Directors And Officers Assume Posts

NEW MEMBERS OF CHAMBER OF COMMERCE BOARD INSTALLED . . . Hodges, White, Proctor, Lawhon, Evans, Dail, Cavendish.

C-Of-C Officers Installed

John T. Barnhill last night was installed as president of the Chamber of Commerce. He succeeds Dr. M. W. Aldridge. Other officers elected by the Chamber's 1958 board of directors, which also convened for the first time last night, are: H. L. Hodges Jr. and Clarence B. Tugwell, vice-presidents; Kenneth G. Hite, national counselor to the U. S. Chamber of Commerce. Richard K. Worsley was elected treasurer for the coming year. W. T. Kyzer, manager of the Chamber of Commerce for the past 20 years, was re-elected manager. Barnhill is vice-president of Hendrix-Barnhill Co. in Greenville. He is married and has four children. Barnhill has served on the Chamber's board of directors for the past two years and he will be completing the last year of his term this year. He was born and raised in Pitt County and he attended Robersonville and Stokes High Schools and business college in Richmond. He has been living in Greenville since 1937. New members of the 24-man board who were sworn in by outgoing President Aldridge were: A. Hartwell Campbell, M. E. Cavendish, C. Frank Dail, David A. Evans, H. L. Hodges Jr., Joel Lawhon, Joseph G. Proctor, and Charles A. White. The old board of directors which met prior to the new board's meeting refused to vote "yes" or "no" on a U. S. Chamber of Commerce's proposed policy declaration which stated: "Good Faith" meeting of a competitor's prices should continue to be an absolute defense to a charge of violation of the price discrimination provisions of the Robinson-Patman Act. Instead the board voted to request the U. S. Chamber to recall its referendum on the issue. The old board also authorized the preparation of a new pamphlet giving facts and figures about the city. Such pamphlets are mailed to persons requesting information about the city. The new pamphlet will be similar to present literature except facts and figures will be brought up to date, Manager Kyzer said. Industrial Committee Chairman Leonard Bloxam reported that a number of industries had been contacted during the year. There are still a number of prospects which have not definitely made decisions concerning new plant locations, he said.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE'S NEW OFFICERS TAKE OVER . . . seated, Barnhill; standing, Kyzer, Hite, Hodges, Tugwell.

No New Agencies Needed In Missile Work: Russell

WASHINGTON (AP)—Sen. Russell (D-Ga.) said today a "two-fisted secretary of defense" can straighten out the nation's missile program without creating any new agencies. Russell, who heads the Senate Armed Services Committee, took issue with colleagues who have advocated reducing the power of the Joint Chiefs of Staff and placing the missile-satellite programs under a single head. "All you need to get action now is a two-fisted secretary of defense who's not afraid to assume responsibility and has the President's support," Russell said. He added in an interview he is "favorably impressed" so far by the speed with which Secretary of Defense McElroy has made decisions but isn't passing final judgment until more changes are made. A new political storm clouded congressional consideration of how to put the United States in the lead in the race for rocket weapons and manned satellites. Sen. Knowland of California, Senate Republican leader, and Rep. Martin of Massachusetts, House GOP leader, stirred up the storm by blaming former President Truman for any lag behind Russia in the development of missiles. They spoke out in reply to Truman's statement in New York that he does not think Eisenhower is "a good policy maker nor is he a good budget maker." In an unusual public memorandum addressed to Truman, the two Republicans said the nation had "rested on our oars during the last years of your administration while the Russians went to work." "If today we are behind the Soviet Union in some respects in the race to perfect the weapons of the future—guided and ballistic missiles—a considerable part of the blame lies on the doorstep of your administration," they said. In New York, Truman first commented that the Republicans "always have to have somebody to pass the buck to." Later he added, "The facts are not as stated." Knowland and Martin said when World War II ended, this country was the mightiest military nation in the history of the world. "Yet five years later due to your policy of drastically cutting down the armed services, we were not ready for the Korean War," they said. "Today, in contrast with 1950, we are ready . . . Our Strategic Air Command and the Navy's air power can deliver their devastating payload to any point of the globe." Sen. Kefauver of Tennessee, 1956 Democratic vice presidential nominee, fired back that "no amount of political statements or speeches will hide the facts." "The facts are that the budget has been cut and cut during the Eisenhower administration, and research has been frustrated," Kefauver said. "The first thing the Eisenhower administration did after taking of-

Congress Asked To Boost Debt Ceiling By $5 Billions

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Eisenhower administration today asked Congress to boost the 275-billion-dollar limit on the national debt to 280 billion dollars. Secretary of the Treasury Robert Anderson asked for the five-billion-dollar boost in letters to Democratic and Republican leaders of the House Ways and Means and Senate Finance committees. Those are the committees which would handle such legislation. Anderson submitted a draft of suggested legislation that would make the increase effective on a temporary basis from the date of enactment through June 30, 1959. The national debt, subject to the ceiling limitation, stood at $274,250,766,593.28 on Jan. 9, or just less than three-quarters of a billion dollars under the limit. There had been an indication in President Eisenhower's budget message yesterday that the ad-

Lawmakers Haunted By Continued High Taxes And Deficit Spending

WASHINGTON (AP)—The spectre of deficit spending and continued high taxes haunted Capitol Hill today in the wake of President Eisenhower's peacetime record $73,980,000,000 federal budget proposal. Congressional reaction, both public and private, was that the fiscal picture painted by the President in his annual budget message yesterday was anything but bright. But Congress had not expected a rosy report in the light of current deficit needs. There was little doubt that Congress would approve all or most of the $39,800,000,000 outlay for the Defense Department. More argument was expected over non-defense spending proposals in an effort to widen the narrow gap between expected spending and expected revenue during the coming fiscal year. Even as it put the finishing touches on an emergency $1,200,000,000 defense fund, a House Defense Appropriations subcommittee called hearings for Jan. 27 on the military budget for the year starting July 1. Subcommittee Chairman Mahon (D-Tex.) called the new military budget "conservative insofar as ballistic missiles and other weapons of the future are concerned." It might even have to be increased, Mahon added. Sen. Lyndon B. Johnson (D-Tex.) chairman of the Senate's Preparedness subcommittee, promised a careful look to "determine whether it is adequate to strengthen the nation's security." The general attitude among the legislators appeared to be that so far as security is concerned, the sky is the limit. As Chairman Cannon (D-Mo) of the full House Appropriations Committee put it: "All of the increase for national defense is fully justified and will have the support of Congress." There was some skepticism over Eisenhower's estimate that despite heavier defense spending, the budget would be in balance when the year ends and the Treasury would show a surplus of half a billion dollars. Some members noted that the administration had expected a budget surplus this year only to see it fade into a small deficit in the face of declining tax collections and higher spending. Chairman Byrd (D-W. Va.) of the Senate Finance Committee called the new budget "reckless" and "likely to lead to substantial deficit spending with all of its evil consequences." Byrd noted that Eisenhower based his projected surplus for fiscal 1959 on an expected increase of two billion dollars in revenues plus an additional 700 million dollars from still-stymied postal rate increases. "In view of the present declining business cycle," Byrd said, "I believe a drop in tax revenue is more likely than an increase." Rep. Reed of New York, senior Republican on the House Ways and Means Committee, also called the estimates of receipts "somewhat optimistic." As for the President's request to boost the rate for mailing out-of-town letters from 3 to 5 cents, Chairman Johnston (D-SC) of the Senate Post Office Committee called it "too much." The House last year reluctantly voted to increase the rate to 4 cents. Little was said about the President's request for an unspecified increase in the legal limit of the national debt, but in the main the legislators were resigned to approving the request as quickly as possible rather than delay it until just before this year's congressional elections.

City Construction Sets New Record

Value of new construction, aided by a change in issuing of permits, set a new record locally during 1957. Building Inspector J.W. Wilson reported that new construction for which permits were issued during the year was valued at $3,565,099. That was far ahead of the previous record year of 1955 when new construction values came to $2,720,000. However, included in this year's totals was the $1,364,717 men's dormitory which is now under construction on the East Carolina College campus. In prior years, permits have not been required for college and other public buildings, such as schools and thus they have not been included in the new construction totals. Even without the new dormitory, however, it would have been a good year for the construction front. Without the big building, the city's new construction for the year would have totaled $2,200,383, and even that would have made 1957 the third best year in the city's history. The previous high year was 1955 when permits for a total of $2,720,000 in new construction were issued. The next best year came in 1956 when new construction came to $2,334,000. Prior to 1955 new building values had never topped the $2 million mark. On big local construction job was not included in the totals. Reconstruction of Jarvis Memorial Methodist Church is costing more than $200,000. However, it is classified as an alteration and thus does not count as new construction. For the month of December, Wilson reported, permits for eight dwellings valued at $67,500 were issued. There was a permit for one service station to cost $15,000 issued during the month and three garages and storage buildings were authorized to cost $3,500. Three additions and two alterations were approved at a total cost of $4,900. Wilson also reported he had made 29 plumbing and sewer inspections during the month.

Induction Faces 15 In February

During the month of February, 15 men are scheduled to be called for final induction by the Pitt County Selective Service Board. According to Mrs. Selma Rogers, Clerk, the call is the largest in Pitt County since the January call of 1957. In addition 22 men will be called for pre-induction examinations. Ten men were called for final induction and seven for pre-induction on Jan. 6, Mrs. Rogers said. The following men are delinquent: Herman Williams, Raymond Edward Roberson, Walter Columbus Jones, Charlie Lewis Cox and Willie Green. These men failed to report for induction on Jan. 6, according to the Board Clerk. Unless they are located in the next 30 days, Mrs. Rogers explained, they will be reported to the U. S. Attorney as delinquents. Raleigh Center Quota Notification has been received from the State Selective Service Headquarters in Raleigh that during the month of January, a total of 234 men are to report to the U. S. Army Induction Center in Raleigh for induction into the Army. A total of 418 men will report for their pre-induction physical and mental examinations. These men will represent 53 eastern counties in North Carolina.

Nine Men Killed In Plane Crash

PATUXENT, Md. (AP)—A four-engine Super Constellation Navy transport plane crashed while making practice instrument landings at the Patuxent Naval Air Station today. The Navy said all nine crewmen were killed. A base spokesman said the plane fell into a wooded area, tumbling by only a few hundred feet a housing area for married enlisted personnel. The spokesman said the plane sheared off treetops for a quarter of a mile. The aircraft was demolished. Identification of the dead was withheld pending notification of next of kin.

Killer Assigned Mental Hospital

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP)—Mary Welborn, 22, confessed hitchhiker slayer of a Miami motorist, was ordered committed to a state mental hospital. The Albuquerque, N.M., girl's commitment order yesterday takes precedence over a second degree murder charge which was lodged in the rifle slaying Dec. 25 of Robert W. Lee, 24, formerly of Asheville, N.C. Her signed statement said she shot Lee with his own rifle after he gave her a ride as he drove toward Miami from Belle Glade, where he spent Christmas with his fiancée and her parents.

Scientists Ask UN To Help End Nuclear Tests

UNITED NATIONS, N. Y. (AP)—More than 9,000 scientists of 44 nations have petitioned the United Nations for an international agreement to stop nuclear bomb tests immediately. The petition warned that "each nuclear bomb test . . . causes damage to the health of human beings all over the world . . . and the number of seriously defective children that will be born in future generations." The petition was circulated by an American Nobel Prize winner, Dr. Linus Pauling, who said he felt it "represents the opinion of a majority of the scientists of the world." Some U. S. authorities questioned the scientific accuracy of the petition when it was first made public last June 3 as an appeal by 2,000 American scientists. Foreign scientists later signed it. Pauling submitted the petition with 9,235 names to Secretary General Dag Hammarskjold. The U. N. makes such documents available to its 82 members on request but takes no action on them itself. The scientists include 36 Nobel winners, 101 members of the U. S. National Academy of Sciences, 216 members of the Soviet Academy of Sciences and 35 fellows of the Royal Society of London. Pauling heads the Division of Chemistry and Chemical Engineering at the California Institute of Technology in Pasadena. Signatures represent individuals rather than organizations, he said. The petition says: "Each nuclear bomb test spreads an added burden of radioactive elements over every part of the world. Each added amount of radiation causes damage to the health of human beings all over the world and causes damage to the pool of human germ plasma such as lead to an increase in the number of seriously defective children that will be born in future generations." The petition said that as long as only the United States, Russia and Britain have nuclear weapons, "an agreement for other nations is feasible." But as their nations develop them, the danger of "a cataclysmic nuclear war" increases, it said.

