Wilfong Says Education Process In America Should Be 'Broadened'

By JIMMY ELLIS, Reflector Staff Writer. Dr. Robert E. Wilfong, technical superintendent at Dupont's Kingston plant, said today America's education process needs to be broadened rather than narrowed to meet recent scientific accomplishments of the Russians.

nations and charged that the standard of living of any nation was dependent on the productivity of its people, which, in turn, is dependent on the individual nation's educational system.

competition. "From 1901 until 1920," he said, "Americans won six per cent of the awards. From 1920 until 1940, they won 16 per cent of them and since 1940 Americans have won 43 per cent of the annual prizes."

N. C. Senators Say Farm Program Plans Harmful

RALEIGH (AP)—Sharp opposition has been voiced by North Carolina's U.S. senators and state farm leaders to changes proposed by President Eisenhower in the nation's farm program.

L. Y. Ballentine spoke out strongly yesterday against the proposed changes in the tobacco program. He declared the changes "would ruin thousands of North Carolina farmers" and "would set our growers back 20 years."

Knocked Out. HIGH POINT (AP)—East Carolina College today was knocked out of a first place tie in the North State Conference basketball race when Dr. C. R. Hinshaw of High Point College, conference commissioner, forfeited three games, charging the Pirates used an ineligible player.

ACL Station At Rocky Mt. Burns

ROCKY MOUNT, N.C. (AP)—A spectacular fire that sent flames towering high in the chilly night air destroyed the Atlantic Coast line railroad's Rocky Mount freight station last night.

Sen. Sam Ervin Jr. commented that Secretary of Agriculture Benson "thinks the number of farms ought to be reduced in other work at a time when there are four million people out of work."

Lumbees Await Action Of KKK. MAXTON, N.C. (AP)—The Lumbee Indians of Robeson County are stirred up over Ku Klux Klan warnings against race mixing.

The station, a landmark at Rocky Mount since its erection around the turn of the century, had been enlarged in recent years. It was closed for the night when the fire broke out and the cause was not immediately determined.

Rep. Harold Cooley (D-NC), chairman of the House Agriculture Committee, bitterly assailed the proposals, terming them a "blueprint to bankrupt farmers."

Today they awaited the next move by KKK leaders, who have announced a big rally for Saturday night.

Higher Education Board Is Told ECC's Needs, Plans

Members of North Carolina's Board of Higher Education were told this afternoon that East Carolina College "immediately needs" permanent improvements and expanded facilities that will cost an estimated $5,707,000.

17,000 square feet, the first floor to be used for industrial arts and the other floors for science, at a cost of $200,000.

A stadium which would cost $150,000. Submission of the called-for permanent improvements to the Board of Higher Education is only the first step in the program of obtaining them, Dr. Messick said.

Dr. Messick's report called for the Board of Higher Education to use its influence to motivate interest in requiring more math and science in secondary schools and requiring it for certification of teachers. He said "there seems to be" an increasing interest in science and math among college students but he also said a teacher could earn an A certificate in North Carolina without having any science and math instruction on the college level.

After Dr. Wilfong's address, the delegates attended a luncheon where they heard remarks by Dallas Herring, chairman of the North Carolina State Board of Education and vice-chairman of the state citizens committee. Group discussion meetings were planned for this afternoon before a final general business session for the representatives of 32 Eastern North Carolina counties.

Dr. Wilfong's address developed his answer to the question "Is Our American Educational System Outmoded?" and came after opening remarks by Dr. John D. Messick, president of East Carolina College, and Holt McPherson, High Point editor and publisher, and chairman of the North Carolina Citizens Committee.

The research scientist told the delegates, "Sputnik certainly indicates we have no corner on the intelligence market, but we must consider the price of any crash program to match the Russian efforts."

Dr. Wilfong said that the delegates should be "broadened" in their view of education, and that the American educational system is "outmoded" and needs to be "broadened" to meet the needs of the future.

Jr. High PTA To Sponsor Ball Game

Plans have been completed by a Junior High School PTA committee headed by Mr. and Mrs. P. K. Andersen for the PTA to sponsor a basketball game between the Greenville Junior High Phantoms and the Washington Junior High Pam Pack.

This game will be played in J. H. Rose High School gymnasium on Friday, January 24, at 7:30 p.m.

Tickets went on sale today and may be obtained from any Junior High School student, teacher, or PTA member. All money raised through this game will be used by the PTA to buy needed books for the Junior High School Library.

Mrs. John Zeh is planning pregame and half-time entertainment which includes the presentation of a check from the local Elks Club to school authorities for payment on new basketball uniforms which players will wear for the first time that night.

Ladies' Cooperation Needed For Defense

The monthly program meeting of the Junior Woman's Club was held January 15 with Mrs. Quentin Avery in charge of the program which came under the Department of Public Affairs and Communications.

The guest speaker, Mrs. Sarah Boyd Weaver, public information officer and coordinator of women's activities for the North Carolina Council of Civil Defense, was introduced by J. H. Rose, PHS County Civil Defense Chairman.

Mrs. Weaver in expressing the importance and understanding of Civil Defense quoted many sections from recent speeches given by Governor Hodges.

She informed the club there were 22 government paid workers at the present time working on a "survival plan" for North Carolina. This plan is to be completed by the last of June. Mrs. Weaver continued to report to the club that if enough cooperation and interest is shown by the people of the State this project will continue and serve each area of North Carolina.

In event of "radioactive fallout" and evacuation of target towns the cooperation of 80% of our women would be needed.

Mrs. Weaver explained this could best be organized through the churches, schools and homes. Clubs and other organizations interested in completing the Civil Defense plan in this community would be given full support from our Director of Civil Defense and State.

Leaflets were passed to the club entitled "Home Protection Exercises" and "Between You and Disaster."

Guests for the evening were Mrs. W. B. Whitley, Mrs. Earl Roseberry, Mrs. Edelle Brown, Mrs. Robert Beech and Mrs. Wayne Strong.

Hostesses were Mrs. H. L. Lewis and Mrs. Hoyt Narron.

Leading 'Teahouse' Role To Be Projected By Professional

A professional actor with a varied experience, Rockwood will appear here with a cast of student actors and actresses in the entertaining drama of the U. S. Army and the Okinawans. In the national company he was understudy to Burgess Meredith, and he has played Sakini in summer stock productions.

In addition to appearances in a number of New York theaters, Rockwood was for two years a member of the Cleveland, Ohio, Playhouse; has played with other stock companies; and has toured with the Barter Theatre of Abingdon, Va. In the latter group he was chosen by Shirley Booth as recipient of the Barter Theatre Award.

Rockwood holds the master's degree in drama from Western Reserve University. In addition to acting, he has had experience as director, stage manager, and teacher of drama.

Men Seldom Buy Jewelry

By DOROTHY ROE
AF Women's Editor

Romantic fiction to the contrary, men seldom buy jewelry for women, says Jean Schlumberger, who designs some of the world's most expensive jewelry.

"A smart man wouldn't dare pick out a piece of jewelry for either his wife or his girl friend," says Schlumberger, a Frenchman who has designed everything from tiaras to wedding rings for the most glittering members of the international set.

"About 85 per cent of my customers are women who come in alone to order specially designed jewelry. The other 15 per cent also are women, who bring their husbands along."

"I've been designing jewelry since 1927, and I can remember only two men customers who came alone to order jeweled pieces made up. One was a man who wanted me to design a jeweled rat for his wife. The other wanted a jeweled cat, also for his wife. The rat was rather nice, as it turned out. I designed it in gray sapphires."

Schlumberger divides his time between his Paris salon and his office and laboratory in New York, where he dreams up half-million-dollar baubles.

Schlumberger is known for his originality of design, and his spectacular combinations of colored stones with diamonds and gold in three-dimensional and mobile designs. He believes also, at times, in understatement, and at such times he makes something like a 14-carat gold cigarette case chaste by covering it in plain black leather or a diamond case with movable petals, so that when she is feeling modest a woman may turn the diamond side of the petals under.

"It's the same theory as the milk-lined raincoat," says Schlumberger. "The public can't see the milk or diamonds, but the woman knows they're there."

WELL BURIED SECRET
MILWAUKEE (AP)—Beer, long synonymous with Milwaukee, had its own special niche—until recently—in the Federal Building. A workman, renovating the U.S. marshal's office, removed a wall panel and found a beer bottle with an 1890 vintage label of a Milwaukee brewery in a recess. A ring in the bottle about two inches from the bottom indicated some beer had been left in the bottle. Office employees speculated whether it had been placed there by a worker—or an early marshal who was nearly caught nipping.

Sick-Abed Child Needs Play

By DOROTHY V. WHIFFLE, M.D.
 "KEEP HIM IN BED three days after his temperature is completely normal."
 Such easy orders to give and such difficult ones to carry out. During a little child's acute illness it's not hard to keep him quiet. It is then he lies still and you wish to Heaven he'd show a little of his usual spark. Mothers always find somewhere within themselves the reserve stock of energy to cope with the serious phase of illness. The worry, the sleepless nights, the treatments that a sick child resists, all these things mothers take in their stride. But when the child is on the mend, feels pretty good, but must stay in bed, then comes the hard pull.

STORYBOOK TOYS—New three-dimensional polystyrene toys illustrating places and characters from favorite childhood stories provide hours of quiet play for convalescent children. The toys are easily assembled and bring stories to life.

