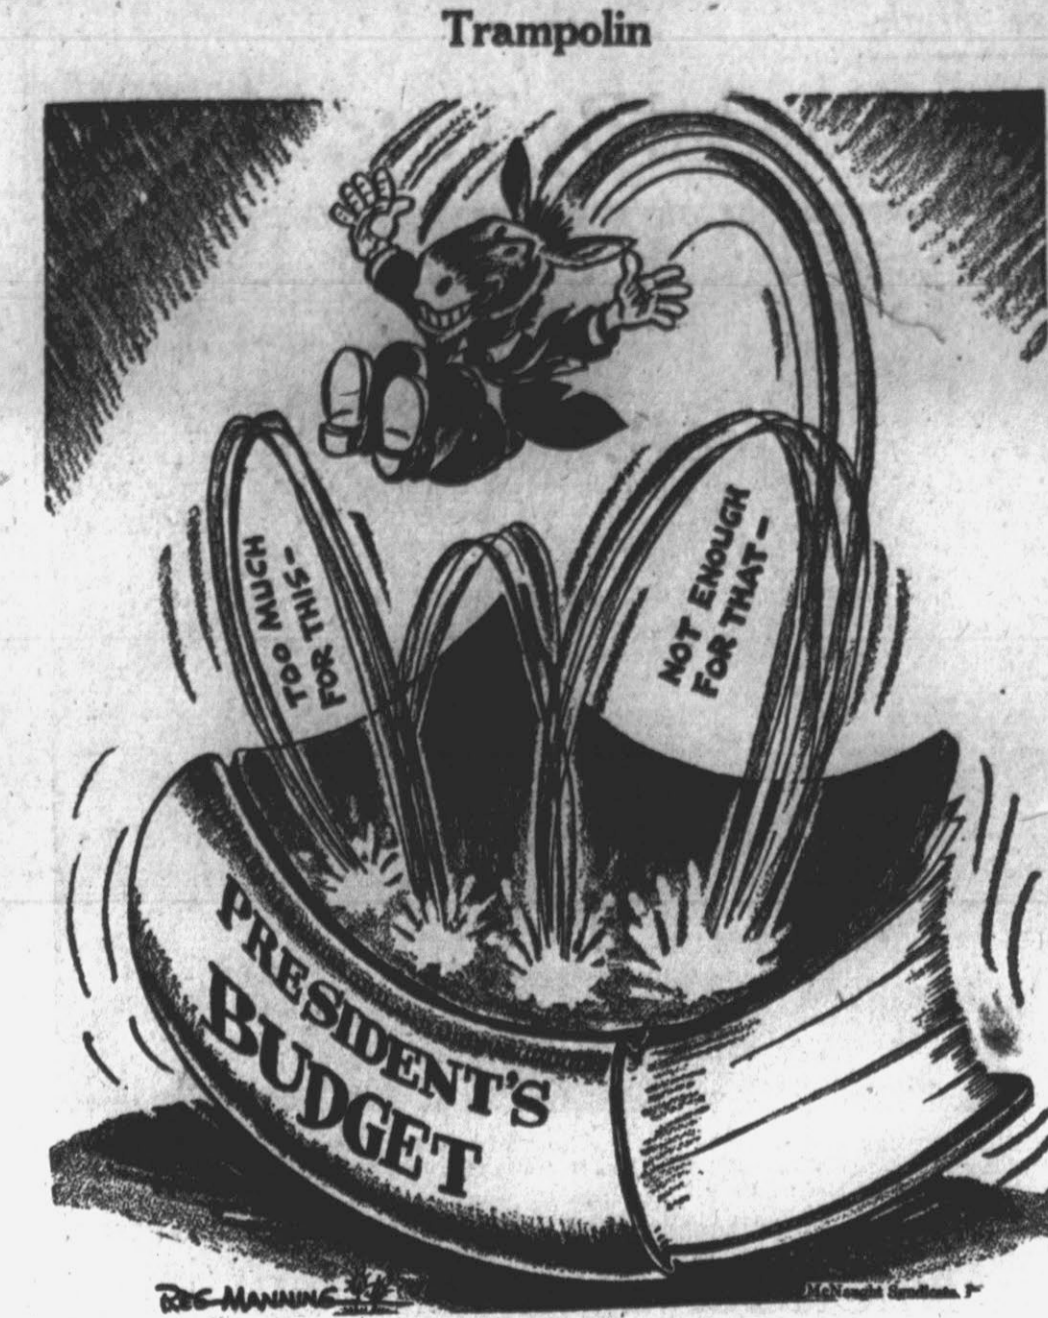

Of his total sample, 87.5 per cent thought salesmanship should be a recognized college subject. Forty-one per cent said it should be required and 59 per cent said it should be elective.

BREAKDOWN BY POSITIONS.

Dr. Lapp then divided the opinions according to the positions of those who had made them, with these results:

	Taught	Required
Sales mgrs.	93.4%	50.0%
Top executives	79.0	46.0
Market research
execs	99.0	41.0
Purchasing agts	87.0	36.0
Adv. execs	96.0	29.0
Store mgrs., owners
and buyers	72.0	50.0
Outside salesmen	87.7	37.7
Retail salespeople	80.0	45.0

Dr. Lapp got few "no opinions" replies. In all categories those who said salesmanship should not be taught were, in percentage, the difference between the "taught" figure and 100. In all categories but one those who said the subject should be elective were, in percentage, the difference between the "required" figure and 100. The exception was advertising executives, where 70.2 per cent said the subject should be optional and

Word From A Distance

By JIMMY ELLIS

Stories in The Daily Reflector sometimes carry much further than we suspect.

They also get into the hands of people we had not thought would see them.

Usually, notification of such happenings is pleasant and gratifying. There are some that cause a particular pleasure.

For instance, there was a feature some weeks ago about Dr. David S. Morrill of Farmville, Pitt County's oldest practicing physician. Included in the story was a comment about Dr. Morrill's grandfather who had served as a governor of New Hampshire. There wasn't much said about the grandfather because Dr. Morrill didn't have a great deal of information about him, other than the fact that he had been governor of the New England state.

The story was brought to the attention of the present governor of New Hampshire, the Honorable Lane Dwinell, who promptly dispatched a letter to Mayor Charles S. Edwards of Farmville. The letter filled in some of the gaps in the local information about the late Governor Morrill.

According to Governor Dwinell's letter, Governor Morrill served as New Hampshire's chief executive for three one-year terms, beginning in 1824 and ending in 1827. He was a doctor, a Congressional minister and a newspaperman in addition to being the state's ninth chief executive.

The grandfather of Farmville's Dr. Morrill died in 1849, a few years before Dr. Morrill's father

(also a doctor) moved to North Carolina in search of a more moderate climate.

Since the late Governor Morrill's death, a portrait of him has been placed in the New Hampshire state house in Concord and his biography is contained in each edition of the New Hampshire state manual.

The portrait which hangs in the state house is thought to be similar to one which hangs in the front hall of Dr. Morrill's Farmville residence.

I remember my only trip to Concord, N.H., in the spring of 1956 when the Army turned some of us loose for a week-end when I was stationed at Fort Slocum, N.Y. We paused in Concord long enough to eat lunch before we hit the road again.