Soviet Brands 'War Budget'

LONDON (AP)—The Soviet government today said President Eisenhower had submitted a "war budget" to Congress. "Never before in peacetime has the United States allocated such big funds for military purposes," the government newspaper Izvestia said in an article broadcast by Moscow radio. The budget "can be summed up in two words: 'war budget,'" Izvestia declared.

Auto Industry's Big Three Rap Reuther Plan

DETROIT (AP)—Leaders of the auto industry's Big Three—Ford, Chrysler and General Motors—have greeted Walter Reuther's profit-sharing plan with sharp words that amount to rejection. The UAW will convene Jan. 22 to give formal approval of the union's goals in 1958 bargaining sessions. Stellato, one of the chief opponents of Reuther in the 1 1/2-million-member union, eyed the recent heavy layoffs in the auto industry and said: "Reuther's plan is going to give him more four-day work weeks than he wants—but they'll be the wrong kind." Reuther's plan would give employees 25 per cent of a company's profits above 10 per cent of net capital before taxes. Another 25 per cent would go to car buyers in the form of rebates. The rest—50 per cent—would be kept by the company. Reuther said wage increases—named no figure—also will be sought at bargaining sessions scheduled to start about April 1. Assembly plant workers now average about $2.50 an hour. Ernest R. Breech, Ford board chairman, said the union's proposal would be given "weighty consideration" but he said the plan was "unrealistic." He termed it a "complicated kill-the-profits plan" which he said "strikes at the very roots of the economic system that has made and kept America strong." Curtice said, "It is unfortunate that these extravagant demands should come at a time when public confidence needs to be re-

One Of Girl's Best Friends Is A Goat

By DOROTHY ROE
Associated Press Women's Editor

One of a girl's best friends is an Asiatic mountain goat named Kashmir.

He's the boy who supplies all the cashmere sweaters that are the backbone of so many feminine wardrobes. During 1935 Americans spent somewhere around 150 million dollars on garments made from the soft fleece of this glittered goat, and in 1936 the figure is expected to go higher.

A man who discovered the virtues of cashmere early is Bernhard Altmann, a Viennese who owns the world's largest cashmere sweater knitting mill in Austria, and who introduced the dressy cashmere sweater in the United States, as well as tone-on-tone cashmères and sweaters and skirts dyed to match.

This authority on the luxury yarn explains that cashmères come from the soft winter underfleeces of the small, short-legged, horned Kashmir goat, whose habitat is chiefly in the upper Himalayan Mountains of Central Asia. These goats are never shorn; instead, the downy underfleeces is plucked or combed out by hand by semi-nomadic Asians who use the valuable goats also for milk and meat.

Some of the cashmere fleece is collected bit by bit from the shrubs on which the animals scratch to rid themselves of their heavy coats during the spring moulting season.

Each goat yields only from two to four ounces of cashmere fleece a year. The annual yield from several animals is needed to make one cashmere sweater, and that of many goats for an overcoat.

Raw cashmere looks little like the soft, beautiful yarn which finally is used in sweaters and fabrics. It arrives in the United States in greasy, four-foot bales. First it must be opened and scoured, to separate the coarse outer fibers and impurities and to remove dirt and grease. Then it is spun, dyed and knitted or woven into sweaters or fabrics.

The natural shades of cashmere are gray, white and brown, with white being the rarest of all and commanding a premium price.

So, by camel, by junk, by steamship and by train the precious fleece finally arrives at mills throughout the world, where it is transformed into the luxury garments that women treasure.

That's why cashmere sweaters are expensive—and why women are willing to pay the price.

Today a woman can be well-dressed for almost any occasion if she has a wardrobe of these fine sweaters—casual ones for sports wear, tailored ones for wear with suits, dressy ones for evening wear.

New techniques make possible many novel weaves and color combinations in cashmere sweaters, which nowadays are highly styled and carefully designed for specific kinds of wear.

MORNING . . . For casual wear, long-sleeved cashmere pullover embroidered motif.

NOON . . . The well-bred tone-on-tone cashmere sweater blouse for wear with a suit.

NIGHT . . . Black cashmères with slit sleeves, boat neck, by Bernhard Altmann.

Grass Roots Opera Company To Give 'Die Fledermaus' At ECC

The national Grass Roots Opera Company will present Johann Strauss' gay and tuneful "Die Fledermaus" (The Bat) at East Carolina College Monday, Jan. 20, in an afternoon performance for school children and a night performance for adults and for high school and college students.

The opera will be given in the McGinnis auditorium on the college campus. Curtain times are 2 p.m. and 8 p.m.

The opera troupe, which has visited Greenville for several seasons, will appear under the sponsorship of the Greenville Music Club. Proceeds of the two performances will be used to increase the scholarship fund maintained by the organization to benefit students of music.

"Die Fledermaus" will be sung here in English. It has long been a favorite because of its gay picture of Viennese life and its lilting melodies. Written by "The Waltz King," it is being offered this season in a "Sparkling production" by the Grass Roots Company and will be sung here by a group of talented young members of the troupe, including Dan Merriman, baritone, and Ariene Saunders, soprano.

The Grass Roots Opera Company, which has its home-base in this state, is now in its ninth season. As the name implies the group, in tours of this state and in national tours, takes opera to small towns and colleges "down where the people are."

Tickets for the night performances at East Carolina may be obtained in advance from Dan E. Vornholt, Music Department, East Carolina College. Prices for students are 75c and for adults, $1.25.

What's Smallpox?

By DOROTHY V. WHIFFLE, M.D.

"I have never heard of anyone having smallpox," said Mrs. Wentworth. "Why must Joana be vaccinated? Isn't vaccination just a hangover from the past and needless in our modern world?"

"Indeed it's not needless," I said, but before I could go on she said:

"You know, sometimes I think you doctors just enjoy sticking needles into children!"

I didn't even bother to answer that last sally, though I've heard it many times in the past.

Smallpox is a solved medical problem. It is true you almost never hear of a case of this dreaded disease these days, but this is only because everyone has been vaccinated against smallpox. If we stopped vaccination we might easily have an epidemic of smallpox.

There are a few states which do not require vaccination and in these states cases of smallpox occur with persistent regularity year after year.

Once Common

In these days it is difficult to believe that smallpox was once as common as measles. For centuries, though, in Europe and Asia smallpox was one of the greatest scourges of the earth. Before the days of vaccination scarcely five persons out of 100 escaped it and about a quarter of those taking the disease died of it, of those who did recover, many were left blind or disfigured.

Although smallpox devastated the Old World it seems not to have existed in the Western Hemisphere before the advent of the white man. The Spaniard brought the Indian smallpox. According to the somewhat fragmentary evidence we have the mortality among the American Indians due to smallpox reduced their numbers almost by half.

Smallpox is a disease that attacks all mankind regardless of race, color, sex or economic standing. Unlike many other diseases good hygiene and sanitation make relatively little difference. Smallpox spares neither rich nor poor, the clean or the dirty, the wise or the foolish, the good or the bad. It has counted many kings and queens among its victims. But indiscriminate as is its initial attack seldom does it attack the same person twice.

Vaccination

But it isn't necessary to have smallpox in order to acquire a lasting resistance against the disease. Edward Jenner back in 1796 demonstrated conclusively that an attack of the very mild disease cowpox gave as good an immunity to smallpox as did the disease itself. It was years before Jenner's work was universally accepted but finally mass vaccinations were done with such extraordinarily wonderful results that now most states in the USA require vaccination before a child may attend school.

There is no reason to wait until school age before a child is vaccinated. There is every reason to give him protection from infancy on. It is only at school entrance that public health authorities can reach every child. But it is recommended that all children be vaccinated during their first year of life. It is only in this way that we can prevent an epidemic of smallpox from once again devastating our land.

Early Protection

Have your children vaccinated in infancy, and have it repeated when they enter school. This is enough protection unless they go to some place where there is greater risk than in most of America.

The reaction to vaccination is very mild, especially in children. Many have no reaction at all. A few will show a slight fever and a little indisposition about a week after the vaccination was done. The scar of a well-done vaccination is small and inconspicuous. Parents often do not like to see even the tiny bluish on the arm of a little girl. If vaccination is done in early infancy before a child pulls to his feet, it can be done on the foot—where the scar will certainly never be noticed.

Mrs. Barbar Speaks At Chapel Program

By JANICE LAUGHTER

Milton Reece's eighth grade homeroom presented Mrs. Lunette Barbar as speaker for their chapel program on January 10. She gave a talk on the natural resources of North Carolina. Mrs. Barbar showed some enlarged photographs of wild animals which were very realistic.

Junior High students are campaigning for the March of Dimes and there is a close race between some of the rooms. Competition is keen because the room which turns in the greatest amount of money will receive a half holiday from school.

Thrilled Over Record

The whole school is thrilled over the wonderful record of the basketball team. Coach Reece is doing a wonderful job with the boys. So far the team has won six games and lost none. This is a record that we hope to keep.

Six East Carolina College students are doing their student teaching in Junior High this quarter. Miss Jean Mitchell, Miss Eleanor Pierce, Jacky Wilkins and Robert Caudell are teaching in the eighth grade. Miss Millie Deans, Miss Frances Folk, Miss Annette Gurley, and Dwight Smith are working with the seventh grade.

Studying Constitution

Mrs. Irma S. Worthington's seventh grade class has been studying the United States Constitution. The class had a contest to see who could find the President's cabinet. Pat Carter and Linda Ferris both were winners of the contest.

DELAYED WINGS

DENVER (AP)—Barbara Jane Bickley, 20, got the airline stewardess job her mother was supposed to get.

She received her wings from United Air Lines and was assigned to Los Angeles. Watching her get the wings were her father, Mervin P. Bickley of New York, a 23-year veteran with UAL, and Mrs. Bickley.

In 1935 a young woman walked into Bickley's office to ask for a position as stewardess. After talking with her, Bickley set out to convince her she would much prefer matrimony. Five months later they were married.

When Barbara Jane was born in 1937, Bickley's boss, Harold Crary, then a UAL vice president, wrote a letter to him offering his daughter "a position as stewardess in 1957."

Crary, now retired, was on hand with the proud parents to see Barbara Jane win her wings.

Parsonage Improvement

Home Demonstration Club women in Dare County's Stumpy Point club took it upon themselves to take as a club project the improvement of the Methodist parsonage in their community.

It seems that several months ago the parsonage was badly damaged in a storm, and since that time the Stumpy Point club has been raising money to do the repair work.

According to Home Agent Fran Alexander, the living room has been re-done. New baseboards and moldings were installed, the floors refinished and the room painted.

No Barrier For Them

The county line between Washington and Beaufort counties has proved to be no barrier to the home demonstration club women in the Wenona community, according to reports from Frances M. Darden, home agent.

Mrs. Darden explains that the families in the community have combined their efforts with Beaufort County families in building a new community building for use of both communities.

To celebrate the completion of the building, both clubs held a joint turkey supper—with all the

Reading Program Grows

Bertie County's Home Demonstration reading program is an excellent example of how the Rural Reading Program is progressing in North Carolina.

According to Home Agent Lenora Crouser, club members in the county have reported reading a total of 681 books during 1957. More than 175 books have been added to home libraries, while members have subscribed to 371 magazines and 184 newspapers.