There are a few tricks that help these days pass with a minimum of difficulty.

Be Firm
 First, gentle but absolutely firm insistence that the child stay in bed is essential. Possibly you may allow periods on the couch in the living room as a variation from his bed; but no running around no matter how much he whines. Many a child prefers Mother's knee to his own when he is sick.

Next, routines help. A little child likes to know when things are going to happen. When it is juice time, lunch time, how long must he rest, when is medicine due. If he is old enough, put a clock beside his bed and let him remind you.

A word of warning about medicine. Keep it out of sight and out of climbing reach. Bring it into his room every time he needs a dose. You have praised him so often for being a good boy when he swallowed his medicine that he may decide to be a very good boy while you're out of the room and take the whole bottle!

Gay Room
 A clean bright attractive room will cheer a youngster. Try a different bedspread (not necessarily new), a new pair of pajamas, some bright pictures on the wall (cut out of magazines). An underwater bouquet in a sunny window adds color and pleasure. Tie together two or three flowers and a bit of greenery and attach a weight. Place in a clear glass jar and fill with cold water, add a teaspoon of salt and seal the jar tight shut. It will last a week or longer.

A bed tray is a great help, both for meals and for play. Since you cannot bring up a family of children without occasional days of convalescence, a bed tray is a good family investment. Incidentally, this is a wonderful Christmas present for grandma or an aunt or uncle to contribute. If you do not have a bed tray, improvise one. Two straight chairs on either side of the bed will hold a straight board. One straight chair placed upside down on the bed with the back of the chair toward the child will hold a board in an inclined position for play.

Playthings
 Next come the things to play with. They should be little things, new things, and things to play with, not just look at. Small cars and trucks for running up and down the board, a set of small blocks, about an inch long, small dolls and doll clothes, crayons and coloring books, puzzles.

A sick-abled box comes in handy during these difficult days. Into the box go all sort of discarded articles—jewelry, Christmas cards, worn playing cards, leftover party favors, pieces of cloth or lace or ribbons, artificial flowers, old small wooden boxes, gloves, a worn handbag, empty spoons—almost anything. A sick-abled box has novelty and stimulates the child's imagination and often keeps him happy while you get a little of your absolutely essential housework done. Pin a shoebag to the side of the bed for keeping these articles handy.

A small record player, a radio and the all-important television are a great boon to a harassed mother. Television usually means a bed made up on the living room couch which can be done for a few hours in the afternoon and provides a needed change. When the most intriguing toys lose their charm, it's time for stories read or told, and companionship with mother. With careful planning, however, most sick-abled youngsters will play by themselves some of the time.

Love Licks Airline Anti-Marriage Rule

By WES COOK
KANSAS CITY (AP)—Wedding bells no longer signal an end to the careers of airline stewardesses. At least one major airline has surrendered to Cupid and the other big domestic lines have granted him a number of concessions.

These concessions were probably inevitable but it has taken almost 27 years to dent the once unyielding airline policy that required a stewardess either to resign or to accept a ground position if she married.

The policy changes are not attributable to any decline in the supply of attractive, young, unmarried ladies. It is rather an attempt to slow down the turnover in personnel and reduce the cost of training programs.

Cupid's prodigious feats with the bow and arrow have resulted in an average 40 per cent a year turnover in stewardess personnel. The airlines first began to weaken in 1956. A heavy increase in passenger traffic forced them to ask former hostesses grounded or discharged by marriage to come back on an emergency basis during the tourist season.

The same measures had to be taken in 1956 and again this year. During the past tourist season Trans World Airlines decided to reassess its policy.

The airlines found that close to 500 stewardesses each year were detouring from the aisle of a modern airliner to the aisle of matrimony.

In 1938 TWA had only 60 stewardesses. Today there are almost 1,400. Because of the turnover, the airline trained 583 hostesses in 1956 and about the same number or more in 1957.

Marion Pilkins, in-flight service director, says the first change made in the policy gave former hostesses grounded by marriage the opportunity to return to flying on a permanent basis provided they could meet the other requirements. She adds:

"The vast majority contacted were of the opinion that they didn't think the uniform would fit them since they had started raising their own crop of hostesses and pilots."

The airline also decided to allow those already in service to continue to fly after marriage if they wished to do so and as long as they too continued to meet the other requirements.

As TWA was formulating its new policy a pretty 24-year-old blonde was in the midst of the usual pre-marriage preparations at her home in Wheaton, Minn.

"I was really thrilled," says Mrs. Lorrie Jern, "when they called from Kansas City just three days before my marriage to inform me that I wouldn't have to resign."

Lorrie became the first TWA stewardess to marry and continue her flight duties when her father, the Rev. Arthur Dirks, united her in marriage on Sept. 7 with Jean Jern.

While the airline has relaxed its policy considerably, it still will not hire married women and train them as hostesses, nor will it hire divorcees.

Carl Sandburg's Life, Poems Told By Dr. Edgar Hirshberg

Carl Sandburg, poet, balladist and biographer, was the subject of the program presented by Dr. Edgar W. Hirshberg before the Fine Arts Department of the Woman's Club Tuesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. L. A. Stroud.

A recently published poem by Sandburg entitled "Three Nice Mice" was among several read and discussed by Dr. Hirshberg.

Club members heard portions of recordings made by the poet of ballads he has collected during his lifetime. According to Dr. Hirshberg, the genuine love of the ballad and the joy in singing them has been the real success of the recordings.

A social hour preceded the program as Mrs. Stroud invited members into the dining room where they were served sandwiches, cookies, mints and coffee from a decorated, appointed table. Mrs. N. C. Brooks and Mrs. T. W. House were co-hostesses.

After the program a short business meeting was led by Mrs. R. P. Rogers, chairman, who also welcomed guests for the afternoon. Mrs. P. E. Upchurch and Miss Ernelle Brooks.

No Consolation For The Farmer

President Eisenhower's new farm program offers little for farmers and the nation except lower farm prices, lower farm income and greater stocks of farm surpluses to further depress our agriculture economy.

In recent years, farmers have found it increasingly difficult to gain their portion of the national income even with acreage restrictions on crops and accompanying price supports. Even under these conditions large surpluses in many commodities have been accumulated by the farm economy.

How then can the nation or its farmers expect the current situation to be improved by lowering price supports and increasing production?

Lower prices for agricultural commodities will not help the farmer. Increasing the surplus of crops in warehouses will not help the farmer. Where in this new Eisenhower-Benson farm program are the segments which will benefit the farmers?

This new proposal, like so many others which have been offered in the field of agriculture by the current administration, bespeak a lack of understanding or a lack of appreciation for the crucial problems which face the farmers of the nation. It is not a realistic program for helping the farmers in view of the current conditions in which the nation's agriculture finds itself.

To be sure the program probably appeals to segments of the nation's population who have little interest in agriculture. To be sure it may appeal to those who would seek to divert to other uses the funds which are needed if our agriculture is to remain solvent. There can be no doubt, however, that the new program will find little favor from the little man who depends on agriculture for his livelihood.

In a time when the farmers of the nation need an ambitious, imaginative and progressive federal program for advancement of agriculture, the administration comes up with a program that takes a page from the book of federal assistance to agriculture which may have been written two or three decades ago. It is a backward rather than a forward-looking program for agriculture.

In spite of the rough sledding the nation's agriculture has experienced in recent years, it remains a vital segment of the nation's economy. If it is allowed to deteriorate further, the downward trend will be reflected in other parts of the economy.

The nation's farm program needs and for years has needed revision to write the kind of farm program which is needed to meet the needs of today and the next few years.

At the moment, however, it appears that if such a program is to be had, it must come from Congress. So far it has not been offered by the administration.

Inflation Fatal To Saving Plan

By ELMER ROESSNER

It was many years ago that the government required preparers of food to state, "Contains Benzate of Soda" on their labels if such was the case, and in those days it was often the case because perfect sterilization had not been achieved and a little embalming was also required to keep foods from spoiling.

This legend still appears, but not very often because food preservation has progressed greatly and, besides, it scares off customers. People have been worrying whether a chemical that preserves food might not also preserve their stomachs, their brains and their posterity.

If this benzate of soda routine is proper, why then should not the Federal government require vendors of securities and other intangibles to label their certificates, bonds, etc., with a legend to effect: "This product contains Benzate of Inflation?"

WHAT ARE WE SAVING? This has been brought up by the advertisement of a New York bank for a savings-bonds insurance package. The headline is "You get so much for so little."

Do you? Does one? This is the deal: You put in $3 a week. If you are 35 — and aren't we all? — at the end of 10 years you have $50 in the bank, bonds with a face value of $250 and $2,000 worth of life insurance. At that point, the bonds are maturing and the insurance is expiring.

By January, 1968, you will have paid in $1,560. You will have had $2,000 worth of life protection and some dividends. In addition, you will have $1,100 in cash and a policy with a good cash-surrender value.

What will all this buy in 1968? A hot dog? Probably. With mustard? That depends. WARNING CALLED FOR

On the other hand, some time between now and 1968 we may have deflation. The returns from a $1,560 investment may be enough to pay for a home in the country. The Empire State

Building, San Diego County.