I have always promised myself that I would return to that section of the country (on a visit) and show My Fair Gwen and the Wee Urochin that part of the country. It is scenic territory, but I have to agree with Dr. Morrill's father that it's just too cold for a warm-blooded Southerner.

I think one of the reasons I remember the visit so vividly is that it was the first time I ever saw a big lake completely frozen over. I don't recall exactly where the lake was located, but unless my memory has completely slipped it was named Granite Lake.

None of the ice I've seen in various early-morning expeditions around Pitt County this week will compare with the ice I saw up there. It was amazing to me.

My next visit, however, won't be during the time of ice and snow. I presume to go when the warm winds have spread over the land, and the rolling hill country is full of trees and flowering plants. . . . and the state house in Concord doesn't look as cold as it did the day I saw it.

Other Editors Saying --- Difficult To Do

(Washington Daily News)

Recently in North Carolina some criticism was leveled at State ABC forces for their failure in apprehending illicit still operators. The thought was given that ABC officers capture many stills but seldom capture the operators and owners.

We are sure that far more stills are captured when the owners or operators are not present than are captured in operations. But there is a plausible explanation.

It is relatively easy to spot a still sometimes, but when officers spot it, the owner is all too often aware that it has been spotted. Officers cannot know its location without going into the woods to find it. And usually when they go into the woods, someone sees them. And often whisky still owners can spot tracks or broken limbs around a still site which indicate that someone has been around. When such suspicions are aroused, they naturally refrain from going to a still because they do not want to be captured.

In so many cases the owner of the still and the operators of the still are different men. That is particularly true if the still is of much size. The fellows operating the still are usually 10 dollar a night men who are working there in the employ of the owner.

We do say this. When possible to do so, the owners or operators should be caught and brought to justice. We feel sure that it is particularly impossible in a majority of cases to bring the guilty parties to trial if they are aware of the situation, and they won't go near a still while officers are keeping it under surveillance.

Perhaps officers should catch more owners and operators than they are now doing. We cannot say about that. But we do know that it is far easier to get the still than it is to get the men.

We've been told that in only one case out of 10 are the operators caught. We have also been told that this is not an unreasonable percentage when all the factors are considered. Sometimes we expect too much of officers. In many cases they get "stuck" on the location of stills, but it is just practical common sense to realize that if others know the location, the owner will know it and stay away.

We certainly realize the difficulties the officers face in catching still operators. While we'd like to see this illicit business stamped out completely, it is a most difficult job to do.

It is pointed out that often officers approach a still in operation and the operators flee and are never caught. That is true, and again it is difficult for three or four officers to apprehend three or four operators at a still in a wooded area.

So some of the criticism may be just. But some of it is a bit unfair.

Opinions In Brief

When he starts reciting poetry, Marks becomes as dramatic as any Hollywood actor and his pale blue eyes get a faraway look. They are dead serious to him because they contain the rules under which he lives and they tell of the West he loves.

Marks always has spurs jingling on his boots. He says he wears them "because you can never tell when you'll have to ride a horse."

"And if I leave them in the house," he adds, "the grandkids will get them and I'll never find them."

Intercontinental and intermediate range ballistic missile programs. Thus while we expect to have IRBMs ready for action in a restricted number by the end of this year, the intermediate range weapons already are being stockpiled in the Soviet. Several prototypes of long-range missiles also have been completed by the Russians.

Senators and Representatives who talk more freely than ever before about our present plight admit that the situation can be remedied not only by their voting the required appropriations — which they will do without much argument but also by more cohesive actions on the part of those in the Executive Branch who are responsible for our security.

As a result of the courageous stand of Lt. Gen. James Gavin, who was not afraid of the consequences to himself for testifying with the utmost frankness, members of investigating committees expect that more men in uniform will speak out.

Pure Texan Rancher

By IRWIN FRANK

BARKER, Tex. (AP) — Across the large brass belt buckle E. H. Marks wears is the word "Texas."

It's a good word for Marks because everything about the 76-year-old rancher is pure Texas. The spurs he straps to his bearded old brown boots, the gray Stetson he wears, his talk, and, above all, the herd of longhorn cattle he raises, all reflect his love of Texas.

Emil Henry Marks, owner of the L&H ranch here, has one of the world's largest private herds of longhorn cattle. The 144 longhorns that roam his 940-acre ranch, along with about 300 Brahman cattle, are a large part of Marks' cattle business.

Helped Make Texas

"The longhorn cattle brought in the first money Texas ever had. They helped make this state," Marks said in his loud, throaty voice. He said he started raising the large, bony animals about 1923 "when I saw they were starting to die out."

Both Marks and his father have taken part in long cattle drives during the days when the longhorn was a main source of meat in the United States.

Marks maintains that if ranchers had taken as much care of the longhorns as they did their other cattle, the longhorn would still be popular.

"Longhorns were the only cattle we had years ago that could survive Texas droughts, heat and ticks," he said.

Marks built a log cabin museum next to his home several years ago when his house became filled with his collection of rocks, guns, trophies, iron kettles, hides, pictures, Indian relics, canes, and rocks.

Imported Builder

The museum was built of logs imported from Colorado. When Marks could not find anyone who could build the log cabin for him, he paid a Colorado man $1,000 to come to Texas to put it together.

When Marks talks of Texas, his youth or his longhorn cattle, he breaks into poetry to express himself. More than 50 poems and his colorful stories have made him a popular after-dinner speaker. Most years he averages about 150 talks throughout the country.

His favorite poem is the "Code of the Cow Country." Marks has given away more than 5,000 copies to friends and those who enter his log cabin museum.

The code includes such advice as:

"Treat with respect all woman-kind, same as you would your sister."

"Take care of neighbors' strays you find, and don't call a cowboy 'mister.'"

"Talk straight, shoot straight, an' never break your word to man or boss."

"Plumb always kill a rattlesnake, don't ride a sore-backed boss."

Strength For Today

THAT INNER SECURITY

A woman was asked by a neighbor sometime ago whether or not she would object to a fence being erected along their common property line.

"Not at all," said the gracious lady. "I have loved fences ever since I was a child. When I was very, very young my father put a high, spiked-iron fence around our quite large property and we were told that we were never to go out without permission. That fence meant security for me. I shall never forget the comfortable feeling I had as a child because of that fence. My parents were not unreasonable. When it was necessary or desirable that we should open the gate and go out they quite readily gave their consent. I and my sisters were not prisoners. We were just little girls, filled with a feeling of real comfort and security because of the fence."

All children have to some degree a haunting feeling of insecurity, and the more self-assertive they are the more genuinely insecure they are. And when we grow up we are insecure also. Nobody wants to be a prisoner. We want gates in our fences which open out. But also it is extremely comfortable to feel that around the exigencies of life there is a protection which makes us secure.

Friendship and faith are morale builders par excellence. We may have many possessions, but if we do not have inner security we have nothing at all. Fences!