Mrs. D. T. Baker, County Education leader, Ferrysville, has been commended for the excellent job she is doing to encourage a better reading program in the county. Mrs. Mary B. Bickers, Director of the Albemarle Regional Library, said recently, "For the past several years Mrs. Baker has kept a deposit of books from the bookmobile in her home, not only for home demonstration reading, but also for general community use." Mrs. Bickers further stated that Mrs. Baker "has encouraged reading in Ferrysville among both adults and children until it is now the most active book station in this region. Over 700 books were read there last year. With her enthusiasm and interest in people, she is performing a real service. I only wish I had someone in every community who would take the interest she does in encouraging reading."

Where's The Curb Market?

"Where's The Home Demonstration Curb Market?" is a question often asked by tourists, interested visitors, or newcomers to Marion County, according to reports from Mrs. Florence Sherrill, home agent.

Mrs. Sherrill explains that the seven home demonstration club members who sell regularly on the curb market are apologetic that the market is partially hidden between the Agricultural Building on Church Street and the Nantahala Power Company building on Main Street, since once upon a time the market had a choice location on Main Street.

But in spite of their less desirable location twenty years after it was first organized, sellers still find eager customers looking for the first spears of asparagus in early April, the compact dark green broccoli, and the half pints of wild strawberries.

Citizenship Workshops

Three Citizenship workshops highlighted home demonstration activities in recent weeks in Clay County. These workshops, conducted by Mrs. Theta Barnard, International Relations chairman for the Clay County Council, have been on the theme "Imperatives for Peace."

Home Agent Velma B. Moore pointed out that club members have as a result of these workshops decided on some practical methods for furthering the cause of citizenship.

Their planned activities include: support of the school program, giving citizenship awards for the best eighth grade citizen in each of the four Clay County schools; support of 4-H Future Farmers of America, and Future Homemakers of America programs and activities by giving help as community leaders in working on projects and records; support of all missionary efforts, by encouraging young people to become missionaries in the fields of economics, medicine, agriculture, and other professions available in cooperation with Christian teaching; and continued support of all community drives.

WALTERBORO, S. C. (AP)—Your mail delivery been slow lately?

Mrs. Sidney Hill Jr., enroute with her three small children to Walterboro, suddenly remembered she'd left her cook stove burning at home.

She was 15 miles from home and there was no telephone service there, although her husband was at home.

Mrs. Hill's solution: A postal card, written and deposited at a branch post office, telling her husband to turn off the stove.

The card was delivered and the heat was off within one hour, says Postmaster B. George Price III.

Bridge Winners

BETHEL—On Thursday afternoon when Mrs. W. C. Whitehurst entertained her bridge club, there were eight members present. At the end of the third progression, Mrs. W. M. Mizell was awarded high score prize and Mrs. Z. V. Bunting was awarded low score prize.

After the game, a short business session was held after which fruit salad, sandwiches and drinks were served.

Bridge Club Party

ROBERSONVILLE—Greenery and red berries were used to decorate the South Main Street home of Mrs. Charles L. Wilson Jr. when she entertained her bridge club Thursday evening.

The hostess greeted her friends at the door and invited them into the living room where the two tables were set up for cards. During the play checkers, salted nuts and cold drinks were served.

When the scores were tallied, Mrs. Robert James received the high award and Mrs. Hilton Carson won the second prize. Coffee and brownies topped with whipped cream were served.

Mrs. R. L. Carr delightfully entertained the End of the Century Club at her home on the corner of Fourth and Pitt Streets last Tuesday afternoon. There were 14 members present and one visitor, Mrs. Woodley of Suffolk, guest of Mrs. J. L. Hassell. At the conclusion of the regular routine of business, Mrs. Carr read a very instructive paper on "Modern Movement for Public Health." She reported that she had asked Dr. Malcolm Thompson to address the club on a similar subject at some future date and he had consented to do so. The hostess, assisted by her daughter, Miss Elizabeth Carr, served a salad course which was greatly relished by her guests.

Food Habits Changing During Years

RALEIGH—It's a well-known fact that a change in diet and eating habits over the past several years has brought about new trends in food. According to Ruby P. Uzzle and George Abshier, Agricultural Extension Service consumer marketing specialists, "higher, incomes, improved marketing 'know how,' more wives working away from home, lack of domestic help and more time spent away from home by the family have made these changes necessary."

Just what are some of the new food habits that have shown up in recent years? Reports from Abshier and Mrs. Uzzle show that today we have a year-round supply of fresh vegetables and fruits—something that hasn't always been true. Our consumption of starches such as potatoes, cereals and flour breads has decreased, being replaced by fresh fruits and vegetables.

The new year that lies ahead will reveal other trends. New foods will come into focus. Several new products have been developed recently which are or soon will be available on the market.

Besides the many new products, shoppers will find many foods in new types of packages as well as in different forms, designed to save time while shopping, for convenience to shoppers, to make meal preparation easier and to give price economy when buying.

Perhaps the biggest noticeable trend in foods during the last few years, say the specialists, has been the increasing cost of food we buy. Actually the cost of the food itself has risen little, if any, during the last five years. What has increased is the cost of the services we get when buying food. This is the main reason why retail prices of many foods rise while farm prices fall.

"Keep in mind, however," explains Abshier, "that although food prices have been going up due to increased services, food is still a bargain."

Members voted to change their meetings to the second Thursday at 3 p.m.

The president announced that the March 13 meeting would be a dutch luncheon. Mrs. Hugh Longino of Texarkana, Arkansas, was special guest for the afternoon.

Hostesses were Mrs. Bartlett, Mrs. John Barrett, Mrs. F. P. Brooks, Mrs. Jack Carson, and Mrs. Sellers Crisp.

Presbyterian Young Adults Hold Social, Elect Officers

The Young Adult Sunday School Class of the First Presbyterian Church held their annual Progressive Supper Friday night at various members' homes.

The main course was served at the new home of Dr. and Mrs. G. E. Trevathan Jr. in Sheraton Place and consisted of a variety of dishes prepared by class members.

The supper began at 6:30 at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Allen Jr. with appetizers of chilled tomato juice, cheese dip, and assorted tid-bits.

Following the main course, the social progressed to the home of Mr. and Mrs. T. L. Broadrick. Mrs. Broadrick and Mrs. Linwood Stoneham were hostesses for the dessert course of coconut and chocolate cake with coffee.

A short business session was conducted by outgoing class President Harry Allen Jr. in which election of new officers headed the agenda. Nominating Committee Chairman G. E. Trevathan Jr. submitted the following slate which was elected by acclamation: President, Mrs. T. L. Broadrick; vice-president, Max E. Joyner; secretary, Mrs. Linwood Stoneham; and treasurer, Charles Watson.

Fred Webb, class teacher, was recognized for his faithful service and was presented with a gift of appreciation for his devotion to the class and for his lessons and Bible studies.

Thirty-nine class members and five guests attended the social which climaxed the group's activities for the year 1957. Guests were Dr. and Mrs. J. B. Joyce, Mr. and Mrs. Joe Clark, and Miss Connie Priest. Dr. Joyce is interim pastor of the First Presbyterian Church in Greenville and comes from the United Churches of Canada. The Clarks are newcomers to Greenville, and Miss Priest is an East Carolina College student.

Bold Experiment In Government

Gov. Hodges' bold experiment in government in North Carolina could be the beginning of a new pattern for actions of chief executives; or it could be a flash-in-the-pan, quickly forgotten when his term of office ends.

Since coming to office following the death of the late Gov. Umstead, Gov. Hodges has set his sights on bringing more business practices and greater efficiency into operations of the state government.

Part of this plan has been his policy of sweeping clean state boards responsible for important policy-making and administrative decisions in our governmental framework. In an abrupt departure from actions of his predecessors, Gov. Hodges is dismissing his political friends as well as political enemies in changing board memberships. He is sacrificing continuity of action between old and new boards in his push for greater government efficiency.

These actions by North Carolina's businessman-governor have confounded veteran political leaders through the state. Indeed, it has caused confusion among the people of the state who are anxious for greater government efficiency, yet perplexed by the governor's forthright attempts to gain this efficiency.

Whether the next two years will provide sufficient time for Gov. Hodges' plan of a more businesslike government to prove itself is a matter of conjecture. The answer to that question may well determine whether Gov. Hodges' plan will be largely retained or discarded by the next occupant of the governor's office. It may well determine whether the bold experiment becomes an accepted practice in North Carolina government, or whether the state returns to its former method of conducting its government business.

Full Investigation Of ASC Seems In Order

Swelling Congressional protests over actions of the State Agriculture Stabilization and Conservation Committee is indicative of the discontent and confusion over the agency's operations in many parts of North Carolina.

Sen. Kerr Scott's demand for an investigation of dismissal of the Rockingham County ASC committee, and threatened dismissal of the Halifax County committee kicked off the official protests. Now Representatives Cooley, Scott and Lennon have joined in the demands for an investigation.

So long as the farmers in parts of North Carolina are confused over policies of the ASC organization, or so long as they are at odds with such policies, the ASC program cannot render the service it should or achieve the purposes for which it is intended. There is a great deal of discontent among farmers in many parts of North Carolina over the administration of the ASC program. Apparently the situation stems from the fact that county committees and the state committee have been at odds on policies and manners of administering those policies.

Any investigation instituted by the Department of Agriculture or by members of North Carolina's Congressional delegation should deal with the whole scope of relationships between the state and county ASC committees. It should not be confined to the relationships between the state and the county committees of Rockingham and Halifax.

No Statewide Primary Ballot

By LYNN NISBET
ELECTION — Unless one of the three members of the Supreme Court has opposition, or a vacancy occurs in some executive office by reason of death or resignation, there will be no statewide primary ballot in 1958.

Terms of Chief Justice Wallace Winborne and Associate Justices Emery B. Denny and Carlisle Higgins end at midnight December 31, 1958. Candidates for these positions must be nominated in the Democratic primary, either by majority vote of the people or certification as unopposed by the State Board of Elections. The new term will be for eight years, ending December 31, 1966.

Terms of 10 Superior Court Judges also run out with the year 1958. Candidates for these positions will be nominated in their own districts, but voted upon by the whole state in November. The judges whose terms expire, the district and the counties in which they must be nominated are as follows:

- Judge Joseph W. Parker, 6th district — Bertie, Halifax, Hertford and Northampton.
- Judge William Y. Bickett, 10th district — Wake county.
- Judge Clawson L. Williams, 11th district — Harnett, Johnston and Lee.
- Judge Frank M. Armstrong, 19th district — Cabarrus, Montgomery, Randolph and Rowan.
- Judge Don Phillips, 20th district — Anson, Moore, Richmond, Stanly and Union.
- Judge Walter E. Johnson Jr., 21st district — Forsyth.
- Judge J. A. Rousseau, 23rd district — Alleghany, Ashe, Wilkes and Yadkin.
- Judge Zeb V. Nettles, 28th district — Buncombe.
- Judge J. W. Pless Jr., 29th district — Henderson, McDowell, Polk, Rutherford, Transylvania.
- Judge Dan K. Moore, 30th district — Cherokee, Clay, Graham, Haywood, Jackson, Macon and Swain.

FILL-INS — In addition to these full term terms there are presently two fill-in judicial elections. Judge James C. Farthing, appointed last June as resident judge in the 25th district, succeeding Judge J. C. Rutledge, resigned, must face election for the unexpired term ending December 31, 1962. His district embraces Burke, Caldwell and Catawba counties.

Heman Clark, appointed last week to succeed Judge Quincy K. Nimocks Jr., retired in the 12th district also must stand for election for the remainder of the term until December, 1962, in Cumberland and Hoke counties.

Several other Superior Court Judges are eligible for retirement and by next fall there may be other fill-in elections.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY — The 120 members of the House of Representatives in the Legislature are distributed as follows: Guilford and Mecklenburg have four each; Buncombe, Forsyth and Wake have three each; Cabarrus, Cumberland, Durham, Gaston, Johnston, Pitt, Robeson and Rowan have two each. The other 87 counties have one member each in the House.