But the chances are that the inflation we have been having for the last 10 years will continue, and the chances are that continuation will be at a fast rate, rather than a slower rate. Your returns will probably buy a lot of hot dogs, with a lot of mustard and, if you wish, sauerkraut or barbecue sauce. But they probably will not buy as many hot dogs as the same amount of money will buy right now, and much fewer frankfurters than the same number of dollars would have bought in 1948 or in 1958.

So, if the public is entitled to warnings against benzate of soda — and against artificial coloring and flavoring — why should it not be warned against the presence of inflation? PROPOSES A LAW

In fairness to the few people with a dollar to sock away, should not there be a law requiring sellers of intangibles to carry warnings of inflation? Should there not be a law requiring savings banks, when advertising 3 1/2 per cent interest on deposits, to add a line saying, "With the value thereof eroded by inflation, if any?"

Should not insurance companies, offering $50,000, 20-payment life policies, be required to add the warning: "Maturing in 1978 at fifty thousand 1978 dollars." And should not underwriters be compelled to print on bonds these words: "Redeemable in 1998 at $1,000, come what may?"

Or should the government take steps now to make sure that a dollar will be worth a dollar in 1979 or 1988?

Or has the addition of the words, "In God we trust," transferred that responsibility from the Administration to a Higher Authority?

2 CENT PRICE CUT BRINGS $10,000 LITIGATION Two cents has touched off a $10,000 suit.

The Knomark Polishing Company, of Brooklyn, is suing Hess Brothers, of Allentown, Pa., for $10,000 charging that the Hess store sold a package of shoe polish, price-fixed at 29 cents, for 27 cents.

Strength For Today

KEEP YOUR LIGHTS ON Reflector signs on the highway have proved a great blessing to drivers. The car headlights illuminate signs painted in such a way as to make the lettering stand out vividly.

But reflector signs are of no value unless you have headlights and have them turned on. You have to throw light against the signs before they show up the directives. You have to have light proceeding from your car before the reflectors prove of any value. Your light is essential.

The great truths that humanity has discovered — mostly at the cost of hard experience — stand out as warnings, directives, and encouragement along life's pathways. Some are inscribed on the pages of world history. Some are held within the covers of our literary classics. The Bible is the greatest of all such repositories. But much of life's greatest wisdom is also carried about in the minds and hearts of everyday people. It is all available to us — but on condition. We must bring eagerness and understanding to bear on this body of knowledge and experience if it is going to be of any help to us.

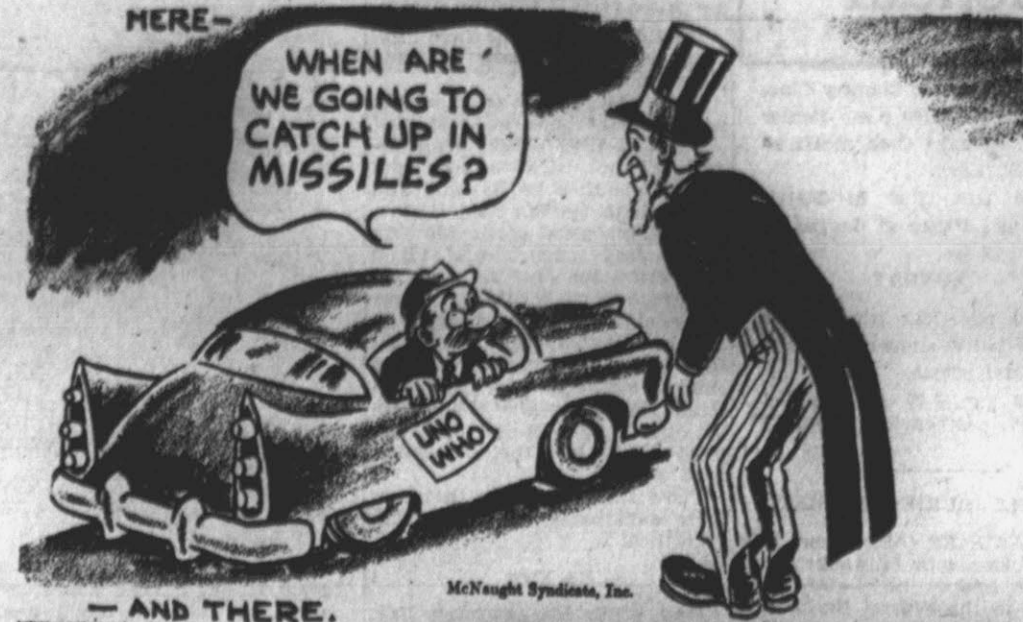

There must be light in our minds and souls before we can interpret what the world's wisdom has to say to us. Reflector lights probably save the lives of thousands of people every year. But they are of use to us only if we keep our headlights on.

Plenty Of Mud At Hand

There's an old expression, usually associated with convivial gatherings, that goes something like this:

Here's mud in your eye. Until this week I had thought it was just an expression. I had never met anyone who could back it up until I went to Farmville to talk with M. W. Rosch, American Cyanamid Corporation supervising engineer at the Flakeboard plant construction site.

Rosch has mud of all kinds, all shades and all depths. He isn't happy about it, however, and he would have already gone crazy if he wasn't a strong sort of man. Rosch's construction problems at the Flakeboard plant have been complicated a thousand times by his 100 acres of mud. He and the construction firms building the plant have to move heavy equipment across the job site, they have to pour concrete and they have to otherwise get around from point to point.

Thus far, the mud has either slowed them to a crawl or stopped them completely.

It's hard to imagine the extent of the mud until you actually see it. It starts at the property line of the building site and goes all the way across. Most of it is a thick, black type of mud that grabs at shoes and boots, and hangs on for dear life.

Major Charles S. Edwards of Farmville and I tried to walk around the job site Wednesday afternoon. (We should have known better.) We finally slugged our way to the concrete foundation walls of the main production building where we could stand above the sea of mud and decide we had gone far enough.

That vast quagmire has already put construction schedules at least four weeks behind. Original plans had called for the plant to begin operating on an experimental basis before the end of March. Now, Rosch and other engineers on the project are shooting for a May 1 starting date.

They aren't sure they'll reach the goal, but Rosch has installed a new plan of putting up roofs and sidings on all buildings before attempting to carry inside work any farther. He hopes that the coverings will permit backfill inside the foundation forms to dry sufficiently for installation of concrete floors.

As things stand now, no more concrete can be poured until the area dries out. The thick mud won't support the weight of the concrete and is even giving away under high pressure going through water lines.

Cause of all the mud is, of course, the almost constant rain Pitt County has had since late last summer. Rosch realizes that the rain will help Pitt paroled farms in the months to come but he still wishes it would go away.

He has had about all he can stand.

Other Editors Saying -- Have Cake--Will Eat It

(Stillwater Okla.) Daily News-Press) The leaders of the AFL-CIO evidently are determined not to be caught doing any original economic thinking. When business is spiraling upward, they call for wage increases to keep pace with the rising cost of living. When, as now, economic activity is in a decline, they call for wage increases to bolster workers' sagging income.

No matter what the time or circumstance, it would seem, higher wages in one form or another constitute organized labor's perennial answer. But there are a good many economic analysts and observers who question the wisdom of this, not only in the interests of the economy but of workers themselves.

To begin with, if higher wages are labor's stock reply whatever the situation, this answer becomes pretty meaningless. It can hardly have equal validity in all circumstances. That it is nevertheless offered in every economic climate suggests automatic behavior almost devoid of thought in labor's top echelons.

To push wages higher in a falling economy is to drive costs up and perhaps compel further economists believe that wage price increases which only stiffen consumer resistance. Most economists believe that wage gains should be carefully attuned to an industry's advances in real economic wealth, in other words, to its ability to turn out more goods or services for the same or less productive effort.

When such advances are made, they feel labor and the consumer and the investor should share fairly in the resulting heightened profits for industry. Few quarrel with this view.

But when wage gains are exacted from an economic pie that is shrinking or merely holding size, no one benefits in the long run. In the one case, a decline tends to be deepened. In the other, inflationary pressures tend swiftly to wipe out the gains.

Organized labor's stubborn insistence on the "wage increase" policy as a workers' cure-all represents a barren contribution to national leadership at a juncture when constructive proposals would be widely welcomed.

Opinions In Brief

"It would be unwise for the President or anybody else to underestimate either the capacity of the American people to swallow really harsh truths, or their need to know them if they exist. It should not be forgotten that twice in this century they have risen up to cast their great and full weight into the balance for freedom in monumental world wars." — DeKalb (Ill.) Chronicle.

Discontent Over Defense Budget

WASHINGTON — There is a good deal of dissatisfaction among military leaders over the President's budget. The Pentagon's discontent, not particularly noticeable among the top civilian officials, who are after all a part of the administration team, but among officers who know they will have to fight any war the Nation gets into, is basically caused by the realization that the ability to fight "brush fire" wars is clearly not to be fire by the character of the military budget.

What the White House appears to have done in the proposed budget is to attempt to expand the Nation's effort in the modern weapons field — the guided missiles, rockets, and the research and development necessary — while at the same time paying for the extra effort by cutting back on conventional armaments. This would appear to be a sensible policy only if the political and military outlook was for a major world war, not for a localized war in some area where the Communists think aggression would succeed. Since this is decidedly not the outlook, and almost every intelligence source suggests that small wars are almost certain and a major world war is unlikely, the Eisenhower budget would seem to be completely unrealistic.