Humiliated, Worried, Restless

By CONSTANTINE BROWN

WASHINGTON Never in the memory of those who have served longest in Congress have members been so restless and worried as they are now. There is a feeling of frustration and humiliation among all factions of both parties because of the way we have been left behind by the U.S.S.R. in new weapons. And while some Congressmen will try to place the blame on either the past or present administration, there is a consensus that the country at large must be blamed. We have preferred, especially since the illusory armistice in Korea, all kinds of new-fangled devices to make our lives more luxurious instead of keeping our eyes on the thing that really matters: impregnable defense.

It is particularly painful, the Congressmen admit, that we allowed ourselves to be outstripped in the field in which we were recognized by all, friend and foe, to be unbeatable. No country was ahead of America in practical technology. Yet when it came to producing devices to prevent Russia from taking the lead, we have been sadly lacking in initiative and imagination.

There is no doubt that we have the capability and the means to build not only guided missiles to be launched from land and sea, but engines to nullify the actions of the enemy's latest weapons. This will take more than money. It will take the determination to get to work instantly.

Congress will make available every cent needed for these projects for national defense. But money alone is not enough. It existed in sufficient amounts in the past. The present investigation by the Senate Preparedness Subcommittee has revealed that confusion and lack of organization in the Executive Branch of the Government is more responsible for the present deficiencies than lack of cash.

In the Pentagon, too many cooks spoiled the broth. Under the guise of saving money, responsible executives ignored warnings that Russia was proceeding with utmost speed in the construction of a vast fleet of submarines to complement its

Pirates Ranked 7 Over Invading Christians Tonight

Bucs Tied With Lenoir Rhyne For Top Place

By BILLY ARNOLD
Reflector Sports Editor

A sell-out crowd is expected to jam East Carolina's Memorial Gymnasium tonight as the host Pirates battle Elon's Fighting Christians in an attempt to take over undisputed lead in the North State Conference.

Coach Howard Porter's Bucs were ushered into a first-place tie with Lenoir Rhyne Thursday night when the Bears dropped a 71-61 decision to Western Carolina. Both ECC and Lenoir Rhyne have 4-1 loop records at present.

Both teams will be facing league opponents tonight in hopes of taking over the lead. East Carolina will be facing the rougher one. Lenoir Rhyne will have Appalachian on the Bear home court tonight.

Both ECC and Lenoir Rhyne are rated to grab victories tonight. Coach Porter's outfit is expected to out-pace the Christians by about seven points.

Full Strength

For the first time this season, since the opening game, ECC is expected to be at full strength. Porter will probably field his regular starting unit of Jess Curry and Ike Riddick at the guard posts, Don Smith and Charlie Adams or Harold Ingram at the forwards, and Joe Plaster at center. Guy Mendenhall, a three-year veteran forward, will also be ready to play now that his injured ankle has healed. Marion Hales, Jimmy Hall, Craig Reid and Dennis O'Brien, reserves, are all in fine condition.

Elon will bring a half-veteran, half-newcomer club to Greenville tonight, along with a 2-1 North State record. The Christians have defeated Guilford and Appalachian, while losing to Lenoir Rhyne in league play.

Making up the veteran part of Coach Doc Mathis' starting unit will be Frank DeRita, Larry Bulla, and Tony Carcaterra. Two frosh are expected to start with the above three lettermen. They are C. G. Hall and Eddie Burke. The club will be a fairly tall one. Burke is 6-6, Bulla is 6-0, DeRita is 6-5. Mathis has also just secured a newcomer from Indiana, Ray Snider, who is 6-5 and may see action tonight.

Coach Howard Porter will be able to match Mathis in height. Joe Plaster at center will stand 6-8. Don Smith is 6-5, and Mendenhall is 6-5. Adams is 6-2, Curry 6-0, and Riddick 6-1.

Both teams are expected to run a lot tonight. The present East Carolina team has been tabbed by reports from the ECC coaching staff as possibly the fastest, run-ningest ball club to come to Greenville in several seasons. Elon has always been known as a team that can run or walk—and beat you both ways.

Could Take Lead

A Pirate win tonight—coupled with a Lenoir Rhyne loss to Appalachian—would give ECC a 5-1 record and shove them ahead in the conference race. The same thing could work for Lenoir Rhyne, too. An ECC loss and a Lenoir Rhyne win would put the Bears back on top by themselves.

Game time tonight is set for 8:00.

West Virginia's rise to top national ranking has persuaded hosts of people the Mountaineers are certain to whip through their Southern Conference season unbeaten, but Bill Reinhart remains unconvinced.

The veteran George Washington coach, whose Colonials meet West Virginia tonight at Morgantown, thinks it's "a pretty fair bet" somebody in the league eventually will come along to whip the Mountaineers.

George Washington, perhaps? "Sure," says Reinhart boldly. "Could be. Maybe now. Maybe later."

Reinhart says he knows GW's 3-4 record doesn't compare with West Virginia's handsome 11-0 showing "but if there's anything I've learned in coaching, it's that basketball is a curious game."

"I don't care how good you are, every now and then there comes a night when somebody is going to be a little better."

"We don't underestimate West Virginia. They have a wonderful team. But my kids aren't going all the way to Morgantown expecting to get beat."

Whether the Colonials will be able to whip West Virginia has yet to be proved, but if the job is going to be done by a conference club, tonight would seem a propitious time to essay it. The Mountaineers, running into injury trouble for the first time, may have to face GW without a pair of regulars—Bob Smith and Joey Gardner.

Smith definitely is out with an ankle sprain. Gardner is a victim of an untimely virus infection. Both have been averaging in double figures and their loss will throw a heavy responsibility on the West Virginia bench.

In George Washington, West Virginia will be facing one of the more improved teams in the conference. After losing six of their first seven games, the Colonials have whipped The Citadel and Georgetown in succession, their first back-to-back victories since the good old days of 1956.

Reinhart says the improvement was to be expected—"most of the boys were green last year, and there's no substitute for experience. All of them are a lot better."

Last season GW struggled in with a dismal 3-21 record. West Virginia carries a 6-0 conference record into tonight's tussle while GW is 1-1 inside the conference.

Besides the big one at Morgantown, there are three other games on tonight's schedule matching conference clubs.

Richmond, 5-1, in conference competition, seek to solidify its role as a title challenger when the Spiders entertain William and Mary (1-3) at the Richmond arena, where W&M never has beaten them in six tries since 1954.

The Citadel (3-2), which lost two conference games earlier this week by a total of eight points, tries to get back on the winning track at Charleston against Furman (0-1).

Virginia Tech and VMI, each 0-3 in the conference, collide at Lexington in a game that will plummet the loser to the league basement.

A non-conference skirmish finds Washington and Lee, 3-10 for the campaign, at home to Hampden-Sydney.

No games were played by conference teams last night.

... RANKED FOURTH IN THE NATION.

ECC's Joe Plaster Fourth In Nation

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

North State Conference teams have three of the top field goal marksmen in small colleges, current statistics of the National Assn. of Intercollegiate Athletics show.

Joe Plaster of East Carolina College, who has hit 32 of 51 shots for 62.7 per cent accuracy, is No. 4 nationally. Bill Reese of Lenoir Rhyne is eighth with 60.7 per cent and 20th in Guilford's Bob Young, with 55.5 per cent.