The 50 members of the State Senate are apportioned among 33 districts, each embracing from one to eight counties. There are seven one county districts in which one senator is nominated and elected. They are Buncombe, Forsyth, Gaston, Guilford, Mecklenburg, Pitt and Robeson. There are three districts with two counties and two senators, and either by law or agreement, each county has one. These are Edgecombe-Halifax, Johnston - Wayne, Cabarrus-Rowan. Four other counties in districts of three or more, by agreement get a senator every time. These are Cleveland, Iredell, Durham and Wake.

That makes 17 counties entitled by statute or agreement to a full senator.

ROTATION — By agreement among party organizations there are several instances of alternate or rotating representation, with varying terms as to tenure. The counties which will elect senators this year under such agreements are Vance, Nash, Franklin, Duplin, New Hanover, Brunswick, Columbus, Harnett, Moore, Chatham, Granville, Caswell, Alamance, Montgomery, Richmond, Stanly, Union, Surry, Lincoln, McDowell, Alexander, Alleghany, Transylvania and Cherokee.

There are five multi-county districts with no official agreement as to rotation, but in most instances there is a sort of informal understanding that representation will be shifted around among the counties.

These districts, with counties and numbers of senators are: First, embracing Bertie, Camden, Chowan, Currituck, Gates, Hertford, Pasquotank and Perquimans. Two senators, with a sort of understanding that one should come from east and one from west of the Chowan river. Incumbents come from Hertford and Pasquotank.

Second district, embracing Beaufort, Dare, Hyde, Martin, Pamlico, Tyrrell and Washington. Two senators, with tacit understanding that Beaufort-Martin should have one, the other five counties one. Incumbents are from Martin and Washington.

Seventh district — Carteret, Craven, Greene, Jones, Lenoir and Onslow. Two senators, no agreement. Incumbents are from Carteret and Lenoir.

Twenty-fourth district, embracing Davie, Yadkin and Wilkes. One senator. No formal agreement but understanding that representation would rotate. This is a certain Republican district. Incumbent is from Wilkes, previous member from Davie, indicating Yadkin might furnish the senator this time.

Thirtieth district — Avery, Madison, Mitchell and Yancey. One senator. Tacit understanding for rotation. Incumbent comes from Mitchell. Previous member from Avery.

The Subliminal Whirl Goes On

By ELMER ROESSNER
The dizzy over subliminal advertising grows dizzy. There hasn't been any commercial subliminal advertising yet. But James M. Vicary, who has introduced the technique, has been subjected to more abuse than a moon-struck cat at midnight.

Magazines, heavy thinkers and writers-to-the-editor have denounced it. A bill to prohibit it will probably be introduced in Congress, if that hasn't been done already. Subliminal advertising, as was reported here last year when it was first made public, consists of flashing messages on television or movie screens so fast the viewers are not aware of having seen them. The word, incidentally, comes from the Latin limen, meaning "threshold." Subliminal advertising is done below the threshold of awareness.

When experimental messages saying "eat popcorn" and "drink Coca Cola" were flashed on a screen in a New Jersey movie, sales of those items rose. Mr. Vicary has set up a company to produce this kind of advertising. So far, many inquire, no sales.

But the abuse continues. Minds have been "broken and entered." "The New Yorker" charged. Consumer Reports registered fears that people will no longer be able to govern themselves and hinted that people might be driven crazy by conflicting claims for two toothpastes. The National Association of Radio and Television Broadcasters has asked members to forbid subliminal advertising. A Los Angeles businessman, writing to Business Week, suggested Mr. Vicary "be shot out of hand."

Shooting Mr. Vicary won't change a thing. What critics ignore is the fact there has been subliminal advertising for a long, long time.

Other Editors Saying --- Opinions In Brief

IN SMALL EASTERN TOWNS (Goldsboro News-Argus)
Wade Lucas tells in his current "N.C. Industrial News Letter" of the happy operation of a sports shirtwear plant at Garland, in Sampson County.

Garland brought in the plant to occupy a building its business erected after the firm for which the structure was erected went out of business. The community celebrated its pleasure in its new plant with a sort of celebration recently.

Garland is a village of about 800. The plant employs about 200 workers and its payroll is approximately $30,000 a month. Lucas' report on Garland suggests that the smaller communities of Eastern North Carolina are finding increasing favor with garment manufacturers.

A comparative newcomer to this activity is Middlesex, in Nash County. This town is smaller than Garland, but its garment factory has greatly increased production and employment already.

Spring Hope, Zebulon, Warsaw, Turkey and a growing number of smaller towns now have plants which give employment to hundreds of women.

The steady growth of this industry bids fair to make Eastern North Carolina one of the important areas for garment making in the United States.

Coexistence' Theme Stressed

By CONSTANTINE BROWN
WASHINGTON — There is mounting evidence that the rulers of Soviet Russia intend to push harder for "coexistence" despite the chilly reception they have been getting from Secretary of State Dulles.

Reliable observers in the Soviet capital are convinced that the Kremlin bosses, whatever their reasons, are determined to leave no stone unturned in their campaign to work out some softening agreement with the West. Part of their strategy, of course, is to represent to the world that only American intransigence, in the person of Secretary Dulles, is blocking a sweet-and-light accord that would give the people of the world some respite from the terror of nuclear warfare.

The Russian leaders believe, apparently, that they can bring enough pressure to bear on the NATO nations to force the stubborn Mr. Dulles to permit negotiations. They also are confident that the terms Mr. Dulles has suggested as a basis for serious negotiations — the reunification of Germany and an inspection system for arms control — can be ignored if enough agitation in the free world succeeds in forcing summit negotiations.

There is absolutely no possibility that Moscow will yield either on the German question or on the arms inspection proposals. But they are prepared to make some superficial, seemingly important but actually meaningless, concessions as window dressing for the buildup. One step has already been taken in that direction — the demobilization of a small part of the U.S. Red Army, a step that is actually without importance since the Communist army is far and away the largest in the world, and the age of the satellite and the guide missile has already made huge land armies less meaningful.

Mr. Dulles, President Eisenhower, and the top administration policymakers involved are fully aware of the Russian strategy. They do not propose to be fooled by it. In consequence, the Dulles policy has been to remain adamant, to yield nothing, and to increase pressure on our restless European allies to join

Strength For Today

By EARL L. DOUGLASS
TURN TROUBLE INTO BLESSING
Everybody knows of the awful scourge of rabbits in Australia. For some generations after the original settlers landed in that nether continent, it appeared that rabbits would win the day, eating crops as fast as the farmers panted them. In desperation the farmers contrived every possible method of extermination. But the rabbits did not seem to diminish in number.

At last, someone had the happy idea of switching the rabbits over from the liability side of the ledger to the asset side. Many people regard rabbit meat as quite delicious. And knowing this the farmers forthwith began killing the rabbits and canning the meat. This has gone on until the production of rabbit meat on a huge scale has become a profitable national industry in Australia. Now, the faster rabbits breed the better. What was once a curse has been turned into a blessing.

This illustrates the capacity some people have for turning trouble into advantage. Helen Keller is certainly one of the most remarkable persons in the world today, and this is true not in spite of her blindness and inability to hear but because of these afflictions which ordinarily become great handicaps. All her other senses have been sharpened and her whole nature deepened by her trouble.

People of ordinary spirit and nature let trouble kill them. People who are tough, invincible, and filled with God's spirit turn trouble into blessing.

Another Ride?

Lament For Corn Bread

In this day and time of the instant coffee, instant mashed potatoes and canned what-ever-you-want, old-fashioned corn bread is fast slipping out of existence. After years of prominence on the Southern table, this blessed delight is no longer the pride and joy of the young housewife. Now it is much easier to unwrap a package of ready-made biscuits or tear the cellophane from a pack of rolls.

The failure of cornbread to hold its universal place on the Southern table is symbolic of our changing times. No too many years ago the young struggling housewife would not have given a thought to the idea of preparing a meal without it. Its place among the vitals was respected. Nobody, just nobody, found a laden table, laden with-out cornbread.

Who would think of sopping ham gravy and sorghum molasses with a cornstick or a hush puppy? When you get down to the hard basic facts, only flour-bread and sourmilk biscuits, can possibly rival cornbread when it comes to this bit of eating. I for one am in favor of restoring cornbread back to its original prominent place on the Southern table and leaving those instant receipts on the grocery shelves. After all, who wants to eat a hard fried corn herring early in the morning with a piece of loaf bread or a canned biscuit.

He Saw Movies Change

By HAL BOYLE
NEW YORK (AP) — David Selznick today offered Hollywood an answer to its problems. "The solution is to pray," he said grimly.

The veteran producer feels 400 many movie makers will not rate the extent of the revolution free television inspired in the motion picture industry, and are unprepared for the next revolution — toll television.

Selznick, who turned out two of the top 10 box office draws in "Gone With the Wind" and "Duel in the Sun," feels he has a candidate for his third Academy Award in "Farewell to Arms." He spent more than four million dollars dramatizing the Ernest Hemingway classic — his first film in nine years.

"Increasingly, the future will lie in the big film," said Selznick, a big man fond of big gestures.

"The economics of the industry has become such that it can't afford to make average pictures any more. They can't compete with free TV offerings.

"It isn't enough to say that bigness alone will do, however. There is a gigantic market for picture epics, but the mediocre product, large or small, no longer has a chance.

"The public is desperately anxious for what it wants to see — but what it wants to see is quality."

Pacing up and down his hotel suite in a gray flannel bathrobe — half a block off Madison Ave. — the producer continued: "You used to be able to produce 'X' number of pictures, and a large profit on a few. It was like packaging sardines.

"It was an industry then. It isn't now. Today you're in show business.

"The next revolution will be pay TV, when a picture may take in as much as 10 million dollars in a single night. And theater owners, instead of fighting pay TV as they did free TV, had better start moving in on it now to get their share. Otherwise, they'll suffer greatly."

Selznick at 29 was executive vice president of RKO Studio and grinding out about a picture a week. He has made about 40 films since becoming an independent producer. "After I decided the assembly line stuff was nonsense."

He says he now has two things in mind when he considers making a new film: "First, will it have worldwide appeal, and, second, is it something I can really do? You have to love something before you can do it well."

Selznick believes the public has little knowledge of the international aspects of the movie making now.

"Too many people don't know that the motion picture industry would evaporate if it weren't for the foreign markets," he said. "You have to aim at Tokyo as well as Tallahassee."

Selznick feels the public is hungry for new favorites, and there will never be as many stars as the public is willing to support. "There are many skyrocketers in this field, but few stars," he said. "The personalities come and go, but it isn't more than once a year that a true star emerges, one who will endure for 20 or 30 years — the real test of stardom."

It has been estimated that the world public has paid more than a billion dollars to see Selznick's pictures. Chary of naming the greatest star active today — "after all I have to deal with these people" — the producer had no hesitation in naming his all-time candidates for top rank.

"There has never been anybody to equal Chaplin," he said, "and nobody to equal Garbo."

Pres. Jimenez Survives Crisis, Changes Cabinet

CARACAS, Venezuela (AP)—President Marcos Perez Jimenez appeared today to have skinned through another crisis as he revamped his Cabinet for the second time in four days. But more street violence indicated Venezuela's troubles were not over. Perez Jimenez changed three more Cabinet posts in the wake of his ouster of Gen. Romulo Fernandez from the Defense Ministry. Meanwhile, police and troops scattered antigovernment student demonstrators in downtown Caracas with machetes and tear gas. Demands for restoration of civil liberties increased. The capital was under heavy guard. Police, troops, armored cars and tanks ringed the presidential palace. Inside the building soldiers patrolled the corridors with automatic rifles. In the latest shakeup, Perez Jimenez switched Gen. Luis Felipe Llovera Paez from the Interior Ministry he took over last Friday back to his former post as communications minister. The interior job went to Antonio Perez Vivas, ex-governor of the Andean state of Tachira. Gen. Nestor Prato was removed as education minister and given the key post of chief of the general staff. The education portfolio went to Dr. Humberto Fernandez Moran, director of the Venezuelan Neurological and Brain Research Institute. Perez Jimenez took over the defense ministry himself from Fernandez, who was reported to have plotted the President's overthrow. The national radio announced tersely that Fernandez had left the country on an official mission. The ousted minister arrived in the Dominican Republic. He said he was on an official mission to inspect arms and troops in the neighboring nation. (Listeners in Bogota, Colombia, picked up what appeared to be a rebel broadcast from northern Venezuela calling on employees in the oil industry and other workers to go on strike.) As the palace changes took place, hundreds of students surged into El Silencio Plaza (Silence Square) and began heckling armed soldiers and police.