The most worrisome aspect of the current situation, military leaders feel, is the "business as usual" temperament the budget seems to imply. There may be a surface concern with the lag in missile development, illustrated by the larger amounts to be devoted to that field. But nowhere in the budget is there any indication that the White House is seriously concerned with the emergency nature of our country's present predicament. On the contrary, the President and his advisers seem to be still under the spell of the George Humphrey mentality: once that is accomplished, the defenses of the Nation will take care of themselves. But they won't.

Yet there is much, much less danger in deficit financing, in unbalanced budgets, than in a defense establishment inadequate to whatever demands may be financial solvency that are defensible in normal times are not valid in the Sputnik age; we must realize that this Nation and all it represents is in frightening peril. A balanced budget and a "sound" dollar will not defend this country or the rest of the free world against a Communist assault.

Military men expect that conventional forces and conventional weapons will continue to be used in fringe wars, just as they were in Korea. The reasoning goes that no nation, least of all the Soviet Union, wants to precipitate a major war that would inevitably bring massive destruction, whatever success a surprise attack might have. There is just no possibility that a surprise nuclear attack on U.S. bases could wipe out all of them at once. Thus Russian cities and military targets would be clobered inevitably.

Yet there is completely inadequate provision made in the new budget for expansion and strengthening of the national potential in the field of conventional armaments. Indeed, with the planned cuts in manpower already scheduled the ability of the United States to wage a limited war will be less than ever, and it is thought to be inadequate now. Such a situation will be nothing less than a direct invitation to the Kremlin to start probing at the free world's soft spots. If we and our allies are unable to bring instant resistance into play with conventional forces, the alternatives will be either surrender to the Communists or to ourselves precipitate nuclear world war. The temptation to do the latter will be strong, and it will be suicidal as well.

In other fields too, the budget seems to leave much to be desired. There appears to be little more than lip-service to the need to overhaul the American educational system and to over-

Plague Of The Times

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK (AP) — A man can go to a lawyer and return home without feeling he himself has become another Clarence Darrow.

A man can go to a physician and emerge without feeling that the visit has turned him into another Hippocrates or Dr. Paul Dudley White.

Then why, pray tell me, can't a person go to a psychiatrist and leave without the conviction that he is now the reincarnation of Sigmund Freud?

I am not one to mock the benefits of psychoanalysis, real or fancies. If a fellow takes an hour off in the middle of the day to lie down on a couch and tell his troubles, he at least is taking a load off his feet — as well as his chest.

It may do a lot for his mind as well as rest his feet. But why does he feel that one trip to a psychiatrist's couch makes him, when he arises, an authority on my mind?

But it seems to. A trained psychoanalyst may have spent 15 years studying his art and still feel he has much to learn. But his patient, after a 60-minute verbal enunciation, is often convinced he now knows not only what is wrong with himself — but also what is wrong with all his friends.

Our civilization is getting cluttered up with these amateur mind sweepers. This type of Messiah is far worse than a reformed drunk, who after all won't bother to lecture you unless he sees a drink in your eager little paw.

Your Amateur Psychoanalyst sees an incipient neurosis or budding psychosis in everything you do. The one thing he can't stand is the thought that you are well adjusted, and he is not.

How many people do you know like this today? I know at least a dozen, and it appears to me they are beginning to make social life and ordinary conversation, as we have known it in the past, more and more impossible.

If you meet one of these pests at a party and sneeze and murmur, "I must be catching a cold," he has a better answer: "No, it may be a sign of frustration. You feel neglected and overlooked. The sneeze is a subconscious attempt to gain attention and recognition, such as your mother gave you when you were an infant."

It is useless for you to argue that you are now of an age when you expect to stand on your own two feet and don't really expect anyone else to change your diaper for you. To him the smallest action has a deep hidden significance, one which you yourself aren't at all aware of.

Your daughter enters wearing a new dress and asks, "Do I look pretty, daddy?" He sees her remark as a danger signal. "Your daughter is developing a terrible cause of expropriated narcissism," he warns. "You'd better do something about it now — before it's too late."

If you mull aloud over which of two restaurants to go to for lunch, you're coming down with schizophrenia. If it's raining and you question whether you'll be able to get a taxi, that's a sure sign you've got an inferiority complex, and he asks accusingly, "What are you really afraid of?"

If you worry because you've got a lot of bills to pay, you're a manic-depressive in the depressive phase. On the other hand, if you get a raise in pay and celebrate it, you're a manic-depressive in the manic, or exhilarated phase.

You can't win no matter how you behave. If you agree with him, you're a masochist. If, writhed beyond endurance by the way, you insist on sticking (Continued on page five)

Fellowship of the Church

ILLUSTRATED SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

By Alfred J. Suescher

Scripture—Acts 2:42-47; Romans 15:1-9; Ephesians 4:17-32; Philippians 1:3-11.

After Christ's ascension and the coming of the Holy Spirit, the apostles did many signs and wonders. The church members kept together, sharing their possessions and worshipping.

Eating together from house to house, filled with gladness and singleness of heart, they praised God. They were in favor with all people, adding many new converts to the faith.

When a man accepts Christ he should become a new man. "Let him that stole steal no more," but labor honestly so that he may help the needy, Paul wrote.

"Be ye kind one to another, tenderhearted, forgiving one another, even as God for Christ's sake hath forgiven you." Paul wrote the Ephesians. MEMORY VERSE—Ephesians 4:32.

By NEWMAN CAMPBELL. IN THE VERSES assigned us in this lesson in Acts 2:42-47, we read of the power given to the apostles after the coming to them of the Holy Spirit. "Many wonders and signs were done by the apostles," so many that people became afraid.

of what a Christian person's character should be when he walks with God. He asks his readers not to walk in vanity of mind, having their understanding darkened and therefore fall into sinful ways. "Ye have not so learned Christ," he says.

The Golden Text

The day of Pentecost.

"Be ye kind one to another, tenderhearted, forgiving one another, even as God for Christ's sake hath forgiven you."—Ephesians 4:32.

Many of the disciples were doubtless poor, as their preaching of the Gospel prevented them from being considered eligible for work in many instances. So those who were well off sold their possessions and all shared alike.

Let no corrupt communication proceed out of your mouth, but that which is good to the use of edifying, that it may minister grace unto the hearers."

Let all bitterness, and wrath, and anger, and clamor, and evil speaking, be put away from you, with all malice: "And be ye kind one to another, tenderhearted, forgiving one another, even as God for Christ's sake hath forgiven you."

Let all bitterness, and wrath, and anger, and clamor, and evil speaking, be put away from you, with all malice: "And be ye kind one to another, tenderhearted, forgiving one another, even as God for Christ's sake hath forgiven you."

Now we turn again to Paul's epistles, where, in Romans 15:1-9, we read: "We then that are strong ought to bear the infirmities of the weak, and not to please ourselves. Let every one of us please his neighbor for his good... For even Christ pleased not himself, but, as it is written, 'The reproaches of them that reproached thee fell on Me.'"

Let all bitterness, and wrath, and anger, and clamor, and evil speaking, be put away from you, with all malice: "And be ye kind one to another, tenderhearted, forgiving one another, even as God for Christ's sake hath forgiven you."