Larry Staverman of Villa Madonna College of Kentucky is the nation's leader among NAIA members through games of last Saturday.

In foul shooting, Dick Whitis of Lenoir Rhyne is No. 4, having hit 29 of 35 for an 82.8 average. First is Bill Thomas of Bethany, Kan., who has dropped in 36 of 38 for 94.7 per cent.

Western Carolina's 6-8 Randall Shields has averaged 14.8 rebounds to place 15th in that department, while Whitis is 19th with 14.3. Ralph Smedema of Platteville, Wis., State leads with 21.1.

All North State teams play tonight. Appalachian is at Lenoir Rhyne, East Carolina is host to Elon, Atlantic Christian is at Western Carolina, High Point is at Catawba and Guilford is home to non-conference Pfeiffer.

LeBaron, Tittle Leading Teams

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Prestige and division pride go hand in hand tomorrow when quarterbacks Eddie LeBaron of the East and Y. A. Tittle of the West lead their teams into action in the annual Pro Bowl football game.

The eighth postseason contest with its hand picked stars from the two conferences of the National Football League goes on at 1 p.m., Pacific Standard Time.

It will be nationally televised via NBC, with southern California screened out.

Upwards of 60,000, all-time high for the series, are expected in Memorial Coliseum if good weather—which is predicted—prevails.

Tittle, of the San Francisco 49ers, and his alternate quarterback, Johnny Unitas of the Baltimore Colts, and LeBaron, of the Washington Redskins, and his replacement, Earl Morrall of the Pittsburgh Steelers, are but four of the great pro players to be seen.

Hugh McElhenny, Tommy Wilson, Rick Casares, John Arnett, a pair of Billys named Howton and Wilson, Bert Rechichar of place-kicking fame, Alan Ameche—these are the key offensive men for the West.

Jim Brown, Ollie Matson, Ray Renfro, Johnny Carson, Jac McClairn, Jim Podoley, Lou (The Toe) Groza, Bill Barnes—these are standouts on offense for the East.

For an all-star game, this is serious business for the players and their coaches, Buddy Parker of Pittsburgh for the East, and George Wilson of the champion Detroit Lions for the West.

Belvoir - Falkland Falls; Chicod Moves Into First

A whole crop of surprises took place in last night's Pitt County Conference basketball games—and a whole crop of changes in the standings.

Belvoir-Falkland, the boys team which just took over the lead in the conference this past week, was knocked off their roost last night 52-36 by a determined Ayden crew. Chicod, the previous no. 2 club, dropped Stokes-Pactolus 61-45 and moved easily into first place. Winterville's boys showed Grimesland 70-39.

Among the girls teams, Grimesland held on to its first place position with a stunning 55-38 win over Winterville's girls. Ayden defeated Belvoir-Falkland 48-46 in an overtime, while the Stokes-Pactolus girls dumped Chicod 64-47.

Farmville took two wins from Snow Hill last night in a non-conference game and Bethel was not scheduled to play a conference tilt either, so neither of those two could make a change in the standings. Grifton played a non-loop game also.

Farmville's boys won 56-43 and the girls took a 55-35 win.

Playing Tonight

CHARLOTTE (AP)—The Charlotte Clippers, back in a tie for first place in the Eastern Hockey League, play tonight at Washington.

Herve Lalonde slapped in two goals within six seconds in the second period of last night's 5-2 Clipper win over Johnstown. Jim McNulty, Doug Adam and Chuck Stuart scored the other goals for Charlotte.

Tombstone Blasts Miceli In Seventh

By JACK HAND

NEW YORK (AP) — The jury is still out on Charlie "Tombstone" Smith, the lanky Los Angeles welter who thinks he belongs in the championship tournament.

The "Tombstone" took care of 29-year-old Joe Miceli last night, stopping the veteran on a technical knockout at the end of the seventh round at Madison Square Garden.

However, Smith never did drop Miceli, who was gasping in the late rounds. In fact, Miceli moved fast at the start and had piled up an early lead before the "Tombstone" came to life.

Billy Brown, the Garden matchmaker, had to call on Miceli and Smith on short notice Tuesday night when the scheduled Yvon Durelle-Tony Anthony match had to be set back to Jan. 31 when Durelle suffered food poisoning. He said he hoped to match Smith with Sugar Hart on the Wednesday series in Philadelphia in February.

Smith beat Miceli in Los Angeles, March 7, flooring him in the process. He said last night that Miceli was a better fighter in March.

Referee Al Berl stopped it after the seventh just as Dr. Alexander Schiff of the New York State Athletic Commission climbed through the ropes on his way to Miceli's corner.

Berl said Miceli asked him to stop it but Miceli denied that in his dressing room. In any case, all agreed when Announcer John-

Baby Phants Win

WASHINGTON — Greenville's junior high school basketballers and the GHS ninth grade cage team took a double-header here last night.

Coach Milton Reece's junior high 8th graders dumped the Baby Phant-Pack, 29-12, to rack up their sixth consecutive victory in a row, without a defeat.

The ninth graders claimed their first win of the year, beating Washington's ninth graders, 33-10.

Next game on tap in this circuit finds Reece's club (he will divide it into two teams) facing two eighth grade teams at Kinston, next Friday afternoon.

It Says "Greatness"... in Any Language!

Wherever highways exist and motor cars are known, the name "Cadillac" signifies but one thing—the unmistakable leader in its field.

For the motor car that has borne that distinguished name for the past fifty-five years has been so well designed and crafted that it has become a synonym for everything good and desirable in a product.

And never have these virtues been more evident than they are in the Cadillac car for 1958.

A single, sweeping glance at the new "car of cars", for example, reveals a grace and majesty and elegance never before attainable in modern automotive design.

A brief journey at the wheel provides irrefutable proof of the forward strides that have been made in Cadillac performance and in Fleetwood coachcrafting.

And a study of the facts about Cadillac economy and dependability indicates a soundness of investment beyond anything in Cadillac's brilliant past.

If you haven't as yet inspected and driven a 1958 Cadillac, you should do so very soon.

Whatever your favorite among Cadillac's wide selection of models, which includes the distinguished Eldorado Brougham, you will find it a rare masterpiece in everything a Cadillac can be.

SATURDAY AFTERNOON, JANUARY 11, 1958

January's Sun Awakens A Cold, Still World

THE ICED-OVER STREAM MEANDERS SLOWER THAN EVER . . . And Waits For The Chance To Free Itself Of Frozen Water.

FOOTSTEPS CRASH AND RUMBLE . . . But The Noise Disappears In Broken Ice.

PENDANTS OF ICE . . . Dangle On The Fountain's Lip.

DAYLIGHT PULLS THE SUN FROM BELOW THE HORIZON . . . And Suddenly The Night Is Gone.

The waking hours come slowly and coldly in January.

In the pre-dawn darkness of 5:30 the moon rides silently through the bare blackness of denuded trees. The wan light of its lop-sided three quarters mingles with the harsh glare of a street lamp to chase away the gloom at an intersection, but both get lost in the middle of the block where the dark earth mingles with the night to produce blackness.