Thousands Of Words Are Devoted To Trying Arrange Summit Meeting

By JAMES MARLOW Associated Press News Analyst WASHINGTON (AP)—This is an A-B-C on the thousands of words President Eisenhower and Russian Premier Bulganin wrote each other in the past month. Their subject: How to have a summit conference to talk peace and disarmament. A conference still looks far off because they don't agree on how to have it. Bulganin wants a meeting at the top, period. Eisenhower is cool towards it unless there is adequate preparation. For example: a meeting of foreign ministers. But this is a basic stumbling block to any agreement on disarmament: This country insists there must first be agreement on a foolproof inspection system to prevent cheating. The Russians haven't agreed. Bulganin wrote Eisenhower Dec. 10 and again Jan. 9. The second letter covered pretty much the same ground as the first, with a few additions. Eisenhower's letter, delivered to Moscow Jan. 12, was a reply to Bulganin's first letter. Bulganin insisted Dec. 10: The United States, Britain and Russia should refrain from using nuclear weapons; the United States and its European NATO allies should sign a nonaggression pact with Russia and its satellites in the Warsaw alliance; the United States and Russia should pledge themselves not to interfere in the Middle East and to renounce the use of force to settle Middle East problems; and the United States and Russia should sign a treaty of friendship and cooperation. Eisenhower replied: All those points were already implicitly agreed to in the charter of the United Nations in which the United States, Russia and all the others are members. If all sides lived up to the charter, there'd be no problem. Bulganin proposed: The United States, Britain and Russia suspend nuclear tests for two or three years; a substantial cut in armed forces and armaments; a complete ban on nuclear weapons; discontinuance of their manufacture; destruction of nuclear stockpiles. Eisenhower said he'd go along on all these — and even suggested an indefinite suspension of nuclear tests — if it was a tremendous if. He'd go along, Eisenhower said, if there was a foolproof inspection system. These are Bulganin proposals which Eisenhower didn't answer: 1. Withdrawal of foreign armed forces from the territories of all countries. (This would require the United States to abandon all those overseas bases used for its bomber fleets which are this country's best deterrent against Russian aggression.) 2. Scrap the present NATO and Warsaw alliances and substitute a collective security agreement. (This would mean breaking up of this country's alliances with its NATO partners, alliances it has worked long and hard to preserve as a defense against Russia.) 3. A curb on the "present propaganda" in press and radio. Bulganin also suggested: 1. No nuclear weapons be placed in East or West Germany or in Poland or Czechoslovakia. (This country wants West Germany armed as a vital part of Western defense.) Eisenhower replied that keeping such a small area de-nuclearized wouldn't mean much since Bulganin himself had pointed out that no country anywhere, large or small, is any longer safe from destruction by missiles. 2. Restoration of normal trade between this country and Russia. Eisenhower said this was all right with him so long as the trade did not include materials that could be used for war-making. Then Eisenhower proposed steps Bulganin didn't mention in his Dec. 10 letter: Strengthening the U.N. by eliminating the American and Russian veto against the Security Council's efforts to settle disputes peacefully (he pointed out Russia has used the veto 32 times in the U.N.); an agreement to use outer space only for peaceful purposes; measures to prevent surprise attacks. And Eisenhower suggested two steps which Russia almost certainly wouldn't buy. He proposed the Soviets let Germany be reunited and permit the satellites, all now with Communist governments, to have free elections to choose their governments. In his Jan. 9 letter Bulganin mentioned the proposal against surprise attack made by Eisenhower. The Russian suggested aerial inspection for a distance of up to 500 miles behind the front lines of both sides' military forces. But in this same Jan. 9 letter Bulganin made his ideas about a summit conference look more like a frolic or jamboree than a serious meeting by suggesting that almost every European head of state take part, along with the leaders of India, Egypt, Afghanistan and Red China.

Frightened Cop-Killer Turns Self In To FBI

CHICAGO (AP)—A panicky gunman—hunted by nearly every cop in the city for the slaying of a fellow patrolman—surrendered to the FBI last night, saying he feared he "was going to be shot on sight." George Starcevic, 23, his hair combed carefully into a ducktail, turned himself in to the FBI and then was turned over to Chicago police. When newsmen asked about his surrender, he snarled: "Do you know how hot them streets are?" All day long, the streets were alive with patrols searching for Starcevic, implicated by a companion in the fatal shooting of Patrolman John Quirk, 23, early yesterday. Starcevic's companion Nick LaPapa Jr., 23, was seized at a hospital where he sought medical attention for a hand injury he said he suffered when he broke a pitcher. Police said he later admitted the wound was inflicted in the Quirk slaying and implicated Starcevic. From admissions by Starcevic and LaPapa, police constructed this account: The pair forced their way into Quirk's parked car on the near North side and got into the back seat. They forced the off-duty patrolman and his date Caroline Smith, 18, a student of modeling, to give up money and jewels. When LaPapa ordered Quirk to drive around the neighborhood and pull into an alley. In an apparently desperate gambit, to foil the gunmen, Quirk rammed his car into a parked car, whipped out a pistol and started shooting. The gunmen returned fire and Quirk slumped down, mortally wounded. Miss Smith, a willowy brunette who came to Chicago from Mount Vernon, Ill., identified LaPapa and Starcevic at police headquarters. She said she recognized one by his voice, the other by sight. "I'm sorry it happened," LaPapa said. "Yeah, I'm sorry too," muttered Starcevic. Miss Smith, in a voice scarcely above a whisper, replied, "That won't do any good."

Order Study Of ASC Operations

WASHINGTON, N. C. (AP)—Operations of the North Carolina Agriculture Stabilization and Conservation (ASC) Committee will be studied by a U.S. Department of Agriculture official. Sen. W. Kerr Scott (D-NC), who had asked for the probe, was informed yesterday that it will be made by H. L. Manwaring, deputy administrator of the Commodity Stabilization Service. Removal from office of the Rockingham County ASC Committee and suspension of two Halifax County committee members prompted Scott last week to ask Agriculture Secretary Benson for an investigation of the North Carolina state committee. "I'm glad Secretary Benson has decided to look into this mess himself right away," commented Scott. "I am certain that if he moves right in and gets the facts, things will be straightened out in the future." The Tar Heel senator said he was sure Benson "won't stand for what's been going on in North Carolina." Disputes over employment of ASC county managers have brought criticism on the North Carolina state committee. Sen. Scott said he has received "numerous letters and telegrams" since he asked for the investigation. The messages, he added, gave "additional information about how the state committee has been operating. It is almost unbelievable."

Season Near End For Duck, Geese

The season for hunting doves ended last Friday. These birds were reported by game protectors and hunters to be more plentiful this season, "but just as hard to kill." Some hunters get their limit of doves in an hour, and some use two boxes of shells and then do not get the limit. The open season for hunting ducks and geese will close Wednesday (January 15). The open season for hunting rabbits, quail and wild turkeys will close February 10. The trapping season for muskrat, opossum, otter and raccoon closes January 31.

Illustrate History Through Dance

GRIMESLAND—"A History of Man Through Dance" was presented for Pitt County's Negro school teachers at a county-wide teachers' meeting last week at the Pitt County Training School. The dance program, sponsored by Social Studies and Music teachers, included dances that have been originated since 1492. Included were an Indian dance by third graders, the Virginia Reel by seventh, eighth and ninth graders, a Square Dance and a modern dance. The last two were performed by high school students. It was also announced at the meeting that the Pitt County Training School has received science equipment and an estimated $300 worth of books for the library.

Lodge Assisting In Fund Drive

Members of Greenville Lodge 885, Loyal Order of Moose, are participating in a drive that has already raised more than $25,000 for the families of two Highway Patrolmen who were killed in the line of duty. The funds will be turned over to the families of patrolmen Walter Lee Reese and James Thomas Brown, both of whom were killed November 5 while attempting to arrest a speeding motorist, Frank Wetzel, a native of New York state, was sentenced to life imprisonment last week for the death of Reese. Neither of the two patrolmen were members of the Moose. The drive, however, has already drawn a special commendation from the Moose's Supreme Lodge Headquarters.

Optometrists Attend Session

RALEIGH — Drs. K.L. Quiggins and Dr. Sam White of Greenville were among more than 50 optometrists who participated in a contact lens seminar here Sunday under sponsorship of the North Carolina State Optometric Society. The educational session featured lectures by Dr. Joe Goldberg of Norfolk, Va., a specialist in the contact lens field. Others who took part in the program were Dr. M. Katzin of Jacksonville, Dr. Howard T. Lewis of Durham and Dr. James Rowland of Oxford. The adaptation of contact lens to solve vision problems has spread widely in the optometric profession in recent years. Contact lenses often are used in cases where conventional lenses are not suitable.

W. Virginia Is Still On Top

By JACK HAND

The Associated Press
Powerful West Virginia, one of the few unbeaten major college teams, remains No. 1 for the fourth successive week in The Associated Press poll.

Sports writers and sportscasters voting in the poll gave West Virginia 69 of the 104 first-place votes. No one else was close. The Mountaineers romped over George Washington Saturday for their 12th consecutive victory and 28th in a row in the Southern Conference.

On a basis of 10 points for first, 9 for second and so on, West Virginia amassed 941 points. Second-place Kansas State, with only four firsts, had 590 points. Kansas was right behind with 588 points for third place and six firsts.

Kansas State (11-1) added victories over Minnesota and Nebraska during the week. Kansas (10-2) lost its only start to Oklahoma. The poll included games through Saturday.

Although San Francisco had nine first places, second only to West Virginia, it finished fourth with 532 points after a week in which the Dons whipped Santa Clara and College of the Pacific. Fifth-place Cincinnati bowed to Oklahoma State last week, then poured it on to swamp Seton Hall and finished by running up 127 points against North Texas.

The North Carolina team that bowed to Maryland 74-61 for its second time in two years dropped from third to sixth place.

Oklahoma State advanced to seventh place. Maryland took 8th. Kentucky clung to ninth by whipping Vanderbilt and Louisiana State, and Bradley held 10th by taking two from Houston.

Previously unbeaten Mississippi State tumbled from fifth to 11th after losing to Georgia Tech.

Mountaineers Are All Alone

SOUTHERN CONFERENCE
By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

It took them more than a month to do it, but West Virginia's Mountaineers finally have taken sole possession of the No. 1 spot in the Southern Conference basketball standings to go with their No. 1 national ranking.

Until last night, the Mounties were just one of two teams undefeated in conference competition. That little situation now is remedied. Today, West Virginia stood alone at the top of the league with its 7-0 record, not a serious challenger in sight.

William and Mary's Indians ended Davidson's hopes for an undefeated conference campaign last night with a 75-61 victory over the Wildcats at Williamsburg and now must be counted one of West Virginia's top benefactors. Only last Saturday, the Indians had effectively disposed of ambitious Richmond's title aspirations by knocking off the Spiders 72-66.

The Indians utilized the same method in whipping Davidson that they'd used with success against favored Richmond—making the most of their chances from the foul line. They tallied 33 points against Davidson from the charity stripe. In the Richmond upset, they made 34.

Davidson's defeat left the Wildcats with a 2-1 conference record and tumbled them into a third place tie with The Citadel, which is 4-2 in league play. Richmond, which didn't play last night, automatically moved up into the No. 2 spot in the standings with its 5-2 circuit mark.