Propose Govm't Lease Shipyard To Authority

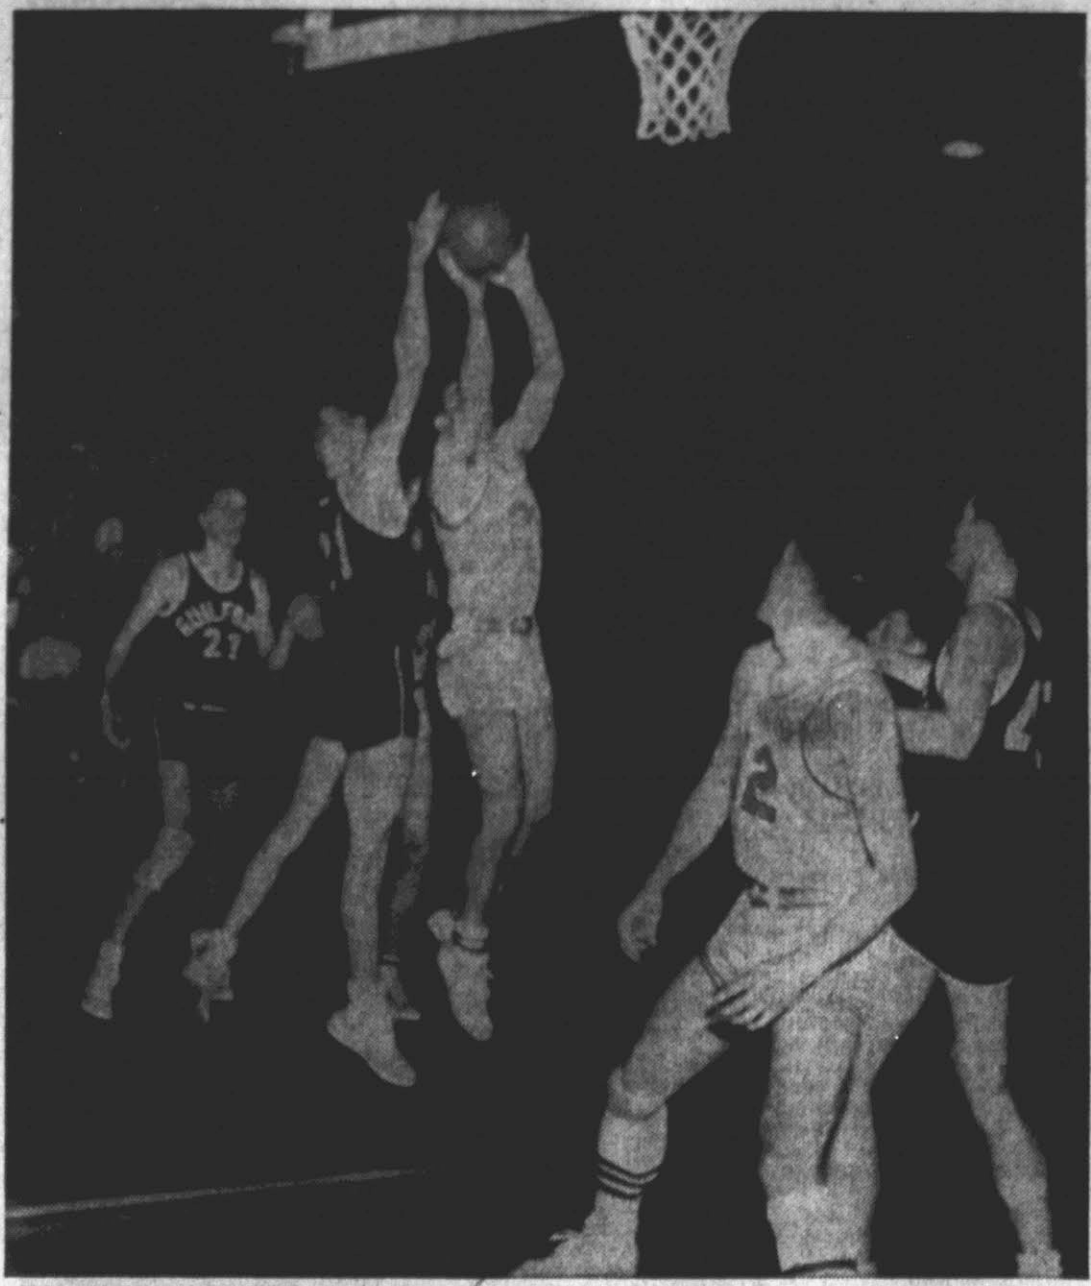

WASHINGTON (AP) — Maritime Administrator Clarence G. Morse says his department will look into a proposal that the government, instead of selling the standby shipyard at Wilmington, N.C., lease it for several years to the North Carolina State Ports Authority. Morse testified yesterday before the House Merchant Marine Committee on proposals to offer to sell standby shipyards at Wilmington and three West Coast cities. He said the Budget Bureau and appropriations committees have urged the government to get rid of the maintenance expense. Morse said sale of the Wilmington yard, whose book value Morse quoted as $12,250,000, would "bottle up" port facilities there. Morse's answer was that it would prevent the State Ports Authority (SPA) from expanding downstream away from the city. Lenson said sale also might block SPA use of the railroad tracks adjacent to the shipyard property. He asked if the Maritime Administration would be willing to look into possible leasing of the yard to SPA for perhaps 15 years. Morse suggested that 30 years might be better but that the matter would have to be explored further. Lenson said North Carolina did not expect to be treated with any less consideration than the states and municipalities which bought a number of shipyards at small cost after World War II. The proposed sales of the four shipyards discussed yesterday would carry certain restrictions, including one to preserve the yard facilities for shipbuilding and repair in event of national emergency.

Boyle Column.. Doubled Goal In Funds Campaign

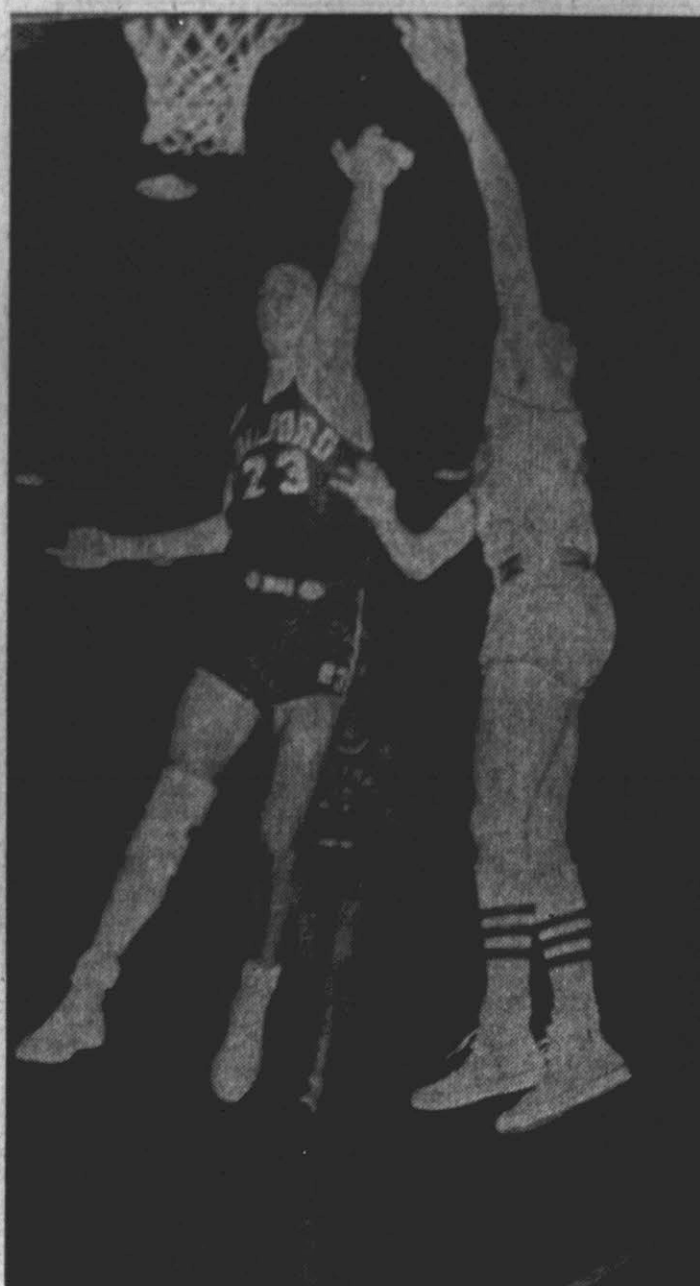

OTTAWA, Ill. (AP)—The generous citizens of LaSalle County have doubled their goal in a campaign to raise funds for surgery on a 3-year-old girl's heart. Janice Kiest, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Kiest of Marselles, suffers from a congenital heart condition. Her father, a truck driver, spent the family's savings for two previous operations on the girl. A campaign for funds to finance another operation, this one at the University of Minnesota, was begun last week by the Ottawa Daily Republican Times. The goal was $2,500. Contributions already total $4,937. Livestock are processed and packed in more than 300 meat plants in Illinois.

Meet Lenoir Rhyne At Hickory Saturday

A stubborn stop-and-go Guilford Quakers managed to stall East Carolina's eighth-ranked nationally scoring machine to a 37-26 halftime score but couldn't stop the Pirates when they finally got into high gear, and ECC rolled to a 90-63 victory.

The Bucs put on a mighty 53-point last half surge—scoring 37 of those points in the final 10 minutes—to completely overcome their opponents at Memorial Gym and chalk up their sixth-loop win of the year. They now have a 6-1 mark and remain in a deadlock with Lenoir Rhyne for top place. Overall, the Pirates are 9-1.

Tomorrow night, at Hickory, the connecting beneath the basket. They dominated the backboards, too, during that brief stretch. They managed to pull the Buc lead down to 45-44 about midway in the third period.

At that point, East Carolina regained its composure and began clipping away at the basket with almost unerring accuracy. Plaster, Ingram, and Guy Mendenhall began to take control of the boards again. Ike Riddick, primarily a jump shot artist from beyond the foul circle, began driving in and recording points at close range. Ingram followed suit.

By the time the third quarter rolled around, the Bucs had moved nine points ahead, 53-44. In that final ten minutes, Ingram clicked for three field goals and three free tosses; Riddick scored three field goals and four charity shots; Plaster threw in three from the floor and added two at the line; substitutes Wallace Lewis and Marion Hales connected for two and four respectively; Curry and O'Brien added a field goal each.

In that span of ten minutes, ECC moved their lead up to 30 points, but had it chopped to 27 by the end of the game. It ended 90-63.

With 4:50 remaining in the first half, the Pirates moved their margin to 30-19 and could pull no further than 11 points ahead of the Quakers before the buzzer. It was 37-26 at halftime.

It was Riddick and forward Don Smith who kept the Bucs ahead in the first half. Both scored eight points apiece. Jess Curry added six and Plaster dumped in five.

Bob Young, 6-5 Guilford center, threw in nine to pace his club in the first two quarters. Roger Roan and Ted Tilghman added five each.

Going into the third quarter, the Pirates moved off in a still-sluggish mode of play, staying 11 to 13 points ahead of the Quakers for a short while. Then, Young, Tilghman, and guard Don Hemrick began clicking for the visitors.