There are some signs of life in the hours immediately before dawn, but they are few and far between. Footsteps of an early riser crash and rumble as they pound across frozen mud puddles, but their noise disappears beneath the broken ice and finally gives way completely to the gentle bubbling of air released from its cold prison.

The few automobiles that roll through the frost-glazed streets run into the echoes of their own roaring, and leave only the misty plumes of their own exhaust as evidence they have been there.

On most January mornings, the wind doesn't blow. It glides quietly across frosted yards to feel with icy fingers the cold-numbed arms of the trees. It lingers behind corners of houses to reach noiselessly for the chilled bodies of cats and dogs who pad across stiff grass to investigate garbage cans and trash piles.

Yesterday's wash, which got a double rinsing from the mixture of rain and snow and sleet, hangs stiffly on the clothes line. It ignores the soft steps of the wind, waiting only for the warming rays of the noon sun to chase away the rigidity that came in the early hours of morning.

The sun comes slowly in January, but its coming is always awaited.

A frosted glass is an automobile looks for it, wanting to catch the first rays in the facets of its icy face and twinkle a welcome a new day.

The iced-over stream that meanders, slower than ever, through a pasture waits for it, waits for the chance to free itself of the bondage of frozen water. The stream moves on, but it pops through holes in its cover to look beyond its banks for the light that will break the solid shadows of trees on its face and send them dancing downstream as shadows on a creek are supposed to dance.

Pendants of ice that dangle precariously on the lip of a fountain look, too, for the sun. Their life depends on cold and shadow, but they look for the sun and the chance to slip with a splash into the pond that waits just below.

Daylight comes slowly in January.

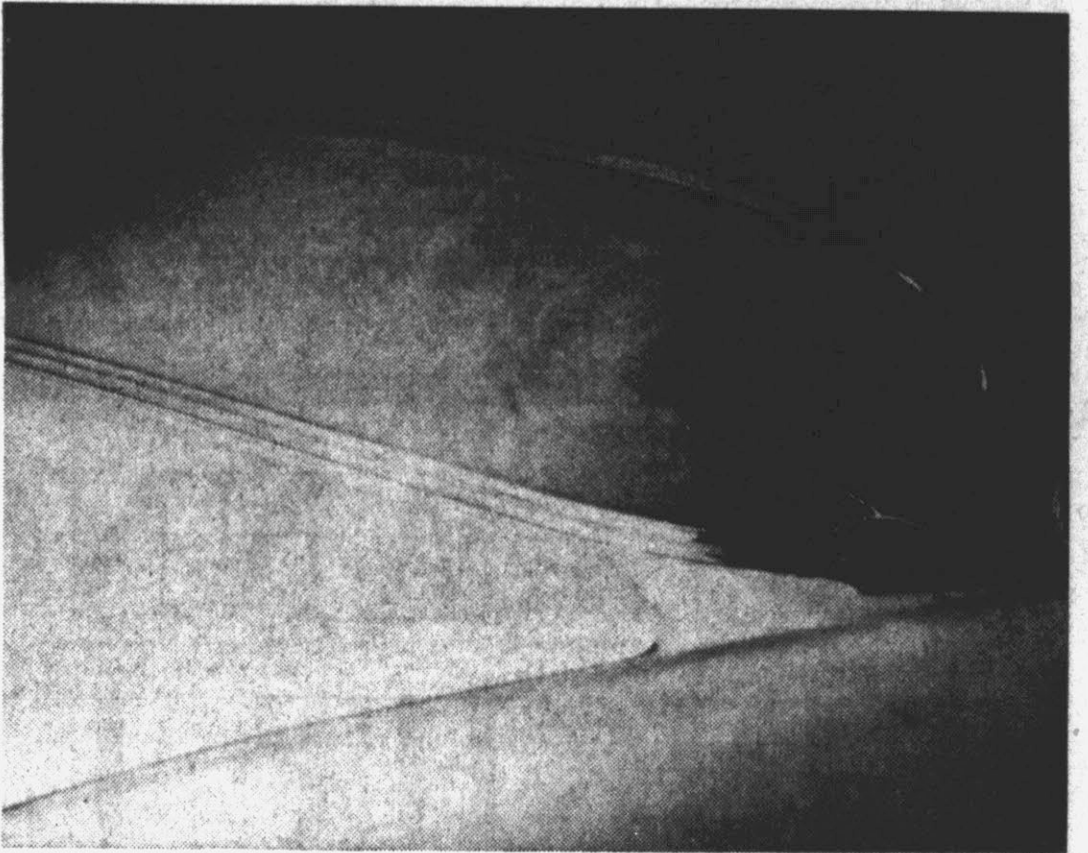

It starts with a faint gleam in the East. It moves Westward across the land, lifting the cover of darkness, waking windows, and outlining against the sky the smoke from a thousand chimneys.

It pulls the sun from below the horizon . . . and suddenly the night is gone.

Air Force General Objects To Unified Space Agency

WASHINGTON (AP)—The top Air Force missile man says President Eisenhower's plan for a unified space agency would wastefully duplicate Air Force capabilities already in existence.

Maj. Gen. Bernard A. Schriever added last night that the Air Force is ready to undertake "at a relatively early date" such space age projects as unmanned reconnaissance trips to the Moon, Mars, and Venus.

Schriever's opposition to Eisenhower's space program, in testimony before the Senate Preparedness subcommittee, today was labeled unfortunate by Gen. Flanders (R-Vt.).

Schriever's testimony was given behind closed doors on Thursday, the day Eisenhower informed Congress in his State of the Union message that "all the antimissile and satellite technology undertaken within the Department of Defense" would be concentrated in the new Advanced Research Projects Agency.

The testimony of Schriever, who also voiced other criticisms of missile and satellite policies, was released last night by the Air Force in a departure from normal procedure. Generally in such cases, the Pentagon permits the congressional committee to release testimony.

Schriever thus became the third high military officer to criticize administration defense planning this week in what some have tagged "the revolt of the generals."

In an interview, Flanders said: "It seems the President showed leadership in straightening out the armed forces, and if his first move is publicly condemned by one of the services I think that is unfortunate."

Other senators, however, said Schriever was just being frank and airing a serious disagreement. Schriever criticized the defense department decision to use both the Army Jupiter and the Air Force Thor, 1,500-mile range intermediate range ballistic missiles. He indicated he thought greater missile strength could be achieved sooner by concentrating on the Thor.

The general also said the Air Force could immediately undertake several space projects by modifying the Thor. He said these included putting a satellite into orbit and making unmanned reconnaissance trips to the Moon, Mars and Venus "at a relatively early date."

So far, the Air Force has had no role in this country's effort to launch an earth satellite. The Navy's Vanguard project had sole responsibility for this until after the Russians launched two Sputniks last fall when the Army was ordered into the program. Vanguard's first try at launching a test satellite failed on Dec. 6.

Last Dec. 13, Secretary of Defense McElroy disclosed plans for the new space agency. He said the ARPA would operate under a single manager and would not be controlled by any one service.

The Air Force then announced establishment of its own directorate of astronautics. That plan immediately was canceled at the direction of the defense department, which called the Air Force action premature.

Earlier in the week, the preparedness subcommittee had heard two other generals voice strong criticism of defense policies.