Richmond gets a chance to solidify its hold on the runner-up position no later than tonight when, in the only game scheduled for conference clubs, the Spiders travel to Virginia Military Institute. VMI currently is tied with Washington and Lee for last place in the 10-college conference with a 0-4 record, but gave Richmond a scare before losing by five points in an earlier tussle at Richmond.

Roy Lange, with 22 points, was the high scorer for William and Mary in his victory last night over Davidson. The Indians took the lead early and stayed in front until, with 6:38 to go, Davidson moved into a 54-54 tie on Bill Shinn's jump shot.

Ranked Eighth

East Carolina's Pirates, currently deadlocked with Lenoir Rhyne in leadership of the North State Conference with a 5-1 mark, is ranked No. 8 in the nation in scoring.

The Bucs are averaging 57.4 points per game to earn that honor. In overall games thus far, they have chalked up eight wins against only one loss.

They have defeated Newberry, Pfeiffer (twice), Elon, Appalacheian, Catawba, High Point, and Guilford. Their only loss was a 68-66 loss to Lenoir Rhyne before Christmas.

ECC plays host to Guilford at Memorial Gym Thursday night and journeys to Lenoir Rhyne Saturday.

Home Court Is Big Phrase In Atlantic Coast

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
Home court: that's a little phrase with a big meaning in Atlantic Coast Conference basketball.

"I'm telling you," said North Carolina State Coach Everett Case, "this basketball is simply a matter of where you play."

Saturday's games bore out Case's thesis (one he believes so heartily that it shows up in State's schedule: games away Wednesday and Monday, then only one road game during the last six weeks of the season, the home stretch). In each instance the home team won and each could almost be classed an upset: Maryland over North Carolina, Duke over State (in two overtimes), Wake Forest over Virginia and South Carolina over Clemson.

ACC teams have been idle since then, but tonight Clemson travels to Wake Forest and Maryland goes against a non-conference foe, Georgetown.

Case was discussing the Maryland game, which put Maryland and North Carolina in a tie for the ACC lead.

"Maryland has yet to play at Wake Forest, Duke, (North) Carolina and Raleigh (N.C. State)," Case smiled. "They haven't been on the road yet."

North Carolina Coach Frank McGuire agreed. Discussing his 13-point loss to Maryland, he said: "You see what playing on their home court means."

Then he added, "But, heck, the way they played tonight, they could have beaten us at home."

Wake Forest Coach Horace (Bones) McKinney, whose Demon Deacons are in the middle of a six-game home stand, also placed importance on the home court and was banking on this stretch to put his Deacons back into ACC contention. The Deacs had a 3-8 record starting the home stand; (and two of those three victories had been on the home court); now they're 5-8.

Case summed it up: "The home court means a lot. More so in basketball than in any other sport. The lights, floor, baskets, seating arrangement, all have bearing on performance."

Ryff Wins Second Straight Battle

NEW YORK (AP)—Former lightweight contender Frankie Ryff had his second straight victory today after handing Kid Centella of Nicaragua a thorough shelling in a television 10-rounder at St. Nicholas Arena.

Ryff won by close to a shutout last night over the veteran 26-year-old invader. Referee Ray Miller and Judge Bill Forst each gave him all 10 rounds. Artie Aldala had it 9-1. The AP card had it 10-0. Ryff weighed 139½, Centella 137.

Centella's record now is 28-18-1. Ryff's record is 23-5.

ECC'S INGRAM... only 6-0, but Bucs' second-best rebounder.

Harold Ingram—Always Full Steam Ahead

By BILLY ARNOLD
Reflector Sports Editor

ONE OF THE SPORTSWRITERS at Saturday night's ECC-Elon ball game in Memorial gymnasium commented that he would rather try to tackle Harold Bullard than try to block one of Harold Ingram's shots.

Bullard, of course, was the bruising All-America fullback at Lenoir Rhyne this past football season.

Ingram is lesser known. Even in this area, the 6-0, 185-pound Wadesboro senior isn't often spoken of when people talk about the ECC basketball team.

Ingram, who was chosen captain of the 1957-58 edition of the Bucs, isn't the kind of player who sticks in your mind. But then, at every game, you watch the Bucs play a few minutes, then you realize just how important he is.

Coach Howard Porter has commented that Harold—who is affectionately dubbed "Mule" by his teammates—"only knows one way to play ball. And that's all the way. He puts out every minute. Ingram goes full steam ahead from the very opening whistle to the end of the game.

He isn't tall, he's not what one would call a polished ball handler, he isn't much of a scorer for the most part. But he can run you to death and outjump men six to seven inches taller than himself.

INGRAM IS STURDILY BUILT, muscular and he plays basketball with all the drive and aggressiveness of a professional. Strong, whip-spring legs give him the ability to leap high and his brown adds to his effectiveness as a rebounder. He is second only to 6-8 Joe Plaster as a rebounder in the Buc camp.

It is also this sturdiness which allows the 185-pound veteran to go at full speed throughout an entire ball game. This year's East Carolina club has been labeled the runnigest Coach Howard Porter has ever accumulated. Ingram is perhaps the runnigest man on that club.

When Ingram attempts a shot, he does it with a ferocity and determination that is hard to find. Most of his points are picked up on either driving lay-ups or quick jump shots beneath the basket. In either case, when Ingram goes up with that ball, it's dangerous to get in his way.

THAT'S WHAT THE sportswriter was referring to. In Saturday night's ball game at Memorial Gym, two Elon boys tried to block an Ingram shot. They both collided with him, fouling him and causing his shot to go wild. But they suffered the worst end of the bargain. One of them ended up with a sore jaw and the other was knocked flat on his back and had to be helped off the floor.

It isn't that Ingram is a rough-house ball player by any means. On the contrary, he is one of the most courteous players in the North State loop. Before taking his foul shots after the above-mentioned incident, for example, Harold went over to speak to the injured Elon boys and made sure they were alright.

And it happens all the time. During the past two seasons—when Ingram played as the Pirates' sixth man—he was one of the most-fouled players on the team. But North State opponents have learned by and by that fouling Ingram isn't like fouling most any other boy. This year, he has had fewer attempts at the line. It has gotten so that when Mule goes up for a shot, opposing players either leave him alone or just slap—from a good distance—at the ball. They have learned not to try to jostle him bodily.

SHOOTING... dangerous for opponents

INGRAM WILL BE in the line-up Thursday night when the Pirates are host to Guilford in Memorial Gym. The Bucs will be shooting for their sixth conference victory in seven tries. Then, Saturday night, they journey to Lenoir Rhyne for a re-match with the Bears.

Lenoir Rhyne has handed the Bucs their only loss in nine games this season and are currently running neck-and-neck with them for the North State lead.

Greenville, Jacket Game Rated Toss-Up Tonight

Greenville high school's cagers will have their hands full tonight when they greet the Roanoke Rapids Yellow Jackets in Junius H. Rose gym.

Coach Wimpy Johnson's Jackets invade the new Greenville gym with a 2-1 Northeastern Conference record. They will match it against a 1-1 mark, racked up thus far by the G-Men.

On the basis of records, Roanoke Rapids would rate an edge over the Phantoms, but the fact that Greenville will be playing on its home court has evened the odds. The game is tabbed a toss-up.

Important Tilt
Tonight's contest will be an important one in Northeastern conference standings. At the present, every team in the loop has already been beaten at least once—which is, in itself, an upset. The fact that both Washington and Greenville, the pre-season favorites, have been whipped makes things even tighter in the league.

Greenville will have to take tonight's tilt to stay in the running. At the present time, Roanoke Rapids and Washington are just a shadow above the rest. The Jackets, therefore, will need a win also.

Coach Johnson's crew has recorded wins over Kinston and Washington and has lost to Jacksonville. Greenville has defeated Elizabeth City and dropped a close decision to Washington.

Improvement
Both clubs showed plenty of steam in their last ball games. Roanoke Rapids' last tilt was the 53-49 victory over Washington at the RR Armory. Greenville's last game was a 20-point win over Elizabeth City.

The Jackets, outshot the Washington team from the floor and from the free throw line, and did a good job of defense against the top Pam-Pack scorers, Ward Marslander, the Pack's leading candidate for All-Conference honors, was held to a mere 10 points.

Butch Reid, a Roanoke Rapids forward, threw in 14 points to pace his team and Ralph Ingram added 10.

Greenville's 68-48 win over Elizabeth City last week was the Phantoms' best effort to date, with the possible exception of the Washington game.

The Green men put on a tremendous last-half surge to overcome a stubborn EC outfit and eventually win out by 20 points.

Leading the Phant attack were John Wesley Hudson and Dick Evans.

Expected to start tonight for Coach Farley's Phants will be Hudson and Walker Allen at guards, Dick Evans and Francis Nunn at forwards and Steve Nobley at center. Probably seeing plenty of action will be Mack Roebuck, Bob Bilbro, Billy Cox, Don Wilkerson, Albert Crawford, and Bobby Edwards.

Coach Bud Phillips' GHS Jayvees still winless—will battle Roanoke

Rapids' junior varsity club at 6:30 in a preliminary. The varsity game will begin at 8:00.

Wilt Is Back; Kansas Is, Too

By ED WILKS
The Associated Press

Wilt the Still is back and Kansas is a winner again in college basketball.

It was as simple as that. The Jayhawks fell from the unbeaten list—and slipped from second to third in The Associated Press poll—with two-point defeats in two games while Wilt Chamberlain was ailing on the sidelines. But last night Wilt was back, playing the whole game and scoring 32 points as Kansas whipped Colorado 67-46 in Big Eight game.

Chamberlain's 32 points weren't enough to get back his lead in the individual scoring race, however.

Oscar Robertson was at it again for Cincinnati, canning 37 points as the 11th-ranked Bearcats ripped Houston 93-57 in a Missouri Valley Conference meeting.

Oscar, with 128 points in his last three games (starting with 56 against Seton Hall), has a 32.7 average for the 11-2 Bearcats. Chamberlain has a 32.2 average for Kansas, also 11-2.

Only two other members of this week's top 10 were in action last night. Ninth-rated Kentucky (11-3) defeated Tulane 86-50 to stay unbeaten in the Southeastern Conference; and Bradley (9-1), No. 10, remained undefeated in Missouri Valley competition with an 85-58 job on North Texas State.

Mississippi State, No. 11, lost its second in a row, this one 74-62 to Vanderbilt in the SEC. Tennessee (10-1), rated 13th, walloped Louisiana State 75-53 in another SEC game, while Oklahoma (9-3), rated 14th, fell out of the Big Eight lead with a 57-54 defeat by Nebraska.

Indiana knocked off Minnesota 85-64 and gained a share of the Big Ten lead with Michigan, a 72-63 winner over Ohio State. In the Southwest Conference, first-place Arkansas held Texas Tech scoreless in the last two minutes for a 58-55 decision. Texas Christian crushed early-favorite Rice 92-68, and Southern Methodist breezed past Texas 82-68.

Frick criticized the plan but told a reporter "we need relief here" in order to do anything about it. He has long argued that under the present interpretation of antitrust statutes any agreement to limit telecasts would be ruled a violation.

Shaughnessy said that "if the majors were permitted to run their own affairs regarding television, they would set up legislation that would prevent any club from telecasting its games into minor league territory." He said Frick supports that view.