The Quakers hit one of their erratic hot spells and began to out-hustle their hosts. Hemrick sank three long push shots and the bespectacled Young began

Basilio Could Have Worries About Arena

CHICAGO (AP)—It should be with considerable wariness that Carmen Basilio puts his middleweight title on the line in a rematch with Sugar Ray Robinson March 25 at Chicago Stadium.

The big arena, which will be sealed for an indoor record gate of $500,000 based on a 22,000 attendance, is the scene of some of Robinson's most dramatic triumphs.

There, on Feb. 24, 1951, he stopped Jake LaMotta in the 11th round to win the 160-pound crown. There, on April 16, 1952, he defended it by chilling Rocky Graziano in the third round.

There, he climaxed a comeback Dec. 9, 1955, by knocking out Bobo Olson in the fifth round to regain the title.

There, he again regained it May 1, 1957, with a fifth-round kayo of Gene Fullmer.

Basilio dethroned the 37-year-old Robinson last Sept. 23 in Yankee Stadium and vacated his welterweight title.

It was a bruising 15-rounder with Basilio getting a split decision.

But Robinson proved he still could go at top speed for the full distance.

The two will sign fight contracts Thursday in Chicago.

Jim Norris, International Boxing Club president, said, "We were guaranteed $275,000 from theater-TV and we expect it to go much higher than that."

The fighters each will receive 30 per cent of the proceeds from the gate, television, radio and motion picture rights.

ECC's NAIA Swimming Champs Seek No. Two

East Carolina's swimming team, the defending NAIA champions, will be seeking win number two Friday when they meet Virginia Military in the latter's pool.

The Pirate mermen are struggling through a mediocre season thus far due mainly to a rugged schedule. Coach Charles DeShaw's swimmers have been matched against some of the best teams in this section of the country, including Carolina's nationally ranked outfit. Going into the V.M.I. meet, the local water kings boast a 1-2-1 mark.

Their last and only home meet resulted in a 6-40 loss to North Carolina's Athletic Club. Possessing two former All-Americans, the visitors were forced to the wire before winning the meet on the final relay.

Despite the loss of four top-notch mermen, DeShaw has molded another sound club. Bob Sawyer and Ken Midgette have highlighted the action thus far. Both are undefeated. Sawyer, one of the best backstrokers in the nation and NAIA champion, is just a junior and should be a sure bet for All-American honors. Midgette, a colorful diver, is headed for his best season and is also a junior.

Other returning performers from the championship club which give the Pirates some experience and strength are Jack Kobberling, Mike Williamson, Sidney Oliver, Teddy Gartman, and Glenn Dwyer.

The Cadets of V.M.I. captured the Southern Conference title last year, but a loss to ECC blemished their record. They are reportedly anxiously awaiting a chance for revenge. They do not meet ECC in the home pool.

The remaining home meets for ECC will be with Carolina and the U. of Georgia. Others may be added later.

The committee met yesterday with the Coliseum's three long-time football tenants, the University of Southern California, UCLA and the Los Angeles Rams. The idea was to work out a plan that would get the Dodgers into the 101,000-seat Coliseum without slighting the two universities and the professional football team.

The committee planned to submit a report to the full commission, meeting at 10 a.m. today. On the basis of this, the commission could take a final vote. Balled down, the situation is this: The football teams pay 10 per cent rental. Dodger President Walter O'Malley has offered to pay $200,000 a year for two years.

Virginia Tech Has Good Crop Of Frosh Talent

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Southern Conference basketball teams have come up with a handsome crop of freshman talent this season, and nowhere is the yearling crop bigger or better than at Virginia Tech.

All told, seven fresh have worked their way into starting positions in the conference. Three of them are at Tech, and as they gain in poise and scoring ability, the Techmen are becoming a team to reckon with.

The Virginia Tech trio are Bob Ayersman, a 6-4 forward; Chris Smith, a 6-2 center; and Earl Gilbert, a 6-2 guard. Propelled principally by this threesome, Tech has won its last two games in impressive fashion after losing five of its first six.

Ayersman has an even 18-point average in eight starts, Smith's average is 14 points per game and Gilbert's is 13.3.

The other four frosh who've claimed starting berths in the league are Bev Vaughn (11.1) and Jeff Coehn (13.1) of William and Mary, Bill Shinn (10.4) of Davidson and Dick Jones of The Citadel, a classy floor man whose scoring average, about five points per game, doesn't indicate his true worth.

Ayersman with 29 points, Smith with 20 and Gilbert with 16 were the ringleaders for Virginia Tech last night as the Techmen clubbed Washington and Lee 96-60 for their second conference victory in five starts. Tech shot 55 per cent from the floor and ran up a 48-26 advantage over the struggling Generals in the first half.

Dom Flora, leading scorer in the conference, topped W&L's attack with 22 points. The Generals now are 0-5 in conference competition.

Davidson, meantime, nipped Furman at the wire 72-70 on Dave Hollingsworth's jump shot that went through the nets with five seconds remaining. It was the third conference victory in four starts for the Wildcats and shoved them into second place in the standings behind West Virginia.

Semi Mintz and Sonny Ferguson each had 17 points for Davidson while Shinn and Hollingsworth contributed 15. Tom Conard had 19, Dave Shepard 18, Dick Wright 16 and Byron Pinson 15 for Furman, which still is without a conference victory after three tries.

There are no games involving conference teams tonight.

Jacksonville Rated Over Phants Tonight

Ranked six-point favorites, Jacksonville's league-leading Cardinals invade Julius H. Rose gymnasium tonight to do battle with the Greenville Phantoms.

Coach Tom Prichard's surprising Cards, boasting a 3-1 record against Northeastern Conference opponents, will be meeting one of the pre-season picks tonight for the first time. They have already knocked off Kinston, Roanoke Rapids, and Elizabeth City to record more wins than any other loop club. Their only loss was to New Bern.

At present, New Bern and Greenville are tied for the number two slot in the standings. Both teams have 2-1 marks.

Before the current season began, Greenville, Washington and New Bern were chosen as the probable teams to beat in the Northeastern Conference. It was regarded as a two-way battle for the most part, between Greenville and the Pam-Pack. Jacksonville was given a bottom-place ranking.

Because of the unpredictable action that has already occurred in conference play, most observers are at a loss as to how to predict the outcome of tonight's game. Greenville, tall, experienced, smooth, has compiled a 5- record thus far against all comers—including some top-flight Class AAA teams. But they haven't looked good against league opponents of late.

They lost out to Washington in the opener in a protested game that was widely disputed. That was perhaps their best game. It took all they had to down Elizabeth City, although they finished with a 20-point winning margin. Their last game, a victory over Roanoke Rapids, was a ragged one.

But Jacksonville has similar troubles, too. They looked good against Roanoke Rapids and even better against Kinston. But in their last game—a 56-51 victory over Elizabeth City—they did not come through smoothly at all.

Both Greenville and Jacksonville appear to have hot-and-cold teams that can play superbly one night and miserably the next.

And so, whichever club is "on" will probably win out tonight. Jacksonville, nevertheless, due to its 3-1 mark, is given the six-point edge.

Coach Boley Farley's starting unit is expected to be made up of Walker Allen and John Wesley Hudson at guards, Dick Evans and Francis Nunn at forwards, and Steve Noble at center. Bob Bilbro, Albert Crawford, Mack Roebuck, Bobby Edwards, Billy Cox, and Don Wilkerson will probably see action.

A junior varsity contest will open the action at 6:30 tonight, and the varsity game will get underway at 8:00.

Winning Touch

By DON WEISS

The Associated Press
Fast or slow, power or finesse. Tom Blackburn's University of Dayton basketball teams have that winning touch.

Blackburn, the silver-haired strategist whose teams rolled up a 217-83 record over the last decade, was handed a squad this year short on capable big men but long on speed and adaptability.

It has meant a different style of play, but the Flyers are winning just the same.

Dayton's record was boosted to 12-2 last night with a 75-60 victory over Oklahoma City. The Flyers, after playing possession-type basketball most of the season, did it with a fast break this week.

Blackburn junked ball control after seven minutes of play and after the teams tied 12-12. The result was a spurt that whipped the Flyers into a 45-21 halftime lead. The Flyers, after playing possession-type basketball most of the season, did it with a fast break this week.

That was 12 points in the closing minutes.

AFL-CIO Charged Failing To Practice Its Preachings

CHARLOTTE (AP)—The AFL-CIO was charged with failing to practice its preachings on labor organizing and job terminations, has been asked to consider staff salary cuts of 5 to 10 per cent so it can rehire 100 organizers who lost their jobs this week.

Leaders of the Field Representatives Federation, a group set up within the AFL-CIO to establish bargaining rights, made the salary cut proposal in a telegram of protest yesterday to AFL-CIO President George Meany.

Robert W. Christofferson of Charlotte, FRP secretary who was one of 36 field organizers discharged, has said he was ousted because he helped form the bargaining unit.

Red Regimes Would Like To 'Help' Latin America

By WILLIAM L. RYAN AP Foreign News Analyst Communist governments are ready and eager to send know-how teams to Latin America to compete with the Americans there.

Moscow already has mounted a heavy propaganda offensive keyed to the advantages of Latin-American economic cooperation with Communist bloc nations.