Lt. Gen. James M. Gavin, chief of Army research and development, said he is retiring March 31 because he contended the Army is deteriorating rapidly and "I can't get anything done about it."

He said that for the past four years Army strength and appropriations have been whittled down.

And Gen. Thomas D. White, Air Force chief of staff, told the subcommittee Eisenhower had not asked enough money for a planned step up in work on 5,000-mile range intercontinental ballistic missiles.

Preparedness subcommittee members who commented today turned aside questions as to whether they thought a major revolt appeared to be brewing among top military brass over defense planning.

In separate interviews, Sens. Saltonstall (R-Mass), Stennis (D-Miss) and Kefauver (D-Tenn.) praised Schriever for giving what they considered to be a candid expression of his views.

Stennis said Schriever's testimony was "not critical, just frank." He added he thought it "rather odd" that the Pentagon released the testimony, but he would not speculate on the reasons.

Kefauver said "Gen. Schriever was just doing what was good for the country—expressing his individual opinion. . . . There are serious disagreements and I think it is good to air them."

Saltonstall did not go into differences with the defense program expressed by Schriever, but he said he thought it "makes good sense" to place ultimate operation of space weapons in the hands of the Air Force.

The subcommittee continues its hearings next week.

1. Two intercontinental weapons—the Atlas ICBM and the Navaho—were test fired at Cape Canaveral, Fla. The defense department said the Atlas performed accurately over a limited range. The Atlas has a speed of about 10,000 miles an hour. The slower Navaho, powered by a ramjet engine, already has been declared obsolete.

2. The Army was ordered to push development of a solid fueled ballistic missile to replace the liquid fueled Redstone.

3. The Air Force said top technicians are being drafted from the Strategic Air Command in an effort to get SAC missile units operational. And the Army disclosed a step-up in the training of Nike Hercules crews at Ft. Bliss, Tex. The Nike Hercules is an anti-aircraft weapon.

4. It was announced that new steps have been taken at the Cape Canaveral test area to keep the public from learning in advance when missiles are to be launched.

5. An Air Force announcement in St. Louis said the F101B Voodoo, a jet interceptor, will be equipped with an air-to-air atomic rocket—the MBI Genie—capable of downing an entire formation of enemy bombers.

Third Clean Sweep By Governor In His Administration Is Now History

By NOEL YANCEY

RALEIGH (AP)—When Gov. Hodges announced Thomas W. Allen out of his job as chairman of the State ABC Board this week, he completed the task of making a "clean sweep" of the three-member board.

It also marked the third time since becoming governor that Hodges has completely changed the membership of a state board. The others were the State Highway Commission and the State Ports Authority.

In each case, the governor said in effect that the board members were not doing their job the way he thought it ought to be done.

But, it can hardly be said that Hodges has made any more changes in the state board's he inherited from his predecessor than other governors have done. Gov. William B. Umstead, who preceded Hodges, sponsored several bills in the Legislature to terminate the terms of several state boards, and before him Gov. W. Kerr Scott made a number of changes.

The main difference is that Hodges changed the entire membership of the ABC Board, the Highway Commission, and the Ports Authority. The other governors usually reappointed some board members when they were making changes.

During the 1957 Legislature, Hodges sponsored a bill to reorganize the Highway Commission, reducing its membership from 15 to 7. He explained that he wanted a roads board with a state-wide point of view instead of commission members who represented their own section of the state.

In naming the new Highway Commission, Hodges said he considered reappointing some of the members of the old board but finally came to the conclusion that an entirely new set of faces was needed.

In the case of the Ports Authority, Hodges said he acted to bring an end to a long-standing feud between the ports of Morehead City and Wilmington.

No legislation was needed for the governor to replace the Ports Authority members. The terms of all authority members had expired. Again, instead of reappointing some of the members and replacing some, Hodges made a clean sweep. In addition, he sought and got the resignation of the authority's executive director, Richard S. Marr. And to minimize rivalry between the ports he directed that the ports headquarters offices be moved to Raleigh from Wilmington.

Hodges told a specially-called news conference Tuesday that he had been concerned about operations of the State ABC Board for about two years. He described all three board members which he has replaced as "good men." But, he explained, over the years there is a tendency for an administrative agency to drift along "until it becomes almost careless."

He said he thought that an example of such carelessness was the ABC Board's policy of allowing liquor salesmen to draw up to three cases of liquor a month as samples. He told reporters that anything connected with liquor is a "tough situation," and he compared the ABC Board in carrying out its job of regulating the liquor interests as "putting a minor league team in against a major league team."

The policy of allowing the liquor salesmen to draw three cases of booze a month as samples played a part in the now widely publicized free liquor scandals. The scandals story broke last May when a Baptist minister went to a Raleigh newspaper and said he had evidence to prove that liquor was delivered to the Sir Water Hotel in Raleigh each week during the Legislature, that it was carried to room 215 where the liquor was removed from the cases and placed in paper bags (two pints to a bag) for distribution to some members of the Legislature, many of whom live in the hotel while the Legislature is in session.

The minister said that Ralph Kelly, a salesman for Glenmore Distillers was in charge of the distribution, and that room 215 was registered in the name of A. B. Carter (same initials as ABC). It turned out that A. B. Carter was a fictitious name, and that rent on the room was paid by Frank Sims of Charlotte, chairman of the Mecklenburg County ABC Board and at the time lobbyist for the State Assn. of ABC Boards.

Kelly was later convicted and fined on a charge of transporting liquor to the hotel in illegal quantities, and Sims was found guilty of registering a hotel room under a false name.

At a hearing in Raleigh last week before the ABC Board in a case involving Glenmore Distillers, Kelly testified that demands on some salesmen for free liquor were so great that they organized a "pool" to meet these demands. He said the salesmen contributed a portion of their monthly sample supply to the pool. From the pool free liquor was furnished to legislators and for such functions as the Democrats' Jefferson-Jackson Day dinner.

Kelly said that if the ABC Board did not know of the pool's operation, "I don't know how they escaped and I would say they did." However, Allen denied the board knew anything of the pool operations before the free liquor scandals were publicized in the newspapers.

Lost His Car Piece By Piece

ATLANTA (AP)—D. A. Stoddard Jr. lost his car piece by piece yesterday.

He told police he parked it in the southwest section and when he returned someone had stolen the battery and drained the gasoline tank.

He went to a service station, purchased another battery and a container of gasoline and when he returned both front wheels were missing.

He went to a garage to get two front wheels, came back, and found the car missing.

Later he discovered police saw the stripped auto, thought it might have been stolen and hauled it away.

Fire Dept. Had 651 Calls In '57

Greenville Fire Department's equipment answered a total of 651 fire and rescue calls during 1957, Fire Chief George Gardner announced today.

The chief said 54 box alarms to fires were received during the year and there were 122 telephone calls to fires. There were also 29 false alarms, 55 lots burned off and 40 county calls to fires.

Firemen and rescue squad members were dispatched with the rescue ambulance 180 times during the year.

Total damage to buildings in which fires broke out amounted to $60,916.44 and to the contents of the buildings, $71,528.20. Total damage was $132,444.64.

The losses are based on insurance adjusters' estimates, Chief Gardner said.