THERE OUGHTA BE A LAW! By FAGALY and SHORTEN

Jayne's Wedding Is Like 4th Of July

PORTUGUESE BEND, Calif. — Jayne Mansfield, who yearned for a quiet wedding, was married last night to Mickey Hargitay with all the hoopla of a Fourth of July picnic. Some 1,500 fans, mostly teenagers but some adults carrying babies in arms, screamed and shouted outside the Wayfarers' Chapel during the most tender moments of the nondenominational rites. Someone even bounced a rock off the top of the all-glass church while photographers, who nearly outnumbered guests, kept banging their cameras against the glass walls. Just as Jayne and Mickey were whispering their "I do's," more than 100 teenagers stormed up a steep hill shouting like a Marine landing party, but a cordon of police pushed them back. Jayne, looking sexy yet demure, said she never heard the yelling. "All I heard was Mickey saying 'I do,'" she giggled. Bob Hope, who witnessed the wedding ceremony, and actress Marie Windsor were the only Hollywood names who traveled the 30 miles to this remote and lonely site by the Pacific Ocean. "I feel wonderful," said the husky Hungarian-born bridegroom "although I was sitting on needles most of the time." The wedding was scheduled for 3 p. m. but it was 8:45 before the voluptuous bride started down the aisle. She had spent a good 20 minutes posing for photographers on her arrival—even before changing into the 12 yards of pink Brussels lace that was her wedding gown. After the rites, Jayne and Mickey returned to the church and posed at the altar for the reg-

Spread Of UAW Profit-Sharing To Cut Tax Take

WASHINGTON — Government experts said today any big spread through industry of plans to share profits with workers would cut deeply into federal tax revenue and probably require sharp changes in taxing policy. That was their private reaction to word from Detroit that the United Auto Workers have proposed that auto producers split a major share of profits before taxes with workers and customers. They said profits thus distributed to workers would not be taxed, as they are now, at the 52 per cent corporate rate but at the much lower individual income rate — around 15 per cent or less in auto worker income brackets, allowing for deductions. If the plan were adopted in the auto industry and spread widely among other industries, the result could lead to reducing federal revenues by billions of dollars. Corporate income taxes now yield about 20 billion dollars a year. In turn, the government would have either to reduce spending or to boost tax rates somewhere along the line. Walter Reuther, UAW president, announced the union will push the profit-sharing plan in its mid-year auto industry negotiations. He said that if it had been in effect the past decade some 500,000 General Motors Corp. workers could have pocketed an additional $600 a year. That would have meant 300 million dollars a year in profits distributed to the workers. They would have paid perhaps 45 million of it to the government in individual income taxes. But in keeping it, the company would

'Wagon Train' Probably Around For A Long Time

By CHARLES MERCER NEW YORK — Ward Bond, who cracks the whip as the wagon-master of that most adult Western, "Wagon Train" NBC-TV, Wednesday isn't sure he knows exactly what adult means. "As a matter of fact, I rather resent that phrase 'adult Western,'" said the husky veteran of more than 100 Westerns on a visit to New York. There have been plenty of changes in Westerns since Bond started riding the movie ranges back in 1929. The Indians have prettied up, much disappeared from this television and movie entertainment form. The cowboys aren't quite so populous either. "Both in television and the movies," said Bond, "they've taken stories about people and laid them in a Western background. The cavalry no longer charges in the last reel, if that's what they mean by adult. "We try to tell stories about people instead of things. What nearly everybody forgets is that most of the credit for this goes to a fellow named John Ford who made a picture called 'Stagecoach' 20 years ago. And what was 'Stagecoach'? I'll tell you. It have paid about 156 million in taxes at the corporate rate. "In other words a dollar of profit distributed to workers costs the employer 48 cents," one expert said. The UAW proposed that for "companies in a more favored economic position," all profits above 10 per cent on net capital before taxes be shared this way: half to the company for stockholders and executives' bonuses, one-fourth to workers other than executives, and one-fourth to consumers as rebates on automobile purchase prices.

U. S. Technical Help Has Blessing Of Distant Lands

Editor's note—All over the world, a small corps of U. S. technicians is hard at work dispensing know-how and sowing good will. Despite isolated instances of friction, all signs point to their marked success on a crucial cold war front. This article is the first of a four-part series on the subject. By WILLIAM L. RYAN AP Foreign News Analyst In Arab Lebanon, a housewife says to the grocer: "Give me a half dozen Point Four eggs." In Iran, a Persian tribe, overwhelmed with gratitude, took a solemn oath to "protect Point Four and its people at all times." Once when the U. S. aid program was threatened, the tribe was ready to march on Tehran. In Tunisia, a businessman pleads with the Americans to triple technical assistance. In Paraguay, a farmer says he is proud that such a great power as the United States sends people to help his little country. In the developing economic-political global war with communism, technical assistance may look like only a minor skirmish. But it is one field in which Americans have been successful, one field in which Americans have built up more gratitude than resentment. It has left a deep and lasting mark in many a struggling country. Most people in the world's underdeveloped countries still refer to the U. S. program by its original name: Point Four. Now it's under the International Cooperation Administration. When the Lebanese housewife demands "Point Four eggs," she means the high-grade eggs produced by American agriculture experts in Lebanon. The eggs are greatly superior to the unpalatable local variety. When the tribesmen swore to protect American technicians, they were mindful of a project which once was a butt of Washington jokes. American hygiene experts went to the villages with a campaign to rid the bathhouses—the villagers' social centers—of the filth which made those places breeding areas of contagion. The whole vast Middle East, a major theater in the political-economic contest between democracy and communism, is dotted with such so-called trivial projects. Local people don't think the projects are trivial. Today, technical assistance is a weapon whose potency has been newly recognized by the Russians. Iron Curtain technicians wait eagerly for a chance to supplant Americans in the underdeveloped World. Quietly, without publicity fanfare, a little army of American technicians chalked up an impressive record as ambassadors of good will. It numbered only 2,961 in 1957. Before Congress this session will be a proposal to increase the number to 3,302, and to increase the annual budget by 20 million dollars to 150 million for operations in 57 countries in the next 18 months. There has been some criticism that the ICA has had too much headquarters personnel and not enough men in the field. Likewise, there has been criticism that the technical staffs, adding to the large numbers of Americans abroad, often cause local resentments. An Associated Press survey indicates however, that of all Americans abroad, the technical experts are the least resented. Indeed, in many places, they are highly popular. There are some outstanding exceptions. There are some "bad ones," the survey shows: a few loudmouths; the heavy drinking, high living ones who arouse local annoyance. But among the technicians, these are the exceptions. On the whole, the survey shows, the technicians are among the most popular Americans overseas. James Smith, new director of the government's foreign aid agency, reports he already has taken action to make sure the number of technicians is kept to the minimum needed to carry out assigned tasks. He has instructed overseas missions that henceforth each technician will be linked directly to a specific project. He wants no "floaters" with little to do but shuffle papers at headquarters. This policy may result in cutting down the number of ICA people abroad in some countries.

High Praise For Research Area

RALEIGH — The research triangle bounded by North Carolina State College, Duke University and the University of North Carolina has been called "a magnificent step in the right direction" toward filling the nation's need for scientists and engineers. The praise for the area came last night from Maj. Gen. Robert J. Wood, deputy chief of research and development for the U.S. Army, in a speech before a State College audience. Gen. Wood said the research triangle brings together "the organized forces of time, planning, teachers and financial backing" which he said are essential for scientific training. Producing the technicians for this country to keep pace with Russian advances will not be "an easy, overnight process," Gen. Wood asserted. He expressed the hope that taxpayers and public officials will keep the problems "in proper perspective." At the same time, he said, "I do think it is necessary for us to recognize the problems we face" in view of the "present situation regarding comparative numbers of Soviet and of western scientists and engineers." The general, No. 2 man in Army research and development, said the quest for new weapons demands "not only Sputniks, but manned space craft which can extend our knowledge." Coupled with these efforts, he added, must go attempts "to help the world emerge from the infantile age of quarreling into the mature period of recognition of a worldwide community of interests." Gen. Wood is a native of Virginia, but he revealed he may soon become "at least a part-time" Tar Heel. He said he has recently purchased property on the North Carolina coast near Kitty Hawk.

Note Factors In Jobless Claims

RALEIGH — A short tobacco processing season, unfavorable weather and Christmas closings of textile mills have been factors in an increase in jobless pay claims filed with the State Employment Security Commission. The first eight working days of this year has brought in 24,715 new claims for compensation, compared with 16,429 for the same period last year. For the week ending Jan. 3 continued claims were up to 76,000, compared with the "normal" amount of some 45,000 in mid-December. # Murder Does Its Homework

By CORNELL WOOLRICH

CHAPTER 1

Miss Prince knew all the signs that meant homework hadn't been done. The hangdog look, the guiltily lowered head. She stood there by the Gaines boy's desk, one hand extended. "Well, I'm waiting, Johnny."

The culprit squirmed uncomfortably to his feet. "I—I couldn't do it, teacher."

"Why not?"

"I—I didn't know what to write about."

"That's no excuse," Miss Prince said firmly. "I gave the class the simplest kind of theme this time. I said to write about something you know, something that really happened, either at home or elsewhere. If the others were able to, why weren't you?"

"I couldn't think of anything that happened."

Miss Prince turned away. "Well, you'll stay in and sit there until you do. When I give out homework I expect it to be done!" She returned to her desk, stacked the collected creative efforts to one side, and took up the day's lesson.

Three o'clock struck and the seats before her emptied like magic in one scapering rush for the door. All but the second one back on the outside aisle.

"You can begin now, Johnny," said Miss Prince relentlessly. "Take a clean sheet of paper and quit staring out the window."

Although the boy probably wouldn't have believed it, she didn't enjoy this any more than he did. He was keeping her in just as much as she was keeping him in. But discipline had to be maintained.

"I can't think of anything," he lamented.

"Yes, you can."

She went back to her papers. He raised his hand finally to gain her attention. "Is it all right to write about a dream?"

"I suppose so. If that's the best you can do," she acquiesced. It seemed to be the only way out of the predicament. "But I wanted you to write something that really happened. This was to test your powers of observation and description."

"This was part-true and only part a dream," he assured her.

He bent diligently to the desk, to make up for time lost. At the end of fifteen minutes he stood before her with the effort completed. "All right, you can go home now," she consented wearily.

"And the next time you come to school without your homework—" But the door had already closed behind him.

She smiled slightly to herself, with a sympathetic understanding he wouldn't have given her credit for, and placed the latest masterpiece on top of the others, to take home with her. As she did so, her eye, glancing idly along the opening sentences, was caught by something.

The epistle before her, in labored, straight-up-and-down, childish handwriting, read:

Johnny Gaines
English Comp. 2
Something that happened in our house.

One night I wasn't sleeping so good on account of something I eat, and I dreamed I was out in a boat and the water was rough and rocking me up and down a lot. So then I woke up and the door in my room was shaking the kind of and so was my bed and everything. And I even heard a table and chair fall down, downstairs. So I got kind of scared and I sneaked downstairs to see what was the matter. But by that time it stopped again and everything was quiet.

My mother was in the kitchen straining things up again, and she didn't want me to come near there when she first saw me. But I looked in anyway. Then she closed the outside door and she told me some kind of a varmint got in the house from outside, and my pa had a hard time getting it and killing it, and that was why everything fell over. I sure must have been a bad kind of one, because it scared her a lot, she was still shaking all the time. She was standing still, but she was all out of breath. I asked her where it was and she said he carried it outside with him—get rid of it far away from the house.

Then I saw where his hat got to when he was having all that trouble catching it, and he never even missed it. It fell through the stove onto the ash. So she picked it up out of there when I showed her, and the ash made it look even cleaner than before when he had it on. Almost like new.

Then she got some water and a brush and started to scrub the kitchen floor where she said the varmint got it dirtied up. But I couldn't see where it was because she got in the way. And she wouldn't let me stay and watch, she made me go upstairs again.

So that was all that happened.

When she had finished, Miss Prince sat on for a while, tapping her pencil thoughtfully against the edge of her teeth.

Miss Prince settled herself un- easily on one of the straight-backed chairs against the wall that the desk-sergeant had indicated to her, and waited, fiddling with her handbag.

A pair of thick-soled brogues came walloping out, stopped short before her, and she looked up. She'd never been face to face with a professional detective before. This one didn't look like one at all.

"Anything I can do for you?" he asked.