PARAGUAY: The technical aid program bore much fruit in improving ancient farming methods in this small country. A relatively small ICA staff has aroused no resentment.

Thus far the Latin Americans seem unimpressed. U.S. aid programs and technicians alike are highly popular. Local leaders would consider it disastrous if the United States cut back either on the program or the U.S. personnel engaged in technical assistance.

MEXICO: Most of the ICA program concerns training Mexicans to do better jobs and to pass know-how on to others. It costs Uncle Sam about $700,000 a year, small in comparison with programs elsewhere. There are only 10 American technicians on the permanent staff.

URUGUAY: There is only a small ICA staff in Uruguay. But, said a source close to the government, "the departure of U.S. aid technicians would be deplorable" because of the important assistance they give in specialized fields.

Sarah Churchill Pays Court $50

BRAZIL: The program is considered important to this growing nation's development. It is relatively modest, costing about 4 1/2 million dollars a year. There are 135 U.S. technicians, working in agriculture, health, education, mineral development, civil aviation, railway and labor programs. Over-all administration accounts for 33.

MALIBU, Calif. (AP)—Actress Sarah Churchill, head high and fighting to hold back the tears, pleaded guilty to a drunk charge, but explained: "I was more ill than drunk."

Judge Woodmansee said her attitude was commendable, but added: "You are the daughter of the world's greatest living statesman, but we must place the case in its proper perspective."

Murder Does Its Homework

By CORNELL WOOLRICH

What Has Happened

Was the "bad dream" Johnny Gaines described in his homework paper a figment of the imagination or a terrible fact? Miss Prince, his teacher, believed it was the latter. She tried to enlist the aid of police to investigate, but found them skeptical of her fears. She undertook to look into the matter herself. To do so, she rented a room at Johnny's house, where the boy's stepfather and step-brother made her feel in danger. So far, she had found no concrete evidence that things were amiss except for a freshly scrubbed stain on the kitchen floor. Also, using her wits, she had tricked Mrs. Mason into indicating that something was amiss in the woods behind the house.

CHAPTER FOUR

The trees were not set thickly together but they covered a lot of ground. She had not expected anything so miraculous as to stumble on something the moment she stepped in here. It was quite likely that she would leave none the wiser this time. But she intended returning here again and again if necessary, until—

She was getting tired now, and she spotted a half-submerged stump protruding from the damp, moldy turf and sat down on it. The stump was green all over with some sort of fungus, but she was too tired to care. The ground in here remained in a continual state of moldy dampness, she noted. The sun never had a chance to reach through the leafy ceiling of the trees and dry it out.

She had been sitting there perhaps two minutes at the most, when a faint scream of acute fright reached her from a distance. It was thin and piping, and must have been thin even at its source. She jarred to her feet. It had sounded like the voice of a child, not a grown-up. It repeated itself, and two others joined in with it, as frightened as the first, if less shrilly acute. She started to run, as far as the crackles of ground would allow toward the direction from which she believed the commotion was coming.

She could hear water splashing, and then without any warning she came crashing into the margin of a sizable and completely screened-off woodland pool. It was shaped like a figure 8, and at the waist, where it narrowed, was an irregular bridge of flat stones. There was a considerable difference in height between the two sections, and the water coursed into the lower one in a placid, silken waterfall stretching the entire width of the basin. This lower oval was one of the most remarkable sights she had ever seen. It was shallow, the water was only about knee-high in it, and under the water was dazzling creamy-white sand. There was something clean and delightful-looking about it.

Two small boys in swimming trunks, one of them Johnny Gaines, were arching over two of the stepping-stones, frantically juggling at a third boy who hung suspended between them, legs scissoring wildly over the water and sleek sand below. "Keep moving them!" she heard Johnny shriek just as she got there. "Don't let 'em stay still!"

She couldn't understand the reason for their terror. The water below him certainly wasn't deep enough to drown anybody. "Help us, lady!" the other youngster screamed. "Help us get him back up over the edge here!" She kicked off her high-arched shoes, picked her way out of them along the stones, displaced the nearest one's grip with her own on the floundering object of rescue. He couldn't come up for a minute, even under the added pull of her adult strength, and she couldn't make out what was holding him. There was nothing visible but a broil of sand-smoking water around his legs. She hauled backwards from him with every ounce of strength in her body, and suddenly he came free.

The three boys immediately retreated to the safety of the bank, and she followed. "Why were you so frightened?" she asked. "Don't you know what that is?" Johnny said, still whimpering. "Quicksand. Once that gets you—"

There could be no mistaking the genuineness of their fright. Johnny's two companions scuttled off for home without further ado, finishing their dressing as they went. "Look, I'll show you." He picked up a fist-sized rock and threw it in. What happened sent a chill down her spine. The stone lay there for a moment, motionless and perfectly visible through the crystalline water. Then there was a slight concentric swirl of the sand immediately around it, a dimple appeared on its surface, evened out again, and suddenly the stone wasn't there any more. "We'd better go," she said, taking a step backward from it.

"The upper pool's all right, it's only got gravel at the bottom," Johnny was explaining, wiping his hands with a handful of leaves. She didn't hear him. She was examining the branch of a bush growing beside the bank that had swung back into place in her wake. It formed an acute angle such as is never found in nature. It was badly fractured halfway along its length. She reached for a second branch, a third, and fingered them. Their spines were all broken the same way.

Her face paled a little. She moved around the entire perimeter of the bush, handling its shoots. Then she examined the neighboring bushes. The fractures were all on the landward side, away from the pool. The tendrils that overhung the water itself—that anyone in difficulties in the sand could have been expected to grasp—were all undamaged, arching gracefully under the way they had grown.

She came away with a puzzled look on her face. At the edge of the woods, just before they came out into the open again, the youngster beside her coaxed plaintively: "Miss Prince, don't gimme 'way about going swimming in there, will you?" "Won't they notice your hair's damp?"

"Sure, but I can say I went swimming in the mill-pond, down by the O'Brien place. I'm allowed to go there."

"Oh, it's just that—that place we just came from? They don't want you to go near?" He nodded.

That could have been because of the quicksand. Then again it could have been for other reasons. "Have they always told you to keep away from there?" she hazarded. "I paid off." "No'm, only lately," he answered. "Only lately. She decided she was going to pay another visit to that cannibal sandbed. With a long pole, perhaps. The evening meal began in deceptive calmness. Although the two Masons continued to watch her in sullen silence, there seemed to be just casual curiosity in their under-brow glances. A remark from Johnny suddenly brought on a crisis when she was least expecting it. The youngster didn't realize the dynamite in his question. "Did I pass, in that composition I handed in?" he asked all at once. And then, before she could stop him in time, he blurted out: "You know, the one about the dream I had, where I came down and—"

Without raising eyes from the table she could sense the tightening of the tension around her. It was as noticeable as though an electric current were streaking around the room. Ed Mason forgot to go ahead eating, he just sat looking down at his plate. Then his father stopped too, and looked at his plate.

There was only one answer she could make. "I haven't got around to reading it yet." "Something made her add: 'It's up there on the table in my room right now.'" Mason resumed eating. Then Ed followed suit.

She had given them all the rope they needed. If the composition disappeared, as she was almost certain it was going to, that would be as good as an admission that— She purposely lingered below, helping Mrs. Mason as she had the night before. When she came out of the kitchen and made ready to go up to her room, they were both sprawled out in the adjoining room. Whether one of them had made a quick trip up the stairs and down again, she had no way of knowing—until she got up there herself.

Mason's eyes followed her in a strangely steadfast way as she started up the stairs. Just what the look signified she couldn't quite make out. It made her uneasy, although it wasn't threatening in itself. It had some other quality that she couldn't figure out, a sort of shrewd complacency. Just before she reached the turn and passed from sight he called out: "Have a good night's sleep, Miss." She saw a mocking flicker of the eyes pass between him and Ed.

She didn't answer. The hand with which she was tending the lamp she was taking up with her shook a little as she let herself into her room and closed the door. She moved a chair in front of it as a sort of barricade. Then she hurried to the table and sifted through the homework papers stacked on it.

It was still there. It hadn't been touched. It was out of the alphabetical order she always kept her papers in, but it had been left there for her to read at will. That puzzled, almost crestfallen look that she'd had at the pool that afternoon came back to her face again. She'd been positive she would find it missing.

Johnny has another "dream"; one that sets Miss Prince's hopes reeling in tomorrow's chapter of MURDER DOES ITS HOMEWORK, exclusively in The Daily Reflector.

Seven-Year-Old Goes Into Action

SANTA ROSA, Calif. (AP)—A 7-year-old boy went into action when one of two gunmen dragged his mother from a car and demanded her purse. As the gunman twisted the arm of Mrs. Konstance Kohlsh of San Francisco, her son Theodore kicked the man's shins. The gunman brushed the boy aside. Theodore kept kicking. Finally Theodore told the gunmen if they would let his mother go he'd tell them where the money was. He showed them a wallet in a shopping bag. So the gunmen departed with $125.

NEW YORK (N.Y.S.E.)—The stock market retreated in moderate trading early this afternoon.

Federal stocks dropped fractions to a point or more.

Steels, aircrafts, oils, rails and coppers were well below yesterday's closing prices while motors, airlines and building material issues were mixed.