Values of buildings involved in fires during the year was $659,900 with contents valued at $402,452 to total $1,062,352.

Total insurance on buildings involved was $555,800 and on contents $600,500 for a total of $1,156,300.

Heaviest loss of the year was in the Scott Motor Sales fire April 5 of last year. The loss amounted to $46,750.

For December, the chief reported, there were five box alarms, 15 telephone calls to fires, four false alarms, eight county calls to fires, 12 rescue calls and four lots were burned off.

Books & Stuff

By DR. ED HIRSHBERG

This week marks the 80th birthday of North Carolina's most famous adopted poet, Carl Sandburg, who is still living a hale and hearty life up near Asheville. To mark the occasion we are not going to quote the poem about the little cat feet, even though everyone usually does sooner or later when talking about Sandburg. Instead, we give you one of his little-known verses about love, in what we think is a pleasingly comic vein. It's lifted from our good wife's scrapbook — she's a Sandburg fan — and we must admit we'd never read it before. It's called "Maybe":

Maybe he believes me, maybe not,
Maybe I can marry him, maybe not.
Maybe the wind on the prairie,
The wind on the sea, maybe,
Somebody somewhere, maybe, can tell.

I will lay my head on his shoulder
And when he asks me I'll say yes.

Maybe . . .

Grass Roots Opera will be bringing Johann Strauss' "Der Fledermaus" (The Bat) here on Monday, January 20, for matinee and evening performances at McGinnis Auditorium at 2 and 8 p.m. — better get your tickets in advance, but a few will be available at the box office. The Greenville Music Club are the sponsors. . . . And on January 23, 24 and 25 the E.C.C. Playhouse presents "Tea-house of the August Moon," with a professional guest star, Jerry Rockwood of the National Company, in the role of Sakini. Curtain at 8, at McGinnis. . . .

Today's Review

A recent novel about college life among the faculty is commented on below by Dr. George Cook of the E.C.C. faculty.

THE TARNISHED TOWER, By Ann Marbut. New York: David McKay Co., 1957.

Subtitled "A Novel of Educational Buckstering," "The Tarnished Tower," by Ann Marbut, is not a good book. For one thing, the characters are not believable. The writer has not made them three-dimensional. They are either shallow caricatures or sentimental build-ups. Now and then a real person is suggested but always by a minor character who plays a role in the background of the story — say, by parsimonious Aunt Hattie, who spends her years in the twilight of a dim, old Washington house or by self-effacing Bess Reynolds, who thinks it life enough to serve before the shrine of her glittering but specious husband, chairman of the psychology department at Charleston State University.

The reader meets lecherous Kurt Nelson, president of the university in name only; Agnes, his formally-mannered wife, weary of his carnality; conniving Ross Adams, relishing his place of power as assistant to the president, manipulating the spider's web that he has spun over all the university; obsequious John Thornhike, chairman of the political science department, gripped at the heart by the knowledge of his shameful inadequacy; brash, orange-haired Helen, his wife, pitying and loving the shrinking, oily man. An extensive dramatic personae are introduced, categorized, and explained. None of them is subtle or complex. Even Jerry Scott, a fully-embodied ambitious member of Thornhike's department, who seeks to sell Translational Education — a "dumbing-down" of educational requirements — to almost every one in the novel, and could have been a very complex person, remains unreal and postures puppet-like throughout the book.

Perhaps, one might excuse all this unsatisfactoriness if the theme of the story were forcefully presented. The author wishes to make the point that higher education is being watered down, that life at the university is no longer high-minded and idealistic, but tawdry and cheap. She wants to emphasize that "education is a verity," that it cannot be sold any more than can "upgrade honesty." But she manipulates the backgrounds and characters too patly for the reader to believe in her analysis. Her points should doubtless be made, but let's have them made in the framework of truth. The dustier for this novel calls it "an angry book." It is not so; it is not nearly indignant enough.

ECC Religion Emphasis Week To Begin Sunday

Religious Emphasis Week at East Carolina College, to be observed Sunday, Jan. 12 through Thursday, Jan. 16, will bring to the campus four outstanding speakers who will address students and guests on the campus at a series of assemblies, devotional services, and informal conferences.

Featured on programs of the week will be Dr. Arnold Nash, distinguished author and lecturer and professor of the history of religion at the University of North Carolina; his wife, Mrs. Ethel Nash, member of the department of preventive medicine at Bowman Gray School of Medicine, Winston-Salem; the Rev. Robert Poerschke, minister of the First Baptist Church at Siler City; and Chaplain (Major) Russell C. Archer of Headquarters, 4th Air Base Group, Seymour Johnson AFB.

Religious Emphasis Week will begin Sunday at 8 p.m. with a meeting in the Y-Hut on the campus. Programs during the week will take place in the Austin auditorium unless otherwise indicated and will be open to the public.

As the weeks programs open Sunday afternoon Dr. Nash will meet with student leaders and heads of various civic organizations in Greenville in the Y-Hut. His topic will be "College: Ivory Tower, Filling Station, or Profit."

Other talks by Dr. Nash are scheduled as follows: Monday—"God, Gods, and Idols," at an all-college assembly at 10 a.m. in the Wright auditorium; "Life as a Pilgrimage" at 7 p.m.; Tuesday—"The Place of the Study of Religion in the General Education of the Undergraduate" at a faculty meeting at 4:30 p.m.; and "Tragedy as Triumph" at 7 p.m.

The East Carolina Air Force ROTC will sponsor Tuesday at noon a panel on "Marriage and the Military Service." Mrs. Nash and Chaplain Archer will address cadets and their guests.

Mr. Poerschke will conduct devotional services each day at 7 a.m. in the Y-Hut. He will also speak at a general meeting Wednesday at 7 p.m. on the topic "Unto This Hour."

C. J. Bradner, director of religious activities at East Carolina, and Roger H. Averette of Greenville, chairman, and other members of the Student Committee for Religious Emphasis Week are in charge of arrangements for the five-day program.

Two Give Notice Of Appeal In Cases Heard By County Court

Notices of appeal to Superior Court were given by defendants in two actions heard this week in Pitt County Recorder's Court.

Connell Alexander Lovett, Negro, 512 McKinley Avenue, Greenville, gave notice of appeal of a speeding conviction and Thomas C. Cherry, a Negro rural resident of Bethel, gave notice of appeal of a drunken driving conviction. Lovett was found guilty of speeding in excess of 75 miles-per-hour and was ordered to pay $10 and costs and surrender his driver's license for six months. Cherry was ordered to pay $100 and costs and his driver's license was ordered revoked for 12 months.

The two cases were among 18 presented by Solicitor James C. Lanier, Jr., and heard by Judge Dink James.

Five defendants were released from custody after Judge James returned verdicts of not guilty in their cases. The five who were freed included Artillery Carmon, Negro, Route 2, Winterville, charged with driving under the influence, speeding and driving on the wrong side of the road; Green Lyons, Negro, Route 2, Greenville, assault with a deadly weapon (shotgun); James Edward Whitakers, 212 West Fourth Street, Greenville, allowing an unlicensed person to operate a motor vehicle; Frank Carraway, Route 1, Fountain, assault on a female; and Alex Walker, Negro, Route 2, Greenville, speeding and driving on the wrong side of the road.