"It's—it's just something that I felt I ought to bring to your attention," she faltered. "I'm Emily Prince of the English Department at the Benjamin Harrison Public School."

She fumbled for the composition, extended it toward him. "One of my pupils handed this in to me yesterday afternoon."

He read it over, handed it back to her. "I don't get it," he grinned. "You want me to pinch the kid that wrote this for murdering the King's English?"

"Thought you might like to know," he said, "that I stopped that Gaines youngster on his way to school this morning and asked him a few questions. It's just like I told you yesterday. The first words out of his mouth were that he made the whole thing up."

If he thought this would force her to capitulate, he was sadly mistaken. "Of course he'd deny it—to you. That's about as valid as a confession extracted from an adult by third-degree methods. The mere fact that you stopped to question him about it frightened him into thinking he'd done something wrong. He wasn't sure just what, but he played safe by saying he'd made it up."

She returned stormily to the classroom. The Gaines boy sat hunched forlornly, looking very small in the sea of empty seats. "I've found out it wasn't your fault for being late, Johnny," she reminded him. "You can go now."

He scuttled for the door. "Johnny, just a minute. I'd like to ask you something."

His face clouded as he came back slowly.

"Johnny, do you live in a large house?"

"Yes'm, pretty big," he admitted.

"Well, er—do you think your mother would care to rent out a room to me? I have to leave where I am living now, and I'm trying to find another place."

He swallowed. "You mean move into our house and live with us?" Obviously his child's mind didn't regard having a teacher at such close quarters as a blessing.

She smiled reassuringly. "I won't interfere with you in your spare time, Johnny. I think I'll walk home with you now—I'd like to know as soon as possible."

"We'll have to take the bus, Miss Prince, it's pretty far out," he told her.

She flashed him an impatient look. "I think it's obvious that this child witnessed a crime of some sort, without realizing its full implication," she said coldly. "You can read between the lines. I believe that a murder has taken place in that house."

She stopped short. The lower part of his face began to twitch, and a dull-red flush overspread it. "Excuse me a minute," he said in a choked voice, stood up abruptly, and walked away from her. He stopped a minute at the other end of the room, stood there with his shoulders shaking, if he turned and came back.

"If there's anything funny about this, I fail to see it!"

"I'm sorry," he said, sitting down again. "It hit me so sudden, I couldn't help it. A kid writes a composition, the first thing that comes into his head, just so he can get it over with and go out and play, and you come here and ask us to investigate. Aw, now listen, lady—"

She surveyed him with eyes that were not exactly lanterns of esteem. "I cross-questioned the youngsters. Today, after class. Before coming here. He insists it was not made up—that it's true."

"Naturally he would. The detail—I mean the assignment, was for them to write about something true, wasn't it? He was afraid he'd have to do it over if he admitted it was imaginary."

"Just a minute, Mr—"

"Kendall," he supplied. "May I ask what your duties are?"

"I'm a detective attached to the Homicide Squad. That's what you asked for."

It was now her turn to get in a dirty lick. "I just wanted to make sure," she said dryly. "There's been no way of telling since I've been talking to you."

"Ouch!" he murmured. "There are certain details given here," she went on, flourishing the composition at him "that are not within the scope of a child's imagination. It wouldn't occur to a child to make up things like that. They're too realistic. I deal in children—I know how their minds work."

"Well," he let her know stubbornly, "I deal in murders. And I don't run out making a fool of myself on the strength of a composition written by a kid in school!"

She stood up so suddenly her chair skittered back into the wall. "Sorry if I've wasted your time. I'll know better in the future!"

"It's not mine you've wasted," he countered. "It's your own, I'm afraid."

A few minutes after her class had been dismissed the next day, a "monitor," one of the older children used to carry messages about the building, knocked on the door. "There's a man outside would like to talk to you, Miss Prince."

She stepped out into the hall. The man, Detective Kendall of the Homicide Squad, was tossing a piece of chalk up and down in the hollow of his hand.

"Thought you might like to know," he said, "that I stopped that Gaines youngster on his way to school this morning and asked him a few questions. It's just like I told you yesterday. The first words out of his mouth were that he made the whole thing up."

If he thought this would force her to capitulate, he was sadly mistaken. "Of course he'd deny it—to you. That's about as valid as a confession extracted from an adult by third-degree methods. ## Bold Getaway In Gold Coin Theft

MIAMI, Fla. (AP)—A wily thief stole $25,000 worth of rare gold coins yesterday and made a getaway as bold as brass.

William Donner, 60, Forest Hills, N.Y., said he lost a collection which included coins dating to the Roman Empire.

Donner had attended a Florida coin collectors meeting in the Biscayne Terrace Hotel and went to lunch before leaving for home.

Meanwhile, detectives said, a gray-suited man handed bellhop Gene Perry a room key and said, "Check me out of 608."

Perry checked with the hotel desk and then brought down Donner's luggage and stowed it in a taxi. The gray-suited man tipped Perry and rode off in the cab.

Its driver told police he transferred the luggage to an automobile at a railroad station nearby.

Some 3.2 million immigrants — about one-ninth of the total population increase — came to the United States between 1946 and the end of 1956.

RALEIGH (U. S. NCDA)—North Carolina poultry markets: Fryers and broilers farm price 19 to 20 mostly 19.

Eggs, prices paid by distributors for clean, sized 80 per cent A quality: Raleigh and Charlotte, slightly weaker, large 41 1/4; Durham, not reporting.

Prices paid to producers for ungraded eggs on graded out basis: Asheville, steady, A large 42 to 43 mostly 42.

NEW YORK (U. S. STEEL)—Steels, air-crafts, shipbuilding issues and airlines made good gains as the stock market moved ahead early this afternoon.

Gains of key stocks went from fractions to about 2 points. The opening was active. Narrow gains were expanded in brisk trading later; then some prices were clipped below their best as turnover diminished.

Defense stocks, including shipbuilding, continued to benefit by the spending prospects in President Eisenhower's budget message. Wall Street construed the message bullish and anticipated a continued period of deficit spending, although the budget for 1959 is planned as a balanced one.

Most leading rails, chemicals, nonferrous metals and motors also joined in the advance but oils showed little change. Rubbers, building materials and motion pictures were mixed.

Steeles had the further benefit of the predicted 77-ton price increase by mid-year and of a federal court action in denying the government's move for a quick decision barring the Bethlehem-Youngstown proposed merger.

Youngstown added around 2 points and Bethlehem a point. Based on the rise in the AP average at noon, the quoted value of stocks listed on the New York Stock Exchange rose an estimated $1,400,000,000.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks was up $1.10 to $158.40 with the industrials up $1.80, the rails up 80 cents and the utilities up 30 cents.

One of the employees of the Greenville Packing Co. told police he saw a man come out of the firm's dressing room with a box in his hand but did not know who he was.

He said he asked what was in the box and the unidentified man would not tell him. He just walked out "without saying much."

Detectives said the man had just broken into several lockers in the dressing room and had taken six packs of cigarettes, two shirts and a small quantity of chewing tobacco.

The thief broke into the building and left with his loot late yesterday afternoon . . . during working hours.

Police are also investigating two other larceny complaints, both reported to have taken place within an hour of each other late yesterday afternoon.

A sizable amount of cash and checks was reported stolen from a parked automobile on Tyson St. Joe Parkerson of 300 S. Eastern St. told detectives the money was taken from his car while he was making collections. Missing was $12 in cash and approximately $100 worth of checks.

Later police received a complaint from Alonzo Honeycutt of 1308 Dickinson Ave. that someone had stolen a coat and a pair of gloves from his vehicle parked at the corner of Dickinson Ave. and Clark St.

Honeycutt said the stolen articles were valued at $15. He told officers the theft occurred while he was eating in a nearby restaurant between 5:30 and 6 p.m.

Actress Is Charged Drunk, Disorderly

LOS ANGELES (U. S. —) Actress Sarah Churchill, red-haired daughter of the British statesman, is slated to be arraigned in Justice Court at Malibu Beach Thursday on a charge of being drunk in public view.

Miss Churchill, jailed five hours yesterday, has denied the charge, saying she intends to plead innocent.

Sheriff's deputies said they were called to the Malibu home of the 44-year-old actress on a complaint by the General Telephone Co. that she used profane and obscene language over the phone.

The company asserted the language was used in calls to several persons, including one with a phone company employee.

The deputies said Miss Churchill greeted them with, "What the hell do you want?" and that they found kitchen curtains torn down, lipstick smeared on the refrigerator and contents of her purse scattered.

The officers said they took the daughter of Sir Winston Churchill to a substitution only after she had climbed into their car holding a glass of rum and resisted their efforts to get her out.

At a substitution, they related, it took two male officers and a matron to subdue her. One deputy's shirt was torn.

Later at the county jail, Miss Churchill, in a pensive moment, quoted from Robert Burns: "In durance vile here must I wake and weep"

"And all my frowsy couch in sorrow sleep"
But she was released from "durance vile" on $50 bond furnished by her attorney Robert J. Gottlieb, who told newsmen: "Miss Churchill says she officers who arrested her pinned her arms and slapped her face. She was only trying to protect herself."

The slim actress, dressed in blue Capri pants, silk blouse and tan sweater, denied she had been drinking but said she often used the telephone, adding: "That's what it's for."

She had worn an ill-fitting jail smock during her booking earlier, at which time she commented: "So this is American justice. At least it takes two stalwarts to hold me."

She then held up two fingers in the "V" for victory sign made famous by her father in World War II.

She was booked under the name of Sarah Beauchamp, which was the name of her late husband, society photographer Anthony Beauchamp. Friends said Miss Churchill had been emotionally upset since his suicide in London last August. The couple had been estranged.

The actress, here for a series of television appearances, was slated to appear today in a live telecast of NBC's Matinee Theatre, portraying a Hungarian dancer in an hourlong drama entitled "The Makropoulos Secret."

Rouse said Miller was taken seriously ill shortly after midnight and died approximately 30 minutes later.

Civil Defense Officer To Address Local Club

A program of "Civil Defense in the Home" will be presented Wednesday night for members of the Junior Woman's Club at the Woman's Club building.

Mrs. Sarah Boyd Weaver, public information officer and coordinator of women's activities for the North Carolina Council of Civil Defense, will be speaker at the meeting which will begin at 8 p.m. She will be introduced by J. H. Rose, Pitt County Civil Defense chairman.

Mrs. Weaver's talk is expected to supplement local Civil Defense information programs on emergency feeding situations, home nursing and first aid. She has been with the North Carolina Civil Defense Council since August, 1951, and prior to that was director of public information and education for the Florida Civil Defense Council.

Mrs. Weaver is the only woman member of the Board of Governors of the National Association of Public Information Officers in Civil Defense. On the executive board she represents all of the southeastern states, plus the territories of the Canal Zone, the Virgin Islands and the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico.

She also represents North Carolina on the Regional Women's Advisory Committee and is an associate member of the National Women's Advisory Council to Federal Civil Defense Administration.

Mrs. Weaver's period of consecutive service has brought her the unofficial title of "dead" of women's coordinators in Civil Defense since she has served longer than other women's state coordinator in the nation.

Mrs. Quentin Avery is in charge of Wednesday's program for the Junior Woman's Club.

Raiders Destroy A Bootleg Still

Pitt County ABC officers destroyed a still yesterday afternoon in the Pateolis Township.

The still, according to chief ABC officer J. M. Ward, was found approximately one mile east of Pateolis near the Atlantic Coast Line Railroad. At the time of the raid, it was not in operation.

Ward said the still had a 100 gallon capacity and was complete. Officers also destroyed a 50-gallon pre-heating unit, a 60-gallon wood-fired boiler and 550 gallons of mash.

The large quantity of mash was reportedly found in 10 mash barrels placed in a circle. A small heater was placed in the center of the circle, Ward explained, to aid fermentation of the mash during cold weather.

A short distance from the distillery's site, officers found 55 gallons of whiskey in the underbrush. Participating in the raid were, H. B. Lilly and James Ross.