The opening was active as the market continued its downward trend of late yesterday after the enthusiastic early rise on news of lower margin requirements. Prices slipped a bit more then held fairly well at the lower levels.

Business and industrial news continued to be drab and Wall Streeters noted that there was nothing in the market fundamentals to prolong the shot-in-the-arm resulting from reduced margins.

Despite the apparently successful firing of its Polaris missile, Lockheed eased.

Failure of individual stocks to respond to specific news showed a kind of lethargy which brokers said reflected extreme doubt by investors as to the near term.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks at noon was down 90 cents to $158.90 with the industrials down $1.30, the rails down 90 cents and the utilities down 10 cents.

Education Board

Association to be expended for instructional supplies and library is $400; whereas, we have only $325 and have been reprimanded for the past two years because of being marginal in standards.

"The Board of Higher Education can help us," he said, "to obtain more liberal appropriations for instructional materials and equipment, library books, journals, additional staff members, physical facilities, and increased scholarships and loan funds so that more students may prepare for the teaching profession."

Charges for tuition and fees, which run about $800 per year per student, "should not be increased anymore," the president said.

"We have no suggestions to make as we believe our students are doing all they can be expected to do, except for a minority group who are probably able to pay more. We would not be in favor of increasing tuition, regardless of how it may be used," he explained.

The college's loan fund, according to Dr. Messick, includes $41,315.41, of which $4,993 is involved in outstanding loans to 33 people.

In addition to the loan fund, he said the total number of scholarships available to students is 80 $100 scholarships awarded annually with a total value of $8,000.

Dr. Messick also called for a revised salary schedule to obtain and retain faculty members. The schedule he suggested called for instructors to receive from $4,500 to $5,500; assistant professors, $5,000 to $7,500; associate professors, $6,000 to $7,500; and full professors, $7,200 to $10,000.

Dr. Messick's report took issue with a statement by Space Utilization Associates, a survey firm hired by the Board of Higher Education, that the college would be able to take care of classroom instruction for approximately 5,800 students when present or planned construction projects are completed.

"We are not in agreement concerning the statement," he said, "but we do think we could take care of 5,000. The BHA worked out the teaching load to be about 11 hours a week, whereas we now require 15, and which, of course, would require more facilities."

Social Frat Nears Nat'l Affiliations

Giant strides toward the establishment of a national social fraternity on the campus of East Carolina College have been made by members of the Delta Sigma Rho.

This local fraternity, formed during the month of October, 1956, is corresponding and working toward affiliation with Lambda Chi Alpha. Their progress was reported at a dinner meeting held last night at the Greenville Country Club, attended by college officials, members of the fraternity and individuals instrumental in the strife for national affiliation.

Speaking about social fraternities, Dr. Orval Phillips, Registrar, noted that much could be accomplished by such organizations. The areas of service pointed out to the group were: helpfulness to the individual student service to the fraternity service to the college and service to the community.

Dr. John D. Messick stated that social fraternities could render a great service to East Carolina College. On the other hand, he explained, such an organization could also reflect unfavorably, depending on the conduct of its members.

Messick was quick to note that he was for social fraternities as long as social fraternities were for themselves. "It is up to you as an individual," he emphasized.

Mike Katsias, president of the Delta Sigma Rho fraternity, presided over the meeting.

Other members of the ECC administration who attend the meeting were: Dr. Leo W. Jenkins, vice-

Wetzel Goes To Death Still Denying His Guilt

PARCHMAN, Miss. (AP)—William Alvin Wetzel, New York mobster who boasted he never would be executed, died in the gas chamber at the state penitentiary today.

The 3-year-old native of Seneca Falls, N.Y., maintained to the last that he was innocent of the fatal throat slashing of Edgar McGraw.

As the pajama-clad Wetzel stepped into the eight-sided gas chamber in the maximum security unit, he told the Rev. Kermit Canterbury of Indianapolis, "Just tell the world I'm innocent."

Wetzel shook hands with C. W. Watson of Jackson, the state executioner, and assured him, "I hold no hard feelings for you."

The condemned man entered the chamber at 12:15 a.m. It took five minutes to strap him into the chair and a minute later the cyanide gas began its work. He was pronounced dead at 12:33 a.m.

Gov. Carroll Gartin refused to grant clemency. Later, Justice Lee Hall of the State Supreme Court denied a petition for a writ of habeas corpus and a stay of execution.

Wetzel's brother Frank was convicted last week of first-degree murder in the death of a North Carolina state patrolman shot while he was at large after escape from Willard, N.Y.

The brother had said he would try to free William from the death row at Parchman. He was captured in California and returned to North Carolina to face murder charges in the slaying of the two state patrolmen.

Wetzel was the last Mississippi prisoner to have the choice of dying in the electric chair or the gas chamber. This situation provided the basis for an unsuccessful appeal. It resulted from a state law permitting those who were sentenced to die when electrocution was the official method of execution and before the new gas chamber was put into use to select either method.

His attorneys argued that the state, in effect, asked him to commit suicide. They contended that the Legislature had made it impossible for Wetzel to be lawfully executed.

Men's Fellowship Club Installs Officers At Wednesday Meeting

Officers were installed when the Men's Fellowship Club of the First Presbyterian Church held their first meeting of the year in the Fellowship Hall of the Church Wednesday evening.

A supper was served to the 49 members present and two guests by Circle 1 of the church under the chairmanship of Mrs. John Barnhill. The attendance was the largest of the past three years.

Dr. J. G. Joyce, interim pastor, installed the officers. They are: Dr. Marshall Helms, president; Dr. Earl Trevaathan, vice president; Max Ray Joyner, secretary; George Trammell, treasurer; and Hunter B. Keck, historian.

Bible Class officers installed were Dr. W. E. Rosevans, president; George Trammell, vice president; and Carl Pearce, secretary-treasurer.

After supper devotionals were led by Badger Johnson with Willard Kyszer offering the invocation.

Bosses' Night Slated Monday

AYDEN — Edgar Gurganus, Williamston attorney and Past President of the North Carolina Junior Chamber of Commerce, will be guest speaker for the Ayden Jaycees' annual Bosses' Night to be held Jan. 20.

Gurganus, according to President Marvin Baldree, Jr., is to speak on the meaning of Jaycees. He will also present the Distinguished Service Award to the outstanding young man in the Ayden community.

The recipient of the Distinguished Service Award will be chosen on the basis of his contribution to the general welfare of the community, his leadership ability and personal business or professional progress. Baldree said the award winner must be between 21 and 36 years old, need not necessarily be a Jaycee and may be nominated by anyone.

Judges for the award are: Rev. John Goff, pastor of the Ayden Christian Church; Mayor Corey Stokes; and Alton Rowe.

Baldree further announced today that the Jaycee Week, to be observed by the local Jaycees during the week of Jan. 19-26, will officially begin with a group attendance at services of the Ayden Free Will Baptist Church on Jan. 19. The church's pastor, Rev. Raymond Gaskins, is Chairman of the Jaycees' Religious Activities Committee.

Find Bootleg In A Routine Check

AYDEN — Pitt County ABC officers, making a routine check of an old model automobile last night near Venter's Cross Roads, found 12 gallons of non-tax-paid whiskey in the boot of the vehicle.

Chief ABC Officer J. M. Ward said the whiskey was found after Alex Brown Jr., 22-year-old Negro of 809 East Avenue, Ayden, said to be the driver of the car, ran when officers approached him. Ward said that Brown was stopped for a driver's license check.

Brown managed to get away but was arrested around midnight by Ayden Police. He was held and turned over to ABC officers who placed him in County Jail under a $300 bond.

He was charged with transporting non-tax-paid whiskey for the purpose of sale. Trial has been set for Feb. 4 in Pitt Recorders Court.

National Guard Dance Profits For Polio Drive

Profits from the dance to be staged Saturday night by the Greenville National Guard will be turned over to March of Dimes officials toward the 1956 nota for Pitt County.

The announcement came from County Chairman A. A. Carrigan this morning. Carrigan stated that both the commanding officers of Service Battery of the 295th FA Battalion and Service Battery of the 295th FA Battalion had volunteered to lend their services.

MUSIC for the dance will be furnished by Garland Bachelor and his band from Wilson. The event will be held at the local National Guard Armory and is scheduled from 9-12 midnight.

Preparations are being handled by Master Sergeant Ralph Heindreich of Battery C and Warrant Officer Mayo Allen of Service Battery.

Allen states that admission for couples will be $1.50. A $1 admission will be charged for men and 50c for stag women.

Another 'Trough Day' In Polio Campaign Saturday

JAYCEES, TROUGH AND A DONATION... Miss Sylvia Fleming makes a contribution toward fighting Polio. (Photo by Lee Rowland).

For the second consecutive week the Jaycees will be sponsoring Trough Days on local streets tomorrow.

Trough Days have been designated for the convenience of the "walking public" who wish to donate any amount of money to the 1956 Pitt County March of Dimes drive. All proceeds will be handed over to campaign officials.

Jaycee President Bill Taylor reports that between $20 and $25 was collected last Saturday from troughs located at Five Points. The location of those troughs will be the same as last Saturday, one on Fifth St. and the other on Evans St.

Taylor expressed appreciation for what he termed, "fine cooperation from the public."

The final Trough Day of the 20th annual March of Dimes drive will be on Saturday, Jan. 25.