In addition to the verdicts of not guilty on the speeding and driving charges, Walker was found guilty of operating a vehicle without an operator's license. He was ordered to pay $25 and costs.

Orders to pay court costs and surrender their driver's licenses were handed out to six defendants who were entered pleas of guilty to speeding charges. They were Charlie Ray Moore, Negro, New Haven, Conn.; William Wallace Horne, Rocky Mount; Leonard Milton Garrett, Cherry Point; Zeno Graham Bowers, Bethel; Thomas Edward Bollinger, Jacksonville, N. C.; and Lester Johnson, Negro, 1199 Board Street, Greenville. A not pro was entered in a charge of improper registration against Johnson.

Other cases which were heard and judgments which were returned included:

Freston Lee Lloyd, Route 3, Farmville, speeding, plea of guilty in absentia, $25, costs deducted, and defendant ordered to surrender his driver's license for ten days; Alfred Ray Hardy, Box 579, Greenville, no operator's license, $25 and costs.

Clinton Mahesh Griffin, Negro, Greensboro, no chauffeur's license, continued to; Eddie Milton Davis, Negro, Route 1, Greenville, no operator's license, continued to; and Roland A. Paul, Route 10, North Charleston, S. C., driving under the influence and no operator's license, 90 days suspended upon payment of $100 and costs.

Running Neck And Neck In Auto Industry Production

By DAVID J. WILKIE
AP Automotive Editor

DETROIT — The 144-unit margin by which Chevrolet topped Ford in car output last year probably is the narrowest to separate those two automotive giants since they began battling for industry leadership.

The final figures, as reported by the Automobile Manufacturers Assn., were: Chevrolet 1,522,550 cars; Ford Division 1,522,406. They are subject to minor adjustment, but no change in the net result is expected.

It isn't much of a secret that Chevrolet extended itself in the final weeks of the year to overtake Ford. What the effort may have done to Chevrolet dealer inventories has not been indicated.

Overall industry inventories are high. However, Edward N. Cole, Chevrolet general manager, says demand for his division's product was up sharply in November and December.

Cole makes no claim that final figures on retail sales will give

Chevrolet the No. 1 spot in that classification. He does say the figures will show the Ford lead will not be nearly as high as was indicated in registration figures a few weeks ago.

The most recent registration totals gave Ford division a lead of approximately 47,000 units. Cole declined to say what he expected the final count would be, but said the Ford margin would be "less than 30,000" units.

Probably in the final count the Chevrolet-Ford share of the retail market will come close to half the industry total. Together they accounted for 49.8 per cent of total car assemblies last year.

Along with the closeness of the Chevrolet-Ford production race another outstanding development in car output was the extension of the Chrysler comeback. Chrysler boosted its slice of the production total to 19.98 per cent against 15.00 per cent in 1956. Its Plymouth division moved up to 10.72 per cent from the preceding year's 7.81 per cent.

The Plymouth percentage put it firmly back in third place in the production standing. Buick which held that spot with a 9.23 per cent of industry total in 1956 dropped to 6.66 per cent last year.

Has Explanation For 'Saucers'

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP) — An Air Force scientist has offered his own simple explanation of why people "see" flying saucers.

Eye defects are the cause, says Dr. Berberth Strughold, a scientist at the Department of Space Medicine at Randolph Air Force Base.

A longtime specialist in aviation medicine, the former German scientist says he is among the large numbers of people who have "seen" a flying saucer.

He said he saw one while flying on a trip one day. It was a bright silver object, Dr. Strughold says, a typical description of a flying saucer.

"I closed my right eye and looked only through the left eye. The object turned out to be a B-29."

"I have a stigmatism in my right eye," Dr. Strughold explains, a defect he says is shared by about 12 per cent of all people.

"This, he concludes, is the reason why many people may think they 'see' strange objects in the sky."

"Unexplained objects always appear in epidemics. This is a psychological factor," he says.

"In the United States, the object is always in the shape of an egg — or a cigar. In Germany, it takes the shape of a Bavarian sausage; in Holland, an Edam Cheese. . . . And in Paris, it is heart-shaped. . . ."

Dr. Strughold was among a group of German aviation experts who came to the United States after World War II. He helped establish the Department of Space Medicine. He has specialized in this field since 1927.

Leopards are found in all sections of India, from the high Himalayas in the north to the low tropical forests in the south.

Lundigan Enjoys Taste Of Acting

By BOB THOMAS
HOLLYWOOD — After four years as a car salesman, William Lundigan is going back to acting.

Of course, Bill is not the ordinary kind of car salesman. He makes the pitch for Chrysler each week on the Thursday night TV show Climax. He is also a high-powered traveling salesman, hustling 130,000 miles around the country each year to make friends for the company.

He gave up his role as seller for a brief period recently to go back to his old racket. He appeared as a wire service reporter with a star-filled cast in "No Time at All," a filmed show for Playhouse 90, to be shown Feb. 13.

How did it feel?

"Just great," he said. "I hope now to do more outside jobs. My contract permits it, but I just haven't had time. Even during this show, I did two Climaxes and went to Miami for the auto show."

Bill did well as a leading man at Universal and 20th-Fox but was nipped by the frost that struck the film industry after the war. Let out by Fox, he did a picture in Europe and some TV shows. He went to CBS one day to see about a series.

"I didn't know anything about it, but they were looking for someone to do a selling job for Chrysler," he said. "They had considered dozens of actors, and someone suggested me."

Bill was hired. He enjoys his work immensely, has traveled throughout the land, Canada and Hawaii. He admitted that he does fairly well at name remembering.

"When I was in radio back in 1932 around New York," he said, "I used to cover events where the then Gov. Roosevelt was speaking. It amazed me how Jim Farley could come into a meeting cold and call off everyone by name. I've tried to develop that knack."

Lockout, Thanks To A Specialist

DUBOIS, Pa. (AP) — A local housewife asked Sgt. Joe Dussia, commander of the local Pennsylvania State Police substation and a specialist in safecracking, to come to her house and change the tumblers in her door locks.

Dussia complied, without asking the woman why she wanted the locks altered.

Her husband gave him the answer that night when he telephoned Dussia to report that his doorknob didn't work.

First Presbyterian Announcements

"Undeveloped Talent — High Prioc" is the topic of the sermon to be delivered by Dr. J. G. Joyce, interim pastor, First Presbyterian Church, at the 11 o'clock worship hour Sunday morning.

Featured soloist is Mr. Paul Hickfang who will sing "Come Ye Blessed" by Scott.

Ushers for the month of January are: McDonald Carr, Carl Whitfield, Max Joyner and Robert Elks.

The public is invited to attend this worship service.

'Hardrock' Plans To Race Horse

BURLINGTON, N.C. (AP) — Paul (Hardrock) Simpson, Burlington postman who doesn't let his 52 years stop him from his hobby of long distance running, will run against a horse in a 157-mile endurance contest this summer.

He has accepted an invitation from the Bulber's Boy Club of Roosevelt, Utah, to compete in its race starting July 22.
